CERTIFICATE

FOR APPOINTMENT OF SUCCESSOR TO THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

Pursuant to the authority vested in me by AS 44.19.-040, I, WILLIAM J. SHEFFIELD, GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF ALASKA, appoint Esther Wunnicke as successor to the office of lieutenant governor. Under this certificate of appointment, Commissioner Wunnicke will succeed to the office of lieutenant governor if that office becomes vacant during my term of office.

In testimony of this appointment, I have signed this certificate and affix to it the Seal of the State of Alaska, at Juneau, the Capital, this 14th day of January, A.D. 1986.

Governor

Sec. 44.19.040. Appointment of successor to lieutenant governor. After taking an initial term of office, the governor shall appoint, from among the officers who head the principal departments of the state government or otherwise, a person to succeed to the office of lieutenant governor if the office of lieutenant governor becomes vacant. The appointment is subject to confirmation by a majority of the members of the legislature meeting in joint session. The person designated and confirmed is next in line for succession to the office of lieutenant governor, subject to the pleasure of the governor. If the person designated and confirmed is removed from or vacates the appointment, the governor shall appoint a successor subject to confirmation in the same manner as the person initially appointed. CHAPTER 05.
Qualifications, Appointment, and Tenure.
ARTICLE 2.
Nomination and Confirmation of Appointive Officers.

CITATION Sec. 39.05.080.

CATCH LINE PROCEDURE FOR ALL APPOINTMENTS.

TEXT Appointments shall be made in the following manner:

(1) The appointing authority shall, within 30 days of the convening of the legislature in regular session, present to the legislature for confirmation the names of the following persons: (A) persons appointed to a position or membership who have not previously been confirmed by the legislature or either house of it; (B) persons appointed by him subject to confirmation to fill an existing position or membership vacancy; (C) persons to be appointed subject to confirmation to fill a position or membership the term of which shall expire before July 2, following the session of the legislature. If an appointment is made after the deadline but while the legislature is in session, the appointing authority shall, within five calendar days after the appointment is made, present to the legislature for confirmation the name of the person appointed. The deadline may be extended by the legislature by the approval of a concurrent resolution.

(2) When appointments are presented to the legislature for confirmation,

(A) the presiding officer of each house shall assign the name of each appointee to a standing committee of that house for a hearing, report and recommendation; standing committees of the two houses assigned the same person's name for consideration may meet jointly to consider the qualifications of the person appointed and may issue either a separate or a joint report and recommendation concerning that person; then

(B) the legislature shall, before the end of the session in which the appointments are presented, in joint session assembled, act on the appointments by confirming or declining to confirm by a majority vote of all of the members the appointments presented.

(3) When the legislature declines to confirm an appointment, the legislature shall notify the appointing authority of its action and a vacancy in the position or membership exists which the appointing authority shall fill by making a new appointment. The new appointment shall be presented for confirmation to the legislature within 20 calendar days following receipt by the appointing authority of the legislature's notification of its refusal to confirm the prior appointment. If the name of a person is submitted and is not confirmed, the appointing authority may not, upon resubmission of appointments, submit again the name of the person whose confirmation was refused for the same position or membership during the session of the legislature at which confirmation was refused. The person whose name is refused for appointment by the legislature may not thereafter be appointed to the position or membership during the interim between legislative sessions. Failure of the legislature to act to confirm or decline to confirm an appointment during the session in which the appointment was presented is tantamount to a declination of confirmation on the day the session adjourns.

(4) Pending confirmation or rejection of appointment by the legislature, persons appointed shall exercise the functions, and have the powers and be charged with the duties prescribed by law for the appointive positions or membership.

HISTORY (Sec. 4 ch 64 SLA 1955; am secs. 1 - 3 ch 1 SLA 1964; am sec. 1 ch 2 SLA 1967; am sec. 1 ch 65 SLA 1974; am sec. 2 ch 82 SLA 1975) in joint session, these orders become effective at a date thereafter to be designated by the governor.

Supervision

SECTION 24. Each principal department shall be under the supervision of the governor.

Department Heads

SECTION 25. The head of each principal department shall be a single executive unless otherwise provided by law. He shall be appointed by the governor, subject to confirmation by a majority of the members of the legislature in joint session, and shall serve at the pleasure of the governor, except as otherwise provided in this article with respect to the lieutenant governor. The heads of all principal departments shall be citizens of the United States.

(The amendment to this section was approved by the voters of the state August 25, 1970 and became effective October 10, 1970. The words "secretary of state" were changed to "lieutenant governor".)

Boards and Commissions

SECTION 26. When a board or commission is at the head of a principal department or a regulatory or quasi-judicial agency, its members shall be appointed by the governor, subject to confirmation by a majority of the members of the legislature in joint session, and may be removed as provided by law. They shall be citizens of the United States. The board or commission may appoint a principal executive officer when authorized by law, but the appointment shall be subject to the approval of the governor.

Recess Appointments

SECTION 27. The governor may make appointments to fill vacancies occurring during a recess of the legislature, in offices requiring confirmation by the legislature. The duration of such appointments shall be prescribed by law.

ARTICLE IV

THE JUDICIARY

Judicial Power and Jurisdiction

SECTION 1. The judicial power of the State is vested in a supreme court, a superior court and the courts established by the legislature. The jurisdiction of courts shall be prescribed by law. The courts shall constitute a unified judicial system for operation and administration. Judicial districts shall be established by law.

Supreme Court

SECTION 2. (a) The supreme court shall be the highest court of the State, with final appellate jurisdiction. It shall consist of three justices, one of whom is chief justice. The number of justices may be increased by law upon the request of the supreme court.

(b) The chief justice shall be selected from among the justices of the supreme court by a majority vote of the justices. His term of office as chief justice is three years. A justice may serve more than one term as chief justice but he may not serve consecutive terms in that office.

(The amendment to this section was approved by the voters of the state August 25, 1970 and became effecuve October 10, 1970. Subsection (b) was added.)

Superior Court

SECTION 3. The superior court shall be the trial court of general jurisdiction and shall consist of five judges. The number of judges may be changed by law.

Qualifications of Justices and Judges

SECTION 4. Supreme court justices and superior court judges shall be citizens of the United States and of the State, licensed to practice law in the State, and possessing any additional qualifications prescribed by law. Judges of other courts shall be selected in a manner, for terms, and with qualifications prescribed by law.

Nomination and Appointment

SECTION 5. The governor shall fill any vacancy in an office of supreme court justice or superior court judge by appointing one of two or more persons nominated by the judicial council.

Approval or Rejection

SECTION 6. Each supreme court justice and superior court judge shall, in the manner provided by law, be subject to approval or rejection on a nonpartisan ballot at the first general election held

1975-1977

Management training at Washington Federal Savings and Loan Assoc. Seattle. After two years I was in charge of our branch's operations and all bookeeping for over forty million in assets. I was supervisor over five branch employees. I was in charge of all daily, weekly, and quarterly computer reports, coordinated new account policies and processed all contract collections.

1977-1982(January)

Associate appraiser at Lamb Hanson Lamb Appraisal Associates, Seattle. This was a narrative appraisal report writing situation dealing mostly with income producing property. I was responsible for the collection and analizing of all market data pertaining to fair market value. I was a sub-contractor working for two M.A.I. appraisers. I worked independently and was responsible for completing all work accoridng to the client's timeframe. I have significant work experience dealing with feasibility studies and types of properties appraised include: Vacant parcels, industrial, retail, recreational, multi-family, single family, medical facilities and special purpose properties. I also have court experience in the State of Washington. Typical clientele included banks, municipalities, corporations, attorneys and individuals.

WORK EXPERIENCE

February 1982 to June 1983

Assessor, Haines Borough, Alaska.
As Haines Borough Assessor I annually assessed all taxable property within the Borough, appraised all public property (i.e. schools, library, museum etc.) for insurance purposes. I prepared and certified the real property assessment rolls and revised and implemented a new personal property assessment program for the Borough. I administered the Board of Equalization process and conducted Borough foreclosure proceedings according to State Statutes. In addition, I collected and documented all market data pertaining to the establishment of fair market value within the Borough. I maintained and updated Borough property maps in accordance with changes of ownership and recording of plats, and I administered State programs relating to property assessment and property tax exemption.

I also had the title of Borough Land Manager and was in charge of the disposal of land allotted to the Borough through the Municipal Entitlement Act. My staff was in charge of the selection, development and sale of 2,800 acres of land located within the Haines Borough.

June 1983 to July 1984

Commercial Appraiser, Arctic Appraisal Company, Juneau
At Arctic I was in charge of all commercial appraisal work contracted by our company in Southeast Alaska. Clientele included banks, municipalities, corporations and individuals.

July 1984 to June 1985

Deputy Assessor, City and Borough of Juneau
In this position I was responsible for assessing land values within the Borough. In addition, I assisted the Assessor with administrative functions.

July 1, 1985 to Present

Barbara Dale
Special Assistant to the Governor's Board of Commissions
Pouch A
Juneau, Alaska 99811

Dear Ms. Dale,

Pursuant to our conversation on 12/4/85, I would like to reiterate my interest in participating as a board member on the Governor's Athletic Commission. I'd also like to take this opportunity to briefly summarize the extent of my experience in athletics.

My participation in Alaska athletics has been ongoing for 21 years and encompasses experience as a professional athlete, coach, and advisor as follows:

In 1963 and 1965, I held the tile of Alaska Professional Middleweight Boxing Champion. In 1972, I served as the Arctic Winter Games Boxing Chairman. From 1975 through 1977, I helped coach the Alaska Allstar Soccer Team through three highly successful seasons. I have also served on the Sullivan Sports Arena Advisory Committee.

In my present capacity as Athletic Director for the Teamsters Recreation Center, I am responsible for the development and administration of all sports and recreation programs. The activities have included tennis, swimming, racquetball, volleyball, weight training, aerobics, table tennis and general fitness, to name a few. I have held this position since 1975.

Ms. Dale, I am knowledgeable in almost all athletics rules and regulations, although I have an obvious expertise in boxing. My philosophical orientation regarding athletics is one of fair play and an appreciation of health through physical fitness. Please do not hesitate to call me if I can elaborate further on this philosophy or answer any questions you may have as to my experience.

Sincerely Yours,

Phil Hauser

STATE OF ALASKA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
JUNEAU

January 13, 1986

The Honorable Don Bennett
President of the Senate
Alaska State Legislature
P. O. Box V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Senator Bennett:

Under the authority of art. III, sec. 23, of the Alaska Constitution, and in accordance with AS 24.08.210, I am transmitting an executive order that transfers the fire-service training program from the Department of Education (DOE) to the Department of Public Safety (DPS). Sections 1 and 2 of this Order remove that function from DOE, and sec. 3 gives it to DPS.

This function was added to the statutes for the Department of Education by secs. 1 and 5, ch. 86, SLA 1979. It appears that the program would be more appropriately located in the Department of Public Safety, and the commissioners of both of those departments, as well as fire departments around the state, support the transfer. It is one of the recommendations of the Fire Prevention and Control Task Force, in its December 1984 report.

Under its general authority to administer grants, to contract with school districts, to promote vocational education, and to administer the state's education program (AS 14.07.020(13), 14.07.030, AS 14.35, and AS 44.27.020), The Department of Education has handled grants for fire-service training. To assure that appropriate grant administration continues, this Order's proposed AS 18.70.020(4) includes a specific reference to grants.

Sincerely,

Bill Sheffield

ALASKA NETWORK ON DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AND SEXUAL ASSAULT

POSITION PAPER

SB 8

The Alaska Network on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault, a non-profit corporation representing 20 programs statewide, supports SB 8, which encourages school districts to initiate and conduct a health education program in grades K through 12.

Three Network programs (AWARE and MEN in Juneau and STAR in Anchorage) have developed and implemented curricula dealing with domestic violence, sexual assault, alcoholism in the family, and healhy decision making. Those curricula have been incorporated into the classroom schedule and are presented to grades K through 12 throughout the school year. Training in use of the curricula and the material presented is also provided to parents and teachers. In addition, the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault has developed a curriculum for use in the schools.

Utilization of these materials has demonstrated the effectiveness of this means of providing prevention education to children, teachers, and parents on an on-going basis. Other programs, who are in the process of reviewing the curriculum material, have been involved in regular presentations in the subject area to school districts in their communities and have also reported the success of this method in providing prevention education and promoting community awareness.

The Network supports the intent of SB 8 to encourage all school districts in the state to implement a personal safety curriculum. It is important to note, however, that such presentations often result in a student making a disclosure to the instructor about an assault. For that reason trained professionals should present this information in the classroom in order to sensitively and effectively handle such disclusores. Requiring coordination on development, implementation, and presentation of the material between the Department of Education and the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault will facilitate the appropriate presentation of this material.

Dear ~~Senator Kelly~~ Tim:

The soldiers of the Alaska Army National Guard join me in expressing our appreciation to you for the introduction of Senate Bill 10 which would increase retirement benefits for the Alaska National Guard and the Alaska Naval Militia. Alaska's National Guard is growing at an unprecedented rate in both strength and capability. This is due in large measure to the great support provided by legislators such as you.

Thank you, and if I can be of assistance to you, please give me a call.

Legislation Committee Report - CMSgt Steve February, HQ AK ANG

Last year the Alaska National Guard Enlisted Association was instrumental in passage of Alaska State House Bill Number 498 - relating to military retirement benefits. A member who has at least five years service in the Alaska National Guard is now vested in the Alaska National Guard State retirement.

The 1985 Legislature session will convene in January 1985 and the Legislation Committee needs your help in establishing priority legislation for the 1985 session.

Please number the following items in the priority you would like to see passed this upcoming Legislature session. After completion, please send to the Legislation Committee.

Priority Number

6 Distinctive license plates for Alaska National Guard personnel.

7 Unit Morale Support Fund - State to provide unit commanders $10.00 per year for each enlisted member.

3 Veteran's Rights - Grant National Guard members who have successfully completed 5 years of guard membership the same veteran's rights and hiring preferences currently given other veterans.

4 Deceased Guardsman's Dependant Benefits - Grant free tuition to state institutions of higher learning for dependents of Alaska National Guard members who die in the line of duty.

5 Student Loan Forgiveness - Provide for loan forgiveness of 10% for every year of successful Alaska National Guard membership.

1 Alaska National Guard State Retirement - Increase the Alaska National Guard State retirement from $100.00 per month to $200.00 per month.

2 Tuition Exemption for Alaska National Guard - Provide for tuition exemption to Alaska state institutions of higher learning for all members of the Alaska National.

Rationale' and Fiscal Justification
To accompany HB _____

Obtaining and retaining good, qualified and dedicated people in the Alaska Air and Army National Guard and the Naval Militia, is an increasingly difficult task as the rates of pay and conditions accompanying civilian employment opportunities outstrip the US Congress' and the Department of Defense's efforts to align military pay rates. This is doubly true in Alaska where there is no additional "cost of living allowance" given to reserve members for their weekend duty; they receive the same pay as their counterpart in Tennesse or Texas.

Obtaining and retaining good, qualified and dedicated people in the Alaska Air and Army National Guard and Naval Militia is in the very best interests of the State and its citizens. Over and over again it has been demonstrated that the men and women of these fine units, scattered all over the State, have been available, trained and equipped to assist in disasters and times of physical strain on the State's infrastructure. The Air Guard with perhaps the most ideally suited mission and aircraft, is prepared 24 hours a day to assist in earthquake recovery, flood recovery, evacuations, emergency delivery of supplies, equipment and people almost anywhere, with factory new Lockeed C-130H "Hercules" aircraft.

The Army Guard's numerous missions throughout the state, equipped with severe climate cross-terrain capabilities as well as helicopter and fixed wing aircraft, has come to the rescue in large and small scale emergencies countless times.

All these assets, nearly 4,000 men and women and hundreds of millions of dollars worth of transportation, communications and support equipment and supplies are all placed in the State by Federal sources utilizing Federal funds. State support of these forces is miniscule to scale both with the benefits and the actual resources expended....yet they are all under the peace-time control of the Governor; directed daily by the Governor's Commissioner of the Department of Military Affairs - The Adjutant General.

Alaska has a highly transient population. It also has a high percentage of military residents at any given time. The skills and dedication are available if they can but be enticed to participate. Military people completing a partial career in the regular USAF and ARMY obtain release from the service to remain in Alaska in great numbers. Their skills and experience with say a 10-year career, are of great value to Alaska, and can be obtained and placed in reserve at minimal cost.

Because military pay levels are set by Congress and the Department of Defense, some other method must be developed. This method is the existing State military retirement program, a matter of law since 1972. The rate was $50 at that time, changing to $100/month in 1980. It has remained at $100 for over four (4) years now.

It is important to point out that the fiscal impact is relatively minor, even though the appeal is universal and of great recruiting and retention value. The reason is because the enabling statute correctly limits the monthly retirement payments to the same number of months that the member served satisfactorily. This means that a prior service person with 10 years of regular service, joining the Alaska National Guard or Naval Militia, and then completing another ten (10) years, would receive payments only for the second 10 years; WE RECEIVE THE BENEFIT OF THE FIRST TEN (10) AT NO COST WHATSOEVER!

The amount of the monthly retirement payment was insufficient when first created, as the fiscal climate in the state was no where as developed as it is now. $100.00 is of decreasing value, and is even below the monthly allowable individual retirement account (IRA) contribution limit allowed by the IRS.

There are currently 346 men and women retired and qualified for Re: Senate Bill 18 - William A. Egan Day

Senate Bill 18 designates October 18 as a holiday in honor of William A. Egan, Alaska's first Governor.

Bill Egan's life reads like Alaska's history book. Born in Valdez in 1914, he graduated from Valdez High School in 1932 and went on to serve in the Territorial House of Representatives in 1941-43 and 1947-51.

In 1941 Bill Egan drafted the Statehood Referendum Act and later served as the President of the Constitutional Convention in 1955-56. He was elected Governor of Alaska in 1959-66 and again in 1971-74.

Bill joined the U.S. Army in 1943 and was elected Mayor of Valdez the same year he was discharged, 1946. He was honored as Alaskan of the year in 1971 and awarded an Honorary LL.D. from the University of Alaska in 1972.

SB 18 calls for William A. Egan Day to be observed by suitable ceremonies and exercises by civic groups and the public. It does not create a state holiday, nor does it require any expenditure of public funds: something Bill Egan would have supported.

At his death last year, thousands of Alaskans from all over the state and nation joined in ceremonies honoring Bill's lifetime of service to Alaska. SB 18 is a way of assuring that Bill Egan's contribution to building the state he loved is never forgotten.

DEPARTMENT OF LAW

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

September 14, 1984

Mr. Al Adams, Chairman
House Finance Committee
Pouch V
Juneau, AK 99811

Re: Territorial Guardsmen; burial allowance provided by AS 26.10.080

Dear Mr. Adams:

In your letter of September 5, 1984, you requested an opinion from this office as to whether former members of the Alaska Territorial Guard (ATG) may be eligible for burial allowances under AS 26.10.080 (.080). The following analysis and historical review of the ATG's status under .080 is submitted in response to your request. In our opinion, former members of the ATG are not eligible for burial allowances under that provision.

The statute in question provides that burial allowances will be paid to a qualifying veteran. The statute then defines a veteran, in pertinent part in AS 26.10.080(d)(1), as a person who is serving or has served in a branch of the armed services of the United States, and in (d)(2) of that section, as a person who had served in the Alaska Army National Guard, the Alaska Air National Guard, or the Alaska Naval Militia, or who had served in a reserve unit of the United States Armed Forces in Alaska. AS 26.10.080. The ATG is not expressly included within the definition of veteran in .080. On the face of .080, therefore, former members of the ATG are ineligible for burial allowances provided by that statute.

The reason for the omission of the ATG is not clear, however, and may have been either intentional or accidental. That the omission may have been intentional is evident when comparing .080 with AS 26.05.225 (.225), which provides credit to former members of the ATG for the purpose of determining eligibility for retirement pay. The provision of a benefit to former members of the ATG through .225 implies that the legislature was aware of the existence of the ATG, and hence the omission of the ATG from .080 appears to be deliberate.

In the alternative, the omission of the ATG from benefits under .080 may have been accidental because the legislature may not have been aware of the distinction between the ATG and the Alaska National Guard. The reason for this confusion will be discussed in the paragraphs following. AS 26.05.225 indicates that it was the legislature's intent to provide at least certain benefits to former members of the ATG. It is therefore possible to imply that the legislature would have included burial allowances as well under .080 but did not only by reason of accident.

Mr. Ernest Gruening, the territorial governor of Alaska, notes that when he took office in 1939 there had never been a National Guard in Alaska, that he took steps to organize one and that he requested federal authorization to do so. Gruening, Introduction to M. Marston, Men of the Tundra, at 3, 1972. On December 31, 1941, presumably as a result of Mr. Gruening's efforts, the U.S. Congress approved an act to establish a military code for the territory of Alaska, H. Res. 5822, 77th Cong., 1st Sess., ch. 644, Dec. 31, 1941 (1941 Act). That Act declared that the militia of the territory of Alaska was to be divided into two classes: the Organized Militia, known as the Alaska National Guard, and the Unorganized Militia. 1941 Act, § 1. The Act further provided that the governor of the territory of Alaska had authority to organize a Territorial Guard. 1941 Act, § 6. In apparent support of the federal act, the legislature of the territory of Alaska appropriated certain monies to the National Guard of Alaska. 1941 Alaska Sess. Laws, ch. 60, H.B. 122; 1943 Alaska Sess. Laws, chs. 26, 27, H.B. 55, 56; 1945 Alaska Sess. Laws, ch. 64, H.B. 65. Finally, in 1949 the territory of Alaska created an Alaska Territorial Militia which the territorial legislature referred to as the Alaska National Guard. 1949 Alaska Sess. Laws, ch. 120, H.B. 22.

Confusion may have arisen in the legislature over the separate identitites of the various militias which had been created in the 1940's. If such confusion existed, it may have led to the omission of the ATG in .080. To prevent further confusion, therefore, it is recommended that when a former member of a militia in the territory of Alaska claims burial allowances under .080, it should be ascertained at the outset whether that person was a member of the federally created Alaska National Guard, which is expressly covered under .080, or whether that individual was a member of the ATG organized by the governor of Alaska, which is not covered under .080.

Unless strong evidence to the contrary is found, a member of the ATG does not fall within the purview of .080(1) or (2) on the strength of the 1941 Act. This is based in large part on the fact that the 1941 Act does not expressly state that the Territorial Guard is a part of the Alaska National Guard and does not expressly describe the Territorial Guard either as a branch of the federal armed forces or as a part of the Unorganized

Militia. While the Territorial Guard received federal sanction under the 1941 Act, was subject to regulations of discipline in training prescribed by the U.S. Secretary of War and received federal arms and equipment, 1941 Act, § 7, the Territorial Guard was nonetheless a body organized by the territory of Alaska and existed independently of the Alaska National Guard and other branches of the federal armed forces.

In conclusion, whether by accident or by intent, the legislature which enacted .080 did not expressly provide burial allowances to ATG members through that section. Furthermore, a review of the federal act which sanctioned the Alaska National Guard and gave permission to the governor of Alaska to create the ATG does not lead to the conclusion that the ATG was either a part of the National Guard or otherwise a part of the federal armed forces of the United States. The ATG does not therefore fall within the purview of AS 26.10.080(d)(1) or (2) as it is not a part of the National Guard or any branch of the U.S. armed services. A former member of the ATG is therefore not eligible to receive burial allowances under AS 26.10.080.

Sincerely yours,

Representative Al Adams
P.O. Box 333
Kotzebue, Alaska 99752

Dear Representative Adams:

I am in receipt of a copy of the letter dated 14 September from Mr. Delay of the Attorney General's office where he discusses the Alaska Territorial Guardsmen and the Veterans Burial Allowance Program as provided by AS 26.10.080. Unfortunately as presently written, the statute does not include Alaska Territorial Guardsmen.

Prior to Mr. Delay's research and the Attorney General's opinion, Major General Edward G. Pagano, the Adjutant General and Commissioner of the Department of Military and Veterans Affairs, submitted to the Governor the department's legislative packet which contained a bill that would amend AS 26.10.080 to include members of the Alaska Territorial Guard. A copy is attached for your reference.

It is this department's opinion that members of the Alaska Territorial Guard made a significant contribution to the Territory and State of Alaska and should be included along with other veterans in the state's Death Benefit Program.

Sincerely,

Roger K. Graves, Director

DEPARTMENT OF MILITARY AND VETERAN'S AFFAIRS

SUBJECT OF PROPOSED BILL: Amend SLA 1982 Chapter 98 to add members of the Alaska Territorial Guard as those eligible to receive the Veterans Burial Allowance of $750.00.

SUMMARY/EXPLANATION OF INTENT:

The Alaska Territorial Guard was composed of members of the State Defense Force who remained in Alaska during armed hostilities when the enemy forces actually occupied the Territory of Alaska. These people no less than other veterans or members of the National Guard served the State in a defense role and should be accorded the burial allowance accorded other members of the National Guard.

Re: Territorial Guardsmen; burial allowance provided by AS 26.10.080

Dear Mr. Adams:

In your letter of September 5, 1984, you requested an opinion from this office as to whether former members of the Alaska Territorial Guard (ATG) may be eligible for burial allowances under AS 26.10.080 (.080). The following analysis and historical review of the ATG's status under .080 is submitted in response to your request. In our opinion, former members of the ATG are not eligible for burial allowances under that provision.

The statute in question provides that burial allowances will be paid to a qualifying veteran. The statute then defines a veteran, in pertinent part in AS 26.10.080(d)(1), as a person who is serving or has served in a branch of the armed services of the United States, and in (d)(2) of that section, as a person who had served in the Alaska Army National Guard, the Alaska Air National Guard, or the Alaska Naval Militia, or who had served in a reserve unit of the United States Armed Forces in Alaska. AS 26.10.080. The ATG is not expressly included within the definition of veteran in .080. On the face of .080, therefore, former members of the ATG are ineligible for burial allowances provided by that statute.

The reason for the omission of the ATG is not clear, however, and may have been either intentional or accidental. That the omission may have been intentional is evident when comparing .080 with AS 26.05.225 (.225), which provides credit to former members of the ATG for the purpose of determining eligibility for retirement pay. The provision of a benefit to former members of the ATG through .225 implies that the legislature was aware of the existence of the ATG, and hence the omission of the ATG from .080 appears to be deliberate.

In the alternative, the omission of the ATG from benefits under .080 may have been accidental because the legislature may not have been aware of the distinction between the ATG and the Alaska National Guard. The reason for this confusion will be discussed in the paragraphs following. AS 26.05.225 indicates that it was the legislature's intent to provide at least certain benefits to former members of the ATG. It is therefore possible to imply that the legislature would have included burial allowances as well under .080 but did not only by reason of accident.

Mr. Ernest Gruening, the territorial governor of Alaska, notes that when he took office in 1939 there had never been a National Guard in Alaska, that he took steps to organize one and that he requested federal authorization to do so. Gruening, Introduction to M. Marston, Men of the Tundra, at 3, 1972. On December 31, 1941, presumably as a result of Mr. Gruening's efforts, the U.S. Congress approved an act to establish a military code for the territory of Alaska, H. Res. 5822, 77th Cong., 1st Sess., ch. 644, Dec. 31, 1941 (1941 Act). That Act declared that the militia of the territory of Alaska was to be divided into two classes: the Organized Militia, known as the Alaska National Guard, and the Unorganized Militia. 1941 Act, § 1. The Act further provided that the governor of the territory of Alaska had authority to organize a Territorial Guard. 1941 Act, § 6. In apparent support of the federal act, the legislature of the territory of Alaska appropriated certain monies to the National Guard of Alaska. 1941 Alaska Sess. Laws, ch. 60, H.B. 122; 1943 Alaska Sess. Laws, chs. 26, 27, H.B. 55, 56; 1945 Alaska Sess. Laws, ch. 64, H.B. 65. Finally, in 1949 the territory of Alaska created an Alaska Territorial Militia which the territorial legislature referred to as the Alaska National Guard. 1949 Alaska Sess. Laws, ch. 120, H.B. 22.

Confusion may have arisen in the legislature over the separate identitites of the various militias which had been created in the 1940's. If such confusion existed, it may have led to the omission of the ATG in .080. To prevent further confusion, therefore, it is recommended that when a former member of a militia in the territory of Alaska claims burial allowances under .080, it should be ascertained at the outset whether that person was a member of the federally created Alaska National Guard, which is expressly covered under .080, or whether that individual was a member of the ATG organized by the governor of Alaska, which is not covered under .080.

Unless strong evidence to the contrary is found, a member of the ATG does not fall within the purview of .080(1) or (2) on the strength of the 1941 Act. This is based in large part on the fact that the 1941 Act does not expressly state that the Territorial Guard is a part of the Alaska National Guard and does not expressly describe the Territorial Guard either as a branch of the federal armed forces or as a part of the Unorganized

Militia. While the Territorial Guard received federal sanction under the 1941 Act, was subject to regulations of discipline in training prescribed by the U.S. Secretary of War and received federal arms and equipment, 1941 Act, § 7, the Territorial Guard was nonetheless a body organized by the territory of Alaska and existed independently of the Alaska National Guard and other branches of the federal armed forces.

In conclusion, whether by accident or by intent, the legislature which enacted .080 did not expressly provide burial allowances to ATG members through that section. Furthermore, a review of the federal act which sanctioned the Alaska National Guard and gave permission to the governor of Alaska to create the ATG does not lead to the conclusion that the ATG was either a part of the National Guard or otherwise a part of the federal armed forces of the United States. The ATG does not therefore fall within the purview of AS 26.10.080(d)(1) or (2) as it is not a part of the National Guard or any branch of the U.S. armed services. A former member of the ATG is therefore not eligible to receive burial allowances under AS 26.10.080.

Sincerely yours,

1. INTRODUCTION -

Senate Bill 56 amends various sections of the Alaska Statutes regarding the longevity bonus and the Permanent Fund and thereby creates three major impacts: a) Continues the bonus program for all persons age 65 by 1986 and pays these persons a benefit level of $250 per month plus 3% per annum for life. b) Phases out the bonus program for everyone younger than 65 (in 1986) and pays these persons an ever-reducing benefit level until sometime in the early part of the 21st Century when the benefit reaches zero. c) Creates a state supplemental retirement program (the annuity program) for those under 65 (in 1986) who choose to defer/invest their annual permanent fund dividends.

This position paper contains analyses provided by the Departments of Health and Social Services, Administration, and Revenue. The Departments of Revenue and Administration have provided fiscal notes for the costs of administration of both the altered Longevity Bonus Program and the Annuity Program.

Fiscal notes are limited to the administrative costs of implementation of this Act, because the program costs (the cost of living escalator in the Longevity Bonus Program and the front loading costs in the annuity program) are so interrelated and dependent upon one another that the variables generate a multitude of different estimated costs of the program.

When this bill was presented to the Alaska Longevity Bonus Task Force, the authors of the bill envisioned a 3% escalator in the longevity bonus and a front loading match of 25% of the Permanent Fund dividend checks which were deferred. The number of checks deferred was based upon an assumption that 30% of those eligible to defer would defer 100% of their check. Based upon all of these assumptions, the costs of the program would be an additional $25.2 million in FY 86, $26.5 million in FY 87, and $27.7 million in FY 88 above that which is already budgeted for the current longevity bonus payment. The drafters also assumed that these front loading costs would cease after FY 88.

Therefore the costs of the bill using these assumptions would be as follows:

	FY86	FY87	FY-88	Source
Front-Loading	25,200.0	26,500.0	27,000.7	Gen. Fund/Reserve Acct. PF
PFD BRU	1,306.2	-0-	-0-	Annuity Fund
Treasury BRU	9.3	11.1	14.8	Annuity Fund
Public Svcs BRU	635.7	450.5	339.3	General Fund
Longevity Bonus BRU	10.0	-0-	-0-	General Fund
Annuity DP BRU	814.5	67.7	71.2	Annuity Fund
Annuity Mgt BRU	150.1	174.8	183.6	Annuity Fund
SB 56 Cost:	28,125.8	27,204.1	27,609.6
ALB Program	50,200.0	53,900.0	57,300.0	General Fund
Total Cost:	78,325.8	81,104.1	84,909.6

2. DEPARTMENT OF ADMINISTRATION -

The Department of Administration has two concerns about the 3% annual escalation of the longevity bonus proposed in SB56. First, it is artificial, not based on real inflation projections. Second, the cost-of-living increase is only for grandfathered seniors, paid for by the reduction in benefits paid to those seniors who were not grandfathered.

Under the annuity program described in Senate Bill 56, the Department of Administration will administer individual annuity accounts for 30% of the Permanent Fund dividend eligibles. This account management will include approximately 145,500 accounts in FY 86.

FY	# of PFD Eligibles				# of Annuity Accounts
FY86	485,000	x	30%	=	145,500
FY87	490,000	x	30%	=	147,000
FY88	500,000	x	30%	=	150,000
FY89	510,000	x	30%	=	153,000
FY90	521,000	x	30%	=	156,300

The Department will also make annuity payments to those persons over the age of 65 who were eligible. The payment stream of each individual account will be based on actuarial tables. Each year the analysis will have to be redone because account balances and fund balances would vary. The attached fiscal notes describe the resources required to manage these accounts.

3. DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE -

The proposed legislation directly impacts four divisions within DOR:

- Division of Administrative Services
- Division of Enforcement
- Division of Treasury
- Division of Public Services

For purposes of convenience, we have consolidated our responses into categories instead of along division lines:

I
Introduction
The Annuity Program

Annuity Program

Under the annuity program established by SB 56, an eligible Alaska resident under the age of 65 as of January 1, 1986 may forego all or a portion, but not less than 25%, of their permanent fund dividend in exchange for a credit to an individual annuity account. Upon reaching the age of 65, that person will receive a monthly annuity for the remainder of their life that is based on the accumulated value of their annuity account, including interest, at age 65.

As it does currently, the Enforcement Division of the Department of Revenue will determine eligibility for a dividend. Under SB 56 the division of Administrative Services will provide to the Department of Administration, the amount, if any, each resident's annuity account would be credited as a result of electing such credit rather than a cash dividend. The total of such credits will be transferred to the annuity investment fund from the dividend fund.

The Treasury Division of the Department of Revenue will invest the annuity investment fund. Investments permitted are the same as those of the Public Employees Retirement Fund except that the fund may also be invested in commercial insurance contracts. *Periodically, the Treasury Division will notify the Department of Administration of the income realized by the fund. The Department of Administration will allocate this as a pro-rata credit to each person's annuity account based on the balance in their account.

At age 65, a monthly annuity payment will be established for each individual. It will be determined by either the annuity available on the market which can be purchased with the amount in the annuitant's account or an amount determined by the Department of Administration based on then current interest rates, mortality tables, and amounts on the account if an "in-house" option is chosen to meet the liability for annuity payments. Under the "in-house" option the State would continue to manage the investment of the funds in annuitants' accounts at age 65 and thereafter.

Each year, the legislature may appropriate from the annuity investment account the amount required to make the monthly payments to annuitants who are 65 or older. The amounts required will be transferred to the Department of Administration which will make the payments.

The appropriation could be of "the amount required by AS 43.23.130" or the Department of Administration could provide an estimate each year which would be inexact due to deaths during the year of annuitants or those who would become annuitants in that year.

Comments

The private insurance option transfers from the fund the risk of inadequate earnings on post-65 annuitants' accounts to cover liabilities for payments. Of course the risk is not totally avoided since there is always some credit risk that the insurer will fail.

However, by incorporating the private insurance option into the investment fund as an investment, a conflict can arise with AS 43.23.110(c) which required crediting annuity accounts with investment fund earnings. If average fund rate-of-return is less than that on the insurance contracts, full payment of monthly annuities to those over 65 cannot be made while also crediting under-65 accounts at the average rate of return. This is because in this case the average rate of return on under-65 accounts would be higher than the actual returns. Of course, the credits can be made since they don't require cash payment and over time the problem may be eliminated by years on which average fund earnings exceed insurance contract rates of return.

A more definitive solution might be to credit under-65 accounts only with earnings net of annuity payments, to establish separate funds for those over and under 65, or to make the insurance contracts simply contracts of the Department of Administration and not investments of the annuity investment funds. In the case of "in-house" management, similar conflict would exist AS 43.23.110(c) when assumed rates of return and mortality differ from that realized.

The other major aspect of the annuity program which may present technical problems is the allocation from "front-loading" in AS 43.23.110(b)(2) and (3). If the base amount in (b)(2) is a separate appropriation or allocation in the legislation appropriating the "front-loading", then that base amount can be determined. In any event, (b)(3)'s derivation remains ambiguous.

Alaska Department of Revenue
January 21, 1985

Section 1: Intent section, no effect on Department of Revenue except that paragraph (4), lines 3-5 sets up the relationship of two choices: annuity is the default unless applicant chooses cash. This affects form design and programming.

Section 2: Amends AS 43.23.005(c). Replaces the word "payment" with "dividend," for consistency reasons. There is no direct effect on the Department of Revenue.

Section 3: Amends AS 43.23.005 by establishing alternatives for PFD applicants:

a) If person is 65 or older on December 31, 1985, there is only one choice - 100% cash dividend.

b) If person is under 65 on December 31, 1985, there are two basic choices:

1) 100% cash.

2) At least 25% cash, and between 1 and 75% annuity.

Section 4: Amends AS 43.23.015(a). This change would appear to have no effect on the Department of Revenue unless the intent is to limit the Department of Revenue's ability to adopt regulations defining residency, etc., as opposed to just establishing the process.

Section 5: Amends AS 43.23.015(b) by changing the affidavit printed on the application, so that the applicant signs a statement that he or she understands that they will lose all dividends and interest credited to his/her annuity account. It should be amended to say the person also loses all the legislative appropriations credited under AS 43.23.110 (Section 16 of this bill). This represents a major forms change, and more importantly, creates substantial collection problems leaving many questions unanswered. For example, it is clear that the Department of Revenue can use collection procedures to collect money paid to applicants as cash dividends and within the limits of Section 10, as well as collect funds transferred to the Department of Administration based on an option for annuity, however what about:

1) Collecting annuities already paid to a person over 65? Who collects it and how?
2) If Revenue attempts to retrieve money from the Department of Administration after conviction or discovery of error, which agency goes after money from the annuitant? Under what provision of law? What if there aren't enough funds in the dividends account?

Section 6: Amends AS 43.23.015(e) in an attempt at consistency. But given the extreme difficulties that exist in administering a trust for persons in custody of a public agency (typically children in custody of the Department of Health & Social Services) and the animosity that is generated in the parents, giving a state agency the option of irrevocably placing a custodial person's dividend in an annuity account seems certain to generate extreme animosity from those parents and potential law suits for the recovery of the funds.

Section 7: Amends AS 43.23.015(f) for consistency with the new concept of the PFD annuity. It is important to note that this does nothing to correct the potential problem mentioned in the analysis of Section 6. Otherwise there is no effect on the Department of Revenue.

Section 8: Amends AS 43.23.015 by adding a paragraph directing the Department of Revenue to provide an option on the PFD application. For consistency's sake, the wording on line 16-17 should be changed to reflect the wording of the option as given in Section 3. Section 8 implies only two choices: 100% cash or 100% annuity. This doesn't square with Section 3, which provides that every applicant receives at least 25% of the dividend value in cash. It should also be noted that the use of the term "permanent fund dividend" on line 17 in juxtaposition to the term "cash" implies that the term "permanent fund Dividend" is defined as meaning annuity credit. This is not the definition provided in Section 15. The only effect on the Department of Revenue of this section is to modify the form and explain the choices to the public.

Section 9: Amends AS 43.23.035 to reflect the new concept of the PFD annuity option. It is unclear as to whether "additional credits" on line 24 means an allocation of future legislated appropriations and/or interest accrued to original annuity credits. The language here should be coordinated with the language in Section 5. Again, there are enforcement/collection problems. What if annuity payments have already started and there is not enough left to pay back all the erroneously credited dividends? How is the balance collected, and by whom? To what fund(s) are collections credited?

Section 10: Amends AS 43.23.035 to provide a mechanism for the Department of Revenue to collect dividends erroneously credited to the annuity investment account. This section also distinguishes between the remedy available to the Department of Revenue when the error is the fault of the state and when the error is the fault of the individual. It is difficult to evaluate which date starts the clock - date credited, or date discovered.

Section 11: Amends AS 43.23.055 to redefine the duties of the Department of Revenue to reflect the new concept of a PFD annuity option. Lines 19-20 again implies two choices - 100% cash or 100% annuity. Under the provisions of Section 3, everyone receives at least 25% cash. Lines 11-13 on page 6 requires the Department of Revenue to provide information to the Department of Administration necessary to maintain the individual annuity account records and administer the annuity program. It would appear that this information exchange would consist of the following:

1) Each week, starting with the first PFD payment run in October, the Department of Revenue would notify the Department of Administration (via a computer tape) of those applicants who came up for payment and who chose that a percentage of their dividend be credited to their annuity account. This will allow the Department of Administration to credit the account with the proper amount and as of the date on which the applicant would have otherwise been paid cash. This reporting will go on weekly as long as the Department of Revenue is making payments from that particular year's file.

2) On a regular basis, the Department of Revenue would have to provide the Department of Administration with the interest rate that reflects the earnings of the annuity investment fund.

3) On a case by case basis over a 10-year period the Department of Revenue - Enforcement would notify the Department of Administration of erroneous payments and seek reimbursement from the annuity investment fund.

Sections 12 & 13: Amend AS 43.23.065 to reflect the new concept of a PFD annuity option. The general effect of Sections 12 and 13, taken together, seems to be that the portion of a dividend which is taken as a credit to an annuity is not subject to levy, execution, garnishment, attachment, or other remedies for the collection of debt. As a statute change unrelated to the annuity concept, Section 12 provides for 100% attachment of a cash dividend to satisfy a court-ordered restitution under AS 12.55.045 - 12.55.051 or 12.55.100. It is important that the court order will serve to attach the dividend only if served on the Department of Revenue timely, as in the case of any other attachment order (CSED, IRS, etc.). Section 13 goes further by providing that in the case of a CSED arrearage or in the case of a civil judgement or order of restitution, the Department of Revenue or the Alaska courts, respectively, may require the defendant to take his/her entire PFD in cash. First of all, it is important to note that neither the Department of Revenue nor the court can force a person to apply for a dividend, but can force a selection of cash once the applicant has filed. There are two potential problems with Section 13:

1) The Department of Revenue cannot determine that an applicant meets the criteria of Section 13 until either CSED or a court agency serves an attachment order on the Department of Revenue - Enforcement, and in the case of CSED, indicating a past-due debt, and

2) Given that the overall thrust of Sections 12 and 13 is to exempt dividends selected as annuity credits from attachment, in the case of a person who owes (under Section 13) less than the amount of the total dividend, and originally chose the annuity option, it would seem that only an amount necessary to satisfy the debts under both the proposed AS 43.23.065(b) and (c) could be converted to the cash option, with the residual amount still protected from general attachment. This needs to be clarified.

Section 14: Amends AS 43.23.075 to reflect the new concept of a PFD annuity option. There is no effect on the Department of Revenue.

Section 15: Amends AS 43.23.095(b) to change the definition of "permanent fund dividend" to include the PFD annuity option. There is no effect on the Department of Revenue, save substantial changes to existing regulations.

Section 16: This section establishes the Annuity Program, to be administered by the Department of Administration. Although this section of the bill has very little impact on the Department of Revenue - PFD BRU, the following thoughts are offered for consideration:

1) AS 43.23.110(a), as proposed, provides for the gross amount selected as annuity credits to be transferred from the PFD fund to the annuity investment fund annually. As previously noted, the Department of Revenue could provide a magnetic file weekly as annuity participants come up for payment. The question is when does the interest envisioned in the proposed AS 43.23.110(c) begins to accrue: at payment of the residual cash dividend, or at some annual date upon transfer of the gross amount.

2) AS 43.23.110(b), as proposed, provides that the Legislature may appropriate additional funds to the annuity investment fund. Since this appropriation will likely be made during January - May of a given year, it should be clarified as to whether the appropriation is to be allocated between annuity participants of that same calendar year, or amongst those who selected the annuity option for the prior calendar year. If as the bill implies, the former is the case, then the Legislature will be making an appropriation without prior knowledge of the number of participants or the total amount of dividends selected as annuity credits. The applications are filed between April 1 - June 30 and the information is not on computer file until approximately July 31.
AS 43.23.110(b)(1), as proposed, appears to have the same constitutional flaws that caused the Legislature to include the children of Alaska in the PFD program in 1982.

AS 43.23.110(b)(2), as proposed, does not specify what portion of the appropriation should be used as the "base" amount. Also there needs to be definitions of the formula for determining the base amount, i.e. half the appropriation divised by the number of eligible annuitants.

AS 43.23.110(b)(3), as proposed, is a very confusing paragraph and makes no comprehensible sense. The formula for showing the appropriation must be clarified and simplified to the point that it can be easily explained to the public, in written form in the application booklet, in person during the required rural assistance program, and to the tens of thousands of Alaskans who will be asking the Department of Revenue's Public Services Assistance Centers for a lucid explanation.

AS 43.23.110(b)(4), as proposed, again implies that a person has an option of opting for 100% annuity, in contradiction of Section 3.

AS 43.23.110(c), as proposed, requires the Department of Revenue to provide the Department of Administration with the appropriate interest rate. The question unanswered is how often? The other implication is that the monies in the annuity investment fund are not to be co-mingled with other monies in the General Fund, but truly invested as a separate fund. This needs to be nailed down.

AS 43.23.130, as proposed, describes the benefit PFD applicants would receive in exchange for the option of receiving their whole dividend in cash, versus accepting up to 75% of the dividend in annuity credit. For this reason, it is extremely important that this section be very clear to the reader, and it is. In (f) of this section, there appears to be an attempt to shelter the original dividend given up, in part, for an annuity credit, from taxation by the federal government as income in the year the dividend was available in cash. The doctrine of "constructive receipt" would hold the dividend taxable in the current year and this will have to be pointed out to recipients of the dividend at the time their dividend is paid, whether it is paid in credits or in cash.

Section 22: Provides an implementation schedule for the provisions of this bill and makes the Act applicable to PFD years 1986 and thereafter. This defines the time period in which the Department of Revenue has to accomplish all of the necessary program changes. The Department of Revenue will have from the date this bill becomes law until March 31, 1986. This accelerated schedule will be costly and will make it very difficult to get everything on line by the 1986 filing period.

Section 23: Provides an effective date.

Alaska Department of Revenue
Suggested Amendments to SB 56
January 21, 1985

Submitted by Division of Administrative Services:

Eliminate Internal Contradictions Regarding Cash vs Annuity

1. Section 1 and Section 3 are contradictory as to the options available and should be modified.

   Page 2, lines 3 - 5 implies that the entire dividend is applied to the annuity account absent a conscious election by the applicant.

   Page 2, lines 22-24 says that the only choice other than 100% cash is 25% or more cash and between 1 and 75% annuity. Per Section 3, there does not appear to be a 100% annuity option.

2. Page 4, lines 16-17 should be amended to reflect the same wording of Section 3, to eliminate the contradiction regarding the available options.

Making Annuity/Cash Election Irrevocable

3. Page 5, lines 17-20 like Section 1, implies only two choices: 100% cash or 100% annuity. This should be amended to square with Section 3.

4. It is important that the election be binding and irevocable. If people change their mind, make a mistake, or whatever, there should be no opportunity to change election. Otherwise, the cost of this program will go up dramatically.

Limit Choice

5. Page 2, lines 19-25 should be amended to limit the choice of hybrid payments to:
   a) 100% cash,
   b) 25% cash, 75% annuity credit,
   c) 50% cash, 50% annuity credit, or
   d) 75% cash, 25% annuity credit.

   As it currently reads, there are at least 76 real options, significantly complicating the administration of the program.

Avoidance of Debts to State Agencies

6. Page 7, line 13 should be amended by adding a new subsection (d) to include debts to a state agency as a valid reason for compelling an applicant to elect a cash dividend.

Submitted by Division of Treasury: Comments on SB 56

1. Page 6, line 15

   "(a)" should be inserted before "Fifty."

2. Page 8

   Sec. 43.23.110(a) should include the statement that "Income of the annuity investment fund shall be added to the principal of the annuity investment fund." However, the Attorney General in a November 30, 1982 opinion expressed some doubt about whether a retention of investment earnings by a fund is permissible under the Constitution's prohibition of dedicated revenues.

3. Page 10, line 6

   Add "purchased from insurance companies which have a Best's Policyholders' Rating of A or better and belong to Best's financial size Group XV at the time of purchase" at the end of the sentence.

4. Page 10, line 23

   "received" should be "receive"

4. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND SOCIAL SERVICES-

a) Alaska Longevity Bonus - Enactment of the amendments to the Longevity Bonus Program included in SB56 would not adversely affect nursing home residents but would continue to seriously jeopardize many needy elderly Alaskans who currently receive old age assistance, medicaid, and federal supplemental security income payments as outlined below. This negative impact is a direct result of the federal and state statutes specifying which longevity bonus payments must be counted as income when determining these individuals' eligibility for assistance.

Nursing home residents are excluded from receiving the longevity bonus and therefore will be protected from either the loss of their medicaid coverage or a loss or decrease in their state assistance grant.

Federal supplemental security income (SSI) recipients are not protected and therefore would suffer either a reduction of their SSI grant or a termination of their federal SSI grant.

Old Age Assistance (OAA) recipients would also suffer either a reduction in their state grant or a termination of their grant.

Medicaid recipients who are not residing in a nursing home and who have a gross income in excess of 300% of the SSI need standard (i.e., $975) will become ineligible for medicaid.

These low-income longevity bonus recipients can be protected from financial harm by the enactment of the following amendments to the Adult Public Assistance statutes (AS 47.25.430ff) to provide that:

(i) The department shall increase the amount of an individual's Adult Public Assistance payment by the amount of any reduction in assistance provided under Title XVI of the Social Security Act which occurs solely because of considering payments made under AS 47.45 as available income; and

(ii) Notwithstanding AS 47.25.435, in determining eligibility for Adult Public Assistance and the amount of Adult Public Assistance payment, the department will not consider any payment made under AS 47.45 as income available to the applicant or recipient.

The costs of protecting these individuals from the harm caused by the loss of their assistance coverage would be:

	FY86	FY87
Federal (SSI) Payment	1,400,000	1,530,517
State (OAA) Payment	760,000*	830,737*
Non Nursing Home Medical	413,847	471,609
Nursing Home Medical	-0-@	-0-@
	$1,813,847	$2,002,126

* As these costs are already budgeted for FY 86- this is a non-add item.

@ No cost if the exclusion is effective upon enactment of SB56.

The majority of these individuals receive most of their income from the federal SSI and the state APA programs while their primary source of payment for medical bills is medicaid.

The department believes that it is therefore absolutely essential for basic humanitarian reasons that enactment of SB56 be accompanied by enactment of a "hold-harmless" program that would protect those harmed by receipt of the proposed longevity bonus.

b) Annuity Program - Enactment of the annuity program proposed in SB56 would not have a substantial effect on most public assistance and medicaid recipients. These individuals, whose annual incomes are less than $10,000, cannot afford to defer their Permanent Fund checks as they have an immediate need for these funds to buy basic necessities.

c) Federal Waiver - Currently, people who are eligible to receive the longevity bonus before October 1, 1985, have grandfathered eligibility rights to federal SSI and medicaid because federal law prohibits counting their bonus payments as income. People not eligible to receive the longevity bonus by this date are not covered under this grandfather clause. As they begin to receive countable bonus payments, their SSI assistance and OAA is reduced or terminated. Those whose assistance is terminated become ineligible for medicaid.

This change from the previous universal exclusion of consideration of the longevity bonus as income was precipitated by the 1984 change in the residency eligibility standards for the Longevity Bonus Program.

The Department is unable to make any commitments as to whether any changes in the Longevity Bonus Program will again alter the federal government's position and, perhaps, end the special exclusion for 25-year residents who receive the Bonus. If this were to occur, the number of recipients placed in jeopardy and the costs of providing them with a "hold-harmless" protection would grow substantially beyond the estimate provided above.

Fiscal Note Analysis
Department of Revenue
PFD BRU - Administrative Services Component
January 21, 1985

As can be seen from the attached analysis of the bill, section by section, the primary impact on the Administrative Services component of the Permanent Fund Dividend BRU is going to be in Data Processing. This impact can be summarized in three areas:

1) The need to completely re-program the 1985 PFD system, with its approximately one hundred DP programs, both batch and on-line. These programs are for both the IBM mainframe and for the WANG VS system that is used in Anchorage and in Juneau.

2) The dramatic changes wrought by this bill will push the Department to combine all years in some fashion. Carrying multiple, separate systems on-line, and maintaining these separate systems has become very costly in terms of data processing resources. Revenue has been looking at a modified system that allows both look-up and interaction with prior year accounts, but the addition of the annuity based 1986 system will severely complicate that system design.

3) The addition of the annuity choice and its related edit requirements will impact the data entry section.

The incremental costs of performing these functions between the assumed effective date of approximately July 1, 1985 and the end of FY86 is estimated as follows:

Personal Services

1) Reprogram for 1986 PFD system

1 Analyst/Programmer V, R21, @ $4,653.05/Mo
including salary and benefits for 12 months $55,836

1 Analyst/Programmer IV, R19, @ $4100.75/Mo
including salary and benefits for 12 months $49,209

2) Project to consolidate 1986 system with prior four years (online, same as above)

1 Analyst/Programmer V, R21, @ $4,653.05/Mo
including salary and benefits for 12 months $55,836

1 Analyst/Programmer IV, R19, @ $4100.75/Mo
including salary and benefits for 12 months $49,209

3) Data capture of additiona data required on PFD applications.

3 Data Entry Clerk I's, R8, @ $2,120.77/Mo including salary and benefits, for 3 Mos each $19,087

TOTAL Personal Services			$229,200
Travel (all 3 projects)			$2,500
To pay travel/per diem costs of system analysts attending meetings in Anchorage and Juneau to map out the needed changes to the current PFD system.
TOTAL Travel			$2,500
Contractual
1) To contract with Wang Labs, Inc to modify the existing garnishment system for PFD's. The Analyst/Programmer who built the original garnishment system currently works for Wang Labs, Inc as a systems consultant. Assuming he was available, he could redesign the system much faster than any other programmer available. This amount is calculated at $80/hour X 8 hour days X 5 day weeks X 16 weeks	=	$51,200
2) 4 Wang 4250 workstations rented for 12 Mos, @ $398/Mo including emulator boards @ $805 each, so they may be used as IBM terminals or Wang terminals	=	$22,300
3) Data Processing chargeback to the Department of Administration for development on the mainframe. This is a very difficult figure to estimate before knowing more specifically how the system will be designed. Based on our past experience, however when the 1982 PFD system was completely redone during FY83, the cost is estimated as		$1,000,000
TOTAL Contractual			$1,073,500
Supplies			1,000
TOTAL Administrative Services Cost			$1,306,200

Alaska Department of Revenue
Enforcement Division
Fiscal Impact of SB 56
January 21, 1985

The fiscal impact of SB 56 is $-0- given the following assumptions.

1. Garnishment EDP programming changes can be accomplished at least three months before the 1986 payment schedule begins.

2. Orders of Restitution are served on the Division just as any other garnishment document, such as writs or Orders to Withhold.

3. Language is included that assures a creditor may not defeat a State agency by electing an annuity. If this is not done, the potential impact is a loss of revenue. Although not readily estimateable it is not anticipated to be significant.

4. Deposit and fund crediting procedures for collections of erroneously paid annuities are kept simple and/or allocation between funds are determined by the Department of Administration.

Fiscal Note Analysis

Costs in this fiscal note are based on the following projected balances of the annuity investment fund:

Fiscal Year	Average Fund Balance ($ Millions)
1987	88
1988	159
1990	347

These projections assume three years of front-loading , 30% participation by eligibles, and 12% rate of return on investments.

Based on these average balances the following costs would be incurred ($000):

Fiscal Year	Securities Custody
1988	14.8
1990	24.7

IV Analysis: This Fiscal Note addresses costs in the Data Processing Services BRU. We estimate that the annuity program will be fully automated to reduce the need for staff. We estimate that system analysis, development and construction costs would be $750,000 and would be a capital appropriation from "other funds".

We anticipate the need for one full-time programmer/analyst IV to provide guidance in the development of the annuity systems with the contractors and, after implementation, to provide ongoing maintenance.

We estimated an inflation rate of 5%. Further, we assumed that "other funds" would be available for FY 86 costs.

Fiscal Note Analysis
Prepared by Division of Retirement & Benefits

January 22, 1985

IV: Analysis: This Fiscal Note addresses costs in the Labor Services Program Category. The cost of the annuity program is anticipated to be borne entirely by the participants. We estimate that approximately four full-time employees will be needed to administer this program on a continuing basis. We estimate that the program supervisor and chief accountant will be needed for the entire first year to assist in the development and analysis of the computer system needs with the other two staff members being needed for only half of FY 86 to assist with the implementation and testing.

We estimated an inflation rate of 5% in all categories. Further, we assumed that "other funds" would be available for FY 86 costs.

We estimate that four positions are needed to administer this program.

Accountant:	Accountant II

ASSUMPTIONS

This fiscal note addresses administrative costs only for the Longevity Bonus Program.

Two payment systems will be run in the Division of Pioneers' Benefits. The first would pay a monthly target amount for those eligibles age 65 before January 1, 1986. The second would pay monthly payments, varying each year, for those age 65 after January 1, 1986. The second system would be impacted by information from the Annuity program.

The Longevity Bonus program would need additional resources for modifications to data processing files.

SUBJECT: Report Highlights

This report indicates that the Fund's total assets approximate $6.2 billion as of the close of the calendar year.

The increase during the month of December is primarily attributable to: a capital contribution in the amount of $200,000,000, deposited by Governor Sheffield in final satisfaction of the special $1.8 billion appropriation made by the Legislature in 1981; receipt of dedicated state revenues in the amount of $29,871,000; and net income from operations of $54,499,000.

During the first half of the fiscal year, the Fund posted net income of $306,335,000. Operating expenses totalled less than one-half of one percent of gross revenues.

A comparison of marketable securities held at the end of December, valued in terms of both cost and market, reflects unrealized gains as follows:

	Cost	Market	Unrealized Gains
Marketable debt securities	$5,337,261,000	$5,379,234,000	$41,973,000
Common stock	503,811,000	514,908,000	11,097,000

Net gains realized on the purchase and sale of marketable securities for the first half of the year are as follows:

	Realized Net Gains
Marketable debt securities	$1,040,000
Common stock	498,000

Updated projections for the period July 1, 1984 through June 30, 1985, based upon half year operations, are as follows:

- Realized net income: $618,600,000
- Transfer to State for payment of dividends: $213,800,000
- Transfer to corpus for inflation-proofing: $230,800,000
- Additions to reserves: $174,000,000

In making these projections, we continue to estimate a 10.80 percent realized nominal return, an inflation rate of 4.20 percent, and a realized real rate of return of 6.60 percent.

The Corporation's official projection analysis sheet is attached to the monthly financial report.

ALASKA PERMANENT FUND CORPORATION

NOTES TO THE FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

DECEMBER 31, 1984

1. ENTITY

The Constitution of the State of Alaska was amended by public referendum in 1976 to provide for the dedication of certain natural resource revenues to the Permanent Fund. The principal of the Permanent Fund is invested in perpetuity. In 1980, the State Legislature created the Alaska Permanent Fund Corporation (the "Corporation"), a public corporation separate from the agencies of State government and governed by a Board of Trustees, (the "Trustees"), to manage the investments of the Permanent Fund. In 1982, the Legislature amended the law to provide that a portion of the annual earnings would be made available to the State for the payment of dividends and that a portion would be contributed to the principal of the Permanent Fund sufficient to offset the impact of inflation. The balance was to be retained by the Corporation in an undistributed income account.

2. SIGNIFICANT ACCOUNTING POLICIES

Contributions -

Contributions by operation of statute are recorded when they become due from the State, i.e., when certain revenues are received by the State Department of Natural Resources.

Contributions by appropriation are recorded when they are received.

Depreciation -

Furniture and equipment are depreciated on a straight-line basis over a three year useful life. Other property is depreciated on a straight-line basis over a five year useful life.

Dividend appropriations -

Current law directs that one-half of a five year moving average of the net income of the Corporation be made available for the payment of dividends each year.

Funds -

For purposes of the Statement of Changes in Financial Position, the term "Funds" has been defined as cash and repurchase agreements.

Inflation Impact -

The impact of inflation is measured by the United States Consumer Price Index previous calendar year average for all urban consumers applied against the balance of contributed equity at the end of the fiscal year.

Interest Income -

Interest income on all securities is accrued monthly as earned.

Interest income is shown net of amortization of premiums and accretion of discounts.

Investments -

In accordance with Statement of Position of the Accounting Standards Division No. 78-10, investments in the aggregate are valued as follows:

Type	Basis
Marketable debt securities	Cost adjusted for amortization of premiums and accretion of discounts
Common stock	Lower of cost or market value
Real estate equity pools	Market value
Participating real estate mortgages	Market value
Conventional mortgages	Cost
Alaska certificates of deposit	Cost

Realized gains or losses on the sale of investments are determined by specific identification.

Undistributed Income -

Net earnings are credited to the undistributed income account at the end of the fiscal year. Earnings attributed to the investment of undistributed income are based upon the balance at the beginning of the fiscal year.

3. RECEIVABLES AND PREPAID EXPENSES

Receivables and prepaid expenses consisted of the following as of December 31, 1984:

State of Alaska dedicated revenues	$ 19,692,000
Purchased interest receivable	4,683,000
Accrued interest receivable	124,940,000
Dividends receivable	2,441,000
Prepaid expenses	41,000
	$151,797,000

4. MARKETABLE DEBT SECURITIES

The estimated market values of debt securities at December 31, 1984 are as follows:

	AMOUNT	YIELD
Repurchase Agreements	$ 24,100,000	8.46%
Short Term Issues	147,857,000	9.36%
Intermediate and Long Term Issues	5,207,277,000	11.61%
	$5,379,234,000	11.53%

All of the Corporation's investment securities are held by commercial lending institutions pursuant to custodial agreements.

5. COMMON STOCK

At December 31, 1984, the investment in preferred and common stock was valued at cost, which was less than the aggregate market value of $514,908,000 on that date. The dividend yield on preferred and common stock amounted to 4.49 percent.

6. REAL ESTATE EQUITY POOLS

At December 31, 1984, the investment in real estate equity pools was valued at market, which approximates cost. Future adjustments to market value will be based upon independent appraisals of the properties which constitute the pools.

7. PARTICIPATING REAL ESTATE MORTGAGES

The investment in participating real estate mortgages conveys an undivided interest in real property acquired in connection with a loan made on and collateralized by certain real estate. At December 31, 1984 the investment was valued at market, which approximates cost. Future adjustments to market value will be determined by the combined total of (i) an annual appraisal of the real property, and (ii) the difference between the present value of the mortgage and the outstanding principal balance of the note. Terms of the mortgage note provide for interest at 10.5 percent per annum. In addition, the Corporation will participate to the extent of its percentage of ownership in future net cash flow derived from leasing the property. The total amount of interest and net cash flow each year is limited to the maximum rate for interest allowed under applicable State of Texas or federal law.

8. CONTRIBUTED EQUITY

The principal balance of the Alaska Permanent Fund at December 31, 1984 was composed of the following elements:

Dedicated state revenues	$ 2,246,936,000
Appropriations from the State	2,700,000,000
Provision for inflation	382,127,000

9. RESERVE FOR INFLATION AND DIVIDENDS

The Trustees of the Permanent Fund have designated the balance of the undistributed income account to be continuously reserved for future inflation impact and dividend payments. Although the State Legislature could legally appropriate this amount for other purposes, in the opinion of the Trustees, this designation is in accordance with the stated purpose of undistributed income, i.e., to provide a reserve for the current statutory uses of Corporation income against the possibility of future declines in that income. Such a reserve is intended to enable the Corporation to fully offset the impact of inflation and still maintain a constant level of dividends in years when Permanent Fund earnings are not enough to do both.

DEPARTMENT OF LAW

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

January 25, 1985

The Honorable Mitch Abood
Chairman, Senate State Affairs Committee
Alaska State Legislature
Pouch V
Juneau, Alaska 99811

Dear Senator Abood:

Yesterday, after the teleconference on SB 56 (the bill which would replace the longevity bonus program with an annuity program) you asked that I draft a proposed amendment to the bill which would provide for death benefits if a person who had made annuity contributions died before reaching age 65. I have drafted a proposed amendment which provides that, in the event of death prior to age 65, the balance of an individual's account (which would include permanent fund dividend contributions, interest, and any front-loading) would be paid to the individual's surviving spouse unless another beneficiary were selected.

You have asked what effect, if any, such an amendment would have on the tax deferrability of permanent fund dividend contributions. As you know, the State Special Committee on the Alaska Longevity Bonus Program contracted with an expert on IRS tax law, Mr. Thomas Terry of the firm of Morrison and Foerster. His conclusions on the taxation of dividends appear in the draft committee report. I called Mr. Terry yesterday and asked him about the proposed amendment. He said that the inclusion of the amendment in the bill would have no negative effect on tax deferrability, and might even slightly enhance our arguments that contributions should not be taxed.

I should point out a number of policy considerations that may enter into your committee's deliberations on this point. First, the adoption of the amendment would increase, to some degree, the administrative costs of the program, since the department of administration would have to keep track of beneficiaries and handle death claims. Under the bill, administrative costs come out of annuity accounts, so that the provision would reduce - perhaps to a small degree - the annuity available to participants.

Second, under the bill without the amendment, the annuity account of a person who does not survive to age 65 is distributed among other contributors, so that those who do survive will receive an enhanced payment. This enhancement would be removed by the amendment.

Finally, since the present longevity bonus program is available only to individuals who survive to age 65, the bill without the amendment is consistent with the objective of replacing the retirement security presently available under the bonus program with a substitute program.

These considerations must be weighed against the concerns expressed at the teleconference yesterday that younger individuals may be reluctant to participate in the program if contributions would be lost upon death. Participation in the program is obviously an important consideration.

In short, the proposed amendment would have no substantial legal effect on the bill as a whole. The decision is a policy decision.

Sincerely,

NORMAN C. GORSUCH
ATTORNEY GENERAL

SUMMARY SB 56

This bill will phase out the existing longevity bonus program and replace it with individual annuity accounts funded primarily by the permanent fund dividend of participants.

The bill provides that each year every Alaskan (except those who are 65 or older before 1986) will receive his or her permanent fund dividend in the form of a credit to an annuity account, unless the individual affirmatively elects to receive cash. When the individual reaches age 65, they will receive their annuity whether they live in Alaska or anywhere else. Since it will be years before annuity payments are sufficent to replace the longevity bonus, the ALB program is reduced annually (except for those who reached 65 before Jan 1, 1985).

Alaskans who choose to participate in the program will receive monthly benefits after reaching age 65 of at least $250 per month. Alaska's existing elderly (65 or older before Jan 1, 1986) will receive their current $250 bonus inflated by 3% annually and still receive their permanent fund dividends.

There is a "target amount" for the longevity bonus which is $250 per month inflated by 3% each year. That target amount is then reduced by the maximum possible annuity that would be available to a 65-year old individual who has participated in the program every year since the program started.

Example: If the inflated ALB "target" for a particular year is $280, and a person turning 65 who received an annuity credit in each year of the program would be entitled to an annuity of $100 per month, the ALB payment for all recipients would be $180. If the person had not participated in the annuity program and turned 65 in that year, they would receive only the ALB payment of the $180.

FISCAL YEAR	MAXIMUM Possible Annuity	ALB (for new recipients)
1986	4.37	$245.63
1990	32.50	248.88
1995	106.27	219.92
2000	255.70	122.45
2005	533.39	-0-

Residency

You must be a resident of Alaska at least one year to receive the Longevity Bonus payment. Permanent Fund dividends are, of course, only available to Alaska residents--so an individual must be an Alaskan to contribute to an annuity account. However, you do not have to be a resident of the State to receive your annuity.

1. Front-loading

Section 16 of the bill provides that the Legislature may "front-load" the annuity program by appropriating additional funds from general funds or earnings of the undistributed income account. Substantial front-loading in the first three years saves money over the length of the program as general fund obligations decrease at a faster rate. Also, with front-loading there is a substantial incentive for individuals to forgo immediate cash in favor of retirement security.

SECTIONAL SB 56

SECTION 1

Findings and Purpose

SECTION 2

A parent, guardian, or other authorized representative may elect to receive an annuity share on behalf of the eligible minor or individual in lieu of a cash dividend.

SECTION 3

A person who is eligible to receive a permanent fund dividend may elect to receive an annuity share in lieu of a cash dividend. Alternatively, a person may elect up to 75% in cash and the remainder as a annuity credit.

SECTION 4

The Commissioner of Revenue shall adopt regulations establishing the process for determining eligibility of individuals for permanent fund dividend.

SECTION 5

The permanent fund application form shall be prepared to allow an applicant to elect to receive cash in lieu of a permanent fund dividend.

SECTION 6

If a public agency claims a cash dividend on behalf of individuals, the public agency shall hold the dividend in trust for the individual.

SECTION 7

The state is not responsible for a guardian or parents decision for an individual on whether to take an annuity credit or cash dividend.

SECTION 8

The permanent fund dividend application form shall be prepared to allow an applicant, other than a person who is 65 before January 1, 1986 to elect to receive cash in lieu of a permanent fund dividend.

SECTION 9

Conforms the penalties and enforcement laws to include annuity credits.

SECTION 10

Sets up a procedure so if a permanent fund dividend is credited to an individuals account erroneous a debit can be made against the account. If the credit is the fault of the individual, the debit must be made within 10 years. If the credit is the fault of the state, the debit must be made within 3 years.

SECTION 11

Adds duties to the Department of Revenue to maintain records of annuity shares for individuals and adopt regulations (to the extent allowable) to structure the annuity program so that annuity benefits are not taxable to people until they actually receive the annuity money.

SECTION 12

Allows only cash payments exempt from attachment for collection of debt.

SECTION 13

Allows only cash payments for those ordered by the courts or attached for collections.

SECTION 14

Conforming language to contain annuity credits within the eligibility laws and regulations for public assistance,

SECTION 15

New definition of permanent fund dividend to include annuities.

SECTION 16

Establishes the Annuity Investment Fund within the state treasury. An amount, equal to the permanent fund dividend multiplied by the number of persons electing to receive an annuity share, shall be annually credited to the Annuity Account. The Legislature may appropriate either general funds or earnings from the undistributed income account in the Alaska Permanent Fund. The definition of permanent fund dividend is amended to include annuities. Establishes the Annuity Fund. Money in the Annuity Fund is appropriated by the Legislature to pay annuities. An individual who holds one or more annuity shares may receive an annuity upon reaching the age of 65. The annuity will be paid monthly using a straight life annuity with a defined contribution plan. The annuity is cancelled upon the death of the individual receiving the annuity.

SECTION 17

Deletes the dollar amount in the Longevity Bonus program.

SECTION 18

Makes the Longevity bonus payment $250 plus a 3% annum minus the maximum possible annuity.

SECTION 19

Adds people residing in nursing homes, and the nursing home wing of of Pioneer Homes as unqualified persons to receive Longevity bonus payments. (This is to protect those people on Medicaid who were adversely impacted by Federal regulations)

SECTION 20

Repealers of Longevity Bonus Program

SECTION 21

SECTION 22

Applies to Permanent Fund dividends for years beginning after December 31, 1985.

SECTION 23

Immediate Effective Date

Introduction.

In June, 1984, the Alaska Longevity Bonus Program (AS 47.45) was declared unconstitutional because it required recipients to have resided in Alaska both prior to statehood and for 25 consecutive years. The Thirteenth Legislature, 2nd Sess., repealed these lengthy residency requirements, thus opening the program to new participants. Ch. 38, SLA 1984. However, the amended law, by its own terms, is to be repealed effective June 30, 1985. Id., Sec. 11.

The amending legislation also established the State Special Committee on the Alaska Longevity Bonus Program to "determine the feasibility of replacing the longevity bonus program, as amended by this Act, with an annuity program, a needs-based program, or other longevity program." Id., Sec. 7. This is the Committee's report.

Recommendation: Annuity Approach.

The Committee has developed a proposal which would phase out the existing longevity bonus program, and replace it with individual annuity accounts funded primarily by the permanent fund dividends of participants. 1/ Under the Committee

1/ Three different annuity approaches were initially considered by the Committee: (1) SB 465, introduced in the 1984 legislature bill, Alaskans who choose to participate in the program will receive monthly benefits, after reaching age 65, of at least the $250 which is currently provided by the bonus program, inflated by three percent annually.

The program is available to those who reach age 65 after 1985. Under the bill, Alaska's existing elderly will receive their current $250 bonus, inflated by three percent annually, without having to forego their permanent fund dividends.

The Committee bill provides that each year every Alaskan (except those who are 65 or older before 1986) will receive his or her permanent fund dividend in the form of a credit to an annuity account, unless the individual affirmatively by several senators; (2) an amended version of HB 700, also introduced in that legislature; and (3) a draft bill prepared by Senator Bill Ray (D., Juneau). The Ray bill became the vehicle for the Committee's proposal. All three proposals involved foregoing a permanent fund dividend in return for some type of future annuity benefit.

SB 465 would have paid $16.50 per month to each elderly Alaskan for every permanent fund dividend foregone -- to a limit of $250 per month.

HB 700 would have given each Alaskan one annuity share for each foregone dividend. Each year, one third of the money available for permanent fund dividends would then be divided by the number of annuity shares held by those over the age of 65. Each elderly Alaskan would receive a portion of that annuity fund commensurate with the number of shares held.

The Committee was advised by legal counsel that HB 700 and SB 465 created greater constitutional risks than did the Ray proposal; the Committee therefore focused on the concept embodied in Senator Ray's bill.

elects to receive cash. 2/ Section 2 of the bill provides that the legislature may "front-load" the program by appropriating additional funds into the annuity account, which will be attributed to individual accounts on a prescribed formula. Under that formula, state contributions are greatest for those approaching retirement age, and decline for younger Alaskans. Beginning at age 65, a participant receives an annuity based on his contributions and any front-loading -- plus earnings accumulated on those amounts. 3/

Even with front-loading, it will be years before annuity payments are sufficient to replace the longevity bonus. The ALB program is thus retained at a level which, for those turning 65 after 1985, will be reduced annually. 4/ Under the bill, a "target amount" for the ALB is established (Section 8), which is $250 per month (in FY 1986) inflated by 3% each year.

2/ This aspect of the committee proposal reflects a change from earlier annuity bills, which required an election to forego cash payment. Because, in the future, the annuity program will be the only state source of non-need-based retirement assistance, the committee believes that each Alaskan should be required to come to grips with the long-term consequences of a decision to take the dividend in cash.

3/ Under the Committee bill a participant who dies before age 65 will forfeit his accumulated annuity credits (see the discussion of survivor options at 17, post); the amounts forfeited will be reallocated to surviving participants and thus will increase their annuities.

4/ The longevity bonus itself is, of course, available to all elderly Alaskans whether or not they have also established annuity accounts.

That target amount is then reduced by the maximum possible annuity which would be available to a 65-year old individual who has participated in the program every year since the program's inception. For example, if the inflated ALB "target" for a particular year is $280, and a person turning 65 who received an annuity credit in each year of the program would be entitled to an annuity of $100 per month, the ALB payment for all recipients would be $180. That $180 will not vary according to the actual participation histories of individual ALB recipients.

Over the years, individual annuity accounts will become greater, and each year the longevity bonus payable to new recipients becomes correspondingly smaller. By the year 2003, the Committee projects that the maximum possible annuity will be sufficient to bring an end to the general-funded ALB program, except for those relatively few who were 65 or older before 1986, and are still receiving ALB payments in that year. This is best illustrated by the following chart:

The Committee considered other options besides the annuity approach. Among those were a need-based program and stair-stepping.

One reason for rejecting a "need-based" program was the strenuous opposition to such a program among Alaska's elderly. Primarily, however, the Committee concluded that a need-based program would be contrary to the intent of the ALB program. That program is not and was never intended to be a form of welfare. Rather, it should be viewed as means of assisting all Alaskans to provide for their retirement security.

The Committee was also aware of the "stair-stepping approach," under which the ALB Program is slowly phased out through an annual increase in the eligibility age. Under legislation which passed the House of Representatives during the previous legislature, the eligibility age would begin to rise above 65 in 1991.

5/ Annuity projections are without "front-loading."

The Committee believes that there is a need for future state participation in the building of retirement security that is not recognized in the stairstepping approach standing alone. For example, the principal form of non-need based assistance is, of course, Social Security. Yet Alaska's elderly receive the same Social Security payments as those who reside where the cost of living is much lower. Moreover, Alaska has a uniquely high percentage of elderly who are ineligible for Social Security because of a lack of wage-earning history. Thus, in one area of the state -- Northwest Alaska -- 66% of the region's elderly reported the ALB as their principal source of income.

As oil revenues decline, and economic activity in the state becomes more uncertain, it is entirely possible that the state's future elderly will find themselves in a more precarious position than today. And, at that point, the state -- for these same economic reasons -- may be unable to help.

One obvious impact of abolishing the ALB program through "stair-stepping" is an increased Old Age Assistance case load. Currently, nearly 6,600 ALB recipients -- or 40% of all recipients -- are apparently eligible to apply for both OAA and Medicaid benefits. These benefits are substantial -- averaging $2,640 per year. for OAA and an additional $2,500 per year for Medicaid. Yet, of the potentially eligible, only 2,526 -- or roughly 38% -- have in fact applied for OAA and Medicaid.

Over the years, the ALB program has been defended on the ground that it has enabled many Alaskan elderly to remain off the welfare roles. Statistics bear this out dramatically, indicating that a majority of those ALB recipients who are eligible for OAA and Medicaid have been able to remain off these programs because of the bonus.

For these reasons, stair-stepping by itself is not being recommended to the legislature.

On the other hand, the principal advantage of "stair-stepping" is the protection which it affords those who are currently on the ALB program, and who have come to rely on both the Longevity Bonus and the permanent fund dividend to sustain themselves. The committee concluded that forcing Alaska's existing elderly to forego their Permanent Fund Dividend in order to assure continued receipt of the "target" Longevity Bonus might work a hardship on these older Alaskans. As a result, the committee decided to include in the bill a so-called "grandfathering" provision which allows those reaching age 65 before 1986 to take their Permanent Fund Dividend in cash and still receive a full Longevity Bonus for the remainder of their lives. The committee legislation, then, is intended to blend the most salutory aspects of both an annuity approach and "stair-stepping."

The virtue of an annuity approach is that it enables the state and each individual Alaskan to set aside funds now for those perhaps more difficult years ahead. It is a program designed to substitute private thrift for public largesse. The Committee also believes that the permanent fund dividend is an appropriate source of funds for the annuity program. The purpose of the annuity program is much like the purpose of the permanent fund itself. Moreover, one purpose of the dividend program -- to give each Alaskan a stake in the management of the permanent fund -- will be enhanced if Alaskans' retirement security is at least in part dependent on wise stewardship of that fund.

Major Features.

1. Front-loading. The Committee envisions that the legislature may add additional sums to individual annuity accounts. Under "front-loading," a person will receive an annuity account credit greater -- and perhaps substantially greater -- than the amount of cash he or she could have received.

The Committee initially analyzed the annuity concept without front-loading. Even without front-loading, annuity payments eventually replace longevity bonus payments from the general fund. Nonetheless, the Committee feared that because annuity payments were low in the early years, those Alaskans who are now near retirement age would not participate in the program. Moreover, general fund contributions did not begin to see significant reductions for about 10 years.

Front-loading provides a substantial incentive to individuals to forego immediate cash in favor of retirement security. While it costs more in the initial years, that cost is incurred in years in which oil revenues are expected to remain high. Moreover, general fund contributions to the ALB program taper off rapidly. In other words, because front-loading causes the maximum possible annuity payment to increase, residual longevity bonus payments decrease more rapidly. Thus, dollars invested in early years through front-loading result in a decrease in general fund obligations in later years.

Under the Committee bill, substantial front-loading now would actually result in a net gain over the life of the ALB program -- at least in nominal dollars. Thus, if $79 million were appropriated for front-loading over the next three years, that investment would result in a return of $81 million in reduced ALB payments over the next 25 years. In constant 1986 dollars, the ultimate cost of investing $79 million now is $30 million.

Additionally, front-loading serves other important purposes which the Committee believes warrant the cost in constant dollars:

(1) The Committee bill will work only if Alaskans participate. If they do not, Alaska's future elderly may still place precisely those substantial demands on the general fund which this bill seeks to avoid; and

(2) A premium may fairly be placed on the current availability of funds. If $1.00 of general funds front-loaded now returns 75¢ (in constant dollars) years hence, the fact that the general fund has that $1.00 now, but may not have the 75¢ later, is of some relevance.

Front-loading need not be a one time, or even short-term program. To the contrary, the Committee feels that the policy considerations behind front-loading will be with us for some time, and that -- subject to available funds -- some degree of front-loading should be considered by the legislature each year.

The Committee settled on a front-loading concept weighted in favor of older Alaskans. Several other options were also considered. First, we examined a per-capita contribution made to each Alaskan who chose an annuity credit. Assuming that the front-loading contribution was $50 million in the first year, and that 50 percent of all Alaskans chose an annuity credit, the result was that ultimate annuity payments to those now near retirement age did not increase rapidly enough to offset general fund payments for longevity bonuses. Thus, this form of front-loading did not significantly reduce long-term general fund obligations. Nor did it satisfy the goal of the Committee to provide the greatest incentives to those who may need them most.

To better accomplish this goal, the Committee next considered a straight $10 incremental increase in front-loading based on age: that is, participants would receive $10 for each year that they were older than age 17 -- up to age 65. 6/ This option produced a better result in terms of reduced general fund obligations than the per-capita distribution, but it still did not increase annuity payments fast enough to be a significant incentive -- to older Alaskans in particular -- to participate in the program.

Finally, projections were run on the option embodied in the bill: persons 18-34 years old would receive a base amount of front-loading in addition to the dividend -- for example, $50. Those over 34 would receive a percentage increase (for example, 10%) for each year of age over 34, up to age 65. Under this option, front-loading increases on a curve rather than a straight line -- increasing dramatically as an individual approaches age 65. Thus, a $50 base with 10% per year increases results in an 34 year old receiving $50, a 50 year old $211, and a 64 year old approximately $800.

The incentive to join the program, then, increases dramatically as retirement age approaches. It is this aspect which is most appealing to the Committee, for the following reasons:

First, older Alaskans are most in need of incentives to participate. Because initial annuity payments are small, many may be tempted to take a cash payment which is larger than the annual annuity which it will yield. Then, years later, that person will suffer materially reduced benefits because of that short-sighted decision. On the other hand, younger Alaskans need not participate in the program every year in order to build a sizeable annuity. Based upon projections available to the Committee, a 47 year old (in 1986) would be required to participate every year in order to achieve the target annuity when he reaches 65 in the year 2004 -- the year the ALB program disappears. Recognizing that financial circumstances may require a cash election in some years, and that some individuals may be ineligible for a dividend in some years, the Committee concluded that additional incentives are appropriate beginning at age 35 in order to help ensure that the maximum possible number of Alaskans will achieve the target annuity.

Second, while older Alaskans will receive more at the outset, the front-loading given younger Alaskans will be invested for a longer period of time. To the extent that the percentage differential is commensurate with account earnings, the eventual return to both old and young will be quite similar.

Additionally, this option actually costs less in front-loading dollars than the straight line approach -- even though the now-elderly receive larger amounts.

Two additional points regarding front-loading warrant note. First, and as discussed earlier, under the Committee bill those who reach age 65 before 1986 do not participate in the annuity program because they are guaranteed a full longevity bonus for life. As a result, in 1985, there will be no front-loading for any individual over the age of 64. In future years, elderly Alaskans who are not within the Committee's grandfather clause will be required to participate in the annuity program if they wish to receive the "target" payment. The incremental increase in front-loading will end at age 65, and those over the age of 65 will receive the same amount of front-loading as a 65-year-old.

Second, the Committee bill envisions that the source of front-loading funds may be the earnings of the undistributed income account of the Alaska permanent fund. In past years, permanent fund earnings have exceeded the amount necessary to pay dividends and inflation-proof the fund itself. The resulting surplus comprises the undistributed income account, which has a current balance of $557 million. That account itself yields annual earnings which are greater than that necessary to provide front-loading, and which are available for appropriation.

The Committee concluded that these earnings are an appropriate source of funds for front-loading for one obvious reason: as with the basic structure of the annuity program itself, this aspect of the bill will devote current permanent fund earnings in a manner which will substantially decrease general fund obligations in later and perhaps leaner years. Once again, however, only earnings are involved. It must be stressed that nothing in the Committee bill in any way impairs the integrity of the permanent fund itself.

2. The 3% Escalator. The committee recognizes that, in legislation which passed the House last session, no automatic escalator was provided. Since the beginning of the ALB program in 1972, the original $100 payment has been periodically increased to its current $250 limit. While the amount seems large, it has -- in fact -- roughly kept pace with inflation. If the ALB is retained, the committee believes that it is unreasonable to assume that no increase in the ALB will ever be made. The persistent erosion in the real value of the ALB would at some point become so severe that relief would be necessary. For example, assuming a 6% inflation rate, a $250 ALB now will be worth only $104 15 years hence.

There are two ways of dealing with the gradual erosion of the value of the ALB. The first is to leave the problem to future legislatures. The second is the approach taken in the committee bill, which provides a modest 3% annual adjustment intended not to precisely keep pace with inflation, but rather to provide certainty in the amount of the payment.

3. Administrative Costs of the Program. Subsection 2(e) provides that the legislature may appropriate funds from the annuity account to pay the administrative costs of the annuity program. 7/ Thus, the costs of the program will be borne by the annuity participants, whether the funds are privately placed or not.

7/ If the states chooses to place the funds with private carriers, any costs shifted to the carrier under the contract would also be paid from the annuity accounts.

The bill states that administrative costs will be "equitably allocated" among annuity accounts; it is the Committee's intent that an equitable allocation will take into account such factors as numbers of participants, age, and relative account balances.

4. Choice of Benefits. Most annuity programs offer participants a choice of options, such as joint and survivor benefits. The primary reason for survivor benefits in employment annuity programs is that among married couples there is often only one wage earner. Survivor benefits are thus available to insure that the dependent spouse is not left without income. Since the annuity program in the draft bill is available to both spouses, just as is the present longevity bonus program, the Committee opted for simplicity and did not include a choice of benefits.

5. Setting the Amount of the Longevity Bonus Payment. Section 8 of the bill provides that the longevity bonus payment for those who have not reached 65 before 1986 -- is determined by deducting from that payment the maximum possible annuity available to a person who turns 65 in the year in question. The bill uses the annuity available to a 65-year-old because that annuity is the smallest available (among those who have received the maximum possible credits). A 75-year-old with the identical contribution of a 65-year-old will receive a larger annuity because his life expectancy is shorter, and his capital will be returned faster. Thus, some Alaskans will receive more than the target amount during the early years of the program, and no elderly Alaskans (with full participation) will receive less.

6. Residency Questions. The bill has no residency requirements for receipt of annuity payments. Permanent fund dividends are, of course, only available to Alaska residents -- so that an individual must be an Alaskan to contribute to an annuity account. 8/

7. Federal Income Tax Considerations. The Committee has engaged special tax counsel to consider the federal income tax consequences of its proposal. The key income tax issue is whether an Alaskan who is entitled to a permanent fund dividend will be taxable on the cash he could have elected to receive as a dividend even though, under the new program, he or she actually is only credited with the right to receive a future annuity from the state. Tax counsel has advised the Committee that due to the uniqueness of this proposed program, there is no legal precedent currently available which definitively provides an answer to this question.

Based on analogous federal tax authorities, tax counsel believes that a crucial factor in determining whether or not an Alaskan receiving an annuity credit will avoid current federal income taxation is the amount with which the legislature "front-loads" the annuity credit in the year the credit is granted. If the legislature provides a substantial front-load to the annuity credit for a particular year, an Alaskan receiving a credit that year should not be subject to tax until annuity payments are actually made on retirement. However, if the legislature provides little or no front-load to the credit for a particular year, there would be a substantial risk that those receiving annuity credits would be taxable immediately on the amount of cash they could have elected in lieu of the credit.

8/ The longevity bonus program will still require that an individual be a one-year resident to receive a bonus.

Tax counsel has advised the Committee that the available tax authorities do not provide firm guidance as to the minimum amount of front-load necessary to support deferred tax treatment of annuity credits. There is an example in the regulations suggesting that a front-load of 25% or more of the amount of the annuity credit for the year would be sufficient; however, tax counsel believes that a lesser amount may suffice. Because of this uncertainty, tax counsel suggests that if the legislature enacts this proposal it would be in the state's best interest to obtain an advance ruling from the Internal Revenue Service on the question before the proposal is actually implemented.

8. Annuity Credits Are Not a Vested Right. The Committee bill provides that an individual does not receive a vested or property right to an annuity payment until that payment is made. Funds must be appropriated annually by the legislature from the annuity account to make annuity payments. Although the legislative intent of the bill clearly is to provide annuity payments to those who have participated in the program, the Committee bill neither binds future legislatures nor creates a dedicated fund. Thus, the legislature may legally appropriate the annuity funds for any public purpose. An individual's right to an annuity payment prior to dispersal is an unfunded, unsecured promise of the state. Thus, a future annuitant is in no better legal position than any unsecured creditor of the state.

As a result, the bill is silent with regard to the garnishment of annuity credits. Prior to annuity payments, there is nothing to garnish or attach, nor anything that can properly be regarded as "income" or an "asset."

9. Protection of Alaska's Existing Elderly. As noted previously, persons who reach the age of 65 before 1986 will not be required to forego their permanent fund dividend in order to receive a $250 per month Longevity Bonus, inflated 3% annually. The Committee decided to integrate this aspect of "stair-stepping" because it concluded that many retired Alaskans have come to rely upon both the ALB and the permanent fund dividend, and -- since they are now retired -- would be unable to make adequate arrangements to mitigate the impact of an abrupt denial (or reduction) in either payment.

Under last session's House bill, those who had reached the age of 60 before 1986 would have received a full ALB for life, although the amount of that bonus would not be increased in future years. The Committee considered, and rejected the option of extending this protection to 60-year-olds for three reasons:

1. Assuming a retirement age of 65, those under that age will have 1-5 years to make necessary arrangements to accommodate either the loss of a cash dividend, or incremental reductions in the ALB payment. Current retirees, on the other hand, have little or no ability to alter their financial condition. Thus, while any age group might be said to have some "expectancy" to both an ALB and a cash dividend, that "expectancy" is more immediate, and more critical, for existing retirees;

2. Exempting 60-year-olds from the ALB reduction of the Committee bill would not simply postpone the inevitable financial disparity between two groups of Alaskans -- it would aggravate it. Under the House bill, the first reduction in payments would occur in 1991. Because of the growth in the "maximum possible annuity" by that time, the initial difference in monthly ALB payments between an exempt recipient, and a non-exempt recipient who did not forego his dividend, would be $67.21 per month. Conversely, under the Committee bill, differential payments will begin in 1986, and will initially be $11.92 per month. The Committee felt that if some smaller differential were felt immediately, the need to begin participation in the program now would be more apparent to non-exempt recipients. In other words, immediate

"stair-stepping" may well encourage higher annuity participation, which in turn will reduce the actual differential treatment between exempt and non-exempt recipients; and

3. The ALB program cannot go on forever. Indeed, it has been a goal of the Committee to develop a proposal which phases out general fund obligations near the turn of the century -- when oil revenues are predicted to dramatically decline. If the bill were to protect existing 60-year-olds, the Committee projects that the state would still be making general fund ALB payments of $74.9 million in the year 2000, and general fund obligations would not end until the year 2029. Moreover, extending the bill's protection to 60-year-olds would cost an additional $330 million over the life of the program. In drawing the necessary dividing line between those who can continue to receive the full benefits of existing law, and those who cannot, economic feasibility plays an appropriate role. For the reasons above-stated, the Committee believes that the line is best drawn at age 65.

10. Possible Participation Rates. The committee attempted to estimate likely participation rates for the legislation's annuity program. Currently, participation rates in certain voluntary employee retirement plans exceed 50%. There are, however, differences between those plans, and the annuity program established by the committee's bill. Under most employee plans, contributed funds can be withdrawn upon termination, or in case of substantial hardship. Under the committee bill, however, no benefits can accrue until retirement. Additionally, high participation rates in employee plans are, in large part, a function of intensive educational efforts which cannot be duplicated on a statewide basis -- particularly in Alaska. Finally, participation rates for employee plans may be irrelevant in predicting participation by the jobless and very poor.

On the other hand, with front loading, matching contributions which participants receive may be, at least for older Alaskans, substantially more than typical matching payments by employers. Additionally, under any employee plan, an employee must dedicate a portion of his or her regular monthly salary -- each dollar of which may already have been budgeted for regular family needs. The permanent fund dividend, on the other hand, is an irregular source of income which (for some Alaskans) is not a component of the regular family budget, and hence more readily disposable.

Given these differences, and the unique nature of the annuity program established by this bill, the committee does not believe that any meaningful projection, or even range of projections, can be provided.

If participation rates are very high, by the year 2003 state Old Age Assistance payments may be substantially decreased. Indeed, it is conceivable that a successful annuity program could virtually eliminate the need for old age welfare payments. For example, by the year 2010, every elderly Alaskan who has fully participated in the program will be receiving a monthly annuity

On the other hand, if participation is very low, the state may experience increased old age assistance obligations as the residual longevity bonus phases out.

The only way to guard against future increases in OAA clientele is to maintain the existing ALB program -- an option which the committee believes is cost-prohibitive. Other options studied would not simply threaten, but inevitably lead to higher OAA obligations. The committee bill, on the other hand, offers Alaska's future elderly at least the opportunity to ultimately avoid the need for OAA assistance -- an opportunity which at least some Alaskans will accept. In other words, even with modest levels of participation, the result would be better than under "stair-stepping."

11. Costs of Various ALB Alternatives. The committee has estimated the costs of various alternatives. Although population figures (and hence program costs) in future years are difficult to predict, several of the alternatives studied -- including the House stair-stepping approach -- envision general fund expenditures well into the next century. The committee felt that it was particularly important to at least estimate costs beyond the year 2000 for two reasons:

First, it has been a goal of the committee to develop a program which phases out general obligations after the turn of the century -- when oil revenues are projected to dramatically decline. Estimating post-2000 expenditures is thus particularly important.

Second, some options envision higher immediate investment in return for lower long term obligations. Others involve smaller near-term expenditures -- an attribute which is paid for in the years to come. A fair comparison, then, can only be made by looking at total expenditures over the life of each alternative.

Chart 1 indicates the costs of making continued ALB payments under four alternatives. This chart assumes that -- whatever program is chosen -- an escalation in the ALB payment will be made as the years go by. As the chart indicates, the cost of continuing the current, expanded ALB program is prohibitive. The second option, the "Annuity Program," reflects the committee bill without grandfathering Alaska's existing elderly. Under this option, in order to receive the target amount, existing elderly would be required to forego their permanent fund dividends.

The third option -- the "Annuity Program w/1986 Stairstep" -- reflects the ALB costs of the committee bill itself. Finally, the "House Stairstep" approach refers to last session's legislation, which would begin stair-stepping in FY 1991.

Assuming that the legislature provides a 3% per annum increase in the ALB payment, the ALB costs of the options considered are as follows:

Chart 1

ALB COSTS THROUGH 2034
WITH 3% ESCALATOR (in millions)

	Nominal $	Constant $	Present Value 9/
Current Law	13,087	2,501	1,393
Annuity Program	964	605	496
Annuity Program w/1986 Stairstep	1,290	735	584
House Stairstep	1,455	745	577

Conversely, if the legislature held the amount of the ALB constant over the years instead of providing a regulator escalator, the ALB costs of the option would be:

Chart 2

ALB COSTS THROUGH FY 2034
WITHOUT ESCALATION (in millions)

	Nominal $	Constant $	Present Value
Current Law	5,419	1,391	880
Annuity Program	619	432	369
Annuity Program w/1986 Stairstep	864	539	444
House Stairstep	1,040	586	470

In addition to the general fund costs of (1) continuing the current ALB for existing recipients, and (2) providing a

9/ The term "Nominal $" is self-explanatory. The term "Constant $" refers to costs expressed in 1986 dollars -- assuming 6% annual inflation. The term "Present Value" refers to the amount of money which, if invested now, would endow the various options through the duration of each.

gradually reduced ALB for new recipients, the committee bill envisions that individual annuity accounts will be "front loaded" with funds drawn from the earnings of the undistributed income account of the Alaska permanent fund.

Estimating the costs of "front loading" is a three step process. First, the committee assumed that the legislature would provide sufficient front loading to allow those 35 and younger to receive a $50 base supplement, and those over 35 to receive a supplement which is increased 10% for each year of age up to 65. Second, the committee assumed that participation rates would be very low in younger Alaskans, and extremely high for those older Alaskans receiving the greatest front-loading. The cost of "front load payments" under those assumptions -- with and without the grandfathering of existing recipients are reflected in Chart 3.

Finally, the effect of front loading is to more rapidly reduce the "target" ALB, and hence reduce general fund obligations. Thus, the net cost of any front loading must be offset by "ALB savings," which are also reflected in Chart 3:

Chart 3

EFFECT OF 3-YEAR FRONT LOADING
(in millions)

	Nominal $	Constant $	Present Value
Annuity Program (3% Esc.)
Front-Load Payments	113	101	96
(ALB Savings)	(126)	(69)	(31)
Net Cost (Savings)	(13)	32	65
Annuity Program (No Esc.)
Front-Load Payments	113	101	96
(ALB Savings)	(91)	(57)	(46)
Net Cost (Savings)	22	44	50
Annuity & 1986 Stairstep (3% Esc.)
Front-Load Payments	79	71	67
(ALB Savings)	(32)	(41)	(31)
Net Cost (Savings)	(3)	30	36
Annuity & 1986 Stairstep (No Esc.)
Front-Load Payments	79	71	56
(ALB Savings)	(56)	(30)	(23)
Net Cost Savings	23	41	44

The net costs (or savings) of front loading for any particular program can then be added (or subtracted) from the appropriate column of Charts 1-2. From that exercise, it is apparent that front loading does not materially affect the cost ranking of any of the options considered.

Finally, under the House stair-stepping bill, those who do not reach age 65 by FY 1990 will receive no longevity bonus. Of those who are denied the bonus in the future, a portion will apply for state Old Age Assistance. As noted previously, some 6,600 ALB recipients are currently eligible for OAA and Medicaid; yet, largely because of the bonus, only 2,526 actually receive these benefits. There is thus a segment of Alaska's elderly -- currently as many as 4,000 -- who are now eligible for OAA and Medicaid, and who might apply for benefits under those programs if the ALB were denied.

It is difficult to predict the number of elderly who would actually turn to state welfare assistance if and when the ALB program were terminated. Currently, one out of every 2.65 eligible ALB recipients actually applies for OAA. Under the "moderate low" scenario of Chart 4, one half of those elderly would apply for OAA. Under the "moderate high" scenario, two-thirds of the eligible elderly would apply for assistance once the bonus program were terminated. Cumulative costs, 10/ in increased OAA and Medicaid benefits, through the year 2010 under these two scenarios are as follows:

INCREASED OAA/MEDICAID COSTS THROUGH 2010
(in millions)

Moderate Low	Moderate High
81.3	150.2

10/ The cost estimates in Chart 4 should be viewed as substantially eqivalent to constant 1986 dollar estimates. Although they are technically nominal dollars, they assume no increase in OAA or Medicaid benefits as the years go by. If one assumes that OAA and Medicaid benefits keep close pace with inflation, these estimates would then better reflect constant dollar costs.

It is possible that increased OAA costs would also result from the committee bill. Although, under the bill, the ALB is gradually phased out, rather than abruptly terminated, those new elderly who have not participated in the annuity program may eventually find themselves in need of welfare assistance. The degree of that problem, of course, is a function of participation rates -- which are difficult to determine. However, because -- under the committee bill -- the ALB is phased out, rather than abruptly terminated, 11/ and because a portion of Alaska's population will participate in the annuity program, the committee believes that -- even with low participation rates -- the impact of the bill upon old age assistance programs is likely to be less severe than under the House Stairstepping approach.

Finally, the committee looked at the cost of various options after 1999. As noted previously, it has been a goal of the committee to develop a longevity bonus program in which general fund obligations would be minimized as oil revenues declined. Chart 5 indicates the cost of the House stairstepping bill, and the annuity program with and without stairstepping, which would be incurred in the 21st century:

11/ Thus under the House bill, a person turning 65 in 1991 would receive no ALB whatsoever. On the other hand, under the committee bill, a person turning 65 in 1991, and who has not participated in the annuity program, will still receive a longevity bonus of $222.61 per month.

CS FOR SENATE BILL NO. 67 (State Affairs)

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to the service of domestic violence injunctions."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 22.20.110 is amended to read:

Sec. 22.20.110. DUTY OF THE COMMISSIONER IN THE COURT OF APPEALS, THE SUPERIOR COURT AND DISTRICT COURTS. When required by the supreme court, and except as otherwise provided in AS 25.35.040, the commissioner shall serve and execute all process issued by the court of appeals, the superior court, and the district courts; [,] attend to and wait upon grand and petit juries; [,] maintain order; [,] attend the sessions of the courts; [,] and exercise the power and perform the duties concerning all matters within the jurisdiction of the courts as may be assigned. The commissioner is the executive officer of the court of appeals, the superior court, and district courts.

* Sec. 2. AS 25.35.040 is amended to read:

Sec. 25.35.040. SERVICE OF PROCESS. Process issued under AS 25.35.010 or 25.35.020 shall be promptly served and executed. If process is to be served upon a person believed to be present or residing in a municipality, as defined in AS 29.78.010, or in an unincorporated community, process shall be served by a peace officer of that municipality or unincorporated community. If a peace officer of that municipality or unincorporated community [A STATE PEACE OFFICER] is not available, a superior court, district court, or magistrate may designate any other peace officer to serve and execute process issued under AS 25.35.010 or 25.35.020. A peace officer shall use every reasonable means to serve process issued under AS 25.35.010 or 25.35.020.

POSITION PAPER
MUNICIPALITY OF ANCHORAGE

Bill Number: SB 67

Bill Title: An Act Relating to the Service of Domestic Violence Injunctions

Anchorage Position: The Municipality of Anchorage does not support this legislation. While we feel strongly about the need for domestic violence sanctuons it is our position on SB 67 that it is only an economic measure that transfers costs of injunction service from the State to the Municipality.

Findings: Since inception of the injunction program the number of injunctions served has increased an average of 38 percent per year. In FY 83-84 the Anchorage Judicial Services Section of the Alaska State Troopers served 1,267 injunctions, at an average time expended per injunction of 2.5 hours or 3,168 man-hours. One Judicial Services Trooper position is dedicated to this task and the excess (1,128 hours) is spread among the the other Judicial Services Troopers and Troopers assigned to the Anchorage Patrol Section.

Of the total injunctions served in FY 83-84, 633 did not have any action taken subsequent to service; 310 were rejected as not meeting statutory requirements; and 324 resulted in formal proceedings.

Impact of Municipality subsequent to passage: The Anchorage Police Department would face a severe program and fiscal impact. Court process service is a program task assigned to the APD Warrant Section where the current workload is about 50 percent beyond the capabilities of existing resources. Addition of the responsibility to serve domestic violence injunctions would cause a severe increase in the backlog of all process to be served.

To meet only the service requirements of anticipated domestic violence injunctions in 1986 the Warrant Section would require two additional Patrol Officer and one Police Clerk, two police sedans, equipment, supplies, furnishings, and additional space for the Warrant Section which is housed in the State Court Building at 941 W. 4th Avenue.

The estimated costs (in 1985 dollars) amount to:

2 Patrol Officers (24P-F)	$140,880
1 Police Clerk II (14P-1F)	42,890
2 Police Vehicles (with equipment)	32,000
Operation & Maintenance	31,200
Supplies, Furnishings & Space	18,000
	264,970

Summary: We do not support passage of SB 67 since there would not be any increase or improvement in public safety; there would not be any improvement in the timeliness of service of domestic violence injunctions; and there would be a severe program and fiscal impact to the Municipal and Police budget.

STATE OF ALASKA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
JUNEAU

January 21, 1985

The Honorable Don Bennett
President of the Senate
Alaska State Legislature
Pouch V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Senator Bennett:

Under the authority of art. III, sec. 18, of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a bill that will transfer primary responsibility for the service of process for domestic violence injunctions from the state troopers to local police departments. Current law places primary responsibility for service of these court orders on the state troopers, but provides that a court may order any other peace officer to serve them if a state trooper is not available. AS 25.35.040. This bill would require local officers to serve the orders if the person to be served is present or resides within the local department's jurisdiction. If a local officer is not available, the court may direct a state trooper to serve the court order.

This change in the law is needed because the number of domestic violence orders issued by courts each year has increased dramatically since AS 25.35.010 -- 25.35.060 (formerly AS 09.55.600 -- 09.55.640) took effect in September of 1980. In Anchorage alone, the number of domestic violence orders that must be served has climbed from an average of 15 to an average of 100 a month. The vast majority of these orders (approximately 90 percent) is directed to persons who reside within municipalities that have local police departments.

In many cases, a local police officer was called to the domestic disturbance that gave rise to the need to obtain a domestic violence injunction. The officer may even have transported the victim of the assault to the local magistrate or judge to obtain the order. To require that the resulting court order be served by a state trooper whose primary patrol area is often outside of the city or borough and who has had no previous contact with the victim or the case is not an efficient use of law enforcement resources, and may cause a delay in the service of the order. In the larger cities, service of these injunctions is made by officers in the judicial services section of the state troopers. The need to ensure adequate security in courtrooms, transport prisoners, and serve criminal arrest warrants and subpoenas severely limits the amount of time and effort a judicial services officer may devote to service of domestic violence injunctions.

In the interests of providing the quickest and best possible protection for victims of domestic violence, and of making the wisest possible use of available law enforcement resources, I urge your prompt passage of this bill.

Sincerely,

Bill Sheffield

Dear Senator Abood:

During the hearing on Senate Bill 67 "Service of Domestic Violence Injunctions", you had asked this Department to provide the cost factor directly attributed to the service of Domestic Violence Injunctions in Anchorage.

Based on the 1094 injunctions served in that community in 1984, the computation is as follows:

1755 man hours are available for one Trooper year.

The average service of an injunction is 1.5 hours. This equates to 1641 man hours or 93.5% of one Trooper's time. Thus it would take one man year.

One Trooper costs (included are benefits and personal equipment) $52,426.00.

One vehicle (included is radio and emergency equipment) $16,000.00.

The total sum is $68,426.00.

POSITION PAPER - SB 70

Support

SB 70 - "An Act relating to the release of confidential records and reports of the division of fish and wildlife protection."

Under the present language in Alaska Statute 16.05.815(a), our Department's Division of Fish & Wildlife Protection is prohibited from viewing fish tickets without first having probable cause, and then obtaining a Court Order. Providing ready access by the Division of Fish & Wildlife Protection to fish tickets is vital to our agency's efforts to effectively enforce the State's limited entry laws.

Our Division of Fish & Wildlife Protection utilizes the information from the fish tickets as evidence to substantiate that a violation of the State's limited entry laws, or other commercial fishing laws or regulations, did in fact take place.

The type of information contained on fish tickets can provide our Fish & Wildlife Protection Troopers with probable cause to believe that a violation of the State's limited entry laws has occurred.

Having ready access to the fish tickets and fish ticket information is absolutely essential if the Division of Fish & Wildlife Protection is to enforce limited entry. Access to fish tickets would: (1) Allow us to determine who were permit holders; (2) allow us to determine who was purchasing fish from non-permit holders; and (3) increase the apprehension of illegal commercial fishermen substantially.

Our Department strongly believes that having ready access to fish tickets and fish ticket information, as provided for in SB 70 is critical to our agency's effective enforcement of Alaska's limited entry and commercial fishing laws.

Robert J. Sundberg

SB 70

HISTORY OF HB 7

To: House Resources Committee Files
From: Janet Fries, Committee Aide
Date: 1/23/85

The need for a change in AS 16.05.815(a) arose when the Division of Fish and Wildlife Protection, which was formerly the enforcement arm of the Department of Fish and Game (ADF&G), was transferred to the Department of Public Safety (DPS). Prior to that time, all enforcement officers had full access to ADF&G confidential reports and records.

In 1982, the Alaska Legislature passed a Senate CS for House Bill 668, which provided the Division of Fish and Wildlife Protection with access to fish ticket information until July 1, 1984. This was done, presumably, so that it would come back to the Legislature for reconsideration.

Late in the Thirteenth Legislative Session, the Department of Public Safety approached the Senate Resources Committee with an amendment which would reinstate the Division's access to fish ticket information. The amendment was proposed for HB 404, an Administration housecleaning bill which would amend several sections of Title 16. HB 404 was then under consideration by the Committee. The bill was not amended, due primarily to concerns that fish ticket information regarding "hot fishing spots" might inadvertently leak from Division officers or clerical personnel to other fishermen in a given fishery.

The Division of Fish and Wildlife Protection officers have strict policies regarding the use of confidential information which preclude this type of "leakage". This is discussed in the attached memorandum from Lt. Seibel to Commissioner Sundberg. Because these officers are trained enforcement personnel who deal with confidential information continually, these policies are stringently enforced.

The attached background information regarding HB 7 contains a strong statement of support from Governor Bill Sheffield, who was planning to introduce a similar bill this session, had it not been introduced by a Legislator. Also included are resolutions which support the measure from the United Fishermen of Alaska, the Bering Sea Fishermen's Association, and the Naknek-Kvichak Fish and Game Advisory Committee. The Department of Fish and Game strongly supports this bill. The Bristol Bay Native Association and the Bristol Bay Borough both support the bill, as enforcement of the limited entry law and in-season fishing regulations are a serious problem affecting the livelihood of local fishermen in the Britol Bay salmon fishery, the largest in the state.

This packet also contains information provided by the Department of Public Safety which demonstrates how fish ticket information is used by the Division of Fish and Wildlife Protection and why it is necessary for their officers to access this information in order to be effective in their enforcement of fishing laws and regulations throughout the state. For those not familiar with fish tickets, samples are attached.

RE: CS for Sponsor
Substitute for House Bill 404

Dear Senator Fahrenkamp:

As requested by the Fisheries Sub-Committee, attached is information regarding enforcement activities as a result of this department having access to records related to landing of fish, shellfish, or fishery products (fish tickets).

At the outset, I wish to respectfully point out that the availability of access to fish tickets by this Department's law officers acts as a deterrent to violations by fish pirates and thus sustains the resource availability for the predominantly law abiding commercial fishermen. In fact, past experience has shown that in most cases, fishermen accused of illegal activities by others are immediately cleared of any wrongdoing by simply reviewing their fish tickets.

I know it is of great concern to some members of the Committee that proliferation of access to the fish tickets encourages leakage of information contained therein that is financially harmful to the fishermen. Let me assure the Committee and the Legislature as a whole that of all those agencies that have had access to the tickets, this Department's enforcement officers have, and will continue to, treat the information gained as confidential evidentiary knowledge as is done in all investigations. Any officer who would do less would be severely disciplined.

As expressed before the Fisheries Sub-Committee, the fish tickets are an excellent tool to deter and detect violations. Without this Department's enforcement officers having such immediate availability, and if there was common knowledge to that fact, violations would be encouraged. As an example, the Norton Sound herring fishery is an exclusive registration area. If this Department does not have access to fish tickets, it will not be able to immediately determine who is fishing illegally in that exclusive area. This fact could be tempting to the some 500 boats now in Togiak as well as vessels in other locations.

To accurately address the question of the number of cases made by this Department via use of fish tickets requires a hand search of all cases in file within the five various detachments of the Division of Fish & Wildlife Protection. This is a time consuming activity. Time being of the essence in this instance, as the Fisheries Sub-Committee is graciously holding the bill awaiting this Department's input on cases made, a current list based on individual enforcement officers personal knowledge is being submitted at this time. There are other cases in file but that knowledge would not be gained in time for consideration.

I can appreciate the concerns of members of the Committee related to this Department having access to the fish tickets, but our only interest is in protection of the renewable fish resource by bringing charges against the fish pirates.

Sincerely,

Robert J. Sundberg
Commissioner

SUBJECT: HB 7 - Fish Ticket Access

On January 18, 1985 I met with Ms. Janet Freis from Representative Adelheid Herrmann's office to discuss HB 7 pertaining to our Division's access to fish tickets and fish ticket information. During this meeting I offered to provide Representative Herrmann with some background history and some other important information that I believe is pertinent to this particular issue.

To give you an overview I have provided the following index:

A. What is Fish Ticket?
B. History
C. Examples of Specific Cases Involving Fish Tickets
D. Legislation Audit Report
E. Confidentiality
F. Summary

A. What is a Fish Ticket?

First of all, fish tickets are those records of delivery of fish caught for commercial purposes. Information on these tickets include the date the fish are landed, or sold; numbers or pounds of fish sold by species; name of the fisherman and his limited entry permit number, name of the buyer, ADF&G statistical area where the fish were caught, and may or may not include the price paid for the fish.

B. History

In 1972 the Protection Division was transferred from the Department of Fish & Game to the Department of Public Safety. Because the Protection Division had been a part of the Department of Fish & Game, restricting access to members of that Department still allowed exchange of these tickets; where it appeared a violation had occurred, between Fish & Game biologists and law enforcement personnel.

Increasingly in the years since the transfer of the Protection Division to Public Safety, access was restricted, based on opinions of State attorneys that Public Safety could not be allowed to have this information under the old statute. The Division was required to have sufficient probable cause to convince a court that a crime had been committed before looking at the fish tickets.

In many cases, it was the fish ticket information that was the initial indication that a violation had occurred, and therefore these tickets could not be reviewed by enforcement personnel, and also could not be obtained through the court. If a Fish & Game biologist or data clerk thought they had evidence of a violation they would have to follow through on it themselves, at least to a point where enough probable cause was developed to allow enforcement personnel to gain access to the tickets. This interfered with their work and was a source of concern to Fish & Game.

In some cases, because of the lack of access to fish tickets, cases could not be properly investigated, and persons violating fishery statutes or regulations could not be prosecuted.

The Legislature enacted legislation that allowed access to fish tickets by Division personnel beginning in the summer of 1982 and extending for two years until July 1, 1984. Since July 1, 1984 the problems facing the Division of Fish & Wildlife Protection restricting it's access to the fish ticket information as experienced prior to the summer of 1982 have now, again, resurfaced.

C. Examples of Specific Cases Involving Fish Tickets

I believe that it is important, at this point, to cite examples of various investigations, where through the use of fish tickets, commercial fishing violators were apprehended.

1. The first case involves a 100 foot vessel Alaska Coast in June of 1983. A fish ticket and biological sample of the delivery allowed Fish & Wildlife Protection to compare crab weights from the F/V Alaska Coast with other deliveries and past survey data from the same ADF&G statistical area. Based on this comparative fish ticket information a search warrant was obtained and served. The vessel's logs confirmed that they were fishing more that 350 miles inside the closed waters of the Bering Sea. The vessel was subsequently seized. This case involved receipt of $197,000 by the defendants for delivery of brown king crab.

2. In the Dutch Harbor area from August 1982 to spring of 1984 Fish & Wildlife Protection initiated 132 cases involving fish tickets, resulting in judgements against 67 defendants and a net fine of $67,850.

3. In the Bristol Bay case of State Vs. Monte Hughes (1983) access to the fish ticket information resulted in the defendant being charged with commercial fishing without a limited entry permit. This case resulted in a deferred prosecution with the following conditions:

   a. Payment of $25,000 plus interest to the State;

   b. No commercial fishing as a skipper or crewman for three years;

   c. Cooperation with State officials in the investigation of an additional offense by another person.

4. A fourth example pertains to a commercial fish buyer in Southeast. During the spring of 1984 Mr. Walter Rasmussen of Bar Harbor Seafoods was cited for several violations pertaining to his fish processing business in Ketchikan. He was cited for failing to imprint the fish tickets with the fisherman's limited entry permit number and other violations. He was fined a total of $9,250 with $4,950 suspended. Without having ready access to these fish tickets prosecution would have been difficult at best.

D. Legislative Audit Report

In 1981 a Legislative Audit report, concerning the Bristol Bay fisheries, stated that "the most efficient means of enforcing a limited fishery would be to allow Fish & Wildlife Protection access to fish tickets and fish ticket information".

E. Confidentiality

There is a concern by some individuals that the more people who review fish tickets increases the possibility of catch locations becoming public information. Fish & Wildlife Protection's responsibility for the confidentiality of the fish ticket information would be the same as ADF&G and Limited Entry.

As in any investigation by our Department's personnel, officer's that mis-used any information could be subject to reprimand, dismissal and/or possibly criminal charges being filed against them. Section 101.410 of the Department's Operating Procedures Manual states that "Employees shall not release information relative to any investigation or reports except in accordance with the written instructions of the Department of Public Safety relative to the confidentiality of certain records... No employees shall divulge information deemed as confidential to any unauthorized person, whether obtained through the execution of departmental duties or other means."

Also an important fact to point out here is that compared to ADF&G, Limited Entry and Department of Revenue, Public Safety probably has the most stringent requirements for becoming a member of its Department by its use of employee background investigations and the use of the polygraph.

F. Summary

The Division of Fish & Wildlfie Protection is the agency responsible for protection of the State's resources. This makes our agency an integral part of the overall management scheme. To restrict our access to fish ticket information severely hampers our efforts and ability to effectively enforce Alaska's statutes and regulations passed for the conservation and development of its fisheries resources.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

POSITION PAPER - SB 73

Support

January 31, 1985

SB 73 - An Act relating to the identification of persons arrested when driving while intoxicated.

The purpose of this legislation is to require the photographing and fingerprinting of all suspects arrested for driving while intoxicated.

In most, but not all, Alaska State Troopers posts these suspects are processed through a booking facility which obtains both photographs and fingerprints. In other locations including Anchorage, the suspects are brought before a magistrate after video taping and intoximeter testing. They are usually released on their own recognizance or to a third party, thus avoiding photographing or fingerprinting which are the best means of identification.

The recent installation of the Automated Fingerprint Identification Network (AFIN) in the AST Crime Lab has provided the law enforcement community with the ability to quickly identify suspects based upon their fingerprints if they are suspects in other crimes. This identification can then be confirmed through the examination of photographs.

Passage of this legislation will enhance the effective use of AFIN and will increase the number of arrests in both misdemeanor and felony cases.

Section (b) of this proposed legislation requires that all law enforcement agencies forward a copy of the fingerprint cards to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The Federal Bureau of Investigation will not accept these cards directly from all local law enforcement agencies. They should be forwarded through the Department of Public Safety. The following wording change is suggested: "shall forward two sets of fingerprints and information concerning the subject's arrest to the Alaska State Troopers, Scientific Crime Detection Laboratory."

RE: SB 73 - "An Act relating to the identification of persons arrested when driving while intoxicated."

On Monday, January 28th Craig Pease called (586-2008 or 586-3085) and suggested that we include video taping as mandatory in SB 73 along with photographing and fingerprinting.

On Tuesday, January 29th, I talked with Mr. Bill Brown from DMV and ask him the procedure dealing with the taping of DWI suspects. He stated that it was a departmental policy and as far as he knew that all the departments with video equipment did have the policy to video tape the suspects.

On Wednesday, January 30th, I talked with Mr, George Edwards of legal services. I asked him about the possibility of mandating the video taping. He said that he did not believe that it would be necessary, especially in this bill. SB 73 was drafted to make positive identification. Video taping is used as evidence of intoxication.

In addition, requiring the department to video tape would cause a few problems. One of financial impact. The departments that do not have the equipment would have to purchase it. There would also be the problem of what is a department to do when the equipment is broken down.

Therefore, I suggest that the issue of video taping not be addressed in SB 73 at this time.

SENATE BILL 73

"An Act relating to the identification of persons arrested when driving while intoxicatied."

SB 73 will force law enforcement agencies to take photographs and fingerprints from a person arrested for DWI, negligent homicide or assault in connection with driving incidents. As DWI and related statutes around the country are given more meaningful penalties for repeated violators, it becomes more and more important to be able to prove in court that a particular offense on a person's criminal record printout was actually committed by that person. Fingerprints do not lie. In Alaska, where defendants are routinely released on their own recognizance by the court before they are even booked into jail (where the fingerprints are normally obtained), law officers do not normally perform these operations themselves; they can do it, however, and should be required to do so.

There are people who have actually killed their victims in traffic accidents and whose names are not in either the state or federal criminal records, simply because they were not arrested at the scene of the accident and were later brought into court voluntarily without being fingerprinted or arrested.

Fiscal Analysis

Ten of the Alaska State Trooper posts throughout the state do not have immediate access to a booking facility or which operate under procedures dictated by the Court System which do not provide for the suspect to be processed through a local booking facility. These locations are Anchorage, Yakutat, Deadhorse, Coldfoot, Seven Mile, Fort Yukon, Cantwell, Healy, Delta, and Tok.

At each of these locations a $2,500.00 camera capable of taking pictures of the quality necessary to ascertain identity for booking purposes will need to be installed. No space requirements are anticipated since each location has areas used for Intoximeter Testing that can double for the picture taking and fingerprinting area. Minimal costs are anticipated for the initial film and fingerprint card supplies. Ongoing supply needs can be absorbed in future budgets. The additional Trooper time necessary to implement this system is felt to be minimal.

POSITION PAPER - SB 74

Support

February 1, 1985

SB 74 - "An Act relating to driving while intoxicated."

The intent of this legislation is to clarify the language in 28.35.030 to close loopholes through which suspects have been able to avoid prosecution.

Robert J. Sundberg
Commissioner

SENATE BILL 74

"An Act relating to driving while intoxicated"

Section 1

Would solve the problem created by defendants who drive under the influence of alcohol and drugs, or drugs alone, where the drug is one which affects the ability to drive, but which is not listed in the statutes set forth in AS 28.35.030(a)(1). In attempting to prohibit such conduct, the Legislature stated in AS 28.35.030(a)(3) that it was unlawful to drive under the influence of "alcohol and another substance." The Alaska Supreme Court found that subsection unconstitutionally vague in Williford v. State, 675 P.2d 1329 (Alaska 1983). The amendment, which is patterned after comparable subsections of the Uniform Vehicle Code, would solve this legal problem.

Section 2

Adds a new paragraph to specify the meaning of "drug".

Section 3 and 4

Would make clear the Legislature's intent that all persons convicted of DWI or breath test refusal should serve time in jail, not just those who could not afford some type of residential alcohol treatment program. Under the court cases of Nygren v. State, 658 P.2d 141 (Alaska 1983), and Lock v. State, 609 P.2d 539 (Alaska App. 1980), if a defendant is required to spend time in a residential alcohol program prior to sentencing, as a condition of bail, then he or she must receive credit for that time spent in the program against the total jail time to be served. At least one district judge in Anchorage has held that, under a variation of this concept, the defendant may enter the treatment program after sentencing and still receive credit against the jail sentence. These new subsections will calarify that the time spent in a residential alcohol treatment or rehabilitation program cannot be credited towards part or all of a mandatory sentence.

Section 5

Would cure a defect in the wording of AS 28.35.035 which, in some cases, permits uncooperative DWI defendants to avoid conviction for either DWI or refusal. An example is a DWI defendant who is injured, but who did not injure any other person, in a accident; if he is held at the hospital emergency room for treatment and will not take a blood alcohol test, the police are often unable to obtain any evidence of blood alcohol concentration. Adding the words or at a location would make it clear that, if a person is at a medical facility and, for that reason alone, cannot be offered a breath test (the court-approved instruments are not portable), the person may be subjected to an involuntary blood test because he is "at a location rendering that person incapable of providing a breath sample." There is not constitutional impediment to this procedure. Schmerber v. California, 384 U.S. 757, 86 S.Ct. 1826, 16 L.Ed.2d 908 (1966).

CS FOR FOR SENATE BILL NO. 75 (State Affairs)

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to suspension of the privilege to obtain a driver's license."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 22.15.100 is amended to read:

Sec. 22.15.100. FUNCTIONS AND POWERS OF DISTRICT JUDGE AND MAGISTRATE. Each district judge and magistrate has the power

(1) to issue writs of habeas corpus for the purpose of inquiring into the cause of restraint of liberty, returnable before a judge of the superior court, and the same proceedings shall be had on the writ as if it had been granted by the superior court judge under the laws of the state in such cases;

(2) of a notary public;

(3) to issue marriage licenses and to solemnize marriages;

(4) to issue warrants of arrest, summons and search warrants according to manner and procedure prescribed by law and the supreme court;

(5) to act as an examining judge or magistrate in preliminary examinations in criminal proceedings; to set, receive and forfeit bail and to order the release of defendants under bail;

(6) to act as a referee in matters and actions referred to the judge or magistrate by the superior court, with all powers conferred upon referees by laws;

(7) of the superior court in all respects including but not

(8) to order the temporary detention of a minor, or take other action authorized by law or rules of procedure, in cases arising under AS 47.10, when the minor is in a condition or surrounding dangerous or injurious to the welfare of the minor or others which requires immediate action; the action may be continued in effect until reviewed by the superior court in accordance with rules of procedure governing these cases;

(9) to issue a temporary order for emergency injunctive relief in cases involving domestic violence as provided in AS 25.35.-020;

(10) to review an administrative revocation of a person's driver's license, [OR] nonresident privilege to drive, or privilege to obtain a driver's license, and an administrative refusal to issue an original license, when designated as a hearing officer by the commissioner of public safety and with the consent of the administrative director of the state court system.

* Sec. 2. AS 28.15.061(b) is amended to read:

(b) An application under (a) of this section shall

(1) contain the applicant's full name, date and place of birth, sex, and mailing and residence addresses;

(2) state whether the applicant has been previously licensed as a driver and, if so, when and by what jurisdiction;

(3) state whether any previous driver's license issued to the applicant has ever been suspended or revoked, [OR] whether an application for a driver's license has ever been refused, or whether the applicant's privilege to obtain a driver's license has ever been revoked by a court or the department or a similar agency in another state and, if so, the date of and reason for the suspension, revocation or refusal; and

(4) contain other information which the department may reasonably require to determine the applicant's identity, competency, and eligibility.

* Sec. 3. AS 28.15.165(a) is amended to read:

(a) If a chemical test administered under AS 28.35.031(a) to a person driving a motor vehicle for which a driver's license is required produces a result described in AS 28.35.030(a)(2) or if a person under arrest for driving a motor vehicle for which a driver's license is required refuses to submit to a chemical test under AS 28.35.031(a), a law enforcement officer shall read a notice and deliver a copy to the person. The notice shall advise that

(1) the department intends to revoke the person's driver's license or nonresident privilege to drive, or refuse to issue an original license to the person;

(2) the person has the right to administrative review of the revocation or determination not to issue an original license;

(3) the notice itself is a temporary driver's license, for persons then holding a valid license, that expires seven days after it is delivered to the person;

(4) revocation of the person's driver's license or nonresident privilege to drive, or a determination not to issue an original license shall take effect upon expiration of the temporary driver's license unless the person within seven days requests an administrative review.

* Sec. 4. AS 28.15 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 28.15.176. SUSPENSION OR REVOCATION OF PRIVILEGE TO OBTAIN A LICENSE. (a) A court or the department may suspend or revoke a person's privilege to obtain a driver's license in the same manner and for the same reasons as a driver's license issued under this chapter.

(b) If a court or the department is required by statute or regulation to suspend or revoke a person's driver's license, then the privilege to obtain a driver's license shall be suspended or revoked if the person does not have a driver's license.

(c) Procedures and references in AS 28 relating to the suspension or revocation of a driver's license are equally applicable to the suspension or revocation of the privilege to obtain a driver's license.

* Sec. 5. AS 28.15.291 is amended to read:

Sec. 28.15.291. DRIVING WHILE LICENSE OR PRIVILEGE TO OBTAIN A LICENSE CANCELLED, SUSPENDED, REVOKED OR IN VIOLATION OF LIMITATION. (a) A person may not drive a motor vehicle on a highway or vehicular way or area at a time when that person's driver's license, privilege to obtain a driver's license, or privilege to drive has been canceled, suspended or revoked in this or another jurisdiction, or when driving in violation of a limitation placed upon that person's license or privilege to drive in this or another jurisdiction. Except as provided in (c) of this section, upon conviction of a violation of this section, the court shall impose a sentence of imprisonment of not less than 10 days. The execution of sentence may not be suspended nor may probation or parole be granted until the minimum imprisonment provided in this section has been served; nor may imposition of sentence be suspended. In addition, the person's license, privilege to obtain a license, or privilege to drive shall be revoked, and the person may not be issued a new license nor may the privilege to drive be restored for an additional period of not less than one year after the date that the person would have been entitled to restoration of driving privileges or issuance of a license.

(b) When a person's license or privilege to obtain a license is canceled, limited, suspended or revoked, that person shall be informed by the department or the court that takes the action at the time of the action that, upon a conviction of driving on a highway or vehicular way or area in this state at a time when that person's driver's license, [OR] privilege to drive or privilege to obtain a driver's license in this state has been canceled, suspended or revoked, or upon a conviction of driving in violation of a limitation of the license, that person will be subject to the mandatory minimum sentence of imprisonment under this section.

(c) The court shall impose a sentence of imprisonment of not less than 30 days and a fine of not less than $500 upon conviction of a violation of this section if the person's driver's license or privilege to obtain a driver's license was revoked under circumstances described in AS 28.15.181(c)(1). The court shall impose a sentence of imprisonment of not less than 90 days and a fine of not less than $1,000 upon conviction of a violation of this section if the person's driver's license or privilege to obtain a driver's license was revoked under circumstances described in AS 28.15.181(c)(2) or (3). The execution of sentence may not be suspended nor may probation or parole be granted until the minimum imprisonment provided in this subsection has been served. Imposition of sentence may not be suspended. In addition, the person's privilege to drive and to obtain a driver's license shall be revoked for an additional period of not less than one year after the date that the person would have been entitled to restoration of driving privileges or to obtain a driver's license if the person had not been convicted under this section.

(d) A person convicted of a violation of this section is guilty of a class A misdemeanor.

* Sec. 2. AS 28.05.141(c) is amended to read:

(c) If at the hearing under (a) of this section it appears that the record of the person sustains suspension, revocation, limitation, denial, or other remedial action, the hearing officer shall so order and the department may suspend, revoke, limit, deny, or take other remedial action against that person's license or privilege to obtain a license and, if appropriate, the department shall adjust the person's point total accumulated under AS 28.15.231.

* Sec. 3. AS 28.15.031(b) is amended to read:

(b) The department may not issue an original or duplicate driver's license to, nor renew or reinstate the driver's license of, a person

(1) whose license or privilege to obtain a license is suspended or revoked, except as otherwise provided in this chapter;

(2) who fails to appear in court for the adjudication of a certain vehicle, driver or traffic offense when the person's appearance is required by statute, regulation or court rule;

(3) who is an habitual user of alcohol or another drug to such a degree that the person is incapable of safely driving a motor vehicle;

(4) who has previously been adjudged to be afflicted with, or suffering from, a mental disability or a disease and who has not, at the time of application for the license, been restored to competency by the methods provided by law;

(5) when the department, based upon medical evidence, has determined that because of the person's physical or mental disability the person is not able to drive a motor vehicle safely;

(6) who is unable to understand official traffic control devices as displayed in this state or who does not have a fair knowledge of traffic laws and regulations, as demonstrated by an examination;

(7) who has knowingly made a false statement in the person's application for a license or has committed fraud in connection with the person's application for, or in obtaining or attempting to obtain, a license, or who has not applied under oath on the form provided for the purpose of obtaining or attempting to obtain a license or permit; or

(8) who is required under AS 28.20 to furnish proof of financial responsibility and who has not done so.

* Sec. 4. AS 28.15.061(b) is amended to read:

(b) An application under (a) of this section shall

(1) contain the applicant's full name, date and place of birth, sex, and mailing and residence addresses;

(2) state whether the applicant has been previously licensed as a driver and, if so, when and by what jurisdiction;

(3) state whether any previous driver's license issued to the applicant has ever been suspended or revoked, [OR] whether an application for a driver's license has ever been refused, or whether the applicant's privilege to obtain a driver's license has ever been revoked by a court or the department or a similar agency in another state and, if so, the date of and reason for the suspension, revocation, or refusal; and

(4) contain other information which the department may reasonably require to determine the applicant's identity, competency, and eligibility.

* Sec. 5. AS 28.15.165(a) is amended to read:

(a) If a chemical test administered under AS 28.35.031(a) to a person driving a motor vehicle for which a driver's license is required produces a result described in AS 28.35.030(a)(2) or if a person under arrest for driving a motor vehicle for which a driver's license is required refuses to submit to a chemical test under AS 28.35.031(a), a law enforcement officer shall read a notice and deliver a copy to the person. The notice shall advise that

(1) the department intends to revoke the person's driver's license or nonresident privilege to drive, or refuse to issue an original license to the person;

(2) the person has the right to administrative review of the revocation or determination not to issue an original license;

(4) revocation of the person's driver's license or nonresident privilege to drive, or a determination not to issue an original license shall take effect upon expiration of the temporary driver's license unless the person within seven days requests an administrative review.

* Sec. 6. AS 28.15 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 28.15.176. SUSPENSION OR REVOCATION OF PRIVILEGE TO OBTAIN A LICENSE. (a) A court or the department may suspend or revoke a person's privilege to obtain a driver's license in this state in the same manner and for the same reasons as a court or the department may suspend or revoke a driver's license issued under this chapter.

(b) This section applies to a person who

(1) has not been issued a driver's license under this chapter, whether or not the person is eligible to apply for a license; and

(2) does not have a privilege to drive in this state.

* Sec. 7. AS 28.15.181(a) is amended to read:

(a) Conviction of any of the following offenses is grounds for the immediate revocation of a driver's license or the privilege to obtain a driver's license:

(1) manslaughter or negligent homicide resulting from driving a motor vehicle;

(2) a felony in the commission of which a motor vehicle is used;

(3) failure to stop and give aid as required by law when a motor vehicle accident results in the death or personal injury of another;

(4) perjury or making a false affidavit or statement under oath to the department under a law relating to motor vehicles;

(5) driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated;

(6) reckless driving;

(7) using a motor vehicle in unlawful flight to avoid arrest by a peace officer;

(8) refusal to submit to a chemical test under AS 28.-35.032;

(9) driving while license or privilege to obtain a license is canceled, suspended, revoked or in violation of a limitation.

* Sec. 8. AS 28.15.181(b) is amended to read:

(b) A court convicting a person of an offense described in (a)(1) - (4), (6), or (7) of this section shall revoke that person's driver's license or privilege to obtain a driver's license for not less than 30 days for the first conviction, unless the court determines that the person's ability to earn a livelihood would be severely impaired and a limitation under AS 28.15.201 can be placed on the license that will enable the person to earn a livelihood without excessive danger to the public. If a court limits a person's license under this subsection, it shall do so for not less than 60 days. Upon a subsequent conviction of a person for any offense described in (a)(1) - (4), (6), (7) of this section occurring within 10 years after a prior conviction, the court shall revoke the person's license or privilege to obtain a driver's license and may not grant the person limited license privileges for the following periods:

(1) not less than one year for the second conviction; and

(2) not less than three years for a third or subsequent conviction.

* Sec. 9. AS 28.15.181(c) is amended to read:

(c) A court convicting a person of an offense described in (a)(5) or (8) of this section arising out of the operation of a motor vehicle for which a driver's license is required shall revoke that person's driver's license or privilege to obtain a driver's license. The revocation may be concurrent with or consecutive to an administrative revocation under AS 28.15.165. The court may not, except as provided in (e) of this section, grant limited license privileges for the following periods:

(1) not less than 90 days if, within the preceding 10 years, the person has not previously been convicted of an offense

(A) described in (a)(5) or (8) of this section; or

(B) under a law or ordinance in another jurisdiction with elements substantially similar to an offense described in (a)(5) or (8) of this section;

(2) not less than one year if, within the preceding 10 years, the person has been previously convicted of one offense

(A) described in (a)(5) or (8) of this section; or

(B) under a law or ordinance in another jurisdiction with elements substantially similar to an offense described in (a)(5) or (8) of this section;

(3) not less than 10 years if, within the preceding 10 years, the person has been previously convicted of more than one of the following offenses or has more than once been previously convicted of one of the following offenses:

(A) an offense described in (a)(5) or (8) of this section; or

(B) an offense under another law or ordinance in another jurisdiction with elements substantially similar to an offense described in (a)(5) or (8) of this section.

* Sec. 10. AS 28.15.211(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except for a point system suspension or revocation under

AS 28.15.221 - 28.15.241 and unless provided otherwise by law, and unless the suspension or revocation was for a cause that has been removed, a person whose driver's license, privilege to obtain a driver's license, or privilege to drive a motor vehicle in this state has been suspended or revoked may not apply for a new license nor may the person's driving privilege be restored until the expiration of

(1) one month from the date on which the license or privilege to obtain a license was suspended or revoked for a first conviction of the particular offense from which the suspension or revocation resulted;

(2) three months from the date on which the license or privilege to obtain a license was suspended or revoked for a second conviction within 12 consecutive months of the same offense from which the suspension or revocation resulted;

(3) one year from the date on which the license or privilege to obtain a license was suspended or revoked for a third or subsequent conviction within 12 consecutive months of the same offense from which the suspension or revocation resulted.

* Sec. 11. AS 28.15.291 is amended to read:

Sec. 28.15.291. DRIVING WHILE LICENSE OR PRIVILEGE TO OBTAIN A LICENSE CANCELED, SUSPENDED, REVOKED OR IN VIOLATION OF LIMITATION. (a) A person may not drive a motor vehicle on a highway or vehicular way or area at a time when that person's driver's license, privilege to obtain a driver's license, or privilege to drive has been canceled, suspended or revoked in this or another jurisdiction, or when driving in violation of a limitation placed upon that person's license or privilege to drive in this or another jurisdiction. Except as provided in (c) of this section, upon conviction of a violation of this section, the court shall impose a sentence of imprisonment of not less than 10 days. The execution of sentence may not be suspended nor may probation or parole be granted until the minimum imprisonment provided in this section has been served; nor may imposition of sentence be suspended. In addition, the person's license, privilege to obtain a license, or privilege to drive shall be revoked, and the person may not be issued a new license nor may the privilege to drive be restored for an additional period of not less than one year after the date that the person would have been entitled to restoration of driving privileges or issuance of a license.

(b) When a person's license or privilege to obtain a license is canceled, limited, suspended or revoked, that person shall be informed by the department or the court that takes the action at the time of the action that, upon a conviction of driving on a highway or vehicular way or area in this state at a time when that person's driver's license, [OR] privilege to drive or privilege to obtain a driver's license in this state has been canceled, suspended or revoked, or upon a conviction of driving in violation of a limitation of the license, that person will be subject to the mandatory minimum sentence of imprisonment under this section.

(c) The court shall impose a sentence of imprisonment of not less than 30 days and a fine of not less than $500 upon conviction of a violation of this section if the person's driver's license or privilege to obtain a driver's license was revoked under circumstances described in AS 28.15.181(c)(1). The court shall impose a sentence of imprisonment of not less than 90 days and a fine of not less than $1,000 upon conviction of a violation of this section if the person's driver's license or privilege to obtain a driver's license was revoked under circumstances described in AS 28.15.181(c)(2) or (3). The be granted until the minimum imprisonment provided in this subsection has been served. Imposition of sentence may not be suspended. In addition, the person's privilege to drive and to obtain a driver's license shall be revoked for an additional period of not less than one year after the date that the person would have been entitled to restoration of driving privileges or to obtain a driver's license if the person had not been convicted under this section.

(d) A person convicted of a violation of this section is guilty of a class A misdemeanor.

* Sec. 12. AS 28.20.090(a) is amended to read:

(a) If a person required to deposit security under this chapter fails to deposit security within 10 days after the department sends notice, the department shall suspend

(1) the license of each driver involved in the accident;

(2) the privilege of operating a vehicle subject to registration if the driver is a nonresident;

(3) the privilege of the owner to operate or permit the operation within this state of a vehicle subject to registration if the owner is a nonresident;

(4) the privilege to obtain a driver's license if the person has not been issued a license under this title and does not have a privilege to drive in this state.

* Sec. 13. AS 28.22.240(a) is amended to read:

(a) If a person fails to provide proof that motor vehicle liability insurance or a certificate of self-insurance was in effect at the time of an accident or when the person was charged with a violation of a traffic law described in AS 28.22.210, the department shall suspend the driver's license or privilege to obtain a driver's license

(1) not less than 90 days if, within the preceding 10 years, the person has not previously had a driver's license or privilege to obtain a driver's license suspended for violation of AS 28.22.200;

(2) not less than one year if, within the preceding 10 years, the person has previously had a driver's license or privilege to obtain a driver's license suspended one or more times for violation of AS 28.22.200.

* Sec. 14. AS 28.35.030(c) is amended to read:

(c) Upon conviction under this section the court shall impose a minimum sentence of imprisonment of not less than 72 consecutive hours and a fine of not less than $250 if the person has not been previously convicted in this or another jurisdiction of driving while intoxicated under this or another law or ordinance with substantially similar elements or refusal to submit to a chemical test under AS 28.35.032 or another law or ordinance with substantially similar elements. Upon conviction under this section the court shall impose a minimum sentence of imprisonment of not less than 20 consecutive days and a fine of not less than $500 if, within the preceding 10 years, the person has been previously convicted once in this or another jurisdiction of driving while intoxicated under this or another law or ordinance with substantially similar elements or refusal to submit to a chemical test under AS 28.35.032 or another law or ordinance with substantially similar elements. Upon conviction under this section the court shall impose a minimum sentence of imprisonment of not less than 30 consecutive days and a fine of not less than $1,000 if, within the preceding 10 years, the person has been previously convicted in this or another jurisdiction of more than one of the following offenses or has more than once been previously convicted of one of the following offenses:

(1) driving while intoxicated under this or another law or ordinance with substantially similar elements; (2) refusal to submit to a chemical test under AS 28.35.032 or another law or ordinance with substantially similar elements. The execution of sentence may not be suspended nor may probation be granted except on condition that the minimum imprisonment provided in this section is served. Imposition of sentence may not be suspended. In addition, if the offense involved driving a motor vehicle for which a driver's license is required, the person's driver's license or privilege to obtain a driver's license shall be revoked in accordance with AS 28.15.181 and the vehicle used in commission of the offense may be forfeited under AS 28.35.036. In addition, the court shall order, and a person convicted under this section shall undertake, for a term specified by the court, that program of alcohol education or rehabilitation that the court, after consideration of any information compiled under (d) of this section, finds appropriate.

* Sec. 15. AS 28.35.032(g) is amended to read:

(g) Upon conviction of a person under this section, the court shall impose a minimum sentence of imprisonment of not less than 72 consecutive hours and a fine of not less than $250 if the person has not been previously convicted in this or another jurisdiction of driving while intoxicated under AS 28.35.030 or another law or ordinance with substantially similar elements or refusal to submit to a chemical test under this section or another law or ordinance with substantially similar elements. Upon conviction under this section the court shall impose a minimum sentence of imprisonment of not less than 20 consecutive days and a fine of not less than $500 if, within the preceding 10 years, the person has been previously convicted once in this or another jurisdiction of driving while intoxicated under

AS 28.35.030 or another law or ordinance with substantially similar elements or refusal to submit to a chemical test under this section or another law or ordinance with substantially similar elements. Upon conviction under this section the court shall impose a minimum sentence of imprisonment of not less than 30 consecutive days and a fine of not less than $1,000 if, within the previous 10 years, the person has been previously convicted in this or another jurisdiction of more than one of the following offenses or has more than once been previously convicted of one of the following offenses: (1) driving while intoxicated under AS 28.35.030 or another law or ordinance with substantially similar elements; (2) refusal to submit to a chemical test under this section or another law or ordinance with substantially similar elements. The execution of sentence may not be suspended nor may probation be granted except on condition that the minimum imprisonment provided in this section is served. Imposition of sentence may not be suspended. If the offense involved driving a motor vehicle for which a driver's license is required, the person's driver's license or privilege to obtain a driver's license shall be revoked under AS 28.-15.181. In addition, the court shall order, and a person convicted under this section shall undertake, for a term specified by the court, that program of alcohol education or rehabilitation that the court, after consideration of any information compiled under (h) of this section, finds appropriate. The sentence imposed by the court under this subsection shall run consecutively with any other sentence of imprisonment imposed on the committed person.

* Sec. 16. AS 28.40.050(b) is amended to read:

(b) A person convicted of a misdemeanor for a violation of a provision of this title for which another penalty is not specifically provided is punishable by a fine of not more than $500, or by imprisonment for not more than 90 days, or by both. In addition, the privilege to drive or to obtain a license or the registration of vehicles may be suspended or revoked.

RE: CS for SB 75 (SA)

The changes made in SB 75 are as follows:

Added a new section (Sec. 6) which defines when a person's privilege to obtain a driver's license may be suspended or revoked and who the suspension,revocation applies to.

Sec. 12 of the bill amends AS 28.20.090(a), which deals with security deposits, to included the authority to suspend the privilege to obtain a driver's license.

Sec. 13 of the bill amends AS 28.22.240(a), which deals with the ability to provide proof of motor vehicle liability insurance or a certificate of self-insurance, to included the language of privilege to obtain a driver's license.

Each of these changes were made at the recommendation of the Department of Public Safety.

POSITION PAPER - SB 75

Support with Amendments

January 30, 1985

SB 75, An Act relating to suspension of the privilege to obtain a driver's license.

This bill addresses a problem brought to our attention by the Alaska Court of Appeals decision in the case of Francis vs Municipality of Anchorage in 1982. That decision held that a person who had never applied for a driver's license could not be charged with driving while license suspended if stopped for driving after the Division of Motor Vehicles had issued him a suspension following an accident for which he failed to establish financial responsibility. The court held that since the defendant had never had a license, there was nothing for the Division of Motor Vehicles to suspend. The most the defendant could be charged with was for driving without a valid license.

This problem has been discussed with the Department of Law. Their responses as to how it could be solved are contained in Sections 8, 13, and 15 of SB 84.

Public Safety supports the sponsor's intent but would like the bill amended by adding the wording "or privilege to obtain a license" to AS 28.20.090(a) and AS 28.22.240(a). As written, the bill would cover license actions by the court, and administrative license actions imposed after an arrest for DWI, however, not administrative license actions under the Mandatory Insurance or Financial Responsibility laws following an uninsured accident. The proposed amendments would cover these two instances.

"An Act relating to suspension of the privilege to obtain a driver's license"

SB 75 will solve a problem brought about by the Court of Appeals decision in Francis v. Municipality of Anchorage, 641 P.2d 226 (Alaska App. 1983). The gist of that decision is that a person who has never held a driver's license cannot be convicted of driving on a revoked license, even if the "revocation" was the result of a DWI conviction. Because of a standing order by the presiding judge in Anchorage, such a person can only receive a maximum sentence of a $300 fine and be convicted of driving without a valid license.

This problem is solved by adding the language "privilege to obtain a driver's license."

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

February 1, 1985

SB 76 - "An Act relating to rights of prisoners; and amending Rule 5(b) of the Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure."

The purpose of this legislation is to clarify the rights of Driving While Intoxicated suspects during the period they are to be tested.

Occasionally suspects have been able to delay the implementation of Driving While Intoxicated testing by demanding to speak to their attorney prior to the admission of the test. This statute establishes the priority of the testing without interfering with the rights of the suspects. This will allow for smoother processing of Driving While Intoxicated suspects by law enforcement officers and thus improve their efficiency.

SENATE BILL 76

"An Act relating to rights of prisoners: and amending Rule 5(b) of the Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure."

SB 76 modifies AS 12.25.150(b) and Alaska Criminal Rule 5(b) thus eliminating the difficulties caused police officers who are attempting to give breath alcohol test to DWI suspects. Since it would force a change in a rule promulgated by the Alaska Supreme Court, it must be passed by a two-thirds majority of each house of the Alaska Legislature.

The amendment would allow officers to wait until after they have given breath tests to drunk drivers to permit the suspects to call their attorneys. There is no constitutional impediment to this change, as the constitution already permits the gathering of such evidence without a search warrant, or giving the defendant access to an attorney, as a search incident to an arrest. (Schmerber v. California, 384 U.S. 757, 86 S.Ct. 1826, 16 L.Ed.2d 908(1966); Burnett v. Municipality of Anchorage, 678 P.2d 1364 (Alaska App. 1984), cert. den. 36 Cr.L. 2001)

Even though there is no right to refuse a breath test under Alaska law (Palmer v. State, 604 P.2d 1106 (Alaska 1979, and Jensen v. State, 667 P.2d 188 (Alaska App. 1983)), the Supreme Court of Alaska in Copelin v. State, 659 P.2d 1206 (Alaska 1983), stated that AS 12.25.150(b) and Criminal Rule 5(b) required that a DWI suspect be given access to a telephone, if he request it, before taking a breath test or videotaped sobriety test. This causes delay of 15 to 30 minutes, or longer, in giving the breath test--a test for a substance that is quickly disappearing from the defendant's body.

This change would also be in response to the recommendation of the Presidential Commission on Drunk Driving "That an individual's right to consult his attorney may not be permitted to unreasonably delay administration of the test." A common defense tactic in drunk driving trials is to suggest that the defendant may have been intoxicated at the time of the breath test, but that his breath alcohol concentration at the time of his driving was not over the legal limit. It is therefore imperative that there be as little delay as possible prior to the breath test.

STATE OF ALASKA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
JUNEAU

January 22, 1985

The Honorable Don Bennett
President of the Senate
Alaska State Legislature
Pouch V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Senator Bennett:

Under the authority of art. III, sec. 18, of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a bill relating to the definition of "veteran" for purposes of veterans' preference rights for state employment. This bill conforms the current definition of veteran found in AS 39.25.150(19)(A) to the federal definition in 5 U.S.C. sec. 2108.

In essence, the bill extends the period of time of active duty in the United States armed forces which qualifies an individual as a veteran for employment preference. The Alaska statute currently sets November 7, 1975 as the service cut-off date for qualifying as a veteran, while federal law establishes October 14, 1976 as the date. The bill amends AS 39.25.150(19)(A) to reflect the October 14, 1976 date, thereby conforming the federal and state periods of service for being considered a veteran to receive employment preference rights.

Sincerely,

Bill Sheffield

IN THE SENATE BY THE STATE AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

CS FOR SENATE BILL NO. 84 (State Affairs)

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to motor vehicle laws."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 28.05.091 is amended to read:

Sec. 28.05.091. VEHICLE IMPOUNDMENT [SEIZURE OF UNSAFE OR DEFECTIVELY EQUIPPED VEHICLE]. A motor vehicle which is driven on a highway or vehicular way or area, and which has been determined to be defective in equipment so as to be unsafe for driving, or on which the vehicle identification number has been removed, defaced, or otherwise altered, is an unlawful vehicle and may be impounded by a peace officer or an employee of the department officially designated for that purpose. The owner or person in lawful possession of a vehicle that is driven on a highway or vehicular way or area and that is so defective in equipment as to be unsafe for driving [THE VEHICLE] shall pay the necessary costs of impounding and storing the vehicle. The impounding of a vehicle is in addition to any other penalty. Nothing in this section prevents the driving or moving of a defective vehicle in the manner directed by the peace officer or employee to a place for

(1) the correction of a defect in the equipment;

(2) dismantling or wrecking; or

(3) storage without repair.

* Sec. 2. AS 28.05.141(c) is amended to read:

(c) If at the hearing under (a) of this section it appears that the record of the person sustains suspension, revocation, limitation, denial, or other remedial action, the hearing officer shall so order and the department may suspend, revoke, limit, deny, or take other remedial action against that person's license, registration, or title and, if appropriate, the department shall adjust the person's point total accumulated under AS 28.15.231.

* Sec. 3. AS 28.05.141(d) is amended to read:

(d) A person aggrieved by the decision of the hearing officer may, within 30 days, initiate a proceeding in district court to rescind the department's action by filing a notice of appeal in accordance with the applicable rules of court governing appeals in civil matters. The district court shall base its review on the record of the hearing, without taking additional testimony. The court may reverse the department's determination if the court finds that the hearing officer misinterpreted the law, acted in an arbitrary and capricious manner, or made a determination unsupported by the evidence in the record. The filing of an appeal under this section does not automatically stay the hearing officer's order. The court may grant a stay of the order only upon a motion and hearing, and upon a finding that there is a reasonable probability that the petitioner will prevail on the merits and that the petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the order is not stayed [THE COURT SHALL CONDUCT A HEARING DE NOVO. THE DECISION OF THE DEPARTMENT SUSPENDING, REVOKING, CANCELING, LIMITING, RESTRICTING OR DENYING A LICENSE, REGISTRATION, TITLE, PERMIT OR PRIVILEGE IS STAYED AND DOES NOT TAKE EFFECT DURING THE PENDENCY OF AN APPEAL].

* Sec. 4. AS 28.10.051 is amended to read:

Sec. 28.10.051. DEPARTMENT MAY SUSPEND OR REVOKE REGISTRATION. The department may suspend or revoke the registration of a vehicle, the certificate of registration or registration plates for a vehicle, or a special permit when

(1) the department determines [IS SATISFIED] that the registration or certificate, plate or permit was fraudulently procured or erroneously issued;

(2) the department determines that a registered vehicle is mechanically unsafe to be driven or moved on a highway, vehicular way or area, or other public property in this state and the vehicle has been seized or impounded under AS 28.05.091;

(3) a registered vehicle has been scrapped, dismantled or destroyed beyond repair;

(4) the department determines that a required fee or tax has not been paid and the fee or tax is not paid upon reasonable notice and demand;

(5) a registration plate, permit, or certificate is knowingly displayed upon a vehicle other than the vehicle for which issued;

(6) the department determines that the owner of a vehicle has committed an offense under this chapter involving the registration or the certificate, plate, or permit to be suspended or revoked;

(7) the vehicle has been reported to the department as stolen or unlawfully converted; or

(8) the department is otherwise required to do so under the laws of this state.

* Sec. 5. AS 28.10.105(f) is amended to read:

(f) The registration period of a [EVERY] vehicle registered under this section and AS 28.10.107 may, at the option of the owner, be [HAVE ITS REGISTRATION PERIOD] extended in monthly increments by payment of the proportionate prorated applicable fees to allow annual registration to occur in any month of the owner's choice. The registered owner of a vehicle may exercise this option only once for each vehicle.

* Sec. 6. AS 28.10.411(c) is amended to read:

(c) A resident 65 years of age or older on the date that the tax is due is entitled to an exemption from the tax under AS 28.10.431(b) and the registration fee [TAX] under this section for one motor vehicle subject to registration under AS 28.10.421(b)(1), (2), (5), or (6). An exemption may not be granted except upon written application for the exemption on a form prescribed by the department.

* Sec. 7. AS 28.10.421(d) is amended to read:

(d) The special registration fees under this subsection are imposed annually, unless otherwise specified, for:

(1) an historic vehicle (one time only upon initial registration under AS 28.10.181).....$10;

(2) special request plates.....$20;

plus the fee required for that vehicle under (b)(1) or (2) of this section; the fee required by this paragraph shall be collected only on the first issuance and on the replacement of special request plates;

(3) a vehicle owned by a disabled veteran or other handicapped person, and registered under AS 28.10.181 [OR A RESIDENT 65 YEARS OF AGE OR OLDER WHO COMPLIES WITH AS 28.10.411(c)].....none;

(4) a vehicle owned by the state.....none;

(5) a vehicle owned by an elected state official.....the fee required for that vehicle under (b) of this section;

(6) a vehicle owned by a consular officer, unless waived under AS 28.10.181.....$30;

(7) a vehicle owned by a rancher, farmer, or dairyman and registered under AS 28.10.181.....$30;

(8) a snowmobile or off-highway vehicle.....$ 5;

(9) an amateur mobile radio station vehicle,

(A) with a transceiver capable of less than 5-band operation.....the fee required for that vehicle under (b) or (c) of this section;

(B) in recognition of service to the public: a mobile amateur radio station owned by an amateur with general class or higher license, provided the station must be satisfactorily proved capable of operating on at least five bands between 160 through 10 meters, must have an antenna, and must have a power supply and wiring as a permanent part of the vehicle; the transmitting unit may be removed from the car for service or dry storage.....none for a mobile amateur radio station vehicle included in (b)(1) or (2) of this section;

(10) dealer registration plates,

(A) the initial set of plates.....$40;

(B) each subsequent set of plates.....$20;

(11) a vehicle owned by a municipality or charitable organization meeting the requirements of AS 28.10.181(c).....$ 5;

(12) an occasional use vehicle under AS 28.10.181(k)....$15;

(13) a vehicle owned by a former prisoner of war.....none.

* Sec. 8. AS 28.15.051(d) is amended to read:

(d) The department may issue a special driver's permit to a person who is at least 14 years of age with the consent of the person's parents, [OR] guardians, or spouse who is 18 years of age or older, for the purpose of driving a motor-driven cycle. This permit may be issued upon application and successful completion of all prescribed tests and fees, and is valid for the same period of time as a driver's license. The permit is not valid in a municipality which by ordinance prohibits the driving of a motor-driven cycle by a person under the age of 16 years; a borough may adopt the ordinance on a nonareawide basis only, unless the power to adopt it on an areawide basis is acquired under AS 29.33.250 - 29.33.290.

* Sec. 9. AS 28.15.071(a) is amended to read:

(a) The application of a person under the age of 18 years for an instruction permit or driver's license must be signed by the father, mother, [OR] guardian, or spouse who is 18 years of age or older, or if there is no parent, [OR] guardian, or spouse, then by another responsible adult who is willing to assume the obligation imposed under this section upon a person signing the application. The application must be signed and verified before a person authorized to administer oaths, or be signed in the presence of an authorized representative of the department.

* Sec. 10. AS 28.15.071(c) is amended to read:

(c) If a minor deposits, or there is deposited on behalf of the minor, proof of financial responsibility for the minor's driving of a motor vehicle, in the form and amount required in AS 28.20, then the department may accept the application of the minor signed as required under (a) of this section, and, while proof of financial responsibility is maintained, the parent, guardian, spouse, or other responsible adult is not subject to the liability imposed under (b) of this section.

* Sec. 11. AS 28.15.171(a) is amended to read:

(a) The privilege of driving a motor vehicle on a highway or vehicular way or area of this state given to a person licensed in another jurisdiction is subject to suspension, [OR] revocation, or limitation by the department or a court in the same manner and for the same reasons as a driver's license issued under this chapter.

* Sec. 12. AS 28.15.231 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(f) The notice required under (a) of this section may be given by first class mail.

* Sec. 13. AS 28.35.032(a) is amended to read:

(a) If a person under arrest refuses the request of a law enforcement officer to submit to a chemical test under AS 28.35.031(a), after being advised by the officer that the refusal will, if that person was arrested for [WHILE] operating or driving a motor vehicle for which a driver's license is required, result in the denial or revocation of the license or nonresident privilege to drive, that the refusal may be used against the person in a civil or criminal action or proceeding arising out of an act alleged to have been committed by the person while operating or driving a motor vehicle or operating an aircraft or a watercraft while intoxicated, and that the refusal is a misdemeanor, a chemical test shall not be given, except as provided by AS 28.35.035.

BILL SHEFFIELD

SB 84

STATE OF ALASKA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
JUNEAU

The Honorable Don Bennett
President of the Senate
Alaska State Legislature
Pouch V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Senator Bennett:

Under the authority of art. III, sec. 18, of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a bill which makes many badly needed amendments to the motor vehicle laws contained in AS 28. These amendments address a variety of issues. The bill alters existing statutes to more accurately reflect the current practices of the division of motor vehicles (DMV) in the Department of Public Safety, to allow DMV to adopt more efficient procedures, and to address some inadvertent omissions in current law.

Section 1 of the bill amends AS 28.05.091 to make it clear that a peace officer may impound a motor vehicle if the vehicle's identification number has been altered or removed. Law enforcement officers often must impound such vehicles in order to investigate whether the vehicle has been stolen, but the language of the current impoundment statute does not clearly authorize a seizure of this sort. Under the proposed language, the owner of an impounded vehicle would not be required to pay any costs associated with impoundment or storage of the vehicle. The owner of an impounded vehicle would be entitled to request a hearing to contest the impoundment. See existing AS 28.05.131.

Section 2 of the bill amends a general provision regarding DMV administrative hearings to make it clear that a hearing officer may take appropriate action against a person's vehicle title or registration as well as against the person's driver's license. This amendment would bring the language of AS 28.05.141(c) into conformity with AS 28.05.131(a), with current administrative practices, and with common sense interpretation.

Section 3 of the bill amends AS 28.05.141(d), which deals with a motorist's right to appeal from an administrative hearing officer's decision. The new language would allow a motorist to appeal a hearing officer's decision to the district court, and specifies the scope of appellate review. Existing law allows a hearing de novo -- a complete new hearing on the same issues which were decided at the administrative hearing. In many cases, this makes the entire administrative hearing process superfluous. A motorist dissatisfied with a hearing officer's decision will commonly request a de novo hearing in district court, and DMV personnel and their witnesses are forced to present the entire case over again. This is not an efficient use of either administrative or judicial resources. The new language is modelled upon the provisions adopted by the legislature in 1983 regarding the appeal rights granted to a person whose driver's license has been administratively revoked because he drove while intoxicated or refused to take a breath test. See AS 28.15.166(m) and (n).

The amendment contained in sec. 4 of the bill clarifies AS 28.10.051(1), which authorizes DMV to suspend or revoke a motor vehicle certificate of registration if it was fraudulently obtained. Unless an emergency requires immediate action, a motorist has the right to request a hearing under AS 28.05.131 before DMV suspends or revokes a registration certificate.

For the convenience of vehicle owners, current AS 28.10.105(f) allows an owner to register a vehicle for a portion of a year so that annual registration fees for all vehicles owned by that person will be due at the same time under the state's staggered registration system. This privilege has been abused by some owners who have repeatedly registered and paid fees on a vehicle for only part of a year, rather than for the entire year. AS 28.10.105 was never intended to allow a vehicle to be routinely registered for a period of less than a year. The amendment to the statute contained in sec. 5 of the bill states that an owner may exercise this partial-year payment option only once per motor vehicle.

The changes made in secs. 6 and 7 of the bill correct an ambiguity in current law. AS 28.10.411 establishes a state motor vehicle registration fee. AS 28.10.431 authorizes municipalities to levy a motor vehicle registration tax, which may be collected by DMV on behalf of the municipality at the same time that state registration fees are collected. Present AS 28.10.411(c) exempts a resident 65 years of age or older from payment of "tax under this section" for one motor vehicle. This language does not make sense, as AS 28.10.411 levies a fee. A tax is authorized under AS 28.10.431. The new language makes it clear that a resident aged 65 years or older on the date the tax is due is exempt from payment of both the registration fee and the tax. This is in accord with DMV's present interpretation of the existing language. The amendment specifies that the exemption applies to one personal vehicle, but not to commercial vehicles. This would fulfill the original intent of the provision, which was to excuse senior citizens from paying the costs of registering one personal vehicle, rather than to benefit commercial businesses.

Sections 8, 13, and 15 of this bill provide that a person's "ability to apply for a license" may be suspended or revoked in the same manner and under the same conditions as a person's driver's license may be suspended or revoked under existing law. In the case of Francis v. Municipality of Anchorage, 641 P.2d 226 (Alaska App. 1982), the Alaska Court of Appeals held that a person who had never applied for a driver's license could not be charged with the misdemeanor crime of driving while license suspended (DWLS) for driving after DMV had suspended his "privilege to drive" following an accident for which he failed to establish financial responsibility. The court held that since the defendant had never had a license, there was nothing for DMV to suspend, and the most that the defendant could be charged with was driving without a valid license.

Driving without a valid license in violation of AS 28.15.011 carries a maximum penalty of 90 days in jail, a $500 fine, or both. See AS 28.35.230(a) and (b). In contrast, DWLS carries a maximum penalty of one year in jail, a $5,000 fine, or both. See AS 28.15.291(d). Additionally, a conviction for driving without a valid license does not require the mandatory minimum sentences which must be imposed following a conviction for DWLS. See AS 28.15.291(a) and (c).

In a very real sense, persons such as defendant Francis are more blatant violators of the motor vehicle laws than the "average" DWLS offender. Not only did Francis drive after receiving a suspension notice from DMV, he drove (and was involved in an accident) without ever obtaining a license in the first place. Such blatant disregard of the licensing laws should not be rewarded with lesser criminal penalties. The amendments included in this bill will make offenders like Francis subject to the general DWL laws and their more serious penalties.

Under current law, a person under age 18 may not apply for a driving instruction permit or a motorcycle driver's permit unless a parent or guardian signs the application and agrees to assume responsibility for damage caused by the negligence or willful misconduct of the minor. In the case of a minor who is married, however, a parent may be unavailable or unwilling to assume this responsibility. The language contained in secs. 9, 10, and 11 of this bill allows a spouse 18 years of age or older to sign the necessary application forms and assume this responsibility on behalf of the minor.

AS 28.15.171 presently provides that DMV may suspend or revoke a nonresident's privilege to drive in this state in the same manner and for the same reasons that an Alaska driver's license may be suspended or revoked. Section 12 of the bill amends AS 28.15.171 to clarify that a court also has this authority, and allows the court or DMV to place a limitation on the non-resident's privilege to drive.

Section 14 of the bill specifically authorizes DMV to use first class mail to notify a driver that he is half-way to losing his license because of the accumulation of points resulting from traffic law violations. Existing AS 28.05.121 is a general provision which requires notice to be made by personal delivery, or by registered or certified mail, "unless a different method of giving notice is otherwise expressly provided." "Half-way" notices are currently being sent by first class mail in accordance with 13 AAC 08.220(c). The proposed amendment is intended to meet the requirements of AS 28.05.121 and to bring the statutory language in line with existing regulations and procedures.

The amendment contained in sec. 16 of the bill is a minor one which is intended only to clarify AS 28.35.032(a), which established the misdemeanor crime of refusal to take a breath test. The new language provides that a person's license may be revoked if he was "arrested for operating or driving a motor vehicle for which a driver's license is required." The current law contains the language "arrested while operating ...." Obviously, a DWI offender would never be arrested while he was driving. The arrest always occurs after the offender's vehicle has been stopped.

Adoption of these amendments to AS 28 will clarify some imprecise language contained in the current law, and will enable DMV to more efficiently administer the state's motor vehicle laws. I therefore urge your prompt action on this bill.

Sincerely,

Bill Sheffield

SENATE BILL NO.

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to state election campaigns."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 15.13.110(a) is amended to read:

(a) Each candidate and group shall make a full report in accordance with AS 15.13.040 during the period ending three days before the due date of the report and beginning on the last day covered by the most recent previous report, or, if a first report, all contributions received and expenditures made before three days before the due date of the report. The report shall be filed at the following times:

(1) 30 days before the election; however, this report is not required if the deadline for filing a nominating petition or declaration of candidacy is within 30 days of the election;

(2) one week before the election;

(3) 10 [TEN] days after the election; and

(4) 31 days after the end [DECEMBER 31] of each year for expenditures and contributions received which were not reported that year.

* Sec. 2. AS 15.13.110(b) is amended to read:

(b) Each contribution received that [OR EXPENDITURE WHICH] exceeds $250 and that [WHICH] is received [MADE] within 10 days [ONE WEEK] of the election shall be reported to the commission by date, amount, and contributor [OR RECIPIENT] within 24 hours of receipt [OR EXPENDITURE] by the candidate or campaign officer [TREASURER].

* Sec. 3. AS 15.13.120(a) is amended to read:

DRAFT

(a) A person who violates a provision of this chapter is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, is punishable by imprisonment for not more than one year or by a fine of not more than $5,000. A violation includes but is not limited to any of the following acts or omissions:

(1) failing to make a statement or report required to be made under this chapter, or failing to make a statement or report at the time the statement or report is required to be made under this chapter;

(2) making a campaign contribution or expenditure which exceeds the limitations of AS 15.13.070 [AS 15.13.070(f)];

(3) making a false statement or report under this chapter or failing to report in whole or in part a contribution or expenditure required to be reported under this chapter;

(4) giving or furnishing money to another person or group for the purpose of making a contribution or expenditure anonymously, in a fictitious name, or in the name of another, or contributing in violation of AS 15.13.070(d);

(5) making a communication to support or defeat a candidate without identification of sponsorship, in violation of AS 15.13.090;

(6) knowingly accepting a contribution in violation of AS 15.13.070;

(7) knowingly expending funds from a contribution made unlawful by this chapter.

* Sec. 4. AS 15.13.125 is repealed and reenacted to read:

Sec. 15.13.125. CIVIL PENALTY FOR LATE FILINGS OF REQUIRED REPORTS. (a) A candidate or group that fails to file a properly completed report within a time stated in AS 15.13.110 is subject to a civil penalty assessed under this section for each day the delinquency continues as determined by the commission. A candidate or group against whom a civil penalty is assessed by a decision of the commission under this section may appeal the decision to the superior court. An affidavit stating facts in mitigation may be submitted to the commission by a candidate or group against whom a civil penalty is assessed under this section. The imposition of a penalty does not excuse the candidate or group from filing a report required by this chapter.

(b) A candidate or group that fails to file a properly completed report 30 days before the election as required under AS 15.13.110(a)-(1) or 10 days after the election as required under AS 15.13.110(a)(3) is subject to cumulative civil penalties of $50 for each of the first two days that the report is delinquent. In addition to any other penalty required under this subsection, a candidate or group that fails to file a properly completed report within the first two days after the report is delinquent accumulates a daily penalty of one percent of the total monetary contributions received by the candidate or group during the calendar year through the period ending three days before the due date of the report.

(c) A candidate or group that fails to file a properly completed report one week before the election as required under AS 15.13.110(a)-(2) shall be assessed a penalty of a percentage of the total monetary contributions received by the candidate or group during the calendar year through the period ending three days before the due date of the report

(1) on the first day the report is delinquent, one percent of the total monetary contributions received;

(2) on the second day the report is delinquent, three percent of the monetary contributions received;

DRAFT

(3) on the third day that the report is delinquent, six percent of the total monetary contributions received;

(4) on the fourth and each succeeding day that the report is delinquent, an additional three percent of the total monetary contributions received for each day the report is delinquent in addition to the amount stated in (c)(3) of this section.

(d) A candidate or group that fails to file a properly completed report 31 days after the end of each year as required under AS 15.13.-110(a)(4) is subject to cumulative civil penalties of $50 for each day that the report is delinquent.

(e) A candidate or group that fails to file a properly completed report for a contribution that exceeds $250 and that was received 10 days before the election as required under AS 15.13.110(b) is subject to a civil penalty of

(1) 10 percent of the amount of the unreported contribution on the first day that the report is delinquent;

(2) 30 percent of the amount of the unreported contribution on the second day that the report is delinquent;

(3) 60 percent of the amount of the unreported contribution on the third day that the report is delinquent; and

(4) 100 percent of the amount of the unreported contribution on the fourth day that the report is delinquent.

(f) In addition to the civil penalties established in (b) - (e) of this section, a candidate or campaign treasurer filing a report required under AS 15.13.110 who fails to report a contribution or expenditure or who reports a portion but not the entire amount of the contribution or expenditure is liable to the state for a civil penalty in an amount equal to three times the amount or the value of the contribution or expenditure that was omitted from the report.

The report shall be filed under AS 15.13.110 and shall be certified correct by the chairman or campaign treasurer of the group

[(1) THE NAME AND ADDRESS OF EACH OFFICER AND DIRECTOR;

(2) THE AGGREGATE AMOUNT OF ALL CONTRIBUTIONS MADE TO IT; AND, FOR ALL CONTRIBUTIONS IN EXCESS OF $100 IN THE AGGREGATE A YEAR,

THE NAME, ADDRESS, PRINCIPAL OCCUPATION, AND EMPLOYER OF THE CONTRIBUTOR, AND THE DATE AND AMOUNT CONTRIBUTED BY EACH CONTRIBUTOR; AND

(3) THE DATE AND AMOUNT OF ALL CONTRIBUTIONS MADE BY IT AND ALL EXPENDITURES MADE, INCURRED OR AUTHORIZED BY IT].

* Sec. 3. AS 15.13.040(c) is repealed and reenacted to read:

(c) Each report filed under (a) and (b) of this section and under AS 15.13.110 shall list the name, the business or residence address, and the telephone number of the campaign treasurer and shall contain the following information:

(1) the total amount of all contributions received, including the funds contributed by the candidate;

(2) the total amount of all expenditures made during the reporting period;

(3) the total amount of all contributions of $250 or less received;

(4) the date, the amount, the full name and complete address of the payee, and the purpose of each expenditure;

(5) the full name and complete address, the principal occupation, and the employer of each person from whom contributions in the aggregate amount of more than $250 were received during the calendar year, and the date and the amount of the contributions;

(6) the total amount of all contributions returned to contributors;

(7) the full name and complete address of each contributor whose contribution of more than $250 was returned and the amount of the contribution returned;

(8) the full name and complete address of each person who assisted a candidate or group to obtain credit or a loan of money, if the credit or the loan of money was involved, directly or indirectly, in an election, [,] the date and the total amount of the credit or loan;

(9) the full name and complete address of each person who guaranteed or agreed to assume a financial obligation of benefit to a candidate or group, if the guaranty or assumption of the financial obligation was involved, directly or indirectly, in an election, and the date and the amount of the guaranty or the assumption of the financial obligation;

(10) the total amount of unexpended contributions received and the outstanding indebtedness from expenditures of the candidate or group.

* Sec. 4. AS 15.13.040(d) is amended to read:

(d) Every individual or [,] person and every [OR] group that is not required to register under AS 15.13.050 [MAKING A CONTRIBUTION OR EXPENDITURE] shall make a sworn [FULL] report, upon a form prescribed by the commission, of [THE FOLLOWING CONTRIBUTIONS OR EXPENDITURES:]

(1) any contribution of cash, goods or services valued at more than $250 [$100] a year to any group or candidate; or

(2) any independent expenditure [WHATSOEVER] for advertising in newspapers, on radio or on television [;] or [,] for the publication, distribution or circulation of brochures, flyers, or other campaign material for or against any candidate, [OR] ballot proposition or question.

* Sec. 5. AS 15.13.040(f) is repealed and reenacted to read:

(f) Except as provided in AS 15.13.110(b), a candidate or a group is required to report an expenditure or a contribution on the first report occurring after the expenditure is made or the contribution is received.

* Sec. 6. AS 15.13.040 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(g) A report required to be filed under this chapter must contain the following affidavit:

"I do solemnly swear that, to the best of my knowledge, the foregoing report is in all respects true and correct and fully shows all information required to be reported by me under AS 15.13."

(h) A report filed under this chapter is a public record under AS 09.25.110 - 09.25.120 and shall be preserved for four years after the election for which it was filed.

(i) A report or statement required to be filed under this chapter other than a report required under AS 15.13.110(b) is considered filed when deposited in the United States mail and addressed to the commission with the proper postage affixed. While a postmark is prima facie evidence of the time of filing, an individual may offer evidence as to the actual time of placing the report or statement in the United States mail.

* Sec. 7. AS 15.13.045 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(e) A person who believes a violation of this chapter has occurred may file a complaint with the commission. If the commission determines there is substantial reason to believe that a violation has occurred, it shall expeditiously make an investigation, which may also include an investigation of reports and statements filed by the complainant, of the matter complained of. When, in the judgment of the commission, after affording due notice and an opportunity for a hearing, a person has engaged or is about to engage in an act or practice that constitutes or would constitute a violation of this chapter or a regulation adopted or order issued under it, it shall promptly report the information to the attorney general for appropriate action. The commission shall report its determination and recommendation to the person who filed the complaint with the commission within 60 days of receiving the complaint unless circumstances require additional time to make an adequate investigation.

* Sec. 8. AS 15.13.060(a) is amended to read:

Sec. 15.13.060. CAMPAIGN OFFICERS [TREASURERS]. (a) Each candidate may and each group shall appoint a campaign chairman. Each candidate and group shall appoint a campaign treasurer who is responsible for receiving, holding, and disbursing all contributions and expenditures, and for filing all reports and statements required by law. Each candidate and each group may appoint deputy campaign treasurers at any time. A candidate may be a campaign treasurer.

* Sec. 9. AS 15.13.060(b) is amended to read:

(b) Each group shall file the name, [AND] address, and telephone number of its campaign chairman, its campaign treasurer, and any deputy campaign treasurers with the commission at the time it registers with the commission under AS 15.13.050. The group shall report changes or additions with the commission as they occur. The address of the campaign treasurer is the mailing address of the group unless the group files a different mailing address with the commission.

* Sec. 10. AS 15.13.060(c) is repealed and reenacted to read:

(c) An individual may not act as the campaign chairman, campaign treasurer, or deputy campaign treasurer for a candidate until the name, address, and telephone number of the individual has been filed with the commission. The address of the campaign treasurer, if a campaign treasurer is appointed, is the address of the candidate unless the candidate files a different mailing address with the commission.

* Sec. 11. AS 15.13.060(d) is amended to read:

(d) In the case of the death, resignation or removal of a campaign officer required to be appointed under this section [TREASURER], the candidate or group shall appoint a successor as soon as practicable and file the [HIS] name, [AND] address, and telephone number of the successor with the commission within 48 hours of the appointment. [THE CANDIDATE IS DISQUALIFIED WHEN HE HAS BEEN FOUND TO HAVE BEEN IN WILFUL VIOLATION OF THIS SUBSECTION.]

* Sec. 12. AS 15.13.060(e) is repealed and reenacted to read:

(e) A candidate may receive contributions and make expenditures either personally or by a campaign chairman, a campaign treasurer, or a deputy campaign treasurer. A group may receive contributions and make expenditures only by the campaign chairman, campaign treasurer, or deputy campaign treasurer of the group.

* Sec. 13. AS 15.13.060(f) is amended to read:

(f) The candidate is responsible for the performance of the campaign officers [HIS CAMPAIGN TREASURER,] and any default or violation by an officer [THE TREASURER] also shall be considered a default or violation by the candidate if the candidate [HE] knew or had reason to know of the default or violation.

* Sec. 14. AS 15.13.070(a) is amended to read:

(a) A [NO] person or group, including but not limited to all political committees of a candidate, businesses, corporations, and labor unions, may not contribute to or expend more than $2000 [$1,000] a year on behalf of or in opposition to the competing candidates for each elective office. Political parties and their subdivisions are not subject to the limitation prescribed in this subsection, but they are subject to the reporting requirements prescribed by AS 15.13.040(b) and 15.13.110. This chapter does not prohibit [NOTHING IN THIS CHAPTER PROHIBITS]

(1) a candidate from contributing more than $ of personal funds to the candidate's own candidacy [$1,000 OF HIS OWN MONEY TO HIS OWN CAMPAIGN]; or

(2) individuals or groups, including but not limited to all political committees, businesses, corporations, and labor unions, from contributing to or expending on behalf of or in opposition to a ballot proposition or question more than $____ [$1,000] a year; however, these contributions and expenditures shall be reported under [IN ACCORDANCE WITH] AS 15.13.040 and 15.13.110.

* Sec. 15. AS 15.13.110(a) is amended to read:

(a) Each candidate and group shall make a full report in accordance with AS 15.13.040 during the period ending three days before the due date of the report and beginning on the last day covered by the most recent previous report, or, if a first report, all contributions received and expenditures made before three days before the due date of the report. The report shall be filed at the following times:

(1) 30 days before the election; however, this report is not required if the deadline for filing a nominating petition or declaration of candidacy is within 30 days of the election;

(2) one week before the election;

(3) 10 [TEN] days after the election; and

(4) 31 days after the end [DECEMBER 31] of each year for expenditures and contributions received which were not reported that year.

* Sec. 16. AS 15.13.110(b) is amended to read:

(b) Each contribution received that [OR EXPENDITURE WHICH] exceeds $250 and that [WHICH] is received [MADE] within 10 days [ONE WEEK] of the election shall be reported to the commission by date, amount, and contributor [OR RECIPIENT] within 24 hours of receipt [OR EXPENDITURE] by the candidate or campaign officer [TREASURER].

* Sec. 17. AS 15.13.110(c) is amended to read:

(c) Each candidate and group shall file the reports required by this chapter [THE REPORTS OF CANDIDATES SHALL BE FILED] with the commission's central office and each report is [. ALL REPORTS REQUIRED BY THIS CHAPTER SHALL BE KEPT] open to public inspection. After [WITHIN 30 DAYS AFTER] each election, the commission shall, upon request, prepare a summary of each report which shall be made available to the public at cost [UPON REQUEST]. Each summary shall use uniform categories of reporting.

* Sec. 18. AS 15.13.130 is amended by adding a new paragraph to read:

(8) "independent expenditure" means the disbursement of funds made to support or oppose the election of a candidate or the passage or defeat of a ballot proposition or question that is not made with the cooperation, consent, or at the request of a candidate, the campaign committee or controlled group of a candidate, or a group that is supporting or opposing the candidate or ballot proposition or question for which the funds are disbursed.

* Sec. 19. AS 15.13.070(e) - (g), and 15.13.120(d) are repealed.

4) The following language was adopted by the committee:

" any independent expenditure in the amount of $ 1,000 or more within 30 days of an election shall be reported to the commission within 72 hours of the expenditure."

The following language appears in the latest draft of CSSB 87:

Beginning with the last word on page 7, line 29 ; through page 8, line 4:

" Each independent expenditure in the amount of $1,000 or more that is made within 30 days of an election shall be reported to the commission by date, amount, and purpose within 72 hours of the expenditure and shall identify the name of the person or group that made the expenditure."

Reporting independent expenditures by date, amount and purpose conforms to the present law pertaining to the reporting of campaign contributions and expenditures.

C. Independent Expenditures

Note that this appendix may be reproduced and distributed by the candidate or his/her committee to anyone who requests FEC guidelines on independent expenditures.

1. Definition

What Is an Independent Expenditure?

An independent expenditure is an expenditure for communications expressly advocating the election or defeat of a clearly identified candidate[1] which is NOT made with the cooperation or consent of, or in consultation with, or at the request or suggestion of, any candidate or any of his/her agents[2] or authorized committees. 100.16. Independent expenditures may be made without limit since they do not count against the contribution limits established by the Federal Election Campaign Act. (However, contributions made to an independent expenditure committee are subject to monetary limits, as explained below.)

What Is NOT an Independent Expenditure?

Contact with Candidate or Authorized Committees

Any expenditure made in cooperation, consultation, or in concert with the candidate or as a result of his/her request or suggestion is considered an in-kind contribution (not an independent expenditure) by the person making the expenditure and counts against his/her contribution limit. 100.16 and 109.1 (b)(4).

Note that when an individual merely requests and receives from a candidate FEC guidelines on independent expenditures (such as this section of the Guide), he/she is not considered to have coordinated, cooperated or consulted with the candidate. 109.1(b)(4)(ii).

Candidate-Prepared Materials

Any expenditure to finance the dissemination or re-publication of a broadcast or other campaign materials prepared by a candidate (or his/her agent or authorized committee) is considered an in-kind contribution by the person making the contribution. 109.1(d).

Expenditure by Committee Employee

An expenditure made on behalf of a candidate by a current or former officer or employee of that candidate's committee or by a person who has received compensation or reimbursement from the campaign is presumed not to be independent. 109.1(b)(4)(i)(B).

Examples

An individual not previously involved in the campaign of candidate Smith purchases a newspaper advertisement supporting Smith without ever contacting the candidate or any of his campaign staff. The purchase is considered an independent expenditure. If, however, before purchasing the ad, the individual asks candidate Smith or his campaign staff how he may help the campaign or when Smith wants a newspaper ad to appear, the individual makes an in-kind contribution. Or, if the individual buys a campaign advertisement using text actually prepared by Smith's campaign staff, the individual makes an in-kind contribution to the candidate. (An in-kind contribution, when combined with all other contributions from the same individual, is limited to $1,000 per election.)

2. Public Notice Required

Any independent expenditure must include a clear and conspicuous public notice in the printed material or during the broadcast. The notice must:

- State that the communication is not authorized by the candidate or his/her authorized committee; and
- Identify the name of the person or committee that financed the expenditure. 109.3; 2 U.S.C. §441d(a).

3. Reporting Requirements

Political Committee

A reporting political committee must itemize each independent expenditure it makes exceeding $200 (Schedule E of the appropriate reporting form) at the end of any reporting period in which the expenditure is made. In addition, the total of all independent expenditures of $200 or less must be reported but not itemized. 104.3(b)(3)(vii).

Any Other Person

Any other person (individual, partnership or group of individuals) must file a report with the FEC (on FEC Form 5) at the end of the first reporting period in which independent expenditures aggregate more than $250 and in any succeeding period during the same year in which additional independent expenditures of any amount are made. 109.2(a).

Last-Minute Independent Expenditures

An independent expenditure of $1,000 or more made between 2 and 20 days before an election must be reported within 24 hours after it is made to the FEC, the Secretary of the Senate or the Clerk of the House, as appropriate. 104.5(g). A political committee must disclose a last-minute independent expenditure a second time on a Schedule E filed with its next scheduled report. The committee may, if it wishes, note on Schedule E that the expenditure was previously reported.

4. Contents of Report

Itemized reports on independent expenditures must include the information described below:

Certification

The report must include a certification, under penalty of perjury, that the expenditure meets the above standard of independence. 104.3(b)(3)(vii)(B) and 109.2(a)(1).

Information About Expenditure

The report must include the date, amount and purpose of the expenditure (i.e., a brief description of why the disbursement was made) and must indicate whether the expenditure is in support of or in opposition to the candidate(s). 104.3(b)(3)(vii) and 109.2(a). When an

[1] A "clearly identified candidate" is one whose name, photograph or drawing appears or whose identity is apparent by unambiguous reference. 100.17.

[2] "Agent" means any person who has actual oral or written authority, either express or implied, to make or to authorize the making of expenditures on behalf of a candidate, or means any person who has been placed in a position within the campaign organization where it would reasonably appear that in the ordinary course of campaign-related activities he or she may authorize expenditures. 109.1 (b)(5).

independent expenditure is made on behalf of more than one clearly identified candidate, the expenditure must be allocated among the candidates in proportion to the benefit they are expected to receive. 106.1(a).

Information About Candidate

The report must include the name and address of the candidate(s) and the office sought. 104.3(b)(3)(vii) and 109.2(a)(1).

Information About Person Making Expenditure

When a person other than a political committee makes the expenditure, the report must include the person's name, address, occupation and employer, if any. 109.2(a)(1).

Information About Payee

The report must include the name and address of the person to whom the expenditure was made. 104.3(b)(3)(vii) and 109.2(a)(1).

Information About Other Contributors

The report must include the name, mailing address, occupation and name of employer of each person who contributes more than $200 to the person who makes the expenditure. 104.3(a)(4)(i) and 109.2(a)(1).

5. Contributions to Persons Making Independent Expenditures

All the limitations and prohibitions on contributions to candidates also apply to contributions made to persons making independent expenditures. In addition, when a person contributes to a political committee that makes independent expenditures exclusively in support of, or in opposition to, a single candidate, that contribution is subject to the per candidate, per election, limit. For example, Citizen Smith contributes $500 to an independent committee established to make independent expenditures exclusively on behalf of Candidate Jones. Smith may then contribute only $500 more to Candidate Jones since Smith's total contributions benefiting Jones would then reach the $1,000 per candidate, per election, limit. 110.1(h).

D. Earmarked Contributions

1. Definition

An earmarked contribution is one which the contributor directs (either orally or in writing) to a candidate (or his/her authorized committee) through an intermediary or conduit. The intermediary may be a nonregistered entity, such as an individual or a group, or a registered political committee with regular reporting obligations. 110.6(b).

2. Earmarking and Contribution Limits

An earmarked contribution is considered to have been made by the original contributor, thus counting against his/her contribution limit for that candidate. The contribution limitation of the conduit or intermediary is not affected unless the conduit exercises direction or control over the choice of the intended recipient of the contribution. In that case, the contribution is considered to have been made by both the original contributor and the intermediary or conduit and counts against both of their contribution limits. 110.6(d).

3. Forwarding Earmarked Contributions

The intermediary or conduit must forward an earmarked contribution to the recipient committee within 10 days. The report to the recipient (described below) must be forwarded along with the contribution. 102.8(a), (c) and 110.6(c)(2).

4. Reporting Earmarked Contributions

The reporting of earmarked contributions is required[1] by all intermediaries, including registered political committees and nonregistered entities (such as individuals, partnerships and groups of people), and by the recipients. 110.6(c).

Reports by Political Committee Serving as Intermediary

A political committee which is an intermediary or conduit of an earmarked contribution must disclose the earmarked contribution, regardless of amount, on two separate reports: the next regularly scheduled report, and a special report to the recipient. 110.6(c).

Next Regular Report

The conduit's next regularly scheduled report must indicate whether the earmarked contribution was:

- Passed through the conduit's account, in which case each contribution must be reported on the regular reporting schedules of itemized receipts and disbursements (Schedules A and B of the appropriate reporting form); or
- Passed on in the form of the original contributor's check, in which case each earmarked contribution must be reported on a separate Schedule A, filed as a memo entry.* 110.6(c)(1)(i) and (ii).

Report to Recipient

A report to the intended recipient must also be made at the time the conduit or intermediary passes the contribution on to the recipient. 110.6(c)(2).

Contents of Reports on Earmarked Contributions

The above reports by the intermediary or conduit must contain all of the following information:

- The name and mailing address of the original contributor and, if the contribution is from an individual and exceeds $200 per year when combined with other contributions from the same donor, the contributor's occupation and the name of his/her employer;
- The amount of the earmarked contribution;
- The date the contribution was received by the conduit;

* See Definitions in Appendix A.

[1] However, the reporting rules for earmarked contributions do not apply when a person merely physically transfers to a candidate checks (or other written instruments) which, in the aggregate, do not exceed $1,000 in a calendar year. 110.6(c)(5). Also, the rules do not apply to authorized agents of a committee.

ONE CANDIDATE COMMITTEES

The Federal Election Campaign Act (the Act) requires political committees which support candidates for Federal office to register and disclose their campaign receipts and disbursements and to abide by certain contribution limits and prohibitions. To help candidates and committees comply with the Act, the Federal Election Commission (FEC) has prepared this Guide to focus exclusively on those requirements affecting candidates for the U.S. House and Senate, their principal campaign committees and any other authorized committees. The information presented here is based on the Act and FEC Regulations.[1]

Before reading this Guide, candidates and committee staff should note the following suggestions:

- Review this Guide carefully. Note the definitions in Appendix A which give special meaning to key words. Terms included in this Appendix are italicized and marked with an asterisk the first time they appear in the text.
- Keep good records of receipts and disbursements.
- If a mistake is discovered, correct it promptly and straightforwardly.
- When seeking more information, consult the Federal Election Campaign Act (2 U.S.C. §§431-455) and the FEC Regulations (11 CFR Parts 100-115). Note in particular the definitions (and their exceptions) given at the beginning of most sections of the Regulations. An index accompanying the Regulations helps a reader quickly locate those provisions pertinent to his/her particular concern.
- If in doubt as to what the law means or how it applies to a specific situation, seek help from the FEC (see Appendix E). Call toll free 800/424-9530 or, in Washington, 523-4068. Phone calls from Alaska or Hawaii may be made collect to the Commission (202/523-4068).

[1] Citations appearing in this Guide refer to sections of the FEC Regulations and, where prefaced by 2 U.S.C., to the Act. Selected advisory opinions (AOs) and directives issued by the Commission are cited as well.

Contributions and Expenditures

Under the Federal Election Campaign Act (the Act), the terms "contributions" and "expenditures" are essential to understanding the basic requirements of the Act:

- The amount of "contributions" received and the amount of "expenditures" made, for example, determine whether or not an individual is a *candidate and subject, therefore, to the requirements of the Act.
- Moreover, contributions received and expenditures made must be reported by the candidate's authorized committee(s).
- Finally, candidate committees may NOT accept contributions that exceed the dollar limitations or violate the prohibitions of the Act.

To comply with the Act, therefore, one needs to know just exactly what is a "contribution" and what is an "expenditure." This section explains these terms, providing examples where helpful.

1. Contributions vs. Expenditures

The Act makes a basic distinction between contributions and expenditures. A contribution is one way individuals and groups provide support to a candidate for Federal office. A contribution usually involves the giving of money, goods or services to a campaign or the giving of money to *political committees which, in turn, make contributions to the candidates of their choice.

An expenditure is not the same as a contribution. It usually represents the utilization of contributions received by a candidate or a political committee. Thus, candidates and their authorized committees conduct campaigns by expending the resources which have been contributed to them.

Contributions to candidates and their campaign committees are subject to certain limits and prohibitions under the Act. By contrast, expenditures by House and Senate candidates and their committees are not limited.[1] Full reporting is required, however, for both contributions and expenditures.[2]

2. Contributions vs. Other Receipts

Campaign Contributions

A campaign contribution is anything of value given to an *authorized committee of a candidate (or the committee's *authorized agents) to influence the candidate's nomination or election to Federal office. 100.7(a)(1). Note that a candidate is considered an authorized agent of the committee. 101.2 and 102.7(d). Listed below are different types of contributions, all of which are subject to the Act's prohibitions and dollar limitations (except contributions from the candidate) and are reportable by the candidate's authorized committee.[3] Committees may receive other goods, services or monies that are not considered contributions and, therefore, are not subject to the Act's dollar limitations. These receipts, nevertheless, are reportable; they are described below under "Other Reportable Receipts."

* See Definitions in Appendix A.

[1] Expenditures by Presidential candidates receiving public funds, on the other hand, are limited by the Act.

[2] Other types of receipts and disbursements are also reportable, with a few exceptions. See "Contributions vs. Other Receipts," above, and "Expenditures vs. Other Disbursements," which follows.

[3] See page 8 for limits and prohibitions on contributions and pages 15-16 for reporting requirements.

Gifts of Money

A gift of money may be made by check or cash (i.e., currency). Cash contributions, however, are limited to $100. 110.4(c).

Loans from Persons

A loan, including a loan made by the candidate's family to his/her campaign, is considered a contribution to the extent of the outstanding balance. Once repaid in full, a loan no longer counts against a person's contribution limit.[4]

Thus, an individual loan, when added to other contributions from the same lender, may not exceed $1,000. If, for example, a committee repays $500 of a $1,000 loan, it could borrow up to $500 from the same person again. *Bank loans, however, made according to applicable banking laws and in the ordinary course of business, are not considered contributions by the bank but must be reported as receipts (and continuously reported as debts until repaid in full). 100.7(a)(1)(i) and 100.7(b)(11).

Endorsements and Guarantees of Loans

An endorsement or guarantee of a loan, like a regular loan, counts as a contribution from the endorser or guarantor to the extent of his/her portion of the outstanding balance of the loan. Once a loan is repaid, the endorsement or guarantee no longer counts against the endorser's or guarantor's contribution limit. 100.7(a)(1)(i)(C).

Extension of Credit

The extension of credit by any person for a length of time beyond normal business or trade practice is a contribution, unless the creditor has made a reasonable attempt to collect the debt. 100.7(a)(4). (See also "Debt Settlement," page 17.)

In-Kind Contributions

Services, goods and property offered to the committee free or at less than the usual charge are considered in-kind contributions. They are subject to the same limits as any other type of contribution and are reported by the recipient committee as both contributions and expenditures. 100.7(a)(1)(iii) and 104.13.

- Goods (such as office space or equipment) are valued at the ordinary market price.
- Services (such as consultant work or printing) are valued at the hourly or piecework rate when the individual performing the service is compensated by a person other than the candidate's authorized committee.[5] (When not compensated, such services may be considered "volunteer activity," which does not count as a contribution. See page 8. 100.7(a)(1)(iii)(B).

If a person makes an expenditure that fails to qualify as an *independent expenditure, it is considered an in-kind contribution. An expenditure is not independent if it is made in cooperation or consultation with, or at the request or suggestion of the candidate or the candidate's authorized committee or agents. 109.1(a) and (c). For example, an expenditure for a billboard advertisement supporting a candidate counts as an in-kind contribution to the candidate if the individual paying for the ad asks the candidate where he/she would like the billboard placed.

Proceeds from Sales

The entire amount paid to attend a fundraiser or other political event is a contribution. Similarly, the entire amount paid for any item sold for fundraising purposes is a contribution. 100.7(a)(2).

Contributions from the Candidate

Donations or loans made by House and Senate candidates from their *personal funds to their campaigns are considered contributions, but they are not subject to contribution limits. Nevertheless, they must be reported. Similarly, a campaign expenditure made by a candidate from personal funds is considered an in-kind contribution. 110.10.

Other Reportable Receipts

The following types of *receipts are not considered contributions but, nevertheless, must be reported as receipts by an authorized committee.

Legal and Accounting Services

Legal and accounting services rendered to a candidate's authorized committee solely to ensure compliance with the Act do not count as contributions if compensated by the regular employer of the individual performing the services. 100.7(b)(14).

Transfers Among Authorized Committees

Transfers of funds among committees authorized by the same candidate do not count as contributions and are not limited. 102.6(a). The following transactions are considered transfers:

- Transfers among committees authorized by the candidate for the same election. 110.3(a)(2)(ii).
- The transfer of unused primary funds from the primary campaign committee to the general election campaign committee. 110.3(a)(2)(iii).
- Transfers between a candidate's previous campaign committee and his/her currently registered political committee. 110.3(a)(2)(iv). If the previous campaign was for a State or local office, the original donors of transferred contributions exceeding $200 must be identified and their contributions fully itemized on the first report filed after the transfer. It is assumed that the last contributions received by the State or local campaign committee are those transferred to the current Federal campaign committee. The Federal campaign committee may not, however, accept any funds which would be unlawful under the Act. 104.12.

Transfer of Joint Fundraising Receipts

If a joint fundraiser is held by several committees, the transfer to a committee of the portion of funds collected for that committee is not a contribution. 102.6 and 110.3(a)(2)(i).

---

* See Definitions in Appendix A.

[4] Note that a loan exceeding the contribution limit is unlawful even if it is repaid in full.

[5] However, under certain circumstances, legal and accounting services compensated by the regular employer may be rendered to a candidate or committee without counting as a contribution. See page 10.

Bank Loans
A *bank loan is not a contribution by the bank to the candidate's authorized committee if the loan is made according to applicable banking laws and in the ordinary course of business, i.e., if it:

- Bears the bank's usual and customary interest rate for the category of loan involved;
- Is made on a basis which assures repayment;
- Is evidenced by a written instrument; and
- Is subject to a due date or amortization schedule. 100.7(b)(11).

3. Expenditures vs. Other Disbursements

Campaign Expenditures

A campaign expenditure is a purchase or payment made by an authorized committee of a candidate (or the committee's authorized agents) to influence the candidate's nomination or election to Federal office. 100.8(a)(1). Note that a candidate is considered an authorized agent of the committee. 101.2 and 102.7(d). Expenditures must be reported by the candidate's authorized committees. Certain types of disbursements are not considered expenditures but, nevertheless, are reportable. They are described below under "OtherReportable Disbursements."

Operating Expenses
Payments for operating expenses, such as staff salaries, rent, travel, advertising, phones, office supplies and equipment, fundraising, legal or accounting services, etc., are expenditures.

Written Agreement to Make Expenditure
A written agreement to make an expenditure is considered an expenditure. 100.8 (a)(2).

In-Kind Contributions
An in-kind contribution received by the committee is reported by the committee as both a contribution and an expenditure. 104.13.

Candidate's Personal Funds
A campaign expenditure made by a candidate from *personal funds is considered an in-kind contribution and reported as both a contribution and an expenditure. 110.10. Note that candidates may make unlimited expenditures from personal funds.

Other Reportable Disbursements

Listed below are other types of *disbursements that are not considered campaign expenditures but, nevertheless, must be reported by the candidate's authorized committee.

Legal and Accounting Services
Legal and accounting services rendered to a candidate's authorized committee solely to ensure compliance with the Act are not campaign expenditures if the person paying for the services is the regular employer of the individual performing the service. 100.8(b)(15).

Loans to Others
Loans to other candidates or committees made by the candidate or his/her authorized committees are not considered expenditures.

Loan Repayments
Repayments of loans owed to another person (including to the candidate) are not considered expenditures. 100.8(a)(1)(ii).

Contributions by the Committee
Contributions to another candidate or political committee are not considered expenditures.

Delegate Expenses
Disbursements in connection with a candidate's participation in a national nominating convention are not considered expenditures as long as they are not made for the purpose of influencing his/her election to the House or Senate. AO 1980-29.

4. Other Transactions

Listed below are other types of transactions that are not contributions or expenditures by the candidate's committee and that are not reportable by the campaign (unless otherwise noted).

Honoraria[6]

An honorarium paid to a candidate, who is also a Federal officeholder, for a speech, appearance or article, as well as reimbursed travel and subsistence costs and any agent's fees related to the speech, appearance or article, are not considered contributions (or expenditures). 100.7 (b)(19). Note, however, the Act sets a $2,000 limit on honoraria paid for each speech, appearance or article (excluding travel, subsistence and agent's fees). There is no annual limit on honoraria. 110.12.

Funds Donated to Office Account[7]

Funds donated to an office account to support the activities of a Federal or State officeholder are not contributions (or expenditures). If, however, contributions to or expenditures from an office account are made for the purpose of influencing a Federal election, they are subject to the Act's limitations and reporting requirements. Furthermore, if a corporation or labor organization donates funds to an office account, no funds from the account may be transferred to a political committee account or used in connection with a Federal election. 113.3(b) and 113.4.

Candidate's Routine Expenses

Routine living expenses of the candidate paid by the candidate from personal funds are not expenditures (or contributions). 100.8(b)(22).

Coattail Support

When candidates (including those for local and State offices) pay for certain campaign materials (e.g., pins, bumper stickers, brochures) that include information on or reference to a candidate for Federal office, the payments for the materials are neither contributions to that candidate nor expenditures by his/her campaign as long as the materials are:

- Used in connection with volunteer activities;
- Not used for general public political advertising; and
- Paid for from funds that are permissible under the Act. 100.7(b)(16) and 100.8(b)(17).

Payments for campaign materials may be reportable by the committee of the candidate who pays for them.

Party Spending

Certain expenditures by State and national *party committees on behalf of a candidate for a general election do not count as either contributions to or

*See Definitions in Appendix A.

[6] Members of the House and Senate should also consult House and Senate rules.

[7] Members of the House and Senate should also consult House and Senate rules.

expenditures by the candidate's campaign. 100.7(b). (See "Party Expenditures," page 9.)

Independent Expenditures

*Independent expenditures made by an individual or group on behalf of a candidate for Federal office do not count as either contributions to or expenditures by the candidate's campaign. 109.1(a) and 109.2.

Volunteer Activity

Certain types of volunteer activity conducted in accordance with the rules described under "Volunteer Activity" (page 8) do not count as either contributions to or expenditures by the candidate's campaign.

Testing the Waters

Funds received or payments made to help an individual decide whether to become a candidate (such as payments for polling) are neither contributions nor expenditures if the individual does not become a candidate. If the individual becomes a candidate, however, the funds received and payments made count as contributions and expenditures and must be reported retroactively. 100.7(b)(1) and 100.8(b)(1). (See "Individual Becomes Candidate," below.) The testing-the-waters exemption does not include funds received or payments made for general public political advertising or funds collected for use after the individual becomes a candidate.

Starting the Campaign

1. Individual Becomes Candidate

An individual becomes a candidate for Federal office (and thus triggers registration and reporting obligations under the Act) when his or her campaign exceeds $5,000 in either contributions or expenditures. The threshold is reached when any one of the following circumstances occurs:

Receives Contributions or Makes Expenditures

The individual receives contributions or makes expenditures, either of which aggregate over $5,000. 100.3(a)(1).

Exception: Testing the Waters
Note, however, that payments made to determine whether an individual should become a candidate (such as expenses for polling) do not alone trigger candidate status. Financial records of such activities should nevertheless be maintained because, if the beneficiary of such pre-candidacy activity becomes a candidate, the payments for the polls are considered contributions (subject to the Act's limits and prohibitions) and/or expenditures and must be reported with the first report filed by the candidate's principal campaign committee. 100.8(b)(1).

An individual may finance a variety of activities to test the feasibility of a potential candidacy for Federal office as long as the activities do not entail public political advertising (e.g., T.V. or newspaper ads) or represent the establishment of a campaign organization. If an individual moves beyond deciding whether or not to become a candidate and begins to plan activities to heighten his or her political appeal, he/she would become a candidate. Activities conducted over a protracted period of time might suggest, for example, campaign activity rather than testing-the-waters activity. See AOs 1981-32, 1982-3 and 1982-19.

Example
Mr. Jones is interested in running for Congress, but is unsure whether he has enough support within his District to make a successful bid. He therefore accepts up to $1,000 from each of several friends to pay for an opinion poll. The results of the poll indicate good name recognition in the community, and Jones decides to run. On the first report Jones files after he becomes a candidate (i.e., after he either receives contributions or makes expenditures which exceed $5,000), he must report the donations from his friends as "contributions" and the costs of the poll as an "expenditure." Had Jones not become a candidate, he would have had no obligation to report these financial transactions, and the donations made to help him pay for the poll would not have counted as contributions.

Authorizes Campaign Activity

The individual authorizes another person to accept contributions or make expenditures on his/her behalf, and the authorized person receives contributions or makes expenditures which exceed $5,000. 100.3(a)(2).

Fails to Disavow Campaign Activity

The individual fails to write the Commission a letter disavowing unauthorized campaign efforts on his/her behalf within 30 days after being notified by the FEC that another person has received contributions or made expenditures of more than $5,000 on the individual's behalf. 100.3(a)(3).

Reaches Aggregate Threshold

The individual and other persons (described in the two paragraphs above), in any combination, together raise or spend in excess of $5,000 on the individual's behalf. 100.3(a)(4).

2. Candidates and Committees Register

All forms for registration are available from the Office of Public Communications, Federal Election Commission, 1325 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20463 or by calling 202/523-4068 or toll free, 800/424-9530. (Phone calls from Alaska and Hawaii may be made collect.) Printed on the back of each FEC form are detailed line-by-line instructions on how to fill out the form. (See Part Two.)

* See Definitions in Appendix A.

Candidate

Within 15 days after an individual becomes a candidate, he/she must designate a *principal campaign committee as the principal committee to receive contributions and make expenditures on the candidate's behalf. This designation must be made in writing by filing[1] a Statement of Candidacy (FEC Form 2) or by filing a letter with the same information (i.e., the individual's name and address, the District and/or State in which Federal office is sought, the name and address of his/her principal campaign committee and the committee's campaign depository.) 101.1 (a).

Principal Campaign Committee

Within 10 days after it has been designated by the candidate, each principal campaign committee must file a Statement of Organization (FEC Form 1) with either the Secretary of the Senate or the Clerk of the House as appropriate. The Statement must identify the committee's treasurer, bank depositories, all other committees authorized by the same candidate and other pertinent information. 102.1(a) and 102.2(a).

Name of Committee

The name of the principal campaign committee must include the name of the candidate it is supporting. 102.14(a).

Treasurer Required

Each principal campaign committee must have a treasurer; no contribution or expenditure may be made or accepted when there is a vacancy in that office. An assistant treasurer, who would act as treasurer in the event of a vacancy, may be designated on the committee's Statement of Organization. 102.7.

No Support of Other Candidates

A principal campaign committee may not support (or ever have supported) more than one candidate. It may, however, be authorized as a joint fundraising committee by several candidates who engage in joint fundraising activity. 102.13(c)(1). ("Support" does not include contributions aggregating $1,000 or less per election made to another candidate's authorized committee. 102.13(c)(2).)

Campaign Depositories

The principal campaign committee must designate at least one campaign depository where all contributions are deposited and from which all expenditures (except those from a petty cash fund) are made through a checking account. State banks, national banks or depository institutions insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation or the National Credit Union Administration may be designated as depositories. 103.2 and 103.3.

Identification Number

The principal campaign committee is given an identification number only after the Statement of Organization is filed. 102.2(c).

Other Authorized Committees

Any other committee authorized by the candidate (in addition to the principal campaign committee) to receive contributions or make expenditures on the candidate's behalf must also register. Registration involves three distinct steps:

Action by Candidate

The candidate designates the authorized committee by filing a written statement with the principal campaign committee. This designation may be made by letter or by filling in the appropriate lines on the Statement of Candidacy. (FEC Form 2). 101.1(b).

Action by Authorized Committee

Within 10 days after being designated, the authorized committee must file a Statement of Organization (FEC Form 1) with the principal campaign committee of the candidate it supports. 102.1(b).

All other registration requirements listed under "Principal Campaign Committee" (above) also apply to the registration of any other authorized committee.

Action by Principal Campaign Committee

The principal campaign committee, in turn, files both the Statement of Candidacy and the Statement of Organization with the Secretary of the Senate or the Clerk of the House of Representatives as appropriate. (Statements should not be filed directly with the FEC.) 101.1(b) and Part 105.

3. Amending the Registration

Committees must report any change or correction in their registration (such as change in officers, address, office sought, bank depositories or date of elections) by writing a letter or filing an amended Statement of Organization signed by the treasurer. Any such change must be reported within 10 days after it is made. 102.2(a)(2).

* See Definitions in Appendix A.

[1] All documents and reports must be filed with either the Secretary of the Senate or the Clerk of the House of Representatives, as appropriate, and copies must be filed with the Secretary of State or appropriate elections official in the State in which the candidate seeks office. Statements should not be filed directly with the Federal Election Commission. Part 105. (See "Where Reports Are Filed," page 13.)

Assessing Campaign Resources

Under the Federal Election Campaign Act, candidates and their authorized committees may use a variety of resources. Note, however, that the use of these resources is subject to certain limitations and prohibitions outlined below.

1. Contributions

Individuals, partnerships, political committees and other groups may make *contributions directly to the candidate's authorized committee or agent or to another political committee, person or group supporting the candidate. 100.7(a). Candidate committees must report contributions they receive. 104.3(a). (The individual making the contribution has no reporting responsibility.) They must also be sure not to accept contributions which violate the Act's limitations or prohibitions.[1] Part 110, 114.2 and 115.2.

Prohibited Contributions

The Act prohibits certain types of contributions. The prohibitions listed below apply equally to all contributions made to candidates for Federal office, to political committees supporting them and to any *person who makes a contribution to or an *independent expenditure on behalf of a candidate for Federal office.

Corporations, Labor Organizations and Banks
Contributions made from the treasuries of national banks, corporations and labor organizations are prohibited. 114.2. However, contributions may be made from *separate segregated funds (i.e., political action committees or PACs) established by corporations, labor organizations or national banks. 114.5.

Government Contractors
Contributions from Federal Government contractors are prohibited. 115.2. This prohibition applies to contributions made by individuals or sole proprietors who have entered into contract with the Federal Government. It does not apply, however, to personal contributions of employees, partners, shareholders or officers of businesses with Government contracts; nor does it apply to separate segregated funds established by corporations or labor organizations with Government contracts. 115.4, 115.5 and 115.6.

Foreign Nationals
Contributions from foreign nationals who have not been granted permanent residence in the United States (i.e., those without green cards) are prohibited. 110.4(a).

Cash Contributions
Cash contributions (currency) from one person, which, in the aggregate, exceed $100 per candidate for the entire campaign period are prohibited.[2] 110.4(c).

Contributions in the Name of Another
Contributions made by one person in the name of another person are prohibited. 110.4(b).

Contribution Limits

Under the Act, individuals and groups are limited in the amounts they may contribute to candidates for Federal office, to political committees which support them or to any committee making an independent expenditure on behalf of a candidate for Federal office. 110.1, 110.2 and 110.3. The limitations apply to any type of contribution, including contributions of money, contributions of goods and services, loans, endorsements of loans, etc. Candidate committees may not accept contributions that exceed the donor's contribution limit. 110.9(a). For specific limits, see the Chart on Contribution Limits in Appendix B.

2. Volunteer Activity

Subject to the limitations listed below, individuals may also volunteer their services and goods, without counting such activity as a contribution. Volunteer activity does not have to be reported. However, the value of any activity exceeding the limits listed below must be reported by the candidate's committee as an in-kind contribution, which counts against the volunteer's contribution limits.

Personal Services

An individual may volunteer any personal service provided he or she is not compensated for the service by any other committee, individual or organization. 100.7 (b)(3).

Activities in Home

For campaign-related activities, an individual may provide the use of his/her home or the recreation room of his/her residential complex, provided that the room is available without regard to political affiliation. Any nominal fee charged for the room is not considered a contribution. 100.7(b)(4).

Activities in Church or Community Room

An individual volunteer may obtain the use of a church or community room for campaign-related activity provided that the room is generally used by all members of the community, without regard to political affiliation, for noncommercial purposes. Any nominal fee paid for the room is not considered a contribution. 100.7(b)(5).

Food, Beverages and Invitations

An individual may spend up to $1,000 per candidate, per election, for food, beverages and invitations in connection with campaign-related activity conducted in his/her home or in a church or community room (as specified in the two paragraphs above). 100.7(b)(6).

Travel

An individual may spend up to $1,000 per candidate, per election, for his/her own travel expenses related to the campaign. 100.7(b)(8).

* See Definitions in Appendix A.

[1] If a candidate committee receives contributions from a group that is not a registered committee, the candidate committee has the responsibility to verify that the funds are not from corporations, labor organizations or foreign nationals. FEC Directive 19, September 12, 1980.

[2] If a candidate's authorized committee receives an anonymous contribution of currency, the committee may use up to $50 of that contribution for campaign-related activities. Any amount exceeding $50 may be used only for other legal purposes not relating to the Federal election campaign or candidate (e.g., donation to charity). 110.4(c)(3).

Living Expenses

An individual may spend any amount for his/her normal living expenses incurred while engaging in volunteer activity. 100.7(b)(8).

Vendor Discounts

A vendor, whether or not incorporated, may sell to a candidate's campaign, at cost, food and beverages to be used in connection with the campaign, as long as the cumulative value of the discounts does not exceed $1,000 per candidate, per election. 100.7(b)(7).

3. Independent Expenditures[3]

In addition to making contributions and volunteering, an individual or group may support candidates by making independent expenditures on their behalf. An independent expenditure is an expenditure for a communication expressly advocating the election or defeat of a *clearly identified candidate which is not made with the cooperation or prior consent of, or in consultation with or at the request or suggestion of, any candidate or his/her authorized committees or agents. 109.1(a). There is no limit on the amount or frequency of independent expenditures, but they must be reported once they exceed $250 a year. A group of individuals acting in concert to collectively make independent expenditures that exceed $1,000 in a calendar year may be considered a political committee with registration and periodic reporting obligations. Any contribution to a political committee that makes independent expenditures on behalf of only one candidate is subject to the per candidate, per election, limitations. 110.1(h).

4. Party Support

Political parties may support candidates by contributing to them, making expenditures on their behalf and engaging in certain activities that may benefit candidates.

Party Contributions[4]

National Party Limit for House Candidates

A national party committee and its Congressional campaign committee may each contribute up to $5,000 to each House candidate, per election. 110.2(a)(1) and 110.3(b).

National Party Limit for Senate Candidates

The national party committee together with its Senatorial campaign committee may contribute up to a combined total of $17,500 to each Senate candidate for the entire campaign period (involving, for example, a primary and a general election). 110.2(c).

State Party Limits

A State party committee may contribute to Senate and House candidates up to the maximum limit (either $1,000 or $5,000, depending on whether it qualifies as a *multicandidate committee). One contribution ceiling applies collectively to each State party committee and all subordinate party committees (county, district or local). A subordinate party committee may, however, contribute under its own separate limit if the committee neither receives funds from nor makes contributions in cooperation with or at the suggestion of any other party unit. 110.3(b)(2).

Party Expenditures

In addition to making contributions to candidates, party committees or their designated agents may make certain expenditures in connection with the general election campaign of their party's nominees for the House and the Senate. (They may not, however, make independent expenditures in the general election. 110.7(b)(4).) These funds may be spent in cooperation with the candidate. The party committee — not the candidate — must actually make the expenditures and is responsible for reporting them. 110.7.

For example, a party committee could extinguish a candidate's $1,500 advertising bill by paying the advertiser directly. If, however, the party committee directly gave the candidate $1,500 to pay the bill, the money would be a contribution, not a party expenditure.

These party expenditures are limited. 110.7(b)(2). The expenditure limits are prescribed as a flat amount or are determined by a specific formula based on the Voting Age Population (VAP).[5] Each calendar year, the limits are adjusted by the average annual increase in the cost of living (Consumer Price Index) over the base year (1974).[6] The chart below lists the formulas used to determine party spending limits:

National Party Limits

- For each House candidate[7] — $10,000 (plus annual cost-of-living increase).
- For each Senate candidate — $20,000 (plus annual cost-of-living increase) or $.02 x State VAP (plus cost-of-living increase), whichever is greater.

The national committee and the House and Senate campaign committees of the same party share one expenditure limit. 110.7(b).

---

* See Definitions in Appendix A.

[3] See also Appendix C on Independent Expenditures and Section 104.4 and Part 109 of the FEC Regulations.

[4] See Chart on Contribution Limits in Appendix B. When a State or local party committee, in conducting a voter registration or get-out-the-vote drive for a Presidential campaign, refers to a House or Senate candidate, the portion of costs allocable to that candidate is a contribution by the party committee on behalf of that candidate unless the reference is merely incidental to the overall activity. 100.7(b)(17) and 106.1(c)(3).

State Party Limits

- For each House candidate[8] – $10,000 (plus annual cost-of-living increase).
- For each Senate candidate – $20,000 (plus annual cost-of-living increase) or $.02 x VAP (plus cost-of-living increase), whichever is greater.

All expenditures made on behalf of one candidate by the State party committee, including subordinate party committees (e.g., county, district or local), are subject to one ceiling. State and local party committees within a State may determine how to apportion the limit among the several committees. 110.7(c).

Campaign Materials

Any local or State party organization may pay for campaign materials (e.g., pins, bumper stickers, etc.) that are used in connection with volunteer activity on behalf of the party's nominee as long as the payments:

- Are not made for public political advertising or general public communication or direct mail;
- Are made from funds that are permissible under the Act; and
- Are not made from funds designated for a particular candidate.

These payments are not considered contributions or expenditures and are not reportable by the candidate's committee. 100.7(b)(15) and 100.8(b)(16).

Sample Ballot

A State or local party committee may prepare and distribute a sample ballot or printed list of three or more candidates for any public office provided no public political advertising is used. Public political advertising includes billboards, radio, T.V., newspapers and magazines. The payments are not considered contributions or expenditures and are not reportable by the candidate's committee. 100.7(b)(9) and 100.8(b)(10).

5. Coattail Support

Another candidate (for any local, State or Federal office) or his/her authorized committee may pay for campaign materials that include information on or reference to a candidate for Federal office as long as the materials are:

- Used in connection with volunteer activities;
- Not used for public political advertising or direct mail; and
- Paid for from funds that are permissible under the Act.

These payments are not considered contributions or expenditures on behalf of the candidate who is incidentally named in the materials; that candidate's committee, therefore, has no obligation to report the payments. 100.7(b)(16) and 100.8(b)(17).

6. Candidate's Personal Funds

House and Senate candidates may use *personal funds for campaign purposes without limit. The use of personal funds must, however, be reported. 110.10.

7. Legal and Accounting Services

Candidates and their committees may accept free legal and accounting services provided they are rendered solely to ensure compliance with the Act and provided they are paid for by the regular employer[9] of the individual rendering the services. 100.7(b)(14).

This exemption does not include funds contributed to the campaign to pay for legal and accounting services obtained for a fee. Such contributions are subject to the limits.

* See Definitions in Appendix A.

[8] In States having only one Congressional District, the party expenditure limit for House candidates is the same as the expenditure limit for Senate candidates in that State.

[9] The "regular employer" may be a partnership, a corporation or any other person.

Conducting the Campaign

1. Fundraising

Candidate as Agent of Committee

Any candidate who makes a campaign finance transaction is regarded as an agent of his/her committee. Such a transaction must be reported by the principal campaign committee. 101.2 and 102.7(d).

Treasurer Required

Each political committee must have a treasurer. No contribution may be accepted and no expenditure may be made if there is a vacancy in the office of treasurer. The committee may designate, on its Statement of Organization, an assistant treasurer to assume the treasurer's duties during a temporary or permanent absence of the treasurer. 102.7.

Authorization Notice

Fundraising materials must include a notice indicating they have been paid for and authorized by the campaign. (See "Advertising," page 11.)

Campaign Worker's Responsibilities

Every campaign worker who receives contributions on behalf of a candidate must forward them within 10 days to the treasurer of the authorized committee. 102.8(a). The campaign worker must also provide the following additional information:

- For contributions of more than $50: contributor's name and address, date of contribution's receipt, and amount.
- For contributions of more than $200: complete identification of contributor (full name, mailing address, occupation and name of employer), contribution's date of receipt, and amount.

For reporting purposes, contributions are received on the date the campaign worker actually receives them. 102.8.

Depositing Funds

All contributions, regardless of amount, must be deposited in a checking account of the designated *bank depository within 10 days after they have been received by the treasurer of the authorized committee. 103.3(a).

Illegal Contributions

A contribution which appears to be illegal must, within 10 days, either be:

- Returned to the contributor, or
- Deposited in the campaign depository. In this case, the committee must report the contribution, keep records noting the basis for concern, and try to determine the legality of the contribution. A statement noting that the legality of the contribution is in question should be included in the report. If, within reasonable time, the treasurer cannot determine whether or not the contribution is legal, he or she must return it and report the refund on the next scheduled report. 103.3(b).

Collections and Ticket Sales

The full purchase price of a ticket to a fundraising event (e.g., concert, dinner, etc.) and the entire amount paid for a fundraising sale item count as contributions. 100.7(a)(2).

Joint Fundraising

Candidates and their committees may engage in joint fundraising with other candidates and political committees. 102.6 and 110.3(a)(2)(i). For more information on joint fundraising procedures, contact the Federal Election Commission.

2. Traveling

Travel Paid by Campaign

Campaign-related travel by the candidate or committee staff is reportable as an expenditure if it is paid by the committee or from the candidate's personal funds. 106.3(a) and 106.3(b)(1).

Travel Paid by Individual

An individual may spend up to $1,000 per candidate, per election, for his or her own travel expenses related to the campaign. When, however, an individual's travel costs exceed $1,000 per election, the amount exceeding $1,000 counts as an in-kind contribution from the individual and, as such, must be reported by the candidate's committee. 100.7(b) (8).

Allocating Travel Costs[1]

When a candidate makes a trip involving both campaign and noncampaign stops, only the travel costs related to the campaign are expenditures. The amount reported as an expenditure is the cost to and from the campaign-related stop (i.e., the stop where the candidate conducts campaign-related activity). 106.3(b)(2).

Travel to and from Washington, D.C.[2]

Costs for travel between Washington, D.C. and the State or Congressional District in which an individual is a candidate are not reportable unless paid for by the candidate's authorized committee or another political committee, or by the candidate in connection with campaign-related travel (see "Travel Paid by Campaign," above). 106.3(d).

3. Advertising[3]

Advocacy and Solicitations

When a communication expressly advocates the election or defeat of a *clearly identified candidate or solicits contributions (through any broadcasting station, newspaper, magazine, outdoor advertising facility, direct mailing or any other type of general public political advertising), it must clearly and conspicuously display one of the following authorization notices,[4] as appropriate:

Authorized and Financed by Candidate's Authorized Committee
If a communication is authorized and financed by the campaign (e.g., the candidate or his/her authorized political committees or agents), the communication must state that it has been paid for by the committee.

Example: Paid for by the John Doe for Congress Committee.

Note that where a candidate or his/her committee is paying for or furnishing the material, authorization by the candidate is assumed and need not be specifically stated.

Authorized but Not Financed by Candidate's Authorized Committee
If a communication is authorized by the campaign but paid for by another person, the communication must identify the person who has paid for it and state that it has been authorized by the candidate or the candidate's committee.

Example: Paid for by the XYZ Committee and authorized by the John Doe for Congress Committee.

Not Authorized and Not Paid for by Candidate's Authorized Committee
If a communication is not paid for and not authorized by the campaign, the communication must identify the person who has paid for it and state that it has not been authorized by the candidate or the candidate's committee. 2 U.S.C. §441d(a).

Example: Paid for by the XYZ Committee and not authorized by any candidate.

Rates for Political Ads

Rates charged by newspapers and magazines for political advertising by candidates and their campaigns must be comparable to those charged for noncampaign purposes. 110.11(b).

4. Using Consultant Services

Candidates and their committees may use many kinds of consultant services, including pollsters, advertising experts, fundraisers and advisors on management techniques. Such services may be provided in a variety of ways, each of which entails a different set of restrictions and reporting requirements.

Services as In-Kind Contribution

If a committee or individual pays for consultant services on behalf of a candidate, the candidate's principal campaign committee must report the full value of such services (i.e., the usual and normal charge) as an in-kind contribution from the person who pays for them. 100.7(a)(3) and 104.13. Consultant fees paid by a committee or individual on behalf of a candidate may not exceed the appropriate contribution limit. (See Chart on Contribution Limits in Appendix B.) If the candidate is one of several candidates benefiting from consulting services paid for by another committee or individual, the candidate must count as an in-kind contribution a share of the consultant's fee proportionate to the benefit expected to be derived. 106.1. Candidates using opinion polls should consult 106.4 of the Regulations.

* See Definitions in Appendix A.

Services as Volunteer Activity

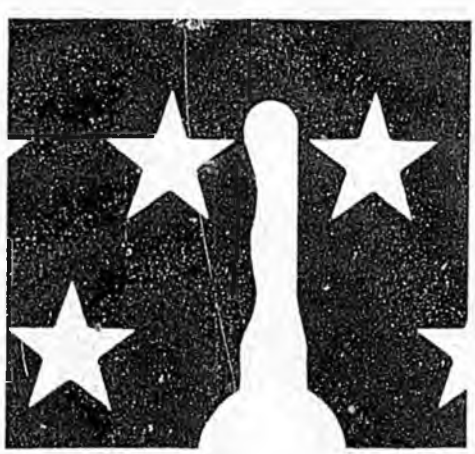
An individual may volunteer free consulting services to a candidate without limit, provided his or her services are not compensated by anyone. No reporting is required. 100.7(b)(3).

Services as Expenditure by Candidate

The candidate's principal campaign committee may hire a consultant, pay his or her fees and report the consultant fees as expenditures. 100.8(a)(1).

Services as Party Activity

A party committee may hire a consultant to work for a candidate and count the salary either as an in-kind contribution to the candidate (subject to the contribution limits) or as a party expenditure if made on behalf of the candidate in connection with the general election (subject to special party expenditure limits, p. 9). As an in-kind contribution, the services must be reported as both a contribution and expenditure by the candidate's principal campaign committee. As a party expenditure, the services need not be reported by the candidate (but must be reported by the party committee). 110.7.



Keeping Records

Committee treasurers are responsible for keeping records, including copies of statements, reports and other pertinent records, for three years after a report or statement is filed. 102.9(a) and 104.14 (b).

1. Recording Contributions

Although the Act requires committees to keep records of contributions only, all receipts must be reported. Therefore, keeping records of all receipts will help the committee fulfill its reporting obligations. Furthermore, designing the recordkeeping system to conform to those categories in which receipts and disbursements must eventually be reported will also facilitate reporting.

Total Contributions

Records must show figures for total contributions.

Identification of Contributions

Contributions Exceeding $50
Records must identify each contribution of more than $50 by date and amount of contribution and by the donor's name and address.

Contributions Aggregating Over $200
Records must identify each contribution aggregating more than $200 per calendar year from the same person by date and amount of contribution and by the donor's name and address, plus the donor's occupation and the name of the donor's employer. In the case of a person who has already contributed an aggregate of more than $200 per calendar year, all of his or her subsequent contributions must be identified in the same way. Records must indicate the date and amount of each such contribution, the donor's name, address and occupation and the name of the donor's employer.

Contributions from Political Committees
Records must identify all contributions from political committees, regardless of amount, by date and amount of the contribution and by the name of the committee. 102.9(a).

Identification of Transfers

Records must identify each transfer of funds from another committee authorized by the same candidate, regardless of amount, by date and amount and by the name and address of the transferring committee. 104.3(a)(4)(iii)(A).

2. Recording Disbursements

Total Disbursements

All disbursements (except from a petty cash fund) must be drawn by check or similar draft from the campaign depository. 102.10 and 103.3(a). Records must show figures for total disbursements.

Petty Cash Disbursements

A written record of petty cash disbursements must be kept if a petty cash fund is maintained. Payments from petty cash to one person for one purchase or transaction may not exceed $100. 102.11.

Identification of Disbursements

All Disbursements
Each disbursement must be identified by date and amount, name and address of payee and purpose (i.e., a brief description of why the disbursement was made, such as dinner expenses, salary, phone bank, etc.). 102.9(b) and 104.3(b)(4)(i)(A).

Disbursements Exceeding $200
In addition, for each single disbursement that exceeds $200, the committee must also keep a receipt, invoice or canceled check. 102.9(b)(2).

Credit Card Transactions
For all credit card transactions, a monthly billing statement or customer receipt for each transaction is required as well as the canceled check used to pay the account. 102.9(b)(2)(ii).

Credit Union or Share Draft Account
Carbon copies of share drafts or checks drawn on credit union accounts may be used as records, provided that the monthly account statement showing that the draft or check was paid by the credit union is also retained. 102.9(b)(2)(iii).

Filing Reports

1. Who Reports

Each treasurer of a political committee must file periodic reports until all debts relating to the Federal election are extinguished and the committee has filed a termination report. 104.1(a). (See page 18.)

Note that the candidate has no personal reporting obligation. If the candidate receives contributions or makes expenditures, they are reported by the principal campaign committee.

2. Where Reports Are Filed

Principal campaign committees must file all reports and statements simultaneously with the appropriate Federal and State officials, as listed below. 105.1, 105.2 and 108.3. Authorized committees (other than principal campaign committees) must file their reports and statements with the principal campaign committee. 108.4.

Filing with Federal Government

Principal campaign committees of House and Senate candidates should not file reports with the Federal Election Commission, but with the offices listed below.

House Reports
Principal campaign committees of House candidates must file all reports and statements with the Clerk of the House, Office of Records and Registration, 1036 Longworth House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515. 105.1.

Senate Reports
Principal campaign committees of Senate candidates must file all reports and statements with the Secretary of the Senate, Senate Public Records, 119 D Street, N.E., Washington, D.C. 20510. 105.2.

Filing with State Government

All principal campaign committees must file a copy of every report and statement with the Secretary of State or the appropriate elections official of the State in which the candidate seeks Federal office. 108.5 and 2 U.S.C. §439(a)(2)(B).

Filing with Principal Campaign Committee

Each authorized committee (other than than the principal campaign committee) must file its reports and statements with the principal campaign committee of the candidate it supports. The principal campaign committee, in turn, files these statements and reports (accompanied by the consolidated report – FEC Form 3Z) with either the Clerk of the House or the Secretary of the Senate, as appropriate, and with the appropriate State elections official. 104.3(f).

3. Public Inspection of Reports

Availability at FEC

All reports are available in the FEC's Office of Public Records for public inspection and copying.

Use of Information

Information copied from reports may not be sold or used to solicit contributions or for other commercial purposes, except that the names and addresses of political committees may be used to solicit contributions. 104.15(a).

Pseudonyms

To determine whether reported contributor names are unlawfully being copied and used, political committees may use pseudonyms. Such use, however, is limited and must follow the specific procedures described in Section 104.3 (e) of the Regulations.

4. When Reports Are Filed

During an Election Year

Quarterly Reports
Once an individual has qualified under the Act as a candidate, quarterly reports must be filed during an election year, regardless of amounts received or expended by the committee. Quarterly reports must be filed by the 15th day after the close of each calendar quarter (April, July and October); the fourth quarter (January year-end) report must be filed by January 31 of the following year. 104.5(a)(1)(iii).

Pre-Election Reports
Pre-primary and pre-general election reports must be filed 12 days before the election. If sent by registered or certified mail, the report must be postmarked no later than the 15th day before the election. The report must be complete as of the 20th day before the election. 104.5 (a)(1)(i).

Post-Election Reports
Post-primary reports are not required. Post-general election reports must be filed 30 days after any general election in which the candidate seeks election. The report must be complete as of the 20th day after the general election. 104.5(a)(1)(ii).

During a Nonelection Year*

Two semiannual reports are required during a nonelection year. The first report, covering January through June, must be filed by July 31. The second report, covering July through December, must be filed by January 31 of the following calendar year. 104.5(a)(2)(i).

* See Definitions in Appendix A.

Special Elections*

Filing dates for special elections will be established and published by the Federal Election Commission. The Commission will notify the principal campaign committees of all candidates on the ballot in such elections. 104.5(h).

Last-Minute Contributions

Any contribution of $1,000 or more received by an authorized committee between 2 and 20 days before an election must be reported in writing by the recipient committee within 48 hours after it is received. 104.5(f).

5. Reporting Waivers

Quarterly Report

Quarterly reports may be waived only if a pre-election report is due during the period beginning on the 5th day and ending on the 15th day after the close of the calendar quarter. 104.5(a)(1)(iii).

Regularly Scheduled Report—Special Election

If a regularly scheduled report is due from a committee within 10 days of the date the special election report is due, the regular report is waived. 104.5(h)(2).

6. Forms

Reports required of authorized candidate committees must be filed on appropriate FEC forms, which are available from the FEC's Office of Public Communications.

Form 1: Statement of Organization

Form 1 is a registration form used by all political committees, including principal campaign committees and other authorized committees. 102.1(a).

Form 2: Statement of Candidacy

Form 2 is a registration form used by all Federal candidates to designate the principal campaign committee and other authorized committees. 101.1.

Form 3: Report of Receipts and Disbursements by Authorized Committees[1]

Form 3 is a reporting form used each reporting period by authorized committees to report all campaign receipts and disbursements. Committees may also use this form as a Termination Report by checking the appropriate box on the front page. 104.2(e)(2).

Form 3Z: Consolidation Report for Principal Campaign Committees

Form 3Z is a reporting form used to consolidate receipts and disbursements reported by the principal campaign committee, the candidate and other committees authorized by the candidate. This form must be submitted by the principal campaign committee, together with its own reports and those of all other authorized committees. Form 3Z is not used, however, if the principal campaign committee is the candidate's only authorized committee. 104.3(f).

Schedules

Authorized committees may be required to file the following schedules as attachments to Form 3.

- Schedule A — Itemized Receipts
- Schedule B — Itemized Disbursements
- Schedule C — Loans
- Schedule D — Debts and Obligations (Excluding Loans)

For reporting itemized receipts and disbursements, a committee may use computer-produced Schedules A and B reduced to the size of FEC forms provided that the committee submits a sample of the proposed format to the Commission and receives prior Commission approval. 104.2(d). (See also FEC Directive 37, October 6, 1980, available from the Public Records Office.)

* See Definitions in Appendix A.

[1] Presidential candidates report on Form 3P, and all other political committees report on Form 3X.

Filling Out Form 3

All receipts and disbursements are reported on Form 3. Information must be reported under one of several different categories (e.g., contributions from political committees or loans from individuals). If a committee has receipts and disbursements that must be itemized, it must fill out a separate schedule for each category and then enter the total of itemized plus unitemized receipts or disbursements on the corresponding line of the Form 3 Detailed Summary Page. Special reporting instructions for each category are outlined below. For more detailed instructions, consult the line-by-line instructions on the back of each form. Part Two contains samples of completed FEC forms.

1. Cash on Hand

Cash on Hand—First Report

Cash on hand is any money which the committee has in its possession at the time of its registration. It is subject to all the contribution limits, prohibitions and disclosure requirements of the Act. The original donors of cash on hand must be reported on the first report filed. If, however, the cash on hand is a transfer or a carry-over of excess funds from a committee authorized by the same candidate for a previous campaign for Federal office (occurring in 1972 or later), the original donors of those funds need not be identified. 104.3(a) and 104.12.

Cash on Hand—Subsequent Reports

The amount of cash on hand at the beginning of each reporting period is disclosed on each report. Cash on hand includes all funds deposited in banks and depositories, traveler's checks, petty cash, certificates of deposit, treasury bills and any other committee investments valued at cost. 104.3 (a)(1).

2. Receipts

Itemized information on receipts (i.e., the date and amount of the contribution, as well as the donor's name, address, occupation and employer) must be reported on Schedule A. For reporting purposes only, receipts are divided into several categories. A separate schedule should be used for each category, as noted below.

Contributions from Individuals —Unitemized

Contributions aggregating less than $200 per year from individuals are reported as a memo entry and are included in the total figure for contributions on Form 3, Detailed Summary Page.

Contributions from Individuals —Itemized

Contributions of more than $200 from individuals must be itemized on Schedule A. Itemized information must include the date and amount of the contribution, as well as the donor's name, address, occupation and employer. When several contributions from the same person aggregate more than $200 a year, each contribution (regardless of amount) received thereafter in the same year from the same person must be itemized as described above. All itemized contributions from the same person during a calendar year must be listed under the same name. In addition, next to each itemized entry, the report must indicate total aggregate year-to-date contributions made by the same donor. 104.3(a)(3)(i), 104.3(a)(4)(i) and 104.8.

For example, suppose an individual contributes $100 to Candidate Jones in each quarter of an election year. In this situation, the candidate's reporting obligation would be as follows:

First Quarter
Because the amount contributed to Jones ($100) is less than $200, the contribution would be included as a memo entry under total unitemized contributions on Form 3, Detailed Summary Page.

Second Quarter
The donor contributes another $100 but the total amount contributed to Candidate Jones ($200) is not in excess of $200, so again the contribution would be included under total unitemized contributions.

Third Quarter
Again, the donor contributes $100. The total amount contributed ($300) now aggregates in excess of $200. Schedule A must now be used to itemize the $100 contribution and to report the donor's aggregate year-to-date contributions ($300 total).

Fourth Quarter
Because the donor's total contributions to Jones have now exceeded $200, all subsequent contributions from the same donor in the same year must be itemized, regardless of amount.

Contributions from Partnerships

Partnership contributions are included in the total figure reported for contributions from individuals. A partnership is under the same contribution limit as an individual ($1,000 per candidate, per election). 110.1(e)(3). In addition, a contribution from a partnership counts proportionately against each contributing partner's $1,000 contribution limit for that election. The partnership contribution may be attributed to each partner in direct proportion to his/her respective share of partnership profits, or according to some other formula that conforms to Commission Regulations at 110.1(e)(2).

If a partnership contribution exceeds or aggregates in excess of $200, the committee must itemize the contribution on the Schedule A used for contributions from individuals. Additionally, if a partner's share of the contribution exceeds $200 when combined with all other contributions from that partner, the committee must disclose as a *memo entry itemized information on the partner (name and home address, employer, occupation, date of the contribution, the partner's share of the contribution and the aggregate year-to-date total of contributions made by the partner).

Contributions from Political Committees

All contributions from political committees, regardless of amount, must be itemized on Schedule A. 104.3(a)(3)(iii) and (iv) and 104.3(a)(4)(ii).

Contributions from the Candidate

All contributions from the candidate which aggregate more than $200 during a calendar year must be itemized on Schedule A. 104.3(a)(3)(ii).

In-Kind Contributions

*In-kind contributions are reported as both contributions and expenditures. Rules concerning itemized contributions (above) apply equally to all in-kind contributions. If an in-kind contribution, when added to all other contributions from the same source, exceeds $200, it must be itemized on both Schedules A and B. In-kind contributions from political committees must be itemized regardless of amount. Contributions of goods are valued at the usual market price; services are valued at the piecework or hourly rate. 100.7(a)(1)(iii)(B) and 104.13. For special reporting requirements governing the donation of goods which are later sold for profit by the committee, consult section 104.13(b) of the Regulations.

Earmarked Contributions*

When a person gives funds to a political committee or other person with instructions earmarking the contribution for a specific candidate, the recipient committee must identify each conduit through which the earmarked contribution passed. Additionally, the recipient committee must fully itemize any earmarked contribution that, when combined with other contributions from the same donor, exceeds $200 per year. 110.6(c)(3).

Transfers

*Transfers of funds between committees authorized by the same candidate are unlimited. 102.6(a). All such transfers, however, must be itemized on Schedule A, regardless of amount, and must include the date and amount of each transfer. 104.3(a)(3)(vi) and 104.3(a)(4)(iii)(A).

 See Definitions in Appendix A.*

Loans Received

General Reporting Procedures

- All loans received, regardless of amount, must be itemized. Itemized information must include the name, address, occupation and employer of the lender and any endorser or guarantor, the date the loan was made and the amount and terms of the loan. 104.3(a)(3)(vii) and 104.3(a)(4)(iv).
- At the end of the reporting period in which the loan was received, the committee must itemize the loan on Schedule A and Schedule C. 104.3(d).
- At the end of each subsequent reporting period, and until the balance of the loan is fully repaid, the committee must continue to itemize the outstanding balance of the loan on Schedule C. 104.3(d).

Bank Loans

A loan made by a *bank does not count as a contribution if it is made according to applicable banking laws and in the ordinary course of business, i.e., if it:

- Bears the bank's usual and customary interest rate for the category of loan involved;
- Is made on a basis which assures repayment;
- Is evidenced by a written instrument; and
- Is subject to a due date or amortization schedule. 100.7(b)(11).

Although they are not contributions, all such loans must be reported according to the general procedures described above.

Endorsements and Guarantees of Loans

Endorsements and guarantees of loans, including those made by the candidate's family to his/her campaign, do count as contributions to the extent of the outstanding balance of the loan. Information on each endorser or guarantor must be itemized on Schedule C. If a loan is endorsed or guaranteed by the candidate, itemized information on the candidate must be included on Schedule A as well as Schedule C. 100.7(a)(1)(i)(C), 104.3(a)(3)(vii)(B) and 104.3(a)(4)(iv).

Private Loans

Loans made by individuals, groups and committees count as contributions until they are retired and are itemized on Schedules A and C according to the general reporting procedures described above.

Refunds, Rebates and Returns

Refunds, rebates and returns of deposits (such as the return of a telephone deposit) are reported as offsets to operating expenditures on Form 3, and those aggregating over $200 from the same source must be itemized on Schedule A. 104.3(a)(3)(ix) and 104.3(a)(4)(v).

Other Receipts

"Other Receipts," which include interest, dividends and the sale of committee assets such as office equipment, are reported on Form 3. Other receipts aggregating over $200 per year from the same source must be itemized on Schedule A. 104.3(a)(3)(x) and 104.3(a)(4)(vi).

3. Disbursements

Certain disbursements must be itemized on Schedule B, according to the rules listed below. Itemized information includes the name and address of the individual or organization to whom the disbursement was made, as well as the date, amount and "purpose" of the disbursement. "Purpose" means a brief description of why the disbursement was made (e.g., dinner expenses, salary, phone banks, etc.).[1]

For reporting purposes, disbursements are divided into several categories. A separate Schedule B should be used for each category. Each of the following categories of disbursements has some additional reporting requirements.

Operating Expenditures

Operating expenditures that exceed $200 or aggregate over $200 per year to the payee must be itemized on Schedule B. In addition, in-kind contributions itemized on Schedule A are again itemized as expenditures on Schedule B. 104.3(b)(2)(i) and 104.3(b)(4)(i).

Transfers to Authorized Committees

Each transfer made by the principal campaign committee to another authorized committee must be itemized on Schedule B, regardless of amount. 104.3(b)(2)(ii) and 104.3(b)(4)(ii).

Loan Repayments and Loans Made by Committee

Each reporting period, all loans and loan repayments made by the authorized committee during that period are itemized on Schedules B and C regardless of amount. For each subsequent reporting period that a loan remains outstanding, it must be itemized on Schedule C. In addition, any loan repayment made directly by the candidate as an agent of the committee must be itemized. 104.3(b)(2)(iii) and 104.3(b)(4)(iii) and (iv).

Contribution Refunds

Total contribution refunds to persons or political committees must be reported on Form 3. Each refund to an individual of more than $200, and all refunds, regardless of amount, to political committees must be itemized as disbursements on Schedule B. 104.3(b)(2)(v) and 104.3(b)(4)(v).

Other Disbursements

Other disbursements, when they aggregate over $200 to the same payee, must be itemized on Schedule B. Contributions to other candidates are included in this category. 104.3(b)(2)(vi) and 104.3(b)(4)(vi).

 See Definitions in Appendix A.*

[1] The "purpose" must be specific enough to meet reporting requirements. For additional information on how to specify the purpose of a disbursement, consult the instructions on the back of Schedule B.

4. Debts and Obligations

Certain debts and obligations (excluding loans) owed by the committee are itemized each reporting period on Schedule D until retired. 104.3(d). Unpaid bills and written contracts or agreements to make expenditures (including media contracts) are considered debts. 100.8(a)(2) and 104.11.

The following debts and obligations must be itemized on Schedule D:

- Debts of $500 or less must be itemized on the first report filed after the debt has been outstanding 60 days.
- Debts over $500 must be itemized on the first report filed after incurring the debt. 104.11(b).

5. Reporting Liability

Each treasurer of an authorized committee and any other individual required to file reports or statements is personally responsible for the timely, complete and accurate filing of reports and statements. 104.14(d). They will be considered in compliance with the recordkeeping and reporting requirements of the Act when they have made their best efforts to obtain and report required information. The treasurer will be considered to have made "best efforts" to obtain, maintain and submit the records if he/she has made at least one written effort to obtain the required documentation for each transaction. 102.9(d) and 104.7.

Winding Down the Campaign

1. Retiring Debts

Receiving Contributions After the Primary

Contributions Designated for Primary Election Debt

After the primary, but before the general election, candidates may receive contributions to retire a primary debt provided that:

- The contributions do not exceed the net outstanding debts of the primary; and
- Each such contribution is specifically designated by the donor to retire the primary debt. As such, it counts against the contribution limits for the primary. 110.1(a)(2)(i).

Undesignated Contributions

Received by General Election Candidates

Undesignated contributions received after the primary, but before the general election, are presumed to be for the general election and count against that limit. 110.1(a)(2)(ii).

Received by Defeated Primary Election Candidates

Defeated primary election candidates (not entered in a subsequent general election) with outstanding debts from the primary may receive undesignated contributions to retire those debts. Such contributions are regarded as contributions for the primary and must accordingly be within the donor's primary election contribution limit when added to any other primary election contributions from the same donor.

Receiving Contributions After the General Election

Contributions Designated for Debts

Candidates may receive contributions after the general election to retire either primary or general election debts, provided the donor designates the contribution for the specific debt being retired (primary or general). Such contributions count against the contribution limits applicable to the designated election and the year in which the election was held. 110.1(a)(2).

Undesignated Contributions

Undesignated contributions received after the general election are presumed to be for a future primary election and count against the limits applicable to the future election. 110.1(a)(2).

2. Debt Settlement

If a candidate or committee fails to pay a campaign debt in a timely fashion consistent with normal business or trade practice, the debt in effect becomes a contribution made by the creditor to the candidate or committee, unless the creditor has made a commercially reasonable attempt to collect the debt. 100.7(a)(4). Contributions made under such circumstances may violate the Act. For example, if a committee indebted to a corporation fails to pay the debt, the debt may result in a prohibited contribution from the corporation. Or, as another example, continued nonpayment of a debt owed to a person who may lawfully make contributions may cause the creditor to exceed the Act's $1,000 per election contributor limit.

Debt Settlement Statement

If a debt owed to a creditor, either corporate or noncorporate, is settled for less than the amount owed, the debtor (committee) must file a debt settlement statement with the FEC. This statement is subject to Commission review and must include:

- The steps taken by the committee to pay the debt;
- The steps taken by the creditor to obtain payment of the debt;
- The terms of settlement; and
- An indication that the creditor is in agreement with the terms of the settlement.

After the Commission approves the debt settlement, the committee may stop reporting the debt once it has disclosed the final payment made to the creditor.

Note that a debt settlement statement is not necessary when a creditor and committee have agreed on the amount of a disputed debt, provided the committee pays the agreed-upon amount. Nor is a statement necessary if the amount originally reported as owed to a creditor is later reduced because the original amount was an estimate that exceeded the actual cost of the goods or services. Under these two circumstances, the committee is not required to submit a statement but must report any change in debt status on Schedule D as an amendment to its report. FEC Directive 3, July 22, 1982.

Rules for Corporate Creditors

A corporate creditor may not forgive debts "for less than the amount owed" unless the creditor and debtor have treated the debt in a commercially reasonable manner. This means that:

- Credit was extended "in the ordinary course of business" with terms substantially similar to those granted to nonpolitical debtors of similar credit risk; and
- The debtor has made all reasonable efforts to retire the debt; and
- The creditor has pursued remedies in a manner similar to those used to seek payment from nonpolitical debtors. 100.7(a)(4) and 114.10.

3. Excess Campaign Funds

Contributions received which, in the candidate's view, exceed the amount of funds needed to defray campaign expenditures may be used for the following purposes:

- Future election. 110.3(a)(2)(iii) and (iv).
- Defrayal of Federal officeholder expenses.
- Donations to charity.
- Unlimited contributions to national, State or local party political committees.
- Repayment of loans made by candidate to his/her committee.
- Any lawful purpose, except personal use.[1] 113.2.

Committee assets, such as office equipment, may be treated as excess campaign funds. AOs 1977-1 and 1980-14.

4. Termination by Candidate Committee

Who Is Eligible to Terminate

- An authorized committee may terminate its registration (and reporting obligation) only when all its debts and obligations have been extinguished and after it no longer intends to receive any contributions or make any expenditures.
- A principal campaign committee may terminate only when it has satisfied these same requirements and when all the debts of other authorized committees have been extinguished. 102.3.

How to Terminate

Authorized committees, including the principal campaign committee, may terminate their reporting status at any time by filing a Termination Report. It may be filed on FEC Form 3 or by a written statement containing the same information. 102.3(a). The Termination Report must disclose:

- All receipts and disbursements not previously reported, including an accounting of the retirement of all debts; and
- The disposition of all residual funds.

5. Termination by FEC

The Commission, upon its own initiative or upon the request of a political committee, may administratively terminate a committee's reporting obligations if the committee's financial activity has been minimal during the previous year. For details on administrative termination, consult 102.4.

[1] The ban on using excess funds for personal use does not apply to candidates who were Members of Congress on January 8, 1980.

SAMPLES OF COMPLETED FEC FORMS

Part Two presents samples of completed FEC forms to show how authorized candidate committees fulfill their registration and reporting obligations. The line-by-line instructions that are normally printed on the back of FEC forms appear on the facing page of the completed forms in this Part. Certain lines of the instructions are sometimes shaded to draw attention to a specific type of entry on the form. The marginal notes refer to pages of the Guide where a term or procedure is explained or where a transaction is disclosed a second time on another schedule in the report.

GENERAL

WHO MUST FILE FEC FORM 2

Each individual who is a candidate for Federal office must file FEC FORM 2 or a letter containing the same information within 15 days of becoming a candidate. An individual becomes a candidate for Federal office whenever any of the following events occur:

1) The individual has received contributions aggregating in excess of $5,000 or made expenditures aggregating in excess of $5,000;
2) The individual has given his or her consent to another person to receive contributions or make expenditures on behalf of that individual and such person has received contributions aggregating in excess of $5,000 or made expenditures aggregating in excess of $5,000;
3) The aggregate of contributions received in 1 and 2 above combined exceeds $5,000 or the aggregate of expenditures made in 1 and 2 above combined exceeds $5,000.

The definition of "contribution" and "expenditure" does not include funds received and payments made solely for the purpose of determining whether an individual should become a candidate. Activities permissible under this exemption include, but are not limited to, expenses incurred for: conducting a poll, telephone calls, and travel, to determine whether an individual should become a candidate. The individual must keep records of all funds received and payments made. If the individual subsequently becomes a candidate, the funds received and payments made are contributions and expenditures subject to the limitations, prohibitions and requirements of the Act. These contributions and expenditures must be reported with the first report filed by the principal campaign committee of the candidate, regardless of the date the funds were received or payments made. This exemption does not include funds received or payments made for general public political advertising; nor does this exemption include funds received or payments made for activities designed to amass campaign funds that would be spent after the individual becomes a candidate.

WHEN TO FILE

FEC FORM 2 must be filed within 15 days after an individual becomes a candidate (i.e., exceeds the $5,000 threshold as stated in 1, 2 and 3 above).

WHERE TO FILE (See also instructions for Line 7 below.)

- Candidates seeking nomination or election as a Representative in or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to the Congress of the United States file with the Clerk of the House of Representatives, 1036 Longworth House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515;

- Candidates seeking nomination or election to the United States Senate file with the Secretary of the Senate, 119 D Street, N.E., Washington, D.C. 20510;

- Candidates seeking nomination or election to the offices of the President or Vice President file with the Federal Election Commission, 1325 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20463;

- All candidates must also file a copy of this Statement with the Secretary of State (or appropriate State officer) in any State where the candidate seeks election or, in the case of Presidential candidates, where the candidate's committee makes expenditures.

CANDIDATE DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

The candidate is personally responsible for the timely and complete filing of this Statement and for the accuracy of any information contained in it.

Any candidate who receives a contribution, obtains a loan or makes a disbursement in connection with his or her campaign is considered to have received the contribution, obtained the loan or made the disbursement as an agent of his or her authorized committee(s).

When an individual becomes a candidate, all funds received, loans obtained or disbursements made prior to becoming a candidate in connection with his or her campaign are considered to have been received, obtained, or made as an agent of his or her authorized committee(s) and must be reported in the first report filed by the candidate's principal campaign committee.

LINE BY LINE INSTRUCTIONS

LINE 1 Print or type complete name and mailing address of the candidate.

LINE 2 Candidates who have never run before, who are running in a different district, or who are seeking a different Federal office should leave this blank. When their Statement has been received, they will be assigned an identification number. Candidates who are seeking reelection, and candidates who have terminated a previous candidacy but are now running again for the same seat, should use their original identification number.

LINES 3-5 Provide the requested information.

LINE 6 Each candidate for Federal office (other than a nominee for the office of Vice President) must designate in writing a political committee to serve as his or her principal campaign committee. The name of the principal campaign committee must include the name of the candidate. The principal campaign committee must file a Statement of Organization (FEC FORM 1) within 10 days of designation by the candidate and must file reports of receipts and disbursements. See instructions for FEC FORM 1 for further details. On Line 6, the candidate must indicate the year of the election and the full name and mailing address of the candidate's principal campaign committee. If the candidate is running in a Special Election, the candidate must note that the designation is for a Special Election under the "Year of Election." If the candidate also runs in the "Regular" November General Election or in the primary for the November General Election, the candidate must file an additional FEC FORM 2 and indicate the year of the election on the appropriate line. Any such candidate may designate the same principal campaign committee for the Special Election and Regular Primary and General Elections.

LINE 7 A candidate may designate additional political committees to serve as authorized committees to accept contributions or make expenditures on behalf of the candidate. The name of any committee authorized by a candidate must include the name of the candidate. For Line 7, the candidate must fill in the name and mailing address of any authorized committee(s). If necessary, additional sheets or FEC FORM 2s may be attached. The FEC FORM 2 for the authorized committee must be filed with the principal campaign committee. All authorized committees must file a Statement of Organization (FEC FORM 1) within 10 days of designation by the candidate. This Statement must be filed with the candidate's principal campaign committee. See instructions for FEC FORM 1 for further details. The principal campaign committee must file a copy of the Statement of Candidacy and the Statement of Organization for the authorized committee with the appropriate office listed above, under "Where to File."

The Candidate must sign the Statement of Candidacy.

FEC FORM 2 (3/80)

INSTRUCTIONS FOR PREPARING FEC FORM 1

LINE 1 Print or type full name and mailing address of the committee. The name of a principal campaign committee or other authorized committee must include the name of the candidate who authorized the committee. A political committee which is not an authorized committee can not include the name of any candidate in its name, except that a delegate committee must include the word "delegate(s)" in its name and may also include the name of the presidential candidate which it supports. A political committee established solely to draft an individual or to encourage an individual to become a candidate may include the name of the individual in the name of the committee, provided the committee's name clearly indicates that it is a draft committee. The name of a separate segregated fund must include the full name of its connected organization. Any abbreviation or acronym used by the fund must also be reported.

LINE 2 State the date the group or organization became a political committee. If this filing is an amendment, note the date of the change in information.

LINE 3 Only committees which have previously filed a Statement of Organization should fill in this block with the number which was originally assigned to the committee. All new committees will be assigned identification numbers when the completed statement has been received.

LINE 4 All political committees registering for the first time check "NO". Committees which have previously filed FEC FORM 1 and are now submitting changes or corrections check "YES". If "YES" is checked, complete Lines 1 through 4. With respect to Lines 5-9 include only the change(s) in information previously submitted.

LINE 5 Check and fill out ONE of the six sections as follows:

(a) All principal campaign committees check (a) and fill in the corresponding information for the candidate under (b).

(b) All other authorized committees check (b) and fill in the corresponding information for the candidate.

(c) A committee supporting/opposing a single Federal candidate which is not authorized by a candidate checks (c), and includes the candidate's name on the line provided. Delegate and draft committees must check (c), and provide the name of the candidate supported.

(d) All national, State and subordinate committees of a political party check (d) and fill in the corresponding information.

(e) All separate segregated funds check (e). A separate segregated fund is a political committee established, financed, maintained, or controlled by a corporation, labor organization, membership organization, cooperative or trade association.

(f) A committee supporting/opposing more than one Federal candidate and which is not a separate segregated fund nor a political party committee checks box (f).

LINE 6 Political committees must list all affiliated committees and connected organizations (defined below) as follows:

- Principal campaign committees list all other committees authorized by the same candidate.
  Under "Relationship," write "affiliated."
- Political committees authorized by the same candidate (other than the principal campaign committee) list the principal campaign committee authorized by the same candidate.
  Under "Relationship," write "affiliated."
- Political committees which have been established, financed, maintained, or controlled by the highest level parent organization (i.e., the corporation, labor organization, membership organization, cooperative or trade association) list:
  (a) The name of the parent organization.
  Under "Relationship," write "connected."
  AND
  (b) The name of any other political committee(s) established, financed, maintained, or controlled by the same parent organization or by a subsidiary, branch, or State, local, or other subordinate unit of the same parent organization.
  Under "Relationship," write "affiliated."
- Political committees which have been established, financed, maintained, or controlled by a subsidiary, branch, or State, local, or other subordinate unit of an organization list:
  (a) The name of the subsidiary, branch, or State, local or other subordinate unit and the name of the parent organization of which it is a part.
  Under "Relationship," write "connected."
  AND
  (b) The name of the highest level political committee sponsored by the parent organization.
  Under "Relationship," write "affiliated."
- State party committees list any subordinate committees (i.e., any county, district or local committee) under the control or direction of the State committee.
  Under "Relationship," write "affiliated."
- Subordinate State party committees list the State party committee.
  Under "Relationship," write "affiliated."

Separate segregated funds must check the most appropriate box for the type of "connected organization."

NOTE: The term "connected organization" means any organization which is not a political committee but which directly or indirectly establishes, administers, or financially supports a political committee. A connected organization may be a corporation (including a corporation without capital stock), a labor organization, a membership organization, a cooperative, or a trade association. The definition of "affiliated committee" is contained at 11 CFR 100.5 (g) of the Commission's regulations.

LINE 7 The name, address, and committee position or title of the custodian of the committee's books and records must be entered on Line 7. The telephone number is optional, but is helpful in expeditiously resolving potential filing problems. If the treasurer is the custodian of records, the term "treasurer" is sufficient for Line 7.

LINE 8 The name and address of the committee's treasurer must be entered on Line 8. The name and address of any designated agent (e.g., assistant treasurer) must also be included on Line 8. Every political committee must have a treasurer and may designate an assistant treasurer who shall assume the duties and responsibilities of the treasurer, in the event the treasurer is unavailable. The Commission recommends that each political committee designate an assistant treasurer because no contribution or expenditure may be accepted or made by or on behalf of a political committee at a time when there is a vacancy in the office of the treasurer. No expenditure may be made for or on behalf of a political committee without the authorization of its treasurer or another agent authorized orally or in writing by the treasurer.

LINE 9 The committee must provide the name and mailing address of any bank, repository, or depository where the committee holds funds. Each political committee must have a checking account or transaction account at one of its depositories. All receipts of a political committee must be deposited into a designated campaign depository. All disbursements must be made by check or similar drafts drawn on an account at a designated campaign depository, except for expenditures of $100 or less made from a petty cash fund.

TREASURER'S RESPONSIBILITIES

The treasurer of the political committee must preserve a copy of the Statement of Organization and each amendment for a period of not less than 3 years after the date of filing. The treasurer of the political committee is personally responsible for the timely and complete filing of this Statement and for the accuracy of any information contained in it.

Submit additional information on separate continuation sheets appropriately labeled and attached to this Statement of Organization. Indicate in the appropriate section when information is continued on separate page(s).

WHERE TO FILE

The original Statement of Organization (FEC FORM 1) and all amendments must be filed with the appropriate office as follows:

— The principal campaign committee of a candidate for the House of Representatives and political committees which support or oppose only candidates for the House file with the Clerk of the House, 1036 Longworth House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515.

— The principal campaign committee of a candidate for the Senate and political committees which support or oppose only candidates for the Senate file with the Secretary of the Senate, 119 D Street, N.E., Washington, D.C. 20510.

— An authorized committee which is not the principal campaign committee of a candidate files with the principal campaign committee which must forward a copy to the appropriate office listed herein.

— All other committees, including the principal campaign committee of a candidate for the office of President or Vice President, file with the Federal Election Commission, 1325 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20463.

Authorized committees of candidates for the House of Representatives and for the Senate must also file a copy of this Statement with the Secretary of State (or the appropriate State officer) of the State in which nomination or election is sought. Authorized committees of candidates for the office of President or Vice President must also file a copy of this Statement in each State in which the committee makes expenditures. Political committees other than authorized committees must also file a copy of this Statement in the State in which the committee has its headquarters.

The Treasurer must sign the Statement of Organization.

FEC FORM 1 (3/80)

INSTRUCTIONS FOR PREPARING FEC FORM 3

WHO MUST FILE

A political committee designated in writing by a candidate for the House of Representatives or Senate to serve as his or her principal campaign committee is required to file periodic Reports of Receipts and Disbursements on FEC FORM 3.

Any other political committee authorized in writing by a candidate for the House of Representatives or Senate to receive contributions or make expenditures on the candidate's behalf is required to file FEC FORM 3 with the principal campaign committee. The principal campaign committee must compile and consolidate the reports required to be filed with it. These consolidated reports must include: the candidate's activity, reports submitted to the principal campaign committee by any other authorized committees, and the principal campaign committee's own activity. This consolidation must be made on FEC FORM 3Z.

ALL POLITICAL COMMITTEES AUTHORIZED IN WRITING BY A CANDIDATE FOR THE OFFICE OF PRESIDENT OR VICE PRESIDENT MUST FILE ON FEC FORM 3P.

ALL POLITICAL COMMITTEES OTHER THAN THOSE AUTHORIZED BY A CANDIDATE MUST FILE ON FEC FORM 3X.

WHEN TO FILE

In any calendar year in which there is a "Regular" November General Election for which the candidate is seeking nomination for election or election, the candidate's principal campaign committee must file the following reports on FEC FORM 3:

— Quarterly reports must be filed no later than April 15, July 15, October 15 and January 31 of the following calendar year. Each such report must disclose all transactions from the last report filed through the last day of the calendar quarter. A quarterly report is not required to be filed if a Pre-election Report is required to be filed during the period beginning on the 5th day and ending on the 15th day after the close of the calendar quarter.

— A 12 Day Pre-election Report must be filed no later than the 12th day before any primary or general election in which the candidate seeks election and must include all transactions from the closing date of the last report filed through the 20th day before the election. A 12 Day Pre-election Report sent by certified or registered mail must be mailed no later than the 15th day before the election.

— A 30 Day Post-general Election Report must be filed no later than 30 days after the general election and include transactions from the closing date of the last report filed through the 20th day after the general election.

In any other calendar year, the following reports are required:

— A Mid Year Report must be filed no later than July 31 and include transactions beginning January 1 and ending June 30.

— A Year End Report must be filed no later than January 31 of the following calendar year and include transactions beginning July 1 and ending December 31.

A document is timely filed upon delivery to the appropriate office (see "Where To File") by the close of the prescribed filing date or upon deposit as registered or certified mail in an established U.S. Post Office and postmarked no later than midnight of the day the report is due, except that a Pre-election Report so mailed must be postmarked no later than midnight of the 15th day before the date of the election. Reports and statements sent by first class mail must be received by the appropriate office by the close of business of the prescribed filing date to be timely filed.

WHERE TO FILE

An original report and any amendments to an original report must be filed as follows:

— The principal campaign committee of a candidate for the House of Representatives must file with the Clerk of the House, 1036 Longworth House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515. Other authorized committees of the candidate must file with the principal campaign committee.

— The principal campaign committee of a candidate for the Senate must file with the Secretary of the Senate, 119 D Street, N.E., Washington, D.C. 20510. Other authorized committees of the candidate must file with the principal campaign committee.

A copy of each report filed by the principal campaign committee must be filed with the Secretary of State (or appropriate State officer) of the State in which nomination or election is sought.

OVERVIEW OF THE RECORDKEEPING AND REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

A political committee may use any recordkeeping or accounting system which will enable it to comply with the Act. The Commission recommends that the recordkeeping or accounting system of a political committee keep a separate accounting for each of the various categories of receipts and disbursements on the Detailed Summary Page. This separate accounting will assist the political committee in filling out the reporting forms, since separate reporting schedules are required for each category. The reporting schedules should be filled out first so that the totals can be derived for each category. The total figures should be carried forward to the Detailed Summary Page and then (where appropriate) from the Detailed Summary Page to the Summary Page.

TREASURER'S RESPONSIBILITIES

A copy of this Report must be preserved by the treasurer of the political committee for a period of not less than three years from the date of filing. The treasurer of the political committee is personally responsible for the timely and complete filing of the report and for the accuracy of any information contained in it.

LINE BY LINE INSTRUCTIONS

It is recommended that committees complete the Detailed Summary Page before completing the Summary Page.

LINE 1 Print or type the complete name and mailing address of the political committee.

LINE 2 Enter the FEC Identification Number assigned to the committee.

LINE 3 If this is an original report, check the "NO" box. If this is an amendment to a previous report, check the "YES" box.

LINE 4 Check the appropriate boxes. If the report is a 12 Day Pre-election or 30 Day Post-general Election Report, supply the type of election (primary, general, convention, special or run-off), the date of the election, and the State in which the election is held. In addition, check the appropriate box(es) which indicate which election this report contains activity for. For example, if a political committee is raising funds to pay off primary debts and simultaneously raising funds for the general election, check both the "Primary Election" box and the "General Election" box. If a political committee is raising funds for a primary election which is part of a special election, check the "Primary Election" box and the "Special Election" box.

LINE 5 Enter the coverage dates for this report. All activity from the ending coverage date of the last report filed must be included.

LINE 6(a) Transfer the amounts from Column A and Column B of Line 11(e) of the Detailed Summary Page to the corresponding columns on Line 6(a).

LINE 6(b) Transfer the amounts from Column A and Column B of Line 20(d) of the Detailed Summary Page to the corresponding columns on Line 6(b).

LINE 6(c) For both Column A and Column B subtract Line 6(b) from 6(a) to derive the figures for 6(c).

LINE 7(a) Transfer the amounts from Column A and Column B of Line 17 of the Detailed Summary Page to the corresponding columns on Line 7(a).

LINE 7(b) Transfer the amounts from Column A and Column B of Line 14 of the Detailed Summary Page to the corresponding columns on Line 7(b).

LINE 7(c) For both Column A and Column B subtract Line 7(b) from 7(a) to derive the figures for Line 7(c).

LINE 8 Transfer the total amount of cash on hand at the close of the reporting period from Line 27 of the Detailed Summary Page to Line 8.

LINE 9 Transfer the total amount of debts and obligations owed TO the committee from Schedule C or D.

LINE 10 Transfer the total amount of debts and obligations owed BY the committee from Schedule C or D.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR DETAILED SUMMARY PAGE – FEC FORM 3

An authorized committee must report the total amount of receipts and disbursements during the reporting period and during the calendar year for each category of receipts and disbursements on FEC FORM 3. The committee's full name and the coverage dates for the report must be entered in the appropriate blocks. If there are no receipts or disbursements for a particular category for a reporting period or calendar year, enter "0".

To derive the "Calendar Year-to-Date" figure for each category, the political committee should add the "Calendar Year-to-Date" total from the previous report to the "Total This Period" from Column A for the current report. For the first report filed for a calendar year, the "Calendar Year-to-Date" figure is equal to the "Total This Period" figure.

LINE 11(a) Enter the total amount of contributions (other than loans) from individuals, partnerships, and other persons who are not political committees on Line 11(a). For each such person who has made one or more contributions during the calendar year aggregating in excess of $200, the committee must provide on Schedule A the identification (full name, mailing address, occupation and name of employer of the person), date and amount of each contribution aggregating in excess of $200, the aggregate year-to-date total and whether the contribution is for a primary, general, or other election. Each additional contribution from any such person must be separately itemized. If a contribution is received from a business entity or is drawn on what is or appears to be a business account, the committee must determine that the contribution is not from a corporation, government contractor, or other prohibited source. A contribution from a partnership may not exceed $1,000 per election and must be attributed to each partner in accordance with 11 CFR 110.1(e) of the Commission regulations. The total amount of all contributions from individuals/persons other than political committees not itemized during the reporting period on Schedule A must be entered on the Memo Entry Line.

LINE 11(b) Enter the total amount of contributions (other than loans) from political party committees on Line 11(b). These contributions must be itemized on Schedule A, regardless of the amount. For each contribution, provide the identification (full name and address of the committee), date and amount of the contribution, the aggregate year-to-date total and whether the contribution is for a primary, general or other election.

LINE 11(c) Enter the total amount of contributions (other than loans) from other political committees on Line 11(c). These contributions must be itemized on Schedule A, regardless of the amount. For each contribution, provide the identification (full name and address of the committee), date and amount of the contribution, the aggregate year-to-date total, and whether the contribution is for a primary, general or other election.

LINE 11(d) Enter the total amount of contributions (other than loans) from the candidate on Line 11(d). If the candidate makes one or more contributions during the calendar year aggregating in excess of $200, the committee must provide on Schedule A the identification (full name, mailing address, occupation and name of employer), date and amount of each contribution aggregating in excess of $200, and the aggregate year-to-date totals.

LINE 11(e) For both Column A and Column B add Lines 11(a), 11(b), 11(c) and 11(d) to derive the figures for Line 11(e).

LINE 12 Enter the total amount of transfers from other authorized committees of the same candidate on Line 12. Loans and loan repayments received from other authorized committees of the same candidate must be included on this line and not on Line 13(b). These transfers must be itemized on Schedule A, regardless of the amount. For each transfer, provide the identification (full name and mailing address of the committee), date and amount of the transfer and the aggregate year-to-date total.

LINE 13(a) Enter the total amount of loans made or guaranteed by the candidate on Line 13(a). This category includes personal loans from the candidate and loans from lending institutions which are secured, endorsed or guaranteed by the candidate and used in connection with the candidate's campaign for Federal office. All loans made, guaranteed or endorsed by the candidate must be itemized on Schedule A, regardless of the amount. For each loan, provide the identification (full name, mailing address, occupation and name of employer), date and amount of the loan and the aggregate year-to-date total (see also instructions for Schedule C). NOTE: A loan guaranteed by the candidate and any other person(s) must be apportioned between the candidate on Line 13(a) and the other person(s) on Line 13(b).

LINE 13(b) Enter the total amount of all other loans received on Line 13(b). This category includes all other types of loans. These loans must be itemized on Schedule A, regardless of the amount. For each loan provide the identification (full name, mailing address, and, where applicable, occupation and name of employer) of the person making the loan, date and amount of the loan, the aggregate year-to-date total and whether the loan is for a primary, general or other election. The committee must also provide on Schedule C the identification of any endorser or guarantor and the amount of the endorsement or guarantee (see also instructions for Schedule C).

LINE 13(c) For both Column A and Column B add Lines 13(a) and 13(b) to derive the figures for Line 13(c).

LINE 14 Enter the total amount of offsets to operating expenditures (including refunds, rebates, and returns of deposits) on Line 14. For each person who provides rebates, refunds and other offsets to operating expenditures aggregating in excess of $200 for the calendar year, the committee must provide on Schedule A the identification of the person, date and amount of each receipt aggregating in excess of $200 and the aggregate year-to-date total.

LINE 15 Enter the total amount of other receipts (including dividends and interest) on Line 15. For each person who provides any dividends, interest or other receipts aggregating in excess of $200 for the calendar year, the committee must provide on Schedule A the identification of the person, the date and amount of each receipt aggregating in excess of $200 and the aggregate year-to-date total.

LINE 16 For both Column A and Column B add Lines 11(e), 12, 13(c), 14 and 15 to derive the figures for Line 16.

LINE 17 Enter the total amount of operating expenditures on Line 17. Examples of operating expenditures are: media advertising, newspaper advertising, salaries, travel, rent and telephones. For each person who receives payments for operating expenditures aggregating in excess of $200 for the calendar year, the committee must provide on Schedule B the full name and mailing address, date and amount of each operating expenditure aggregating in excess of $200 and the purpose of the expenditure (see also instructions for Schedule B).

LINE 18 Enter the total amount of transfers to other authorized committees of the same candidate on Line 18. These transfers must be itemized on Schedule B, regardless of the amount. For each transfer, provide the full name and mailing address of the recipient committee, date and amount and state that the purpose of the disbursement is a "transfer".

LINE 19(a) Enter the total amount of loan repayments of loans made or guaranteed by the candidate on Line 19(a). All loan repayments must be itemized on Schedule B, regardless of the amount. For each person who receives a loan repayment, provide the full name, mailing address, date, amount and state that the purpose of the disbursement is a "loan repayment" (see also instructions for Schedule C).

LINE 19(b) Enter the total amount of loan repayments of all other loans on Line 19(b) (see instruction for Line 19(a) for other reporting requirements).

LINE 19(c) For both Column A and Column B add Lines 19(a) and 19(b) to derive the figures for Line 19(c).

LINE 20(a) Enter the total amount of contribution refunds to individuals/persons other than political committees on Line 20(a). For each person who receives a refund of a contribution which was previously itemized on Schedule A, the committee must provide on Schedule B the full name, mailing address, date, amount and state that the purpose of the disbursement is a "contribution refund".

LINE 20(b) Enter the total amount of contribution refunds to political party committees on Line 20(b). All such refunds must be itemized on Schedule B, regardless of the amount. For each contribution refund, provide the full name, mailing address, date, amount, and state that the purpose of the disbursement is a "contribution refund".

LINE 20(c) Enter the total amount of contribution refunds to other political committees on Line 20(c) (see instructions for Line 20(b) for other reporting requirements).

LINE 20(d) For both Column A and Column B add Lines 20(a), 20(b) and 20(c) to derive the figures for Line 20(d).

LINE 21 Enter the total amount of other disbursements on Line 21. For each such person who receives any disbursement(s) not otherwise disclosed where the aggregate amount or value is in excess of $200, the committee must provide the full name and address of each such person, together with the date, amount and purpose of any such disbursement.

LINE 22 For both Column A and Column B add the totals on Lines 17, 18, 19(c), 20(d) and 21 to derive the figures for Line 22.

LINE 23 Enter the total amount of cash on hand at the beginning of the reporting period. This amount includes: currency; balance on deposit in banks, savings and loans institutions, and other depository institutions; traveler's checks owned by the committee; certificates of deposit, treasury bills and other committee investments valued at cost.

LINE 26 Transfer the amount from Column A of Line 22 to Line 26.

LINE 27 Subtract Line 26 from Line 25 to derive cash on hand at the close of the reporting period for Line 27.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR PREPARING SCHEDULE A

The Detailed Summary Page is broken down into various categories of receipts. Use Schedule A to list each receipt required to be itemized. DO NOT combine more than one category of receipts on the same Schedule A. Instead, use a separate Schedule A for each category of receipts. The line number of the Detailed Summary Page to which each Schedule A pertains should be identified in the upper right corner of each Schedule. In addition, the committee's full name must be entered in the appropriate block. For each receipt required to be itemized during the reporting period, the political committee must provide the identification, date and amount of the receipt, and the aggregate year-to-date total.

The term "identification" means, in the case of an individual, his or her full name, including: first name, middle name or initial, if available, and last name; mailing address; occupation; and the name of his or her employer; and, in the case of any other person, the person's full name and address.

The occupation and name of employer is only required to be provided for receipts from individuals. "Occupation" means the principal job title or position of an individual and whether or not self-employed. "Employer" means the organization or person by whom an individual is employed, and not the name of his or her supervisor.

Authorized committees must indicate the election for which the receipt was given. In the event the receipt was given for an election other than the current primary or general election, the "Other" block must be checked and the type of election specified (i.e., "General 1976", "Primary 1978"). The "receipt for" block does not apply to political committees which are not authorized committees. The "aggregate year-to-date" total must be given for each receipt and must equal the total amount that the person has given to the committee for that particular category of receipts for the calendar year. If a receipt is the only receipt from a person during the calendar year, the aggregate year-to-date total must still be entered.

The "Total This Period" amount (the last line on Schedule A) must be added to all other receipts for that category which are not itemized and carried forward to Column A of the corresponding line of the Detailed Summary Page.

If a contribution is received from a business entity or is drawn on what is or appears to be a business account, the political committee must determine that the contribution is not from a corporation, government contractor, or other prohibited source. If the contribution is from a prohibited source, it must be immediately refunded.

Absent evidence to the contrary, any contribution made by check, money order, or other written instruments must be reported as a contribution by the last person signing the instrument prior to delivery to the committee.

A contribution which represents contributions by more than one person must indicate on the written instrument, or on an accompanying written instrument signed by all contributors, the amount to be attributed to each contributor.

MISCELLANEOUS

Contributions In-Kind. Contributions in-kind (i.e., goods and services provided to a political committee) are treated as any other contribution and must be reported and itemized under the appropriate category of receipts. For example, a contribution in-kind from an individual must be itemized on Schedule A and reported under the category for "Contributions From Individuals/Persons Other Than Political Committees". The value of each contribution in-kind must be entered in the "Amount of Each Receipt This Period" column. The amount or value of the contribution in-kind is the difference between the usual and normal charge for the goods or services at the time of the contribution and the amount charged the political committee. The "aggregate year-to-date" total must include the total amount of all contributions which the person has contributed to the committee during the calendar year. The item must be labeled "contribution in-kind" and include the nature of the contribution (e.g., consulting, polling, etc.). Each contribution in-kind must also be reported in the same manner as an operating expense on Schedule B and included in the total for "Operating Expenditures" (NOTE: A political committee which makes a contribution in-kind only reports it as a disbursement and itemizes the transaction on Schedule B with a notation "contribution in-kind". The purpose of the expenditure (e.g., consulting, polling, etc.) and the aggregate year-to-date amount must also be provided. The committee receiving the contribution in-kind must report it as both a receipt and an expenditure.)

Contributions of stocks, bonds, art objects, and other similar items to be liquidated must be reported as follows:

(1) If the item has not been liquidated at the close of the reporting period, the committee must record as a memo entry (not as cash) on Schedule A the item's fair market value on the date received, including the name and mailing address (and when in excess of $200, the occupation and name of the employer) of the contributor. The total amount of items to be liquidated must be entered under "Total This Period" on the last line of Schedule A. This amount must NOT be carried forward to the Detailed Summary Page.

(2) When the item is sold, the committee must report the proceeds and include them in the appropriate categories on the Detailed Summary Page. It must also report the (i) name and mailing address (and, where in excess of $200, the occupation and name of employer) of the purchaser on Schedule A, if purchased directly from the committee (the purchaser is considered to have made a contribution to the committee); and (ii) the identification of the original contributor on Schedule A.

Exempt Legal or Accounting Services. Legal or accounting services rendered to or on behalf of an authorized committee of a candidate or any other political committee are not contributions or expenditures and are not, therefore, subject to the contribution limitations and prohibitions, if the person paying for the services is the regular employer of the individual rendering the services and if the services are solely to ensure compliance with the Act.

Legal or accounting services rendered to or on behalf of any political committee of a political party are not contributions or expenditures and are not, therefore, subject to the contribution limitations and prohibitions, if the person paying for the services is the regular employer of the individual rendering the services and the services are not attributable to activities which directly further the election of any designated candidate for Federal office.

The political committee must itemize as a memo entry on a separate Schedule A each person who provides legal or accounting services to the political committee in an aggregate value or amount in excess of $200 within the calendar year, together with the date of receipt and amount or value of the exempt legal or accounting services, and state that the receipt is for "exempt legal or accounting service". The total amount of exempt legal or accounting services must be entered on the line for "Total This Period" on the bottom of Schedule A, but the total amount may not be carried forward to any category or line number on the Detailed Summary Page.

Earmarked Contributions. For each earmarked contribution received (regardless of the amount), the political committee must report on Schedule A the name and address of the original contributor, the date of receipt and the amount of the contribution and, if the original contributor makes contributions aggregating in excess of $200 to the political committee during the calendar year, the occupation and name of employer. If the contribution passes through the political committee's account and is forwarded to another political committee or Federal candidate, the conduit committee must disclose each contribution, regardless of the amount, on both Schedule A and Schedule B and include the amount under the appropriate category of receipts and disbursements. If the contribution was passed on in the form of the contributor's check, the conduit must disclose each contribution on a separate Schedule A attached to the conduit's (intermediary) next report and the amounts of such contributions are not required to be included in the totals for the appropriate categories of receipts and disbursements. If a political committee is not a conduit, but is the intended recipient, the political committee must report each conduit through which the earmarked contribution passed, including the name and address of the conduit, and whether the contribution was passed on in cash, by the contributor's check, or by the conduit's check. If the conduit exercises direction and control over the contribution, the earmarked contribution must also be attributed to the contribution limitations of the conduit.

Checks Returned Due to Insufficient Funds. If a contributor's check is returned to the political committee due to insufficient funds and the receipt of the check was previously reported, the political committee must report the return under the appropriate category of receipts as a negative entry and net out the amount of the check from the total for that category. If the original receipt of the check was itemized on Schedule A, the return of the check must also be itemized as a negative entry on Schedule A. If the receipt of the check was never reported, the return of the check should not be reported.

Check Refunded to the Committee. A contribution may be refunded to the committee in one of two ways:

(1) The original check is returned uncashed. If the contribution was reported, the refund should be reported as a negative entry on Schedule B, and the amount of the contribution refund subtracted from the disbursement totals on the line of the Detailed Summary Page that it was reported on.

(2) The original check is not returned and the refund is made by a check from the recipient of the contribution. Such a transaction should be reported as a receipt on Schedule A for the appropriate line of the Detailed Summary Page. This procedure is applicable regardless of whether the amount refunded is the full or only a partial refund of the contribution or whether the contribution was previously reported.

Best Efforts. When the treasurer of a political committee shows that best efforts have been used to obtain, maintain and submit the information required, the committee shall be considered in compliance with the Act.

With regard to reporting the identification of each person whose contribution(s) to the committee and its affiliated committees aggregate in excess of $200 in a calendar year, the treasurer will not be deemed to have exercised best efforts to obtain the required information unless he or she has made at least one effort per solicitation either by written request or by an oral request documented in writing to obtain the information from the contributor. The effort shall consist of a clear request for the information (i.e., name, mailing address, occupation, name of employer) which informs the contributor that the reporting of the information is required by law.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR PREPARING SCHEDULE B

The Detailed Summary Page is broken down into various categories of disbursements. Use Schedule B to list each disbursement required to be itemized. DO NOT combine more than one category of disbursements on the same Schedule B. Instead, use a separate Schedule B for each category of disbursements. The line number of the Detailed Summary Page to which each Schedule B pertains should be identified in the upper right corner of each Schedule. In addition, the committee's full name must be entered in the appropriate block.

For each disbursement required to be itemized during the reporting period, the political committee must provide the full name, mailing address, date, amount, and purpose of the disbursement.

The term "purpose" means a brief statement or description of why the disbursement was made. Examples of adequate descriptions include the following: dinner expenses, media, salary, polling, travel, party fees, phone banks, travel expenses, travel expense reimbursement, and catering costs. However, statements or descriptions such as "advance", "election day expenses", "other expenses", "expense reimbursement", "miscellaneous", "outside services", "get-out-the-vote", and "voter registration", would not meet the requirement for reporting the purpose of an expenditure. If the disbursement is a "loan repayment", "contribution refund", or other similar category of disbursement (other than an operating expenditure), the name of the category of disbursement (i.e., "loan repayment", etc.) is sufficient to meet the requirement for reporting the purpose of an expenditure.

For disbursements that are contributions to Federal candidates, or authorized committees, the committee must include under "Purpose of Disbursement" the name of the candidate and office sought (including State and congressional district, where applicable) and the aggregate year-to-date total of contributions made to that candidate or committee in the purpose of disbursement box.

For each contribution to a Federal candidate or authorized committee indicate in the election check-off box the election for which the contribution was made. In the event the contribution was made for an election prior to the current election cycle, the "Other" block must be checked and the type of election specified (e.g., "General 1976", "Primary 1978"). The election check-off boxes provided for each itemized entry on Schedule B should not be used when itemizing operating expenditures.

The "Total This Period" amount (the last line on Schedule B) must be added to all other disbursements for that category which are not itemized and carried forward to Column A of the corresponding line of the Detailed Summary Page.

CONTRIBUTION IN-KIND RECEIVED

Contributions in-kind received by the committee which are itemized on Schedule A must also be itemized as an operating expenditure on Schedule B. In addition, in the "Purpose of Disbursement" box include the notation "Contribution In-Kind", and the nature of the expenditure (e.g., consulting, polling, etc.).

INSTRUCTIONS FOR PREPARING SCHEDULE C

A loan is a contribution at the time it is made and is a contribution to the extent it remains unpaid. A LOAN WHICH EXCEEDS THE CONTRIBUTION LIMITATIONS IS UNLAWFUL WHETHER OR NOT IT IS REPAID. The aggregate amount loaned to a candidate or committee by another individual or political committee, when added to other contributions from that individual or political committee to that candidate or committee, shall not exceed the contribution limitations. A loan, to the extent it is repaid, is no longer a contribution. All loans to a political committee (regardless of amount) must be disclosed on the first report filed with the Commission after the date the loan is made.

When filling out Schedule C, the committee must enter its full name in the box at the top of the page.

DO NOT combine loans owed TO the committee with those owed BY the committee on the same Schedule C. Instead, use a separate Schedule C.

LOANS OWED BY THE COMMITTEE

When a loan is received by the committee, it must be itemized on Schedule A and must also be disclosed on Schedule C (see also instructions for Schedule A for itemizing loans received by the committee). For each loan owed BY the reporting committee at the close of the reporting period, the committee must report certain basic information on Schedule C in the appropriate boxes: (1) full name, mailing address and zip code of the creditor; (2) if the committee is an authorized committee, the election to which the loan applies (i.e., primary, general or other); (3) the original amount of the loan; (4) the cumulative payment to date on the loan; and (5) the outstanding balance at the close of the reporting period (i.e., the remaining unpaid portion of the loan).

Certain additional information must be entered on Schedule C in the box entitled TERMS: (1) if an intermediary is reported as the source of the loan, the original source of the loan (which must be disclosed in the first box for endorsers and guarantors with a notation that the person identified is the original source); (2) the date the obligation was incurred; (3) the date the loan is due or the amortization schedule (if there is no due date or amortization schedule, enter "None" on the appropriate line); (4) the actual rate of interest charged on each loan (if the loan does not bear an interest rate, enter "None" on the appropriate line); and (5) check the box if the loan has been secured.

In instances where the loan has endorsers or guarantors, the following information must be supplied: (1) the identification of each endorser or guarantor, and (2) the amount of the endorsement or guarantee outstanding at the close of the reporting period. The term "identification" means (a) in the case of an individual, his or her full name, mailing address, occupation, and name of employer; and (b) in the case of any other person, the person's full name and address.

Loans owed BY the committee must continue to be reported on each subsequent report until repaid. When a payment is made to reduce or extinguish the amount of a loan owed BY the committee, the payment must be itemized on Schedule B, reported on the appropriate line of the Detailed Summary Page, and included in the "Cumulative Payment to Date" column on Schedule C. If any extension for repayment is granted, this should be reported on the first report after the extension is made.

If a loan is settled for less than the reported amount, the reporting committee must include a statement as to the circumstances and conditions under which the debt or obligation was extinguished and the amount paid. A loan owed BY a political committee which is forgiven or settled for less than the amount owed is a contribution. The total amount of loans owed BY the committee at the close of the reporting period must be entered on the line for "Total This Period" on the bottom of the last page and transferred to Line 3 of the last page of Schedule D. If no debts or obligations are reported on Schedule D, carry the outstanding balance forward to the Summary Page.

LOANS OWED TO THE COMMITTEE

When a loan is made by the committee, it must be itemized on Schedule B and must also be disclosed on Schedule C (see also instructions for Schedule B for itemizing loans made by the committee). For each loan owed TO the committee at the close of the reporting period, the committee must report certain basic information on Schedule C in the appropriate boxes: (1) the full name, mailing address and zip code of each debtor; (2) if the loan was made by a political committee other than an authorized committee and was made to a Federal candidate or authorized committee, the election to which the loan applies (i.e., primary, general or other); (3) the original amount of the loan; (4) the cumulative payment to date on the loan; and (5) the outstanding balance at the close of the reporting period (i.e., the remaining unpaid portion of the loan).

Certain additional information must be entered on Schedule C in the box entitled TERMS: (1) the date the obligation was incurred; (2) the date the loan is due or the amortization schedule (if there is no due date or amortization schedule, enter "None" on the appropriate line); (3) the actual rate of interest charged on the loan (if the loan does not bear an interest rate, enter "None" on the appropriate line); and (4) check the box if the loan has been secured. Loans owed TO the committee must continue to be reported on each subsequent report until repaid. When a payment is received to reduce or extinguish a loan owed TO the committee, the payment must be itemized on Schedule A, reported on the appropriate line of the Detailed Summary Page, and included in the "Cumulative Payment to Date" column on Schedule C. If any extension for repayment is granted or made, this should be reported on the first report after the extension is made.

The total amount of loans owed TO the committee at the close of the reporting period must be entered on the line for "Total This Period" on the bottom of the last page and transferred to Line 3 of the last page of Schedule D. If no debts or obligations are reported on Schedule D, carry the outstanding balance forward to the Summary Page.

MISCELLANEOUS

Loans by Financial Institutions. A loan of money by a State bank, a federally chartered depository institution (including a national bank) or a depository institution whose deposits and accounts are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, or the National Credit Union Administration is not a contribution by the lending institution if the loan is made in accordance with applicable banking laws and regulations and is made in the ordinary course of business. A loan will be deemed to be made in the ordinary course of business if it: bears the usual and customary interest rate of the lending institution for the category of loan involved; is made on a basis that insures repayment; is evidenced by a written instrument; and is subject to a due date or a amortization schedule.

Candidate Loans. If a candidate personally receives a loan from a financial institution or other person, which is loaned or given to the campaign or used in the campaign, the candidate's principal campaign committee must disclose all information with respect to that loan. The financial institution or other person must be listed as the original source of the loan and the candidate listed as an intermediary. Loans obtained by an individual prior to becoming a candidate for use in connection with that individual's campaign must be reported as an outstanding loan owed TO the lender by the candidate's principal campaign committee, if the loan is outstanding at the time the individual becomes a candidate

Loans by Political Committees. If a political committee makes a loan TO any person, the loan shall be subject to the contribution limitations. Repayment to the political committee of the principal amount of the loan is not a contribution by the debtor to the lender committee. The repayment must be made with funds which are permissible under the Act. The payment of interest to the committee by the debtor is a contribution only to the extent that the interest paid exceeds a commercially reasonable rate prevailing at the time the loan is made. All payments of interest must be made from funds which are permissible under the Act.

Endorsers and Guarantors. A loan is a contribution by each endorser or guarantor. Each endorser or guarantor shall be deemed to have contributed that portion of the total amount of the loan for which he or she agreed to be liable in a written agreement. Any reduction in the unpaid balance of the loan shall reduce proportionately the amount endorsed or guaranteed by each endorser or guarantor in such written agreement. In the event that such agreement does not stipulate the portion of the loan for which each endorser or guarantor is liable, the loan shall be considered a loan by each endorser or guarantor in the same proportion to the unpaid balance that each endorser or guarantor bears to the total number of endorsers or guarantors.

Loan Repayments. Each committee must disclose all loan payments received or made by the committee. When a loan repayment is received by a committee, the repayment must be itemized on Schedule A and included in the "Cumulative Payment to Date" column on Schedule C. When a loan repayment is made by a committee, the repayment must be itemized on Schedule B and included in the "Cumulative Payment to Date" column on Schedule C. For a political committee other than an authorized committee, the total amount of loan repayments received and the total amount of loan repayments made must be disclosed on the appropriate lines of the Detailed Summary Page. For authorized committees, the total amount of loan repayments of loans made or guaranteed by the candidate and the total amount of loan repayments of all other loans must be disclosed on the appropriate lines of the Detailed Summary Page.

Each endorser or guarantor shall be deemed to have contributed that portion of the total amount of the loan for which he or she agreed to be liable in a written agreement. Any reduction in the unpaid balance of the loan shall reduce proportionately the amount endorsed or guaranteed by each endorser or guarantor in such written agreement. In the event that such agreement does not stipulate the portion of the loan for which each endorser or guarantor is liable, the loan shall be considered a loan by each endorser or guarantor in the same proportion to the unpaid balance that each endorser or guarantor bears to the total number of endorsers or guarantors.

Loan Repayments. Each committee must disclose all loan payments received or made by the committee. When a loan repayment is received by a committee, the repayment must be itemized on Schedule A and included in the "Cumulative Payment to Date" column on Schedule C. When a loan repayment is made by a committee, the repayment must be itemized on Schedule B and included in the "Cumulative Payment to Date" column on Schedule C. For a political committee other than an authorized committee, the total amount of loan repayments received and the total amount of loan repayments made must be disclosed on the appropriate lines of the Detailed Summary Page. For authorized committees, the total amount of loan repayments of loans made or guaranteed by the candidate and the total amount of loan repayments of all other loans must be disclosed on the appropriate lines of the Detailed Summary Page.

Carry outstanding balance only to LINE 3, Schedule D, for this line. If no S... carry forward to appropriate line of Summary.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR PREPARING SCHEDULE D

When filling out Schedule D, the committee must enter its full name in the box at the top of the page.

DO NOT combine debts and obligations owed to the committee with those owed by the committee on the same Schedule D. Instead, use a separate Schedule D.

DEBTS AND OBLIGATIONS OWED BY THE COMMITTEE (Other Than Loans)

For debts and obligations owed BY the reporting committee at the close of the reporting period and which are required to be disclosed, the committee must report the full name and mailing address of each creditor, the amount of the debt outstanding at the beginning of the period, the amount of the debt or obligation incurred this period (including any finance charges), the payment(s) this period to retire the debt or obligation, the outstanding balance at the close of the reporting period and the nature or purpose of the debt and obligation. The terms "nature" or "purpose" mean a brief statement or description of why the debt or obligation was incurred (e.g., media, salary, polling, supplies, mailing).

A written contract (including a media contract), promise, or agreement to make an expenditure which has not been paid for by the committee is an expenditure as of the date the contract, promise or obligation is made and is subject to the reporting requirements. Accounts payable and written contracts, promises, or agreements to make expenditures, in amounts of $500 or less, need not be disclosed until outstanding for sixty days or more.

Debts and obligations owed BY the committee must continue to be reported on each subsequent report until extinguished or settled in a manner permitted by Federal Election Commission regulations (see 11 CFR 114.10 for settlement of corporate debts). When a payment is made to reduce or extinguish an obligation owed BY the committee, the payment must be itemized on Schedule B, reported on the appropriate line of the Detailed Summary Page, and included in the "Payment This Period" column on Schedule D. If a debt or obligation is settled for less than the reported amount or value, the reporting committee must include a statement as to the circumstances and conditions under which the debt or obligation was extinguished and the amount paid. A debt owed BY a political committee which is forgiven or settled for less than the amount owed is a contribution unless the debt is forgiven or settled in accordance with 11 CFR 114.10. The extension of credit by any person for a length of time beyond normal business or trade practice is a contribution, unless the creditor has made a commercially reasonable attempt to collect the debt. The total amount of debts and obligations owed BY the committee during the reporting period must be entered at the bottom of the last page under "Total This Period" and added to the total loans owed BY the committee from Schedule C. The total amount of debts and obligations owed BY the committee (including loans) must be carried forward to the Summary Page.

DEBTS AND OBLIGATIONS OWED TO THE COMMITTEE (Other Than Loans)

For each debt and obligation owed TO the committee at the close of the reporting period, the committee must report: the full name and mailing address of each creditor, the amount of the debt outstanding at the beginning of the period, the amount of the debt or obligation incurred this period, the payment(s) this period to retire the debt or obligation, the outstanding balance at the close of the reporting period and the nature or purpose of the debt or obligation. The terms "nature" or "purpose" mean a brief statement or description of why the debt or obligation was incurred (e.g., media, salary, polling, supplies, mailing).

Debts and obligations owed TO the committee must continue to be reported on each subsequent report until extinguished or settled in a manner permitted by Federal Election Commission regulations (11 CFR 114.10 for settlement of corporate debts). When a payment is received to reduce or extinguish a debt or obligation owed TO the committee, the payment must be itemized on Schedule A, reported on the appropriate line of the Detailed Summary Page, and included in the "Payment This Period" column on Schedule D. Written contracts or agreements (such as signed pledge cards), or oral promises to make contributions are not required to be reported. The total amount of debts and obligations owed TO the committee during the reporting period must be entered at the bottom of the last page under "Total This Period" and added to the total loans owed TO the committee from Schedule C. The total amount of debts and obligations owed TO the committee (including loans) must be carried forward to the Summary Page.

APPENDICES

A. Definitions

The following terms used in this Guide have specific meanings:

Act — The Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, as amended in 1974, 1976, 1977 and 1979. 100.18.

Advisory Opinions (AOs) — Commission responses to questions it has received relating to specific situations.

Affiliated Committees — All authorized committees of the same candidate (or all committees established, financed, maintained or controlled by the same corporation, labor organization, person or group). 100.5(g).

Authorized Agent — Any person, including the candidate, who has been authorized to raise contributions or make expenditures on the candidate's behalf. 101.2 and 109.1(b)(5).

Authorized Committee — Any political committee, including a principal campaign committee, authorized in writing by the candidate to receive contributions and make expenditures on his/her behalf. 100.5(f)(1). No political committee which supports or has supported more than one candidate may be designated as an authorized committee except committees designated for joint fundraising purposes. 102.13(c)(1).

Bank — A State bank, a Federally chartered depository institution (including a national bank) or a depository institution insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation or the National Credit Union Administration. 100.7(b)(11), 100.8(b)(12) and 103.2.

Candidate — An individual who seeks nomination for election or election to Federal office. Candidate status is triggered only after the individual, or another agent acting on the individual's behalf, has raised contributions or made expenditures either of which aggregate in excess of $5,000. 100.3.

Clearly Identified Candidate — A candidate whose name, photograph or drawing appears in communications or whose identity is apparent by unambiguous reference. 100.17, 106.1(d) and 109.1(b)(3).

Contribution — Anything of value given to (or provided on behalf of) a candidate or political committee to influence a Federal election. 100.7(a)(1).

Disbursement — Any purchase or payment made by a political committee.

Earmarked Contribution — A contribution that the contributor directs (either orally or in writing) to a candidate or authorized committee through an intermediary or conduit. 110.6. See also Appendix D.

Election — Any one of several processes by which an individual seeks nomination for election, or election, to Federal office. They include: a primary election, a runoff election, a party caucus or convention that has authority to select the nominee, a general election and a special election held to fill a vacant seat. 100.2.

Expenditure — A purchase or payment made to influence a Federal election. 100.8(a)(1).

Federal Election — An election (defined above) for Federal office.

Federal Office — The office of President or Vice President of the United States, Senator or Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, the United States Congress. 100.4.

Independent Expenditure — An expenditure for a communication expressly advocating the election or defeat of a clearly identified candidate that is not made with the cooperation or prior consent of, or in consultation with, or at the request or suggestion of, any candidate or his/her authorized committees or agents. 100.16 and 109.1(a). See also Appendix C.

In-Kind Contribution — Services, goods or property offered free or at less than the usual charge to a political committee. 100.7(a)(1)(iii).

Memo Entry — Supplemental data on a reporting schedule for which the dollar amount is not incorporated into the total figures for the cash balance, receipts or disbursements.

Multicandidate Committee — A political committee with more than 50 contributors that has been registered for at least 6 months and, with the exception of State party committees, has made contributions to 5 or more candidates for Federal office. 100.5(e)(3).

National Committee — An organization responsible for the day-to-day operation of a political party at the national level by virtue of the party's bylaws. 9008.2(e).

Nonelection Year — A year in which there is no regularly scheduled Federal election.

Non-Federal Election — An election for a State or local office.

Party — A political party, or other association, committee or organization which nominates a candidate to Federal office. 100.15.

Party Committee — A political committee which represents a political party and is part of the official party structure at the national, State or local level. 100.5(e)(4).

Person — An individual, partnership or any group of persons (such as a political committee, corporation or labor organization), not including the Federal government. 100.10.

Personal Funds — Any assets to which a candidate has legal or rightful title at the time he/she becomes a candidate. Personal funds include: personal salary, dividends, income from trusts established before candidacy, personal gifts which had been customarily received before candidacy, etc. Personal funds include funds from immediate family members only if the candidate had legal right of access to or control over the family funds at the time he/she became a candidate. 110.10(b).

Political Committee — A group that meets one of the following conditions:

1. Any authorized committee, regardless of how much it receives or expends, once the individual who authorized the committee becomes a candidate.
2. Any State party committee or non-party committee, club, association, or other group of persons that receives contributions or makes expenditures aggregating in excess of $1,000 during a calendar year.
3. Any local unit of a political party (excluding a State committee) if it:
   - Receives contributions aggregating over $5,000 during a calendar year;
   - Makes contributions or expenditures aggregating over $1,000 during a calendar year; or
   - Makes payments, aggregating over $5,000 during a calendar year, for activities exempted from the definition of contribution (under 11 CFR 100.7(b)(9), (15) and (17)) and expenditure (under 11 CFR 100.8(b)(10), (16) and (18)).
4. Any separate segregated fund, regardless of how much it receives or expends. 100.5.

Principal Campaign Committee — An authorized committee designated by a Federal candidate as the principal committee to raise contributions and make expenditures for his/her campaign. 100.5(e)(1).

Receipt — Anything of value (money, goods, services or property) received by a political committee.

Special Election — An election held to fill a vacancy in the House of Representatives or the Senate. A special election may be a primary, general or runoff election. 100.2(f).

Transfer — The movement of funds between authorized committees of the same candidate (or among affiliated committees or among committees within the same party). Although such transfers are unlimited, they are reportable and may count toward the threshold for determining whether a committee is a political committee. 102.6(a).

Separate Segregated Fund — A political committee established by a corporation, labor organization or incorporated membership organization. A separate segregated fund accepts voluntary contributions that are used to make contributions to or expenditures on behalf of Federal candidates and other political committees. 114.1(a)(2)(iii).

B. Chart on Contribution Limits

Contributions from	To Candidate or His/Her Authorized Committee	To National Party Committee[1] Per Calendar Year[2]	To Any Other Committee Per Calendar Year	Total Contributions Per Calendar Year
individual	$1,000 Per Election[3]	$20,000	$5,000	$25,000
Multicandidate Committee[4]	$5,000 Per Election	$15,000	$5,000	No Limit
Party Committee	$1,000 or $5,000[5] Per Election	No Limit	$5,000	No Limit
Republican or Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee,[6] or the National Party Committee, or a Combination of Both	$17,500 to Senate candidate per calendar year in which candidate seeks election	Not Applicable	Not Applicable	Not Applicable
Any Other Committee or Group[7]	$1,000 Per Election	$20,000	$5,000	No Limit

[1] For purposes of this limit, each of the following is considered a national party committee: a party's national committee, the Senate Campaign committees and the National Congressional committees, provided they are not authorized by any candidate.

[2] Calendar year extends from January 1 through December 31. Individual contributions made or earmarked to influence a specific election of a clearly identified candidate are counted as if made during the year in which the election is held.

[3] Each of the following elections is considered a separate election: primary election, general election, run-off election, special election, and party caucus or convention which has authority to select the nominee.

[4] A multicandidate committee is any committee with more than 50 contributors which has been registered for at least 6 months and, with the exception of State party committees, has made contributions to 5 or more Federal candidates. A candidate committee should check with the FEC to determine whether a contributing committee has qualified as a multicandidate committee.

[5] Limit depends on whether or not party committee is a multicandidate committee.

[7] Group includes an organization, partnership or group of persons.

C. Independent Expenditures

Note that this appendix may be reproduced and distributed by the candidate or his/her committee to anyone who requests FEC guidelines on independent expenditures.

1. Definition

What Is an Independent Expenditure?

An independent expenditure is an expenditure for communications expressly advocating the election or defeat of a clearly identified candidate[1] which is NOT made with the cooperation or consent of, or in consultation with, or at the request or suggestion of, any candidate or any of his/her agents[2] or authorized committees. 100.16. Independent expenditures may be made without limit since they do not count against the contribution limits established by the Federal Election Campaign Act. (However, contributions made to an independent expenditure committee are subject to monetary limits, as explained below.)

What Is NOT an Independent Expenditure?

Contact with Candidate or Authorized Committees

Any expenditure made in cooperation, consultation, or in concert with the candidate or as a result of his/her request or suggestion is considered an in-kind contribution (not an independent expenditure) by the person making the expenditure and counts against his/her contribution limit. 100.16 and 109.1 (b)(4).

Note that when an individual merely requests and receives from a candidate FEC guidelines on independent expenditures (such as this section of the Guide), he/she is not considered to have coordinated, cooperated or consulted with the candidate. 109.1(b)(4)(ii).

Candidate-Prepared Materials

Any expenditure to finance the dissemination or re-publication of a broadcast or other campaign materials prepared by a candidate (or his/her agent or authorized committee) is considered an in-kind contribution by the person making the contribution. 109.1(d).

Expenditure by Committee Employee

An expenditure made on behalf of a candidate by a current or former officer or employee of that candidate's committee or by a person who has received compensation or reimbursement from the campaign is presumed not to be independent. 109.1(b)(4)(i)(B).

Examples

An individual not previously involved in the campaign of candidate Smith purchases a newspaper advertisement supporting Smith without ever contacting the candidate or any of his campaign staff. The purchase is considered an independent expenditure. If, however, before purchasing the ad, the individual asks candidate Smith or his campaign staff how he may help the campaign or when Smith wants a newspaper ad to appear, the individual makes an in-kind contribution. Or, if the individual buys a campaign advertisement using text actually prepared by Smith's campaign staff, the individual makes an in-kind contribution to the candidate. (An in-kind contribution, when combined with all other contributions from the same individual, is limited to $1,000 per election.)

2. Public Notice Required

Any independent expenditure must include a clear and conspicuous public notice in the printed material or during the broadcast. The notice must:

- State that the communication is not authorized by the candidate or his/her authorized committee; and
- Identify the name of the person or committee that financed the expenditure. 109.3; 2 U.S.C. §441d(a).

3. Reporting Requirements

Political Committee

A reporting political committee must itemize each independent expenditure it makes exceeding $200 (Schedule E of the appropriate reporting form) at the end of any reporting period in which the expenditure is made. In addition, the total of all independent expenditures of $200 or less must be reported but not itemized. 104.3(b)(3)(vii).

Any Other Person

Any other person (individual, partnership or group of individuals) must file a report with the FEC (on FEC Form 5) at the end of the first reporting period in which independent expenditures aggregate more than $250 and in any succeeding period during the same year in which additional independent expenditures of any amount are made. 109.2(a).

Last-Minute Independent Expenditures

An independent expenditure of $1,000 or more made between 2 and 20 days before an election must be reported within 24 hours after it is made to the FEC, the Secretary of the Senate or the Clerk of the House, as appropriate. 104.5(g). A political committee must disclose a last-minute independent expenditure a second time on a Schedule E filed with its next scheduled report. The committee may, if it wishes, note on Schedule E that the expenditure was previously reported.

4. Contents of Report

Itemized reports on independent expenditures must include the information described below:

Certification

The report must include a certification, under penalty of perjury, that the expenditure meets the above standard of independence. 104.3(b)(3)(vii)(B) and 109.2(a)(1).

Information About Expenditure

The report must include the date, amount and purpose of the expenditure (i.e., a brief description of why the disbursement was made) and must indicate whether the expenditure is in support of or in opposition to the candidate(s). 104.3(b)(3)(vii) and 109.2(a). When an

[1] A "clearly identified candidate" is one whose name, photograph or drawing appears or whose identity is apparent by unambiguous reference. 100.17.

[2] "Agent" means any person who has actual oral or written authority, either express or implied, to make or to authorize the making of expenditures on behalf of a candidate, or means any person who has been placed in a position within the campaign organization where it would reasonably appear that in the ordinary course of campaign-related activities he or she may authorize expenditures. 109.1 (b)(5).

independent expenditure is made on behalf of more than one clearly identified candidate, the expenditure must be allocated among the candidates in proportion to the benefit they are expected to receive. 106.1(a).

Information About Candidate

The report must include the name and address of the candidate(s) and the office sought. 104.3(b)(3)(vii) and 109.2(a)(1).

Information About Person Making Expenditure

When a person other than a political committee makes the expenditure, the report must include the person's name, address, occupation and employer, if any. 109.2(a)(1).

Information About Payee

The report must include the name and address of the person to whom the expenditure was made. 104.3(b)(3)(vii) and 109.2(a)(1).

Information About Other Contributors

The report must include the name, mailing address, occupation and name of employer of each person who contributes more than $200 to the person who makes the expenditure. 104.3(a)(4)(i) and 109.2(a)(1).

5. Contributions to Persons Making Independent Expenditures

All the limitations and prohibitions on contributions to candidates also apply to contributions made to persons making independent expenditures. In addition, when a person contributes to a political committee that makes independent expenditures exclusively in support of, or in opposition to, a single candidate, that contribution is subject to the per candidate, per election, limit. For example, Citizen Smith contributes $500 to an independent committee established to make independent expenditures exclusively on behalf of Candidate Jones. Smith may then contribute only $500 more to Candidate Jones since Smith's total contributions benefiting Jones would then reach the $1,000 per candidate, per election, limit. 110.1(h).

D. Earmarked Contributions

1. Definition

An earmarked contribution is one which the contributor directs (either orally or in writing) to a candidate (or his/her authorized committee) through an intermediary or conduit. The intermediary may be a nonregistered entity, such as an individual or a group, or a registered political committee with regular reporting obligations. 110.6(b).

2. Earmarking and Contribution Limits

An earmarked contribution is considered to have been made by the original contributor, thus counting against his/her contribution limit for that candidate. The contribution limitation of the conduit or intermediary is not affected unless the conduit exercises direction or control over the choice of the intended recipient of the contribution. In that case, the contribution is considered to have been made by both the original contributor and the intermediary or conduit and counts against both of their contribution limits. 110.6(d).

3. Forwarding Earmarked Contributions

The intermediary or conduit must forward an earmarked contribution to the recipient committee within 10 days. The report to the recipient (described below) must be forwarded along with the contribution. 102.8(a), (c) and 110.6(c)(2).

4. Reporting Earmarked Contributions

The reporting of earmarked contributions is required[1] by all intermediaries, including registered political committees and nonregistered entities (such as individuals, partnerships and groups of people), and by the recipients. 110.6(c).

Reports by Political Committee Serving as Intermediary

A political committee which is an intermediary or conduit of an earmarked contribution must disclose the earmarked contribution, regardless of amount, on two separate reports: the next regularly scheduled report, and a special report to the recipient. 110.6(c).

Next Regular Report

The conduit's next regularly scheduled report must indicate whether the earmarked contribution was:

- Passed through the conduit's account, in which case each contribution must be reported on the regular reporting schedules of itemized receipts and disbursements (Schedules A and B of the appropriate reporting form); or
- Passed on in the form of the original contributor's check, in which case each earmarked contribution must be reported on a separate Schedule A, filed as a memo entry.* 110.6(c)(1)(i) and (ii).

Report to Recipient

A report to the intended recipient must also be made at the time the conduit or intermediary passes the contribution on to the recipient. 110.6(c)(2).

Contents of Reports on Earmarked Contributions

The above reports by the intermediary or conduit must contain all of the following information:

- The name and mailing address of the original contributor and, if the contribution is from an individual and exceeds $200 per year when combined with other contributions from the same donor, the contributor's occupation and the name of his/her employer;
- The amount of the earmarked contribution;
- The date the contribution was received by the conduit;

* See Definitions in Appendix A.

[1] However, the reporting rules for earmarked contributions do not apply when a person merely physically transfers to a candidate checks (or other written instruments) which, in the aggregate, do not exceed $1,000 in a calendar year. 110.6(c)(5). Also, the rules do not apply to authorized agents of a committee.

- The intended recipient as designated by the contributor;
- The date the contribution was passed on to the intended recipient; and
- Whether the contribution was passed on in cash, by the contributor's check or by the conduit's check. 110.6(c)(4).

Report by Intermediary That Is Not a Registered Committee

If the intermediary or conduit is not a registered committee (that is, the intermediary is an individual, a partnership or a group of individuals), the above reports must be filed by letter with the Federal Election Commission (not the Clerk of the House or the Secretary of the Senate) and with the intended recipient. 110.6(c)(1).

Report by Recipient

The recipient of an earmarked contribution also has a reporting obligation. The authorized committee must identify each conduit through which an earmarked contribution has passed. Additionally, the recipient committee must fully itemize any earmarked contribution that, when combined with other contributions from the same donor, exceeds $200 per year. 110.6(c)(3).

E. Assistance from the FEC

1. Additional Materials Available

- The Federal Election Campaign Act
- FEC Regulations
- Registration Forms
- Reporting Forms
- Calendar of Reporting Dates
- Annual Report (available through the Government Printing Office)
- Record, a monthly newsletter
- Campaign Guide for Party Committees
- Campaign Guide for Corporations and Labor Organizations
- House and Senate Bookkeeping Manual
- The FEC and the Federal Campaign Finance Law, an informational brochure for the general public

2. Clarification of the Law

General Assistance

General information is available from the FEC's Office of Public Communications. Call the Commission in Washington, D.C. at 523-4068 or call toll free 800/424-9530. Phone calls from Alaska or Hawaii may be made collect to the Commission (202/523-4068).

Advisory Opinions

For more complicated questions relating to the application of the law to a specific, factual situation, any person affected by the Act may request an advisory opinion in writing. Requests for opinions and the opinions themselves are made public. A requesting person who in good faith acts in accordance with the advisory opinion will not be subject to any penalties with regard to the activity in question. 112.2 and 112.5.

3. Public Records

The Public Records Office makes documents available for public inspection and copying. They include microfilm and paper copies of reports and statements filed by Federal candidates and committees (1972-present).[1]

Other documents available for public inspection in the Public Records Office include: advisory opinions, completed (closed) compliance cases, FEC press releases, audit reports, statistical summaries of campaign finance reports and computer indexes and cross indexes to locate documents. A list of prices charged for reproducing Commission information is available upon request. For information on ordering documents, phone Public Records (523-4181 or toll free 800/424-9530).

4. Index of Multicandidate Committees

Because political committees may not accept contributions exceeding the donor's contribution limit, a candidate committee should verify that a committee contributing in excess of $1,000 per election has qualified as a multicandidate committee and thus is permitted to contribute up to $5,000 per election. A candidate committee may check a contributing committee's status by consulting the Index of Multicandidate Political Committees, maintained and updated monthly by the Public Records Office. For information on ordering the Index, phone Public Records at the numbers listed above.

Proposed Amendments to Draft CSSB 87, An Act Relating to Campaign Financing

(1) Insert at the end of AS 15.13.040(d)(2) the following:

"any independent expenditure in the amount of $1,000 or more within 30 days of an election shall be reported to the commission within 72 hours of the expenditure."

(2) Amend AS 15.13.110 by adding a new subsection as follows:

"(f) The campaign treasurer of each candidate, and group receiving a contribution or a loan in the amount of $750 or more shall report the contribution or loan to the commission by date, amount, contributor or lending institution within 72 hours of receipt by the candidate or campaign treasurer."

(3) Delete the following from AS 15.13.110(c):

(4) Amend AS 15.13.070(a) as follows:

"An individual or group [NO PERSON OR GROUP, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO ALL POLITICAL COMMITTEES, BUSINESSES, CORPORATIONS, AND LABOR UNIONS,] may not contribute [TO OR EXPEND] more than $1,000 a year to a single candidate [ON BEHALF OR IN OPPOSITION TO THE COMPETING CANDIDATES] for each elective office and may not contribute in the aggregate more than $10,000 a year to candidates, groups, or political parties generally. A political party and the subdivisions of a political party may not contribute in the aggregate more than $5,000 to each candidate for political office. Political parties and their subdivisions are [NOT SUBJECT TO THE LIMITATION PRESCRIBED IN THIS SUBSECTION, BUT THEY ARE] subject to the reporting requirements prescribed by AS 15.13.040(b) and 15.13.110. A group may not contribute more than $1,000 to a single candidate for political office and may not contribute more than $25,000 to influence elections generally. This [NOTHING IN THIS] chapter does not prohibit [PROHIBITS]

(1) a candidate from contributing more than $1,000 of personal funds [HIS OWN MONEY] to the [HIS OWN] campaign; or

(2) individuals or groups, including but not limited to all political committees, businesses, corporations, and labor unions, from contributing to or expending on behalf of a ballot proposition or question more than $1,000 a year and the [;HOWEVER, THESE] contributions and expenditures shall be reported under [IN ACCORDANCE WITH] AS 15.13.040 and 15.13.110.

MEMORANDUM
LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS OF ALASKA

TO: Senator Abood and Senate State Affairs Committee Members

DATE: February 8, 1985

FROM: Paula Ziegler

SUBJECT: Campaign financing legislation

As you will see from the attached position statement, "Election Laws and Procedures," the League of Women Voters of Alaska has considerable interest in the campaign reform legislation currently before the Senate State Affairs committee:

We favor CSSB 87, particularly where it incorporates changes recommended by the Alaska Public Offices Commission; the League is strongly supportive of that commission's continued existence and funding.

The League supports SB 131 also, as its intent and one of our stated campaign finance system goals are the same--"to combat corruption and undue influence."

SB 132 is not specifically addressed in the League position. We have no quarrel with the bill's intent, but a question does arise as to whether the provisions of AS 15.13.050 (b) and (c) are not overly restrictive in a state with the small population Alaska has. Would public interest or citizen's groups such as the League be barred from joining coalitions because League members were active in one of the other groups? Where the politically active population is small, the potential for overlapping group memberships is high. This might be taken into consideration by the committee.

The provisions of SB 133 appear to have been dealt with already in CSSB 87.

The League supports the concept of a campaign finance fund as espoused in SB 134, though it should be pointed out that if APOC is to administer such a fund, additional funding for APOC may be needed. The idea of a permanent fund application form check-off for contributions is innovative. We heartily endorse the idea of limiting expenditures, and the dollar amount selected fit our criteria of "high enough to be enforceable and to allow for candidate visibility and issue discussion, and not so low as to inhibit challengers."

Thank you for taking our views into consideration.

Election Laws & Procedures

STATEMENT OF POSITION: The League of Women Voters of Alaska believes that a voter registration system should encourage maximum interest and participation in the electoral process, be simple and efficient to administer, and should aid in preventing fraudulent voting practices. To achieve these objectives, the League supports:

--Voter identification
--Mandatory training of election officials
--A state voter education program

The League believes that a statewide preregistration system should reflect the above objectives and should:

--provide for permanent registration
--make registration easily accessible
--allow registration by mail
--permit registration as close to election day as possible
--provide for routine purging of registration rolls

Established 1968

The League of Women Voters of Alaska favors public disclosure of campaign contributions of money, goods or service , and believes that contributions and expenditures should be limited. Political campaigns also should be limited in length. We encourage broad-based contributions from the general public and the use of tax credits and deductions. We support the disclosure of financial interests of public officials, both elected and appointed. All disclosure reports should be compiled and published by an independent commission, which should have final responsibility for monitoring and enforcement.

The goal of a campaign finance system should be:
--to ensure the public's right to know
--to combat corruption and undue influence
--to enable candidates to compete more equitably for public office

To achieve these goals, we favor:
--Disclosure of campaign contributions and expenditures of hard cash monies, goods and services
--Limitations on the length of campaigns
--Broadening the base of campaign funding sources
--Disclosure of financial interests of elected and appointed officials
--Enforcement and monitoring by an independent commission which shall compile and publish disclosure reports

AMPLIFICATION: On the premise that high moral and ethical standards among public officials in all branches of government are essential to the conduct of free government, the League of Women Voters of Alaska adopted Election Laws and Procedures as a program item at its convention in 1973. At the same time, the League was studying campaign practices, with emphasis on the federal level, as part of a nationwide program.

The League's position on campaign financing reflects our continuing concern for open and honest elections and for maximum citizen participation in the political process. We therefore support broad-based citizen involvement in campaigns, including volunteer efforts and limited financial contributions. Recognizing, however, that limited private contributions alone cannot provide adequate funding, the League favors the use of public funds, in addition, to finance political campaigns.

Goals: "To enable candidates to compete more equitably for public office" reflects two distinct concerns: first, that differences in candidates' personal wealth and other financial resources not be a necessary consideration in seeking public office, and second, that insofar as possible there be an equalization of opportunity for challengers and incumbents.

Disclosure: "Disclosure" means disclosure of contributions before elections and disclosure of expenditures and other financial transactions by a stated deadline.

Limitations: The League believes that limits on contributions and expenditures should be realistic and reasonable: high enough to be enforceable and to allow both for discussion of the issues and for visibility of the candidates. Limits should not be so low as to affect challengers adversely.

"Contributions" refers to contributions in goods and services, such as office space and personnel, telephone and mail, use of credit cards, etc., as well as money.

Enforcement: An "independent commission" refers to an election commission to centralize reporting and overseeing of campaign receipts and expenditures of each candidate and to enforce the campaign financing laws. Such a commission must be adequately funded and staffed, with powers to investigate, to subpoena and to initiate court action against violators. Strong penalties should be provided for violations.

IN THE SENATE

SENATE BILL NO.

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled:

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 15.13.040(a) is amended to read:

(a) Each candidate shall make a full report, upon a form prescribed by the commission, listing the date and amount of all expenditures made by the candidate, the total amount of all contributions, including all funds contributed by the candidate [HIMSELF], and for all contributions in excess of $250 [$100] in the aggregate a year, the name, address, principal occupation, and employer of the contributor and the date and amount contributed by each contributor. The report shall be filed in accordance with AS 15.13.110 and shall be certified as correct under AS 15.13.060(a) [BY THE CANDIDATE OR CAMPAIGN TREASURER].

* Sec. 2. AS 15.13.040(b) is repealed and reenacted to read:

(b) Each group shall make a full report, upon a form prescribed by the commission, listing the date and amount of all expenditures made by the group, the total amount of all contributions, and for all contributions in excess of $250 in the aggregate a year, the name, address, principal occupation, and employer of the contributor and the date and amount contributed by each contributor. The report shall be filed in accordance with AS 15.13.110 and shall be certified as correct under AS 15.13.060(a).

* Sec. 3. AS 15.13.040(d) is amended to read:

(d) Every individual or [,] person and every [OR] group that is not required to register under AS 15.13.050 [MAKING A CONTRIBUTION OR EXPENDITURE] shall make a full report, upon a form prescribed by the commission, of the following contributions or expenditures:

(1) any contribution of cash, goods or services valued at more than $250 [$100] a year to any group or candidate; or

(2) any independent expenditure [WHATSOEVER] for advertising in newspapers, on radio or on television [;] or [,] for the publication, distribution or circulation of brochures, flyers, or other campaign material for or against any candidate, [OR] ballot proposition or question.

* Sec. 4. AS 15.13.040 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(g) As used in this section, an "independent expenditure" is a disbursement of funds made to support or oppose the election of a candidate or the passage of a ballot proposition or question not made with the cooperation, consent, or at the request of a candidate, a campaign committee or controlled group of a candidate, or a group that is supporting or opposing the candidate or ballot proposition or question for which the funds are disbursed.

* Sec. 5. AS 15.13.060(a) is amended to read:

Sec. 15.13.060. CAMPAIGN OFFICERS [TREASURERS]. (a) Each candidate may and each group shall appoint a campaign chairman. Each candidate may and each group shall appoint a campaign treasurer. The candidate, the campaign chairman or the campaign treasurer of a candidate, and the campaign chairman or the campaign treasurer of a group may certify [WHO IS RESPONSIBLE FOR RECEIVING, HOLDING, AND DISBURSING ALL CONTRIBUTIONS AND EXPENDITURES, AND FOR FILING] all reports and statements required by law. The campaign chairman and the campaign treasurer may be the same individual. A candidate who does not appoint a campaign chairman is the campaign chairman. A candidate who does not appoint a campaign treasurer is the campaign treasurer. [A CANDIDATE MAY BE A CAMPAIGN TREASURER.]

* Sec. 6. AS 15.13.060(b) is amended to read:

(b) Each group shall file the name and the address of its campaign chairman and its campaign treasurer with the commission at the time it registers with the commission under AS 15.13.050.

* Sec. 7. AS 15.13.060(c) is repealed and reenacted to read:

(c) An individual may not act as either a campaign chairman or a campaign treasurer of a candidate for state or for municipal office until the candidate has filed the name and the address of the campaign chairman or the campaign treasurer with the commission.

* Sec. 8. AS 15.13.060(d) is amended to read:

(d) In the case of the death, resignation or removal of a campaign chairman or a campaign treasurer of a group, the group [CANDIDATE] shall appoint a successor as soon as practicable and file the [HIS] name and address with the commission within 48 hours of the appointment. [THE CANDIDATE IS DISQUALIFIED WHEN HE HAS BEEN FOUND TO HAVE BEEN IN WILFUL VIOLATION OF THIS SUBSECTION].

* Sec. 9. AS 15.13.060(e) is amended to read:

(e) A campaign treasurer may appoint as many deputy campaign treasurers as the campaign treasurer [HE] considers necessary. The campaign treasurer [CANDIDATE] shall file the names and addresses of the deputy campaign treasurers with the commission.

* Sec. 10. AS 15.13.060(f) is amended to read:

(f) A [THE] candidate is responsible for the performance of the campaign chairman and of the [HIS] campaign treasurer and a campaign treasurer of a candidate or of a group is responsible for the performance of the deputy campaign treasurers [, AND ANY DEFAULT OR VIOLATION BY THE TREASURER ALSO SHALL BE CONSIDERED A DEFAULT OR VIOLATION

DRAFT

BY THE CANDIDATE IF HE KNEW OR HAD REASON TO KNOW OF THE DEFAULT OR VIOLATION].

* Sec. 11. AS 15.13.060 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(g) Contributions to a candidate may be received and expenditures of a candidate may be made only by the candidate, the campaign chairman, the campaign treasurer, or a deputy campaign treasurer of the candidate. Contributions to a group may be received and expenditures of a group may be made only by the campaign chairman, campaign treasurer, or a deputy campaign treasurer of the group.

* Sec. 12. AS 15.13.070(b) is amended to read:

(b) No contribution over $250 [$100] may be made in cash or by cash payment and it may not be accepted by or on behalf of a candidate.

* Sec. 13. AS 15.13.070(c) is amended to read:

(c) No expenditures over $250 [$100] may be made in cash or by cash payment unless a written receipt is obtained and filed with the commission.

* Sec. 14. AS 15.13.110(a) is amended to read:

(a) Each candidate and group shall make a full report in accordance with AS 15.13.040 during the period ending three days before the due date of the report and beginning on the last day covered by the most recent previous report, or, if a first report, all contributions received and expenditures made before three days before the due date of the report. The report shall be certified under AS 15.13.-060(a) and filed at the following times:

(1) 30 days before the election; however, this report is not required if the deadline for filing a nominating petition or declaration of candidacy is within 30 days of the election;

(2) one week before the election;

DRAFT

(3) 10 [TEN] days after the election; and

(4) 15 days after the end [DECEMBER 31] of each year for expenditures and contributions received which were not reported that year.

* Sec. 15. AS 15.13.110(b) is amended to read:

(b) Each contribution [OR EXPENDITURE] which exceeds $500 [$250] and which is received [MADE] within nine days [ONE WEEK] of the election shall be reported to the commission by date, amount, and contributor [OR RECIPIENT] within 48 [24] hours of receipt [OR EXPENDITURE] by a campaign officer described in AS 15.13.060(a) [THE CANDIDATE OR CAMPAIGN TREASURER].

* Sec. 16. AS 15.13.110(c) is amended to read:

(c) The reports of a campaign officer described in AS 15.13.-060(a) [CANDIDATES] shall be filed with the commission's central office. All reports required by this chapter shall be kept open to public inspection. Within 30 days after each election, the commission shall prepare a summary of each report which shall be made available to the public at cost upon request. Each summary shall use uniform categories of reporting.

* Sec. 17. AS 15.13.040(c) and AS 15.13.070(f) and (g) are repealed.

Policy Questions For Senate State Affairs Hearing--Jan. 31, 1984

SB 87 by Ray and Draft copy (former HB 165)

Policy Question #1 AS 15.13.40

Should the threshold for disclosure of itemized information about contributors be increased from the current $100?

SB 87 raises it to $500 for contributions and to $250 for expenditures.
Draft copy (former HB 165) raises both to $250.

Maybe while we have Theda Pittman from APOC here she would be willing to explain the current law and why she feels the threshold should be increased.

FOR: Reduces paperwork of candidate and APOC. APOC currently prints a list at the end of each year of all individuals and groups that gave over $250 to any candidate or cause. Candidates and groups must submit to APOC the names of those contributors who gave over $100 in aggregate in any one year. Candidates and groups must still maintain records of all contributions, they just don't have to submit as many names to APOC.

AGAINST: Decreases public disclosure. Not as much reporting.

* The public's right to know needs to be balanced against the burden on candidates, groups, and APOC. Contributions below $250 are generally not thought of as "buying" as much influence as larger contributions, therefore it is not as critical that smaller contributions be itemized by contributor.

POLICY #2 AS 15.13.70(b&c)

Currently no cash contributions over $100 may be made or received. No expenditures over $100 in cash may be made unless a written receipt is obtained and filed with APOC. Should this be changed?

Ask Theda why she supports raising the cash threshold to $250.

Cash is very hard to trace and strict limits should probably be maintained to prevent misuse. Oregon has a law which requires receipts for any expenditures over $50.

Senate State Affairs: SB 87
Theda Pittman, Exec. Dir.
Public Offices Commission

Thank you for this opportunity to review SB 87 which proposes numerous amendments to Alaska's Campaign Disclosure Law.

First, I'd like you to be aware of the fact that the Commission has a strong concern about the fact that no substantive amendments to AS 15.13 have become law in the last few years. Since 1980 there have been several major pieces of legislation proposed which have fallen prey to damaging amendments. Nonetheless the Commission remains willing to work with those who have new proposals to offer in hopes of accomplishing simplified reporting requirements which preserve the public's right to meaningful information about campaign finances.

The bill before you differs from the Commission's recommendations in that it proposes a maximum contribution of $2,500 rather than $2,000 in a calendar year; requires itemized reporting for contributors of $500 or less rather than for those who have given more than $250; and establishes a threshold of $250 for itemizing expenditures on candidate and group reports.

This bill also offers some excellent language making group registration requirements more specific and enumerating in more complete detail the information required on group and candidate reports.

The following are comments, questions, and possible suggestions about the proposed amendments.

Page 1, lines 25-26: ...AS 15.13.110 and shall be certified as correct by the campaign treasurer or chair of the group. Candidates can either sign their own reports or appoint a treasurer to do so. Groups are dependent on one individual if they are to submit timely reports; allowing a group chair to certify a report would alleviate that problem.

page 2, line 15: Presently the law requires identification of both occupation and employer of a contributor. If only one or the other is to be required, employer would be preferable because it is more specific.

page 2, lines 18-21: In 1981 the Commission discussed a similar proposal (for itemizing only expenditures over $250) with several treasurers of large campaigns. At that point in time, the treasurers felt that a requirement to report small expenditures as a separate sub-total would create more work than the present system of listing all expenditures. On a group report, the proposed language would mean that the group could give $250 contributions to numerous candidates without listing them since the money a group gives to a candidate is an expenditure of the group.

Page 3, lines 4-7: Language is not clear; both cash on hand and outstanding indebtedness are necessary if that's what this item means.

Page 3, section 5: 7 days and 10 days are too long to allow contributions to be held before they are refused; the different time periods are confusing.

Page 4, lines 8-10: Since Senate seats and statewide office terms are four years, the retention period should be four years.

Page 4, line 26 should read:
"that constitutes or would constitute a criminal violation of this chapter or a"

Page 5, line 6: require group statements of organization annually.

Page 5, line 3: require groups to list both campaign treasurer and chair.

Page 5, line 23: refers to a non-existent § .126. Also P. 7, line 26.

Page 6, lines 12-19: conduits may be a concept from federal law. The section is not self-explanatory and it's difficult to understand without further research.

Page 6, lines 20-23: The requirement that a group statement of organization be filed 30 days before the election will work a hardship on some legitimate municipal groups.

Page 8, lines 22-23: "... may not contribute [TO OR EXPEND] more than...." Consistent with the removal of expenditure limitations.

Page 9, line 29: The reference to "independent expenditure" is incongruous.

Page 11, line 8-9: "making a campaign contribution [OR EXPENDITURE] which exceeds the limitations of AS 15.13.070 [15.30.070(f)];" Consistent with removal of expenditure limitations.

Page 11, line 23 through Page 12, line 3: The need for a new civil penalty for incomplete reporting ("three times the amount") is difficult to judge. In the past year the Commission has collected substantial fines for incomplete reporting using the $10/day or $50/day rates in AS 15.13.125. If the omission has gone on for some time, the daily rate may create a larger fine; if the omission is a large one and it is discovered soon after the report was due, then the new proposal may create a larger fine.

Re: Report on Political Contributions

Dear Senator Ray:

During the 1984 political year in the State of Alaska several controversial issues were raised in public which dealt with political contributions. Among these were an oil field service company's payroll deduction plan, birthday party fund-raisers for Governor Sheffield, and contributions made by out-of-state donors.

Enclosed is our report which addresses our current statutes regarding political contributions and provides recommendations for change. We have analyzed activities of political action committees, state employees and elected officials as requested. We have attempted to utilize the existing Title 15 of the Alaska Statutes and make modifications where appropriate, and have recommended additional statutes be enacted. Comments and notable changes are briefly summarized as follows:

1. A.S. 15.13.010 through 15.13.030 would remain unchanged.

2. A.S. 15.13.040 should be deleted, and in its place we propose a new A.S. 15.13.040. Our proposed statute would require reportings of all contributions involving more than $500; would require reporting of expenditures in excess of $250; would require a reporting of persons who assisted candidates in obtaining credit, loaning money, or guaranty-ing or assuming a loan on behalf of a candidate to be reported; and, would require a candidate to determine whether to accept a contribution or not before the end of the reporting period during which t'e contribution was received. Additional civil damages provisions are imposed for violations of reporting requirements. In addition, we feel that our recommended substitute is more complete with respect to reporting requirements and would assist in tightening any vagueness which may exist in the current statute.

3. A. 15.13.045 would remain unchanged.

4. A. 15.13.050 would be deleted, and we recommend passage of a substitute provision. Our recommended A.S. 15.13.050 much more detailed than the current regulation, provides for more prompt reporting of the organization of a group, and identifies related or affiliated groups or persons; identifies what entity establishes, administers or controls the group; identifies the person who determines to whom the group makes contributions and for what purposes expenditures are made, and also makes provisions for identifying contributions made from groups located outside the State of Alaska (to address problems of out-of-state donors); and establishes the concept of a "conduit". A conduit is basically a person or entity which receives money from a source solely for the purpose of transferring it to a designated candidate or organization without exercising any discretion. In that situation, a conduit would not have to register the transfer with the commission, but the original transferors and the ultimate recipient of the contribution would have to make a report if the minimum amounts are involved. This conduit provision is suggested in response to the VECO situation.

5. A.S. 15.13.060 should be deleted. We recommend that our proposed A.S. 15.13.060 be adopted in its place. Our substitute legislation provides for a tighter control of campaign treasuries, including acceptance and expenditures by candidates. In addition, we recommend that it be made unlawful for a group to make a contribution or expenditure unless the group designates its treasurer at least 30 days prior to any election.

6. A.S. 15.13.070 should be modified. We recommend that the limitation on contributions be expanded to $2500 per year. Although we considered prohibiting contributions from labor unions and corporate entities, we concluded that to do so would stifle individual fund raising efforts by political candidates, would stifle election activity in general and would promote incumbents and wealthier candidates. Our recommendation also involves requiring the candidate or the campaign treasurer to make expenditures and accept contributions. Anonymous donations would be either donated to charity by the candidate or escheated to the state if the identity of the donor is unknown. Exemptions are retained for limits expended by candidates and political parties.

7. A.S. 15.13.080 should be amended to require reporting of contributions in cash, or in goods or services to be reported which are in excess of $500, instead of the current $250 limitation.

8. A.S. 15.13.090 and A.S. 15.13.100 would remain unchanged. We suggest consideration of setting a window from May 1 until July 1 to file for any elected state office. This would act to shorten the political season and cause a focussing on issues rather than endurance and finances.

9. A.S. 15.13.110 should be modified to the extent that contributions or expenditures exceeding $500 made within one week of an election must be reported to APOC within twenty-four hours of that receipt or expenditure by the candidate or campaign treasurer.

10. A.S. 15.13.120 through A.S. 15.13.125 would remain unchanged.

11. We recommend that a new section, which we have delineated as A.S. 15.13.126, be adopted. These provisions provide for disposition of surplus funds by candidates. Basically, candidates may apply campaign funds to reimburse themselves for campaign debts which were reported previously to the commission. Funds which remain in campaign treasuries following repayment of campaign debts must either be donated to a charity of the candidate's choice, their political party, or to either the state or local government. We feel this would assist in assuring the public that funds expended for political contributions were used for only that purpose in that the donors would be assured that the candidate would not be utilizing their contributions directly for personal gain.

12. We recommend adoption of a new section, which we have identified as A.S. 15.13.127, which deals with the use of public office or agency facilities during campaigns. Basically, this section prohibits any elected official or employee of a governmental body from using any public office, facility or equipment, either directly or indirectly, for the purpose of promoting or assisting a campaign for election. This is included to address birthday party fund raisers. Naturally, there would be exceptions, including actions taken at open public meetings, open press conferences or activities which are in the normal course of conduct of the office or agency.

13. We recommend that a new section, which we have designated as A.S. 15.13.128, be adopted which restricts contributions to office-holders during the regular session of the legislature. Contributions would be prohibited to legislative members during a period 30 days prior to the convening of the legislature and through the final adjournment. Again, we feel these restrictions will enhance public confidence in elected officials, as they will not be allowed to accept contributions which could be interpreted as bribes or payments for favors.

14. A.S. 15.13.130 would remain the same, except that we suggest the definition of "groups" be modified to specifically include political committees.

15. We recommend that A.S. 43.20.013, dealing with individual tax credits, be amended to a limited extent to provide that no contribution made to a political committee be entitled to a tax credit.

In submission of this report we recognize that these are volatile political matters. Our recommendations for change may well spark spirited discussion which, if properly channeled, could result in correction of existing statutory deficiencies.

Sincerely,

GROH, EGGERS & PRICE

Lance E. Gidcumb, and for Clifford J. Groh and
Robert P. Owens

LEG:slh
Enclosure

Sec. 15.13.040 Contributions, Expenditures and Supplying of Services to be Reported.

(a) Each candidate, office-holder, group, or campaign treasurer representing the same, is hereby required to keep an accurate record of contributions received and of all expenditures made. Such records shall contain all information hereinafter required to be reported by such candidate, office-holder, or group.

(b) Each candidate whose name is printed on the ballot, each person who, after having become a candidate, has withdrawn as a candidate, each write-in candidate taking affirmative action in an election, each office-holder and group involved in an election concerning a candidate or measure shall file sworn statements as required herein.

(c) Each statement filed by a candidate, office-holder, group or the group's campaign treasurer must list all contributions received and all expenditures made during the period covered by the statement as described in AS 15.13.110. Each statement must include, for the period covered, the following information.

(1) The full name and complete address of each person from whom contributions in the aggregate amount of more than $500 were received, and the date and amount of the contributions;

(2) The full name and complete address of each person to whom any expenditures aggregating more than $250 were made, and the date, amount, and purpose of the expenditures;

(3) The full name and complete address of each person to whom a payment that is not an expenditure aggregating more than $250 was made, if the payment was made from a contribution, and the date, amount, and purpose of the payment.

(4) The full name and complete address of each person who assisted in obtaining credit or a loan of money for or on behalf of the candidate, office-holder, or group, or who guaranteed or otherwise agreed to assume any financial obligation for or on behalf of the candidate, office-holder, or group, if the benefit of the credit, the proceeds of the loan, or the guaranty or assumption of the obligation was to be involved, directly or indirectly, in an election, and the date and total value of the credit, loan, or guaranty or assumption;

(5) A total of all contributions of $500 and less received and a total of all expenditures of $250 and less made;

(6) A total of all contributions received and all expenditures made; and

(7) The total of unexpended contributions received for the outstanding indebtedness from expenditures made as of the end of the period covered by the previous statement required to be filed under this section.

(d) Each statement filed by a candidate or a group must include the campaign treasurer's name, business or residence street address, and telephone number.

(e) Each statement filed by a group or its campaign treasurer must include the principal occupation of each person from whom contributions in an aggregate amount of more than $500 were received in the period covered by the statement.

(f) Each statement filed by a group or its campaign treasurer must include the amount of each expenditure in the form of a contribution made to a candidate, office-holder, or another group that was returned to the group during the period covered by the statements, the name of the person to who the expenditure was originally made, and the date it was returned.

(g) A contribution received but not accepted is not required to be reported pursuant to this section. A determination of whether to accept a contribution that is received by a candidate, office-holder, campaign treasurer, or assistant campaign treasurer shall be made before the end of the reporting period during which the contribution was received. If the determination on accepting the contribution is not made before that time, it is considered accepted on the last day of the recording period for the purposes of reporting pursuant to this section. The candidate, office-holder, campaign treasurer, or assistant campaign treasurer who received a contribution that is not accepted shall return it to the contributor not later than the 30th day after the deadline for filing a statement for the reporting period during which the contribution was received.

(h) For purposes of the time and manner of reporting, an expenditure need not be considered to have been made until the amount is readily determinable or, if the character of the expenditure is such that normal business practice is not to disclose the amount until the next periodic bill is received, then the expenditure need not be considered to have been made until the date of receipt of the bill.

(i) Such statements shall be accompanied by the following affidavit verified by the person filing the statement:

"I do solemnly swear or affirm that the foregoing statement, filed herewith, is in all respects true and correct, and fully shows all information required to be reported by me pursuant to the Alaska State Election Campaigns Act, AS 15.13.010 - 15.13.130."

(j) If any candidate, office-holder, or campaign treasurer of a group fails to file a sworn statement containing all information required by this chapter, such person shall be guilty of a violation of AS 15.13.110.

(l) Any candidate, office-holder, campaign treasurer, assistant campaign treasure, or other person managing a group who swears falsely in a filed statement is subject to the provisions of AS 15.13.110.

(k) Any candidate or campaign treasurer or assistant campaign treasurer of a group who fails to report in whole or in part any contribution or expenditure as provided in the foregoing provisions of this Section shall be liable for double the amount or value of such unreported contribution or expenditure or unreported portion thereof, to each opposing candidate in the election in which same should have been reported. Each of such opposing candidates shall also recover reasonable attorney's fees for collecting the above liquidated damages.

(l) Any candidate, office-holder, or campaign treasurer or assistant campaign treasurer of a group who fails to report in whole or in part any contribution or expenditure as provided in this Section, shall be civilly liable to the State of Alaska for an amount equal to triple the amount or value of such unreported contribution or unreported expenditure.

(m) Statements filed under this Section shall be open to public inspection. They shall be preserved for a period of two years, after which they may be destroyed unless a court of competent jurisdiction has ordered their further preservation.

(n) An assitant campaign treasurer designated by a candidate, office-holder or group may perform any duties imposed on the designated campaign treasurer by this Section in the absence of the campaign treasurer.

Sec. 15.13.050 Groups.

(a) Each group, within two weeks after its organization or, within two weeks after the date when it first has the expectation of receiving contributions or making expenditures in any election campaign, whichever is earlier, shall file a statement of organization with the commission. The name of the group may not be the same as, or deceptively similar to the name of any other group whose statement of organization is filed with the commission. If there is a change in the information required to be included in the statement of organization, the group shall file an amended statement of organization with the commission not later than the 30th day after the change occurs. The statement of organization must include the group's campaign treasurer's name, business or residence street address, and telephone number, and the following information:

(1) The names and address of all related or affiliated groups or other persons, and the nature of the relationship or affiliation;

(2) The name of each corporation, labor organization, or other association or legal entity that directly establishes, administers, or controls the group if applicable;

(3) The name of each person that determines to whom the group makes contributions or for what purpose the group makes expenditures;

(4) Each group receiving contributions or making expenditures on behalf of a candidate, or office-holder, shall notify the candidate, or office-holder, as to the name and address of the group and its campaign treasurer. The candidate, or office-holder, shall include within each statement required by this code a list identifying the name and address of each such group and its campaign treasurer. "On behalf of" means the knowing acceptance of a contribution for a candidate(s), or office-holder(s), or the making of an expenditure for a candidate(s), or an office-holder's). Any campaign treasurer, candidate, office-holder or other person managing a group, who violates the provisions of this subdivision shall be guilty of a violation of AS 15.13.110.

(5) In reporting a contribution received from a group not in this state, the information for the contributing group that is required by Subdivision (a) of this section shall be included unless a copy of the committee's statement of organization filed with the Federal Election Commission is filed with the commission in accordance with Subdivision (a) above.

(6) What distribution of surplus funds will be made, in accordance with AS 15.13.126, if applicable, in the event of dissolution;

(7) The hours during which the committee will make available for public inspection its books of account and all reports filed in accordance with the Alaska State Election Campaign's Act, AS 15.13.010 - 15.13.130, as now or hereafter amended; and

(8) Such other information as the commission may by regulation prescribe, in keeping with the policies and purposes of this chapter.

(b) This section does not require registration by any individual or organization which receives property or funds intended for political purposes and transfers such property or funds to another individual or organization while acting solely as a conduit, if the receiving individual or organization exercises no discretion as to the amount which is transferred or the individual or organization to whom the transfer is made. Whenever and individual or organization acting as a conduit is exempted from registration under this subsection, the original transferor is deemed the contributor and the ultimate transferee is deemed the recipient for reporting purposes.

Sec. 15.13.060 Campaign Treasurers.

(a) Contributions to a candidate or a group may received by, and expenditures of a candidate or group may be made by, only the candidate, campaign treasurer, or deputy campaign treasurer.

(b) Every candidate for nomination to or election to an office and every group in any such election shall designate a campaign treasurer by written appointment filed with the commission and may also designate two assistant campaign treasurers by written appointment to be filed with the commission.

(c) Any campaign treasurer or assistant campaign treasurer designated as provided in this Section may be removed by the candidate or group at any time by the written appointment of a successor filed in the manner provided for the original designations.

(d) Except as expressly permitted in this chapter, no contribution shall be accepted nor any expenditure, including the paying of any filing fee, made by an individual until he has filed the name of his campaign treasurer with the appropriate authority. No contribution shall be accepted nor any expenditure made by a group until it has filed the name of its campaign treasurer with the appropriate authority.

(1) It is unlawful for a group to make a contribution or an expenditure in support of or in opposition to a candidate in a primary or general election unless the group's designation of campaign treasurer has been filed before the 30th day preceding the appropriate election day.

(e) It shall be unlawful for any candidate, group, campaign treasurer, assistant campaign treasurer, or any other person to expend funds from any unlawful contributions.

(f) Nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit a candidate from appointing himself or herself as the campaign treasurer.

(g) An individual intending to become a candidate for public office may file a designation of campaign treasurer before taking any affirmative action for the purpose of seeking nomination or election.

(h) A designation of a campaign treasurer or an assistant campaign treasurer shall be deemed to be timely filed if it is placed in the United States Post Office properly addressed to the commission within the time limit applicable to such designation. The postmark will be prima facie evidence of the date that such statement was deposited with the Post Office. The person filing the designation may show by competent evidence that the actual date of posting was to the contrary. No charge shall be made for filing designations of campaign treasurer or assistant campaign treasurer with the commission.

Sec. 15.13.070 Contributions and Expenditures; Amount and Form of Payment.

(a) No person or group, including but not limited to all political committees, businesses, corporations, and labor unions, may contribute to or expend more than $2500 a year on behalf of or on in opposition to the competing candidates for each elective office. Political parties and their subdivisions are not subject to the limitation prescribed in this subsection, but they are subject to the reporting requirements prescribed by AS 15.13.040 and 15.13.110. Nothing in this chapter prohibits:

(1) A candidate from contributing more than $2500 of his own money to his own campaign; or

(2) Individuals or groups including but not limited to all political committees, businesses, corporations and labor unions, from contributing to or expending on behalf of a ballot proposition or question more than $2500 a year; however, these contributions and expenditures shall be reported in accordance with AS 15.13.040 and 15.13.110.

(b) No contribution of $100 may be made in cash or by cash payment and it may not be accepted by or in behalf of a candidate.

(c) No expenditure over $100 may be made in cash or by cash payment unless a written receipt is obtained and filed with the commission.

(d) No contribution may be made, and no expenditure may be made or incurred, directly or indirectly, anonymously, in a fictitious name, or by one person or group in the name of another, to influence the election of a candidate in an election. A contribution made by a person wishing to remain anonymous, and received by a candidate, campaign treasurer or deputy campaign treasurer, may not be used or expended, but shall be returned to donor, if his identity is known, and if no donor is found, the contribution escheats to the state if not donated by the candidate to the charity of his choice.

(e) Except for independent expenditures, no contribution or expenditure, including contributions or expenditures of a candidate himself or of his family, shall be directly or indirectly made or received in furtherance of the candidacy of any person for nomination or election to political office in this state or on behalf of any group except through the candidate, the duly appointed campaign treasurer or the designated assistant campaign treasurers of the candidate or group.

Sec. 15.13.126 Disposition of Surplus Funds by Candidates

(a) Any candidate who withdraws his candidacy shall, pursuant to this section, and any group controlled by such candidate within 90 days of withdrawing his candidacy, dispose of the funds on deposit in his campaign account. Such candidate or group controlled by such candidate shall not accept any contributions, nor shall any person accept contributions on behalf of such candidate, after the candidate withdraws his candidacy.

(b) Each candidate and group controlled by such candidate shall, pursuant to this section, within 90 days after having been eliminated as a candidate or elected to office, dispose of the funds on deposit in his campaign account. Such candidate and group contolled by such candidate shall not accept any contributions, nor shall any person accept contributions on behalf of such candidate after the candidate has been eliminated as a candidate or elected to office.

(c) All funds on deposit in the campaign account of any candidate and group controlled by such candidate, which funds have not been used in a campaign in a public office within one year from the date of the campaign account was established, shall, within 90 days following the first anniversary of the date the campaign was established, be disposed of pursuant to this section. Such candidate and group controlled by such candidate shall not accept any contributions, nor shall any person accept contributions on behalf of such candidate, after the first anniversary of the date the campaign account was established.

(d) Any candidate required to dispose of funds pursuant to this Section may, prior to such disposition, be reimbursed by the campaign, in full or in part, for any reported contributions by the candidate to the campaign.

(e) The campaign treasurer of a candidate who withdraws his candidacy or who has been eliminated as a candidate or who has been elected to office and who as funds on deposit in a campaign savings account or certificate of deposit shall, within 7 days from the date of such withdrawal, elimination, or election, transfer such funds and accumulated interest earned thereon to the campaign account of the candidate for disposal in accordance with the provisions of this Section.

(f) Any candidate or group controlled by such candidate required to dispose of funds pursuant to this section shall, at their option, either:

(1) Return pro rata to each contributor the funds which have not been spent, or obligated to be spent, with respect to a campaign which has been conducted;

(2) Donate the funds which have not been spent or obligated to be spent, to a charitable organization or organizations which meet the qualifications of Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, with respect to a campaign which has been conducted; or

(3) Give the funds which have not been spent, or which have not been obligated to be spent to the political party of which such candidate is a registered member; or

(4) Give the funds which have not been spent, or obligated to be spent, with respect to a campaign which has been conducted,

(a) in the case of a candidate for state office, to the state, to be deposited in the General Revenue Fund, or,

(b) in the case of a candidate for an office of a political subdivision, to such political subdivision, to be deposited in the General Fund thereof.

(g) Any candidate or group controlled by such candidate required to dispose of campaign funds pursuant to this section shall do so within the time required by this section and shall, on or before the date by which such disposition is to have been made, file with the commission a form prescribed by the commission listing:

(1) The name and address of each person or unit of government to whom any of the funds were distributed and the amount thereof;

(2) The name and address of each person to whom an expenditure was made, together with the amount thereof and purpose therefore.

(3) Such report shall be signed by the candidate and the campaign treasurer and certified as true and correct pursuant to AS 15.13.040(i).

Sec. 15.13.127 Use of Public Office or Agency Facilities in Campaigns

(a) No elective official nor any employee of his office or any person appointed to or employed by any public office or agency may use or authorize the use of any of the facilities of a public office or agency, directly or indirectly, for the purpose of assisting a campaign for election of any person to any office or for the promotion of or opposition to any valid proposition. Facilities of public office or agency include, but are not limited to use of stationary, postage, machines, and equipment, use of employees at the office or agency during working hours, vehicles, office space, publications of the office or agency, and clientele lists of persons served by the office or agencies; Provided, that the foregoing provisions of this section shall not apply to the following activities.

(1) Action taken at an open public meeting by members of an elected legislative body to express a collective decision, or to actually vote upon a motion, proposal, resolution, order, or ordinance, or to support or oppose a ballot proposition so long as (a) any required notice of the meeting includes the title and number of the ballot proposition, and (b) members of the legislative body or members of the public are afforded an approximately equal opportunity for the expression of an opposing view;

(2) A statement by an elected official in support of or in opposition to any ballot proposition at an open press conference or in response to specific inquires;

(3) Activities which are part of the normal and regular conduct of the office or agency.

Sec. 15.13.128 Restriction on Contributions to Certain Office-Holders during Regular Session.

(a) It is unlawful for a person to make a contribution to a person who is a member of the legislature, or to a group that supports or assists a member of the legislature, during a period beginning the 30th day before the day a regular session of the legislature is convened and continuing through the day of final adjournment.

(b) It is unlawful for a member of the legislature, or a group that supports or assists a member or the legislature to accept a contribution during the period prescribed in Subsection (a) of this section.

(c) This section does not apply to a contribution what was made and accepted with the intent that it be used in an election held or called during the period prescribed in Subsection (a) of this section in which the person accepting the contribution is a candidate if the contribution was made after the person has designated a campaign treasurer for the office sought and before the person was sworn into that office.

(d) For purposes of this chapter, a member-elect of the legislature is considered an office-holder beginning on the day after the day of the general or special election in which the member-elect was elected.

(e) This section does not relieve the member-elect of any reporting responsibilities he may have as a candidate under AS 15.13.040.

Sec. 43.20.012. Limitation on application of chapter; credits. The tax imposed by this chapter does not apply to individuals or to fiduciaries. However, an individual may file a return under this chapter in order to receive a tax credit under AS 43.20.013. (§ 2 ch 1 SSSLA 1980; am § 2 ch 2 SSSLA 1980)

Cross references. — For legislative findings and purpose of the enacting legislation, see § 1, ch. 1, SSSLA 1980, and § 1, ch. 2, SSSLA 1980, in the 1980 Temporary and Special Acts and Resolves.

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment made this section retroactive to January 1, 1979.

Sec. 43.20.013. Individual tax credits. (a) A resident individual is entitled to a tax credit not to exceed $100 for

(1) a contribution made in a calendar year to a person or organization for use exclusively

(A) for a political campaign for a candidate for

(i) President or Vice President of the United States, whether or not the candidate will be voted on in a primary election in Alaska;

(ii) United States senator from Alaska;

(iii) United States representative from Alaska;

(iv) governor or lieutenant governor of Alaska;

(v) the Alaska legislature;

(vi) delegate to an Alaska constitutional convention;

(vii) electoral confirmation as a judge or justice of a court in Alaska; or

(viii) municipal office in Alaska; or

(B) by a group seeking to influence the outcome of a ballot proposition or question in Alaska; and

(2) dues paid in a calendar year to a nonprofit organization organized primarily for the purpose of influencing elections in Alaska.

(b) A resident individual is entitled to a tax credit equal to 16 percent of the tax credit claimed by the individual on the federal income tax return of the individual for household and dependent care services necessary for gainful employment.

(c) The commissioner of revenue shall pay the amount of a tax credit allowed by this section to a resident individual who makes a return as provided in AS 43.20.012. A credit under this section shall be paid in the manner provided in AS 43.20.030(e) for the payment of refunds and payment may not be made without an appropriation for that purpose. (§ 2 ch 1 SSSLA 1980; am § 9 ch 1 SSSLA 1980; am § 2 ch 2 SSSLA 1980)

Cross references. — For legislative findings and purpose of the enacting legislation, see § 1, ch. 1, SSSLA 1980, and § 1, ch. 2, SSSLA 1980, in the Temporary and Special Acts.

Effect of amendments. — The first 1980 amendment substituted "$100" for "$50" in the introductory language of subsection (a).

The second 1980 amendment made this section retroactive to January 1, 1979.

STATE OF ALASKA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
JUNEAU

January 23, 1985

The Honorable Don Bennett
President of the Senate
Alaska State Legislature
Pouch V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Senator Bennett:

Under the authority of art. III, sec. 18, of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a bill that relates to the Alaska State Housing Authority (ASHA). (See AS 18.55.)

Section 1 of the bill provides that if the state leases a public building financed by ASHA, the state's rental obligation is subject to annual appropriation. This provision makes explicit the assurance that public leases do not impair the appropriation prerogatives of the legislature.

Current law provides that ASHA must sell interests in land through public auction or by sealed bids at a fair market price. Section 2 of the bill enables ASHA to sell land or a public building, in appropriate instances, to the state, a federal agency, or a political subdivision for less than the appraised value and without competitive bidding. A comparable provision governs the sale of state land or resources under AS 38. See AS 38.05.315.

This bill will promote the efficient operation of ASHA, and I urge your consideration of and support for the bill.

Sincerely,

Bill Sheffield
Governor

Annual Report
Fiscal Year 1984

A History of Service

The Alaska State Housing Authority (ASHA) was created 39 years ago as the Alaska Housing Authority by the then territorial government of Alaska. The authority was created to take advantage of growing federal housing programs administered by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). ASHA's organization as a public corporate authority has been consistent with the model adopted nationally by thousands of local public housing authorities created to administer the same HUD programs.

Since its creation, ASHA has successfully completed numerous housing and other projects to meet the needs of the citizens of Alaska. ASHA has the flexibility and capacity to meet many of the challenges that have arisen in Alaska's young history. As we move through the 1980s, a new era of growth and activity, ASHA will continue to administer its programs in an efficient manner and to implement new programs for the changing times.

The Honorable Bill Sheffield
Governor
State of Alaska
Capitol Building
Juneau, Alaska 99811

Dear Governor Sheffield:

I am pleased to submit the 1984 Annual Report for the Alaska State Housing Authority. ASHA's goal of providing decent, safe and sanitary housing for low and moderate income Alaskans has been met and expanded during the 1984 fiscal year. In addition, the Juneau Senior Citizens' Center was completed this year as was Phase I of the Wasilla Senior Complex. Work is well underway on other senior housing projects in Fairbanks and Sitka. Planning for additional senior housing has begun for the second phase of both the Wasilla complex and the Chugach View complex in Anchorage. Preliminary planning is underway for additional housing for seniors in Palmer.

The Section 8 Existing, New Construction and Conventional Low Income programs provided housing assistance to approximately 10,000 Alaskans during the last year. Special funding provided by the Department of Housing and Urban Development has assisted ASHA in maintaining and upgrading the quality of living in a portion of the 3,000+ units under ASHA management in 20 project offices throughout the State. ASHA also provided $31.5 million in tax exempt bond financing for 618 units of moderate rent housing in Anchorage and Juneau during the 1984 fiscal year.

ASHA has a dedicated and competent staff which will continue to strive for effective and efficient delivery and management of adequate rental housing for Alaskans.

Sincerely,

Bill Miles
Chairman of the Board

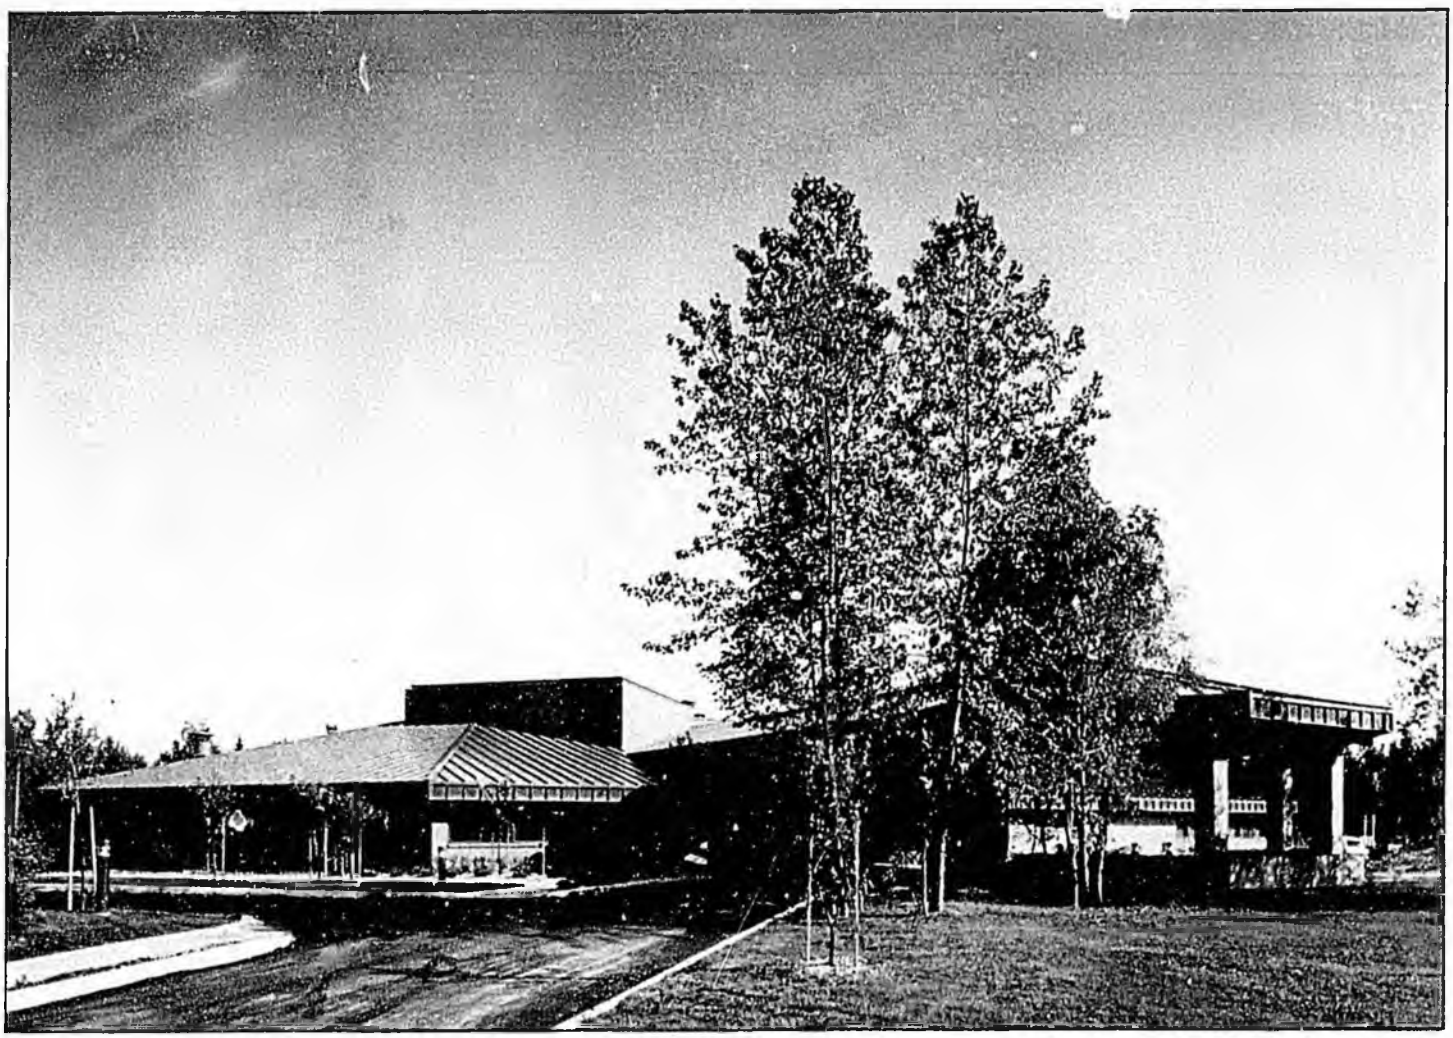
The design, the site, the accessibility and the finished product that resulted in the Anchorage Senior Center, teamed for a 1983 Honor Award presented by the Alaska Chapter, American Institute of Architects.

The $4.2 million project was completed in 1983 by Wick Construction Company. Designed by Kumin Associates, Anchorage, for the Alaska State Housing Authority, the 21,225-square-foot low-rise building features a brick masonry exterior, prefinished metal roof and extensive landscaping.



ALASKA STATE HOUSING AUTHORITY

Board of Directors

The five member board governs the Alaska State Housing Authority (ASHA) activities. These members are composed of the Commissioner of the Department of Commerce and Economic Development and four other members appointed by the Governor. The Board selects an Executive Director/Secretary-Treasurer who is the administrative head of the Authority. As of March 31, 1984 ASHA was staffed by 48 full time personnel in the Central Office in Anchorage and 83 employees in its 20 project offices located throughout the State of Alaska.

Mr. Bill Miles, Chairman: Mr. Miles has been a resident of Alaska for 18 years. Mr. Miles is a former Alaska State Legislator and former Executive Director of the Alaska State Housing Authority. Mr. Miles is presently a principal in the consulting firm of Bill Miles & Associates, Inc. Mr. Miles has been on the Authority's Board of Directors since April 15, 1983. His term expires January 31, 1986.

Cynthia E. Aiken, First Vice Chairman: Ms. Aiken, an Alaska resident since 1960, now makes her home in Fairbanks, Alaska. Ms. Aiken is currently the Executive Director of a Substantative Abuse Center. Ms. Aiken was previously appointed to the Board of Directors on October 13, 1980, and reappointed on April 15, 1983. Her term expires January 31, 1986.

Kenneth Jay Gain, Second Vice Chairman: Mr. Gain has been a resident of Alaska for 32 years. He has long been active in Alaska's civic and business affairs. Mr. Gain, an investment counselor and real estate broker, has been active in the real estate business since 1973. Mr. Gain is a former Deputy Executive Director of the Alaska State Housing Authority and has been a member of the Authority's Board of Directors since April 15, 1983. Term expires: January 31, 1985.

Richard A Lyon: Commissioner Lyon was appointed the Commissioner of Commerce and Economic Development by Governor Sheffield on December 6, 1982. Commissioner Lyon has been an Alaska resident since 1960. Prior to his appointment as Commissioner, Mr. Lyon was an active businessman in Anchorage and on various committees throughout Alaska. Term expires: Indefinite.

Dianne Anderson O'Connell: Ms. O'Connell has been an Alaska resident since 1967. Ms. O'Connell has had extensive travel and experience in rural Alaska. Ms. O'Connell has been employed by National Education Association – Alaska, Inc., for the last 15 years and she has been on the Authority's Board of Directors since April 15, 1983. Term expires: January 31, 1987.

ASHA Programs

The Alaska State Housing Authority's (ASHA) primary responsibility is providing low income housing to eligible residents throughout the State. ASHA operates subsidized housing programs sponsored by the Department of Housing and Urban Develpment (HUD) such as Conventional Low Rent, Section 8 New Construction, 221 (d)(3) Middle Income, Turnkey III Homeownership, Mutual Help, Remote Housing, and Section 8 Existing. The only project operated by ASHA without federal subsidy is the Marine View Apartments in Juneau. The total number of units under management is approximately 3,100 at this time.

The HUD programs are operated with the rents generated by the tenants and HUD-provided operating subsidies. In addition, certain projects are eligible for the Comprehensive Improvement Assistance Program (Modernization) to ensure that the facilities are maintained in a decent, safe and sanitary manner. The two largest programs under management are the Conventional Low Rent and the Section 8 Programs which account for approximately 2,800 of the 3,100 units under management.

Conventional Low Rent

The conventional low rent program consists of 1,116 rental units at this time and forms the cornerstone of the Housing Management Department. The low rent dwellings are owned by ASHA, and the residents contribute a maximum of 30% of their family income as rent towards the operation of the program. Eligibility is determined by the family's income and composition. To be eligible, the applicant must qualify as a family unit or be 62 years of age or older, disabled, or handicapped. During fiscal year 1984 the average annual income of tenants residing within this program was $7,440.00 and the average rent paid by these tenants was $186.00 per month. An operating subsidy is paid monthly by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to maintain the facilities in a decent, safe and sanitary manner, and to provide management services.

The original construction costs of units within this program are generally provided by the Department of Housing and Urban Development although in recent years the State of Alaska has contributed in those cases where federal funds were insufficient.

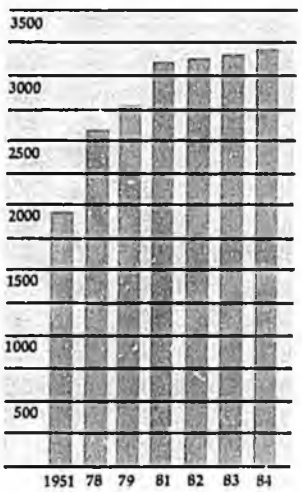
Total Units Managed by ASHA



Section 8 New Construction

The Section 8 New Construction program operated a total of 285 units, primarily for elderly tenants, in four cities in Alaska during Fiscal Year 1984. Residents in this program pay up to 30% of their adjusted income as rent. The federal government, through the Department of Housing and Urban Development, pays a subsidy to ASHA equal to the difference in the rent of the resident and the fair market rent established by HUD. This is to ensure that the program has adequate funds to amortize construction costs, and maintain the projects in a decent, safe, sanitary manner.

At the present time the average rent paid by a tenant within this program is $189.00 per month and the average annual income is $7,560.00. The elibigility requirements are essentially the same as those under the conventional low income program previously described.

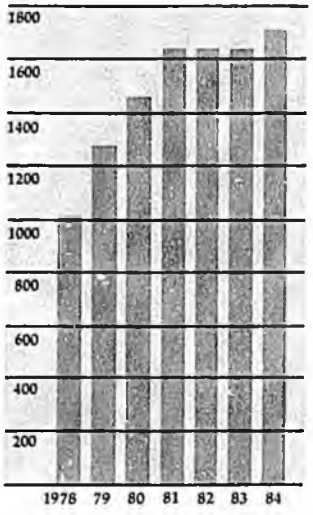
Section 8 Existing

Rental units within the Section 8 Existing Program are not owned by the Alaska State Housing Authority, although the regulations are the same as the Section 8 New Construction Program. Under this program ASHA pays directly to the landlord the difference between the tenant's portion of the rent, which is appoximately 30% of the tenant's income, and the contract rent. In 1983 the average annual income of residents in this program was $6,970.00 and the tenant's average monthly contribution to contract rent was $144.00.

Eligible applicants must locate their own apartments within a designated area. The apartments must meet the standards set by HUD which is verified by an inspection by ASHA. The maximum rents that Section 8 landlords can charge are determined periodically by HUD.

Approximately 85% of the 1,420 Certificates ASHA is authorized to issue were in use during Fiscal Year 1984.

Section 8 New Construction and Section 8 Existing Units



Chugach View Section 8 New Construction Project consists of 120 apartments for the elderly.

1984 In Review

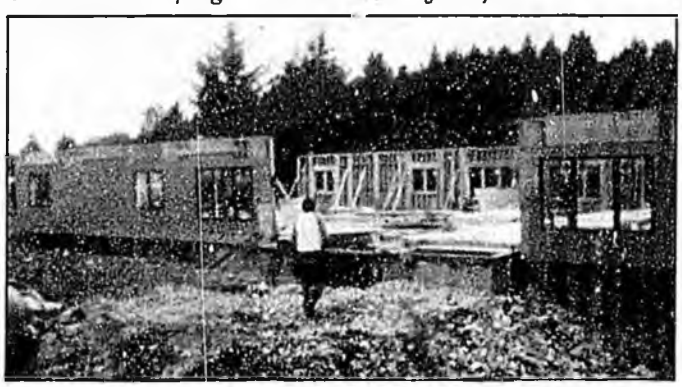
Housing Development and Construction

The Housing Development and Construction (HD/C) Department's primary functions are planning new facilites, and administering the subsequent construction of those new facilities.

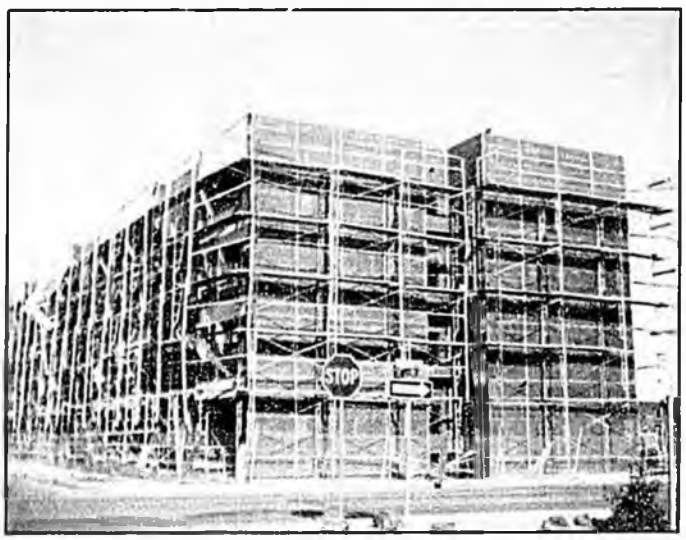
The planning function includes evaluating housing needs of Alaskan communities, identifying and obtaining funding, and obtaining necessary local, state and federal approvals for the desired development. Construction administration involves extensive coordination with various entities in order to produce exemplary additions to the perennially insufficient subsidized rental housing stock throughout the state.

The majority of funding for development and construction of ASHA's housing has, in past years, been provided by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). Increasingly during recent years, ASHA's Senior Citizen Housing has been made possible by grants from the State of Alaska through the Department of Community and Regional Affairs (DCRA). Whereas grants from the State of Alaska made up only 3.5% of ASHA's total development funds until 1982, subsequent senior citizen housing projects have been approximately 90% state funded. The remaining 10% of the development funding and the long-term operating subsidy was provided by HUD.

Construction in progress on Sitka Elderly Project.



Construction in progress on Fairbanks Elderly Project.



Both the Anchorage Senior Center and the Juneau Senior Citizen Housing with Ancillary Facilities, which have been occupied since 1983, are mustering for final warranty/close out inspections. Another project nearing that stage is the remodel work on ASHA's own office building.

Fiscal Year 1984 has been a rewarding year for the development of senior citizen housing. The 18 unit garden-style senior citizen housing project in Wasilla was well received by the community at the July Open House/Dedication Ceremony. Progress on the construction of the 40 unit senior citizen housing project in Fairbanks has passed the 50% completion stage and promises to be a welcome addition to the community when completed. The development of the twenty unit senior citizen housing project in Sitka is underway and the project is scheduled for completion in the spring of 1985.

There is still an ongoing need for additional units of senior citizen housing throughout the state. In attempting to meet that need, ASHA has begun the development process to provide approximately 120 units of additional senior citizen housing in Anchorage adjacent to the existing Chugach View Apartments. 14 additional units of senior citizen housing are planned for Wasilla, and 18 units for Palmer.

The first phase of the rehabilitation of the 40 unit Pacific Terrace family housing project in Kodiak has been completed. Successive phases to rehabilitate the balance of the 32 units have begun and are scheduled to continue through 1986.

Herman Smith, Maintenance Mechanic II.

Housing Management Department

The responsibility for all maintenance and management activities for all units under the control of ASHA is with the Department of Housing Management. Funds to provide these services are in part provided by the Department of Housing and Urban Development through its annual operating subsidy. Other funding is provided by rents paid by residents of projects and programs, as well as earnings through investment of reserves. The Housing Authority does not obtain operating funds from the State of Alaska.

Management Operations Division

The Housing Management activities are divided into two divisions, management and maintenance. The Management Operations Division is responsible for activities such as move-in/move-out inspections, rent collection, and work order requests for maintenance services. In addition, the application and income verification process is handled by this division. Approximately 95 employees carry out these activities for the over 3,100 units of elderly and family housing within management. The management activities are approximately equally divided between the conventional low income renter occupied programs and approximately 1,480 Certificates of Family participation, commonly referred to as the Section 8 program. These activities are carried out through the 20 project offices located throughout the State.

Maintenance Division

The Maintenance Division provides services to ensure that the rental units are maintained in a safe and sanitary condition. Forty-two employees are assigned full time to this task in 20 locations throughout the State. Extraordinary maintenance activities intensify during the summer to undertake activities and maintenance items that cannot be performed during the winter months. In addition, the Federal Government through its Comprehensive Improvement Assistance Program has provided special funding to upgrade several of ASHA's older conventional low income projects this year. Projects are underway in Fairbanks, Anchorage, Nome and Valdez. Though future funding is not assured under this program after next fiscal year, we are confident that the projects and programs will be maintained adequately given the level of past funding which brought the units up to an effective new 20 year life. The Division of Maintenance constanty prioritizes maintenance needs so that future funding can be utilized in the most critical areas.

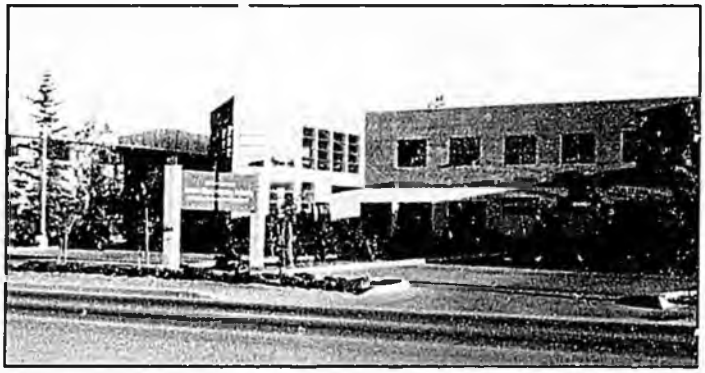
Above: Pacific Terrace after completion of phase one which resulted in the complete interior and exterior renovation of 8 low-rent family apartments.

This new addition to the Mountain View project in Juneau added 20 units of senior housing and ancillary facilities.



The ASHA central office remodel in Anchorage was completed in September, 1984 and consists of 22,000 square feet of office and warehouse space.

New Multi-Family Construction

During Fiscal Year 1984 construction commenced on five new lower and middle income multi-family apartment complexes financed through the sale of ASHA FHA Insured Revenue Bonds.

Under this program bond sale proceeds are made available to private sector developers for the construction of the apartments. The Developments are owned and managed by the developers who remit rents to an ASHA trustee where they are accumulated for payment of bondholder principle and interest.

Interest on the bonds is exempt from federal income tax and payment of principle and interest is guaranteed by the Federal Housing Administration pursuant to section 221(d)4 of the National Housing Act of 1934.

FHA and IRS require that at least 20% of the units be retained for occupancy by lower income tenants.

Pictured here are the five projects started during Fiscal Year 1984 as well as the COHO Park project in Juneau which was similarly financed in Fiscal Year 1983.

A total of 670 apartments will be available in Juneau and Anchorage under this program by December 31, 1984.

Coho Park Apartments: 52 one and two-bedroom apartments located in Juneau on a 6.5 acre site.

Chinook Apartments 64 one and two-bedroom apartments located in Juneau on a 2.7 acre site.

Alpine Meadows 348 one and two-bedroom apartments located in Anchorage in six three-story buildings on 16 acres.

Alpine Terrace 48 two-bedroom apartments located in Anchorage in four two and one half story buildings on a 2.25 acre site.

Boundary Manor 68 one and two-bedroom apartments located in Anchorage on a 1.8 acre site.

Windemere Apartments 54 one and two-bedroom apartments located in Anchorage on a 1.9 acre site.

Honorable Mitch Abood
Chairman
Senate State Affairs Committee
Pouch V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Senator Abood:

During your committee hearing on March 26 concerning SB 92, you requested additional fiscal information.

The enclosed draft fiscal note and analysis and attachments show the data processing costs in greater detail as you requested. I have also assumed that the committee substitute will contain language to specifically include a dependent care benefit as a Supplemental Benefits System (SBS) option and have shown a separate cost for the necessary data processing modifications. In preparing this draft fiscal note, we were also able to reduce some of the data processing costs to reflect some work being performed under contract; the net effect is an increase of $42.7. The fiscal note analysis discusses this in further detail.

Should you have any questions or require further information, I will be happy to respond.

Sincerely,

J.K. Humphreys

Draft CS Senate Bill 92
Fiscal Note Analysis
Prepared by Division of Retirement & Benefits
Department of Administration
April 4, 1985

IV ANALYSIS: This draft fiscal note assumes that the substitute for SB 92 contains a provision to specifically include dependent care as an additional, optional SBS benefit.

This bill would allow the Administrator of the state's Supplemental Benefits System (SBS) to amend the State of Alaska Supplemental Annuity Plan to provide for additional voluntary contributions. This amendment to the Plan would be submitted for approval to the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) to retain the Plan's qualified status. The additional contributions would allow SBS participants to defer up to 18% of their compensation as contributions.

The total estimated cost is categorized as follows:

a. $50,000 for consulting services and for booklet and form revision, connected with establishing and qualifying the new Plan in accordance with Federal Law and Internal Revenue Code and to assist in IRS qualification of the Plan. We have included $10,000 in this category for an annual examination of employee contributions to various benefit programs by our benefit consultant to identify any employees who may have overdeferred on an annual basis. Other costs included here are the preparation and distribution of informational materials for employees.

b. $192,745 for data processing changes to systems in the divisions of Finance and Retirement & Benefits. These costs are further categorized on the attached detail sheets and are as follows:
   1) $99,995 for data processing changes in the Division of Finance to accept additional voluntary contributions;
   2) $22,750 for data processing changes in the Division of Retirement & Benefits to accept additional voluntary contributions; and
   3) $70,000 for data processing changes in the Division of Retirement & Benefits to add dependent care as an additional benefit option.

Project Name: SBS Voluntary - Estimation Assumptions & Summary
Prepared By: Judy Elliott	Date: 03/28/85

Estimation Assumptions:

1. SBS Voluntary forms will be created and collected by Retirement and Benefits once a year. They will be hand verified and passed to Payroll for processing.
2. SBS Voluntary will be elected as a monitary amount rather than a percentage of gross.
3. SBS Voluntary maximum amount will be calculated by Retirement and Benefits.
4. Payroll will send SBS Voluntary deduction amounts to Retirement and Benefits on the current SBS contribution tape with a new type code.
5. This change will be calculated at in-house prices for DP labor costs.
6. The SBS master will not have to be expanded as the SBS voluntary will be held in the annuity balance YTD and ITD fields.
7. Excess SBS Voluntary deductions will be identified by an outside consultant and returned to the member in the next tax year via the annuity payout process in the SBS.

Estimation Summary:

Based on the detailed estimate following, this option will take approximately 4.3 man-months to build at a cost of $22,750 using in-house DP staff. An estimation of contracting staff costs for this same project would be $50,000 including some time for the contractors to familiarize themselves with the Retirement & Benefits SBS system. This will take approximately 2 calendar months of time to implement utilizing in-house maintenance staff.
This change would be estimated to add 1,000 executable lines of code to the SBS System.

Project Name: SBS Dependent Care Option - Assumptions & Summary
Prepared By: Judy Elliott	Date: 03/28/85

Estimation Assumptions:

1. SBS Dependent Care will be an extra option on the SBS enrollment forms.
2. This change will be calculated at in-house prices for DP labor costs.
3. The SBS master will have to be expanded to hold the new option choice and YTD and ITD premium paid fields. This master file expansion will require the addition of half a disk pack.

Estimation Summary:

Based on the detailed estimate following, this option will take approximately 1.1 man-years to build at a cost of $70,000 using in-house DP staff. An estimation of contracting staff costs for this same project would be $162,500 including some time for the contractors to familiarize themselves with the Retirement & Benefits SBS system. This will take approximately 4 calendar months of time to implement utilizing in-house staff. This change would be estimated to add 1,250 executable lines of code to the SBS System.

Project Name: SBS Voluntary - Payroll Estimation Assumptions & Summary
Prepared By: Sally Hooton/Gene Chittenden	Date: 03/27/85

Estimation Assumptions:

1. SBS Voluntary forms will be created and collected by Retirement and Benefits once a year. They will be hand verified and passed to Payroll for processing.
2. SBS Voluntary will be elected as a monetary amount rather than a percentage of gross.
3. SBS Voluntary maximum amount will be calculated by Retirement and Benefits and passed to payroll for use in calculations.
4. The payroll master will need to be expanded to keep YTD SBS Voluntary amounts.
5. SBS Voluntary will be reported on the payroll stub.
6. Annual max-out figures will be used to coordinate editing between SBS mandatory, SBS Voluntary, and Deferred Compensation amounts.
7. SBS Voluntary will not be taken for any warrant, like Deferred Compensation, if the member exceeds the annual maximum based on YTD gross pay or if the member's monthly net pay is less than the SBS Voluntary amount.
8. SBS Voluntary may be taken even if Deferred Compensation is dropped on a particular warrant.
9. This change to payroll will be calculated at in-house prices for DP labor costs.
10. SBS Voluntary will be handled as a pre-tax deduction.
11. Excess SBS Voluntary deductions will be identified by an outside consultant and returned to the member in the next tax year via the annuity payout process in the SBS.
12. Payroll will send SBS Voluntary deduction amounts to Retirement and Benefits on the current SBS contribution tape with a new type code.

Estimation Summary:

Based on the detailed estimate following, this option will take approximately 1.47 man-years to build at a cost of $99,995 using in-house payroll staff. An estimation of contracting staff costs for this same project would be $175,000 including some time for the contractors to familiarize themselves with the Payroll System. This will take approximately 6 calendar months to implement utilizing in-house maintenance staff. This change is estimated to add 5,000 executable lines of code to the Payroll System.

SENATE BILL NO. 97

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to forfeiture of weapons used to commit a crime."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 12.55.015(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except as limited by AS 12.55.125 -- 12.55.175, the court, in imposing sentence on a defendant convicted of an offense, may singly or in combination

(1) impose a fine when authorized by law and as provided in AS 12.55.035;

(2) order the defendant to be placed on probation under conditions specified by the court which may include provision for active supervision;

(3) impose a definite term of periodic imprisonment;

(4) impose a definite term of continuous imprisonment;

(5) order the defendant to make restitution as provided in AS 12.55.045;

(6) order the defendant to carry out a continuous or periodic program of community work as provided in AS 12.55.055;

(7) suspend execution of all or a portion of the sentence imposed as provided in AS 12.55.080;

(8) suspend imposition of sentence as provided in AS 12.55.085;

(9) order the forfeiture to the Department of Public Safety of any deadly weapon possessed or used by the defendant during the commission of the offense; as used in this paragraph, deadly weapon means the same as in AS 11.81.900.

* Sec. 2. AS ~~33.30~~ 12.36 is amended by adding new sections to read:

Chapter 36. Disposition of Recovered[, OR] Seized, or Forfeited Property

Sec. ~~33.30.295~~ 12.36.050. REMISSION OF FORFEITED PROPERTY. (a) A claimant seeking remission of or remittance of the value of the claimant's interest in a weapon ordered forfeited under AS 12.55.015(a)(9) must prove to the court by a preponderance of evidence that the claimant

(1) has a valid interest in the weapon, acquired in good faith;

(2) did not knowingly participate in the commission of the crime in which the weapon was used; and

(3) did not know or have reasonable cause to believe that the weapon has been or would be used to commit a crime.

(b) Upon a showing that a claimant is entitled to relief under (a) of this section, the order of the court must provide that

(1) if the claimant is entitled to the weapon, it must be delivered to the claimant ~~immediately or~~ within ~~60~~ 30 days after the final disposition of the case.

(2) if the claimant is entitled to remittance of some value less than the total value of the weapon, the claimant is entitled, at the claimant's choice, to receive either the value of the claimant's interest or, upon payment by the claimant of the difference in value, the weapon.

Sec. ~~33.30.297~~ 12.36.060. DISPOSAL OF FORFEITED DEADLY WEAPONS. A deadly weapon forfeited under AS 12.55.015(a)(9), unless remitted under AS ~~33.30.295~~ 12.36.050, must be disposed of at the discretion of the commissioner of public safety. The commissioner of public safety may destroy the weapon or use the weapon for law enforcement, ballistics testing, or training purposes.

SB 97 - "An Act relating to forfeiture of weapons used to commit a crime

This legislation adds a new paragraph to the general sentencing provisions statute which would authorize a court to order the forfeiture, as part of a defendant's sentence upon conviction, of a deadly weapon which was possessed or used by a defendant during the commission of crime.

It is common to encounter persons who are convicted of violent crimes repeating similar offenses. By being able to hinder such individuals from obtaining the "tools" to commit such crimes, an added degree of safety for the public can thus be provided.

Law enforcement agencies often spend a considerable effort returning knives, clubs, axes, etc. from evidence storage back to individuals who have committed violent crimes. Certainly this effort can be better expended if the weapons can be disposed of at the discretion of the State. Some of the weapons will be used by the Alaska State Troopers Scientific Crime Detection Laboratory for ballistics purposes.

This bill amends AS 12.55.015(a) to give the court the discretionary power to order the forfeiture of a weapon as part of a defendant's sentence following conviction. Although prosecutors will have the added responsibility of advocating forfeiture, when appropriate, this advocacy duty can be accomplished without additional expense.

STATE OF ALASKA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
JUNEAU

January 24, 1985

The Honorable Don Bennett
President of the Senate
Alaska State Legislature
Pouch V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Senator Bennett:

Under the authority of art. III, sec. 18, of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a bill that will authorize a court to order the forfeiture to the Department of Public Safety (DPS) of a deadly weapon possessed or used by a defendant during the commission of a crime. As used in the bill, "deadly weapon" means any firearm (including a pistol, revolver, rifle, or shotgun) or anything designed for and capable of causing death or serious physical injury, including a knife, an axe, a club, metal knuckles, or an explosive.

Although current law authorizes the forfeiture of weapons used to commit fish and game offenses (AS 16.05.195) or offenses involving controlled substances (AS 17.30.110), there is no statutory provision that expressly allows a court to order, as part of a defendant's sentence, the forfeiture of a weapon used to commit crimes such as assault, robbery, or murder. AS 11.61.200 prohibits a felon, during the five years immediately following his "unconditional discharge" (i.e., release from custody or parole or probation) for a felony, from knowingly possessing "a firearm capable of being concealed on his person," and AS 12.55.080 gives a court broad powers to determine and impose reasonable probation conditions (such as no possession of firearms during the period of probation); however, neither of these statutes specifically authorizes a court to order the forfeiture of a weapon used to commit a crime.

To address this surprising omission in existing law, sec. 1 of this bill adds a new paragraph to the general sentencing provisions in AS 12.55.015(a) to authorize a court to order the forfeiture of a weapon as part of a defendant's sentence following conviction. Forfeiture would not required in every case, but could be imposed at the court's discretion.

In sec. 2, the bill allows the remission of forfeited weapons to innocent third parties who prove an ownership interest in the weapon. Also, under sec. 2 of the bill, forfeited weapons must either be destroyed or used by DPS for training, ballistics, or other law enforcement purpose.

Passage of this bill will authorize our courts to remove from the hands of a convicted criminal a weapon used to commit a crime. This will at least prevent the convicted person from using that weapon to commit another crime in the future. I urge your prompt and favorable action on this bill.

Sincerely,

Bill Sheffield

Position Paper
SB 100

Senate Bill 100 would limit salaries to not more than the salary of the Governor. The limit would apply to all employees of the State; all political subdivisions; other instrumentalities, boards, commissions, and authorities that receive at least 50 percent of their annual budget from the State treasury; grant recipients that receive 50 percent of their annual budget from the State treasury; and the Alaska Railroad Corporation if it receives at least 50 percent of its budget by direct appropriation or grant from the State treasury. Current collective bargaining agreements are not affected, but any new agreement or extention must comply with the provisions of this bill.

There is a technical drafting problem with SB 100. The "notwithstanding" provisions on page 2, lines 10-14, cite collective bargaining statutes. It fails to also cite the geographic differential and longevity provisions (AS 39.27.020 and AS 39.27.022) that place some executive branch salaries above the Governor's salary. It also fails to cite provisions that place the salaries of some judges above the Governor's salary. See AS 22.05.140(c) and AS 22.10.190(c). We believe these citations should be added to avoid any confusion of the bill's applicability to a given situation.

This bill would reverse long standing public policy in this State. Geographic differentials have been a matter of law since at least 1966. Longevity increments have been a matter of law since 1972. This bill would limit each of these when they operate to provide a salary greater than the Governor's salary.

The Governor's salary is set on a different basis than those subject to the State's classification and pay plans created under AS 39.250.150(a) and (b). Setting of the Governor's salary is essentially a political decision for political office. In addition to the salary, the Governor receives housing through the budget for the Executive Mansion. The salary of jobs subject to the classification plan are based on a "fair and reasonable compensation for services rendered, and reflect the principle of like pay for like work" (AS 39.25.150(b)). Geographic differentials and longevity increments have been enacted as legitimate amendments to the basic pay plan to recognize legitimate public purposes in the career service. This bill would override these provisions.

The Division of Personnel urges that serious consideration be given to the questions of geographic differentials and longevity increments before these public policies are reversed by this bill.

Dear Mr. Chairman:

Senate Bill 100 was heard before your Committee on February 6. During my testimony, Committee members asked me to provide additional specific information on salaries of certain employees. I have now gathered the information and am pleased to transmit it to you.

Senator Vic Fischer requested a list of the Executive Branch employees whose "basic salary" (as defined in SB 100) exceeded the salary of the Governor. Attachment 1 lists the eleven (11) employees who fall into this category.

Senator Bill Ray requested a similar list of the Judges and Justices whose "basic salary" exceeded the salary of the Governor. Edna Caldwell, the State Payroll Supervisor, had informed Senator Paul Fischer that 14 Judges and Justices fell into this category. However, there are only ten (10) whose salary exceeds the Governor. There are also four (4) Justices whose salary equals the Governor's. These are Justices who receive no geographic cost-of-living adjustment. See AS 22.05.140(a) and (c). Attachment 2 lists the nine (9) Judges and a Justice whose basic salary exceeds the Governor's.

Senator Vic Fischer requested a listing of all employees whose total compensation exceeded the Governor's. Attachment 3 is such a listing of all employees paid through the Division of Finance, Department of Administration for calendar year 1984. It does not include the University of Alaska, the Alaska Railroad Corporation, nor any other quasi-public corporation that processes its own payroll. I have also excluded those employees in Attachments 1 and 2 to avoid duplication. I have indicated in the Comment column the reason for several employees' salaries to exceed the Governor's on a one-time basis. The salaries of the other employees may be expected to repeatedly exceed the Governor's due to overtime, stand-by, shifts differential, sea duty and other forms of premium pay.

(Prohibiting salaries for certain employees from exceeding the governor's salary)

TO: Senator Paul Fischer

FROM: Teresa B. Cramer Terry Cramer
Legislative Counsel

You have asked for a sectional analysis of SB 100.

Section 1 adds a new section to the Fiscal Procedures Act (AS 37.05) to provide that a state agency may not grant money to an organization or entity unless the organization or entity agrees that none of its employees will be paid a salary greater than the governor's. Subsection (b) defines the organizations and entities to which the limit applies. Subsection (c) gives the department administering the grant responsibility for insuring that the organization or entity is notified of the salary limit requirement and that it agrees to comply with the limit before it receives a grant. Subsection (d) incorporates the expansive definition of "state" contained in AS 39.20.095, enacted in section 2 of the bill, into this section.

Section 2 adds a new section which prohibits the state from paying its employees a salary greater than the governor's salary. The section applies to employees regardless of whether their salaries are set in the collective bargaining process. Subsection (b) defines "basic salary" and contains an expansive definition of "state."

Section 3 requires the Alaska Railroad corporation to abide by the salary limit imposed by section 2 if the corporation receives at least 50 percent of its yearly budget from the state.

Section 4 contains language required by state and federal constitutional prohibitions against impairing the obligations of existing contracts.

Section 5 affirms the independence of the University of Alaska, except as to the salary limit created by the bill.

Section 6 is an immediate effective date.

If I may be of further assistance, please advise.

Legislators introduce bills to cut state pay

By BRUCE SCANDLING
The Associated Press

JUNEAU — Fifteen University of Alaska administrators earn fatter paychecks than Gov. Bill Sheffield and would face salary cuts under two bills introduced by state lawmakers.

University President Donald O'Dowd tops the list, bringing home $90,938 a year in base pay. Sheffield earns $81,648 annually.

Proposals to limit state salaries to no more than the governor is paid have been introduced in both the state House and Senate. But trying to figure how many more state workers would be affected by the limit is posing a challenge to legislative staffers working on the measures.

A payroll supervisor said at least 21 state workers — not including university, Alaska Housing Authority and Alaska Railroad employees — earn more than the governor when various pay differentials are counted.

"And I'd say a majority of them are the judges," said Edna Caldwell.

Part of the problem in determining who would be affected revolves around differences in the two bills.

Rep. Mike Szymanski, D-Anchorage, drafted legislation that simply says no worker should earn a base salary greater than the governor.

Many state workers, however, especially those in rural areas, have geographic differentials and other pay-boosting factors added to their base salaries.

Szymanski's bill would not count those differentials as base pay, meaning fewer employees would out-earn the governor.

When the salary adjustments are not counted, a review of all classified and exempt state employees — not counting the university — showed no worker earning more than Sheffield, said Mark Higgins, a Szymanski aide.

But a Senate version of the measure would create a large list. The bill drafted by Sen.

See Page C-3, SALARY

Salary cuts for state employees proposed

Paul Fischer, R-Soldotna, and co-sponsored by six other senators, counts differentials when determining base salary.

Fischer said the practice of paying state workers more according to where they live is a major factor in skyrocketing state salaries.

"It's been somewhat abused over the years," Fischer said. "We have to get away from this thing where the community says it cost two, three or four times more to live in a certain place."

Caldwell said geographic differentials can increase an Alaska worker's salary by up to 33 percent. That's the extra amount an employee is paid for living in such areas as Barrow, Kobuk or the Yukon- an automatic 10 percent geographic boost in salary.

The bill is co-sponsored by Senate President Don Bennett, R-Fairbanks, and Sens. Jack Coghill, R-Nenana; Mitch Abood, R-Anchorage; Frank Ferguson, D-Kotzebue; Pat Rodey, D-Anchorage; and Edna DeVries, R-Palmer.

Salary figures provided by the university don't include geographic differentials, longevity or other cost factors.

Budget Director Brian Rogers said more than 15 employees would top the governor's salary if those factors were counted. Figuring just base pay, these are the top wage earners in the university system:

- O'Dowd, $90,938;
- Patrick O'Rourke, Fairbanks campus chancellor; $88,060;
- Carolyn Floyd, Kodiak Community College president, $87,648;

MEMORANDUM

TO: Senator Mitch Abood, Chairman
State Affairs Committee

FROM: Cherie Shelley
Executive Director

SUBJECT: SB 100 - Limiting Salaries of Public Employees

DATE: February 6, 1985

The Alaska Public Employees Association opposes this bill as a shortsighted effort to gain political points at the expense of the efficient operation of state government. While we recognize the political advantages attached to such legislation, careful review of the issue reveals that this measure is severely flawed.

There is a fundamental difference between a popularly elected governor and a career civil servant. Governors traditionally have considerable personal wealth and seek the office as the culmination of their political careers. While in office, the governor receives subsidized housing, a considerable expense account, and is free from the mundane concerns of the average citizen. If the generous perquisites attached to the office were considered, the real value of the governor's salary would be considerably greater than Step F, Range 30 of the salary schedule in AS 39.27.011(a).

This bill ignores the education, experience and responsibility which many classified positions require. The state will be unable to attract qualified people to fill highly technical and demanding positions. Due to the specific requirements of some positions, the number of qualified applicants is especially low. To impose an artificial ceiling on salary will further limit the state's ability to recruit and retain the best individuals. The end result will be a mediocrity which the state can ill afford.

The concept of this legislation is diametrically opposite that of the collective bargaining process which the legislature has created. The Public Employment Relations Act (AS 23.40) declares that the state can ensure the orderly operation of government by negotiating with and entering into written agreements with employee organizations on matters of wages, hours, and other terms and conditions of employment. This legislation would limit the ability of the parties to conduct comprehensive negotiations and destroys the principles of the merit system. State government would not be well served by enactment of this legislation.

The inclusion of "geographical differentials" in the definition of "basic salary" totally ignores the economic reality of life in Alaska. People receive geographical differentials because the cost of living in particular areas has been determined to be higher than the cost of living in Anchorage or Juneau. The Department of Administration is currently conducting a statewide geographical differential study to verify the accuracy of the system. It makes little sense to establish the appropriateness of a cost-of-living differential and then deny the same to public employees because of an arbitrary act of the legislature.

The Cooperative Extension Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture at the University of Alaska in Fairbanks reported in a recent survey that the cost of a standard market basket of goods in Nome was priced at 180% of the price of similar items in Anchorage. The geographical differentials exist to compensate for this disparity. Until such time as the governor is required to live in Nome, or any other bush community, the inclusion of the geographical differential as a component in any salary comparison is inappropriate.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Senator Mitch Abood, Chairman
State Affairs Committee

FROM: Cherie Shelley
Executive Director

DATE: February 6, 1985

The Alaska Public Employees Association opposes this bill as a shortsighted effort to gain political points at the expense of the efficient operation of state government. While we recognize the political advantages attached to such legislation, careful review of the issue reveals that this measure is severely flawed.

There is a fundamental difference between a popularly elected governor and a career civil servant. Governors traditionally have considerable personal wealth and seek the office as the culmination of their political careers. While in office, the governor receives subsidized housing, a considerable expense account, and is free from the mundane concerns of the average citizen. If the generous perquisites attached to the office were considered, the real value of the governor's salary would be considerably greater than Step F, Range 30 of the salary schedule in AS 39.27.011(a).

This bill ignores the education, experience and responsibility which many classified positions require. The state will be unable to attract qualified people to fill highly technical and demanding positions. Due to the specific requirements of some positions, the number of qualified applicants is especially low. To impose an artificial ceiling on salary will further limit the state's ability to recruit and retain the best individuals. The end result will be a mediocrity which the state can ill afford.

The concept of this legislation is diametrically opposite that of the collective bargaining process which the legislature has created. The Public Employment Relations Act (AS 23.40) declares that the state can ensure the orderly operation of government by negotiating with and entering into written agreements with employee organizations on matters of wages, hours, and other terms and conditions of employment. This legislation would limit the ability of the parties to conduct comprehensive negotiations and destroys the principles of the merit system. State government would not be well served by enactment of this legislation.

The inclusion of "geographical differentials" in the definition of "basic salary" totally ignores the economic reality of life in Alaska. People receive geographical differentials because the cost of living in particular areas has been determined to be higher than the cost of living in Anchorage or Juneau. The Department of Administration is currently conducting a statewide geographical differential study to verify the accuracy of the system. It makes little sense to establish the appropriateness of a cost-of-living differential and then deny the same to public employees because of an arbitrary act of the legislature.

The Cooperative Extension Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture at the University of Alaska in Fairbanks reported in a recent survey that the cost of a standard market basket of goods in Nome was priced at 180% of the price of similar items in Anchorage. ANALYSIS: Attach a separate page if necessary

Will require proof of IRS filing or payment of the Federal Heavy Truck Use Tax prior to registration for all motor vehicles with a gross vehicle weight (GVW) of 33,000 lbs or over. Alaska vehicle classifications are based on unladen weight rather than GVW, so it is not possible to determine exactly how many vehicles are affected, but an estimate based on unladen weight would be 2,500 to 3,500 vehicles.

ANALYSIS (Continued)

Notification to vehicle owners and collection of the proper forms would require a special mailing, and individual handling. Most of these vehicles are commercial vehicles registered during December, so one position working four months, October through January, would be able to accomplish most of the work and the rest would be absorbed by existing positions.

Cost detail for the program is as follows:

100	Motor Vehicle Representative I, Range 8, 4 months		8.8
300	Mailing Cost	1.4
	Forms	1.0
	Data Processing Programming	2.0
	Data Processing Maintenance	3.0
		7.4	7.4

An inflation factor of 6% has been applied to costs beyond FY86.

DESCRIBE WHY THIS INCREMENT/DECREMENT IS NEEDED AND WHAT IT PURCHASES:

Proposed legislation would amend AS 28.10.021 dealing with vehicle registration to ensure that the vehicle owner has complied with federal regulations requiring that a heavy vehicle use tax be paid if applicable prior to State registration.

Notification to vehicle owners and collection of the proper forms would require a special mailing and individual handling. Most of the affected vehicles are commercial vehicles registered during December, so one seasonal position working four months (October-January) would be able to accomplish most of the additional workload involved in administering the change in Statute.

Costs are projected as follows:

100	One seasonal Motor Vehicle Rep I, Range 8, 4 months		8.8

BILL SHEFFIELD

SB 114

STATE OF ALASKA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
JUNEAU

January 30, 1985

The Honorable Don Bennett
President of the Senate
Alaska State Legislature
Pouch V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Senator Bennett:

Under the authority of art. III, sec. 18, of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a bill that will authorize the division of motor vehicles (DMV), Department of Public Safety, to refuse to register heavy trucks and trailers if the owner of the heavy vehicle does not furnish proof that applicable federal heavy use taxes have been paid. This authorization is necessary to protect Alaska's full apportionment of federal highway funds.

In 1982 the U.S. Congress adopted the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982. The Act increases, as of July 1, 1984, the heavy vehicle use tax which heavy trucks and trailers must pay under sec. 4481 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. Section 143 of the Act (23 U.S.C. sec. 141(d)) authorizes the federal government to withhold up to 25 percent of a state's apportionment of federal highway funds during any year in which heavy vehicles subject to such taxation may be registered in the state without presenting proof of payment of these taxes. The present federal law requires that this proof-of-payment requirement must be effective no later than January 1, 1985.

In order to prevent the loss of these federal highway funds, this bill authorizes DMV to refuse to register a heavy vehicle unless the owner provides proof that the required federal tax has been paid. If an applicant fails to provide the required proof of payment, the applicant's vehicle will not be registered. The State of Alaska is not required to enforce or collect the federal tax.

At line 15, the bill also makes an incidental amendment (deletion of "and bus transportation") to recognize the 1980 repeal of AS 42.15, the chapter on bus transportation to which this provision refers.

I anticipate that Department of Public Safety personnel will be working with legislative committees on possible amendments to the bill, which may be necessitated by pending federal procedural instructions.

In order to avoid the loss of federal funding needed for Alaska's highway system, I urge your passage of this bill.

Sincerely,

Bill Sheffield

Position Paper

BILL NO: Senate Bill 114

APPROVED: R. J. Knapp
Commissioner

TITLE: An act relating to the registration of heavy vehicles; and providing for an effective date.

DATE: March 1, 1985

The Alaska Department of Transportation and Public Facilities urges speedy passage of Senate Bill (SB) 114. SB 114 enables the Division of Motor Vehicles in the Department of Public Safety to require proof-of-payment of the federal heavy vehicle use tax before registering heavy vehicles in the State of Alaska. The heavy vehicle use tax is one of a number of user fees that fund highway improvements through the federal Highway Trust Fund. The State of Alaska receives a very favorable distribution from the Highway Trust Fund; this distribution is over nine times the amount collected through federal taxes on highway use in Alaska.

If SB 144 is not enacted, Alaska will be subject to a reduction in our Interstate apportionments from the highway trust fund. This reduction in funds will hurt the Department's efforts to improve Alaska's Interstate System, consisting of the Parks, Alaska, Glenn and Tok Cut-off highways and portions of the Richardson, Seward, and Sterling highways. The Department estimates that withholding, when applied, will cost the state over $10 million a year in Interstate apportionments. In a time of declining oil revenues and pressing road improvement needs, the state can ill afford any loss of federal-aid highway funds.

§ 141. Enforcement of requirements

(a) Each State shall certify to the Secretary before January 1 of each year that it is enforcing all speed limits on public highways in accordance with section 154 of this title. The Secretary shall not approve any project under section 106 of this title in any State which has failed to certify in accordance with this subsection.

(b) Each State shall certify to the Secretary before January 1 of each year that it is enforcing all State laws respecting maximum vehicle size and weights permitted on the Federal-aid primary system, the Federal-aid urban system, and the Federal-aid secondary system, including the Interstate System in accordance with section 127 of this title.

(c) (1) Each State shall submit to the Secretary such information as the Secretary shall, by regulation, require as necessary, in his opinion, to verify the certification of such State under subsection (b) of this section.

(2) If a State fails to certify as required by subsection (b) of this section or if the Secretary determines that a State is not adequately enforcing all State laws respecting such maximum vehicle size and weights, notwithstanding such a certification, then Federal-aid highway funds apportioned to such State for such fiscal year shall be reduced by amounts equal to 10 per centum of the amount which would otherwise be apportioned to such State under section 104 of this title.

(3) If within one year from the date that the apportionment for any State is reduced in accordance with paragraph (2) of this subsection the Secretary determines that such State is enforcing all State laws respecting maximum size and weights, the apportionment of such State shall be increased by an amount equal to such reduction. If the Secretary does not make such a determination within such one-year period, the amounts so withheld shall be reapportioned to all other eligible States.

(d) The Secretary shall reduce the State's apportionment of Federal-aid highway funds under section 104(b)(5) of this title in an amount up to 25 per centum of the amount to be apportioned in any fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1984, during which heavy vehicles, subject to the use tax imposed by section 4481 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, may be lawfully registered in the State without having presented proof of payment, in such form as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, of the use tax imposed by section 4481 of such Code. Amounts withheld from apportionment to a State under this subsection shall be apportioned to the other States pursuant to the formulas of section 104(b)(5) of this title and shall be available in the same manner and to the same extent as other Interstate funds apportioned at the same time to other States.

Prior Provisions. A prior section 141, Pub.L. 90-495, § 35(a), Aug. 23, 1968, 82 Stat. 836, providing for real property acquisition policies, was repealed by Pub.L. 91-646, Title III, § 306, Jan. 2, 1971, 84 Stat. 1907, and is now covered by sections 4651(1), (3), and (5) and 4655(1) of Title 42, The Public Health and Welfare.

1978 Amendment. Pub.L. 95-599 redesignated existing provisions as subsecs. (a) and (b) and added subsec. (c).

Effective Date of 1978 Amendment. Section 123(c) of Pub.L. 95-599, formerly set out as a note under this section, providing that subsec. (c) (2) and (3) of this section be applicable to certifications required by this section to be filed on or after Jan. 1, 1980, was repealed by Pub.L. 96-106, § 12, Nov. 9, 1979, 93 Stat. 798.

Enforcement of Vehicle Weight Limitations. Section 123(a) to (c) of Pub.L. 95-599 provided that:

"(a) Not later than the one-hundred-eightieth day after the date of enactment of this section [Nov. 6, 1978], the Secretary of Transportation, hereinafter referred to as the 'Secretary', in consultation with each State shall inventory the existing system of penalties for violations of vehicle weight laws, rules, and regulations on any portion of any Federal-aid system in such State. Each State shall annually thereafter report to the Secretary its current inventory.

"(b) (1) Not later than the one-hundred-eightieth day after the date of enactment of this section [Nov. 6, 1978], the Secretary, in consultation with each State, shall inventory the existing system in such State for the issuance of special permits. Each State shall annually thereafter report to the Secretary its current inventory.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'special permit' means a license or permit issued pursuant to State law, rule, or regulation which authorizes a vehicle to exceed the weight limitation for such vehicle established under State law, rule, or regulation.

"(c) Not later than January 1 of the second calendar year which begins after the date of enactment of this section [Nov. 6, 1978] and each calendar year thereafter the Secretary shall submit to Congress an annual report together with such recommendations as the Secretary deems necessary on (1) the latest annual inventory of State systems of penalties required by subsection (a) of this section; (2) the latest annual inventory of State systems for the issuance of special permits required by subsection (b) of this section; (3) the annual certification submitted by each State required by section 141(b) of title 23, United States Code [subsec. (b) of this section]."

§ 142. Public transportation

(a) (1) To encourage the development, improvement, and use of public mass transportation systems operating motor vehicles (other than on rail) on Federal-aid highways for the transportation of passengers (hereafter in this section referred to as "buses"), so as to increase the traffic capacity of the Federal-aid systems for the movement of persons, the Secretary may approve as a project on any Federal-aid system the construction of exclusive or preferential high occupancy vehicle lanes, highway traffic control devices, bus passenger loading areas and facilities (including shelters), and fringe and transportation corridor parking facilities to serve high occupancy vehicle and public mass transportation passengers, and sums apportioned under section 104(b) of this title shall be available to finance the cost of projects under this paragraph. If fees are charged for the use of any parking facility constructed under this section, the rate thereof shall not be in excess of that required for maintenance and operation of the facility and the cost of providing shuttle service to and from the facility (including compensation to any person for operating the facility and for providing such shuttle service).

(2) In addition to the projects under paragraph (1), the Secretary may, beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1975, approve as a project on the Federal-aid urban system, for payment from sums apportioned under section 104(b)(6) of this title, the purchase of buses, and, beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1976, approve as a project on the Federal-aid urban system, for payment from sums apportioned under section 104(b)(6) of this title, the construction, reconstruction, and improvement of fixed rail facilities, including the purchase of rolling stock for fixed rail, except that not more than $200,000,000 of all sums apportioned for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1975, under section 104(b)(6) shall be available for the payment of the Federal share of projects for the purchase of buses.

(b) Sums apportioned in accordance with paragraph (5) of subsection (b) of section 104 of this title shall be available to finance the Federal share of projects for exclusive or preferential high occupancy vehicle, truck, and emergency vehicle routes or lanes. Routes constructed under this subsection shall not be subject to the third sentence of section 109(b) of this title.

(c) Whenever responsible local officials of an urbanized area notify the State highway department that, in lieu of a highway project the Federal share of which is to be paid from funds apportioned under section 104(b)(6) of this title for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1974, and June 30, 1975, their needs require a nonhighway public mass transit project involving the construction of fixed rail facilities, or the purchase of passenger equipment, including rolling stock for any mode of mass transit, or both, and the State highway department determines that such public mass transit project is in accordance with the planning process under section 134 of this title and is entitled to priority under such planning process, such public mass transit project shall be submitted for approval to the Secretary. The Honorable Don Bennett
Alaska State Legislature
Pouch V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Senator Bennett:

Under the authority of art. III, sec. 18, of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a bill relating to petroleum engineers and petroleum geologists in state service. Current law provides that these professionals are in the exempt service, except for those employed in the division of geological and geophysical surveys (GGS) in the Department of Natural Resources. The attached bill would delete this exception, thus bringing all these professionals within the exempt service.

The petroleum engineers and geologists employed in the division of geological and geophysical surveys handle sensitive and confidential oil and gas data, and are involved in deciding what tracts the state should lease. It is important that the state have the flexibility to employ the best professionals available for these positions. The petroleum engineer and geologist positions within the GGS division have evolved to a level of responsibility commensurate with those professionals employed elsewhere in the Department of Natural Resources and by the Oil and Gas Conservation Commission -- all of whom are presently in the exempt service. There is no reason to exempt some of these positions but not all of them.

Sincerely,

Bill Sheffield

Re: Testimony for HB 130.

I introduced this bill by request of the Division of Motor Vehicles. (DMV). It has been proposed that the Section 1 of AS 28.40.100 (a) (9) be amended to redefine the defination of a "motor-driven cycle". It will lower the cubic centimeters of a cycle from 150cc to 50cc or less.

This is being proposed because of the young children driving motorcycles without a drivers license. Probably one of the main concerns is the three wheel cycles that are out on the market. With this amendment, a child would be required to have a drivers license before he could ride a cycle such as this.

The rewording would make it clearer to those who purchase motor cycles for their children.

Re: Rewording of AS 28.35.260 (9)

The present wording of the definition of "motor-driven" cycle is misleading.

A cycle that has less than 150 cc's and a brake horsepower of 5 or less is classified by the Division of Motor Vehicles as a motor-driven cycle. The present wording states "or with not to exceed five brake-horsepower".

There are on the market today, many cycles that have less than 150 cc's but are definitely more than 5 brake horsepower.

Brake horsepower is defined as a means of measurement to the amount of power exerted to stop movement. Many of the cycles on the market require considerably more power to be exerted to stop the movement of the cycle.

The confusion in the wording of the present statute has resulted in parents purchasing for their 14-year old children, cycles that have less than 150 cc's, but definitely require more than 5 brake horsepower. The child, of course, cannot be eligible to operate such a vehicle until he reaches the age of 16. (AS 28.15.031 and AS 28.15.051 (d).

Sec. 04.16.015. PRICING AND PROMOTION OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES. (a) On premises where alcoholic beverages are sold by the drink, a licensee or a licensee's agent or employee may not

(1) offer or deliver, as a promotional device, free alcoholic beverages to a person or group of persons;

(2) deliver an alcoholic beverage to a person already possessing two or more;

(3) sell, offer to sell, or deliver alcoholic beverages to a person or group of persons at a price less than the price regularly charged for the beverages during the same calendar week, except at private functions not open to the general public;

(4) sell, offer to sell, or deliver an unlimited number of alcoholic beverages to a person or group of persons during a set period of time for a fixed price;

(5) sell, offer to sell, or deliver alcoholic beverages to a person or group of persons on any one day at prices less than those charged the general public on that day, except at private functions not open to the general public;

(6) encourage or permit an organized game or contest on the licensed premises that involves drinking alcoholic beverages or the awarding of alcoholic beverages as prizes.

(b) A licensee or a licensee's agent or employee may not advertise or promote in any way, either on or off the premises, any of the practices prohibited under (a) of this section.

(c) Nothing contained in this section shall be construed to prohibit a licensee or a licensee's agent or employee from offering free food or entertainment at any time, from serving wine by the bottle or carafe or beer by the pitcher with meals, or from including an alcoholic beverage as part of a meal package.

Letter of intent - Senate State Affairs

SB 138 - An Act relating to pricing an promotion of alcoholic beverage.

February 20, 1986

It is the intent of the Senate State Affairs Committee in adopting the committee substitute for SB 138, that licensee's of premises where alcoholic beverages are sold by the drink be prohibited from sponsoring "happy Hours" and similar types of alcohol promotion that encourage excessive drinking.

The committee intends that such prohibitions be applied only to actions of the licensee or licensee's agent and not to actions of individuals patrons. Specifically, the Committee intends that the prohibition in Sec. 04.16.015(6) against encouraging or permitting organized games or contests that involve drinking alcoholic beverages or awarding alcoholic beverages as prizes be limited to licensee's or their agents and not to individual patrons.

Re: SB 138 - prohibiting "happy hours"

SB 138 prohibits establishments where alcohol is served from sponsoring "happy hours", drinking contests, or similar kinds of alcohol promotion.

The bill is modeled after similar legislation adopted recently in four other states and currently being considered by 17 others.

SB 138 is designed to prohibit alcohol promotion schemes that encourage excessive or irresponsible drinking. It is consistent with laws adopted in Alaska in the last four years to curb drunk driving and other alcohol-related crimes.

A major theme of these laws has been individual responsibility, including the expectation that people should drink responsibly and that those who serve alcohol should do so responsibly.

The kinds of alcohol promotion prohibited by SB 138 encourage people to drink excessive amounts of alcohol in a short period of time - a sure inducement for drunkenness. "Happy hours" are a particular evil because they are specifically aimed at catching workers after work on their way home, usually by private automobile.

Many bar owners oppose "happy hours" but feel compelled to promote them in order to effectively compete with establishments that regularly sponsor them.

During Interim • 1024 W. 6th Avenue, Suite 204C • Anchorage, Alaska 99501 • (907) 278-3654

SB 138 does not prevent a license holder from offering free food or entertainment, or other types of promotion. It does prohibit bar owners from sponsoring events that encourage irresponsible drinking behavior.

Private functions are not affected by SB 138.

Last year, the Municipality of Anchorage adopted a tough city ordinance similar to SB 138. The ordinance, however, provides no enforcement power. Instead, the Assembly will look at an establishments compliance with the ordinance when considering whether to approve renewal of their liquor license. It is assumed that the Assembly will recommend that the ABC Board not renew a license when the establishment has failed to comply with the ordinance. The Board, however, is not bound by regulation or law to follow the Municipality's recommendation. Thus far, most Anchorage liquor establishments have chosen to comply with the ordinance, although many have not.

In spite of Anchorage's efforts, the fact remains: Alcohol abuse is a statewide problem and we need a statewide approach to stop irresponsible alcohol promotion.

We all suffer the effects of irresponsible drinking. We know that the easy availability of alcohol and cut-rate prices have a direct effect on the amount and type of consumption. It's time we took a positive step toward encouraging responsible drinking. SB 138 is a good first step.

SB 138 is endorsed by alcohol counselors, bar owners, and hundreds of concerned Alaskans including the local chapter of MADD. It has a zero fiscal note.

Re: SB 138 Pricing and Promotion of Alcoholic Beverages

This measure limits practices that encourage excessive drinking through promotions such as two for one specials, jumbo drinks at regular prices and other happy hour specials. Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, and Ohio have also outlawed similiar forms of liquor promotion.

This bill prohibits premises where alcoholic beverages are sold by the drink to offer free or discounted drinks, or to deliver alcoholic beverages to a person possessing two or more. Drinking contests and alcoholic beverages as prizes would also be banned.

Private functions are not affected. In addition, nothing prevents the license holder from offering free food or entertainment, or from serving wine by the botte or carafe or beer by the pitcher with meals.

Alcohol abuse is one of, if not, the major health risk facing Alaskans. A 1984 Department of Health and Social Services survey showed alcohol abuse to be the number one concern. Alaska has the 12th highest percentage of acute drinkers in the nation and has the third highest number of chronic drinkers.

Dear Senator Fischer,

MADD supports the enclosed bills that have been introduced in the legislature this year.

Singly and collectively, these bills will contribute to reducing the incidence of drunken driving. While there has been a reduction in the number of drunk driving fatalities, we have a long way to go.

You may recall that in the decision in the case of State of Alaska vs Erickson, the state Supreme Court commented that alcohol is more dangerous than cocaine. Because of several laws passed by the legislature in recent years, Alaska is establishing itself as a progressive state in matters relating to reducing alcohol abuse. We urge you to continue this fine record by passing these bills.

Sincerely,

Katherine Bigler

Re: Status of Municipal ordinance banning "happy hours" etc.

Municipal ordinance 85-128S was adopted August 13th, 1985. Parts of the ordinance, specifically the requirement for training courses for people who serve alcohol, did not become effective until December 1, 1985.

Ordinance 85-128S requires:

- prohibits 2 for 1 sales
- prohibits advertising free drinks
- prohibits selling drinks at any reduced price
- prohibits drinking contests or games based on drinking
- requires bars to "provide access" to public transportation for those patrons apparently under the influence of alcohol
- requires that bars put visable notice about the legal penalties for drunk driving and penalties for selling to a minor or to anyone under the influence of alcohol
- requires bars to serve non-alcoholic drinks
- requires people who serve alcohol to complete a training course approved by the state ABC board

The municipality has no real ability to enforce this ordinance. Enforcement comes indirectly through the Assembly. When a liquor license is up for renewal, the Assembly will look at how they have complied with this ordinance and make recommendations to the ABC board, based on that compliance. It is unlikely that the ABC board would choose to renew a license when the Assembly has recommended against renewal based on violation of a municipal ordinance.

However, the muni can't require anything from the state ABC Board - which is why we need your bill, not just a municipal ordinance!

Happy hours increase consumption of booze

Dear Editor:

It should come as no surprise that MADD (Mothers Against Drunk Drivers) is disappointed with your March 1 editorial comments in support of "Happy hours" in bars.

Our office regularly receives telephone calls from individuals who are worried about their spouse driving home in the evening after having spent a few hours in a bar during a happy hour.

The happy hours take several forms — two for the price of one, three for the price of one, mixed drinks by the pitcher, free beer without a limit on consumption. It is a well established fact that price and consumption of booze are closely related — the lower the price the greater the consumption.

Several bar owners have told us they are philosophically opposed to happy hours, but schedule them to meet the competition.

Sen. Fischer's bill should be supported to help reduce drunken driving.

Katherine Bigler
President
Anchorage Chapter MADD

For the industry, it represents a first step toward deregulation. For consumers, it represents a chance for price competition in many markets and protection from the remaining monopolies. For the commission, it represents the new regulatory tools needed to manage a complex and rapidly changing industry.

The details of the compromise were hammered out through a lengthy hearing and negotiation process conducted by the Joint Select Committee on Telecommunications, a special, bipartisan study committee created in 1983. Because the committee was funded by the WUTC's dedicated revolving fund, and staffed by two attorneys specializing in telecommunications issues, it was able to examine, in depth, all facets of the industry. The committee held 15 hearings, sponsored a symposium on state regulation of telecommunications at the University of Washington, and attempted to operate on a consensual basis. Because the draft legislation was developed by an expert committee staff, rather than by industry or consumer groups, all parties came to see the resulting bill as a careful attempt to develop a legislative approach emphasizing the public interest.

Creating a Joint Select Committee was seen as providing the flexibility the Legislature needs to address new and complex issues. More important, it allowed the Legislature to set the agenda for regulatory reform, rather than simply react to industry proposals.

When the short-term pressures caused by the AT&T divestiture have ended, the Joint Select Committee's work can be taken over by the relevant standing committees or, if appropriate, by a new standing committee. In an era of cutback and consolidation, a carefully chartered study committee can be a needed and welcome legislative addition.

'Happy hour' double or nothing

"Two-for-one" and half-price drink specials may someday be a social phenomenon of the past. The institution of "happy hour" is rapidly disappearing as a result of the escalating battle against drunk driving. While happy-hour bans vary in stringency, the message is clear: Overindulgence in alcohol is becoming less acceptable.

Four states — Arizona, Indiana, Kansas, and Oklahoma — have passed legislation this session limiting happy-hour arrangements, and bills were introduced in at least 17 other states. According to Oklahoma state Representative Don Duke, sponsor of that state's measure, a happy-hour law was necessary to "cut down on drunk driving and save lives."

Most happy-hour restrictions, however, are administrative regulations. Delaware, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nebraska, New Jersey, North Carolina, Ohio, and Texas, for instance, regulate drink promotions. George McCarthy, chairman of the Massachusetts Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission, says the potential to save lives justifies the burden of adopting and implementing happy-hour regulations. Alcoholic beverage control agencies in Pennsylvania, Tennessee, and Virginia are also considering such bans.

Few laws contain the words "happy hour." New Jersey's Division of Alcoholic Beverage Control has a long-standing regulation that prohibits any practice "unduly designed to increase the consumption of alcoholic beverages" through rebates, coupons, or other discounts. Other laws target "two drinks for the price of one" or "all-you-can-drink" and "beat-the-clock" promotions.

The most restrictive regulation is found in Massachusetts. This much-publicized law specifically bans free drinks, delivery of more than two drinks at one time, unlimited drinks during set time periods, and the sale of pitchers of alcohol or beer to fewer than two persons. It also prohibits discounts to specific groups (such as "ladies' nights"), games or contests involving drinking, and increasing the size of a drink without increasing its price.

In general, brewers and distillers have reacted positively to these new laws. "We wouldn't oppose regulations against practices that encourage over-consumption, such as drink-and-drown nights," says Ed Miles, director of state affairs for Anheuser-Busch, Inc. Miles does admit that bans on discounted drinks pose a dilemma for retailers of alcoholic beverages. "There is a place for responsible price promotion at the retail level to promote a particular brand or item," he says. "It is part of the spirit of competitiveness and benefits the consumer to allow the promotion of businesses and brands."

Indeed, many proprietors see happy-hour bans as an infringement on the free-enterprise system, according to Ronnie Hart, executive vice president of the Tennessee Restaurant Association, which opposes the Tennessee Alcoholic Beverage Commission's proposed happy-hour ban. "We're over-regulated as it is," says Hart. "We're people with products to sell and the government shouldn't tell us what the profit margin should be." Although unsure about how harmful such a ban would be to restaurant profits, Hart claims the issue is "the principle of the thing."

A similar attitude was partly responsible for the failure of a Florida measure that, among other things, would have prohibited the dispensing of free alcoholic beverages. Representatives of the hotel and motel industry lobbied against the bill, protesting that it would adversely affect their businesses by preventing hotels from offering complimentary drinks to guests. "The committee members felt it would interfere with free enterprise and we couldn't tell what good it would do," says Representative Wayne Hollingsworth, chairman of the House Alcoholic Beverage Subcommittee, whose members unanimously voted against the bill.

In Rhode Island, interference with free enterprise was the reason the governor's office and many legislators initially opposed Senator Richard Patterson's bill, which would have prohibited any change in alcoholic beverage prices during a given week. But Patterson amended the bill, and the new version was incorporated into a House bill sponsored by Representative Charles Baldelli. The new measure, which passed both houses June 21, allows restaurants to discount drinks that are served with meals.

As for the retailers, Senator Patterson said there had been some opposition from bar and tavern owners, but "we actually thought there would be more." Apparently, many retailers have become reluctant to resist the growing movement against irresponsible drinking. — Michelle Kissell

On-line access: Good-bye to legislative paper chasing

Paper chasing has always been a necessary — but burdensome — part of the legislative process. Now, in at least 11 states, lobbyists and lawmakers alike have a new way for the private sector to obtain timely information without the paper chase: direct, on-line access to select legislative data bases.

Alaska, Florida, Illinois, Kansas, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New York, North Dakota, Oregon and Virginia currently offer such access. Armed with a password and basic computer skills, private-sector users can verify the status of a bill or, in some instances, the wording of a statute, by connecting directly to the legislative computer.

In addition to charging for access, all states except Florida require users to provide their own computers.

The impetus for giving private parties access to legislative data bases has varied from state to state. According to Walter Kesselman, former executive director of the Illinois Legislative Information System and now acting director of Computer and Information Services for the University of Maryland (Baltimore County), Illinois first allowed private-sector access to free up legislative staff. Says Kesselman, "We wanted to get the lobbyists back in their offices and out of our staff offices. And we succeeded."

One of the two commissioners of the New York Legislature's Bill Drafting Commission, David Keiper, tells a different story. "People from various walks of life — banking, insurance, unions — requested access," he says, giving rise to a test run: a 1984 pilot project successful enough to secure a permanent place for private-sector access. The state now has about 75 outside users. "We have lawyers, lobbyists, private corporations — even IBM is a customer," says Keiper.

Nevada Legislative Council Director Donald Rhodes describes another stimulus for allowing access. 1985 was Nevada's first year for private-sector access, as well as the first year for the Legislature's new information system. The two are interconnected.

"We were told by the vendor that we could offset the costs of purchasing the system," says Rhodes, "[by] selling the information to outside users. It was really just an extension of other services."

But for many states, the issue has not been so simple. In Kansas, cost has been an issue, as it has been in virtually all of the states. At present, Kansas charges only $100 per session. "It's more of a token fee than a real charge," says Mary Chang, information systems specialist with the Office of the Revisor of the Statutes. "It doesn't actually recover costs." According to Chang, this policy is philosophically based: "The Legislative Coordinating Council wanted to make sure that the data was available to everyone."

In Montana, the issue was a nagging security problem. During the 1983 session, "We ran bill status and newspaper, and the University of Massachusetts at Amherst is rejecting distributors' offers to co-sponsor concerts. "We recommend that all beer advertising be taken out of student newspapers and sporting events," says William J. McCord, the director of South Carolina's Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

Brewing Issue: Beer Promotions in College Pubs And at Concerts and Athletic Events Spark Debate

Colleges also are drafting rules for beer promotions. The Inter-Association Task Force on Alcohol Issues, made up of several national associations involved in student affairs, in 1983 called on brewers to rid their promotions of sexism, stop emphasizing heavy drinking and to support campus alcohol-education programs.

Anheuser-Busch, Heileman, Coors and Stroh Brewery Co. drafted their own guidelines for their distributors, patterned after the task force's. Alan Easton, Miller's vice president of corporate affairs, says the company leans on its distributors to stick to the guidelines, but he concedes that policing is difficult, especially in bars near campuses. "The promotions we tell them they shouldn't be doing are exactly the things they feel are necessary to attract the young crowd," he says.

Brewers increasingly also are helping finance so-called responsible-drinking programs on campuses. Anheuser-Busch recently opened an informational campaign called "Know When to Say When" that stresses moderation. Since 1976, Miller has contributed $500,000 to an alcohol-abuse program with chapters on 180 campuses.

But that is a small fraction of what the industry spends to promote beer, so critics charge that brewers merely are trying to head off tougher regulation. Indeed, in a bulletin to its 750 Miller distributors last March, Leonard J. Goldstein, the sales vice president, cautioned that obeying campus marketing guidelines "is critical to preserving our ability to conduct business in the important college market."

Support of Activities

Brewers have promoted on campus for decades, of course. Anheuser-Busch's Mr. Roarty began his career with the brewer as a University of Detroit campus representative in 1953. But promotional efforts became more aggressive in the early 1970s, when the states began to lower the drinking age and brewers generally adopted advanced marketing techniques. "It was about that time the companies started to support intramurals, campus unions, dances and parties," recalls Gary North, the University of Illinois vice chancellor of student affairs.

Now, for example, Moosehead beer, which is imported from Canada by All Brand Importers Inc., provides Boston University's 500-member ski club with Moosehead merchandise and beer at cost, says James Harrington, the club's vice president. The distributor also offers the club use of a Moose costume. "If we have a club meeting, we can have someone standing around in the costume," Mr. Harrington says.

The industry provides a promotional blitz for spring break, too. Together with tourism officials in Florida and other spring-break destinations, brewers offer promotional trips and beach concerts. Miller runs recycling campaigns on Fort Lauderdale Beach, trading Miller merchandise and free calls home for empties and rubbish. Anheuser-Busch grabs students' attention along routes to spring-break destinations with coffee-break stops. "Students can pull in, enjoy a cup of coffee and a doughnut and call home," says Mr. Roarty. "No alcoholic beverages are served."

At scores of campuses, brewers help promote athletics. Compliments of Anheuser-Busch, Boston College gave out 1,000 pompoms and 5,000 bandannas—with the Bud logo and the college's eagle mascot—at two football games last year.

Sara Groden, the college's director of sports promotions, says she also negotiated about $15,000 of promotions from Anheuser-Busch to support sports that lack the high profile of basketball and football. The brewer "will give away things that we can't afford" and help attract crowds, Miss Groden says. Also, "the coaches will send those things out to recruits," which "makes the sport look real important," she says.

Role of Reps

Campus representatives are the brewers' direct link to campus activities, and Miller employs 120 of them. Heileman and Anheuser-Busch employ even more. Boston College's Mr. Marrocco is one of 14 students who promote Miller at major Boston-area colleges, including Harvard, Tufts, Boston University and Northeastern. For $50 a week, Mr. Marrocco peddles Miller brands to fraternities, dormitories and student-activities directors and also monitors the competition.

Mr. Morrocco has helped Miller book two promotional nights at the campus pub, where manager Michael O'Brien allows one such promotional night a week. They "keep giving us promotional stuff" like painters' caps and T-shirts that draw students to the pub, he says. (The giveaways are tax-deductible for brewers.)

Not all brewers' promotions are welcome. Boston College's student government, which runs student activities on a budget of $275,000, is torn over whether to accept Miller's co-sponsorship of a campus concert. Some members "see it as student government promoting alcohol," says Jeffrey Thielman, the president. But a large concert costs about $20,000, so having a co-sponsor is appealing, he says.

Still, administrators don't like the idea. "I'm concerned about institutionalizing alcohol," says Carole Wegman, the college's director of student programs and resources and she opposes Miller's support.

Shootout Is Shot Down

Similarly, at the University of Southern Illinois, Anheuser-Busch's $40,000 "Busch Shootout" basketball tournament caused considerable opposition last school year. The many Anheuser-Busch posters and other merchandise made the basketball arena look like a bar, says Mr. McKillip, the psychology professor who opposes beer promotions. "Universities are in a bind because they have athletic programs beyond their budgets," he says. "So they are willing to take any money they can." But the opposition has caused Busch to pull out of the shootout promotion this year.

Miller's promotion of a rock concert on the campus also caused a furor, especially a 20-foot-tall inflated replica of a beer bottle that hovered above the campus. "That was simply more than we felt we could engage in," says Bruce Swinburn, the college's vice president of student affairs. But Miller does still support some student activities, he says.

Beer advertising in student newspapers also draws criticism. At the University of Minnesota, the Minnesota Daily "accepts a lot of ads from bars that literally say skip your class and come and drink," says James Rothenberger, a public-health professor.

Ad Is Withdrawn

His file of ads that he finds offensive includes one for Grandma's Saloon & Deli that shows a man and woman amid bacchanalian revelry. Its message: "Because some nights you don't feel like studying. Or is it most nights?" A large Miller ad shows a student dashing from his dorm-room desk as a radio blares, "Repeating . . . due to a computer foul-up, finals week will be postponed." In the foreground are a bottle and a mug of Miller and the familiar "Welcome to Miller Time" slogan.

Miller's Mr. Easton says the brewer pulled the ad after it ran in several college newspapers. "It got out there, and it probably shouldn't have," he says. But he defends an ad for Miller's Lowenbrau brand that Mr. Rothenberger of Minnesota also found disturbing. The ad shows two roommates helping a third student study, with an inset of the trio and two women drinking at a bar afterward. Mr. Easton concedes, "There's a very thin line between doing appealing, impactful ads and intruding on the purpose of student life."

In some promotions, however, the line isn't all that thin. Miller once offered to have its six-member sky-diving team, called the Six Pack, bail out of a plane, land at a Boston College football game wearing uniforms with the Miller logo, and deliver the game ball to the referee. Not to be outdone, Anheuser-Busch proposed throwing can openers with the Bud logo into the stands.

Boston College declined both offers.

Opinions differ on happy hour dangers

By LUCY INMAN

Blair Ligon, a 28-year-old graphic designer, ended his workday Wednesday as he does every Wednesday — with a couple of drinks at the Rathskeller restaurant's happy hour.

"This is a refreshing pitstop from the mad rat race," said Ligon, who for the past year has been meeting a dozen or more of his friends at the Hillsborough Street restaurant for the same weekly purpose.

"It's just a good time," Ligon said. "It's one of the few rituals left in my life."

Ligon arrived at the happy hour about 6:20 p.m. and bought two vodka screwdrivers by 7 p.m., when alcohol prices go back to the normal price. Asked if the reduced prices for drinks contribute to the amount he imbibes, Ligon said "Sure." For some in the group, cheap prices justified buying four or five drinks.

Ligon, who also drank two non-alcoholic drinks before leaving his friends, said he has little trouble driving safely from happy hour to home about three miles away.

In Massachusetts, the happy hour ritual will soon be outlawed. Lawmakers in in that state passed a law effective Dec. 10 banning happy hour discounts on drinks. The law is aimed at curbing drunk driving.

Raleigh area law enforcement officials differ on whether happy hours are dangerous.

Raleigh Police Chief Frederick K. Heineman said he thinks happy hours might spare this community from some other dangerous situations.

"Without happy hour you might have more wife beatings and child abuse cases," he said. "I personally like happy hour."

Heineman said he doesn't think happy hours are linked to an increased amount of drunk driving. "People are going to drink. If anything, happy hours influence which bars people go to to drink. They don't create drinkers, just like lowering the tax on cigarettes wouldn't create smokers."

"By raising the drinking age (from 18 to 19) hopefully we've achieved a more mature group of drinkers," he said. "Adults ought to be able to take care of themselves. But if they don't, we are still going to stop them," he said, noting that his preference for such promotions doesn't limit his assertiveness for safety's sake.

some adult motorists are not responsible enough to be tempted by cheap drinks. "Some might drink more than they normally would with this type of special, and that could lead them to be impaired on the road," said Lt. Arnold W. Rector said a law like the one in Massachusetts would have a "psychological effect" like that of the Safe Roads Act. "It appears that it would make a substantial contribution to safety of North Carolina highways," he said. "Personally I would support legislation like that."

The time of many happy hours — late afternoons — is dangerous because that's also rush hour, Rector said. "Just imagine rush hour around Raleigh. It takes a sober, sane and patient driver to drive under those conditions. And realize that the first effects of alcohol is on the judgment," he said.

According to local and state statistics, the majority of arrests for driving while impaired and the majority of alcohol-related accidents occur between 11 p.m. and 3 a.m.

While most customers and sellers of alcoholic beverages say happy hour prices alone don't cause extra drinking, they agree that the early evening and late night happy hours have created new crowds for bars that otherwise might depend on rushes of businesses during peak eating and drinking hours. And some say the attraction may encourage more drinking.

Many Raleigh bars and restaurants have happy hours to bring in customers during slow times.

At Ferrari's, a popular bar on Western Boulevard, offers "Beat the Clock" every Thursday.

"Beer starts at 25 cents at eight o'clock and goes up a quarter every hour," Ferrari's owner Paul Swenson said in a interview.

At the Darryl's restaurant on Hillsborough Street, happy hour is called "Fun Time." During Fun Time, from 4 to 7 p.m. and from 10:30 until closing, prices are reduced for both beer and many mixed drinks.

Some businesses have brought in too much business with happy hours. Crowley's Old Time Favorites, a neighborhood bar and restaurant on Medlin Drive, recently ended its all-night happy hour on Mondays because the business' receipts for alcohol were dangerously approaching the legal limit — 50 percent of business.

"We were selling too much alcohol," owner Patrick Crowley said. On Saturday and Sunday night happy hours, the bar has standing room only.

At Mitch's Tavern on Hillsborough Street, owner Mitch Hazouri said he doesn't like happy hours. Hazouri said that when he raised the price of beer a couple of years ago, "I just didn't raise it for the crowd that comes before eight."

Hazouri said he doesn't advertise any deals, however, because he doesn't like the idea of happy hour promotions. "It is not a proper thing for someone who is licensed by the state to do," Hazouri said. "I think we should set a good example, and I don't think it's necessarily a good example to link alcohol with fun."

Some other bar owners agree with Hazouri, and most say they wouldn't mind stopping happy hour.

"There are certain people that only come for specials and that's not the type of customer that bars really want," said Swenson. "We'd be successful without happy hours," he said. He said revenue wouldn't decrease even if the amount of alcohol did because there would be no discounts.

"Places would just have to find another way to compete," Swenson said. But he said he doesn't like the idea of added government regulation in such an unlikely area. "When is somebody gonna be responsible for themselves?"

How to Combat Drunkenness

By Morris E. Chafetz

WASHINGTON — Almost everyone elieves that the tough Scandinavian pproach to drunken driving is the nswer to an old and worrisome prob-lem that is accentuated each New Year's Eve. I think they are wrong. In the long run, a broad effort to educate the public on how to control drunkenness would be far more effective.

Recent studies of drunken driving show that tough laws, strict enforcement and swift punishment do work, but only in the short term. In Sweden, for example, drunken-driving arrests are down, but fatalities from drunken-driving remain the same.

Police in Michigan and Delaware report that a much higher level of drunken-driving arrests doesn't significantly alter the statistics on drunken-driving deaths and injuries. H. Laurence Ross, author of "Deterring the Drunken Driver," explained the apparent incongruity when he wrote that an estimated 5,000 alcohol-impaired miles are driven for every arrest, and 330,000 miles of drunken driving takes place for every fatality.

Another Scandinavian approach — that of using "designated drivers" who agree not to drink in order to drive others home — is being embraced in this country. However, there is an alarming side-effect: drinkers who know they won't have to drive take the arrangement as a license to get drunk. A recent acceleration of alcohol problems in Sweden may be an unexpected outcome of the designated-driver program.

We are also experimenting in dangerous waters with the recent Federal law requiring states to raise their drinking ages to 21 or lose Federal highway assistance. This kind of Federal blackmail subverts the intent of the 21st Amendment, which not only repealed Prohibition but specifically forbade the Federal Government to meddle in states' alcohol policies. Since young people can easily get marijuana and other illicit drugs, why do policy makers think they won't be able to buy alcohol?

If saving lives is the rationale behind raising the national drinking age, there is an easier way to do it. "Raising the drinking age can save only 5 to 15 percent of teenage auto fatalities," says Yale's Leon Robertson, "but raising the driving age can spare 65 to 80 percent." We should establish a single majority age so that alcohol doesn't stand out as a major attraction to the young.

To stop drunken driving, all of us must become part of the solution. We can do this through education. We've already shown people how they can

We should establish a single majority age so that alcohol doesn't stand out as a major attraction to the young.

To stop drunken driving, all of us must become part of the solution. We can do this through education. We've already shown people how they can preserve their health by quitting smoking, exercising, eating better and reducing stress. We teach unskilled people how to save lives with the Heimlich maneuver, cardio-pulmonary resuscitation and various life-saving measures.

Why not use similar techniques to combat drunkenness? We already have easily learned techniques on how to spot, interrupt and prevent impending intoxication. We can't look away when family members, friends, colleagues and co-workers overdose with alcohol and become dangerous to themselves and others.

Alcohol is a drug — a central nervous system depressant — not far removed pharmacologically from barbiturates. Yet people feel free in dispensing it recklessly and irresponsibly. By calling alcohol a drug I'm not calling it a dirty name. My feelings about alcohol are similar to those of Winston Churchill, who once said, "I have taken more good from alcohol than alcohol has taken from me." I contend that society has taken more good from alcohol than alcohol has taken from society.

A landmark decision of the New Jersey Supreme Court that holds social hosts liable for the actions of guests who get drunk forces us to realize that people around the drinker contribute to the state of drunkenness. Consumer activists tell us that businesses should be responsible for their products and services. The court's 6-to-1 decision tells us that we are responsible for the behavior of our drinking guests.

When people no longer feel that getting drunk is an acceptable part of drinking, and when the liquor and hospitality industries train their employees in responsible sale and service, drunken driving will cease to be a major social problem. Perhaps the increasing threat of litigation, following the New Jersey decision, will finally bring us to our social senses. □ promotions, though, is the recent national law requiring states to raise the drinking age to 21 by 1986 to avoid losing federal highway funds. The higher age, which 31 states either already enforce or will enforce soon, in effect outlaws drinking by many of the nation's 12.5 million undergraduate and graduate students.

Generally, however, campus beer promotions continue, even in states that have raised the drinking age. The campus is a crucial battleground for brands trying to capture lifetime fans. "Brand preferences for beer and other consumer products are developed from age 18 to 24," says David Lewenz, G. Heileman Brewing Co.'s manager of young-adult marketing. Winning market shares is all the more crucial now, because sales are declining in the $12 billion beer industry.

A Right to Advertise?

Because as many as 60% of college students legally may drink, says Mr. Roarty of Anheuser-Busch, "we think we have a right to advertise to those people." Heileman's Mr. Lewenz adds, "What we say is that when you come of legal age, we hope that you purchase our product."

Most universities allow the promotions, citing traditions of openness and a responsibility to help students deal with alcohol. But colleges clearly have a problems.

"In a free-enterprise system, people are free to promote and advertise products that aren't outright harmful," says Stephen Nelson, Dartmouth College's director of student activities. Yet, he wonders, with students at an age when heaviest drinking occurs, "are we heightening that vulnerability?"

Heavy drinking has long been implicated in vandalism, bad grades and occasional student deaths. Of 1,563 students responding to a survey last spring, more than half were heavy beer drinkers, consuming five or more beers a week, says Cass Communications Inc., an advertising representative for college newspapers.

Effect on Students

John McKillip, a psychology professor at the University of Southern Illinois, says his research shows that a fifth of the university's 20,000 students test poorly or skip class at least once a month because of heavy drinking. Colleges that allow or participate in beer promotions, he says, are "like hospitals running ads for cigarettes in their in-house publications."

Then, too, colleges worry about the liability they may face when drinking students harm themselves or others. Delaware Valley College of Science and Agriculture recently was cleared of liability in a case that resulted from a highway accident involving a student who had been drinking at a sophomore class picnic. But such cases are causing concern among college administrators, according to the National Association of College and University Attorneys.

"Practically every university is encountering alcohol abuse," says the Rev. Edward J. Hanrahan, the dean of students at Boston College, a Jesuit institution with 12,500 students. "We are looking to see if the promotions are contributing to abuse."

Some colleges already have concluded that they are. The University of South Carolina is banning beer ads in the student

SENATE BILL 138

"An Act relating to pricing and promotion of alcoholic beverages."

From a public health perspective the Department of Health and Social Services is highly supportive of SB 138. Research supports the contention that lower prices of beverage alcohol leads to higher consumption resulting in increased alcohol health-related problems.

The effect of alcoholic beverage pricing and promotional activities are to increase consumption via lower prices, creating settings conducive to more drinking. The timing of such promotions, often occuring in the early evening following the work day, can also enhance the effects of alcohol since drinkers are often tired and haven't eaten. These situations also contribute to drinking and driving. This is particularly true in Alaska where the automobile, as opposed to public transportation, is the primary method of transportation. Additionally, crowded situations brought on by Happy Hours make it difficult for drink servers to determine whether patrons are of legal age or are intoxicated.

As of 1984, 12 states had restricted alcohol-price promotions to at least some degree and twenty states were considering such legislation. In recent years several military installations have banned Happy Hours as a strategy for reducing the rates of alcohol problems they were experiencing.

In a 1977 study Harvard researchers indicated that both casual and heavy drinkers consumed about twice as much alcohol under Happy Hour conditions than did their counterparts under non-Happy Hour conditions.

The Department would be pleased to provide any additional information relating to SB 138.

January 31, 1985

The Honorable Don Bennett
President of the Senate
Pouch V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear President Bennett:

Pursuant to Chapter 45, Session Laws of Alaska 1983, I am herewith submitting my report on the activities of the Alaska Administrative Journal, now being published in the Office of the Lieutenant Governor on the first and third Monday's of each month.

The Journal has been available at 1,500 computer terminals on STAIRS across the State of Alaska beginning with the first issue on November 7, 1983. This effort was later complimented beginning on May 7, 1984, and continuing to date, with the publication of a hard copy version of the Journal. The computers are located in all Legislative Information Offices as well as in the offices of individual legislators, executive branch offices, and on those terminals on contract with the Legislative Affairs Agency by private individuals. Distribution in hard copy has attracted 182 subscribers at a cost of $250.00 each for 24 issues per year. An additional 124 copies of the Journal are provided to various users without fee. These user groups were developed as a result of our initial marketing effort on both an in-state and out-of-state basis.

A preliminary survey of the subscribers has resulted in very positive feedback by those individuals who compose the current user group, with the general recommendation being that the Alaska Administrative Journal be continued and expanded. It is the opinion of the vast majority of the respondents to the survey that the program has been a success and should the Legislature continue funding for the Alaska Administrative Journal, further marketing attempts would definitely be in order. If a deficiency exists in the publication of the Journal it would certainly be that the timeliness of agency inclusion of information has not always been good. This has resulted in inclusion of some out-of-date information to the user group. This is not meant to imply that state agencies are intentionally omitting information from their submittal to the Journal for publication, but rather there is a lack of specific statutory language that would eliminate some confusion offering a clear mandate as to what are the agencies responsibilities. Given this obvious defect, the Legislature may well wish to require agencies to submit information for publication in order to meet statutory requirements. For example, the Legislature could, by statute require the Department of Transportation to publish bid notices in the Journal in order to satisfy their publication requirements. Absent that mandate the Journal will continue to exist as an information item and its attractiveness to potential subscribers will be diminished accordingly.

In summary, the Alaska Administrative Journal began as a pilot project by the Legislature to disseminate information generated by various state agencies. Initially it was provided only at computer terminals, but has gone beyond that stage to actual hard copy distribution. Thus far the Journal has generated revenues of approximately $40,000. With the enactment of law requiring the publication of the Journal, Alaska joins 33 other states with similar publications. Alaska has therefore joined with those other states in meeting the public's continued demand for additional information about its government. Should the Legislature enact continuing legislation for this program beyond the June 30, 1985, repeal date, fiscal year 1986 funding has been included in the budget submission by the Office of the Lieutenant Governor for your consideration. Any Legislator who wishes to review supporting material may do so by contacting my office.

Sincerely yours,

Stephen McAlpine
Lieutenant Governor

(8) references to the state computer data base that contains a summary of the text of formal opinions and memoranda of advice of the attorney general.

(b) The person or agency that issues or adopts a notice, order, delegation, text, or summary of text listed in (a) of this section shall send a copy to the lieutenant governor in a computer-readable magnetic medium compatible with the legislative data processing system.

(c) The lieutenant governor shall organize and provide to the Legislative Affairs Agency the text of each issue of the journal in a computer-readable magnetic medium compatible with the legislative data processing system.

(d) A person may not maintain an action based on publication or lack of publication in the journal.

(e) Publication in the journal does not replace or supplant publication required by other provisions of law.

(f) For purposes of this section,

(1) "journal" means the Alaska Administrative Journal;

(2) "publish" means to make available to the public through the legislative data processing system.

* Sec. 2. REPORT. Not later than January 31, 1985, the lieutenant governor shall submit to the legislature a report on the Alaska Administrative Journal. The report shall include the lieutenant governor's recommendations and a summary of comments solicited from users of the journal concerning

(1) the need for continuation of the journal;

(2) the advisability of publishing the journal in a printed medium in addition to or in place of making the journal available through the legislative data processing system;

(3) the suggested cost for a subscription to the journal; and

(4) any other matters relevant to the publication of the journal.

* Sec. 3. This Act is repealed July 1, 1985.

* Sec. 4. This Act takes effect July 1, 1983.

FOREWORD

Under Chapter 45, SLA 1983, the Lieutenant Governor's Office is publishing, by means of the legislative data processing system, the ALASKA ADMINISTRATIVE JOURNAL on a bi-weekly basis. This is a project to assess the public interest in such a publication. In addition, the Lieutenant Governor's Office is publishing this paper edition of the Journal on a bi-weekly basis to assist in making that assessment.

This Journal is provided for public information, but it does not constitute legal notice as required by Alaska Statutes. The inclusion or absence of information does not negate the effectiveness of any act performed on behalf of the State of Alaska. For information on the Journal, contact the Lieutenant Governor's Office at 465-3520; Jeannette Hieb.

SURVEY COMMENTS SUMMARY

PRO

1. Useful for checking not only that Department's activities, but other departments activities.
2. Useful for keeping informed of proposed regulations and, in general, on the activities of State government.
3. Good source of information.
4. Format well laid out and can be quickly scanned.
5. Very beneficial in keeping us informed of various activities in the State because living in the lower 48 receive very little communications.
6. Our department uses the Journal to look at other departments to see if any issue related to them could impact our operation.
7. Quick reference for Attorney General opinions as well as agency actions.
8. Concise, well organized, timely and very informative.
9. Alaska Administrative Journal necessary to keep up with changes in the code.

CON

1. Helpful document, but would be more useful if delivery was speeded up.
2. Too many of the meetings, RFP deadlines, etc. are after the fact.
3. Had hoped the Journal could replace our need to use the daily newspapers for such announcements.

RE: Alaska Administrative Journal

Dear Mr. McAlpine,

We have found that the Alaska Administrative is of only very limited benefit to our program. It does provide some notice that regulations, etc. are being proposed by state agencies. However, it does not contain sufficient details of the proposal to even know if they are substantive rule changes or mere corrections.

I would recommend including in notices of proposed regulatons on rule making an explanation of the rationale and effect of the proposal prepared by the agency.

Too many of the meetings, RFP deadlines etc. are after the fact, with either too little or no ability to plan for us. We had hopes that this Journal could replace our need to use the daily newspapers for such announcements. Such is not the case.

Prime Example: In Vol 1P, Issue 26 DNR Div of Forestry NOTICE OF TIMBER SALES (pp 49-52) was for auction of November 15, 1984. Of what use, except historical, is that information?

Business people need planning tools, and this publication does not offer that requirement as a tool.

Dear Steve:

In response to your request of Dave Harbour for the commentary on the new Alaska Administrative Journal, we offer the following.

In general, the information in the booklet is very helpful, even though it does not constitute legal notice. The information seems to be fairly complete and offers adequate explanation under each section.

However, there is some constructive criticism we wish to offer regarding the printed publication of the Journal. The nine issues that we have received since June have all arrived on a two-week-delay basis. The latest volume, volume IP, issue 26, dated November 19, 1984 was received December 4, 1984, well after the date the December 1 issue should be published.

Consequently, usefulness of information within the booklet is compromised by the time we read it. Often, this may mean the difference of making or of missing a meeting of importance. A possible remedy for this situation would be to print notices for meetings, hearings, etc. in more than one volume of the journal, beginning the announcements at an earlier date.

We feel there is a need for the Journal. We encourage you to continue producing it and taking the opportunity such as you are now doing to gather comments from users and improve its service to the community.

Sincerely,

Beverly A. Ward

Dear Lt. Governor:

Since the beginning of publication of the Alaska Administrative Journal, Sohio Alaska Petroleum Company has utilized this publication. Sohio has a number of subscriptions and is even considering requesting additional copies.

In my opinion, publication of this document by your office is extremely beneficial to the citizens in Alaska. As the largest taxpayer in the State, Sohio is interested in rules and regulations being considered by the various state agencies, the State's bidding proposals and the opinions of the Attorney General's office. The Journal helps keep us informed of these items.

The Journal has proven beneficial and I hope its publication continues.

Dear Steve,

Found the Journal extremely informative. And I believe I have a very valid suggestion. Under some of your Competitive Bds, RFP and Pblic Notices section, it is difficult to separate out the distinct projects. For example, Pg 73 of Vol IP, Issue 26, Nov 16, 84. The invitation for Expression of Interest for the Juneau Hanger is difficult to locate. I suggest an identifiable marking to distinguish the next topic within a section.

Hope this information is of use.

Good source of information. It would save reviewing the menus of programs if all the items in the Journal were listed. Some "None this Publication" may simply omitted from the outline. The complete agency skeleton outline could be shown for the first agency listed. After that no ~~one~~ could be deemed to indicate "None this Publication"? This isn't legal notice anyway.

Also examples of items which never change. IV. "Executive Administrative Orders" will never have an entry under other agencies that Gov's office - so delete it. Might take some programming to remove these items for hard copy printout, but it should be worth it

The biggest users of the Journal are, on the whole, very pleased with it and say it meets their needs. Their only criticism is that the would like to see the list of code sections affected published more frequently, ideally with each issue. They also would like the full text of final rules published, but we understand there are valid reasons for publishing only summaries.

What I look for in the Alaska Administrative Journal are opinions of the Attorney General pertinent to franchise or personal taxation (Department of Law), and changes in levying taxes and regulations as they pertain to taxes (Department of Revenue). The Journal has not addressed these issues for me. However, there may not have been activity in the area of taxation, as it is generally a legislative matter. The format is well laid out and can be quickly scanned.

The Alaska Administrative Journal has been helpful in that it has kept the Youth Services Administrative office abreast of current issues and how they are written up or presented to the general public. It serves as resource for any upcoming action and forewarns us of possible public questioning that could ensue as a result of an issue being put forth to the public. It also gives us a chance to look at other departments to see if any issue related to them could have an impact on our operation(s).

IN THE SENATE BY THE STATE AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

CS FOR SENATE BILL NO. 157 (State Affairs)

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act continuing the existence of the Alaska Administrative Journal; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. FINDINGS. The legislature recognizes that public knowledge of and participation in the administrative regulatory process, and easy access to information concerning executive actions, are essential to the democratic process of state government. The legislature recognizes that publication and distribution of the Alaska Administrative Journal facilitates the widespread dissemination of information about the regulatory process and activities by state agencies. In order that the public may continue to be provided with this information in a timely and useful manner and with a means to participate more fully in the regulatory process, the legislature makes permanent the publication and distribution of the Alaska Administrative Journal.

* Sec. 2. AS 44.62 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 44.62.175. ALASKA ADMINISTRATIVE JOURNAL. (a) The lieutenant governor shall publish or contract for the publication of the Alaska Administrative Journal. The journal shall be published weekly. The journal must include

(1) notices of proposed actions given under AS 44.62.190(a);

(2) notices of state agency meetings required under AS 44.62.310(e), even if the meeting has been held;

(3) notices of solicitations to bid issued under AS 37.05.-230;

(4) notices of state agency requests for proposals issued under AS 18.55.255, 18.55.320; AS 19.10.190; AS 19.40.020; AS 35.15.-030; AS 36.98.030; AS 37.05.230, 37.05.315(d); AS 38.05.120; AS 43.-40.010; and AS 46.11.030;

(5) executive orders and administrative orders issued by the governor;

(6) written delegations of authority made by the governor or the head of a principal department under AS 44.17.010;

(7) the text or a summary of the text of a regulation or order of repeal of a regulation for which notice is given under AS 44.62.190(a), including an emergency regulation or repeal whether or not it has taken effect;

(8) a summary of the text of recently issued formal opinions and memoranda of advice of the attorney general; and

(9) a list of vacancies on boards, commissions, and other bodies whose members are appointed by the governor.

(b) The issuer of a notice, order, delegation, text, summary, or list in (a) of this section shall send a copy to the lieutenant governor in a computer-readable magnetic medium in a format prescribed by the lieutenant governor.

(c) The lieutenant governor shall provide to the Legislative Affairs Agency the text of each issue of the journal in a computer-readable magnetic medium compatible with the legislative data processing system. The Legislative Affairs Agency shall retain the text of each issue of the journal in a computer-readable magnetic medium.

(d) The lieutenant governor shall sell subscriptions to the journal at a price reasonably calculated to offset the cost of

CSSB 132 (State Affairs)

TESTIMONY OF SENATOR BETTYE FAHRENKAMP
Before the House State Affairs Committee
May 23, 1983

Mr. Chairman:

Thank you for the opportunity to speak in support of SB 132, a bill establishing the Administrative Journal.

As you know, I've been working on this idea now for several years. The original purpose was to create a one-stop-shopping type of approach to government information. Take all of the public notices; proposed regulatory changes, adopted regulatory changes, Attorney General opinions, Executive Orders, open meetings and hearings, notices of competitive bid solicitations, agency requests for proposals, proposed mineral and timber sales and any other tidbit of information which is daily being churned out of our state government agencies, and make it available in one publication.

The idea, while I'd like to suggest its novelty, is not new. The federal government prints a daily federal register of its public information and 36 of the 50 United States have a journal or register wherein they publish the text and in some cases the summaries of their executive and administrative actions.

Mr. Chairman, word of mouth government simply does not work in a state literally on the cutting edge of development and growth. It discourages public participation, trust and faith in the entire mission of government: which is to serve.

One of the bill's previous failings was that the fiscal impact had been too large to warrant the effort. I've fought large fiscal notes because I'm convinced that we can accomplish the goal without incurring large costs. There are, however, some unknowns which add to the uncertainty of costs. Some of these include: How many people or organizations might be interested in such a journal; how much would they be willing to pay for it; how can we coordinate state agency effort to gather and transmit the information, and several others.

As a result, the Lieutenant Governor and I have come up with an idea which will affect the basic thrust of SB 132 and at the same time assuage the uncertainty.

The bill before the Committee today will affect an 18 month trial run of the journal. Rather than an actual publication, each issue or agency would be required to provide a compatible magnetic tape format of their actions to a coordinator in the Lieutenant Governor's office, who will process the material for acceptance by the Legislative Affairs Agency.

The idea is simple. Provide the information we require to Legislative Affairs Data Processing. They are geared-up with the equipment and personnel to almost instantaneously translate the information onto the Legislative Computer Network which operated in 18 Legislative Information Offices throughout the state as well as individual legislators' offices in many cities. Any interested person can access the "journal" index and call up those portions which are of interest and can copy those pages and information. As part of the trial run, we would ask users of this information to answer basic data gathering questions which will establish the track record from which we can make educated decisions on the publication of a hard copy Administrative Journal.

While this may sound far fetched, it is no novelty either. Other states which currently have hard copy journals are putting this data on state computers for quicker reference and access. Not only do we beat the high costs of publication and distribution, but we continue to move into the 21st century and what we know will be an almost total reliance on word processing and data gathering computerized systems. Alaska has for years been in the vanguard of high tech development and utilization in the communications field. It is my hope that the Committee will act favorably on the substitute language to SB 132 and I would be happy to answer any questions the Committee might have. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

THE ALASKA ADMINISTRATIVE JOURNAL:
What it is and what it is not!

What is it?

-- A one stop collection of all information required to be made public by state agencies
-- It is timely, bi-weekly
-- It is an inexpensive public information tool
-- It is a trial run to determine need, advisability of a hard copy, suggested cost and private publishing interest
-- It goes beyond the authority in AS 44.62.130, which directs the Lt. Governor to quarterly publish final regulations by additionally requiring the publication of: all of the public notices, proposed regulatory changes, adopted regulatory changes, Attorney General opinions, Executive Orders, open meetings and hearings, notices of competitive bid solicitations, agency requests for proposals, proposed mineral and timber sales and any other tidbit of information which is daily being churned out of our state government agencies, and make it available in one publication.

It will not:

-- Proliferate paper
-- Be a hard copy
-- Be expensive
-- Affect newspapers or their advertising income
-- Put any private publisher out of business. NO ONE is currently providing this service nor has anyone recently expressed an interest in publishing this type of information.

How will it work?

The idea is simple. Provide the information we require to Legislative Affairs Data Processing. They are geared-up with the equipment and personnel to almost instantaneously translate the information onto the Legislative Computer Network which operates in 18 Legislative Information Offices throughout the state as well as individual legislators' offices in many cities. Any interested person can access the "journal" index and call up those portions which are of interest and can copy those pages and information. Dear Senator Fahrenkamp:

On behalf of the administrative law committee of the Alaska Bar Association, I wish to express our strong support for Senate Bill 132 which would establish the Alaska Administrative Journal to be published on the bi-weekly basis.

Should you require further detail about our position or desire oral testimony in support of the bill, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Senator Fahrenkamp:

The concept of establishing an administrative journal as outlined in CS SB 132 is an excellent one, and the Alaska Environmental Lobby strongly supports that legislation. We too realize the immediate importance of stepping beyond "word of mouth government" in this rapidly growing state. Alaska, by virtue of its geography and different cultures,offers enormous communication and information barriers. We are heartened by your efforts to clear this particular path between private citizens and state government.

Though the Lobby favors a hard copy version of the journal in addition to the magnetic tape system, we anticipate a productive trial period should CS SB 132 pass. Thank you for your past and continuing work on this legislation.

Re: SB 157: Alaska Administrative Journal

Dear Senator Abood:

The League, as you must already be aware, strongly supports public participation in legislative and regulatory processes. We think the Alaska Administrative Journal makes a major contribution to the ability of Alaskans to participate in the regulatory process, that the Journal's publication and distribution should be continued, and that it should be mandatory for all State agencies to publish their proposed regulations in the Journal at the beginning of the public comment period. Therefore, we support SB 157.

We do not presently have any amendments to SB 157 to recommend. However, let us underscore several points which definitely should remain in the bill and not be amended out: (1) both paper form and computer access form of the Journal should be available; (2) it should be mandatory (not discretionary) that every State agency publish its proposed regulations for public comment, and then its final regulations, in the Journal; (3) subscriptions should be available at as low a cost as possible; (4) there should be wide distribution through the State library system and the municipalities; and (5) many people in remote areas still will not see the Journal and therefore should continue to be able to get on agencies' mailing lists to receive direct-mailed notices of proposed agency regulations or other actions [line 29, page 3 through line 1, page 4 of the bill]. All of these provisions are already in the bill, and we offer these comments merely as reinforcement to support their remaining in the final version.

We think that if SB 157 is adopted and implemented, the Alaska Administrative Journal can become as reliable a means of informing Alaska citizens about proposed State agency regulatory actions as the Federal Register has become in informing U.S. citizens about proposed regulatory actions of the federal government.

Thank you for considering our comments.

Sincerely,

MEMORANDUM

TO: Senator Mitch Abood

FROM: Senator Bettye Fahrenkamp

RE: Scheduling SB 157, an Act continuing the existence of the Alaska Administrative Journal

DATE: March 25, 1985

I have previously requested a hearing on SB 157 and understand that you may schedule it for the week of April 1. I have prepared a committee substitute for your consideration (attached). I have also attached a memo from the Attorney General's office which outlines the rationale behind the amendments contained in the committee substitute.

Re: Amendments to SB 157 --
Alaska Administrative Journal

Dear Senator Fahrenkamp:

As requested by your assistant, Mark Boyer, this morning, here are my suggestions for amending SB 157 (with no. 5 being the most important):

1. Page 1, line 24 and line 25: Change "shall" to read "must" in both places.

2. Page 2, line 19: Change "including" to read "such as." (Actually, it might be smarter to delete proposed AS 44.62.175(a)(10) [page 2, lines 18 -- 21] altogether [which would require changing line 17's semi-colon to a period, and either deleting the "and" or relocating it to line 15].)

3. Page 3, lines 2 -- 6: Delete all material.

4. Page 3, line 7: Change "(e)" to read "(d)."

5. Page 3, lines 10 -- 16: Delete all material and insert the following in its place: "(e) A person may not maintain an action based on publication or lack of publication in the journal."

6. Page 3, line 17: Change "(g)" to read "(f)."

7. Page 4, lines 22 and 23: Delete "summary specified in (a)(3) of this section must be approved by the issuing agency as" and insert the following in its place: "agency that issues a notice under this section is responsible for assuring that the notice is prepared in such a way that it is."

8. Page 4, lines 27 -- 29: Delete all material.

9. Page 5, line 1: Change "Sec. 6" to read "Sec. 5."

The first amendment above recognizes one of the distinctions between the appropriate uses of "must" and "shall." Please see paragraph (h) on page 51 of the Manual of Legislative Drafting, 1985 (Legislative Affairs Agency), and paragraph (10) beginning on page 46 of the Drafting Manual for Administrative Regulations (Department of Law, 8th ed., 1982). Since this wording is in a new section, we might as well use the right word to begin with.

The purpose of the second amendment above is to make clearer that publication of the additional kinds of information described is within the lieutenant governor's discretion. Eliminating that paragraph (10) altogether would help minimize costs.

Sally Hanson, of the Lieutenant Governor's Office, has recommended deletion of the bill's proposed AS 44.62.175(d) (page 3, lines 2 -- 6) as being unnecessary, and its deletion would save money.

The language being deleted from page 3, lines 10 -- 16, is the most troublesome in the current version of the bill. The language set out above as a substitute for it is identical to sec. 1(d) of your ch. 45, SLA 1983. At one point during the consideration of the bill that became ch. 45, SLA 1983, I wrote a provision that I believe is better than that one, and will try to find it if you wish.

The language being deleted from page 4, lines 23 and 24, simply doesn't make sense. According to Sally Hanson, the language being substituted for it more accurately conveys her office's intent.

The language being deleted from page 4, lines 27 -- 29, is not necessary after deletion of the bill's present AS 44.62.175(f).

I'm not sure whether you have agreed to deleting the bill's proposed amendment of AS 44.62.190(a)(1) (page 3, line 28). We would prefer to have it deleted, but, with the change in the proposed AS 44.62.175(f), described above, this becomes less of a problem and it could be left in as a compromise. To delete that amendment, all of sec. 3 of the bill should come out. (This deletion is not covered in the amendments set out above.)

I understand that you and the attorney general agreed on the essence of these changes this morning. I would be happy to discuss them with you further, at your convenience. (Mark mentioned that you plan to amend the bill to require weekly, rather than the current bi-weekly, publication of the journal.) If you would like to have this office prepare a committee substitute for you, we would be happy to do so.

Very truly yours,

* Sec. 3. Article XII, Constitution of the State of Alaska is amended by adding new sections to read:

SECTION 14. COMPENSATION COMMISSION. There is established a Commission on Compensation of Elected Officials. The commission is composed of five members appointed by the governor, subject to confirmation by a majority of the members of the legislature in joint session. Members serve for terms of six years. The membership shall include at least one business executive, one representative of a nonpartisan voters' organization, one person with experience in public administration, and one representative of a labor organization. A member of the commission may not be employed by the state during the member's term and may not hold an elective state office during the term or within one year thereafter.

SECTION 15. POWERS AND DUTIES OF THE COMMISSION. Except for retirement benefits, which shall be established by general law applicable to all officers of the state, the commission shall establish the compensation of the governor, lieutenant governor, and members of the legislature, including their salaries, benefits, per diem, and allowances, if any. An order of the commission takes effect at the beginning of the next fiscal year of the state. The commission shall hold a public hearing in each judicial district before issuing an order that changes the compensation of an elected official. At least every two years, but not more frequently than every year, the commission shall review the compensation of elected officials. The commission shall issue an order with respect to salaries not later than thirty days before the end of the fiscal year.

SECTION 16. FINALITY OF ORDER. An order setting the compensation of an elected official is not subject to veto by the governor. An order of the commission is subject to initiative and referendum in the same manner as an act of the legislature. The legislature shall appropriate money to fund the orders of the commission.

* Sec. 4. The amendments proposed by this resolution shall be placed before the voters of the state at the next general election in conformity with art. XIII, sec. 1, Constitution of the State of Alaska, and the elec-

SB 161
SJR 15

February 13, 1985

Dear Colleague:

On Monday, February 18, I will introduce a bill and a resolution to establish, by constitutional amendment, the Commission on Compensation of Elected Officials.

I invite you to co-sponsor these measures. A copy of each is enclosed.

The measures have the following objectives:

First, they will take legislators out of the unseemly and misunderstood business of setting our own salaries. The measures are based on a very successful feature of the Anchorage Municipal Charter, where assembly and mayoralty salaries are set by the Commission on Salaries and Emoluments.

Second, they assure a public hearing process, in each judicial district, at least every other year on the issue of gubernatorial and legislative salary.

Third, they eliminate the twin dangers of the existing system -- on the one hand, the possibility of legislative decisions that might be selfish or self-serving; on the other hand, the possibility of attacks that are demagogical and politically motivated upon reasonable decisions regarding salary.

Under the measures, the proposed Commission members would be appointed for six-year terms and would not be removable during their terms. Thus, the Commission would have independence, once appointed, from the Governor and the Legislature.

As I see it, the enactment of these measures would not make moot the pending voter initiative proposition scheduled to be on the ballot in 1986. A decision by the voters to repeal the pay increase adopted in 1983 would be compatible with approval of the proposed constitutional amendment.

Such a decision, would be one of the factors which the members of the Commission could take into account in setting legislative salary. A decision by the voters not to adopt the initiative would also be compatible with passage of the constitutional amendment. One result would be to reduce public passions about the pay repeal initiative by offering a different, depoliticized method of setting salaries, hitherto an insoluble problem. Energies and attention can then be focused on other questions and the critical races that will be on the ballot.

Should you wish to co-sponsor these measures, please advise my office at 4525 this week. If you do not wish to co-sponsor, please give your support, or at least your open-minded consideration, as they proceed through the committee system. I hope you will join me in this effort.

Sincerely,

Re: SB 161 and SJR 15 (Elected Officials Compensation Commission)

In order to provide information to the committee on the workings of the Municipality of Anchorage's Salary and Emoluments Commission, which SB 161 and SJR 15 are based on, I have gotten copies made of all Commission minutes since 1975. The minutes from the most recent meeting of the Commission are attached, and I would be glad to make the others available to any committee member.

Thank you for your consideration of these measures.

SALARY & EMOLUMENTS COMMISSION

MEETING OF SEPTEMBER 10, 1984

I. CALL TO ORDER:

The meeting of the Salary and Emoluments Commission was called to order by Chairperson Pamela Gotham at 4:15 p.m. in the Clerk's Conference Room, 4th floor, room 411, Municipal Hill Building.

II. ROLL CALL:

Present: Pamela Gotham, Robert Piazza, Connie Sipe.

Absent: Frank Turpin (excused), Dan Alex (unexcused).

III. MINUTES OF PREVIOUS MEETING:

A. Minutes of August 27, 1984 meeting.

Ms. Sipe moved, to approve the minutes of Mr. Piazza seconded, August 27, 1984 as stated. and it passed without objection,

IV. OLD BUSINESS:

Chairperson Gotham stated that Old Business was the proposed salaries for mayor, assembly and school board.

Ms. Sipe asked if the order could be changed so they could take the school board first, assembly second and mayor last.

Chairperson Gotham agreed to the change and stated the proposed compensation changes would be effective January 1, 1985.

Chairperson Gotham then read Resolution 85-3 (see Attachment A).

Ms. Sipe moved, to adopt Resolution 85-3,
Mr. Piazza seconded,

Chairperson Cotham then opened the public hearing on school board compensation and asked if anyone wished to be heard.

Dr. THERESA OBERMEYER introduced herself and her husband, MR. TOM OBERMEYER. Dr. OBERMEYER stated that she does intend to seek School Board, Seat C (seat vacated by the death of Vi Schellenberg) and that she also ran for the school board in 1980. Dr. OBERMEYER stated she was present to discuss equities between assembly and school board, not so much salaries as reimbursements The ad in the newspaper, about the proposed salary changes, seemed to state a yearly salary for the mayor where assembly and school board salaries were expenses. She understood this compensation to be for expenses of driving to school board meetings, driving to parent meetings, driving to work sessions and etc. She asked if this was the commission's philosophy that assembly and school board compensation be for expenses and not salaries or salaries for expenses of the work they do.

Chairperson Gotham stated the commission is not in a position to give a philosophy view. The commission deals with compensation levels for individual positions as stated in the Charter. Compensation as stated would be considered salary.

DR. THERESA OBERMEYER felt the basic issue was equity between the assembly and school board. She felt public service should not be for money at all. The word emoluments does mean profit and she felt there should be no profit for public service. She would serve on the school board if there was no reimbursement at all. The school board members run on an areawide basis and there is something like 144,000 registered voters and 244,000 residents in Anchorage. The assembly members are voted on by individual Assembly sections making their constituent level much smaller. The school board members, which there are seven (7), encompass a much broader area than assembly members, which are eleven (11). The municipality employs roughly 4,000 employees compared to 5,200 employees of the school district. There are 42,000 children in the Anchorage schools and this is continually changing. Additionally, the school board does not have the staff to deal with constituent inquiries and complaints.

MR. TOM OBERMEYER, expert in compensation and benefits, stated the issue is equity between school board members and assembly members. Although the nature of the problems presented to the bodies are different, the individual members are equally competent and qualified to deal with them. He believed the school district had become big business with a larger budget and more employees than the municipality. These facts are quantitative accountability factors which must be weighed when determining compensation. It costs more to run for school board than for the assembly. Being a school board member is very time consuming and compensation should be comparable with the assembly. The assembly consumes 5.6% of the municipality's operating budget, a part of which pays for staff support. There are no such identified costs in the school district budget. Both bodies deserve qualified people who are comparably paid. In response to Chairperson Gotham, he indicated the compensation for school board members should be the same as for the assembly.

DR. THERESA OBERMEYER suggested the board consider replacing expense moneys with medical benefits or retirement benefits rather than a salary increase.

Sue Lindemuth, Manager of Records and Benefits, explained that assembly members are eligible to participate in PERS. The assembly member pays the employee contribution and the municipality pays the employer contribution. She was unsure whether the same situation existed in the school district.

Chairperson Gotham thank Dr. OBERMEYER for bringing up the point but felt the Salary and Emoluments Commission had no authority in the area of such benefits.

MR. RICHARD MARKEY opposed raises for elected officials. Most have paid to get the job they now hold knowing what the salary was. No one ran for office because of the salary.

MR. JOE GRAHAM, 4107 Minnesota, stated that we ought to pay for what we get. Because of the atrocities of Bartlett and Greuning schools, we should pull those responsible. Since the school board hasn't done such a great job recently, increasing the salary at this time is pure lunacy. It isn't necessary to have a great educational background or great accomplishments to be a good school board member. Most often the exercise of common sense will suffice. He felt school board members should run by district rather than areawide. That approach would decrease the cost of running for office and put the elected official closer to his constituency. The element of public service must be considered when determining compensation. Compensation for the school board members should be less than for the assembly because it is a subordinate body and paid on a per meeting basis with a total compensation of $500/month.

MR. TOM OBERMEYER felt it was important to attract qualified people to the school board, preferably persons with a background in education. That kind of experience is very valuable in making the kinds of decisions the board is asked to make. It would be nice if such qualifications could be built into the job description.

Chairperson Gotham called the question on the motion to approve the increase for school board (Resolution 85-3) members and it passed by a majority voice vote.

Resolution 85-2 (see Attachment B)

Ms. Sipe moved, seconded by Mr. Piazza,	that the commission adopt Resolution 85-2 establishing compensation for the Anchorage Assembly in the amount of $1,725 for the Chair and $1,400 for other assembly members.

Chairperson Gotham opened the motion for commission's comment.

Ms. Sipe pointed out the salaries for elected officials were last increased in 1981. If one considers the amount of increase over the three year period, it represents only 5% per year, at a time when the cost of living increased at a rate between 5% and 7% each year. The commission seems to have established a pattern of considering raising salaries only every two to three years. If the pattern persists, the commission will not seriously consider another increase until 1987. If one spreads the increase of a six year period, the salary increase amounts to about a 2.5% increase per year, which at the most, just keeps pace with inflation.

Chairperson Gotham noted than under Proposition 24, any salary increases approved by the Salary and Emoluments Commission means some place somebody is losing those dollars. Public service is a short term commitment, not a long term money making commitment. She then opened the meeting to public comments.

MR. DAVID WALSH urged the commission to keep the assembly salary at the current level. Increasing the assembly members' salaries would mean cutting dollars elsewhere in the budget. Eventhough the increase might be justified, it is large for one year. Increasing the compensation to $20,000 per year makes it possible for a person to pay his bills, maintain his lifestyle and be totally involved in public service. That becomes the first step towards a full-time assembly. The workload is growing and the assembly may have to consider either becoming full time or adding significant staff support in the next few years. But the level of compensation really doesn't determine the level of dedication of the individual. None of the members are in it for the money. The money does provide minimal compensation for time away from family, expenses that go with the job and compensation for a job well done. If one wanted to set a figure equal to what the job is worth, the salary would be too high. To go to zero, really isn't recognizing the sacrifices people make in order to be a public official. The level should be set considering that (1) it is a part-time salary, and (2) budget constraints as a result of Proposition 24. The current salary level is adequate. In response to Ms. Sipe, he supported the additional money paid to the Chairman of the Assembly because of additional time required to do that job.

MR. TOM OBERMEYER commented according to his calculations, the average salary was $40,000 to $50,000 per year. Assembly members should not be short changed as a result of increases to other salaries. He agreed the public did not want full-time assembly members. But it is a consuming job and should be fairly compensated. He noted the cost of campaigning is reaching a point where the average citizen cannot run for assembly or school board.

MR. CHARLES BARCERON stated that being an assembly member is not a full time job. He felt a 15% increase was too much in one year. The public isn't aware the salaries have not been raised for three years. No figures have been presented which show the salaries of similar positions in similar sized cities. Without such information, it is difficult for the public to judge whether the compensation is fair.

ASSEMBLYMEMBER CAROL MASER, 2526 Glenwood, felt the people she represented would object to any of the raises being proposed. The public tends to view assembly members in the same light as the state legislators who recently increased their salaries. The people don't think it is time for raises. It is difficult to sit on the assembly and cut expenditures when the assembly has received an increase in its salary. Being an assembly member is a public service. The position is not sought because of the level of compensation for the job. People run because they feel they can return something to the community. The salary level does not compensate the members for the time spent on municipal affairs. It is important to realize the public does not support this salary increase at this time.

MR. JOE GRAHAM emphasized this is an area where the consumer needs protection. The assembly sets the mill level. The assembly used to sit as a Board of Equalization and set its own salary. Neither of those functions is performed by the assembly now. They are ducking their job. He suggested members be paid $200 per regular meeting and only for meetings attended. He questioned whether the public was getting its money's worth with the level of service provided by the assembly members, i.e., are packets being read? There are a lot of people who haven't received a raise in salary but that is not reported. Salary surveys often only consider salaries paid by large companies rather than a cross section of wages. He opposed increasing the assembly members' salaries.

MR. CHARLES BARGERON felt the commission should meet every year and consider increasing salaries rather than only consider increases once every three years which makes any increase proposed appear excessive and raise public ire.

MR. RICHARD MARKEY agreed with Mrs. Maser's comments.

Chairperson Gotham called the question on the motion to adopt Resolution 85-2 and it failed by a unanimous voice vote.

The meeting recessed at 5:05 p.m. and reconvened at 5:10 p.m.

Resolution 85-1 (see Attachment C).

Ms. Sipe moved, seconded by Mr. Piazza,	that the commission adopt Resolution 85-1 which establishes compensation for the Mayor of Anchorage in the amount of $80,500 per annum starting fiscal year 1985.

Chairperson Gotham opened the floor to discussion of the motion.

ASSEMBLYMEMBER CAROL MASER, 2526 Glenwood, felt people sought the position of mayor as a matter of community service. One does not serve the community well by expecting one's salary to continually be increased. The public in general opposes increases in elected officials' salaries at this time. It is difficult to hold the spending line while accepting increases in pay.

MR. TOM OBERMEYER felt the mayor's salary should be kept in perspective of the average municipal salary. He personally didn't think this particular mayor required additional compensation. He thought the mayor had gone on public record as opposing this increase.

MR. RICHARD MARKEY opposed the pay raise. The morning newspaper reported Mayor Knowles would not accept a pay raise if one were approved by the commission. Mayor Knowles indicated he would give the increase to charity and that is not what the taxpayers have in mind when they pay someone.

MR. CHARLES BARGERON opposed the raise.

MR. TOM OBERMEYER added part of the cause of inflation is government spending on salaries of top government officials.

MR. JOE GRAHAM said the consumers were worried about the big figure increase proposed for the mayor. One shouldn't be overly concerned about the relation of salary strata to job strata. Government is not completely similar to industry. Recently published reports showed that several policemen were paid more annually than the Chief of Police. This decision comes on the heels of the dirty deal of General Motors and Ford Motor Company which gave large raises to executives after jockeying employees into contracts with concession and no pay raises. Government is getting on shaky ground with what it tries to extract from people. He didn't think people were getting what they paid for and the mayor didn't deserve a $10,000 raise.

MR. DAVID WALSH stated the job of mayor has changed since unification. It is a difficult job and worth the proposed amount of compensation. Traditionally, the mayor has received the highest salary in local government. The result has been salary compression. In the last administration, there were people who wanted to stay in public service but simply couldn't afford to stay. Government can't offer its top executives stock options or offer them very many PERKS at all. Perhaps a little more in salary could have kept those highly qualified people. On the other hand, if the top executive's salary goes up, we can expect the same percentage raise in pay of non-executives. The mayor's salary should go up but not as much as proposed. MR. WALSH felt that perhaps a 5% to 6% increase was reasonable.

Ms. Sipe noted the commission discussed at its last meeting salaries of municipal employees who because of longevity and other factors earn more than the mayor. She stated that Mr. Turpin had asked members of his industry to do an informal study of comparable positions and the results indicated the pay should be at least $20,000 more than currently paid. The commission has attempted to look into what other people in similar jobs are paid.

MR. TOM OBERMEYER agreed that salary compression was an important factor to consider. Anchorage is in an escalator role with regard to salaries, especially government salaries. Salaries are not necessarily increasing in relation to other segments of society. There has been a disproportionate increase in government salaries which has created compression at higher levels which may or may not have forced some of the top people out. At some point there will have to be a cap put on salary increases.

MR. JOE GRAHAM agreed the problem of inflation was very bad. The one segment of society which can do something about it is government. Government had better do something about inflation soon.

Chairperson Gotham called the question on the motion to adopt Resolution 85-1 and it failed by unanimous voice vote.

Ms. Sipe moved, seconded by Mr. Piazza,	that the commission pass a resolution establishing compensation for the municipal mayor at an amount 5% above the current level or $73,500.

Chairperson Gotham opened the motion to discussion.

MR. RICHARD MARKEY commented a lot of money was spent running for the office of mayor. People don't run for the salary.

Mr. Piazza noted the mayor's salary had not been increased since 1981. Compensation for the position should take into account inflation and whether the amount is adequate for the responsibility regardless of the financial standing of the person who holds the position. Five percent after four years of no increase is on line.

MR. TOM OBERMEYER felt giving the mayor a raise at this time might have undesirable public repercussions especially in light of the budget constraints invoked by Proposition 24. The mayor has publicly stated he does not want an increase.

MR. JOE GRAHAM thought the public felt the budget was overloaded with positions paying $50,000 per year which are actually worth $25,000. Part of the job of getting a handle on rising costs of government belongs to the Salary and Emoluments Commission.

Chairperson Gotham called for the vote on the motion to increase the mayor's salary by 5% and it passed:

AYES: Sipe, Piazza.
NAYS: Gotham.

Chairperson Gotham announced the resolution would be numbered Resolution 85-4.

Ms. Sipe moved, seconded by Mr. Piazza, and it died, that consideration of each of the salaries be placed on next year's agenda for the Salary and Emoluments Commission.

MR. TOM OBERMEYER felt the commission should meet more often than once a year. The problem is so great it cannot be dealt with successfully unless the commission meets periodically throughout the year.

Chairperson Gotham pointed out the Charter provides the commission must meet every two years but prohibits more frequent meetings than every year. In order to change this, it would require a charter amendment approved by the voters. In response to MR. MARKEY, she outlined the Charter requirements for commission composition.

MR. TOM OBERMEYER felt it was important for salaries of elected officials to be reviewed on a frequent basis. In the current situation, very few people with very little information and time set very important salaries.

Ms. Sipe inquired of the Municipal Clerk whether meeting more frequently would work a hardship on the Clerk's office staff. The Charter says the commission cannot consider salaries more frequently than once a year but does not preclude more frequent meetings.

Chairperson Gotham suggested the question be tabled until the commission discussed this with the Municipal Clerk. Chairperson Gotham then ordered a meeting convene in one year and one of the topics of the meeting be consideration of the salaries of elected officials.

The meeting adjourned at 5:45 p.m.

Pamela Gotham, Chairperson

Our file: 377-104-85

Dear Senator Abood:

Enclosed please find the proposed committee substitute for SB 162, which incorporates the changes requested by Ken Bischoff, director of the division of finance, Department of Administration. Ken discussed these changes with Jim Baldwin, Assistant Attorney General, who is that agency's representative in the Department of Law.

The two changes are as follows:

1. Page 2, line 7 -- 8: The clause "the term includes the responsibilities for state officials set out in AS 37.10.030" has been added.

2. Page 2, line 20: Correction of a typographical error, "an password" to "a password", was made.

Dear Mr. Chairman:

This letter is intended to provide you and the Senate State Affairs Committee a brief background on the need for Senate Bill Number 162 entitled: "An Act relating to public records and certification of State vouchers; and providing for an effective date." This bill is scheduled to be heard by your Committee on Thursday, February 28 at 8:30 a.m.

The passage of this bill is necessary to help establish an adequate system of internal controls in the processing and certification of state accounting and vendor payment transactions.

Introduction of this bill is being prompted by two events:

1. In order to improve vendor payment times and provide accurate, up-to-date accounting information, the new State accounting system (AKSAS) provides for data to be submitted electronically through computer terminals in remote locations throughout the state. State certifying officers are responsible for the propriety of all accounting transactions as defined by AS 37.10.030. Historically, the certification function was evidenced by an individuals hand written signature on a public document. In order to provide improved service to the public and to State agencies, accounting transactions will be certified on-line through computer terminals via electronic passwords which will uniquely identify the individual who authorized and released the transaction for processing. Section Three of this bill amends AS 37.10.030 to provide for the electronic certification feature.

2. Over the past several years there have been instances where State certifying officers and others have deliberately falsified public records. When these instances were referred to the Department of Law for review it was determined that falsification of public records needed to be better defined as a crime in order to be able to successfully prosecute such cases. Section One of this bill defines tampering with public records as a class C felony if the person who violates the law does so to obtain personal benefit or to injure or deprive another person of a benefit. Section Two of this bill defines tampering with public records as a class A misdemeanor if the offense is committed without the intent to obtain personal benefit.

This is basically a housekeeping bill with no fiscal impact. This bill is necessary to provide for proper internal accounting control in our State financial systems and to provide for proper disciplinary action when these controls are violated.

It should be noted that Sections One and Two of the bill apply to all public records and not just to accounting transactions.

We are recommending one modification to the bill and that is to include in the definition of "certifies" contained in Section Two of the bill, the definition of the responsibilities of a State certifying officer as provided by AS 37.10.030.

Sincerely,

Kenneth E. Bischoff

POSITION PAPER

SB 172

"An Act extending the termination date of the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault; and providing for an effective date."

The Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault (hereafter referred to as Council) was established by the Legislature in 1981 (AS 18.66.010-18.66.900) as a result of grass roots efforts to provide services to victims of domestic violence and sexual assault. Among its duties, the Council was created to develop, implement, maintain and monitor programs; coordinate domestic violence and sexual assault services provided by state, community and private agencies; award grants and contracts and provide fiscal and technical assistance to programs and communities.

State funding was initially allocated to the Abused Women's Aid In Crisis shelter for battered women in Anchorage in 1977. At that time there were four other domestic violence and sexual assault programs in the state that received federal funds from the Law Enforcement Assistance Agency. Just as Alaskan communities began to recognize the extent of domestic violence and sexual assault problems, federal funding for programs was halted.

In 1981 the Network on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault, which is a non-profit corporation composed of programs and individuals dedicated to addressing Alaska's domestic violence and sexual assault problems, led an effort to establish a mechanism in state government to disburse and monitor state funds to domestic violence and sexual assault programs. It was determined that the most effective means of accomplishing this was to establish the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault, a seven member policy making board located in the Department of Public Safety.

Four of the Council's members are the Commissioners or their designees from the Departments of Law, Health and Social Services, Public Safety and Education. The remaining three members are public members appointed by the Governor. Jana Varrati, public member from Anchorage is the Chair and James E. Fisher, Department of Law, the Vice Chair. Lola Tobuk from Nome and Peggy Ormasen from Haines are the other two public members. The departmental representatives are: James E. Fisher, Law; Connie Sipe, Health and Social Services; Jos Mapranath, Public Safety and Mary Hakala, Education.

The need for services to victims of domestic violence and sexual assault and their families as well as the need for additional coordination of services has increased. This is a result of enhanced public awareness of these crimes, victims realizing they have safe, supportive places to go and population increases in Alaska. The Council consistently has more requests for community based programs than it has had funds to distribute. Programs that plan to apply for funds submit letters of intent that estimate the amount to be requested. For FY86, the Council has received 37 letters of intent that total $6,456,932.

Position Paper, Dept Public Safety

The Council funded twenty-three domestic violence and sexual assault programs in FY85. Nineteen of the programs provide services that may include education, prevention, support, advocacy or counseling to child victims of abuse . Twelve of these programs provide safe and secure shelters and five have developed and coordinated confidential safe homes in their communities. These programs also provide emotional support and legal and medical assistance to victims. All but one of the programs also provide sexual assault crisis intervention and support services and five provide services to batterers. The Council also funds a batterers' program and a sexual assault program that are not associated with shelter programs; two crisis intervention programs that provide assistance and education to women who may not choose to stay in a shelter and two education programs.

The Council has effectively served the public in the provision of services to victims of domestic violence and sexual assault and their families. All programs funded by the Council are routinely monitored and provided with technical assistance, as requested. Communities without state funded services are provided assistance by the Council or its funded programs. Pamphlets, a child sexual assault curriculum, public service announcements and video tapes have been developed and distributed by the Council, and the Council maintains a film library to be used by people in the state. The Council has worked closely with the Network on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault to encourage effective domestic violence and sexual assault legislation and has worked with Legislators and staff to develop legislation that best serves the needs of victims. The Council has carried out its functions in public and encourages public participation in meetings, decisions, policies and regulations. The Council has accomplished a great deal to alleviate the trauma suffered by victims of domestic violence and sexual assault.

In order to most effectively provide services, areas of extreme need and the most effective service delivery models must be determined. The Council has begun developing a five year plan to accomplish specific objectives to carry out its mandates to provide and coordinate services. Coordination efforts between agencies that serve victims of domestic violence and their families must be maintained and enhanced. Statewide prevention and education efforts need to be continued and funded programs should be monitored and receive technical assistance. The Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault, with its configuration of state and public members, is the most effective means of insuring accountability of state funds and maintaining effective services to victims and their families; and therefore, it should be reinstated.

PURPOSE AND SCOPE OF THE REPORT

Purpose

In accordance with the intent of Titles 24 and 44 (sunset legislation), we conducted an examination of the Department of Public Safety, Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault (CDVSA), to determine if the Council has been operating in an efficient and effective manner and also if there is a public need for the program.

As required by legislative intent, this report shall be considered during legislative hearings in determining whether the CDVSA should be reestablished. Currently, the law specifies that this program will terminate as of June 30, 1985.

Scope

Our review consisted of evaluating the efficiency and effectiveness of the Council in (1) coordinating services provided by State and community agencies in response to domestic violence and sexual assault (DVSA) incidents; (2) developing, implementing, maintaining, and monitoring DVSA programs; (3) developing and implementing a standardized data collection system; (4) awarding grants and contracts; and (5) providing fiscal and technical assistance to grantee programs.

We reviewed the following sources of information:

1. Applicable statutes and legislative intent;
2. Budget documents;
3. Minutes of Council Meetings and attendance at the FY 85 funding meeting in June 1984;
4. Grantee performance and fiscal reviews prepared by Council and Public Safety personnel;
5. Interviews with various grantees;
6. Review of data collection forms and quarterly reports;
7. Interviews with various Council members; and
8. Office of the Ombudsman, State Equal Employment Opportunity Office, and the Human Rights Commission were contacted for information about complaints.

The policy and audit approach utilized by the Division of Legislative Audit for Performance Review can best be described as "audit by exception".

This methodology focuses audit effort on areas of an auditee's operations that have been identified by a preliminary survey as having a high degree of probability for needing improvements.

Therefore, by design, finite audit resources are used to identify where and how improvement can be made, and little time is devoted to reviewing well-run operations or programs. Consequently, this report highlights those areas needing improvement and does not emphasize those operations and programs that are properly functioning.

ORGANIZATION AND FUNCTION

Title 18 of the Alaska Statutes gives the Department of Public Safety the authority to ". . . provide for planning and coordination of services to victims of domestic violence or sexual assault or to their families and to perpetrators of domestic violence and sexual assault and to provide for crisis intervention and prevention programs." The Department has met these statutory duties by the establishment of the CDVSA.

A large part of the Council's responsibility is their directive to "receive and dispense State and Federal money and award grants and contracts from appropriations for the purpose to qualified local community entities for domestic violence, sexual assault, and crisis intervention and prevention programs." The Council is also responsible to provide technical assistance and monitor the activities of various contractors and grantees.

The Council consists of seven members, of which four are the commissioners, or their designees, of the Departments of Public Safety, Health and Social Services, Education, and Law. The balance of the Council is comprised of persons recommended by the Network on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault (a non-profit, private organization), and appointed at the Governor's discretion.

As of the date of this report, the Council is staffed by an executive director, a project coordinator, and a secretary.

The Network on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault is a federation of domestic violence shelters and counseling centers throughout the State. Prior to the creation of the Council by the 1981 Legislature, the Network provided much of the organizational structure of the State's domestic violence and sexual assault program.

The community programs, which make up the Network on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault, provide a variety of services to the public. Most importantly, their efforts are directed toward providing the victim with a safe environment by use of shelter and safe home networks. In addition, the programs are involved in educating and counseling the victim about domestic violence and sexual assault issues.

The counseling approach used by the programs is described as "empowerment". Empowerment's objective is to acquaint the victim with the law and victim rights; the cycle of domestic violence; the availability of jobs, child care, food stamps, and medical assistance; and to support and encourage the victim while she is learning self-dependence. The goal of this counseling method is to change the victim's beliefs about herself and to provide her with alternatives. It attempts to teach self-reliance.

Most recently, the Council has sponsored individual counseling programs for abusers which concentrate on reducing violent behavior. The community domestic violence and sexual assault programs, in cooperation with police and the court system, have implemented model projects in Dillingham and Anchorage that favor arrest, prosecution, sentencing, and counseling directed toward the batterer.

REPORT CONCLUSIONS

Policy Issues

This report contains policy issues raised as a result of our evaluation of various Council endeavors. The final policy decisions affecting these endeavors are not within the scope of this review but require legislative consideration. In debating these issues, the legislative oversight committees should consider the findings presented in this report so that the potential impact of policy changes can be evaluated.

Report Conclusions

In our opinion, the CDVSA should be reestablished. However, the Council should address the following issues in order to more effectively serve the public interest and perform its statutory duties.

1. The CDVSA should conduct their meetings in accordance with the State's public meeting law (see Recommendation No. 1).

2. The CDVSA should improve both the consistency and analysis of data collected from grantee programs (see Recommendation No. 2).

3. The CDVSA should develop and use coordinated, consistent, and comprehensive criteria in order to establish priorities for funding (see Recommendation No. 3).

4. The CDVSA should more actively promote a formal coordinated response by State agencies to the problems of domestic violence and sexual assault at both the State and local level (see Recommendation No. 4).

FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Recommendation No. 1

The Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault (CDVSA) should conduct their meetings in accordance with the State's public meeting law.

On June 8, 1984, during the course of their funding meeting, CDVSA voted 5-1 to enter executive session. The stated reason for closing the meeting was to consider the impact of gubernatorial budget document language on grant funding decisions.

In addition to this most recent instance, our review of the minutes of the past CDVSA meetings indicated that CDVSA invoked executive session privileges on numerous occasions. Since October 9, 1982, CDVSA has entered executive session eight times. In two instances, the minutes do not reflect any stated reason for entering executive session.

AS 44.62.310(a) requires that all State agency meetings are to be open to the public with three exceptions set out in AS 44.62.310(c). These statutory exceptions allow executive sessions for discussion of the following topics:

1. Matters, the immediate knowledge of which would clearly have an adverse effect upon the finances of the government unit;

2. Subjects that tend to prejudice the reputation and character of any person, provided the person may request a public discussion; and

3. Matters which by law, municipal charter, or ordinance are required to be confidential.

CDVSA's representative from the Department of Law advised that the Council's action on June 8, 1984, did not meet with these exceptions. Judicious use of executive session privileges not only assures compliance with the open meeting law, but also encourages public participation in the making of its regulations and decisions, which is a determinant of public need for CDVSA under the State's "sunset" statute (AS 44.66.050[c][5]).

Recommendation No. 2

The Council should improve both the consistency and analysis of data collected from grantee programs.

CDVSA is required by AS 18.66.050(a)(5) to develop and implement a standardized data collection system on domestic violence, sexual assault, and crisis intervention. In November 1981, CDVSA hired a Research Analyst to devise a system of data collection; to develop forms to standardize the system; and, to provide training to the various grantees in the use of the forms. The position was also responsible for the oversight and review of the system to ensure that the information being gathered was consistent, relevant, and valid.

However, due to the level of funding for personal services in the FY 84 budget, the Research Analyst was laid off in September 1983. Since that time, there has been limited review of the system and the data collected. As a result, much of the information being compiled is invalid and misleading.

The following examples show the problems with the data collection effort:

1. Definitions Inconsistently Applied

"Client Adult". The Council needs to decide what constitutes a client adult. This term refers to a person who has either witnessed an incident of domestic violence or sexual assault or is a relative or friend of a victim or perpetrator.

It appears that this term is overused as it does not seem reasonable to classify the following types of individuals as client adults:

a. Persons who report an incident and receive information on what services are offered by a CDVSA program, but have no other contact.

b. Teachers, medical professionals, or other like professionals, who may contact a program regarding a student or patient victim.

c. Persons who accompany a victim to a program who receive no service other than responses to inquiries on behalf of a victim, e.g., a person who inquires of legal remedies available to a victim is currently counted as "legal assistance".

"Medical Accompaniment". This term is being applied to count not only the victim requiring medical attention but also a friend or relative who may be accompanying the victim.

"Crisis Counseling". This term is being applied in cases where the victimization occurred as many as twenty years prior to becoming a program client. It is also being applied in cases where a professional, such as a teacher, contacts the program for what would more reasonably be termed professional consultation.

2. Incidence Data (number of occurrences of victimization) vs. Client Data (number of clients served)

   Confusion exists on whether the aim of the data collection effort is to count incidences or count clients, which has resulted in overstated and misleading data.

   a. Individual clients who were victimized on more than one occasion (some many years previous) are being counted, in at least one grantee program, once for each incident in which they are involved.

   b. Individual clients who were victimized by more than one perpetrator are being counted, in some cases, once for each perpetrator.

3. Separation of Services

   CDVSA grantees often offer a wide range of services from various funding sources. Reports submitted by grantee programs often include not only domestic violence or sexual assault, but all services provided by the grantee, which tends to overstate the data.

4. Compilation and Reporting of Data

   Since September 1983, the burden of compiling the data into a quarterly report has shifted to the individual grantees. The time expended on this statistical function results in less time being spent on the provision of direct services. The grantees also cannot be expected to employ individuals with statistical or data management expertise, yet they are being relied on as data managers. The grantee programs submit their data forms to CDVSA on a monthly or quarterly basis. CDVSA stores the documents without review or analysis.

Many of the problems with the data system could have been rectified if proper review and oversight had occurred. In this instance, simply stating that lack of funding was the reason for laying off the research analyst is insufficient. The lack of funding is due in part, to the CDVSA not following Legislative intent in FY 82 when the Council was first formed.

The Fiscal Note that accompanied the CDVSA legislation in FY 82 intended that employees of CDVSA be paid at the following levels:

1. Project Coordinator, range 18
2. Research Analyst, range 16
3. Clerk - typist, range 7

However, CDVSA chose to reclassify and hire at the following levels:

1. Executive Director, range 24
2. Program Coordinator, range 20
3. Research Analyst, range 16
4. Secretary, range 10

Since FY 82, the Legislature has either increased or held constant the funding for personal services. Consequently, prior position reclassification decisions made by CDVSA appear to have been largely responsible for the budgetary constraints that resulted in the loss of the research analyst.

However, the data collection function remains an important aspect of CDVSA efforts, and we feel that the lack of consistency in applying the terms; the lack of a consistent aim of collecting incident or client data; and the absence of evaluation and analysis, is producing irrelevant and unreliable information. Without reliable data, CDVSA and the Legislature do not know the true extent of the problems nor the success of the treatment method.

In order for CDVSA to effectively comply with their statutory responsibility to implement a reliable data collection system on which Legislative decisions can be based, the Council should revise and monitor the current system.

Recommendation No. 3

CDVSA should develop and use coordinated, consistent, and comprehensive criteria in order to establish priorities for funding.

CDVSA's most visible and important activity is its allocation of appropriated grant funds among the various community nonprofit agencies that provide services related to domestic violence and sexual assault. The types of services and the service delivery organizational structure vary by locale. In order to sort through the demands made on the available grant funding, CDVSA must establish priorities and develop funding criteria that reflect those priorities.

We do not believe that CDVSA has effectively established a well coordinated and comprehensive approach for making decisions. It was our observation at the most recent funding meeting (June 7-9, 1984) that Council members seemed to shift emphasis among various criteria during the three day deliberations. Grantees that we interviewed also expressed dismay with the process, commenting that they felt that the decision-making criteria used differed from the criteria stated in CDVSA's request for grant proposals.

For the FY 85 grants, the CDVSA staff reviewed all grant applications and made funding level recommendations to the Council. The Executive Director stated at the meeting that the staff recommendations were based on the following general CDVSA policy precepts:

1. Priority is given to programs who provide safety to victims of domestic violence and sexual assault.

2. Priority is given to ongoing programs over requests from new start-up programs.

3. Among new community or regional requests, priority is given to areas that demonstrate a viable, active volunteer commitment to domestic violence and sexual assault victims.

It appears to us that little consideration was given to the staff recommendations. A major reason for the limited use of staff recommendations seemed to be an increased emphasis on intent language contained in the Governor's budget request. The Executive Director had not considered that budgetary intent when formulating her recommendations, yet CDVSA members began relying on it heavily after they were reminded of its existence half-way through the three day funding meeting.

The criteria used to develop the staff recommendations and the budgetary intent language essentially differed in degree of detail. However, the Council members apparently did not know of the Governor's intent for CDVSA's FY 85 budget until the funding meeting and only then started making funding decisions in that context. We feel that CDVSA would have made better use of their resources and would have made better coordinated and consistent funding decisions had they given the staff more direction. CDVSA could have had staff use the more specific gubernatorial intent (and by approval of the budget request, implicit legislative intent) when staff reviewed grant requests in preparing recommendations.

We feel that the rather disjointed, ad hoc approach that CDVSA ultimately used in making funding decisions resulted in decisions that were inconsistent with stated CDVSA policy, legislative intent, and sound grant funding management.

The following are some examples of funding inconsistencies:

1. Men's Support Network (MSN) - MSN provides prevention through education series in the Anchorage area. The program includes community presentation on the changing roles of men in today's society and crisis and group counseling to men in transition. MSN, however, does not counsel men involved in violent relationships. Batterers are referred for counseling to the men's program at the Abused Women's Aid in Crisis (AWAIC) shelter. During the third quarter of FY 84, MSN received one crisis call and was involved in four counseling sessions.

   Staff recommended the Council either defund MSN, due to the lack of funds to fully support the shelter programs, or to fund the program at the level at which it could effectively operate. MSN in FY 84 had been funded at $17,500, an amount insufficient to run this type of program effectively. In fact, the FY 84 grant was perceived as a phase-out grant. The Council ignored staff options and funded MSN at $18,300 for FY 85, an increased of $800, seemingly prolonging the phase-out period for another year.

   We feel the staff recommendation to defund MSN in a year of limited funding would have been more appropriate, especially since this program does not counsel batterers but refers them to AWAIC for services. In our opinion, the Council did not follow its stated criteria nor the intent expressed in the budget process when funding MSN.

2. Kodiak Women's Resource and Crisis Center (KWRCC) - The Kodiak program was subject to severe internal strife in February 1984, resulting in terminations of essentially the entire staff and resignations of at least one member of the KWRCC Board of Directors. According to the CDVSA program evaluation, the safety of victims residing in the shelter was in question. Similarly, the most recent program evaluation stated the program was in turmoil and unable to provide the quality of services required by CDVSA.

   Staff recommended maintenance funding plus $2,000 for rural outreach. This would have increased funding 1% over FY 84 grant level to $177,000. However, the Council funded Kodiak at $187,500, an increase of 14.3%. We feel that staff recommendations expressed a more appropriate funding level, especially when viewed within the context of victim safety. Until a follow-up evaluation of the Kodiak program was performed, we feel it would have been more prudent to follow the staff recommendation.

3. Men Emerging Now (MEN) - Juneau's MEN program received a FY 85 grant of $107,500 which represented a 7.5% increase over their FY 84 $100,000 grant. MEN provides counseling to men who batter.

CDVSA staff had recommended that MEN receive no increased funding. Of the seven shelter programs that received less of a percentage increase than MEN, six of them received less than or the same as the staff recommendations.

We feel that the staff recommendations were more in line with legislative intent that shelters and safe homes receive priority in funding over men's counseling programs (SJR 6, SLA 1982). CDVSA, by seemingly rejecting those recommendations, was not in accordance with legislative intent and CDVSA's guidelines to give priority to programs providing immediate safety to victims.

Recommendation No. 4

CDVSA should actively promote a formal coordinated response by State agencies to the problems of domestic violence and sexual assault at both the State and local level.

CDVSA is statutorily responsible for coordination of services provided by the Departments of Law (DOL), Education (DOE), Public Safety (DPS), Health and Social Services (DHSS), and other State or community groups dealing with domestic violence, sexual assault, and crisis intervention and prevention (AS 18.66.060[a][4]).

CDVSA has stressed to local community grantees the importance of developing cooperative working relationships with police, district attorneys, judges, and education, social service, and medical service agencies. However, we found through interviews with grantee managers that oftentimes the degree of cooperation in the community depends on the attitude and commitment of the individuals involved. As a result, cooperation and coordination is sometimes lacking and must be continually reestablished as individuals in the various positions change.

A contributing factor to this disjointed local coordinative effort is lack of clear and established statewide policy by affected agencies. For example, various DHSS offices in the local community should be able to look to their respective division directors for policy and guidance about how to coordinate service delivery with local domestic violence and sexual assault agencies. A more formal coordinated policy regarding domestic violence and sexual assault services from each affected State agency would help promote continuity, increasing both the efficiency and effectiveness of service delivery to victims.

Besides providing better direction at the local level, various State agencies need to adopt a formal policy agreement at the State level. CDVSA, together with the Criminal Justice Working Group with DOL, has been involved with developing a Child Sexual Assault Agreement between DOL, DPS, DHSS, and the Department of Corrections. This agreement has been in progress for three years and has yet to be signed by all Departments, although we are told an agreement is near.

However, no policy has been drafted to develop guidelines for a coordinated approach to domestic violence issues. This is due in part to the difficulty of defining and agreeing to the limits of domestic violence. Most people will agree that any sexual approach to a child is morally and legally wrong. It is not as easy to gain a consensus of opinion on the moral and legal limits of domestic violence affecting adults.

Although we recognize the difficulties CDVSA has and will encounter in coordinating these services, more emphasis needs to be placed on formulating guidelines to deal with domestic violence. CDVSA has made some progress in their efforts to coordinate service delivery in Alaska, but much more effort is needed on the State and local level in order to fulfill CDVSA's statutory obligations.

AUDITOR'S COMMENTS

The following is a discussion of two recent studies that point out the importance of coordinated intervention in DVSA cases. The Duluth, Minnesota project was spearheaded by Minnesota Program Development, Inc. and titled Domestic Abuse Intervention Project (DAIP). The Minneapolis Domestic Violence Experiment was funded by the National Institute of Justice, the Minneapolis Police Department, and the Police Foundation, and was limited to assessing the effect of arrest on the occurrence of violence.

Domestic Abuse Intervention Project (DAIP)

The DAIP makes a strong case for a coordinated, comprehensive intervention program which emphasizes arrest, prosecution, sanctions, and counseling directed toward the batterer. The intervention methods used in violent cases in this project were not unique to DAIP, the primary difference was the cooperation of nine agencies when responding to DVSA cases. After six months, the project team evaluated the results of the program and found the following:

1. For those suspects arrested with the officer as the complainant instead of the victim, 70% pled guilty;

2. With the no drop policy, suspects were prosecuted and sentenced;

3. Counselors were convinced that treating the violence instead of the relationship was conducive to reducing violent behavior; and

4. Recurrences of violence between DAIP couples dropped 26%.

The DAIP intervention strategy was built around the following policy changes:

1. Police - Full utilization of the liberalized probable cause arrest law in domestic violence situations. Officer discretion for arrest would no longer be based on the reasons for the violence but strictly on whether there was probable cause to believe an assault had occurred. When responding to DVSA calls involving cohabiting adults, the officer would arrest if three conditions were met:

    a. The alleged assault occurred within four hours of the officer's arrival and

b. There are visible signs of injury or physical impairment on the victim and

c. Based on the statement of the parties and the officer's observations, the officer has probable cause to believe an assault had occurred.

2. Prosecution - The police officer, rather than the victim, would become the complaining witness; an advocate would be assigned to each victim to educate her about the court procedures and to encourage prosecution; and, a policy was adopted against dropping charges when the victim requested.

3. Court - If found guilty, the Court would have three choices for sentencing. Sentencing would be preceded by an investigation to determine which option would be most appropriate.

   a. Jail sentence with no probation;

   b. Suspended sentence with the abuser required to attend DAIP counseling and education program; and

   c. Any combination of jail and counseling.

4. Counseling - The approach would be shifted from focusing on improving or ending the relationship to focusing on the violence. Hopefully, this switch would make the batterer realize that regardless of what events led to the assault, the use of violence was unacceptable and illegal.

5. Women's Shelter - The shelter staff would be required to advocate with the victim for mandatory arrest and prosecution of the suspects. Previously, shelters had supported the victim's decision when she wanted charges dropped. Also, the shelter would be required to send an advocate to the victim's home following an arrest and to maintain contact with the victim during and after batterers' counseling.

The results of the study strongly suggest that arrest, prosecution, sentencing, and counseling when used as a coordinated response directed toward the batterer, do reduce violent incidents.

The Minneapolis Domestic Violence Experiment

In Minneapolis, the passage of a more liberalized arrest law paved the way for a new approach to domestic violence cases. This experiment was designed to test three police responses to determine which would have the most effect in reducing violence. When police received calls concerning domestic violence, they were required to alternate between three options as follows:

1. Arrest when there is probable cause to believe an assault occurred;

2. Counsel both parties; or

3. Send the assailant away for several hours.

The results of the Minneapolis study strongly suggest that arrest is the best approach to domestic violence. In addition, when the police officer offered to listen and showed interest in the victim's side of the story, the effectiveness of arrest was enhanced.

After six months the study team evaluated the effectiveness of each of the three methods and found the following:

1. The percent of suspects repeating violence, based on 314 official police records:

   a. arrest - 10%
   b. advise - 19%
   c. send suspect away - 24%

2. The percent of suspects repeating violence, based on 161 victim interviews:

   a. arrest - 19%
   b. advise - 37%
   c. send suspect away - 33%

3. The percent of suspects repeating violence when police listened to victim and arrested based on 194 victim interviews

   a. arrest and listening - 9%
   b. arrest only - 26%
   c. advise - 35%

Previously, the traditional police response to cases of domestic violence had been to do as little as possible because police believed the offenders would not be punished by the Courts if arrested. This study, on the other hand, suggests that arrest alone has some deterrent even without prosecution and court sanctions.

Implications for Alaska

We believe these studies have important implications for the intervention programs in Alaska. With passage of a liberal arrest law in 1983, the road is open to implement a strong, coordinated response to domestic violence. In fact, two areas in Alaska, Dillingham and Anchorage, have already implemented procedures which favor arrest, prosecution, sentencing, and counseling of the batterer. Although the approaches differ somewhat, each city has emphasized the importance of arrest, prosecution, and cooperation.

ANALYSIS OF PUBLIC NEED

Limited Analysis

The following analyses show both positive and negative factors as they relate to the public need as defined in the "sunset" law. These analyses are not intended to be comprehensive but to address those areas we were able to cover in our review.

I. The extent to which the Council has operated in the public interest.

A. The Council has developed and distributed several educational films and curriculum addressing the issues of domestic violence and sexual assault. Among these are "Village to Village", a film about domestic violence in rural Alaska; and "It's Okay to Say No", a film for children about their personal safety. These films are available to all interested persons, and the children's film has been used in several primary and secondary schools in Alaska.

B. The Council, by disregarding the open meeting law three times since October 1982, has left itself open to criticisms of not operating in the public interest (see Recommendation No. 1).

II. The extent to which the operation of the Council has been impeded or enhanced by existing statutes, procedures, and practices which it has adopted, and any other matter, including budgetary, resources, and personnel matters.

A. The Council staff, through its program evaluations, and financial reviews, have provided valuable technical assistance to grantees. The Council, through these reviews, not only safeguards State funds but also ensures the quality of services to the public.

B. The Council is in the process of developing a statewide plan for growth of domestic violence and sexual assault programs to ensure that services are available where they are most necessary. Implementation of this plan will enhance the operation of the Council.

C. The Council has not developed an adequate data collection system as required by AS 18.66.050 (a)(5) (See Recommendation No. 2).

III. The extent to which the Council has recommended statutory changes which are generally of benefit to the public interest.

A. The Council aided in the passage of the following:

1. AS 18.68 - Sexual assault investigations. Provides for a uniform sexual assault examination kit; protocols governing the use and distribution of the kit; and training in the protocols and use of the kits.

2. AS 18.65 - Police training about new domestic violence (DV) laws. How to handle DV incidents; and notification of the victim of rights and services provided by the State.

3. AS 12.25.030 - Arrests of perpetrators of domestic violence on the charge of fourth degree assault. The police officer needs only reasonable cause to arrest on fourth degree assault.

4. AS 11.41 - Various definitions and grades of sexual assault.

5. AS 22.15.100 and AS 25.35 - Broadens the powers of a judge and the uses of the injunctive relief orders (or temporary restraining order). Also reaffirms the consequences to the perpetrator of disregarding a restraining order. Restraining orders allow the victim to remain in the home in relative safety for a limited time.

IV. The extent to which the Council has encouraged interested persons to report to it concerning the effects of its regulations and decisions on the effectiveness of service, economy of service, and availability of service which it has provided.

A. The Council encourages interested parties to comment on its decision or regulations by publicly announcing its meetings. The Council also encourages input about its policies from the Alaska Network on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault.

V. The extent to which the Council has encouraged public participation in the making of its regulations and decisions.

A. The Council has made extensive efforts to inform the public about domestic violence and sexual assault issues. A teleconference in December 1983, was preceded by mailing notices statewide to interested parties. In addition, the Council organized a teleconference between Alaska and the U.S. Family Violence Task Force in Washington, D.C.

B. The Council has encouraged participation in the making of its regulations by working closely with the Network on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault. Preliminary drafts of regulations were disseminated to DVSA programs statewide for comments.

C. However, improper use of executive session at public meetings suggest a certain disregard to encouraging public participation in making Council decisions (see Recommendation No. 1).

VI. The efficiency with which public inquiries or complaints regarding the activities of the Council filed with it, with the department to which the Council is administratively assigned, or with the Office of the Ombudsman have been processed and resolved.

A. We found no problems in this area.

VII. The extent to which state personnel practices, including affirmative action requirements, have been complied with by the Council to its own activities and the area of activity or interest.

A. We found no problems in this area.

VIII. The extent to which statutory, regulatory, budgeting, or other changes are necessary to enable the Council to better serve the interests of the public and to comply with the factors enumerated in this subsection.

A. It is the opinion of all of the grantees we interviewed and at least one Council member, that the composition of the Council should be changed. Most of the grantees' agreed on the following suggestions:

1. Appointment of representatives from more geographical regions of Alaska. At present five of the seven members reside in Southeast Alaska.

2. Appointment of an Alaskan native, who understands the complexities of providing services to rural Alaskans.

3. Appointment of a Council member who is involved in law enforcement.

4. Appointment of more public members.

B. See Recommendations No. 1 through 4 for further discussion.

LEGISLATIVE AUDIT

Dear Mr. Wilkerson:

Thank you for the preliminary audit report, dated July 13, 1984. A committee of the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault (Council) developed the following response to your recommendations:

Recommendation #1: The Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault should conduct their meetings in accordance with the State's public meeting law.

The Council agrees that their meetings should be conducted in accordance with the State's public meeting law and will continue to adhere to the requirements of the statute. This recommendation addresses two issues: a) the calling for an executive session at the Council's June 8, 1984 meeting; and b) the lack of clear statements in certain minutes regarding purposes for executive sessions. The Council will respond to each of these issues.

a) Regarding the executive session at the June 8, 1984 meeting: the public meeting statute was read during the meeting and the Council determined that the discussion concerning the letters from the Governor's office could affect the funding process in motion and therefore have an adverse affect upon the finances of the governmental unit. AS 44.62.310(C)(3) was the stated reason for holding an executive session with additional language regarding the letters added as clarification. The Council considered the input of the representative of the Department of Law and made the decision to go into executive session in good faith and with good cause.

b) As can be documented in recent minutes, the Council has taken action to remedy the lack of clarity, in previous minutes, of reasons to call for executive sessions. This remedial action occurred prior to the Legislative audit. Within the last year, the reasons for executive sessions were clearly stated at meetings and accurately reflected in Council minutes. According to a Council member present at the October 9, 1982 meeting, the two executive sessions in which the October 9, 1982 minutes do not state a reason for holding the sessions, were to discuss the embezzlement of funds in the Women In Crisis - Counseling Assistance program. Executive sessions were required because confidential police reports and personalities were discussed.

The Council will (guided by AS 44.63.310(c)) continue to use executive sessions with discretion, clearly state the reasons and accurately reflect the reasons in the minutes.

3. Appointment of a Council member who is involved in law enforcement.

4. Appointment of more public members.

LEGISLATIVE AUDIT

Dear Mr. Wilkerson:

Thank you for the preliminary audit report, dated July 13, 1984. A committee of the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault (Council) developed the following response to your recommendations:

Recommendation #1: The Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault should conduct their meetings in accordance with the State's public meeting law.

The Council agrees that their meetings should be conducted in accordance with the State's public meeting law and will continue to adhere to the requirements of the statute. This recommendation addresses two issues: a) the calling for an executive session at the Council's June 8, 1984 meeting; and b) the lack of clear statements in certain minutes regarding purposes for executive sessions. The Council will respond to each of these issues.

a) Regarding the executive session at the June 8, 1984 meeting: the public meeting statute was read during the meeting and the Council determined that the discussion concerning the letters from the Governor's office could affect the funding process in motion and therefore have an adverse affect upon the finances of the governmental unit. AS 44.62.310(C)(3) was the stated reason for holding an executive session with additional language regarding the letters added as clarification. The Council considered the input of the representative of the Department of Law and made the decision to go into executive session in good faith and with good cause.

b) As can be documented in recent minutes, the Council has taken action to remedy the lack of clarity, in previous minutes, of reasons to call for executive sessions. Recommendation #2: The Council should improve both the consistency and analysis of data collected from grantee programs.

The Council agrees that its data collection effort should be improved. In fact, the auditors were requested by the Executive Director to explore data collection as an area of concern. The Council understands the need for accurate data and has taken steps to accurately explain and use the information provided by its data.

A half-time Data Processing Clerk II has been hired and data processing equipment is in the FY 85 budget. The half-time position and new equipment should enable the Council office to compile, review and analyze data submitted by its funded programs. The securing of the additional personnel and equipment will allow the Council to alleviate the following shortcomings identified in the audit report:

1. Individual clients victimized more than once being counted more than once (Rec.2-2a). Each client receives only one ID number, so the Council will be able to delete duplicates when the system is automated.

2. Compilation of data (Rec.2-4). As soon as the system has been implemented, the Council will be able to compile the program data from individual client data forms. The Data Processing Clerk II is now on staff and has begun to review data forms for errors and inconsistencies.

3. Definitions inconsistently applied (Rec.2-1). The Data Processing Clerk II will check the client intake forms to assure that data is consistently and correctly applied throughout the programs. The Council agrees that an individual reporting an incident or a professional receiving consultation does not meet the definition of "client adult". The Council provided programs with a data dictionary that defines client adult as a "person 18 years of age and over admitted into a program for treatment and/or intervention as a result of a domestic violence and/or sexual assault incident directed towards another person who is a relative, neighbor, friend, etc."

4. Separation of Services - The Council will monitor data to assure that data reflects only the Council sponsored portion of the program.

Besides enhancing office capabilities, the Council, its planning committee, and staff will take a thorough look at the purpose, use and collection of data and make appropriate revisions in the system. Admittedly, there are aspects of the data forms and definitions that could be enhanced, clarified, and/or deleted.

Some items discussed in the data section are inaccurate and require further explanation:

"Definitions Inconsistently Applied"

Medical Accompaniment and Legal Assistance

It is consistent with the Council's definition of a client, for programs to give legal and medical advocacy to client adults. Often a victim is so traumatized she/he cannot understand legal options, so the person who accompanies the victim receives the services in order to be able to assist the victim at a later time. Also, a person who is concerned and traumatized by a loved one's sexual assault and accompanies the victim to the hospital requires support and advocacy in her/his encounter with the medical system. The crisis advocate is often required to go back and forth between the victim and client adult explaining procedures and the medical process and intervening for both parties with medical personnel. In some cases, a program assigns two advocates to a sexual assault crisis call.

Crisis Counseling - In many cases, it is appropriate to consider a victim's disclosure about victimization as crisis counseling even if the disclosure occurs long after the sexual assault. Victims often try to bury and deny a sexual assault, particularly if it occurred when they were children. At the point a person stops denying the incident or recognizes the trauma and pain she/he has suffered, she/he is often in emotional crisis.

Council Office - A previous audit conducted in 1982 cited the Council for hiring above intent as stated in a fiscal note accompanying the Council's legislation effective in October 1981. The Council responded that staff were hired commensurate with responsibilities and with staff in other agencies in state government. It should be noted that neither the Council nor the Department of Public Safety classified these positions. Titles and ranges of positions were determined by the Department of Administration. In FY 82 and 83, the Council had four full-time positions: the Executive Director, Program Coordinator, Research Analyst and Secretary. There was insufficient funding in FY 84 to maintain these positions. In FY 85, the Council office has three and a half positions: Executive Director (Range 24), Program Coordinator (Range 20), Secretary (Range 10) and Data Processing Clerk, 1/2 time (Range 9).

Recommendation #3: CDV/SA should develop and use coordinated, consistent, and comprehensive criteria in order to establish priorities for funding.

The Council agrees that allocation of appropriated grant funds is an important activity and will continue to work toward improving the system. The Council developed and utilized the following priorities in making grant funding decisions for FY 85:

1. Programs which do not have minimum funding levels to operate safely and legally.

2. Programs which provide essential crisis intervention services.

3. Programs which address the needs of child victims or children of victims.

4. Existing programs will have priority over new programs.

5. Programs in regional centers which provide prevention and education services to a larger geographic area.

6. Areas of extreme or special need (e.g. sudden influx of workers in small community, rapid increase in violent crime, withdrawal of other resources, etc.).

7. Programs which have been providing shelter through local or other state funds, but which are without operating funds.

8. Programs providing services to male batterers and/or sex offenders.

Also used in the review process and presented in the grant application were the attached criteria.

The process of distributing limited resources for such important functions was very difficult. Although the process may have appeared disjointed to some, it manifested the need for the Council to gather and process a great deal of complicated information in order to make rational decisions. The process may have been a clear reflection of the complexity and sensitivity of the issues the Council is empowered to handle. Intent language in the Governor's budget concerning the Council's funding of certain grants was an important issue and probably should have been considered earlier. It must be pointed out that budget documents were prepared from Council documents and were consistent with priorities and criteria established by the Council. They did not conflict with stated Council priorities.

In response to the observation that little consideration was given to staff recommendations for funding grants, the Council submits that staff recommendations were considered and utilized along with a significant number of other considerations such as criteria established by the Council, program testimony at the meeting, funding availability, legislative concerns and statutory responsibilities.

Regarding the specific awards made, which the preliminary audit report states were inconsistent with stated Council policies, legislative intent and sound grant funding management, the Council has the following response:

a. The FY 85 budget did not include a legislative intent. However, legislative intents in prior years specified that shelters and safe homes were the highest priority. This is consistent with the Council's first priority, safety. The Council adequately funded viable shelter and safe home programs.

b. Men's Support Network (MSN) - The Council decided to fund MSN at $18,300 which was $800 above maintenance. The $800 was to meet FICA requirements not budgeted for in FY 83. The Council felt that the program, the only one of its kind, is a vital aspect of the prevention of domestic violence and sexual assault. However, due to funding constraints and other Council priorities, there were insufficient funds to provide funding for a full-time position. The Council determined that MSN, which received some funds from the Municipality of Anchorage, could operate effectively on $18,300. Staff recommended either to defund the MSN program or to fully fund the program. The staff option to defund MSN was not "due to lack of funds to fully support shelter programs", but because it was not as high a priority as other applicants.

c. Kodiak Women's Resource and Crisis Center (KWRCC) - The Council determined KWRCC's grant award based on a maintenance budget, with an increase of $8,000 for FICA (not budgeted in FY 83) and a need for increased rural outreach. The staff recommendation was $177,000 with additional money to be added for FICA, if there were sufficient funds. The Council put $2500 more in rural outreach than the staff had recommended because the need was apparent, and it was consistent with the Council's FY 85 budget document. The Council had discussed the Kodiak program at length during its May meeting and requested periodic program reports. In the short time before the funding meeting, the program had hired a new director and stabilized considerably. There were no indications that problems would continue at the same level. Step ad been taken by KWRCC before the funding meeting to assure client safety.

d. Men Emerging Now, Inc. (MEN) - The MEN's program received an additional $7,500 above staff recommendation as matching for a Jesuit volunteer's position. For that minimal additional funding, the program will be able to increase and improve rural outreach. The MEN's program in Juneau is the only free standing batterers' program in the state. It is recognized that rural areas need services provided by the program, and the Council decided that increasing funds for this program was an extremely cost effective means of providing rural outreach.

Recommendation #4: CDV/SA should actively promote a formal coordinated response by State agencies to the problems of domestic violence and sexual assault.

The Council takes the responsibility to coordinate domestic violence and sexual assault services seriously. In the recent year, it has taken strong action to identify services provided by other agencies in order to facilitate and direct coordination. All appropriate departments were sent letters in March, 1984, asking them to provide the Council with information concerning the domestic violence and sexual assault services they provide. The Council realizes that this is the first step in determining specific plans for coordination. Also, for the past year, the Council has met with various representatives from programs that impact domestic violence and sexual assault services: Division of Family and Youth Services, Displaced Homemakers Program, Department of Corrections, Women's Mini-Cabinet, Governor's Office, etc. The Council and the Department of Corrections has developed a memo of agreement for an RSA in which the Council administers Corrections' funds for batterers' programs in correctional institutions. The Council has had a $5,000 RSA from the Division of Public Health for the last two years to provide sexual assault training and information. Council staff has met often with representatives from the Department of Health and Social Services to discuss coordination efforts.

It should be noted that the Child Sexual Assault agreement, mentioned in the preliminary audit report, was originally written in 1982 by the Council member who represented the Department of Law. The agreement was not signed in 1982 by all parties. It was at the Council's instigation that the agreement was resurrected in 1984. The agreement has recently gone through a revision process that involved all affected agencies and has been signed (a copy of the agreement is attached).

As stated in the preliminary audit report, it is difficult to coordinate domestic violence services. However, a major aspect of coordination has already been addressed in Alaska statutes which require police officers to inform victims of domestic violence of the nearest shelter and other available services. Police officers' responses and referrals are key to successful domestic violence programming. The Council agrees that the Duluth and Minneapolis studies have important implications for Alaska. In order to assure that the most effective system is developed, the Council needs to determine the most appropriate response for Alaska. The Council has developed a draft plan to identify specific needs and strategies for coordination. In the meantime, Council members and staff will continue to be aggressive in coordination efforts.

The Council has further comments about the remainder of the report.

Organization and Function

It is not clear in the discussion of the Alaska Network on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault (Network) how the Council relates to Network programs. The Council funds, monitors and provides technical assistance to twenty-three domestic violence and sexual assault programs in FY 85. Of the twenty-three programs, twenty-one Council funded programs belong or have expressed the intent to join the Network. It is not mandatory that Council funded programs belong to the Network, a non-profit corporation. The programs the Council funds provide the services you mention on page 3 and 4 as well as these additional services: crisis intervention for adult and child sexual assault and domestic violence victims, victim advocacy with medical and law enforcement, development and implementation of school curricula on sexual assault and domestic violence, counseling for non-offending parents as well as victims of child sexual assault; community education and training; training in domestic violence and sexual assault for other professionals; and transportation for victims, which often includes flights from rural areas.

In the discussion of empowerment, the major philosophical premise of empowerment was not stated; that is to give a victim the power to make her own decisions. Programs are careful not to make decisions for a victim, but as was stated, provide her with alternatives.

Analyses of Public Need

I. The extent to which the Council has operated in the public interest.

The major area in which the Council operates in the public interest is in funding, monitoring and providing technical assistance to community domestic violence and sexual assault programs. These programs provide services to victims, their families and communities to reduce and prevent the trauma associated with domestic violence and sexual assault.

IA. The Council has developed a child sexual assault curriculum called "Preventing Sexual Abuse of Children" that has two accompanying video tapes: "Aware Not Afraid" and "Its OK to Say No". The Council sent one copy of the curriculum to each school district, put PSA's on LearnAlaska and distributes additional copies of the curriculum upon request. As was stated in the preliminary audit, it is being used in several primary and secondary schools in Alaska. "Village to Village" is a video tape which has a manual that accompanies it. The Council provides copies of these materials to its programs as well as other people who request it. The Council has also produced the following documents and video materials that it disbributes as widely as possible, within fiscal constraints:

"Sexual Assault Training Manual: A Guide for Trainers"
"Domestic Violence: A Curriculum for Officer Trainers"
"Someone You Know" a video documentary on Domestic in Alaska
Human Services and Law Enforcement Training Video tapes.
Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault PSAs

IB. See response to Recommendation Number 1.

II. The extent to which the operation of the Council has been impeded or enhanced by existing statutes, procedures, and practices which it has adopted, and any other matter, including budgetary, resources, and personnel matters.

IIB. The Council has developed a draft plan which has been distributed to Council funded programs for input.

IIC. See response to Recommendation Number 2.

IV. The extent to which the Council has encouraged interested persons to report to it concerning the effects of its regulations and decisions on the effectiveness of service, economy of service, and availability of service which it has provided.

IV. The Council also provides time at meetings for public comments and sends major documents, such as its plan, to interested people.

V. The extent to which the Council has encouraged public participation in the making of its regulations and decisions.

VC. See response to Recommendation Number 1.

VIII. The extent to which statutory, regulatory, budgeting, or other changes are necessary to enable the Council to better serve the interests of the public and to comply with the factors enumerated in this subsection.

Four of the five members of the Council that reside in Southeast are designees of the Commissioners of Public Safety, Law, Education and Health and Social Services. Although they live in Juneau, they do not represent Southeast. They represent their departments' statewide perspectives.

A new Council member, Lola Tobuk was recently appointed to fill the position left vacant by Diane Carpenter of Bethel. Ms. Tobuk is an Alaskan Native from Nome.

The Council met with the Network on September 13, 1984 and discussed the Network's concerns with the Council's composition. The Network recommended adding public members. The Council feels that enlarging the Council would make it an unwieldy size and require additional travel funds and staff support. The Council also discussed specific appointments made by Commissioners. The Council feels that, since the agency is so new, it is important to have policy makers as members so they can speak for their department. Each Council member represents their total department. The representative from the Department of Public Safety represents all interests of the department, including law enforcement.

The Department of Public Safety and the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault are committed to directing Alaska's domestic violence and sexual efforts, so that violence will be reduced and quality services are provided to the people we serve. We are pleased to work cooperatively with you in this effort. If you have any questions about this response, please contact Barbara Miklos, Executive Director of the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault, at 465-4356.

Robert J. Sundberg

INTRODUCTION

According to the FBI's "Crime in the United States", in 1983 Alaska's rate of reported rapes was 101.5 per 100,000 residents. This was an 18.9% increase over 1982. The rate of rape in Alaska was the highest in the nation and over three times the national rate of 33.7. Alaska also has one of the highest rates of homicide per capita. In 1983 it was 13.8 per 100,000, compared to the national rate of 8.3. In Alaska, 23% of the homicides in 1983 were against a family member, compared to 19% nationally. National studies have shown that the incidences of child sexual assault are increasing. Reports of child sexual abuse in Alaska are skyrocketing. In FY80 the Division of Family and Youth Services had 185 suspected and adjudicated cases of child sexual assault; in FY84 there were 992 comparable cases.

These alarming statistics document Alaska's need for services to victims of domestic violence and sexual assault. There are compelling reasons to assure that these services are particularly sensitive to a victim's plight. Society often places a stigma upon a victim of sexual assault because of the nature of the crime. Added burdens are also placed upon victims of family violence because they care for or depend upon the perpetrators. U.S. Assistant Attorney General Lois Haight Herrington sums it up well:

> "To be abused by a spouse, a parent, a trusted adult or by one's own child or to witness such abuse carries with it a particular agony. Victims wrestle with feelings of fear, loyalty, love, guilt and shame. In this they often face conflicts not experienced by those attacked by strangers. Adults will be torn between the desire to shield and help a loved one and their responsibility toward their own safety or others in the household. Children often face alone the terrible truth that those who should protect them are, in fact, a source of harm. Anyone who lives in a violent home experiences an essential loss. The one place on earth where they should feel safe and secure has become instead a place of danger.
> These victims are often uniquely isolated. Friends who might otherwise be a source of support hesitate to intrude on the privacy of family matters or choose sides. Reporting violence to authorities carries its own risks. All too often police, prosecutors or judges minimize or ignore the problem and the victim is left alone to face an attacker who may respond with anger at being reported".

In FY 85 the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault (hereafter called Council) funded twenty-three community based programs to provide shelter, crisis intervention, support, advocacy and prevention/education services for victims, their families and communities. It is these programs that keep victims safe, provide emotional support during times of extreme trauma after a rape or beating, and help them get their lives together when it seems they have no place to turn. These programs have taught batterers mechanisms to stop their violence and to adopt alternative behaviors. They have also coordinated with school systems to teach children about their right to say no to an adult who is abusing them and how they can report abuse and get assistance. These programs train police officers, advocate

MAJOR COUNCIL INITIATIVES IN 1984

The Council conducted numerous activities throughout 1984 as mandated by AS 18.66.010-18.66.900. Following is a synopsis of Council initiatives:

1. Planning of services for victims of domestic violence or sexual assault, their families and perpetrators of domestic violence and sexual assault.

   The Council has developed a draft five-year plan to project and best meet the needs for domestic violence and sexual assault services in the state. The draft plan includes the following sections: Administrative and Legislative Responsibilities; Coordination; Prevention; Intervention; Treatment and Rehabilitation Services. The Council is cognizant that implementation of the plan must be accomplished with limited resources but is dedicated to finding the means by which to do so.

2. Public Meetings and Hearings.

   The Council held 6 meetings in 1984. Council meetings are advertised and open to the public.

   In January the Council co-sponsored with State Senator Jalmar Kerttula and the Alaska Network on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault a special teleconference between Alaska and the U.S. Attorney General's Task Force on Family Violence. The U.S. Family Violence Task Force held hearings in six major cities in order to learn about family violence and recommend solutions. The Alaskan teleconference was the only one of its kind in the country. Senator Kerttula opened the teleconference and thirty-three people testified, including U.S. Senator Ted Stevens from Washington. One hundred and one people listened from sites throughout Alaska and in Washington, D.C.

   The Council held a statewide teleconference in November to discuss coordination issues. Eleven people testified from ten sites throughout Alaska. The teleconference participants identified the following needs:

   * Cross-training between such service providers as alcohol and mental health programs, Division of Family and Youth Services and domestic violence and sexual assault programs
   * Trooper and local police training in domestic violence
   * Fund printing of the Council's child sexual assault curriculum
   * Inform programs of the Division of Family and Youth Services' philosophy of treatment for children who have been sexually abused
   * Services to violence prone youth
   * Administrative members of the Council to work for better cooperation within their departments and to better coordinate services for mutual clients
   * Mental health crisis service in Kenai/Soldotna

Reporting violence to authorities carries its own risks. All too often police, prosecutors or judges minimize or ignore the problem and the victim is left alone to face an attacker who may respond with anger at being reported".

In FY 85 the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault (hereafter called Council) funded twenty-three community based programs to provide shelter, crisis intervention, support, advocacy and prevention/education services for victims, their families and communities. It is these programs that keep victims safe, provide emotional support during times of extreme trauma after a rape or beating, and help them get their lives together when it seems they have no place to turn. These programs have taught batterers mechanisms to stop their violence and to adopt alternative behaviors. They have also coordinated with school systems to teach children about their right to say no to an adult who is abusing them and how they can report abuse and get assistance. These programs train police officers, advocate for victims and coordinate with district attorneys, mental health centers, alcohol programs and social workers to better serve victims and their families. It is these programs that have helped Alaskans face the tragic reality of domestic violence and sexual assault.

The Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault serves as a funding and coordinating agency for domestic violence and sexual assault services. This report outlines the accomplishments of the Council from January 1984 to December 1984, describes Council funded programs and identifies issues of concern and solutions.

MAJOR COUNCIL INITIATIVES IN 1984

The Council conducted numerous activities throughout 1984 as mandated by AS 18.66.010-18.66.900. Following is a synopsis of Council initiatives:

1. Planning of services for victims of domestic violence or sexual assault, their families and perpetrators of domestic violence and sexual assault.

   The Council has developed a draft five-year plan to project and best meet the needs for domestic violence and sexual assault services in the state. The draft plan includes the following sections: Administrative and Legislative Responsibilities; Coordination; Prevention; Intervention; Treatment and Rehabilitation Services. The Council is cognizant that implementation of the plan must be accomplished with limited resources but is dedicated to finding the means by which to do so.

2. Public Meetings and Hearings.

   The Council held 6 meetings in 1984. Council meetings are advertised and open to the public.

   In January the Council co-sponsored with State Senator Jalmar Kerttula and the Alaska Network on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault a special teleconference between Alaska and the U.S. Attorney General's Task Force on Family Violence. The U.S. Family Violence Task Force held hearings in six major cities in order to learn about family violence and recommend solutions. The Alaskan teleconference was the only one of its kind in the country. Senator Kerttula opened the teleconference and thirty-three people testified, including U.S. Senator Ted Stevens from Washington. One hundred and one people listened from sites throughout Alaska and in Washington, D.C.

   The Council held a statewide teleconference in November to discuss coordination issues. Eleven people testified from ten sites throughout Alaska. The teleconference participants identified the following needs:

   * Cross-training between such service providers as alcohol and mental health programs, Division of Family and Youth Services and domestic violence and sexual assault programs
   * Trooper and local police training in domestic violence
   * Fund printing of the Council's child sexual assault curriculum
   * Inform programs of the Division of Family and Youth Services' philosophy of treatment for children who have been sexually abused
   * Services to violence prone youth
   * Administrative members of the Council to work for better cooperation within their departments and to better coordinate services for mutual clients
   * Mental health crisis service in Kenai/Soldotna

* Legal options for victims on the Kenai Peninsula.

Positive coordination models in Juneau (the Youth Network), Valdez, Nome and Homer were also discussed.

3. Staffing and Budget.

The Council has maintained a full time Executive Director, Program Coordinator and Secretary throughout 1984 and added one half time Data Entry Clerk in July, 1984.

In FY84, the Council expended the following:

Personnel for the Council Office	$ 164,500
Travel to fund program evaluations, and Council Meetings (seven Council members and staff)	19,200
Contractual Services to fund basic telephone, printing, word processing and copying, etc.	28,600
Supplies and Materials to purchase Council office supplies and films and domestic violence and sexual assault pamphlets for distribution	2,800
Grants to community based programs	$3,917,300

4. Capital Grants.

In 1984, the Council reassumed administration of the state contract for $1,100,000 to build a new shelter in Juneau. The money had been originally appropriated through the Council in 1981 and transferred to the Department of Community and Regional Affairs to administer. The Council reassumed administration of the grant because it felt that capital construction was tied closely to program operations, and it was more accountable to have capital and operating grants administered by the same agency. In FY85, the Legislature appropriated an additional $200,000 for the shelter. One hundred thousand passed through the Council and $100,000 through the City and Borough of Juneau. Completion of the Juneau shelter is projected for March, 1985.

In FY85, the Council received and administered three other capital projects. Abused Women's Aid In Crisis, Anchorage received $82,000 for equipment and building security features. Women In Crisis-Counseling and Assistance, Fairbanks received $60,000 to retrofit the shelter and $205,000 for a facility addition.

5. Develop educational materials on the cause, prevention and treatment of domestic violence and sexual assault.

The Council developed a sexual assault curriculum for K-6 and 7-12 in 1983. The curriculum consists of a manual "Preventing Sexual Abuse of Children" and two video tapes "Aware not Afraid" and "It's OK to Say No". Because of lack of funds, the manual and tapes have been printed in limited quantity. Beginning in January 1984, manuals were distributed to each school system, Council funded programs and to any person in Alaska requesting copies. Copies of the tapes were made by the Department of Public Safety Media Center or the State Film Library.

The Council made its film library available, upon request, to any agency in Alaska and distributed pamphlets and other information.

6. Data System.

The Council developed and implemented a statewide data collection system for its funded programs in July 1982. See Program Data on page 20.

The Council has taken steps to accurately explain and use the information provided by its data. The instructions for collecting data have been revised to alleviate inconsistencies. The half-time Data Processing Clerk reviews and corrects forms and compiles data statewide. The Council has explored computer and software systems available. When the appropriate equipment and software is operational, the Council office will be able to compile data from forms filled out by programs.

7. Regulations.

In September 1984, Program Standards Regulations became effective. Council funded programs have two years to comply with these program standards.

Already in place, since 1983, were Grant Regulations which describe the required application and review process and grant management requirements.

8. Evaluations and Audits.

The Council staff monitored all funded programs through written quarterly fiscal and narrative reports. On-site comprehensive program evaluations were conducted for 18 programs in 1984.

Evaluations of programs funded by the Council were conducted by the Program Coordinator or the Executive Director and averaged 2 1/2 days per program. Each evaluation included interviews with program staff, relevant community agencies, program volunteers, clients and the governing board. The program's policy and procedures manuals, client files, and other materials pertinent to compliance with State regulations and grant award conditions were reviewed. As a result of each on-site visit, a report outlining findings and making recommendations for changes was written. The general topics in each report included community relations, management and administration, staffing, facility and services.

9. Coordination.

The Council placed a high priority on coordination with other agencies. The Council has four state members representing the Departments of Law, Education, Public Safety and Health and Social Services. The makeup of the Council encourages coordination through discussions at Council meetings and facilitation of communication with these departments.

In September, the Council and the Department of Corrections signed a Reimbursable Services' Agreement for the Council to fund anger control programs in correctional institutions. The Council funded three programs: Men, Inc. to provide services at the Juneau Correctional Center; Bering Sea Women's Group to provide services at the Nome Correctional Center; and Women In Crisis - Counseling Assistance to provide services in the Fairbanks Correctional Center. The programs in the prisons are targeted toward batterers and/or victims of domestic violence and sexual assault. These programs provide skills and counseling to assist in stopping violent behavior. An evaluation will be conducted to determine the efficacy of prison services.

In September of 1984, the Governor signed a statewide child sexual abuse agreement to coordinate investigations among troopers, Division of Family and Youth Services and the Department of Law. The Council played a major role in initiating and writing the agreement and will provide technical assistance, as requested, to communities in implementing a coordinated approach in working with child sexual abuse victims.

The Council and its staff also participated in the following highlighted coordination activities:

* Provided information to District Attorneys and troopers about child sexual assault curricula.

* Met with staff from the Department of Law and the Network on Domestic Violence & Sexual Assault to discuss issues and facilitate coordination.

* Printed the Council's Child Sexual Assault Curriculum and provided sexual assault training for program staff through a Reimbursable Services Agreement from the Division of Public Health, Department of Health and Social Services.

* Worked with the Network on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault (Network) on program planning, coordination and legislation. Council representatives attended Network meetings and a Network report is part of every Council meeting.

* Met with Division of Family and Youth Services and Department of Community and Regional Affairs staff to coordinate co-funding of programs.

* Requested all appropriate departments to send the Council a description of services provided to victims and perpetrators of domestic violence and sexual assault and developed a synopsis of services.

* Testified at the U.S. Attorney General's Family Violence Task Force hearings.

* Worked with the Department of Education to coordinate distribution of child sexual assault curricula.

* Active in the Governor's Human Services Mini Cabinet and Agency Steering Committee on grants to standardize grant applications to non-profit corporations.

* Met with Emergency Medical Regional Supervisors and discussed development of domestic violence and sexual assault training and guidelines for Emergency Medical Technicians.

* Co-sponsored and provided fiscal and planning support for the First Annual Institute on Family Violence coordinated by the University of Alaska, Center for Alcohol and Addiction Studies.

10. Provide technical assistance to community groups.

The Council coordinated training and assistance to interested communities without funded domestic violence and sexual assault programs: Naknek, Hooper Bay, Seward, Wrangell and Whittier.

11. Fund Programs.

In November 1984, the Council adopted an improved grant review process and revised Council criteria and priorities for funding for FY86.

COUNCIL FUNDED PROGRAMS

The Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault funded twenty-three programs beginning in July, 1984 for a total of $4,310,800. This is an increase of four programs over FY84, when $3,926,200 was available for grants.

Since the funds available did not meet the needs for all program requests in Alaska, the Council developed and used the following priorities to make FY 85 funding decisions:

1. Programs which do not have minimum funding levels to operate safely and legally.

2. Programs which address the needs of child victims or children of victims.

3. Existing programs will have priority over new programs.

4. Programs in regional centers which provide prevention and education services to a large geographic area.

5. Areas of extreme or special need (e.g. sudden influx of workers into a small community, rapid increase in violent crime, withdrawal of other resources, etc.).

6. Programs which have been providing shelter through local or other state funds, but which are without operating funds.

7. Programs providing services to male batterers and/or sexual offenders.

Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault programs funded by the Council provide many services to victims of domestic violence, their families, batterers and the communities, in general. Shelters and safe homes provide safety for victims in life threatening situations. Crisis lines and crisis counseling assist victims in dealing with the immediate trauma caused by violence. However, these safety and crisis services do not sufficiently address the problems of domestic violence and sexual assault experienced by victims, their children, their families and the communities. Victims of domestic violence and sexual assault also need support when they go to the hospital or when they interact with the criminal justice system. These experiences are often overwhelming, particularly for people who have recently undergone a major trauma. Many victims do know about available resources to assist them in reshaping their lives. They need information about, referrals to and often advocacy in getting financial and other support. They also need ongoing emotional support to allow them to gain self-esteem and strength.

Providing safety and crisis services and assisting and supporting victims is crucial, but it is not enough to stop the cycle of violence. Children's programs are needed, so children can learn that aggression is not an appropriate pattern of behavior. Programs for batterers are needed or the ongoing violence will increase in severity and frequency. Even if the victim leaves a domestic violence relationship, the offender will carry the pattern of violence to the next relationship unless new behaviors are learned.

Victims of child sexual assault and non-offending family members need intervention to help them with the crisis when abuse has been disclosed. They also need ongoing support during an investigation or trial as well as long term treatment to reduce the trauma of abuse.

Communities as a whole must be educated to realize that domestic violence and sexual assault are totally unacceptable. People in all situations should understand the underlying causes of domestic violence and sexual assault and work toward eradicating all behaviors that contribute to these problems. Helping agencies and law enforcement entities need to be informed of the dynamics and causes of domestic violence and sexual assault and be informed of appropriate techniques for intervention and prevention.

Domestic violence and sexual assault programs in Alaska provide these services to victims, their families and communities. Following is a list of programs funded by the Council in FY 85 along with a comparison of FY 84 funding and a synopsis of each program's services.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE/SEXUAL ASSAULT

ISSUES OF CONCERN

Planning

The Council has begun a statewide planning process to identify areas of need and to develop specific objectives for the operation of the Council, its staff and funded programs. The initial product will primarily be an internal document to be used to effectively allocate the Council's limited administrative resources.

One of the objectives will be to develop a comprehensive statewide plan for services. This plan will establish minimum levels of domestic violence and sexual assault services by community and region; identify where services are needed; encourage development of service providers in areas of need; and obtain and provide funds for services. When the plan is completed, the Council will work with local communities to develop needed resources.

Rural Services

Many people who live in rural areas do not have access to domestic violence and sexual assault programs. There are also fewer other resources to serve victims of domestic violence and sexual assault in rural areas than in larger communities. Police protection may be limited or nonexistent, and there are few trained health and social service professionals. The plight of victims of rape in a rural area is increased because of the difficulty of conducting investigations. Battered women do not always have the refuge of family and friends because they fear for other people's safety or they feel shame in letting other people know of their problems. Children who are victims of sexual assault do not have the necessary resources to help them deal with the trauma of the assault, legal process and after effects.

A rural delivery model should be established. Council funded programs already provide outreach services to some communities, and the Council has established a rural shelter pilot project in Emmonak. However, the best and most cost effective methods of providing services and most appropriate agencies to deliver services have yet to be determined.

Child Sexual Assault

A Child Sexual Abuse Agreement was signed by Governor Sheffield, the Attorney General, and the Commissioners of Public Safety, Health and Social Services and Corrections in September, 1984. The purpose of this agreement is to "establish mutual cooperation between the signatories in their response to reported instances of child sexual abuse."

The primary goals of the agreement are:

1. to provide protection, treatment and continuing support for child sexual abuse victims and their family members;
2. to ensure that child sexual abuse cases are immediately and properly investigated and, if appropriate, effectively prosecuted;
3. to increase reporting of child sexual abuse cases; and
4. to provide treatment, when appropriate, to offenders.

The Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault is strongly committed to a team approach in cases of child sexual assault. If professionals, including social workers and law enforcement officers, do not coordinate efforts, it is possible that a victim would be interviewed many times by different people. Also, without specific interviewing skills that are needed with children, interviewers may be uncomfortable or make the child uncomfortable. A beneficial side effect of a coordinated team approach is that it maximizes the use of limited professional resources. Although some training in child sexual assault has been conducted in the state, the focus of the training is rarely across disciplines, and it is often not targeted to all appropriate community people. Therefore, training is needed that brings diverse groups together and focuses on a team approach.

Council funded programs have provided technical assistance to school districts in providing sexual assault information to students and made presentations to students in classrooms. A few school systems offer child sexual assault information on a routine basis in the schools (Anchorage, Juneau, Sitka, Matanuska-Susitna Borough). A concerted effort must be made to implement child sexual assault curricula statewide and train teachers how to present information about child sexual assault, identify abused children, talk to a child who has disclosed abuse and how and to whom an abused child should be referred.

Criminal Justice System

Coordination between domestic violence and sexual assault programs and the Criminal Justice System needs to be ongoing. Police officers routinely work with domestic violence programs, and that effort should be maintained. Examples of additional criminal justice issues that need to be explored are:

* coordination between the courts and domestic violence/sexual assault agencies;
* arresting perpetrators even when victims are not willing to follow through with charges; and
* incarceration and treatment of sex offenders
* training police officers how to handle domestic violence and sexual assault situations.

Prevention/Education

Although many people recognize that domestic violence and sexual assault are major problems in Alaska, there continues to be a great deal of denial of these problems, particularly in communities that do not have formal domestic violence/sexual assault programs. People and communities must be made aware of the problems and accept responsibility in addressing them.

It is also important to understand the underlying causes of domestic violence and sexual assault. For a long time, we have denied the extent of the problem or the seriousness of the consequences. Attitudes that encourage or work against solving the problem must be changed. People should understand that rape is not a crime of passion but of violence, and a man's home is not just his castle; it should be a safe haven for all members of the family. Children should be taught that it is their right to be safe and that violence is not an acceptable expression of anger.

The increased understanding of the extent of domestic violence and sexual assault problems, their consequences and the changes that need to be made in systems throughout Alaska will take a great deal of resources. These activities must be planned for and recognized as important by the State.

U.S. Task Force on Family Violence

In September of 1984, the U.S. Attorney General's Task Force on Family Violence released a report of findings and recommendations based upon testimony in six cities by nearly 300 participants, written testimony submitted and staff research. The report contains discussions and excellent recommendations for law enforcement agencies, prosecutors and judges in the areas of victim assistance, prevention and awareness education and training, research, data collection and legislation.

Alaskan legislation and systems that respond to family violence are some of the best in the nation; however, the report contains excellent recommendations for things that still need to be accomplished in Alaska. Recommendations from the Task Force are included in this report as Appendix B.

Pay Equity

The Council is concerned about the need for pay equity in the programs that it funds. These programs pay lower wages than other agencies requiring similar expertise and having comparable duties. The majority of front line staff people in Council funded programs are paid $17,000 - 21,000/year. Workers who receive these wages are required to work with rape and domestic violence victims in crises. This job, which requires skills in crisis intervention and counseling, is highly stressful and certainly deserves a higher wage. Recruitment and retainment of staff, which affects services to clients, is very difficult because of low wages. Both private and public sector employees can offer higher salaries, so personnel are lost to agencies that pay adequate salaries. Wages must be made comparable to the worth of services. Right now, in Alaska, cooks, secretaries and clerical workers have higher average salaries than these crisis workers. A comparison of workers in domestic violence programs with other social service workers, shows that Council funded programs pay on an average $4,600 - 7,300 less per position than comparable agencies.

Legislative Issues

The Council has identified the following issues as important for future legislative exploration:

To re-establish the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault. The Council is due to sunset June 30, 1985 unless re-authorization is legislated.

To allow hearsay evidence in grand jury proceedings for child sexual assault. Disclosing abuse can be very painful, particularly in a court room setting. Child victims should be protected as much as possible during the criminal justice process.

To change the definition of domestic violence in the statutes to include parents and grandparents, not living with the perpetrators, so they are eligible to receive a temporary restraining order. Incidences of violence have occurred between parents and adult children in which parents are afraid for their safety yet, they have little legal protection if they do not live with the perpetrator.

To eliminate the spousal defense in sexual assault cases. Marital status should not determine whether or not a crime has been committed.

To designate that municipal police officers serve domestic violence petitions in areas of their jurisdiction. Currently, State Troopers serve all petitions unless designated by a court. Domestic violence petitions should be served as soon as possible by the police officers most accessible to a victim.

To encourage and train policy makers and professionals in a coordinated team approach to child sexual assault investigations. A team approach would limit the number of interviews a child must undergo, maximize resources and sensitize professionals to best work with victims.

To reinstate the Children's Code Task Force to investigate, revise and reform laws pertaining to children. Runaways and children guilty of crimes are often victims of domestic violence or sexual assault. Day care and pre-school provider laws and child sexual assault statutes need to be reviewed based upon the increased knowledge about the child sexual assault problem in Alaska.

To develop a legislative mandate to provide services and protection to child sexual assault victims of non-family members. Recent studies show that child sexual abuse is most often committed by a non-immediate family member or someone known to the child. Yet, there are no legislative provisions to support and treat children whose abuse was not a result of a family situation.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AND SEXUAL ASSAULT

LEGISLATION IN ALASKA

The State of Alaska has taken a leadership role in reducing the trauma and pain associated with domestic violence and sexual assault. The Legislature and Executive Branch have enacted innovative legislation and policies to address these problems.

Following is a summary of many of the laws enacted in Alaska that are related to domestic violence and sexual assault.

AS 18.66.010-18.66.900. DOMESTIC VIOLENCE/SEXUAL ASSAULT PROGRAMS was enacted to establish the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault in the Department of Public Safety to provide for planning and coordination of services to victims of domestic violence or sexual assault, their families and the perpetrators and to provide for crisis intervention and prevention programs. The Council and its enabling legislation were established through the efforts of many dedicated parties, particularly the Alaska Network on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault, which is a professional organization of domestic violence/sexual assault program directors.

The Council's mandates are to:

- develop, implement, maintain and monitor domestic violence, sexual assault and crisis intervention and prevention programs including educational films and school curricula on the cause, prevention and treatment of domestic violence and sexual assault;

- coordinate domestic violence/sexual assault services among the Departments of Law, Education, Public Safety, Health and Social Services and other state and community agencies and provide technical assistance, as requested;

- develop and implement a standardized data collection system;

- conduct public hearings and studies on issues relating to violence and crisis intervention and prevention;

- receive and dispense state and federal money to qualified local community entities for domestic violence, sexual assault and crisis intervention and prevention programs;

- oversee and audit domestic violence, sexual assault and crisis intervention and prevention programs; and

- adopt regulations to carry out the purposes of the law.

AS 11.41.410. SEXUAL ASSAULT IN THE FIRST DEGREE. Sexual assault in the first degree is the most serious and can be committed in one of two ways: 1) by engaging in sexual penetration without consent of the victim (commonly referred to as rape); 2) by attempting to engage in sexual penetration without consent of the victim and causing serious physical injury. First degree sexual assault is an unclassified felony.

AS 11.41.420. SEXUAL ASSAULT IN THE SECOND DEGREE is: 1) sexual contact without consent; or 2) sexual penetration by the defendant with a person he knows is mentally incompetent or is incapacitated. Second degree sexual assault is a class B felony.

AS 11.41.434-440. SEXUAL ABUSE OF A MINOR. There are four degrees of sexual abuse of a minor depending on the type of conduct prohibited. Sexual abuse of a minor in the first degree can be committed in one of two ways: 1) when a person who is 16 years of age or older engages in sexual penetration with someone under 13 years of age or induces or causes a person under 13 to engage in sexual penetration with another person; 2) when a person 18 years of age or older engages in sexual penetration with a son or daughter who is under 18 years of age or someone under 18 years of age who is entrusted to the offender's care by authority of law. Sexual abuse of a minor in the first degree is an unclassified felony.

Sexual abuse of a minor in the second degree is: 1) when a person who is 16 or older engages in sexual penetration with a person who is 13, 14, or 15 and who is at least 3 years younger than the offender; 2) sexual contact between a person 16 or older and a person under 13 or a person 16 or older who induces a person under 13 years of age to engage in sexual contact with another; 3) sexual contact between a person 18 or older and a son or daughter under 18 or a person who has been entrusted to the offender's care by authority of law; or 4) a person 16 or older aids, induces or causes a person under 16 to engage in prohibited sexual acts in sex exploitation media. Sexual abuse of a minor in the second degree is a Class B felony.

Sexual abuse of a minor in the third degree is: sexual contact between an offender 16 or older and a victim 13, 14, or 15 who is at least 3 years younger than the offender.

Sexual abuse of a minor in the fourth degree is: sexual penetration or contact between an offender under 16 and victim under 13 who is at least 3 years younger than the offender.

AS 11.41.445. GENERAL PROVISIONS. In a prosecution for a sexual offense it is an affirmative defense that, at the time of the alleged offense, the victim was the legal spouse of the defendant, unless: 1) the spouses were living apart; 2) the defendant caused physical injury to the victim.

AS 11.41.450. INCEST. A person commits incest if, being 18 or older, the person engages in sexual penetration with a person who is related.

AS 11.41.455. UNLAWFUL EXPLOITATION OF A MINOR. Exploitation includes using a child under 18 as the subject of pornographic material.

AS 11.41.460. INDECENT EXPOSURE. If the offender intentionally exposes the offender's genitals to another with reckless disregard for the effect that act has on others, it is considered indecent exposure.

AS 12.10.020(c). LIMITATIONS FOR PROSECUTION. Even if the general time limitation has expired, a prosecution under AS 11.41.410 - 11.41.460 for an offense committed against a person under 16 may be commenced one year after the crime is reported to a peace officer or the person reaches the age of 16, whichever occurs first.

AS 12.25.030. GROUNDS FOR ARREST BY PRIVATE PERSON OR PEACE OFFICER WITHOUT WARRANT. A peace officer without a warrant may arrest a person when the officer has reasonable cause for believing that the person has committed a crime under AS 11.41, 11.46.330, 11.61.120 against a member of the person's household or someone who previously lived in a spousal relationship with the person who committed the crime.

AS 12.30.040. RELEASE AFTER CONVICTION. A person may not be released on bail after conviction of an unclassified or Class A felony, pending an appeal or sentencing.

AS 12.45.045. EVIDENCE OF PAST SEXUAL CONDUCT. In trials of rape and assault with intent to commit rape, evidence of the alleged victims' previous sexual conduct is not admissible nor shall reference be made to it except when a defendant applies for an order of the court. The court shall conduct a hearing in camera to determine if value of evidence outweighs undue prejudice, confusion of the issues or invasion of the victim's privacy.

AS 12.45.047. VIDEOTAPING OF TESTIMONY BY YOUNG VICTIMS OF SEXUAL OFFENSES. Videotaping of testimony by victims 16 years or younger shall be permitted, upon application, by the prosecuting attorney and notice to defendant. The trial judge shall preside and the defendant shall be offered all rights of trial. The trial judge shall determine who else may be present besides the prosecuting attorney, the defendant and the defendant's attorney.

AS 12.45.048. EXCLUSION OF PUBLIC FROM TRIAL DURING TESTIMONY OF YOUNG VICTIM OF SEXUAL OFFENSE. Upon application by the State, the court shall grant an order to exclude the public from the testimony of an alleged victim of child sexual assault who is 16 years of age or younger.

AS 12.61.010-020 and AS 33.15 and 33.30. VICTIMS' RIGHTS. Delineates victims' rights regarding trials, pre-sentence reports, sentencing, cooperation with law enforcement, compensation, medical assistance, notification and comment upon prisoner parole, etc.

AS 12.62.035. ACCESS TO CERTAIN CRIME INFORMATION. An employer may request from the Department of Public Safety records of all convictions of contributing to the delinquency of a minor and any sex crimes of a person who holds or applies for a position in which the person has or would have supervisory or disciplinary power over a minor.

AS 18.65.510. DOMESTIC VIOLENCE TRAINING. Requires that each established police training program in the state shall provide training that acquaints police officers with: 1) laws and rules of criminal procedure relating to domestic violence; 2) techniques for handling domestic violence incidences to promote the safety of the victim and officer and reduce the likelihood of recurrence; 3) organizations in the state that offer aid or shelter to victims; 4) injunctive relief orders; and 5) the notification to be given to victims under AS 18.65.520.

AS 18.65.520. NOTIFICATION TO VICTIMS. Requires police officers responding to a domestic violence offense to inform the victim of services and the victim's rights as listed in this statute. Services include shelter programs, temporary restraining orders, victim/witness programs.

AS 18.67.010. VIOLENT CRIMES COMPENSATION BOARD. Permits payment of compensation to victims of crime including personal injury or death. Among other requirements to receive compensation, the applicant must have cooperated with law enforcement to further prosecution. Sections disallowing compensation if the victim was a relative of the offender or living or maintaining a sexual relationship with the offender were repealed in 1983.

AS 18.68.010-030. SEXUAL ASSAULT EXAMINATION KITS, INVESTIGATION PROTOCOLS AND TRAINING. The Departments of Public Safety and Law shall develop and distribute uniform sexual assault examination kits; develop a manual of protocols governing the distribution and use of the examination kits and develop and implement training in the use of protocols and kits.

AS 22.15.100. FUNCTIONS AND POWERS OF DISTRICT JUDGE AND MAGISTRATE. Each district judge and magistrate has the power to issue a temporary restraining order (TRO) for emergency injunctive relief in cases involving domestic violence as provided in AS 25.35.020.

AS 25.20.090. FACTORS FOR CONSIDERATION IN AWARDING SHARED CHILD CUSTODY. A history of violence between parents is a factor to be used in determining whether to award shared custody of a child.

AS 25.35.010. INJUNCTIVE RELIEF IN CASES INVOLVING DOMESTIC VIOLENCE. A person who is subjected to domestic violence may petition for injunctive relief to restrain the infliction of further domestic violence. This order may include additional provisions that direct the respondent to leave the petitioner's home, pay child support, pay medical expenses of the respondent and engage in personal or family counseling. An order remains in effect for ninety days but may be extended by petition to the court.

AS 25.35.020. EMERGENCY INJUNCTIVE RELIEF. If it appears that there is a substantial likelihood of immediate danger from the respondent, an emergency injunctive relief order may be filed. An emergency injunctive relief order may be filed without notice to the respondent. The order is in effect not to exceed 20 days unless extended by the court for good cause.

AS 25.35.040. SERVICE OF PROCESS. Injunctive relief orders shall be promptly served and executed. If a state trooper is not available, the court may designate any other peace officer to serve and execute the process.

AS 25.35.050. NOTIFICATION TO LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES. The court shall send a copy of the injunctive relief order to the appropriate law enforcement agency. Police officers shall use every reasonable means to enforce an order issued.

APPENDIX A

PROGRAM DATA

The data presented in this section is from July 1, 1983 to June 30, 1984. Programs that receive Council funds were required to submit quarterly statistical compilations based on individual client and service forms. Programs use three forms to record data: Client Intake form to describe domestic violence, sexual assault and crisis intervention clients; Services Provided form to record all services provided for or given to clients and Resource Contact/Services form to record services to persons not clients of the programs.

Some definitions may help you in interpreting the charts:

Advocacy - a program working on behalf of or with a client; directed support to another agency.

Client - a person who receives direct services from a program and is given a client identification number.

Client Adult - a person 18 years of age and over admitted into the program for treatment and/or intervention as a result of a domestic violence and/or sexual assault incident directed towards another person who is a relative, neighbor, friend, etc.

Client Services Provided - the numbers signify the number of contacts with clients for a certain service. Each time a service is provided of a specific type, it is recorded.

Continuing Client - a client who may have been to the program at any time in the past. The numbers of continuing clients may include a person counted more than once.

Counseling - providing information and personal support which may include assistance in clarifying options and determining future goals.

Minor Child - a person 17 or under who is admitted into the program for treatment and/or intervention as a result of a domestic violence and/or sexual assault incident directed towards another person who is a relative, neighbor, friend, etc.

New Client - a client who has not been to a specific program in the past.

Perpetrator - a person admitted into the program for treatment and/or intervention due to a domestic violence and/or sexual assault incident the individual directed towards another person.

Resource Contact Services - the numbers represent different services provided to people who have not been given client identification numbers.

Victim - person admitted into the program for treatment and/or intervention as a result of a domestic violence and/or sexual assault incident directed towards that individual.

The following charts describe programs' clients, the services provided to clients and services provided to individuals who are not formal clients of the programs.

The following tables reflect the kinds of services offered by Council funded programs in FY 84 and the number of each kind of service by program. This information was taken from the Client Service forms and Resource Contact forms.

Client Services are to individuals who received formal intakes and were assigned client identification numbers.

Resource Contact Services are to individuals and/or agencies who were not given domestic violence/sexual assault identification numbers because they did not receive ongoing specialized services.

APPENDIX B

Recommendations from the U.S. Attorney General's Task Force on Family Violence

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR THE JUSTICE SYSTEM

1. Family violence should be recognized and responded to as a criminal activity.
2. Law enforcement officials, prosecutors, and judges should develop a coordinated response to family violence.
3. Communities should develop a multi-disciplinary team to investigate, process and treat all incidents of family violence, especially cases of physical and sexual abuse of children.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT

1. All law enforcement agencies should publish operational procedures that establish family violence as a priority response and require officers to file written reports on all incidents. In addition, the operational procedures should require officers to perform a variety of activities to assist the victim.
2. Consistent with state law, the chief executive of every law enforcement agency should establish arrest as the preferred response in cases of family violence.
3. Law enforcement officials should maintain a current file of all protection orders valid in their jurisdiction.
4. Law enforcement officers should respond without delay to calls involving violations of protection orders.
5. Forms for obtaining protections orders should be available at all police stations and sheriffs' offices.
6. When responding to disturbance calls, law enforcement officers should document violations of pre-trial release conditions. The report should verify the facts and circumstances necessary for the prosecutor to request revocation of the release.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR PROSECUTORS

1. Prosecutors should organize special units to process family violence cases and wherever possible should use vertical prosecution.
   * The units should work closely with victim assistance providers.
   * The units should review all law enforcement reports involving incidents of family violence whenever possible.
2. The victim should not be required to sign a formal complaint against the abuser before the prosecutors files charges, unless mandated by state law.
3. Whenever possible, prosecutors should not require family violence victims to testify at the preliminary hearing.
4. Prosecutors should adopt special policies and procedures for child victims. These should include:
   * Presenting hearsay evidence at preliminary hearings so the child is not required to testify in person;

* Presenting, with consent of counsel, the child's trial testimony on videotape;
* Use of anatomically correct dolls and drawings to describe abuse; and
* Limiting continuances to an absolute minimum.

5. If the defendant does not remain in custody and when it is consistent with the needs of the victim, the prosecutor should request the judge to issue an order restricting the defendant's access to the victim as a condition of setting bail or releasing the assailant on his own recognizance. If the condition is violated, swift and sure enforcement of the order and revocation of release are required.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR JUDGES

1. A wide range of dispositional alternatives should be considered in cases of family violence. In all cases, prior to sentencing, judges should carefully review and consider the consequences of the crime on the victims.
2. Judges should treat incest and molestation as serious criminal offenses.
3. Judges should adopt special court rules and procedures for child victims. These should include:
   * The use of hearsay evidence at preliminary hearings;
   * Appointment of a special volunteer advocate for children, when appropriate;
   * A presumption that children are competent to testify;
   * Allowing the child's trial testimony to be presented on videotape with agreement of counsel;
   * Flexible courtroom settings and procedures; and
   * Carefully managed press coverage.
4. Protection orders should be available on an emergency basis in family violence cases.
5. Judges should establish guidelines for expeditious handling of family violence cases.
6. Judges should admit hearsay statements of family violence victims at the preliminary hearing.
7. Expert witnesses should be allowed to testify in family violence cases to familiarize the judge and jury with the dynamics of violence within the family.
8. In granting bail or releasing the assailant on his own recognizance, the judge should impose conditions that restrict the defendant's access to the victims and strictly enforce the order.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR VICTIM ASSISTANCE

1. Communities should develop and provide a variety of services for family members that include:
   * Family life centers
   * Batterers programs
   * Drop-in crisis centers
   * Crisis nurseries
   * Respite day-care centers
   * In-home services
   * Shelters
   * Safe home networks

2. Shelter policies and practices should accommodate the diverse backgrounds of the residents.

3. The Department of Housing and Urban Development should adopt policies that:

* Place victims of family violence on priority listings for public housing and section 8 certificates;
* Consider only those assets to which the victims has access; and
* Require local Public Housing Authorities (PHAs) to permit transfers of residents who are victims of family violence, when safety is an issue.

4. State-level victims compensations programs should include, where possible, family violence victims as beneficiaries.

5. Because of the criminal nature of family violence, the federal government should establish a National Family Violence Resource Center within the Department of Justice.

6. States should establish Coordinating Councils to assess the needs of family violence victims and to coordinate the use of federal and state funds for family violence victims assistance programs.

7. Local governments and community service groups should assess the needs of family violence victims and cooperate in the development of victims assistance services.

8. Volunteers and the private sector should play a key role in meeting the needs of the victims of family violence.

9. The federal government should provide financial incentives and encouragement to the states to train criminal justice personnel, to conduct a family violence prevention and awareness campaign, and to maintain temporary residential facilities for victims of family violence.

10. States should use creative funding approaches for financing programs that support victims of family violence.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR PREVENTION AND AWARENESS

1. The federal government should, in conjunction with the private sector, develop a national family violence prevention and awareness campaign.

2. As victims assistance resources become available, states, in conjunctions with private organizations, should sponsor 24-hour toll-free hotlines for victims of family violence and publicize it as part of a public information campaign.

3. Hospitals, health facilities, and pediatricians should offer instruction and information about family violence and should work with self-help groups to include prevention information.

4. Schools should ensure that all teachers are familiar with family violence prevention and that a special curriculum is part of every child's school experience.

5. The media should publicize local family violence treatment and service programs and provide substantive stories, articles, and programming, educating the public about the problem.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR EDUCATION AND TRAINING

1. The curriculum of all relevant professional schools should include courses that offer instruction on the causes, consequences, and prevention of family violence and the appropriate methods of intervention. Special curricula should be developed especially for doctors, nurses, lawyers, social workers, teachers, ministers and psychologists.

2. Federal, state, and local government agencies should train relevant personnel to diagnose and appropriately intervene in family violence cases.

3. National professional organizations and community service groups should educate their members on the nature and extent of family violence, appropriate methods of intervention, and the importance of public awareness and prevention efforts.

4. Schools and hospitals should train their staffs to recognize the early warning signs of family violence.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR DATA COLLECTION AND REPORTING

1. The Uniform Crime Reports of the Federal Bureau of Investigation should be revised to collect and publish data that:

* Indicate the age of the victims and the relationship of the victims to the offender for crimes of aggravated assault, simple assault, rape, sex offenses (except prostitution), and offenses against the family and children; and
* Record incidents of family violence crimes, regardless of whether an arrest is made.

2. The National Crime Survey efforts to more accurately measure the extent of family violence in American, especially the physical and sexual abuse of children and abuse of the elderly, should be continued and supported.

3. Federal statues and regulations for alcohol and drug abuse treatment programs should not conflict with state laws that require reporting of all instances of child abuse, neglect, and molestation.

4. Professionals currently required to report child abuse should be required to report elder abuse.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR RESEARCH

1. All federally-funded research on family violence should be coordinated with the Department of Justice.

2. National research efforts should be directed in several areas.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR STATE LEGISLATIVE ACTION

1. States should enact laws to extend the statute of limitations in criminal cases of child sexual assault.

2. States should enact laws to permit law enforcement officers to make warrantless arrests for misdemeanor offenses involving family violence when the officer has probable cause to believe a crime has occurred and the safety of the family is in jeopardy.

3. States should enact legislation making the violation of a protection order issued in a family violence case a criminal offense.

4. States should enact legislations that permits overnight incarceration of persons arrested for incidents of family violence in appropriate cases.

5. States should enact legislation to enable businesses and organizations to have access to sexual assault, child molestation or pornography arrest or conviction records of job applicants whose work will bring them in regular contact with children.

6. States should enact laws to require professionals currently required to report child abuse, to report elder abuse.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR FEDERAL EXECUTIVE AND LEGISLATIVE ACTION

1. Federal regulations should require criminal history backgrounds on all volunteers or employees working for agencies receiving federal funding and providing care, training, supervision, entertainment or otherwise dealing with children.
2. To recognize the importance of the family and the values it sustains and to continue to relieve the financial pressures on the family, the federal income tax deduction for dependents should be increased.
3. Confidentiality statues and regulations for federal alcohol and drug abuse treatment programs should be amended to require compliance with state laws on mandatory reporting of child abuse, neglect and molestation.
4. The federal government should provide financial incentives and encouragement to the states to train criminal justice personnel, to conduct a family violence prevention and awareness campaign, and to maintain temporary residential facilities for victims of family violence.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR THE MILITARY

1. Military officials should be encourage to continue their responsiveness to ending violence and abuse within military families and should continue to work cooperatively with state and local governments in addressing the problem. Specifically, military offices should:
   * Make the issue of family violence a command priority;
   * Coordinate their activities with and make use of local service providers;
   * Provide adequate training to all personnel involved in family violence issues; and
   * Share information and resources regarding family violence cases with state and local officials.

RECOMMENDATION FOR GRANDPARENTS' RIGHTS

1. In the event of family dissolution or dysfunction, grandparents or other members of the extended family should be considered as possible guardians for the children.

RECOMMENDATION ON VIOLENCE IN THE MEDIA

1. The Task Force places major responsibility for reducing and controlling the amount of violence shown on television on the networks, their affiliates, and cable stations.
2. The motion picture industry should reevaluate its rating standards to make the ratings more specific and informative.

RECOMMENDATIONS ON PORNOGRAPHY

1. The Task Force endorses the creation of the National Commission on Pornography.

IN THE SENATE BY THE STATE AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

SENATE BILL NO.

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to political campaign contributions by an individual who is under the age of majority."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 15.13.070 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(i) The contribution of an individual under the age of majority is considered to have been made by a parent or guardian of the individual under the age of majority. This subsection does not apply to an individual under the age of majority whose disabilities have been removed under AS 09.55.590 or who is married and has reached the marriageable age of consent.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

The statutes of Alaska remove certain disabilities which at common law attend the wife during her coverture. Decker v. Kedly, 148 F. 681 (9th Cir. 1906).

The married woman's common-law disability to bring suit was ended by a series of acts referred to as the Married Woman's Acts. The requirement that suit be brought by the husband when the wife was injured in order that redress be available was thereby ended. Schreiner v. Fruit, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1003 (File No. 1949), 519 P.2d 462 (1974).

But the statutes do not mean that the husband is answerable to the wife in damages for failure to supply her with the necessaries of life, or for any other act or failure of duty connected with or arising from the marital relation. Decker v. Kedly, 148 F. 681 (9th Cir. 1906).

Wife has independent right to sue for loss of consortium. — See Schreiner v. Fruit, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1003 (File No. 1949), 519 P.2d 462 (1974).

The basis for recovery is no longer the loss of services, but rather the injury to the conjugal relation. Therefore, the claim for relief for loss of consortium, in both husband and wife, should be given recognition in Alaska. Schreiner v. Fruit, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1003 (File No. 1949), 519 P.2d 462 (1974).

The interest to be protected is personal to the wife, for she suffers a loss of her own when the care, comfort, companionship, and solace of her spouse is denied her. Schreiner v. Fruit, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1003 (File No. 1949), 519 P.2d 462 (1974).

Quoted in Cramer v. Cramer, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 135 (File No. 260), 379 P.2d 95 (1963).

Chapter 20. Parent and Child.

Section
10. Age of majority
20. Arrival at majority upon marriage
30. Duty of parent and child to maintain each other
40. Maintenance and education of minor out of income of the minor's property
45. Legitimacy of children conceived by artificial insemination
50. Legitimation by subsequent marriage, acknowledgment in writing or adjudication
60. Custody of the child
70. Temporary custody of the child
80. Mediation of child custody matter
90. Factors for consideration in awarding shared child custody
100. Denial of shared child custody
110. Modification of child custody or visitation
120. Closure of custody proceedings and records
130. Access to records of the child

43 C.J.S., Infants, § 1-30; 67A C.J.S., Parent and Child, § et seq.

Sec. 25.20.010. Age of majority. A person is considered to have arrived at majority at the age of 18, and thereafter has control of the person's own actions and business and has all the rights and is subject to all the liabilities of citizens of full age, except as otherwise provided by statute. (§ 20-1-1 ACLA 1949; am § 1 ch 37 SLA 1959; am § 5 ch 63 SLA 1977)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Legislation amending several provisions of the Children's Act was part of an omnibus age-law bill which resolved ambiguities in several codes and generally harmonized all Alaska Statutes with the policy of a 19-year (now 18-year) age of majority. Davenport v. McGinnis, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1049 (File No. 1942), 522 P.2d 1140 (1974).

This section does not carry a broad negative implication. RLR v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 706 (File No. 1156), 487 P.2d 27 (1971).

Nor imply that infants are incompetent in all things. — The age of majority statute does not imply a legislative judgment that infants are incompetent in all things; it means only that persons above the statutory age minmum are competent in all things except as otherwise provided. RLR v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 706 (File No. 1156), 487 P.2d 27 (1971); Quick v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1921 (File Nos. 3298, 3462, 3463), 599 P.2d 712 (1979).

Regulation prohibiting persons under 19 years from knowingly consuming alcoholic beverages. — Since an administrative regulation prohibiting any person under the age of 19 years from knowingly consuming alcoholic beverages is authorized by statute [see now AS 04.06.090], the regulation comes within the " except as otherwise provided by statute" exception to this section, which gives the age of majority as 18 years. Michael v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1714 (File No. 3881), 583 P.2d 852 (1978).

Support beyond age of majority. — Superior court's order requiring husband to pay support beyond the ages of minority of his children, if they were enrolled in school, was not erroneous. Hinchey v. Hinchey, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2312 (File No. 3528), 625 P.2d 297 (1981).

Stated in L.A.M. v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1249 (File No. 2221), 547 P.2d 827 (1976).

Collateral references. — Statutory change of age of majority as affecting pre-existing status or rights, 75 ALR3d 228.

Sec. 25.20.020. Arrival at majority upon marriage. A person arrives at the age of majority upon being married according to law, unless the person is under the marriageable age of consent as defined in AS 25.05.171(a), in which case the person reaches majority upon reaching the marriageable age of consent. (§ 20-1-2 ACLA 1949; am § 100 ch 127 SLA 1974)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

(a) A minor who is a resident of this state and is at least 16 years of age, who is living separate and apart from the parents or guardian of the minor, capable of self-support and of managing one's own financial affairs, may petition the superior court to have the disabilities of minority removed for limited or general purposes.

(b) A minor may institute this petition under this section in the name of the minor.

(c) The petition for removal of disabilities of minority must state:

(1) the name, age, and residence address of the petitioner;

(2) the name and address of each living parent;

(3) the name and address of the guardian of the person and the guardian of the estate, if any;

(4) the reasons why removal would be in the best interest of the child; and

(5) the purposes for which removal is sought.

(d) The petitioner must obtain the consent of each living parent or guardian having control of the person or property of the petitioner. If the person who is to consent to the petition is unavailable or the whereabouts of that person are unknown, or if a parent or guardian unreasonably withholds consent, the court, acting in the best interest of petitioner, may waive this requirement of consent as to that parent or guardian.

(e) The court may appoint an attorney or a guardian ad litem to represent the interests of the petitioner at the hearing.

(f) The court may remove the disabilities of minority as requested in the petition if found to be in the best interest of the petitioner, after a hearing. The removal may be for general purposes or the limited purposes specified in the decree.

(g) Except for specific constitutional and statutory age requirements for voting and use of alcoholic beverages, a minor whose disabilities are removed for general purposes has the power and capacity of an adult, including but not limited to the right to self-control, the right to be domiciled where one desires, the right to receive and control one's earnings, to sue or to be sued, and the capacity to contract. SECTIONAL ANALYSIS

Senate State Affairs Penalties Bill

Sections 1,2,& 3

These sections contain the same language that was passed out of committee in CSSB 87 (SA). They were included in this bill to preclude problems if this penalties bill passes and CSSB 87 (SA) doesn't.

Section 4

(a) States that a violation of AS 15.13.110 is subject to a civil penalty and describes the process to appeal an assessed penalty.

(b) Establishes the same civil penalty for delinquent 30 day and 10 day reports:

$50 per day for the first two days delinquent and each day thereafter 1% per day of the total monetary contributions received example: A report which was 8 days late would accumulate a penalty of $100 plus 6% of the total monetary contributions received example: A report which was 6 days late would accumulate a penalty of 15% of the total monetary contributions received (1% the first day, plus 2% the second day, plus 3% for each additional day up to the sixth day).

(c) Establishes a civil penalty for delinquent 7 day reports (due 7 days before an election). It is a cumulative penalty based on a percentage of the total monetary contributions received.

(d) Establishes a civil penalty of $50 for each day that the year end report is late.

(e) Establishes a civil penalty for delinquent 24 hour reports. (Any contribution in excess of $250 which is received within 10 days of an election must be reported to the commission within 24 hours of receipt.) The penalty is a percentage of the unreported contribution.

(f) Establishes a civil penalty for unreported or inaccurate contributions or expenditures on required reports.

IN THE SENATE BY THE STATE AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

SENATE BILL NO.

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to state election campaigns."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 15.13.110(a) is amended to read:

(a) Each candidate and group shall make a full report in accordance with AS 15.13.040 during the period ending three days before the due date of the report and beginning on the last day covered by the most recent previous report, or, if a first report, all contributions received and expenditures made before three days before the due date of the report. The report shall be filed at the following times:

(1) 30 days before the election; however, this report is not required if the deadline for filing a nominating petition or declaration of candidacy is within 30 days of the election;

(2) one week before the election;

(3) 10 [TEN] days after the election; and

(4) 31 days after the end [DECEMBER 31] of each year for expenditures and contributions received which were not reported that year.

* Sec. 2. AS 15.13.110(b) is amended to read:

(b) Each contribution received that [OR EXPENDITURE WHICH] exceeds $250 and that [WHICH] is received [MADE] within 10 days [ONE WEEK] of the election shall be reported to the commission by date, amount, and contributor [OR RECIPIENT] within 24 hours of receipt [OR EXPENDITURE] by the candidate or campaign officer [TREASURER]. Each person making an independent expenditure in the amount of $1,000 or more that is made within 30 days of an election shall report to the commission the date, amount, and purpose of the expenditure within 72 hours of the expenditure and shall identify the name of the person or group that made the expenditure.

* Sec. 3. AS 15.13.120(a) is amended to read:

(a) A person who violates a provision of this chapter is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, is punishable by imprisonment for not more than one year or by a fine of not more than $5,000. A violation includes but is not limited to any of the following acts or omissions:

(1) failing to make a statement or report required to be made under this chapter, or failing to make a statement or report at the time the statement or report is required to be made under this chapter;

(2) making a campaign contribution or expenditure which exceeds the limitations of AS 15.13.070 [AS 15.13.070(f)];

(3) making a false statement or report under this chapter or failing to report in whole or in part a contribution or expenditure required to be reported under this chapter;

(4) giving or furnishing money to another person or group for the purpose of making a contribution or expenditure anonymously, in a fictitious name, or in the name of another, or contributing in violation of AS 15.13.070(d);

(5) making a communication to support or defeat a candidate without identification of sponsorship, in violation of AS 15.13.090;

(6) knowingly accepting a contribution in violation of AS 15.13.070;

(7) knowingly expending funds from a contribution made unlawful by this chapter.

* Sec. 4. AS 15.13.125 is repealed and reenacted to read:

Sec. 15.13.125. CIVIL PENALTY FOR LATE FILINGS OF REQUIRED REPORTS. (a) A candidate or group that fails to file a properly completed report within a time stated in AS 15.13.110 is subject to a civil penalty assessed under this section for each day the delinquency continues as determined by the commission. A candidate or group against whom a civil penalty is assessed by a decision of the commission under this section may appeal the decision to the superior court. An affidavit stating facts in mitigation may be submitted to the commission by a candidate or group against whom a civil penalty is assessed under this section. The imposition of a penalty does not excuse the candidate or group from filing a report required by this chapter.

(b) A candidate or group that fails to file a properly completed report 30 days before the election as required under AS 15.13.110(a)-(1) or 10 days after the election as required under AS 15.13.110(a)(3) is subject to cumulative civil penalties of $50 for each of the first two days that the report is delinquent. In addition to any other penalty required under this subsection, a candidate or group that fails to file a properly completed report within the first two days after the report is delinquent accumulates a daily penalty of one percent of the total monetary contributions received by the candidate or group during the calendar year through the period ending three days before the due date of the report.

(c) A candidate or group that fails to file a properly completed report one week before the election as required under AS 15.13.110(a)-(2) shall be assessed a penalty of a percentage of the total monetary contributions received by the candidate or group during the calendar year through the period ending three days before the due date of the report

(1) on the first day the report is delinquent, one percent of the total monetary contributions received;

(2) on the second day the report is delinquent, three percent of the monetary contributions received;

(3) on the third day that the report is delinquent, six percent of the total monetary contributions received;

(4) on the fourth and each succeeding day that the report is delinquent, an additional three percent of the total monetary contributions received for each day the report is delinquent in addition to the amount stated in (c)(3) of this section.

(d) A candidate or group that fails to file a properly completed report 31 days after the end of each year as required under AS 15.13.110(a)(4) is subject to cumulative civil penalties of $50 for each day that the report is delinquent.

(e) A candidate or group that fails to file a properly completed report for a contribution that exceeds $250 and that was received 10 days before the election as required under AS 15.13.110(b) is subject to a civil penalty of

(1) 10 percent of the amount of the unreported contribution on the first day that the report is delinquent;

(2) 30 percent of the amount of the unreported contribution on the second day that the report is delinquent;

(3) 60 percent of the amount of the unreported contribution on the third day that the report is delinquent; and

(4) 100 percent of the amount of the unreported contribution on the fourth day that the report is delinquent.

(f) In addition to the civil penalties established in (b) - (e) of this section, a candidate or campaign treasurer filing a report required under AS 15.13.110 who fails to report a contribution or expenditure or who reports a portion but not the entire amount of the contribution or expenditure is liable to the state for a civil penalty in an amount equal to three times the amount or the value of the contribution or expenditure that was omitted from the report.

Notes to PENALTIES BILL

Any violation of the elections statutes (Title 15) is a misdemeanor and is punishable by imprisonment for not more than one year or by a fine of not more than $5,000 (Sec. 15.13.120). Presently, late or incomplete reports have civil fines, but any other violation of Title 15 may only be prosecuted as a misdemeanor. The burden of proof is much greater in a criminal proceeding (beyond a reasonable doubt) than in a civil one (a preponderance of the evidence). Realistically, few if any violations of Title 15 will be pursued if they have to be prosecuted under the criminal code as a misdemeanor. At a time when the courts are backed up with felonies they are not too anxious to expedite a misdemeanor case where someone gave $100 over the allowed amount to a candidate. This would suggest that civil penalties should be established for all violations of Title 15. Any major transgressions of the law could still be prosecuted in a criminal proceeding as a misdemeanor.

(1) 30 days before the election; however, this report is not required if the deadline for filing a nominating petition or declaration of candidacy is within 30 days of the election;

(2) one week before the election;

(3) ten days after the election; and

(4) December 31 of each year for expenditures and contributions received which were not reported that year.

(b) Each contribution or expenditure which exceeds $250 and which is made within one week of the election shall be reported to the commission by date, amount, and contributor or recipient within 24 hours of receipt or expenditure by the candidate or campaign treasurer.

(c) The reports of candidates shall be filed with the commission's central office. All reports required by this chapter shall be kept open to public inspection. Within 30 days after each election, the commission shall prepare a summary of each report which shall be made available to the public at cost upon request. Each summary shall use uniform categories of reporting.

(d) Within 30 days after each election, each supplier shall make a full report to the commission in accordance with AS 15.13.040. Within 60 days after each election, the commission shall prepare a summary by candidate or group of the transactions and make the summaries public.

(e) A group formed to sponsor an initiative, a referendum or a recall shall report 30 days after its first filing with the lieutenant governor. Thereafter each group shall report within 10 days after the end of each calendar quarter on the contributions received and expenditures made during the preceding calendar quarter until reports are due under (a) of this section. Effect of amendments. — The 1977 amendment added subsection (e).

As the rest of the section was not affected by the amendment, it is not set out.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Sec. 15.13.120. Penalty; limitations on actions. (a) A person who violates a provision of this chapter is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, is punishable by imprisonment for not more than one year or by a fine of not more than $5,000. A violation includes but is not limited to any of the following acts or omissions:

(1) failing to make a statement or report required to be made under this chapter, or failing to make a statement or report at the time the statement or report is required to be made under this chapter;

Sen Fishers Amendment

Amendment #1 to PENALTIES BILL

CSSB 87 (State Affairs) requires that independent expenditures of $1000 or more made within 30 days of an election must be reported to A.P.O.C. within 72 hours. The following is a proposed amendment to the penalties bill and provides a civil penalty for violation of the required independent expenditures report.

15.13.125 is amended by adding a new section to read:

A person who fails to file a properly completed and certified report of independent expenditures within the time required by AS 15.13.110(b) is subject to a civil penalty of:

Options

1. $??? per day the report is delinquent

2. ? percent of the amount of the expenditure

3. different penalties for the violation:
   a. one penalty for late reports for independent expenditures on behalf of or in opposition to candidates
   b. another penalty for late reports for independent expenditures on behalf of or in opposition to a ballot proposition

NOTES

The independent expenditure reporting requirement is aimed at providing better public disclosure and preventing last minute smear campaigns by unknown parties. A late report by a group supporting or opposing a ballot proposition is not as detrimental to the public's right to know as a late report (possibly a smear campaign) supporting or opposing a candidate. High fines might be appropriate for late reports dealing with candidates while late reports for ballot propositions might warrant more lenient penalties.

* Sec. 17. AS 15.13.110(b) is amended to read:

(b) Each contribution received that [OR EXPENDITURE WHICH] exceeds $250 and that [WHICH] is received [MADE] within 10 days [ONE WEEK] of the election shall be reported to the commission by date, amount, and contributor [OR RECIPIENT] within 24 hours of receipt [OR EXPENDITURE] by the candidate or campaign officer [TREASURER]. Each person making an independent expenditure in the amount of $1,000 or more that is made within 30 days of an election shall report to the commission the date, amount, and purpose of the expenditure within 72 hours of the expenditure and shall identify the name of the person or group that made the expenditure.

* Sec. 18. AS 15.13.110(c) is amended to read:

(c) Each candidate and group shall file the reports required by this chapter [THE REPORTS OF CANDIDATES SHALL BE FILED] with the commission's central office and each report is [. ALL REPORTS REQUIRED BY THIS CHAPTER SHALL BE KEPT] open to public inspection. After [WITHIN 30 DAYS AFTER] each election, the commission shall, upon request, prepare a summary of each report which shall be made available to the public at cost [UPON REQUEST]. Each summary shall use uniform categories of reporting.

* Sec. 19. AS 15.13.130 is amended by adding a new paragraph to read:

(8) "independent expenditure" means the disbursement of funds made to support or oppose the election of a candidate or the passage or defeat of a ballot proposition or question that is not made with the cooperation, consent, or at the request of a candidate, the campaign committee or controlled group of a candidate, or a group that is supporting or opposing the candidate or ballot proposition or question for which the funds are disbursed.

Amendment #2 to PENALTIES BILL

This amendment would establish a civil penalty for exceeding the $1000 contribution limit. Currently only criminal penalties exist for this violation.

AS 15.13 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 15.13.128 Civil Penalties For Violations Of This Chapter. (a) A person, candidate, or group who makes or accepts a campaign contribution of more than $1000 in violation of AS 15.13.070 is subject to a civil penalty equal to two times the amount of the contribution exceeding $1000. The amount of the contribution exceeding $1000 shall be returned to the contributor.

Amendment #3 to PENALTIES BILL

This amendment would establish a civil penalty for missing or improper disclaimers on campaign communications. Currently only criminal penalties exist for this violation.

AS 15.13.128 is amended by adding a new section to read:

(b) A person, candidate or group that makes a communication to support or defeat a candidate or ballot proposition without proper identification in violation of AS 15.13.090 shall be assessed a civil penalty of:

Penalty left to discretion of committee

Amendment #4 to PENALTIES BILL

This amendment takes advantage of the language in AS 15.13.125 Civil Penalties For Late Reports. By defining a properly completed report the section on penalties for late reports will also cover incomplete, inaccurate, and false reports.

AS 15.13.130 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(8) "properly completed report" means a report that includes all required details and whose details are accurate.

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act authorizing the governor to loan up to $3,400,000 from the disaster relief fund for a breakwater failure on St. Paul Island; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. The governor is authorized to ~~loan~~ lend up to $3,400,000 to the Department of Administration, division of risk management, from the assets of the disaster relief fund (AS 44.19.048) to alleviate the effects of a breakwater failure on St. Paul Island.

* Sec. 2. A loan made under the authority of sec. 1 of this Act shall be made on the condition that the Department of Administration, division of risk management, repay to the disaster relief fund the proceeds of insurance payments received as a result of the breakwater failure on St. Paul Island.

* Sec. 3. The authority given by sec. 1 of this Act terminates June 30, 1985.

* Sec. 4. This Act takes effect immediately in accordance with AS 01.-10.070(c).

SUBJ: BREAKWATER SITUATION REPORT NO. 1

1. Due to the large number of inquiries the City is receiving for information on progress made to assess the damage to the Phase I Breakwater under construction at the Port of Saint Paul, the City will present periodic situation reports which will circulate general information about the assessment now underway. The information does not represent the official actual situation but rather attempts only to characterize the activity as a means of sharing information. The only official information will be released following the completion of the assessment now underway.

2. A storm in the Bering Sea on Tuesday and Wednesday, November 13 and 14, 1984 may have contributed to the damage of the Phase I Breakwater structure. The breakwater had been constructed to the 868-foot mark when terminated for the season by the City through agreement with the Contractor.

3. It is obvious that the damage is rather extensive and the City has received information which indicates that parts of the breakwater may not have been constructed to specification.

4. On Thursday, November 15, 1985, Members of the City Council who were in Anchorage on business, including Mayor Mike Zacharof and Deputy Mayor John R. Merculief, together with Designer Eric Norgaard and Project Engineer Frank Carson flew to Saint Paul to personally inspect the damage.

5. Upon return from Saint Paul Thursday night, the inspection party met for several hours to review what had been seen and to develop plans for moving forward with the repairs.

6. On Friday morning, November 16, 1984 the inspecting party met with representatives of the State of Alaska with included Deputy Commissioner of the Department of Transportation and Public Facilities David Haugen and Grants Administrator Margaret E. Holland. City Attorney Tony Smith joined the group for this meeting. The following points were taken-up:

- o A review was thought to be necessary. It probably should include examination of weather conditions, technical assessments of the design, model testing, and other technical data, and examination of construction management and construction execution.

- o The Saint Paul Breakwater design is a State-of-the-Art design and meticulous testing, and even the most advanced design might not be able to forecast the real forces of the environment.

- o Construction management and ccnstruction execution which followed the design and specificaitons also could probably not be faulted.

- o It was obvious that a study to determine causes of the damage was needed. The State asked to be kept informed and offered technical assistance in keeping within its ability to offer assistance.

7. On Saturday, November 17, 1984 the City hosted a luncheon meeting for Citizens of Saint Paul who were in Anchorage attending the Annual Meering of the Aleut Regional Corporation; 15 people were present. At the meeting an announcement to the press was presented which was later distributed to the Anchorage media. DOT Chief of Design and Constructon Division John Olson was in attendance and during a question and answer period stated that it was his opinion that if the breakwater were going to fail it was best to have it over with now rather than a year or two later when it would be excessivly costly to repair. Mr. Olson reaffirmed the interest of the State of Alaska to stand by Saint Paul with technical assistance and to do what ever it could to see us through the problems now facing the City and its breakwater project.

8. In the meantime, Mr. Eric Norgaard had flown to Copenhagen, Denmark with photographs and data for consultations with the Danish Hydrology Institute, the model test consultant.

9. On Monday, November 19, 1984 DOT representatives including Margaret E. Holland and Ocean Engineer Harvey Smith met with the City and presented a plan to provide "lead agency" action to bring about an independent study of the entire matter and situation. The City accepted. The State would contract with an independent engineering consulting-testing firm and get back to the City with the details.

10. During the week the State's search narrowed the field to the firm of Tetra Tech of Los Angeles and Anchorage and broad details of the scope of work were under discussion. A contract for services with Tetra Tech was finalized.

11. During the week of November 26-30 a scope of work was drafted and a contract signed on December 3, 1984.

SUBJ: BREAKWATER SITUATION REPORT NO. 2

1. Due to the large number of inquiries the City is receiving for information on progress made to assess the damage to the Phase I Breakwater under construction at the Port of Saint Paul, the City will present periodic situation reports which will circulate general information about the assessments now underway. The information does not represent an official position but, rather, attempts to characterize the nature of the activity presently undertaken. An official report will be released following completion of the engineering study now going on.

2. Also during the week of November 26-30, Mr. Torben Sorensen, chief executive of the Danish Hydrology Institute, Copenhagen, Denmark, flew to Anchorage for continuing consultations with Norgaard Consultants, and the State of Alaska Dept. of Transportation. Together, the State and Norgaard et al, discussed the details of the scope of work to be undertaken by Tetra Tech with Norgaard having input upon the scope which would be written and supervised by DOT.

4. On Thursday, December 6 the first of Tetra Tech's engineering team arrived on Saint Paul. Likewise a representative of the Danish Hydrology Institute. Upon landing, an immediate inspection of the Breakwater was undertaken and several rolls of still photographs were taken.

5. On the evening of December 6 a heavy storm began forming in the Bering Sea. By Friday it was a full running major storm event and one which severely damaged the already heavily battered Breakwater.

6. Representatives of DHI and T-Tech were on hand to witness the storm event. Additional photography and video-tapes were taken, recording the strom in its fullness. Winds were out of the southwest at 38-47 mph with gusts to 51 mph. High tide at 4:32 P. M. was at 3.5 feet and full. Wave heights were 3-5 meters and wave length of 15 seconds. Local viewpoints of the storm were mixed: some felt that the storm was an average "bad winter storm" but others said it was the worst they had seen in 15 years--1970 being about as far back as could be clearly recalled by local residents of long standing on Saint Paul. The storm blew itself out late in the afternoon of Saturday, December 8, but not until the Breakwater had been reduced to about 300 feet of its original 868 feet.

MEMORANDUM

FROM: CITY MANAGER

TO: DISTRIBUTION LIST

SUBJ: BREAKWATER SITUATION REPORT NO. 3

1. Due to the large number of inquiries the City is receiving for information on progress made to assess the damage to the Phase I Breakwater under construction at the Port of Sain Paul, the City will issue periodic Situation Reports which will characterize the general nature of activity to that time. This information is not an official report. That information will be presented when the engineering study now going on is complete, about December 31, 1984

2. Tetra Tech, the engineer firm selected by the Alaska Department of Transportation and Public Facilities to assess the damage to the Phase I Breakwater arrived on the scene on December 6 when the senior engineer came to the site. He was followed by an engineering technician and a geotechnical expert two days later. On December 10 the project manager arrived. A representative of the Danish Hydraulic Institute was also on site during this week.

3. Another storm, with advance billing of "a 10 year storm" was forecast for the Bering Sea on December 13-15 but passed west of the Pribilof Islands resulting in a distrubance similar to the storm of December 7-9, 1984. The breakwater was affected only a little by that one but all the experts were on hand to witness it and gained insights into the damage/failure mechanisms

4. Tasks completed between storm and lull included:

- o Visual Inspections
- o Photographic Documentations
- o Topographic SubAerial Documentations
- o Estimation of In Situ Gradation with Surface Sampling
- o Visual Observation of Three Storm Events on the Rubble Mound Breakwater

Tasks attempted included:

- o Excavation Test Pit, Gradation Work
- o Bathymetric Survey, delayed do to weather
- o Spot Bathymetric Reconnaissance Near Structure

5. The Engineering team departed the Island today and will consult in Anchorage prior to writing a report which is expected by Dec. 31.

- o 0 o -

7. Review of Local Climatological Data (NOAA) reveals that the mean wind speed for December is 22.3 mph and the extreme speed is 62 mph, which was recorded in 1970, the year of the last storm which local people can remember. Last year the peak gust speed in December was 56 mph on the 20th from the south southeast. The strongest wind last year overall was on November 23 at 58 mph out of the southeast.

8. At first light on Saturday, December 8, 1984 DHI and T-Tech began field reconnaissance during the final gusts of the storm. More photographs were taken. The overall length remaining of the main Breakwater is about 100 meters.

9. Bethemetric equipment did not arrive on Saint Paul as planned on Friday due to the weather. It will arrive on Monday, December 10 and depending upon the calmness of the water in Village Cove will begin in a day or two.

10. Bids for Phase II Breakwater were opened on November 13 and award of a contract was expected 45 days later on Friday, December 28, 1984. The City will ask for a 45-day extension from all bidder for the purpose of completeing the present assessment of damage be-for commencement of pre-award negotiations and contract award then expected to take place in mid-February.

11. The time frame noted above is not expected to prevent the City from remaining on schedule which is to complete the Breakwater Phas I and II and the Dock Phase I in time for the 1986 season. The final design of the dock is now awaiting the programming of essenti repair to Phase I Breakwater.

12. It is becomming increasingly obvious that very major problems which span a wide range of interests and incidents accompany the present situation. The assessment and study should lay before us some of the answers to the overriding question: "What happened?"

SUBJECT: Involvement of Risk Management with St. Paul Breakwater

The events leading up to the Department of Transportation and Public Facilities' (DOT&PF) contact with Risk Management focused primarily on the assessment of damage. Technical analyses to determine why the Breakwater failed were critical, in view of the fact that the City of St. Paul had opened bids for Phase II construction and was scheduled to award the contract in mid-December. Tetra Tech, Inc., was hired to perform the technical analysis.

Following the decision to have the City of St. Paul cancel the contract award for Phase II, the Department and the City began to explore ways to fund the restoration of Phase I of the Breakwater.

During the week of January 14, 1985, Risk Management was asked to assist the Department in exploring its options with regard to Phase I. Several conversations followed and an exchange of information took place. On January 29, 1985, Brad Thompson of Risk Management met with representatives of the City of St. Paul and DOT&PF to determine the best way to proceed to restore the Breakwater to its pre-storm condition.

It was decided that the Division of Risk Management through DOT&PF would solicit an estimate to reconstruct the facility to its pre-storm condition. The Department has identified a list of potential consultants to prepare this estimate.

The initial estimate given to DOT&PF to restore the Breakwater is $4.0 million. A more specific estimate will be developed as a result of comprehensive field investigation.

APPENDIX A

ST. PAUL HISTORY

The significant events surrounding the construction of the St. Paul Breakwater the storm damage and the time frame of reconstruction.

DATE	EVENT
	Construction contract awarded to Callsta Corp.
	Problems arose in production of large armor stone, construction temporarily halted.
	Construction proceeded with modified (berm) breakwater design.
	Completion of Phase 1 construction was accepted for payment.
10/15/84	Breakwater began to show signs of readjusting to a moderate wave climate.
11/13/84-11/14/84	Breakwater was subjected to a major storm which significantly damaged the outer 350'.
11/19/84	City of St. Paul contacted DOT&PF for assistance on confronting the problem.
11/30/84	DOT&PF signed an agreement with Tetra Tech Inc., using an existing Term Contract, to conduct an assessment of the damage and determine the probable cause(s) of failure.
12/07/84-12/08/84	The breakwater was subjected to a second major storm which destroyed an additional 150'-200'. At this time the head portion of the breakwater had receeded from an original station 9+00 to station 4+25.
12/31/84	First draft of final Tetra Tech Inc report was received for review.
01/14/85	DOT&PF contacted Risk Management to ascertain the States Insurance alternatives for reconstruction of the breakwater.

01/21/85	Final Tetra Tech Inc. report was delivered to DOT&PF.
	City of St. Paul contracted with DePue & Associates to develop alternative dock designs.
	City of St. Paul contracted with Tetra Tech Inc. to develop alternative designs and estimates for reconstructing the breakwater and continuation of phase 2 construction.
01/29/85	DOT&PF, City of St. Paul, and Risk Management met to discuss the current status of the breakwater and determine what involvements between the agencies is necessary to meet the critical time frame for construction and preservation of the EDA grant.

TENTATIVE SCHEDULE TO MEET 1985 CONSTRUCTION WINDOW AND FULFILL GRANT REQUIREMENTS.

02/15/85	Select from alternative designs of breakwaters and docks.
02/28/85	Contract for A/E services to develop final design, drawings, and specifications for breakwater and dock.
03/01/85-03/15/85	Field investigations (detailed bathymetry, geotech, etc.)
03/15/85-04/30/85	Hydraulic Model Studies
03/01/85-04/15/85	Develop final design, construction, and bid documents

Mr. Vern McCorkle
City Manager
City of St. Paul
St. Paul, Alaska

Dear Mr. McCorkle:

The following is a summarization of our analysis of the Saint Paul Harbor Project:

1. Estimated Costs to Re-build Phase I

	w/o contingencies E&D and S&A	w/contingencies E&D and S&A
a) to Norgaard's Original Design	$4.02 million	$4.74 million
b) Norgaard's A-B Design	3.40 million	4.01 million
c) to Tetra Tech's Preliminary Design	4.95 million	5.84 million

Basis of costs are shown on the attached sheets for (a) and (b). Unit prices are from Phase 2 bid summaries and quantity estimates assume that existing material from damaged section can be incorporated into the core. We have added the costs for mob/demobs, camps and have road maintenance which were not included in our original $3 million estimate.

2. Extent of $9.0 Million Breakwater Project

Using Tetra Tech's preliminary x-section, breakwater repairs and extension to about STA 14+00 can be accomplished for $9 million. A head section incorporating 30-ton concrete dolos armor units and a trunk section using 14-ton stone on a 1:4 slope were used in this estimate. A project of this magnitude could protect a 200-foot barge dock while providing a 20' draft along the berth. Dredging of the harbor for the removal of washed out breakwater material would be required. Wave heights of about four feet along the berth would be expected several times per year during storm conditions. The evaluation of using a concrete caisson for the head section instead of the 30-ton dolos units may substantially affect the total possible breakwater length. Model testing of the caisson and our preliminary design for the trunk section is also required. We are presently investigating the caisson alternative, but a precise construction cost estimate will be difficult. In summary, we are confident that a 1200- to 1500-foot breakwater can be constructed with a $9.0 million budget. Estimated construction time for this project is seven months.

3. Estimated Costs for Re-build to Original Phase I/Phase II Project

Using Tetra Tech's preliminary design x-section and extending the project to STA 20+50 as shown in the Phase II construction drawings would cost about $12.63 million in construction. Including a 5% contingency and allowances for engineering and design and supervision and administration would necessitate a $14.9 million project budget. Estimated construction time for this project is 13 months, hence a two-season construction program would be needed.

4. Alternative X-Section Designs

We have examined six alternative cross-sections plus Norgaard's trunk and head section designs. Based on the 25-foot design wave, Norgaard's original design would expect considerable damage (about 20% or more). The other six designs are expected to sustain about 0 to 5% damage on an annual basis, but model tests of some alternatives are necessary to verify this damage estimate. We are presently evaluating a caisson section for use as the breakwater head. This may be similar in cost to a rubblemound dolos protected head section but afford an additional 50 feet of breakwater length. See attached table for a summary of x-sections examined.

I would like to emphasize that some of our designs can only be verified by scale model testing. We have preliminary sections drawn, along with a plan of the project to STA 14+00, which can be made available for your use if you feel they would be of any assistance. Once Tetra Tech, or possibly some other firm, is given a notice to proceed with the development of detailed plans and specifications, it will take approximately four weeks to have them ready for bid. Also, if the dock facilities are to be incorporated in this project, a subsoil investigation of the harbor bottom must be completed. Tetra Tech would be pleased to act as St. Paul's agent for this work, or if you desire to contract directly for this work we will recommend firms specializing in this type of work.

If you have any questions, please don't hesitate to give me a call at 564-8144.

Sincerely,

TETRA TECH, INC.

SENATE BILL NO. 207

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to public employees; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 23.40.210 is amended to read:

Sec. 23.40.210. AGREEMENT. Upon the completion of negotiations between an organization and a public employer, if a settlement is reached, the employer shall reduce it to writing in the form of an agreement. The agreement may include a term for which it will remain in effect, not to exceed three years. The agreement shall include a pay plan designed to provide for a cost-of-living differential between the salaries paid employees residing in the state and employees residing outside the state. The cost-of-living differential or other geographic cost-of-living adjustment may not be considered part of the basic salary for purposes of calculating overtime compensation or other salary adjustments. The plan shall provide that the salaries paid, as of August 26, 1977, to employees residing outside the state shall remain unchanged until the difference between those salaries and the salaries paid employees residing in the state reflects the difference between the cost of living in Alaska and living in Seattle, Washington. The agreement shall include a grievance procedure which shall have binding arbitration as its final step. Either party to the agreement has a right of action to enforce the agreement by petition to the labor relations agency.

* Sec. 2. AS 39.27.020 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(d) If an employee's basic annual salary is no more than $30,000, the pay step differential shall be calculated using the employee's basic salary. If the employee's basic annual salary is greater than $30,000, then the employee's pay step differential shall be calculated on the differential for a basic salary of $30,000.

* Sec. 3. AS 39.27 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 39.27.027. OVERTIME COMPENSATION. Overtime compensation shall be calculated on the basic salary of an employee before the addition of any adjustments including pay step differentials and shift differentials.

* Sec. 4. AS 39.35 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 39.35.675. INCLUSION OF COST-OF-LIVING DIFFERENTIALS IN COMPENSATION AND BENEFITS. (a) An employee shall make contributions to the system based on compensation including a cost-of-living differential.

(b) The amount of a cost-of-living differential may not be included in the employee's compensation for purposes of calculating benefits under this chapter unless the employee has received a cost-of-living differential in a comparable amount or of at least that many steps for at least 50 percent of the employee's credited service.

(c) When an employee receives a benefit, and if the employee's compensation for purposes of calculating the benefit does not include a cost-of-living differential, then the administrator shall refund to the employee the amount of contributions the employee made based on the differential.

(d) In this section "cost-of-living differential" means an adjustment to salary based on the cost of living in the geographic region where the employee works and includes a pay step differential under AS 39.27.020.

* Sec. 5. AS 39.35.680(8) is amended to read:

(8) "compensation" means the total remuneration earned by an employee for personal services rendered, including cost-of-living differentials only as provided in AS 39.35.675, payments for leave that is actually used by the employee, the amount by which the employee's wages are reduced under AS 39.30.150(c), and any amount deferred under an employer-sponsored deferred compensation plan, but does not include retirement benefits, welfare benefits, per diem, expense allowances, workers' compensation payments or payments for leave not used by the employee whether those leave payments are scheduled payments, lump-sum payments, donations, or cash-ins;

* Sec. 6. (a) Unless the budget specifically provides or the legislature approves, the state may not ~~increase the salary range and~~

(1) reclassify a position; ~~or~~ a lesser salary range Amend

(2) change the salary range of a job class unless the change is required to comply with AS 18.80.220(a)(5); statute

(3) promote a person to the next step of a flexibly staffed position if the person was first hired in the flexibly-staffed position after the effective date of this section; or

✓ (4) award a person a merit increase.

(b) In this section, "state" means the executive, legislative and judicial branches of state government and includes the University of Alaska. Sec 7 & renumber

* Sec. 7. The amendments made by secs. 4 and 5 of this Act apply only to members first hired under the Public Employees' Retirement System on or after the effective date of secs. 4 and 5 of this Act.

* Sec. 8. Nothing in this Act terminates or modifies a collective bargaining agreement in existence on the effective date of secs. 1 - 3 and 6 - 7 of this Act.

* Sec. 9. Section 6 of this Act takes effect January 1, 1987.

* Sec. 10. Sections 1, 3 and 5 - 7 of this Act take effect immediately in accordance with AS 01.10.070(c).

Subj: SB-207, an Act relating to public employees

SB-207, introduced today, is designed to limit further increases in state employee salaries and to curb some of the escalating benefits and geographical cost-of-living differentials enjoyed by some employees. This bill is another effort to hold the line on state spending because of our reduced revenue forecasts.

I would request that you schedule the bill as soon as possible so that it can be given a hearing in your committee and then in Senate Finance.

Thank you.

Senate Bill 207
Fiscal Note Analysis
Prepared by Division of Retirement & Benefits
Department of Administration
March 13, 1985

IV Analysis: With passage, sections four and five of this bill would prohibit the three highest consecutive years salary, used for benefit calculation in the Public Employees' Retirement System (PERS), to include any area cost-of-living adjustment if the member has not received an area cost-of-living differential during at least 50 percent of the members credited service. The bill would also provide for refunding any contributions paid on area-differentials if the salaries used for benefit calculation do not include area-differential.

It is estimated that this bill would result in a .002% reduction in the State contribution rate in the PERS. We also estimate that the computer system enhancements needed would result in a one year $36,000 FY 86 cost and a cost of $13,100 for FY 86 maintenance. The costs are estimated to increase by 8% each year.

The $38.2 FY 86 costs are calculated as follows:

The estimated decrease in FY 86 State contribution rate (.002%) times the FY 86 estimated state payroll ($544,046,592)	[$10.9]
Plus the estimated FY 86 system maintenance costs	$13.1
Plus the estimated one year FY 86 system enhancement costs	$36.0
Total Fy 86 estimated costs	$38.2

Senate Bill 207
Fiscal Note Analysis
Prepared by Division of Retirement & Benefits
Department of Administration
March 13, 1985

IV Analysis: With passage, sections four and five of this bill would prohibit the three highest consecutive years salary, used for benefit calculation in the Public Employees' Retirement System (PERS), to include any area cost-of-living adjustment if the member has not received an area cost-of-living differential during at least 50 percent of the members credited service. The bill would also provide for refunding any contributions paid on area-differentials if the salaries used for benefit calculation do not include area-differential.

It is estimated that this bill would result in a .002% reduction in the State contribution rate in the PERS. We also estimate that the computer system enhancements needed would result in a one year $36,000 FY 86 cost and a cost of $13,100 for FY 86 maintenance. The costs are estimated to increase by 8% each year.

The $38.2 FY 86 costs are calculated as follows:

The estimated decrease in FY 86 State contribution rate (.002%) times the FY 86 estimated state payroll ($544,046,592)	[$10.9]
Plus the estimated FY 86 system maintenance costs	$13.1
Plus the estimated one year FY 86 system enhancement costs	$36.0
Total Fy 86 estimated costs	$38.2

Additional Fiscal Note Analysis

This bill as it applies to the Division of Finance would impact us significantly as certain provisions change fundamental concepts about the methods the state uses to pay its employees. Our comments are limited to those areas where the state would be required to modify automated and manual processes in order to satisfactorily meet the provisions of this bill.

SUMMARY OF PROVISIONS AFFECTING FINANCE:

° A major target of this legislation is aimed toward changing the way in which cost of living differentials are determined and paid. The State currently maintains 60 separate salary schedules reflecting up to 30 salary ranges and 10 steps in each.

  - Cost of living differentials have always been paid according to a uniform percentage (subject to certain exceptions due to collective bargaining) to all pay schedules. This bill (sec. 2(d)) proposes to place a lid on the maximum amount that can be paid by establishing a basic annual salary limit of $30,000.

° Section 3 of the bill would limit overtime rate determination to a calculation based upon the basic annual salary amount.

° In terms of computing retirement benefits section 4 would require the state to track base retirement contributions separately from contributions related to the cost of living differential only. The state would have to change benefit calculation algorithms to include separate calculations for base salary benefits and benefits based on area cost of living differentials for each year of service in order to satisfy the provisions of section 4 of the bill. The current benefit calculation is performed manually and requires the state to identify the number of years of creditable service and the three highest paid years for determining benefit amounts. This bill proposes a significantly more sophisticated approach that if done manually will be more subject to errors and require significantly more manual effort than before.

° Section 1, 2, 4-7 have immediate effective dates upon passage of this legislation. It is not feasible to implement the provisions of this bill immediately. The State is currently implementing a new statewide accounting system (AKSAS), the current payroll system is being modified to interface with AKSAS, there are scheduled changes to the current payroll system to accommodate the most recent labor agreements, a current area differential study is being completed which will have some impact to our payroll processes, and the current classification study will also likely have significant impact to our payroll processes.

  Implementing changes required by this bill will need to be flexibly scheduled to be considered along with all other changes that will be legally and procedurally required in order to keep our state payroll processes and systems properly functioning without service interruption.

Summary analysis of changes and related fiscal impact:

° Modifications to automated systems (input form changes, file changes, program changes, analysis and design)

* 36 employee months

* ASSUMPTIONS

- State can use existing base pay schedules for each identified employee group (approximately 12 groups).
- This bill will not attempt to change any fundamental payroll processes. No major change will be required to the current pay schedules.
- This estimate does not include estimates for data processing chargeback costs.
- Changes required by this bill will be allowed to be scheduled appropriately with all other production work that is necessary to keep the state payroll systems properly operating.

° Update State Administrative Manual to include new pay calculation changes for supplemental and prepay processes.

6 employee months

° Train state agencies in new payroll calculation procedures.

6 employee months

° Coordination of affected groups to identify and mutually agree on intent of legislation (Finance, Labor Relations, Retirement, Department of Law, Unions, Legislature).

12 employee months

° Additional ongoing manual effort to calculate benefit amounts equates to one additional position.

MEMORANDUM March 13, 1985

SUBJECT: Sectional analysis of SB 207

TO: Senator Jan Faiks and Senator John Sackett
Co-chair, Senate Finance Committee

FROM: Teresa B. Cramer TBC
Legislative Counsel

You have asked for a sectional analysis of SB 207, relating to public employees.

Section 1 amends the Public Employment Relations Act to prohibit including geographic cost-of-living adjustments in basic salary when calculating overtime compensation or other salary adjustments.

Section 2 limits the amount that an employee may receive as a pay step differential. The maximum differential would be calculated on a basic salary of $30,000.

Sections 3 and 9 require that overtime compensation for state employees be calculated on an employee's basic salary before the addition of any adjustments, including pay step differentials or shift differentials. Section 9 provides that section 3 takes effect on January 1, 1987.

Section 4 and 5 require an employee to make contributions to the Public Employment Retirement System on the employee's entire compensation including a cost-of-living differential. However, the employee's benefits will be based on the entire compensation only if the employee received a comparable cost-of-living differential for at least 50 percent of the employee's credited service. If the employee does not receive benefits based on salary including cost-of-living differentials, then the division must refund the amount of contributions the employee made for the differentials.

Sectional analysis, SB 207

Section 6 forbids the state, including the executive, legislative, judicial branches and the University of Alaska, from making changes to positions, job classes, or salaries as listed in the section.

The regulation of employment detailed in section 6 may be viewed as a legislative infringement on the executive power of the governor, the power to administer courts assigned to the chief justice of the Supreme Court, and the power to govern the University of Alaska given to the board of regents.

The legislature clearly can limit the amount of money that these coordinate branches of government may spend on personal services. Whether the legislature can limit the way in which this money is spent as extensively as this section provides is open to question.

There is also a problem about implementing the limitation on merit increases. Under the contracts negotiated by the state and the Alaska Public Employees' Association for the General Government Unit and the Supervisory Unit, the state may be required to provide a system of "performance incentives" for employees in those units. Article IV, section 2, of each of those contracts contains language on "performance incentives":

> Performance incentives shall be based upon the appointing authority's evaluation of an employee's performance. A performance incentive of one step in the salary range may be given to an Employee who has received an overall performance evaluation of "Acceptable" or better on the Employee's merit anniversary date.

and

> The Employer will not establish a quota or percentage system to determine the number of performance increases granted, but the parties agree to accept the standards provided in GG 77-36 dated September 27, 1979, for determining the granting or not granting of performance increases.

The text cited, GGU 77-36, is a memorandum from Sandra Withers, director of the division of personnel and labor relations, to all personnel officers. It addresses the standards that arbitrators had found to be improper reasons for denying a merit increase and heads the list with "lack of funds."

Under the second part of the contract language cited, it could be argued that denying all performance increases constituted a percentage system for determining the number of increases granted and therefore violated that clause of the collective bargaining contract. The reference to the memorandum and the memorandum's reference to "lack of funds" as an invalid basis for denying a merit increase supports that argument.

While collective bargaining contracts are specifically subject to legislative appropriation under AS 23.40.210, the legislature is not free to renegotiate the contract in making appropriations. The legislature can determine the amount of money available for state salaries, but the state is bound to pay its employees according to the terms of the contracts it negotiates. Insufficient funds would be a basis for layoffs but not for unilaterally changing the terms of the contracts.

Section 7 provides that the amendments to the Public Employees' Retirement System only apply to members first hired after the effective date of the sections amending the PERS. (They carry an immediate effective date.)

Section 8 provides that the bill does not terminate or modify a collective bargaining agreement that was in effect on the effective date established in section 10.

Section 10 provides that the bill, except for section 3, takes effect immediately.

If I may be of further assistance, please advise.

SUBJECT: SB 207

Below is an example to show the salary differential between an employee at a Range 19A in Juneau and an employee at a Range 19A in Bethel. The employee located in Juneau would be on Schedule A. The employee located in Bethel would be on Schedule G.

Juneau 19A	Bethel 19A
3193 per month	4170 per month

The percentage difference is .3222.

SB 207 proposes in Sec. 2 to calculate the amount of the salary differential by two different methods. If an employee's basic annual salary is no more than $30,000, the pay differential shall be calculated using the employee's basic salary. If the employee's basic annual salary is greater than $30,000, then the employee's pay differential shall be calculated on the differential for a basic salary of $30,000.

For example, a Range 19A in Bethel is currently earning 4170 a month. With the differential calculated for a basic salary of $30,000 the monthly rate would be $3998, a difference of $172 a month. The higher the range the more it will be affected. For example, currently a Range 26A in Bethel earns 6572 a month. With the new differential calculation a Range 26A in Bethel would earn 5766 a month. A difference of $806 a month.

In Sec. 3 a savings would be realized to the State by calculating overtime compensation on the basic salary of an employee before the addition of any adjustments including pay step differentials and shift differentials.

For example:

basic salary plus current differential hourly overtime rate - 19A Schedule G	basic salary plus SB 207 proposed differential hourly overtime rate - 19A Schedule G
38.49	36.93

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act creating the Alaska State Fire Commission; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 44.19 is amended by adding new sections to read:

ARTICLE 15. ALASKA STATE FIRE COMMISSION.

Sec. 44.19.194. FIRE COMMISSION. The Alaska State Fire Commission is established in the Office of the Governor.

Sec. 44.19.195. MEMBERSHIP. (a) The governor shall appoint the members of the commission without regard to political affiliation to serve for terms of four years. Members shall have an understanding of basic fire protection principles. A member may serve no more than two consecutive full terms. Membership shall include a

(1) member of the Alaska Fire Chief's Association;

(2) member of the Alaska State Firefighters Association;

(3) member of the Alaska Municipal League;

(4) representative of the field of education;

(5) representative of the Alaska Federation of Natives;

(6) representative of the insurance industry;

(7) representative of the construction industry;

(8) representative of the petrochemical industry; and

(9) representative of the transportation industry.

(b) The attorney general and the commissioners of public safety, labor, community and regional affairs, and natural resources or their designated representatives are ex officio members of the committee.

(c) A vacancy on the commission shall be filled from the appropriate source. The appointee shall serve for the unexpired portion of the term.

(d) Members serve without compensation but are entitled to travel and per diem authorized for members of boards and commissions under AS 39.20.180.

Sec. 44.19.196. PROCEDURES; STAFF. (a) The commission shall meet each quarter. A quorum consists of five members and must include either the chair or the vice-chair of the commission. Powers of the commission may be exercised by an affirmative vote of a majority of the commission. The commission shall determine the location of a meeting in advance and shall publish notice of the meeting statewide at least 30 days before the meeting date.

(b) Roberts Rules of Order shall govern commission meetings.

(c) The membership shall elect a chair and a vice-chair to serve for terms of four years. An elected officer may serve for no more than two successive full terms. The chair may appoint standing and special committees and subcommittees.

(d) The chair, the governor, or three members of the commission may call a special meeting.

(e) The commission shall hire an executive director and other staff as necessary.

Sec. 44.19.197. POWERS AND DUTIES. (a) The commission shall

(1) develop and adopt a state master plan for fire prevention and control and a state fire education and training plan;

(2) assist state and local fire prevention and control agencies in improving fire prevention and control in the state;

(3) establish policy and operational guidelines for state agencies with fire protection responsibilities and make recommendations to private industry, local governments, and federal agencies having fire protection programs;

(4) develop and maintain a liaison with all fire protection agencies in the state, both public and private;

(5) recommend legislative and executive actions to enhance effective and efficient fire prevention and suppression;

(6) adopt regulations under the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62) to enhance effective and efficient fire prevention and suppression;

(7) develop and implement a standardized data collection system for all fire protection agencies in the state;

(8) serve as a resource and technical information source for local governments, state and federal agencies, the legislature and persons in the state;

(9) submit an annual report to the governor, legislature, and the fire service community on the activities, recommendations, and accomplishments of the commission during the preceding fiscal year;

(10) take other actions necessary or proper to carry out its duties.

(b) The commission may

(1) conduct research, hold public hearings, and study related issues in order to make recommendations for the improvement of fire prevention and control in the state;

(2) accept unrestricted gifts, bequests, devises, grants, matching funds and other consideration for use in promoting the commission's work.

* Sec. 2. AS 44.66.010(a) is amended by adding a new paragraph to read:

(13) Alaska State Fire Commission -- June 30, 1989.

* Sec. 3. Notwithstanding AS 44.19.195 enacted by sec. 1 of this Act, the following initial members of the commission shall serve the following terms:

(1) representatives of the construction industry and the field of education, three years;

(2) member of the Alaska State Firefighters Association and the representative of the insurance industry, two years;

(3) representatives of the transportation industry and the Alaska Federation of Natives, one year.

* Sec. 4. This Act takes effect immediately in accordance with AS 01.-10.070(c).

Dear Senator Abood:

Thank you for scheduling the second hearing on SB 209 and SB 210 so quickly. Unfortunately, I will be unable to attend, but I have the utmost confidence in Mr. William Hagevig and Mr. E. Robert Haag to speak on my behalf.

It was unfortunate that time was critical during the March 28 hearing as I believe that if we had had an opportunity to respond to your questions we would have been able to answer them to a degree that would have caused a due pass recommendation from your committee.

Again, thank you for your prompt action.

Dear Senator Abood:

Please accept this letter as a recommendation to pass and make into law, Senate Bill 209 and Senate Bill 210.

This action seems very necessary for a safer Alaska. Our state is very young, however, our state seems very aggressive. This aggressiveness can, and should be continued. Senate Bill 209 and Senate Bill 210 show, and prove our aggressiveness towards stopping loss of life and property due to fire.

Please refer to the final report of the Governor's Task Force on Fire Prevention and Control. These statistics are mind boggling and passage of the Bills are a positive step in stopping loss of life and property by fire.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for the privilege of being able to testify on behalf of S.B. 209 and S.B. 210 Thursday, March 28, 1985 at the Senate State Affairs Committee hearing. It is with deep regret that I will not be able to attend the next hearing on April 2, 1985 due to time constraints.

It was very apparent at the last hearing that there were still some questions that needed to be answered. I will be most fortunate, however, to have two of my associates there to be able to assist you and your committee in any manner possible. Bill Hagevig and Bob Haag are both life members of the Alaska State Firefighters Association and have my utmost confidence.

RECEIVED
APR 1 1985

Dear Senator Abood:

Today I had the opportunity to testify before the Senate State Affairs Committee on SB 209 and SB 210, otherwise known as the State Fire Commission bills.

I came away from the hearing with the feeling that we had neither gained your support for the Fire Commission concept, nor convinced the committee members of our sincerity. Please be assured that the Fire Service is very sincere about reducing the fire losses in this State.

In spite of the obvious time constraints, I was somewhat disappointed that the Committee did not question any of us significantly. They did, however, ask a number of questions among themselves which led to several comments among Committee Members, most of which were inaccurate, and to which we were unable to respond with accurate information.

My statement that fire losses over the last ten years averaged forty million dollars a year was misleading in that the figure quoted refers only to direct costs. It did not reflect such things as loss of business, inflated cost of reconstruction, increased cost of fire insurance based on the local fire protection profile and, last but definitely not least, the loss of the burned occupancy from the municipal tax roles. At one point in its fire history, nine insurance companies withdrew from writing insurance in the City of Ketchikan. The U. S. Fire Administration maintains that indirect losses may be six to eight times higher than the direct loss. If this contention is accepted, then the annual fire loss for the last ten years in Alaska is closer to $240 million or higher. If viewed in this way the the annual losses can no longer be described as "negligible".

One committee member had a concern as to whether the money being requested to fund the State Fire Commission wouldn't be better spent buying new fire trucks for his constituency. He may have a valid argument for his area. The Task Force on Fire Prevention and Control looked across the entire State in its deliberations and found (to its distress) that the fire problem in Alaska is multi-fauceted and that no single solution exists. Neither the Task Force nor the Fire Service is opposed to providing fire trucks where a demonstrated need exists. It is, however, only a small part of the problem.

Finally, it is not the intention of the Task Force recommendations to cost the State more money than is already being spent. The idea is to have the State Fire Commission develop a braod spectrum master plan to systematically implement the recommendations of the Task Force in the most cost effective manner possible. The idea is to reduce the costs of fire protection both in terms of lives and dollar losses. I personally believe it is only fair to point out that in the past five or six years the State has appropriated enough undocumented funds for fire stations, fire trucks and fire equipment to fund a broad spectrum Fire Commisison for 10-12 years. I believe that we can do better that that for our people.

If you would like to discuss any of these ideas in more detail, or if I can respond to any additional questions, please call me at 364-2154 in Douglas.

William A. Hagevig

TESTIMONY OF GUY VAN DOREN

FOR SENATOR ROBERT H. ZIEGLER, SR.

SB 209 and SB 210 - ESTABLISHING A STATE FIRE COMMISSION

I am here this morning not only to testify for Senator Ziegler but also as a person who spent four years as a professional fireman and an additional two years as a volunteer fire fighter.

The bills before you were introduced by Senator Ziegler at the request of the Fire Service and as a result of one of the many findings of Task Force on fire prevention.

The fire losses in Alaska, both in property loss and loss of life are staggering.

Believe it or not, the United States, the richest and most technologically advanced nation in the world leads all the major industrialized countries in per capita deaths and property loss for fire.

The fact that the U.S. reports a death rate of nearly twice that of second ranking Canada creates a grim perspective on Alaska - our fire record exceeds the rest of the United States in losses and thus is one of the worst in the world. Our death rate is the most horrible of all the states, ten times greater than Hawaii and five times greater than California.

In property loss, Alaskans loose more than twice as much as other Americans to fire.

To a person who has had to try and suppress those fires or to pull a child from a burning building, these figures are appalling.

By establishing a state fire commission, the recommendations of the first and second fire task force can be implemented, the fire loss record in Alaska can be reduced, and the safety and well being of the residents of the state can be improved.

As envisioned by the task force, the fire commission would be a body similar to the State Board of Education, the Board of Fisheries, Board of Game or the Liquor Control Board. Each is a policy setting body within their respective fields. None of the boards do actual administration, only policy setting. In similar manner, the State Fire Commission would set policy for state agencies with fire protection responsibilities. The commission could not set policy for local departments, federal agencies or private industry, but could make recommendations to them.

The need for a policy setting body within the fire service at the state level can be well illustrated. One group of needs concerns decision making by state fire program administrators. Fire service training at the state level, for example is now determined by one person. Due to fiscal constraints he has determined that his program would not become involved in training industrial fire brigades. With no overall policy setting group, private industry can only take their concerns to the legislature, the governor or do nothing.

Similarly, other officials make decisions about aviation fire safety, fire code enforcement, plans, reviews, wild lands fire fighting, etc. As can be seen, there is no overal policy setting group and no system of checks and balances with or coordination among state level fire-related activities.

Another reason for a policy group is to determine what activities the state, local governments and private industry are not performing that should be performed in order to reduce the toll of fire deaths, fire losses and to provide focus or program guidelines. This information would be in the form of recommendations to the Governor for state actions, to the professional fire associations and the Municipal League as concerns local action, to individual federal agencies appropriate to the recommendations.

In short, the Fire Commission is seen as providing the broad base of reference or perspective, not now available but needed to address the wide array of problems and issues facing the Fire Service, and to coordinate a largely diverse group of agencies with fire service programs and responsibilities at all levels of government and in private industry.

The concept of a commission has substantial precedence in the other emergency service fields. Law enforcement - police standards council; Emergency Medical Service - a state Advisory Council on Emergency Services. Of the three emergency services only the fire service has no board or commission.

Many other states have well functioning Fire Commissions and the U.S. Fire Administration has written extensively about a "model" fire commission. The task force borrowed from the model in drafting commission duties.

There appears to be three options available to the Governor and the Legislature in order that Alaska's fire losses, the worst in the Western World can be effectively reduced.

(A) MAINTAIN THE STATUS QUO

This option is not a viable one, since it would perpetrate the fractured, diverse and uncoordinated Fire Sevice which undoubtedly contributes to Alaska's fire loss record being the worst in the U.S. and the industrialized world.

(B) SUBSTANTIALLY INCREASE THE CAPABILITIES OF THE STATE FIRE MARSHAL'S OFFICE, THROUGH ADDITIONAL STAFF.

This option would improve the overall situation, but would not provide the broad base support perspective, and involvement as would a State Fire Commission.

(C) CREATE A STATE FIRE COMMISSION.

A State Fire Commission offers the best way to address the wide array if fire protection issues and needs for Alaska.

Finally, while realizing the crunch for dollars and the reluctance to fund a new entity, the state and the people of Alaska will actually save money because, as fire departments upgrade and improve, not only are fire losses and deaths reduced, but cities, boroughs, the state, and the residents of the state will enjoy lower fire insurance rates. For example, a recent evaluation of the Juneau Fire Department and municipal facilities resulted in a reduction in fire insurance rates amounting from 11% to 20%. Such reductions throughout the state, would more than justify the money expended for the commission.

It is felt by the Task Force on Fire Prevention and by Senator Ziegler that this is a very important piece of legislation and a favorable recommendation by the committee is urged.

ALASKA STATE FIREFIGHTERS ASSOCIATION

SENATE STATE AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

Hearing on Senate Bill No. 209 "An Act relating to creating the Alaska State Fire Commission" and Senate Bill No. 210 "Special Appropriation to the Office of the Governor for the Alaska State Fire Commission".

Mr. Chairman:

My name is E. Robert Haag representing the Alaska State Firefighters Association and the Alaska Fire Chiefs Association in support of Senate Bills No. 209 and 210.

Members of the Fire Service had the opportunity to appear before your Committee last Thursday morning (March 28, 1985) and presented statements in support of these important Bills. Unfortunately due to the scheduling of a teleconference, on also an important item of legislation, there was no time to reply to some of the comments made by members of the Committee.

The Fire Service is appreciative of you, Mr. Chairman, and members of the Committee to hold what we call a special hearing, so rapidly, so the important issues of the subject Bills can be discussed.

We regret that two Fire Officials, who presented statements before your Committee last Thursday morning (March 28, 1985) are unable to be here this morning. Chief Alan Judson, of the Fire Chiefs Association, left for the south 48 yesterday. Jason A. Elson, of the Firefighters Association, had to return to Kenai. They both have forwarded letters, to you Mr. Chairman, in suport of a "Do Pass" for the Bills. I will not read their letter, because of time. Copies are in the folder provided to you and your Committee. We respectfully ask that their letters be considered a part of the official record of this hearing.

Mr. William Hagevig, who testified before your Committee last Thursday, is here this morning. Mr. Hagevig has considerable service and knowledge of the Fire Service, especially in Alaska. He is a member of the Alaska Task Force on Fire Presention and Control. This Task Force was established by the Legislature, in 1984, to complete the study of the original Task Force which was unable to complete its report due to withdrawal of operating funds in 1983.

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee all of us in the Fire Service ask that you permit Mr. Hagevig the opportunity to present to you additional information and data on the importance of an Alaska State Fire Commission. If time becomes a factor we urge you to seriouly review Mr. Hagevigs statements and to recall him back for further information, if considered necessary, so that you may give a "Do Pass" to the establishment of an Alaska State Fire Commission.

Future generations, in Alaska, will look back on your actions. and those of the entire Legislative and Executive branches of State government in helping to reduce Alaska's fire losses.

Action is needed now.

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee the Fire Service and all Alaskans appreciates your time and consideration on this important matter. We look forward to a "Do Pass"

Thank you.

Dear Senator Abood:

Thank you for scheduling the second hearing on SB 209 and SB 210 so quickly. Unfortunately, I will be unable to attend, but I have the utmost confidence in Mr. William Hagevig and Mr. E. Robert Haag to speak on my behalf.

It was unfortunate that time was critical during the March 28 hearing as I believe that if we had had an opportunity to respond to your questions we would have been able to answer them to a degree that would have caused a due pass recommendation from your committee.

Again, thank you for your prompt action.

Sincerely,

Chief Alan Judson, President

Dear Senator,

I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for the privilege of being able to testify on behalf of S.B. 209 and S.B. 210 Thursday, March 28, 1985 at the Senate State Affairs Committee hearing. It is with deep regret that I will not be able to attend the next hearing on April 2, 1985 due to time constraints.

It was very apparent at the last hearing that there were still some questions that needed to be answered. I will be most fortunate, however, to have two of my associates there to be able to assist you and your committee in any manner possible. Bill Hagevig and Bob Haag are both life members of the Alaska State Firefighters Association and have my utmost confidence.

Again, thank you for your time and best wishes for you with your responsibilities in the remainder of the session.

Sincerely,

Jason A. Elson

The scope of work for which the Commission is responsible involves planning and coordination of vertually all the numerous state agencies with fire protection program responsibilities and to establish the last possible relationship with all local governments, federal agencies with fire related responsibilities (including the military) and private industry in order that the Commission can represent and act as the planning, coordination and policy setting mechanism for the entire fire service community in the state. The commission will also interact with other state fire commissions similarly situated.

To perform this task, and address Alaska having the highest fire loss rate, not only in the U.S. but in the entire industrialized western world, requires that staff members possess the highest possible qualifications.

Since the Commission's task is unprecedented in Alaska, the planning functions undertaken will be original efforts with no procedence by which to be guided. The broad range of Commission responsibilities as presented in the Task Force report requires independent efforts by self-motivated personnel with only minimal oversight of a policy nature.

The large number of persons from all aspects of the fire service who participated in the Task Force's efforts means the highest degree of scrutiny of the results of Commission activities, since the Commission is in effect, a creature of the fire service statewide, and the fire service knows what must be accomplished.

A primary function of the Commission is to recommend and assist in development of policy, since it is a policy setting mechanism, for not only state agencies but for state government generally, through the Governor's Office, and will recommend policy for local governments, federal agencies and private industry, such as pipeline companies, the insurance industry to name a few. The policy area also includes developing legislative proposals for introduction thru the Chief Executive, since some policy implementation may require legislatively enacted authority.

Another major function will be to serve as the single focal point for all federal assistance relative to fire protection and thus require an understanding of, and participate in various federal assistance programs.

Executive Director

Alaska State Fire Commission

Examples of job duties

Implements policies and program priorities decided by the State Fire Commission. Supervises development of the state's Master Plan for Fire Protection. Recruits, trains, supervises, reviews performance and evaluates professional and clerical staff. Responsible for, and may assist in preparation of the Annual Reports of the Commission. Testifies before legislative committees holding hearings as matters relating to the Commission.

Recommends policy and operational guidelines to the Commission and the Governor relative to all state agencies with fire protection responsibilities. Acts as the liaison between the Fire Commission and federal, state, local government and private industry with fire safety programs.

Fosters original research and inquiries into the unique causes of fire related to the arctic environment and methodologies of successful fire prevention and control under arctic conditions, including the development of an informational exchange program with other nations similarily situated within the Arctic Rim.

Acts as a focal point for all federal assistance and program liaison between the State of Alaska, and federal agencies pertaining to and prepares and administers annual budgets.

Planner V (two positions)

Alaska State Fire Commission

Examples of job duties

1. Responsible for major fire protection program planning of an original nature, that involves complex, interagency relationships of federal, military, state and local governments and private industry. Which have programs related to fire protection and advises the Director and the Commission concerning policy issues and guidelines.

2. Researches and drafts proposals that require executive and/or legislative actions.

3. Obtains, studies, and analyzes data, statistics, and other information concerning fire causes and develops recommendations leading toward increased fire safety.

4. Assists in the implementation of program policies and priorities as decided by the Commission, and for the state's Master Plan for fire protection.

There has been a great deal of discussion for alot of years concerning the need for a State Fire Commission in Alaska. I think there is no need to discuss Alaska's fire problem in great detail now. I think it is pretty well documented and is probably the worst per capita fire loss in any major portion of any western nation in the world. The fact is that for better than 25 years the Fire Service and other interested people in the State, particularly in the Legislature, have tried, on a piecemeal basis, to have some beneficial effect on that problem; to reduce it, to give people in Alaska the feeling that they can settle here and build their homes and start their businesses and have some reasonable expectation of not losing everything to a fire in the middle of the night at some point in the future. Thus far, very little has been accomplished in that direction.

For a great many years, any time any legislation was passed either at the whim of an individual legislator or at the request of some special interest group such as the Fire Service itself, the statute that was adopted once it was signed into Alaska law, was dumped in the State Fire Marshal's Office for that office to enforce or to conduct whatever activities were to be conducted. The reason it was dumped in the State Fire Marshal's Office was that for a great many years there was no other fire-related agency in state government. Therefore, everything was put in the State Fire Marshal's Office.

What has happened from this is that at the present time the Fire Marshal's Office has a great many facets of statutory authority for which they have no mechanism, no staffing, no expertise, no way at all of conducting any particular improvements in those activities or in those enforcement problems other than the things which are immediate priorities which have to be done, such as plan reviews and code enforcement and that type of activitiy. Other things, even though the statutory authority exists, are simply not done and never have been done. Whether this proves that the statutes were originally not required, or not necessary in the sense that people originally thought they were, or whether it simply is a loss of improvements that the public and the Fire Service has had to get used to and accommodate because it didn't work out the way it was intended, is an arguable point.

There is a conception in state government and in current state administration, virtually in every state in the union that there should not be any more boards and commissions in state administration than are absolutely necessary. They're costly, they very frequently are organized to do something and for one reason or another are not able to do the thing that they were originally established for and so therefore they are a burdensome part of state government and can be very easily a waste of money. But I think you have to be careful in saying that boards and commissions are not desirable and therefore we don't want any of them and we are not going to create any more because there is one single justification for a board or commission. If there is a demonstrated need for that board or commission and the activities which it should conduct and once the demonstrated need is established then the board and the commission is a justifiable enterprise as far as state government is concerned. Of course, the sole purpose of any of these things and the sole justification that you use in determining whether or not they should exist is whether or not there is direct benefit to the public, to the citizens of Alaska. If there is no direct benefit to the citizens of Alaska, then very likely the argument against the commission is justified. However to arbitrarily say that such boards or commissions should not exist without determining what the justifications are, what the benefits and improvements might be, that can be created by such a commission, I think is a political mistake. Because ultimately, whatever the problem is for which the commission is being created to solve, as time passes, it gets worse if there is no attempt, no organized and coordinated attempt, to solve the problem.

Now in the case of Alaska's fire losses, the statistics that are outlined in the Task Force Report of the Task Force on Fire Prevention and Control, which indicate that the people moving to Alaska have a 2 1/2 times better chance of burning up in a fire than they do in any other state in the union, that if they are in the ages of 19 to 25 it increases, if they're Native it increases, these kinds of things, as I said earlier will establish statistics. But the interesting thing about them is that they demonstrate a significant need to do something about it. So far everybody in Alaska has been very content to dump the fire problem in the hands of the Fire Service and to be very critical of the Fire Service when it has not been able to do anything except put out fires but is virtually helpless in educating people or in conducting activities to prevent the fire from occurring in the first place.

The state, I don't believe, can honestly take the position that there is a question as to whether state administration or state government should be involved in public fire protection at all. In recent years, in several past administrations, a position has been held that it has not been demonstrated that the state has any direct responsibility in public fire protection and that traditionally public fire protection is a local problem. Well, the state of course is losing a school on the average of one every two years, and it has a high priced operation of trying to protect state and private lands from wildlands fires. It has responsiblity for crash fire rescue services at airports, which has a direct effect on the possibility of the passengers on such aircraft surviving or not surviving an air crash. It has an indirect responsibility on marine fires particularly in cases where state vessels are involved or are responding on emergencies and encounter these types of situations. A great many of the Fish and Game control vessels and people like that may get involved with both off-shore and on-shore emergencies particularly in the Aleutian Chain and the Kodiak Island areas.

So if you assume that the state has some responsibility for public fire protection, both in terms of those statutory requirements for said activities that are built into such things as the airports, and if you assume that because of the tremendous amount of state property and state facilities scattered all over Alaska which create the fire problem, and which the state has dumped in somebody elses lap to take care of to protect, every little tiny fire department in every little tiny community in Alaska virtually has some state property which it is required to protect. Yet the state participates grudgingly in providing the wherewith al to provide that protection. The Legislature has I think in the past few years, done a reasonably good job in attempting to alleviate the problem. The unfortunate part of their activities is that it has too often been on the basis of being uninformed as to what is effective in solving the problem and what is just compounding it.

In a recent visit to one of the villages for the NW Mayor's Conference, observers there saw that the state-purchased firetrucks in state-purchased firehalls were sitting with the door of the firehall open and the snow drifted up into the building to the degree that the fire appartus could not have been pulled out, even assuming that it was able to have its motor started. Other documented incidents are quite common and are provided to anybody who wants to look at them. Of similar situations in other communities were fire apparatus which stood by unused when a fire occurred in a community simply because the people did not know how to use it and the state training had not the wherewithal to go and teach them how to use them. So the best intentions of the Legislature in providing that fire apparatus did nothing whatsoever to alleviate the local fire problem.

What is needed at this point in time is for an entity to exist to say to the Legislature or to the state administration on request that yes, this is the best thing that can be done for village X because of its characteristics, its lack of roads, its lack of solid bridges, inclement weather, the lack of facilities for housing vehicles in heated areas, the lack of sufficient men on a yearround basis and sufficient people in general to establish and maintain a fire department and so therefore what is needed are some other things such as public education and smoke detectors in the homes, portable fire extinguishers, portable fire pumps, that kind of activity. Not 70, 80, 90,000 dollar fire apparatus. But villagewide, on the other hand, the advice could be yes, this place has a fairly large population on a yearround basis, there is quite a road system, there is a domestic water system which can be used for hydrants, the bridges that cross the creeks and rivers are substantial and can handle a piece of fire apparatus and yes, there is a local desire to provide public fire protection in the community. So therefore the expenditure of state money for the purchase of a fire apparatus and conversion of a building into a fire station or the building of a fire station is justified and in the long run it will pay off. We won't then hear these war stories about firetrucks sitting in the river mud bogged down above the axles and probably to become monuments to somebody's lack of information, with the best intentions in the world.

So what is this all leading to? What it is leading to is that there is a distinct need in Alaska for the one thing that the Fire Service does not have to accomplish its purpose. By the Fire Service I mean the prevention people, the public education people, the suppression people, the wildlands people, the air crash people, the marine fire people, the whole broad spectrum of fire protection. Police enforcement activity is concentrated in the Department of Public Safety. With the Police Standards Council to assist, there is a focal point for all police activity in the State of Alaska. The same thing applies to the Department of Fish and Game and to the activities of the Department of Transportation and Public Facilities, as they relate to the marine highways and the airports. The focal point is right there within that one established department. In looking at public fire protection on the other hand there is some excess of 20 departments or agencies in state government which have something or other to do with public fire protection. There is no coordinated system between them. When the Fire Service needs answers to fire problems or has fire questions it does not have ready access to the people with the expertise. They do not very frequently even know who to contact in what agency and what the address and phone number are, and that kind of thing. Looking at the agency's point of view, they have no way of knowing from one day to the next who the fire chief is in a community or who the city manager is in a community, or who the mayor is in a community. They work very closely with fire departments for a period of time and then the fire chief changes and the whole thing is out the window and everybody has to start all over again.

All of this and even more brings the problems out to the degree that a great number of people are spending great amounts of money in Alaska to do something about the horrendous fire problem, but without coordinating with other agencies and without any policy or guidelines that enable them to work effectively in that area. A case in point, some years ago the Legislature quite rightfully appropriated a little over 7 million dollars to build five Regional Fire Training Centers for training firefighters. Well, anybody knows that it doesn't do any good to dump firetrucks in a village and expect people to fight fires with them unless they are trained. But what the Legislature did not do was give the state agencies which are participating in the Regional Training Center Program the guidelines and polices which would determine what their activities in relation to these centers was supposed to be. So, therefore, everybody in the various regions of the state that was looking to state government for leadership in the training of emergency services personnel in the regional centers was quite dissappointed. So, there is no overall effective training system in Alaska for the training of fire service, EMS personnel, and even police. Therefore the state, while it did cause the training facilities to be built, stopped short of ensuring effective programs to go into those facilities.

Some years ago, and not all that long ago, one of the legislators from a rural part of the state, submitted a Bill which he wanted to have passed which would provide breathing apparatus for use by village firefighters; I think nine villages in his region. Well, the idea is that they can go into a burning building and be able to breathe effectively and any toxic gases that are produced by the fire or are in the area from other causes, would not endanger their lives because they would have this breathing apparatus. Because there was nobody readily available for the legislator to make inquiries of, or because he chose not to do so, whatever, he did not realize that three things made his program more dangerous perhaps than the fire itself would be:

1) Who was to train the people to use the breathing apparatus? Breathing apparatus has been known to kill firefighters who did not know how to wear it or use it or troubleshoot it when anything happened while they were wearing it.

2) When air bottles were being filled, there were two choices. Either the air bottles would have to be flown into Anchorage, Fairbanks, or Juneau to be filled with pure air or the local people would pump in whatever air they could. There were no standards to say that the air that was going into the bottles would be pure breathing air. This again, is a hazard to anyone who is going to wear it.

3) Who did the maintenance on that breathing apparatus? It's a tricky, very delicate system so that people who have to be specifically trained should be the only ones to handle it. In most fire departments first echelon maintenance is done on breathing apparatus. It is then shipped to the factory for anything more that needs to be done. So who is going to do this in the village or who is going to determine that it needed maintenance?

When all this was explained to the legislator, he realized that perhaps what he was going to do was not the way to do it and he withdrew the Bill. So in that instance, the problem was caught. But in other instances it has not been.

What is needed is a focal point for public fire protection in Alaska. That's what it is, pure and simple. A State Fire Commission is a focal point for all facets of public fire protection. Now the activities of the State Fire Commission may range from making recommendations to agencies with information for their budgets, or information for their own policies and procedures which they recommend to the various department commissioners. They do not have either the expertise or the staff to develop the information they need and so this is a function of the State Fire Commission. A State Fire Commission can say yes, we have looked at the air crash problem in Alaska and we recommend that in your planning you do this or that, and that's something that the people who are responsbile for air crash firefighting in the state-operated airports maybe don't know at this point in time because they don't have the expertise or the staff time.

In other areas, two functions of state administration the State Fire Marshal's Office, Division of Fire Prevention, and the State Fire Service Training Program should be placed directly under the State Fire Commission and policies for both of those programs should be developed by the State Fire Commission and implemented in the functions of those two agencies. The State Fire Training Program has been in effect for over 15 years and has never had a single policy statement from state government indicating what it was it was supposed to do, nor were there any guidelines by which to do it. As a result of this, the State Fire Training Program is not a great deal better off now than it was when it started 15 years ago. This is not to say that the program is not needed or does not have effectiveness and that it does not have a great many things to do. But it functions in a vacuum. There is no policy group that the program can go to for any indication that some sort of training or education is felt to be valuable to the people of Alaska or to the Fire Service or rescue personnel in Alaska, therefore, we would like to implement this program because of these benefits and those advantages. There is nobody to that effect for them to go to. The Fire Marshal's Office, as indicated earlier, has a vast amount of responsibility and not a great many resources. I think alot of the activities that the Fire Marshal's Office has statutory authority for can be handled by a State Fire Commission, thereby releasing the Fire Marshal to do those things which are of the greatest priority for his staff and his capabilities.

The Fire Service has a great deal of difficulty dealing with people in the commercial fields, the contractors, the wildlands people, the oil company people, the air crash people, all of these. This is because there is no common ground for them to meet. By having a representative group of these various entities on the State Fire Commission, it is a common group where mutual problems can be discussed and policies can be made and problems settled probably a great deal easier and with considerable savings in money beyond the way that such things are done now, if they are done at all.

A State Fire Commission, like all boards and commissions, is subject to the state's sunset laws. If the commission is not functioning the way it should function, if it is not producing the benefits which are anticipated by the Fire Service and in the Task Force Report, then when its sunset review comes in 1989, it can be disbanded. We can say all right, we tried the State Fire Commission and it didn't do the job so therefore we've got to look further.

The case in point, the key item here, is that everything else that there has been any capability to try has been tried. It has been demonstrated over the years that none of the things that have been tried have had any significant value in solving Alaska's fire problem. The State Fire Commission would be the first coordinated effort involving a multitude of disciplines, settling down and saying all right, there is a need for architects to look at fire prevention more seriously in designing structures. There is a need for contractors to do more in providing more fire safe structures in Alaska. There is a need for the school systems to take a closer look at the design of their schools so that they don't burn to the ground once every two years. There is a need for assisting the Health and Social Services people with particular recommendations in their hospital reviews; and they have requested this. The same thing applies for the Department of Transportation and Public Facilities, the Department of Labor and their OSHA Standards, and for the Department of Natural Resources and their wildlands problems.

All of this, on a recommendation basis for some agencies and on a policy setting basis for others, is a focal point that I think would more than pay for itself over the years. It is not, however, a thing that you can sit down and say all right if we have a State Fire Commission, we will save this much money, and that many lives and in the second year we'll increase that by 6% or 20% or whatever.

I think it is realistic to say that the State Fire Commission is going to have to be a gamble, it's going to have to be something that the State is going to say all right, if we lose $200,000 over a year's period in the cost of a State Fire Commission, then that is nothing compared to the amount of money we are going to lose from the fires. If the State Fire Commission can do one or two things each year which help reduce our losses from fire it will more than pay for itself. If however the legislation that creates it is lacking in the teeth that are necessary to make it function effectively, if it does not have the full support of the Legislature and the full support of the administration, it is doomed to failure before it even starts, because it is going to step on some peoples toes. The only way that we are going to solve the public fire problem in Alaska is to go through a little bit of pain here and there until people understand that the conditions in Alaska, from the standpoint of fire deaths and fire lossses, are intolerable at this point. What is also intolerable is the fact that nobody has done anything about it virtually since World War II. That's 40 years ago.

The problem is not going to solve itself. So, I guess my view of it is that a State Fire Commission has an excellent chance if it is set up and supported both by adequate staff and adequate funding which is being requested and recommended at the current time. It must be understood by all concerned that this is not an advisory committee. It has to have a certain degree of authority that adds weight to its recommendations both in those instances where it makes policy for such programs as the Division of Fire Prevention or the State Fire Training program and where it makes specific recommendations to other agencies where its connections are not quite so direct, following adequate research, to solve specific kinds of problems and make broad recommendations for improvements for existing functions in various agencies. It is my belief that it should be empowered to make recommendations to federal government agencies functioning in Alaska as well, simply because they are not without blame in the Alaska fire problem.

As far as the commission itself is concerned, its senior officer should be an elected commission president or chairman with a vice chairman and a commission totalling about nine people as recommended in the existing legislation. There should also be a paid staff to support the commission's activities and to implement those activities and requirements that the commission determines in its quarterly meetings. The executive director should be the focal point for all commission activities and he should be given adequate support staff consisting at least of a research analyst. This position is absolutely necessary to gather facts and figures and to determine approaches to solving problems which very few people have the expertise to do. Also adequate support staff is necessary so that commission reports, recommendations, and policy statements can be produced on an adequate basis and within appropriate timeframes. All of this of course costs money. But so do the fire losses and the 30 to 35 individuals a year who die in fires in this state.

Its dumb to say that you cannot solve this problem by creating a Fire Commission because the state is short of money this year and there are other priorities. The State Fire Commission would have to function at current recommended budget levels for at least ten years to spend as much money as the state has spent in the last five or six years in purchasing fire apparatus and equipment for communities that have made no successful use of it. This is an approach that has a far better chance of functioning and producing the desired results than anything that has been done so far and it should be given a chance.

Dear Senator Abood:

I am writing in support of Senate Bill No. 209 and Senate Bill No. 210 which establishes and funds the Alaska State Fire Commission.

I believe that through this commission all areas of fire safety can be pulled together and we can reduce the terrible loss of life and injuries that Alaska experiences every year.

Your support of these bills is greatly appreciated.

Dear Senator Abood:

You have before you Senate Bills 209 and 210, two very important pieces of legislation to the Alaska Fire Service.

Senate Bill 209, enabling legislation to establish a fire commission and Senate Bill 210, to fund the commission, will do more to combat the horrendous fire loss in the State of Alaska than the combined capital improvement projects for fire trucks in the past five years.

The 5-year efforts of the Task Force on Fire Prevention and Control identified methods to effectively impact the fire loss in Alaska, to create a more cost effective and cooperative operation of the present state agencies. This will cost the State of Alaska less money to do a more effective job for fire protection and education. The $261,000 request is less than the cost of two fire trucks or one fire station.

The fire commission will allow you, the legislator, a valuable information resource and will save you valuable time in making decisions effecting the Fire Service. It will give the communities in your district a central agency to assist them with their fire problems. The fire commission can, and will, identify where the declining revenues will do the most good, for the most people, in the State of Alaska. We must continue to reduce the fire problem through intelligent expenditure of funds by better public education, training, proper code enforcement, and intelligent expenditure of capital improvement funds.

A fire commission may not be as effective as we foresee it to be, but without question it will be better than the present system at less cost to the people of Alaska.

Sincerely,

Memo to: Chairman Honorable Senator Mitchell Abood

Subject: Alaska State Fire Commission

Please acknowledge my support of the Honorable Governor Bill Sheffield's special task force on fire prevention and control. Upon reading the study written by this special task force; published in December 1984, I am in agreement that the forming of the Alaska State Fire Commission is in the best interest of all Alaskans.

As a member of a volunteer fire fighting organization I feel that this commission would be an asset to the organization and the community we protect. The concept of this commission being the central focal point for all aspects of fire prevention and control will aid us in many ways. The information being managed by the commission will assist in education, planning, research & development, and will provide the people in our state with an excellent source of information on fire prevention and control in Alaska.

Please continue your support by adopting and making into law senate bills SB209 and SB210

The cover photo shows the now restored 1907 Ahreus Continental steam-powered fire engine which began service in Valdez in October 1907. Retired in 1935, the steamer deteriorated over the years. Chief Tom McAllister and Andy Swift of the Valdez Fire Department began restoration efforts in 1980. A horse drawn unit, the steamer was rated to pump 700 gallons per minute which compares well to modern firefighting equipment. This beautifully restored steam pumper — one of only five known in existence — now, almost completely operational, may be seen at the Heritage Center Museum in Valdez.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This Task Force report represents the efforts of many people. Without their assistance, the report would not be nearly as complete at it is, nor would it reflect the broad scope of the recommendations that it contains. Although the Task Force members provided the scope of the work and the bulk of the recommendations, there were many additional people who provided data, specific information, and support services that together made this report possible.

In addition to Task Force members, special thanks is due the fire chiefs from throughout the state who graciously and constructively provided additional ideas, and reviewed draft concepts at the Valdez meeting of both professional Fire Service organizations, the later teleconference review of the initial draft involving the Executive Committee of both organizations, and finally their review of the final draft of the entire report.

Specific information of great value was provided by many people. Gordon Brunton of the Fire Marshal's Office in Juneau provided fire loss data and graphs. Jack Wilcock and Scott Wolfe of the Department of Natural Resources provided data and developed the recommendations pertaining to wildlands fires. Mark Johnson in the Department of Health and Social Services in Juneau provided information about the statewide Emergency Medical Services program. Chief Ron Coleman of San Clemente, California, provided specific experience-based data about home sprinklers through Task Force member Chief Al Judson of Juneau. Jason Elson of Kenai provided information about the Association of Fire and Arson Investigators. Tom Take, Program Coordinator at the Anchorage Fire Training Center, provided specific information about several program aspects and provided the cover photograph. Leigh Gallagher, of the State Fire Service Training Program, Juneau, provided specific information about that program and the training centers statewide. Substantial time and effort came from Jim Messick, the Department of Public Safety, who was the editor and brought together all the information that resulted in this report.

Throughout its many meetings and planning sessions, the Task Force was ably co-chaired by Mr. Sam Neal, the State Fire Marshal.

Finally, special thanks to Beverly Barger in the Governor's Office in Juneau, and Betty Neill, State Fire Marshal's Office in Anchorage, who undertook the task of typing this report, in addition to their normal duties, and to Ms. Louise Mundell, of the Governor's Office in Juneau who provided a thorough proofreading prior to final typing and printing.

INTRODUCTION

This report represents the results of three months of intensive effort by the Alaska Fire Prevention and Control Task Force.

The Task Force was created by the 1984 Legislature, to finish the work of the first Task Force of the same name, that was not funded for its third year. Nevertheless the group published the now well known "Alaska on Fire," an excellent publication which was the first definitive effort to analyze Alaska's fire problem and propose corrective measures. The group's final report never was published due to lack of legislative funding for their third and final year.

The second Task Force was created by the 1984 Legislature to finish the work of the initial Task Force, and was given 120 days - to the end of October 1984 - to complete its work.

Task Force members represent a wide spectrum of agencies with fire safety responsibilities including the two major fire service organizations in Alaska, the State Fire Service Training Program, the State Fire Marshal, the Department of Community and Regional Affairs, Department of Labor, the Governor's Office, and the Emergency Medical Services, which are often reflected in the responsibilities of local fire departments.

The Task Force has attempted to look at the entire fire problem in the state -- structural, marine, aircraft, and wildlands fires, but the extremely short time involved precluded extensive treatment of other than structural fires. Analysis of marine, aircraft, and to a large extent, wildlands fires, awaits further effort. Similarly, a description of federal agencies in Alaska with fire service responsibilities which would have been included in Section II, was not included because of time constraints.

The legislation creating the Task Force required it to complete the work of the first Task Force which was to:

* Provide a detailed account of the fire loss problem in Alaska;
* Identify and define the roles and relationships of agencies in the state that have fire protection programs and responsibilities; and,
* Recommend organizational modifications to improve fire protection.

In addition, the new Task Force is to:

* Request and review information concerning the causes and nature of fire losses in the state;

* Study the activities of the various fire protection agencies in the state; and,

* Submit a report to the Governor and the Legislature making recommendations to improve fire prevention and control in the state, identify methods to implement the recommendations, and to review the progress of the implementation, and propose legislation for recommendations needing legislative action.

To meet these legislative objectives, the report has been divided into seven sections. The first examines the fire problem in Alaska in terms of where fires, deaths and injuries occur, fire occurrence in urban vs rural areas, comparisons with the rest of the country, and finally on an international level.

The second section responds to the enabling legislation by describing the agencies in Alaska with fire-related responsibilities. Although the intent of the Task Force was to include federal, state, and local agencies, time constraints precluded describing federal agencies, as well as a complete examination of wildlands fire agencies.

The Goals and Objectives Section -- the focus of the report -- sets forth numerous "Approaches" whereby the fire problem can be reduced. The intent has been to include the most important aspects, but inevitably some desirable actions may not have been included due to the short time span available to the Task Force. Each "Approach" has been underlined for emphasis.

The next section sets forth a timetable and cost estimates for the implementation of the Approaches. Both aspects must be viewed as estimates, subject to later refinement, as the various recommendations are adopted.

Parts five and six recap the proposals requiring Legislative and Executive Action, followed by the last section which proposes a means "to review the progress of the implementation" as required by the enabling legislation.

The Alaska Fire Prevention and Control Task Force hopes this report is instrumental and useful in reducing fire losses throughout the state.

THE FIRE PROBLEM IN ALASKA

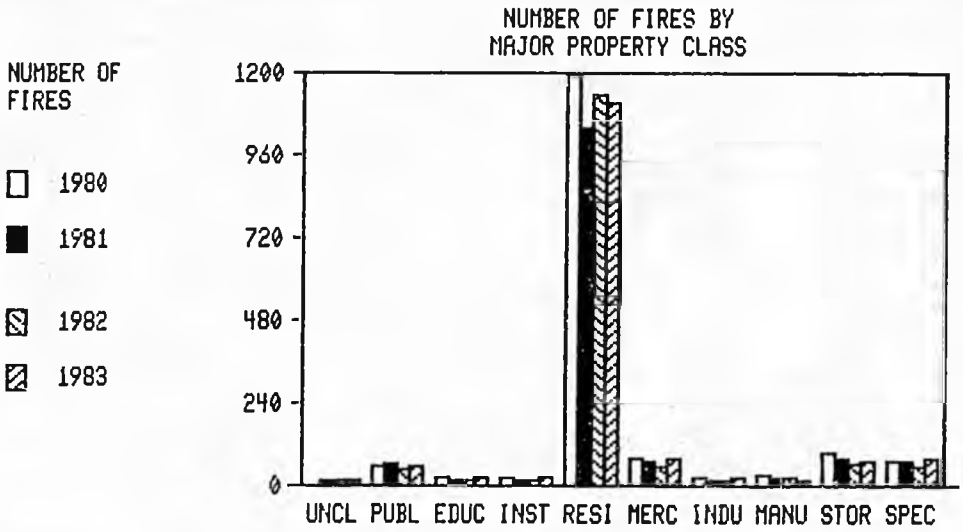
THE FIRE PROBLEM IN ALASKA

A. Structural Fire

Any overview of Alaska's fire protection program must include some analysis of the problem that it seeks to solve. This report, which is intended to complete the work of the first Task Force, does not wish to duplicate the work and the findings of the earlier report in terms of the details of the fire problem. However, a brief capsulized review is appropriate, particularly in view of the availability of the most recent data.[1]

The following graphs are intended to pictorialize various aspects of fire incidence, location, and several views of fire losses. In addition to the raw data portrayed, there is an effort to interpret what the data seems to be indicating. Accuracy of the data is good, although not perfect, given the sporadic reporting of some of the smaller departments, and the inherent difficulties in relating the circumstances of a given fire to a standardized data format. However, the extent of inaccurate or incomplete data is not expected to be statistically significant.

CHART 1



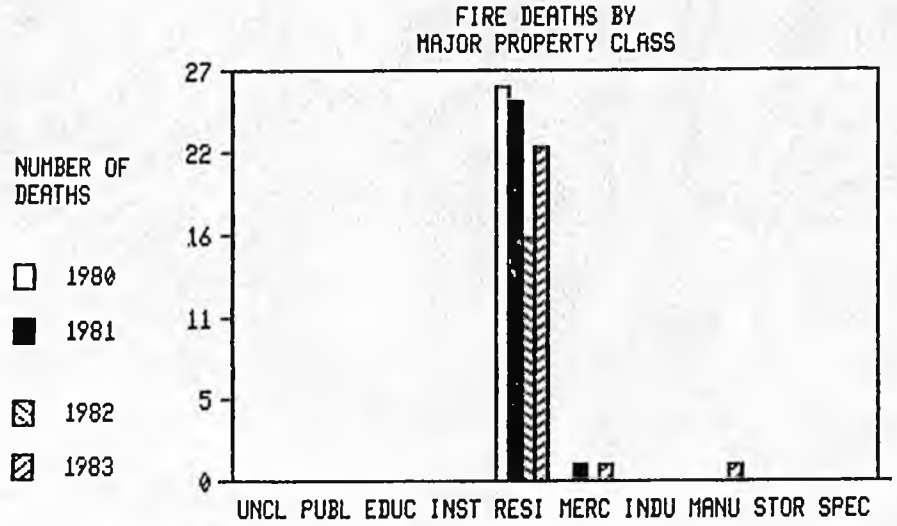
The largest number of fires by property classification occurred in residential structures. No other property class comes even close.

---

[1] Information and the computer generated graphs were prepared by Gordon Brunton, Assistant State Fire Marshal in Juneau, using Alaska National Fire Incident Reporting System (ANFIRS) data. Abbreviations used are as follow:

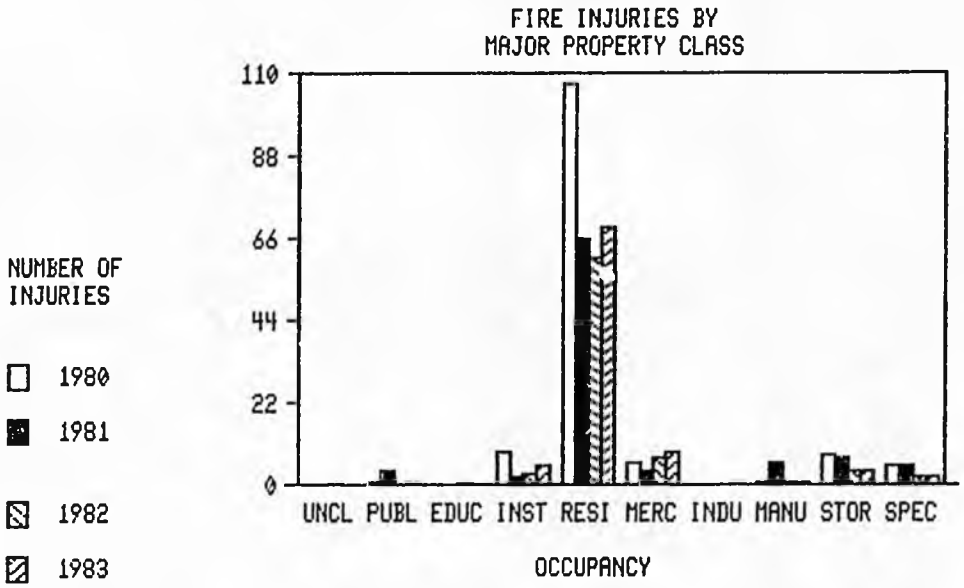
UNCL - Unclassified
PUBL - Public Assembly
EDUC - Educational
INST - Institutional
RESI - Residential
MERC - Mercantile (Stores/Offices)
INDU - Industrial
MANU - Manufacturing
STOR - Storage
SPEC - Special

CHART 2



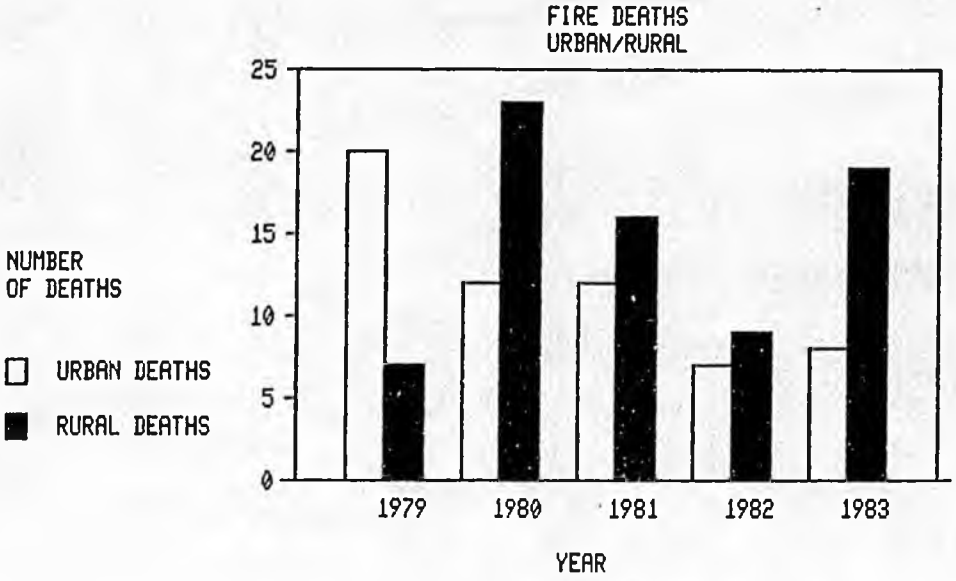
The type of structural property in which the overwhelming number of lives are lost is residential in nature. No other type structure comes even close.

CHART 3



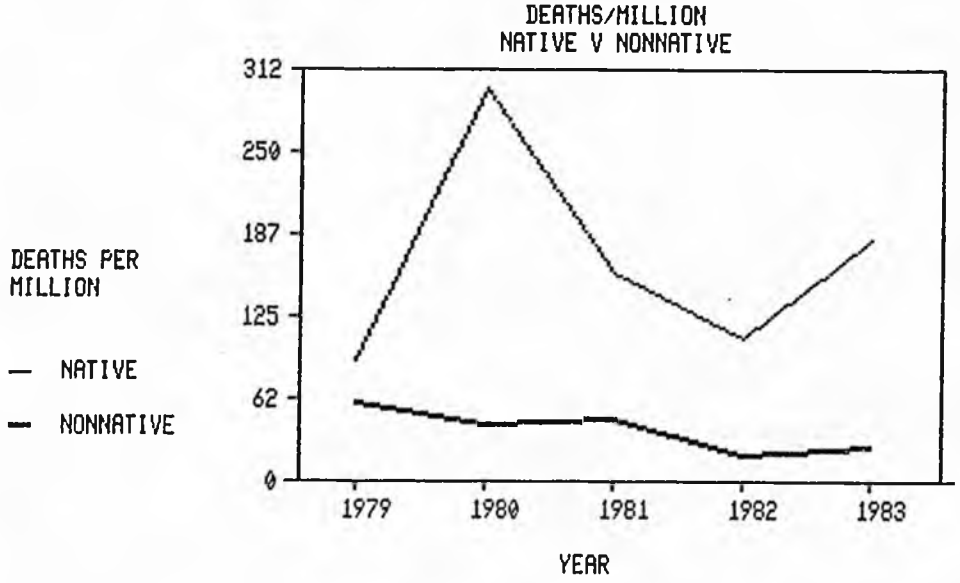
The type of property in which the overwhelming number of fire related injuries occur is residential. Although all other types of structures record very minor numbers, no other type of structure comes even close to the number of fire related injuries that occur in residential structures.

CHART 4



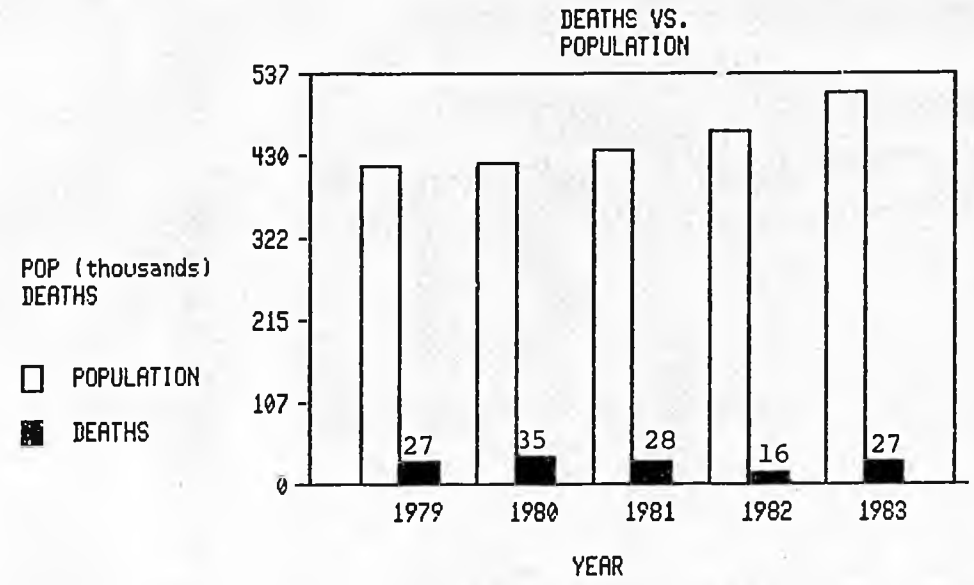
Analyzing Alaska's fire deaths in urban and rural locations shows that in four of the last five years, significantly more deaths have occurred in rural than in urban areas, despite the fact that far fewer people reside in rural areas.

CHART 5



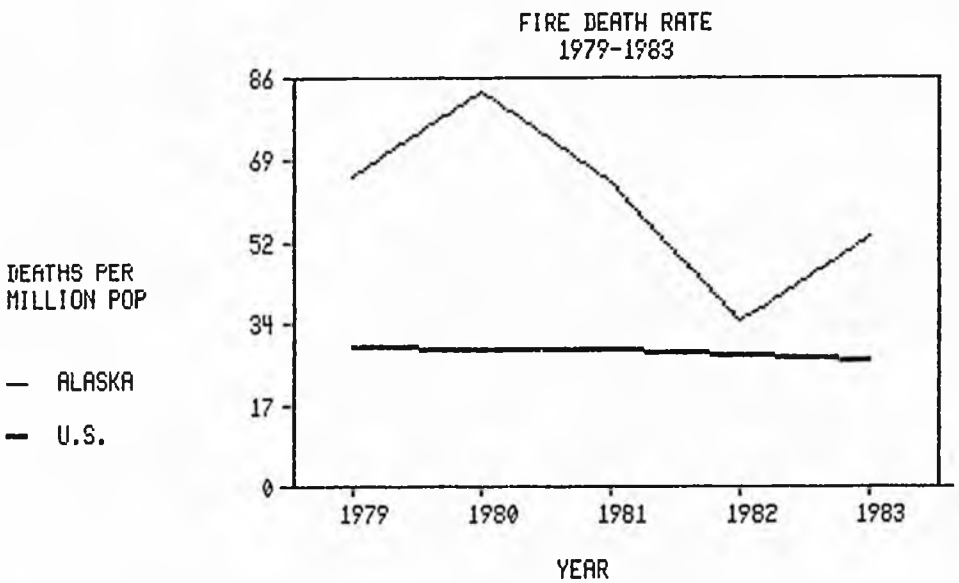
Although the Native deaths per million population fluctuate dramatically, their death rate has always exceeded that of non-natives during the last five years. The non-native death rate shows a slight trend downward over the past five years, and is closely comparable to the average U.S. fatality rate for 1982 and 1983.

CHART 6



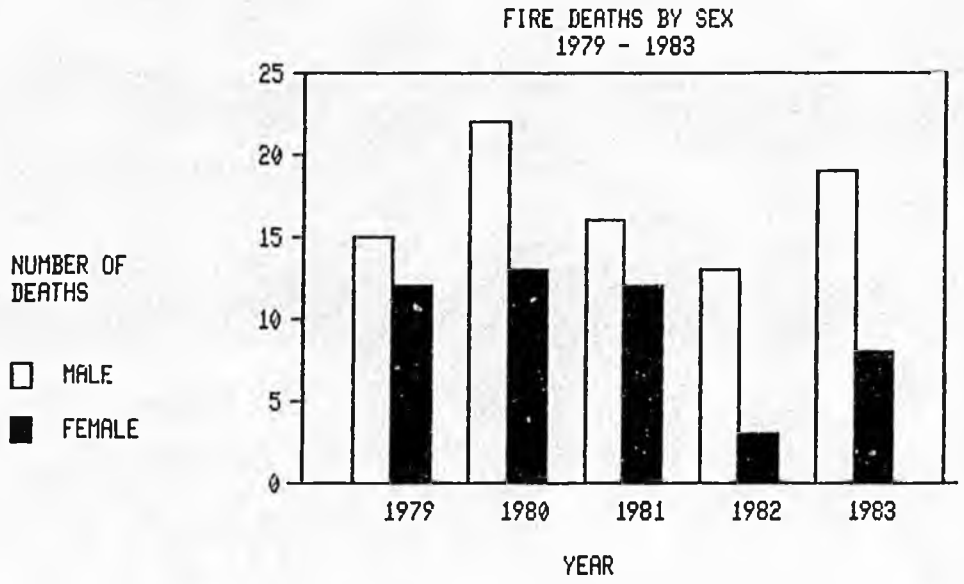
Fire deaths per se, in Alaska present no clear-cut trends, but since population is increasing, the number of fire deaths viewed as a percentage of total population appears to be decreasing.

CHART 7



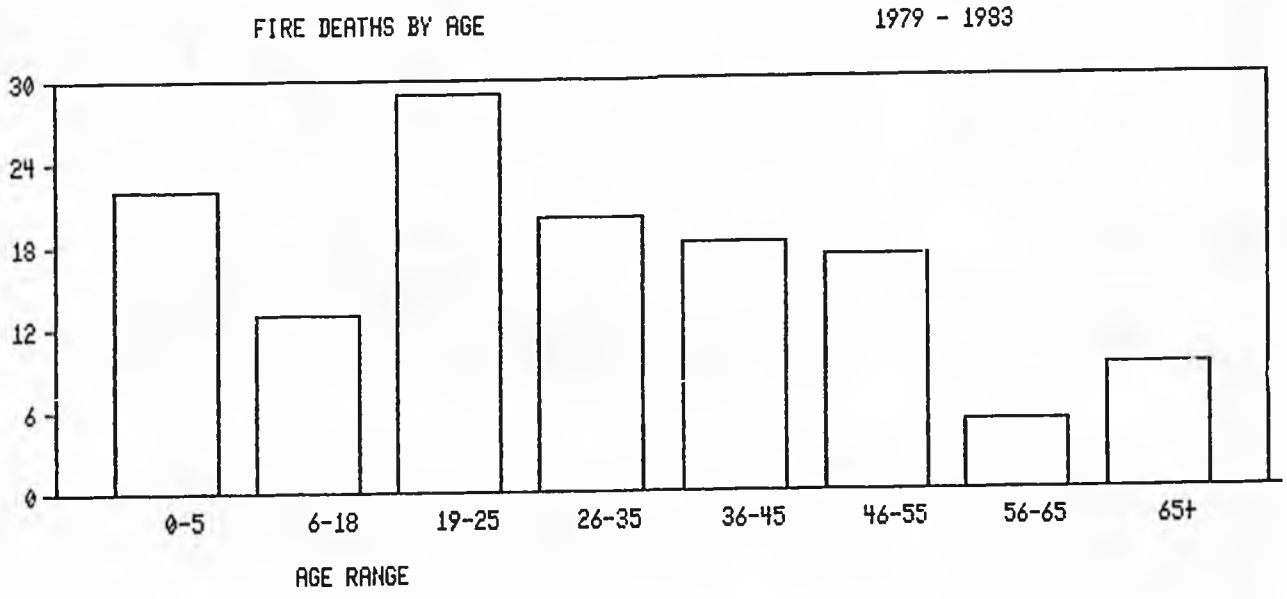
The rate of deaths due to fire in Alaska has consistently exceeded the rate of the rest of the country. The large variations in Alaska's rate is due to a relatively small data base, while the large data base of the U.S. tends to even out the fluctuations. Note that the death rate of the U.S. is decreasing only very slowly.

CHART 8



The data from the five year period very definitely portray the fact that males are at higher risk in terms of fire deaths than females. The exact reasons for this phenomenon have not been researched, but occupational hazards, such as working with flammable liquids may contribute to the higher male deaths due to fire.

CHART 9

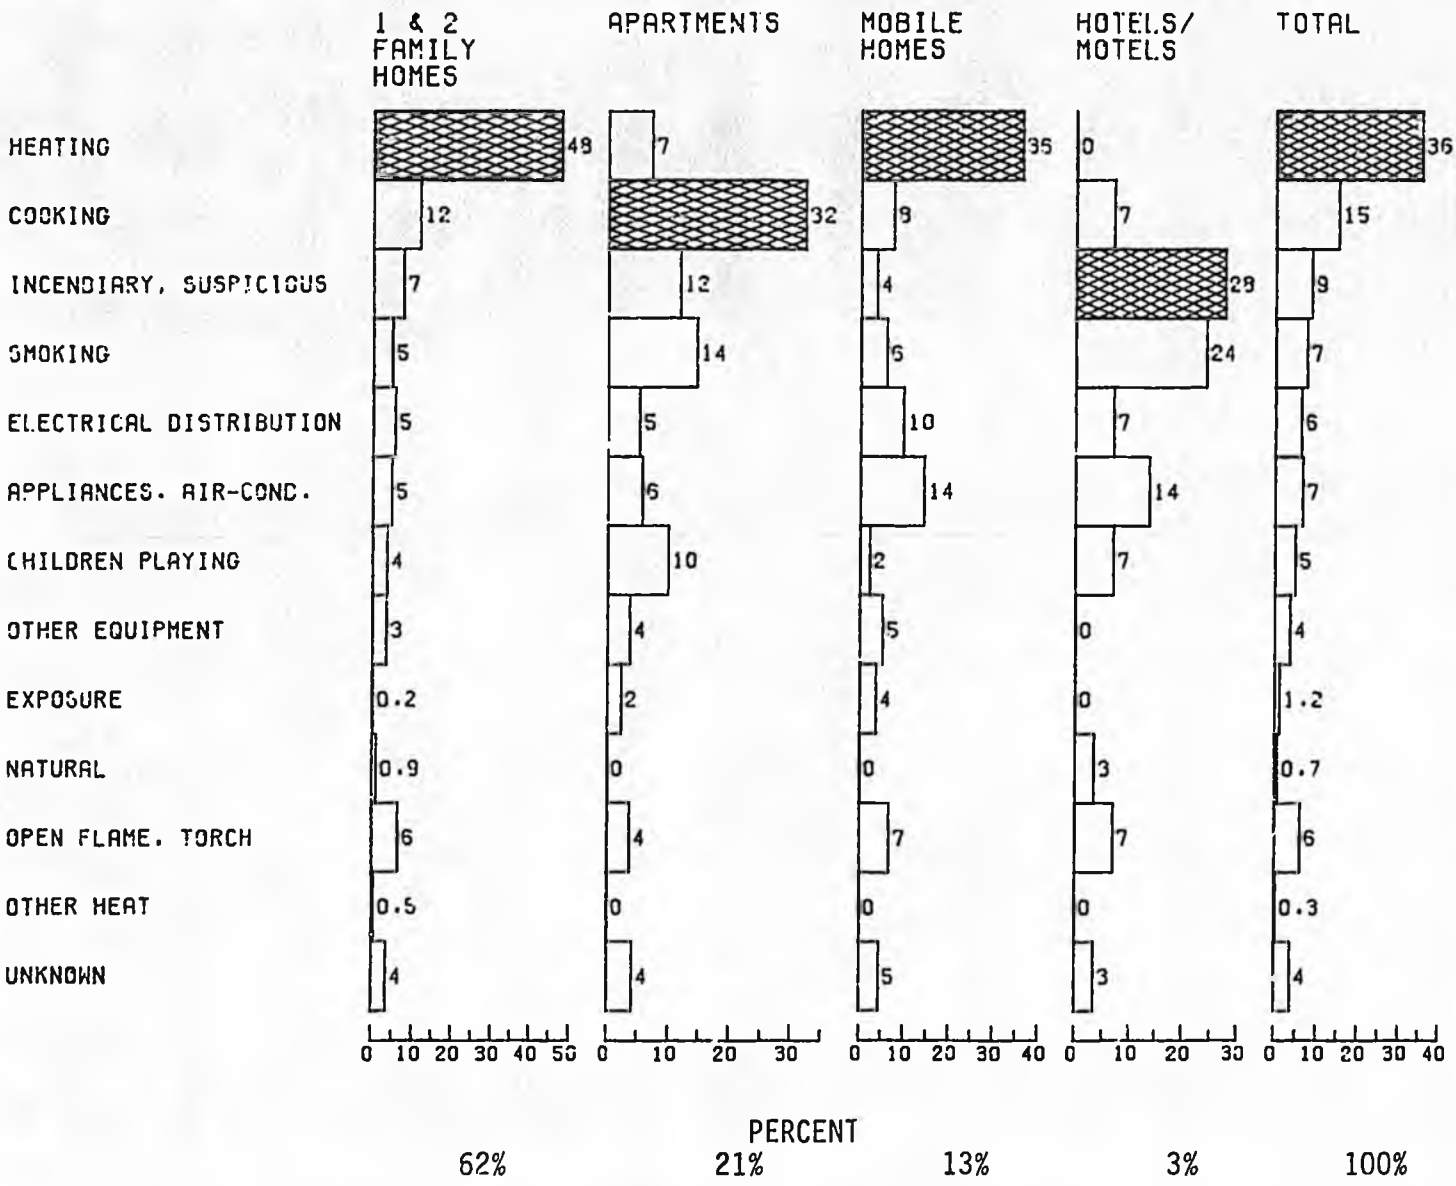


The five year compilation of fire deaths as a function of age cohorts clearly shows that the 19-25 years age group is the greatest at risk. The second highest -- the 0-5 year age cohort -- is more easily understood since babies and small children have greater difficulty fleeing a burning home.

CAUSES OF RESIDENTIAL FIRES

CHART 10 [2]

TOTAL NFIRS FOR STATE OF ALASKA
BASED ON 83 DEPARTMENTS



The data above shows causes of fire for selected types of residential structures. Heating caused almost half the fires in single family and duplex homes which accounted for 62% of the fires, and slightly less than that in mobile homes, which comprised only 13% of the fires, while cooking was the primary cause in apartment houses. Most fires in hotels and motels were determined to be incendiary and suspicious causes.

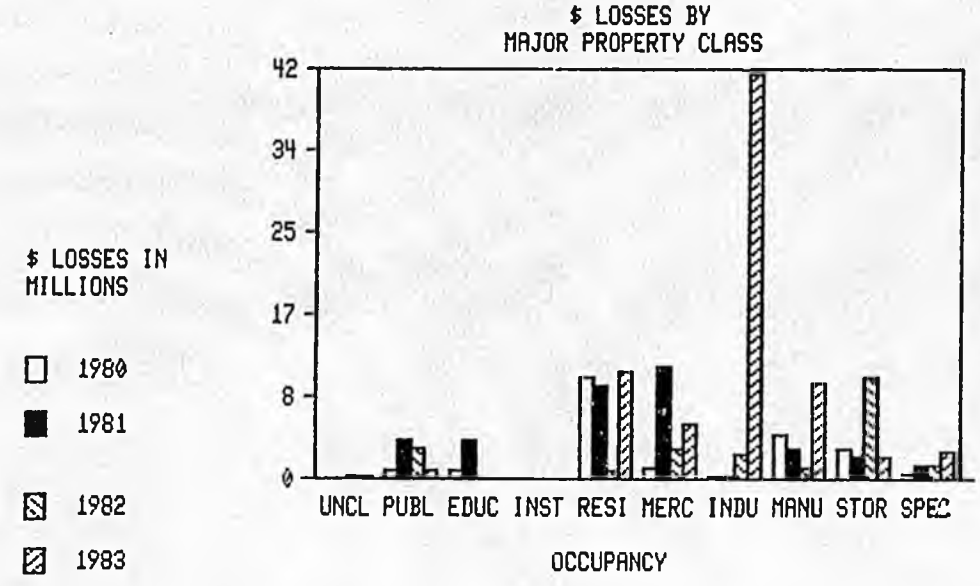
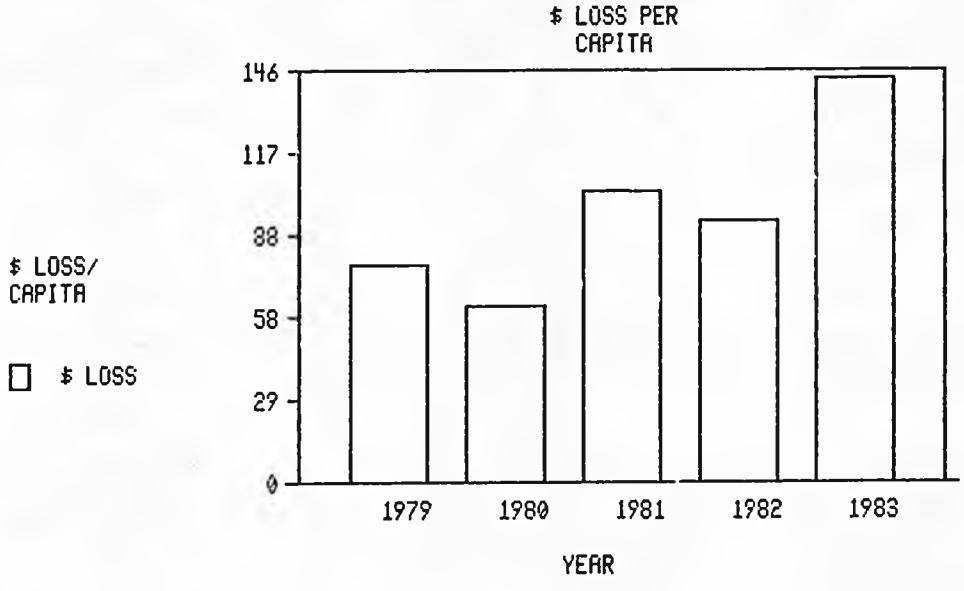
CHART 12



Property losses resulting from fire are rather widely spread among the several types of property classes. The large industrial loss in 1983 was the gas compression plant in Prudhoe Bay which approached $40 million . As dollar loss estimation is very subjective, the losses should be reviewed for the trends, rather than for actual values.

CHART 13



Property losses per capita seem to display a rather consistent cyclic pattern. The 1983 loss undoubtedly occurred as the result of the large gas compression plant fire in Prudhoe, and barring a similar major fire in 1984, the 1984 per capita loss due to fire should be less than 1983. Despite a "high-low" cycle emerging over the six-year period, the "lows" continue to get higher, as do the "highs," which tends to support the conclusion that per capita fire loss is increasing, in spite of increasing population.

"SCOREBOARD" FOR THE STATE OF ALASKA 1982

CHART 14

	DEATH RATE PER MILLION POPULATION [4]
ALASKA ACTUAL COUNT	38.83
NFPA SURVEY NATIONAL ESTIMATE	26.68

There were 16 fire deaths reported in Alaska in 1982.

	Deaths Per 1000 Fires	Injuries Per 1000 Fires	Dollar Loss Per Fire	Res. Deaths Per 1000 Res. Fires
Alaska/NFIRS Figures	5.13	28.6	$4,088	17.09
NFIRS National Figures	2.97	32.7	$3,744	8.6

Alaska's fire death rate is one of the highest in the country. The death rate per 1000 fires, average dollar loss per fire, and rate of residential fire deaths per 1000 residential fires, are considerably higher than the average for the United States. Although high prices in Alaska may contribute to the high estimate of dollar loss per fire, the stark reality of fire deaths cannot be similarly rationalized.

[4] Data from an unpublished report by the U. S. Fire Administration, FEMA, concerning Alaska's participation in the federally sponsored, Community-based Fire Prevention Program in 1984.

FIRE LOSS IN THE UNITED STATES DURING 1983

The following is a very brief summary of fire loss estimates in the United States during 1983, primarily to discern loss trends, and to permit some very general comparisons with Alaska's losses.[5]

> The estimated 1983 civilian fire death toll in the United States was a decrease of 1.7 per cent, from the 1982 figure. Fires in the home (one- and two-family dwellings and apartments) decreased by 3.1 per cent from the 1982 figure. These reductions continue the downward trend of recent years and represent a 22 per cent cumulative decrease since 1978 in home fire fatalities. Although changes in statistical methodology make it difficult to compare rates over time, it appears that the 1983 figures may represent a new low for home fire fatalities. However, fire deaths in the home still accounted for about 79 per cent of all fire deaths in 1983, and home fire safety education and prevention activities must continue.
> Fire fatalities due to incendiary or suspicious fires failed to follow the overall trend and were up 6.6 per cent. In all other respects, however, America's arson problem improved. The number of structure fires of incendiary or suspicious origin dropped 5.4 per cent to a level not seen since the early or mid-1970s. Property loss from these fires dropped even more, by 11.4 per cent.
> Property loss from all reported fires was up slightly, by 2.6 per cent. Property loss from structure fires also was up slightly, by 1.7 per cent. Both of these totals represented much larger increases in property loss per fire -- 11.9 and 10.7 per cent, respectively -- but the loss per fire adjusted for inflation remained fairly steady, as it has over the past five years.
> The number of fires reported to fire departments dropped a significant 8.3 per cent continuing a recent trend that has produced a cumulative 22 per cent reduction since 1980. The number of reported fires in structures had a similar 8.2 per cent decline.
> Other noteworthy findings of the 1983 NFPA survey are as follows:

---

5 All estimates are based on data reported to the NFPA by fire departments that responded to the 1983 National Fire Experience Survey, as excerpted from the article that appeared in the September 1984 issue of Fire Journal, p. 49 (Karter, Michael J. and Joan L. Gancarski).

* Civilian injuries due to reported fires increased 2.5 %. Underreporting is known to be much higher for fire injuries -- even for some serious injuries -- than for fire fatalities.

* The average loss per fire was $2,534 in 1983. The average loss per structure fire was $6,708.

* The South leads the nation in civilian fire fatalities per million population and property loss due to fire per capita. The Northeast leads the country in fire incidents per thousand population and civilian fire injuries per million population. These patterns have remained constant for many years.

* The largest communities (at least 250,000 population) and the smallest communities (less than 5,000 population) have the highest fire incidents and fire fatality rates.

* Fire fatalities in all types of residential properties declined 2.4 %, but continued to account for the largest share (81.4 %) of all fire deaths.

* The remaining fire fatalities occurred in nonresidential structures (4.6 %), vehicles (12.2 %), and outside areas (1.8 %).

* Line-of-duty fire-fighter fatalities declined 9.4 per cent.

ANALYSIS

From the much larger data base available thru the ANFIRS, the foregoing charts were chosen because they seem to portray the most significant data elements needed to obtain a broad overview of the structural fire problem in Alaska. From these data, it appears possible to draw some broad conclusions, and perhaps even a "profile" of Alaska's fire problem.

The number of fire deaths during the last five years has stayed rather consistent -- about 27 to 28 per year. Viewed in terms of deaths per million population, Alaska's death rate is substantially higher than the average for the United States.

The greatest causes of residential fires are heating and cooking. Heating itself caused the greatest number of fires, the most deaths, the most injuries, and the highest dollar loss of any of the other fire causes.

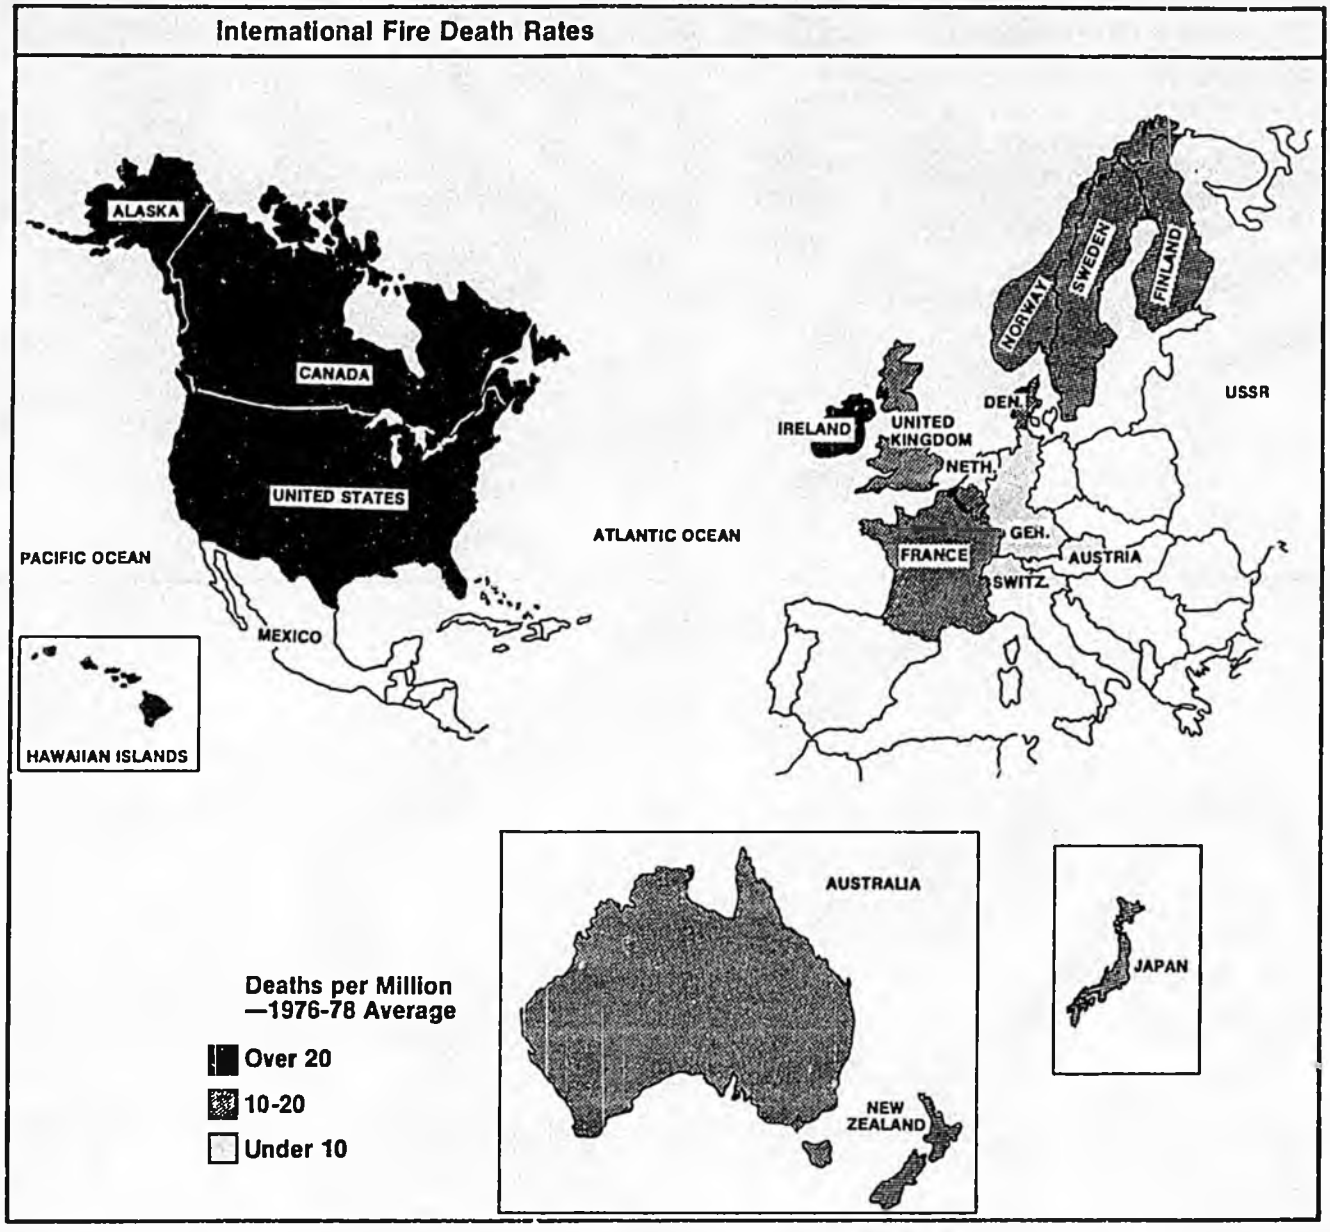
Fire-related property losses are about evenly divided among residential, mercantile, manufacturing, and storage buildings. When viewed as the loss per capita, Alaska property losses fluctuate, but are unmistakably climbing higher.

From this broad overview of the fire problem in Alaska lie the specific elements of information that can be presented as part of a fire prevention program designed to have the greatest potential for reduction of fire losses.

From the foregoing, Alaska's fire problem might be profiled as follows:

FIRE OCCURS MOST FREQUENTLY IN RESIDENTIAL STRUCTURES; ALMOST ALL DEATHS AND MOST INJURIES OCCUR AS THE RESULT OF RESIDENTIAL FIRES; FIRE DEATHS IN RURAL AREAS EASILY EXCEED THOSE IN URBAN AREAS; THE FIRE DEATH RATE FOR NATIVES SUBSTANTIALLY EXCEEDS THE FIRE DEATH RATE OF NON-NATIVES, AND PERSONS AGED 19-25 AND MALES ARE THE GROUPS AT HIGHEST RISK OF DEATH DUE TO FIRE.

CHART 15 [6]



This Chart portrays the fire death rates in broad terms for the United States, Canada, and Alaska, in relationship to most of the other Western countries. The North American continent has significantly greater fire death rates than the European and Scandinavian countries.

[6] Federal Emergency Management Agency, "Fire in the United States," July, 1982, p. 23.

This chart portrays the international fire death rates of the major western countries. Since the 1976-1978 data is the latest information available through the federal government (Federal Emergency Management Agency), direct comparisons with Alaska's 1980-1983 data cannot be made. However, from the international data, it is clear that the U.S. fire death rate from 1965 to 1978 has consistently been higher than in all other countries shown, except Canada. By extension, it is reasonable to assume the death rates in the U.S. and Canada, although falling, are still the highest in the western world.

Alaska's death rate for 1983 was computed at almost 62 per million population (See Chart 7), which is more than double the 1976-1978 U.S. death rate (about 30 per million) and the Canadian death rate (about 33 per million) as shown on the Chart to the left, which is the latest international data available.

All these statistics and trends confer upon Alaska the shocking distinction of having the highest (or worst) death rate due to fire in the entire western world.[8]

CHART 17

B. Wildlands Fire Data [9]

1981 - 1984

YEAR	ACRES PROTECTED (million)	# OF FIRES	CAUSE		ACRES BURNED	URBAN AREA FIRES
			Lightning	Manmade		Mat-Su/Anch	Kenai	% of Total
1981	57	287	14%	86%	295,000	58	65	42%
1982	57	261	4%	96%	1,295	28	31	22%
1983	60	397	8%	92%	32,276	90	105	49%
1984	67	453	6%	94%	7,894	159	108	58%

Analysis:

Wildlands fires are substantially affected by weather. Dry fire seasons produce numerous fires, whereas cold, wet fire seasons reduce the incidence of fires. The total acreage protected by the state has, and will continue to increase largely as the result of land transfers to private ownership pursuant to the terms of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act of 1971. The cause of most wildlands fires is consistently the result of man and his endeavors, and thus many fires occur in the urbanized southcentral part of the state. The urban areas are also the location of most of the local fire departments which represent significant potential for the control of wildlands fires in Alaska.

AGENCIES WITH FIRE-RELATED PROGRAMS AND RESPONSIBILITIES

A. STATE AGENCIES WITH FIRE PROTECTION RESPONSIBILITIES AND PROGRAMS

1. DEPARTMENT OF COMMUNITY AND REGIONAL AFFAIRS

Within the department, the Division of Municipal and Regional Assistance administers several programs related directly or indirectly to development and/or improvement of local fire protection services, as follow:[10]

a. State Revenue Sharing

Municipalities, unincorporated communities in the unorganized borough, and volunteer fire departments outside cities and boroughs are eligible to apply annually for financial aid under the State Revenue Sharing Program. Entitlements for municipalities are computed according to a formula that considers the applicant's population, taxable wealth, and tax effort. Additionally, payments are made for certain municipal services (roads, health facilities, hospitals). The equalization formula is intended to benefit those municipalities with the greatest need for revenue sharing funds, i.e., those with a relatively low tax base. All municipalities are entitled to a minimum of $25,000 plus adjustment for regional cost of living allowances. Entitlements of unincorporated communities are $25,000 each. Volunteer fire departments in the unorganized borough are entitled to $10 for each person served.

b. Legislative Grant Program

Many of the grants awarded by the Legislature to unincorporated communities and nonprofit corporations are administered by the Division. Typical grant projects include the purchase of equipment, (which could include fire suppression apparatus), construction of community facilities (which could include a local fire hall), and community and regional planning projects.

c. Bulk Fuel Storage Facility Grants

Grants of up to $100,000 are available to communities to construct facilities for storage of bulk fuel. The principal objective of this program is to provide bulk fuel storage capabilities in communities, thereby ensuring adequate fuel supplies and also lowering the cost of home heating fuel. A supply of adequate fuel oil for warm storage of fire suppression apparatus is a major concern in rural areas. Communities must assume responsibility for operation and maintenance of the facility once construction is completed.

---

[10] State of Alaska, "Alaska Department of Community and Regional Affairs, 1984, p. 13, 20, and 21.

d. Rural Development Assistance Grants

Grants of up to $100,000 are available to rural communities for projects that will increase employment or promote economic development. The grants have been used to plan and construct such facilities as health clinics, city offices, harbormaster facilities, a fire hall, fire suppression equipment, libraries, day care centers, and electrical generation and distribution systems. Communities must show the ability and the commitment to provide for operation and maintenance of the facility or equipment once completed.

e. Community Development Block Grants

The Division of Community Development operates this federally funded program to meet the special capital project and planning needs of cities. Capital projects grants of up to $105,000 are available for projects of a fixed nature or long life that provide new or additional public facilities or services (which could include fire suppression equipment.) Also available are planning/feasibility projects grants designed to assess the viability and impact of potential capital, economic development, and comprehensive planning needs.

2. DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

The Department of Public Safety, one of two State agencies with the greatest involvement for fire safety, has legislatively--mandated responsibilities and is the State's focal point in certain matters relating to structural fire prevention and fire suppression.

a. The Division of Fire Prevention

The Division of Fire Prevention, more popularly known as the State Fire Marshal's Office, provides fire prevention services including building plan review, code compliance inspections, and fire prevention education programs for the public and the fire service as well as conducts fire investigations in communities across the state. It also has the responsibility for maintaining the State's fire reporting system, ANFIRS. The division has offices in Juneau (one Deputy Fire Marshal and an Assistant Fire Marshal), plus the Director's Office in Anchorage (three Deputy Fire Marshals and an Assistant Fire Marshal), and Fairbanks (three Deputy Fire Marshals and an Assistant Fire Marshal). These offices serve the entire state.

Some communities have adopted their own fire codes, which must be at least as strict as the State's. A community administrator can request exemption from the State's review, but the Municipality of Anchorage, the City and Borough of Juneau, and the City of Fairbanks are the only communities to have received waivers. In most cases, when a municipality has adopted a fire code, both the municipality and the State inspect the structures. While fire protection is generally viewed as being a function of local government, many communities seem content to let the State retain fire prevention authority. This is perceived to absolve the municipality of responsibility in cases where a code violation contributes to a fire and also removes the local governing body from the repercussions of taking an unpopular code enforcement position.

The State Fire Marshal's office provides public fire prevention education throughout the state using their Public Education Specialist and the Deputy Fire Marshals. They also provide fire prevention education programs for the Village Public Safety Officer (VPSO) Program and community fire departments.

b. Division of Alaska State Troopers

Since State Troopers are stationed virtually throughout the state, they are often the first agency to respond to any emergency situation, which includes fires. This is particularly true in certain rural areas that have no fire or local police protection. State troopers are certified EMT's. Troopers also work with the State Fire Marshals in the investigation of suspicious fires. Certain rural Troopers perform the oversight function for the Village Public Safety Officers in their area.

The Village Public Safety Officers program, which is incorporated into the Division of the Alaska State Troopers, trains officers from rural villages to assist their communities in emergency situations. They receive formal training and refresher courses in emergency medical services, fire prevention and suppression, law enforcement, search and rescue, and water safety . Where there is an operating local fire department, the Village Public Safety Officer functions in a support role. Part of the VPSO program includes provision for the participating villages to obtain fire extinguishers, smoke alarms, portable pumps, and other basic fire detection and suppression equipment.

3. DEPARTMENT OF MILITARY AFFAIRS

There are two agencies within the Department of Military Affairs with some level of fire-protection-related responsibilities. These are:

a. Division of Emergency Services

The division assists communities impacted by fire of disastrous proportions, such as the Cordova conflagration in 1962. The agency coordinates emergency planning at the State level and with local communities. In times of disaster, they are the State focus for coordination of response efforts and financial assistance including the State's Disaster Relief Fund. The division also acts as the Governor's designee in situations of fire impact caused by wildfire in grass or forest land as defined by Public Law 93-288, Section 417. In major fire situations, the Director, the Deputy Director, and the Director of Forestry, of the Department of Natural Resources, are the only individuals who can request federal assistance from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

b. Alaska Air National Guard

The Kulis Air National Guard Base, in addition to suppression capabilities to protect their own aircraft, has a Mutual Aid Agreement with the Anchorage International Airport to support their crash-fire rescue work.

By contrast, the Army National Guard has no suppression capabilities at their four battalion headquarters in Nome, Bethel, Kotzebue, and Juneau, or at Bryant Army Airfield at Ft. Richardson. Their facilities and Twin Otter and one or two helicopters at each of these locations are protected by local fire departments and the Army at Ft. Richardson.

4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW

The Department of Law is only peripherally involved with fire protection in that the Criminal Division prosecutes all cases of arson and code violations that go to trial. The Civil Section assists the State Fire Marchal's Office in review of new code provisions, their ultimate promulgation, and other matters requiring legal advice.

5. DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

In 1969, the State Department of Education initiated the Fire Service Training Program which is essentially the only statewide fire training program in State government, although it has no specific enabling legislation. Rather, the program operates under the general mandate of improving fire protection to the citizens of Alaska by providing fire suppression training to local fire departments and communities. Some direct training programs are sponsored by the program itself, while financial support is extended by means of a grant program to assist local fire departments in developing their own training programs and regional seminars.

The program provides direct instruction by various means:

- Fire Protection Management courses are directed to senior fire officers in both municipal and rural areas. Course curriculum was developed cooperatively by the Alaska Fire Chiefs Association, the Municipal League, and the Fire Service Training Program to meet the specific needs of local fire departments, both operationally and administratively.

- The Firefighter I course is sponsored both directly and indirectly at the various regional fire training centers. A 160-hour certificated course is offered at the Anchorage Regional Fire Training Center, while financial assistance is rendered to the Bethel and Kotzebue Regional Fire Training Centers to provide 92-hour Rural Firefighter I courses.

- The Itinerant Instructor Program, which was begun in 1971, places fire department instructors under short-term contracts to travel to primarily rural communities in order to provide fire protection training. These instructors are certificated by the Department of Education to teach specific fire protection topics. Instructors may visit 25-30 communities each year, and conduct training that ranges from a few hours to several days. This program remains a stable one hampered only by the availability of instructors whose full-time occupation may be other than fire service, and by a limited budget.

- Technical Assistance Teams are comprised mainly of senior fire officers who visit the local community at the request of local officials. These teams evaluate existing fire protection systems and make recommendations for improvement or more efficient operation. Technical assistance teams are formed only at the request of a local fire department or community and are subject to the same kinds of limitations as the Itinerant Instructor program.

Services supported by the Fire Service Training Program include several kinds of certification at both the firefighter and instructor levels.

- Firefighter I - Basic level certification is awarded following extensive training and testing on manipulative skills. Certification meets or exceeds National Fire Protection Association Standard 1001 for entry level firefighters. There are two means of training available for individuals to the Firefighter 1 level: through local fire department accredited training programs, and through training sponsored by the Fire Service Training Program at the Anchorage Regional Fire Training Center. Both kinds of training programs are accredited through the Department of Education.

- Instructor I - qualifies an instructor to teach the manipulative skills mentioned above. Three criteria for certification include a three-year time-in-service requirement, testing on 20 basic skill areas, and the completion of an approved 40-hour Methods of Instruction course. Applicants are tested biannually and have three years in which to meet the testing and methods course criteria. Instructor I qualification is a prerequisite for the Instructor II and Master certification.

- Instructor II - qualifies an instructor to teach 10 additional firefighting topics which correspond to Firefighter II and III requirements. The applicant for this certification must be tested on the 10 topics and take an additional advanced level Methods of Instruction course. The three-year limitation to meet the criteria also applies.

- Master Instructor - qualifies an instructor to teach any fire suppression topic through the fire science courses at the community colleges. Master Instructors usually are qualified at the Instructor I and II levels, although some are recognized for their expertise and experience.

- Special Instructor - recognizes the expertise of those who either have no fire service experience, or do not otherwise qualify for other levels of certification. Special Instructors include those who teach regularly in industry, Native instructors who teach in their own language, and out-of-state instructors. Of variable duration, this certificate is issued at the discretion of the Supervisor of the Fire Service Training Program.

The grant program was begun in 1976, and has proved to be an extremely practical and popular way of providing local fire departments with financial assistance in their training needs. There are two kinds of grants, both of which are administered on a reimbursable basis. Grants are not issued to State or federal agencies.

- Local grant - This is a small (under $1,500) grant which may be used by the local fire department to purchase audio-visual aids or equipment, supplies to be used in training, or to cover travel costs when sending fire department personnel outside the local community for training. The only limitation placed on this grant is that it may be spent only for training, not for equipment to be used for firefighting purposes.

- Regional grant - Presently this grant is limited to $3,500, and is intended to assist local fire departments or fire-related organizations and agencies in conducting regional schools, seminars, and workshops. The only limitation placed on this grant is that the training provided be regional or statewide in nature, serving personnel in areas other than just the sponsoring department. Training provided under this type of grant includes specialized areas such as marine firefighting, plastics seminars, and flammable liquids training.

Other services provided by the Fire Service Training Program include sponsorship of the Methods of Instruction courses required for instructor certification and the firefighter training component of the Village Public Safety Officer program in the Department of Public Safety. The latter program provides two ninety-hour courses for VPSOs as well as a three-day orientation course for oversight troopers. Additional services include State sponsorship of National Fire Academy field training programs.

A number of manuals are published by the Fire Service Training Program, including the following:

- Model Training Guide, Firefighter I Level - for use in both regional fire training centers and local fire departments for basic level training.

- Model Training Guide, Rural Firefighter I Level - for similar use as above, but excluding the requirements which have little or no application in the rural community, such as aerial ladders, sprinkler systems, and most hydrant systems.

- Fire Protection for Rural Communities - originally published in 1975 and recently updated, this manual discusses the various types of firefighting equipment recommended for village use. It provides a list of reliable dealers, describes the various State and federal agencies which might be of assistance to a rural community in developing fire protection, and gives a number of procedures for structural firefighting which might be of value to a small fire department with limited equipment and training. This manual has been distributed widely throughout the state.

- Fire Service Training and Education System - used in conjunction with Model Training Guides to assist local fire department and regional fire training centers in developing their own training programs.

- Fire Instructor Certification Standards - developed to specify the criteria necessary for certification at the various levels.

6. DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION AND PUBLIC FACILITIES

The Department of Transportation and Public Facilities (DOT/PF) has the firefighting responsibilities for the 26 State-owned, FAA-certified airports. Only a few airports in Alaska are owned by local governments. FAA-certified airports, under Part 139 of the Federal Aviation Regulations, are those airports serving aircraft with 30 or more passenger seats.

State fire protection began in 1972, and has evolved into a system of volunteers from tenant agencies at the airports along with State employees of DOT&PF. The FAA requires that there be trained firefighters and that they be postured to be able to meet the response-time criteria as set forth by the FAA.

The combination volunteer/paid firefighter approach has worked out reasonably well. Volunteers supplement the paid personnel, and the volunteers can respond to aircraft fires when State employees are not immediately available. The one potential disadvantage is expecting too much of the volunteers. It is estimated that there are some 250-300 State employees, and from 300-500 volunteers statewide.

DOT&PF firefighting personnel are divided into three regions for administrative purposes - Anchorage, Fairbanks, and Juneau. There is no statewide coordinated training program for DOT&PF personnel and their volunteer firefighters, although there has been a statewide Training Coordinator in the past; rather, each region pursues fire training on their own. Each region has its own Airport Safety and Security Officer to monitor compliance to FAA requirements concerning crash-fire rescue.

Each of the 26 FAA-certified airports has a Mutual Aid Agreement with the local community fire department, although they do not conduct extensive training together for a variety of reasons, including overtime for State employees.

Apparatus at the state airports varies to conform to FAA regulations that primarily relate to the amount of water available for foam production.

7. THE DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

Within the Division of Labor Standards and Safety is the Safety Compliance Section. This section enforces occupational safety and health standards that prescribe requirements for safe and healthful working conditions for all employment, including State and local government employment, and the requirements are to be at least as effective as those requirements promulgated by the U. S. Secretary of Labor under Public Law 91-596.

The Alaska Department of Labor has promulgated and adopted fire protection standards for general industry, Article 13, Subchapter 01 - Alaska General Safety Code. The Safety Compliance Section is charged with the enforcement aspects of those standards in addition to other safety and health standards adopted by the Alaska Department of Labor. Article 13 contains requirements for fire brigades, all portable and fixed fire suppression equipment, fire detection systems, and fire or employee alarm systems installed to meet the fire protection requirements of general industry.

Additionally the section enforces other vertical industry standards such as petroleum, construction, explosives, sawmills, and pulp and paper mills. Those standards also contain fire protection/prevention requirements which are subject to Department of Labor sanctions for non-compliance.

8. UNIVERSITY OF ALASKA

Fire Science Program

In 1976 a uniform fire science curriculum for Alaska was adopted by fire service representatives and approved by the University of Alaska. The program culminates in the award of an Associate Degree with majors in Structural Fire Technology and Wildland Fire Technology.

Nearly 100 degrees have been awarded since the program's inception. At present, however, only Anchorage Community College and Tanana Valley Community College in Fairbanks have active programs.

For the past several years, there has been a shortage of qualified fire science instructors in the smaller communities and no professional requirements or local incentives for degrees in local fire departments.

Recently, however, there has been renewed interest in implementing dormant fire science programs in community colleges and rural learning centers. With the addition of professional development and suitable local incentives, this program can realize its potential and ultimately be advanced to a four-year baccalaureate program.

9. THE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND SOCIAL SERVICES [11]

During the past few years, the Division of Public Health in the Alaska Department of Health and Social Services, has expanded its involvement in emergency medical services system development, and has taken on responsibility of certifying Emergency Medical Technicians (EMTs), EMT Instructors, and Emergency Medical Services (i.e., ambulance services) in Alaska.

Enabling Legislation and Regulations

In 1977, the Alaska Legislature passed AS 18.08.010 which designated the Department of Health and Social Services (DHSS) as having responsibility for Emergency Medical Services (EMS) systems development, established an eleven-member Advisory Council on EMS appointed by the Governor, and gave the department authority to award EMS systems development grants. The following year, in 1978, the Legislature passed AS 18.08.080, which gave DHSS the authority to adopt regulations for certification of basic and advanced level EMTs, EMT Instructors, and prehospital Emergency Medical Services (i.e., ambulance services).

[11] Johnson, Mark S., et.al. "Alaska's Emergency Medical Services Program." Alaska Medicine. Oct/Nov/Dec. 1983, p. 112.

Since passage of these two pieces of legislation, DHSS has developed grant application regulations for EMS systems development and has developed a computerized certification system for EMTs, EMT Instructors, and ambulance services. All facets of the DHSS EMS program have been developed with assistance and consultation from the Advisory Council on EMS.

Grant Applications and Funding

Each year, Regional EMS Councils or Native regional health entities submit grant applications to the State EMS Office for funding for the following fiscal year. These grant applications must address the major acute health status problems in the region and should outline specific objectives toward improving the region's EMS system. In fiscal year 1983, the EMS Section gave out grants to regions totaling $1,376,000 for operating expenses (including $2500 mini-grants to 59 volunteer ambulance services), plus $923,000 for EMS equipment. Additionally, the Alaska Areas Native Health Service (AANHS) made available $1.3 million to Native Regional Health Corporations for EMS programs. Although the criteria for use of the AANHS funds have been more loosely defined than for use of state EMS grant funds, DHSS & AANHS try to coordinate funding sources as closely as possible.

When developing grant applications, the Regional EMS Grantees assess EMS problems and needs and solicit requests for funding, training, or technical assistance from local communities, ambulance and rescue services, clinics, and hospitals.

Priority attention is given to the needs of the numerous volunteer services serving the smaller communities and rural areas. Each request for funding must be approved by at least one physician sponsor, then must be reviewed and approved by the Regional EMS Council and staff, and finally must undergo review and approval from the State EMS Office and the State Advisory Council on EMS. Whenever possible, local matching funds or inkind services are encouraged to ensure that local entities do not become too dependent on State funding.

Planning and Development

To assist local communities and regions in planning for EMS system improvements, the EMS Section of the Department of Health and Social Services has developed "Alaska EMS Goals: A Guide for Planning Alaska's Emergency Medical Services System." This planning guide uses the "levels of care" concept adapted from Alaska's State Health Plan which identifies four levels of communities in Alaska, including: Level I - Villages; Level II - Subregional Centers; Level III - Regional Centers; and Level IV - Urban Centers (Anchorage and Fairbanks). Although Alaska does not currently have a Level V - Metropolis, the planning guide recognizes Seattle, Washington, as the nearest Level V community. For each level of community, the EMS Goals document outlines specific goals and objectives appropriate for that size of community, including administration, evaluation, manpower and training, communications, patient transportation, equipment and facilities, critical care, public information and education, disaster planning, and mutual aid. Appropriately, these recommendations are much more basic for Level I Villages than for Level IV Urban Centers. In addition, the EMS Goals document includes recommendations for emergency medical services on highways, in schools, in high-risk occupation sites, and in communities with 25 people or less. This planning guide provides a tool for communities to evaluate their local EMS services and thereby pinpoint areas needing attention; it also helps State and Regional EMS programs to best utilize staff time and funding resources.

State and Regional EMS Programs

Each regional EMS program employs a full-time staff of administrators, clerical support, and EMS instructors. Currently, there are five EMS regions funded by the State, including North Slope, NANA (Kotzebue), the interior, southern and southeast regions. For fiscal year 1984, the Norton Sound Region has applied for a grant as a separate region. The three largest regional EMS Councils based in Fairbanks, Anchorage, and Sitka also employ clinical coordinators to assist in developing and sponsoring continuing education programs for nurses, mid-level practitioners, and physicians. The activities supported by regional EMS Councils include CPR and First Aid training, Emergency Trauma Training (ETT), basic and advanced Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) training, EMT Instructor workshops, Ambulance Service Development workshops, Medivac workshops, Advanced Cardiac Life Support, sponsored by the American Heart Association, Advanced Trauma Life Support, sponsored by the American College of Surgeons, and a variety of other seminars on specialized medical topics.

Additionally, each year in November, the State EMS Office and the Regional EMS Councils co-sponsor an EMS symposium in Anchorage. In 1982, this symposium was attended by over 500 EMS responders from throughout the state.

History of Prehospital EMS Training and Certification in Alaska

Organized training of prehospital emergency care providers in Alaska has been in progress for more than a decade. Pioneering efforts in this training were initiated by the Alaska Department of Public Safety in 1970, with the first Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) training course at the Public Safety Academy in Sitka.

In 1973, the Emergency Trauma Technician, or ETT course, was developed by the Department of Public Safety to provide an appropriate level of training for individuals working or living in environments where risk of accidents is great, such as logging camps or fishing boats. This course, once predominant only in southeastern Alaska, has undergone significant refinement during the past few years and is currently a valuable course for teaching basic emergency care to first responders throughout the state. The outline of each certified class now is reviewed by the Southeast Region EMS Council, Inc., in Sitka to ensure compliance with approved instructional goals. In an attempt to ensure maximum coverage of prehospital EMS responders throughout the state, different strategies were developed by the Department of Public Safety and Regional EMS Councils.

One method used by the Department of Public Safety from 1970 until 1981 was to bring ambulance service personnel to the Public Safety Academy in Sitka for training, with funds provided to individuals to fly from their home communities for either EMT-Basic or EMT-Instructor training. As time passed, increasingly more certified EMT instructors, trained in this manner, were based in communities throughout Alaska.

During this period, the Department of Public Safety trained and certified approximately 2500 basic EMTs and 120 EMT Instructors.

In the mid-1970s, the newly formed Regional EMS Councils began hiring full-time, itinerant instructors, who could provide on-site training in remote communities which did not have locally based instructors. There were several advantages to this method of training. These full-time instructors became more experienced in putting on classes, and EMS responders could be trained in the use of their own equipment, learning to function as teams with other members of their ambulance or rescue service. EMTs also were taught the necessity of preplanning emergency care, the need for mutual aid agreements, and identification of local medical resources.

Although increasingly more communities have their own EMT Instructors residing locally, itinerant Instructors continue to teach a major portion of EMT courses in Alaska.

Development of EMT Certification

On December 31, 1981, the Department of Health and Social Services EMT and EMT Instructor certification regulations went into effect. These regulations, administered by the State EMS Section, were developed by a Manpower and Training Task Force, appointed by the State Advisory Council on EMS. These regulations provide for three levels of certified EMTs, including EMT-I (basic), EMT-II (intermediate), and EMT-III (intermediate plus some advanced cardiac skills).

Under the Alaska Medical Practice Act, Mobile Intensive Care Paramedics (MICPs), the most advanced level of prehospital EMS responders, are licensed by the State Medical Board. Therefore, the Emergency Medical Services Section of the Department of Health and Social Services has developed a Memorandum of Agreement with the State Medical Board. Under this agreement, the State Medical Board reviews and approves EMT and EMT Instructor certification regulations developed by DHSS, and the EMS Office assists in determining eligibility of applicants for licensure as MICPs.

The EMT regulations were developed in order to standardize training, certification, and recertification for Emergency Medical Technicians throughout the state. Until 1981 there were two recognized certifications at the Emergency Medical Technician I level. The first was a certification from the Department of Public Safety, the second, a current certification from the National Registry of Emergency Medical Technicians. The latter was the method of certification used by some of the Regional EMS Councils. During the six months immdiately following the implementation of the new DHSS regulations, persons with either type of certification could apply to the Department of Health and Social Services for State certification under a grandfathering clause. All individuals requesting EMT II or EMT III certification had to demonstrate a need for this level of certification as well as provide a letter from their sponsoring physician endorsing the EMTs skills, and accepting sponsorship. EMT III applicants also had to pass a State certification examination before becoming certified.

EMT Regulations

The Emergency Medical Technician I (or EMT Basic) course dates back to the late 1960s, when the Department of Transportation established and standardized the training for ambulance personnel in the United States. It is at least 81 hours in length and teaches the basics of prehospital emergency care, including CPR, hemorrhage control, splinting, bandaging, basic pathophysiology, and treatment of shock (including Military Anti-Shock Trousers - MAST pants in recent years) and medical emergencies, as well as specialized extrication and patient removal techniques for victims who are trapped in automobiles or light aircraft. The course outline, student study guide, and instructor's lesson plans are currently undergoing revision by the U.S. Department of Transportation, and it is anticipated that the Basic EMT-I course will soon be lengthened to 100 hours.

As emergency medical services became more sophisticated, trauma and cardiac arrest were identified as the areas in which advanced training, the EMT-II and EMT-III levels, should concentrate. The EMT-II and EMT-III programs rely on the concept that much of emergency care is based on the use of treatment protocols implemented in the prehospital environment by physicians' standing orders. The 50-hour EMT-II course teaches the use of esophageal intubation devices, application of rotating tourniquets, performing peripheral venipunctures, and the use of 5% dextrose in water, crystalloid volume replacement solutions, sodium bicarbonate, 50% glucose, and naloxone hydrochloride (NARCAN).

In some areas, more emphasis is being placed now on advanced management of the emergent cardiac patient. EMTs-III are allowed, under physician authorization, to use EMT-II skills, plus apply electrodes and monitor cardiac activity; countershock life threatening arrhythmias (v-tach, v-fib, and asystole); use lidocaine; use morphine in severe pain secondary to extremity trauma; and use epinephrine 1:1000 for anaphylaxis.

The EMT-II and EMT-III courses rely heavily on the support of physician medical sponsors who participate in the writing of treatment protocols, in the instruction of the material, and in the subsequent direct and indirect supervision of the Emergency Medical Technician's performance in the field. Under the State EMT Certification regulations, all EMTs-II and EMTs-III must have a physician sponsor who either directly (by voice contact) or indirectly (by standing orders) authorizes advanced life support medical procedures.

EMS physician sponsors also should provide ongoing supervision of the medical care provided by EMTs and ambulance services, approve and periodically review standing orders consistent with treatment protocols and the level of EMT training, ensure that an approved EMS report form is completed for each patient, review these report forms to make sure appropriate treatment was provided, and, wherever possible, make quarterly on-site supervisory visits of all prehospital emergency medical services.

EMTs at all levels must take and pass an approved training course and must be recertified every two years. Recertification requires 48 hours of continuing medical education, current CPR certification, and passing written and practical examinations for recertification.

These EMT regulations further state that "nothing is intended to prohibit a physician from authorizing a drug or procedure in an emergency situation which is not specifically covered by the certification of EMTs-I, II, or III."

Paramedic Regulations

Under regulations developed by the State Medical Board (12 AAC 40.300 - 12 AAC 40.390), Mobile Intensive Care Paramedics may perform cardiopulmonary resuscitation and defibrillation; initiate and maintain intravenous routes using intravenous techniques and solutions approved by the medical sponsor; perform pulmonary ventilation by approved methods; perform gastric suction by intubation; obtain blood for laboratory analysis; apply rotating tourniquets; administer parenterally, orally, or topically any approved agents or solutions; and perform other emergency procedures authorized by a physician. The average number of hours of training for Mobile Intensive Care Paramedics is approximately 800 and is followed by a six-month intership.

Emergency Medical Services Certification

In early 1983, Emergency Medical Service (i.e., ambulance service) certification regulations were approved. These regulations provide for certification of Basic Life Support (BLS) and Advanced Life Support (ALS) prehospital Emergency Medical Services.

BLS service certification is voluntary, and services which choose to be certified must meet the following criteria:

* List available EMTs-I and ensure that at least one EMT-I, plus one other person to act as driver when using a surface transportation vehicle, will be able to respond to emergency calls 24 hours/day;

* Have a sponsoring physician;

* Have direct communications capability with a physician, hospital, or mid-level practitioner, unless the Department (Health and Social Services) grants a waiver due to technical communications problems;

* Have appropriate equipment to perform basic life support medical procedures; and

* Have a program of continuing education which will enable certified EMS personnel to meet recertification requirements.

All ALS service must be certified by meeting the above requirements, plus:

* List available EMTs-II, EMTs-III, mobile intensive care paramedics, or other personnel such as R.N.s or M.D.s who may respond to medical emergencies on a regular basis;

* Ensure that an EMT-II, EMT-III, Mobile Intensive Care Paramedic, or other advanced life support-medical personnel, plus at least one other person trained to at least the Basic EMT-I level to act as driver when using a surface transportation vehicle, will be available to respond to emergency calls 24 hours/day; and

* Have appropriate equipment to perform basic and advanced life- support medical procedures within the skill levels of available certified personnel.

Additionally, all certified emergency medical services must use an approved EMS report form which documents vital signs and medical treatment of each patient, send a copy with the patient to the appropriate treatment facility, and keep at least one other copy as a permanent record.

These regulations specifically do not prohibit noncertified persons from responding to a medical emergency when no certified personnel or services are available, or when there are too many victims for available certified personnel to handle, such as in a mass casualty situation.

Certified personnel of an EMS service also are authorized to accompany patients on medivacs, when this is the most suitable means of transporting the patient.

Medical Control

As prehospital emergency medical services become more sophisticated, the concept of "medical control" becomes increasingly more important. According to a position paper adopted by the American College of Emergency Physicians in April 1982:

> All aspects of the organization and provision of emergency medical services require the active involvement and participation of physicians. These aspects should incorporate design of the EMS system prior to its implementation, continued revision of the system, and operation of the system from initial access to prehosptial contact with the patient, through stabilization in the emergency department. All prehospital medical care may be considered to have been provided by one or more agents of the physician who controls the prehospital system, for this physician has assumed responsibilities for such care.
> Physician control of prehospital emergency care may be accomplished through direct voice communications with prehospital emergency medical personnel (direct control) or through provision of care in accordance with patient care protocols developed and promulgated by physicians (indirect control). All training of emergency prehospital personnel, including course design, supervision of training, retraining, continuing education, ongoing performance evaluation through audit, review and critique sessions, and other appropriate components, must be made under the direction of a physician.
> To optimize medical control of all prehospital emergency medical services, these services should be managed by physicians who meet the following requirements:
> 1) Familiarity with the design and operation of prehospital EMS systems;
> 2) Experience in prehospital emergency care of the acutely ill or injured patient;

3) Routine participation in base-station radio control of prehospital emergency units;

4) Experience in emergency department management of the acutely ill or injured patient;

5) Routine active participation in emergency department management of the acutely ill or injured patient;

6) Active involvement in the training of basic and advanced life-support prehospital personnel;

7) Active involvement in the medical audit, review, and critique of basic life-support and advanced life-support prehosptial personnel; and

8) Participation in the administrative and legislative process affecting the regional and/or State prehospital EMS system.

Clearly, in Alaska, medical control is complicated by the fact that many remote communities do not have physicians residing locally. This underscores the need to have expanded, reliable communications between remote communities or highways, and physician staffed clinics and hospitals.

Alaska is fortunate to have many dedicated physicians who are willing to provide medical control and direction to prehospital EMS personnel who may, in many instances, live hundreds of miles away. By providing medical direction to dedicated EMS responders, most of whom are volunteers, these physicians are making a very valuable contribution toward developing a high quality EMS system.

Future of EMS in Alaska

In little more than a decade, prehospital emergency medical services have been vastly improved in most communities in Alaska. With continued commitment and support from the State, local towns and villages, and the medical community, every community in Alaska should be able to be up to the appropriate EMS standards recommended for its size and location.

10. DEPARTMENT OF NATURAL RESOURCES

The Division of Forestry in the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) is by statute (AS 41.15.010) the agency responsible for wildlands fire protection, commensurate with the resource values at risk, for the natural resources and watersheds on land that is owned privately, by the State, or by a municipality. Initially, the State contracted for wildlands fire protection with the Bureau of Land Management (BLM), but in 1973 the division began building a fire management organization that by 1985 will be protecting about 137 million acres of State, private, municipal, borough, and federal lands.

As more federal lands are being transferred to state ownership, the Division has either assumed the job of fire protection or has entered into agreements with the BLM and the Forest Service whereby each protects inholdings of the other. By 1985, the division will be providing fire protection on all lands within the southern half of the state except for national forest and urbanized lands. This protection includes certain lands served by rural fire service areas, although some fire service areas do not provide wildlands fire protection.

The division has nine area offices throughout the state. Some 150 or so personnel are considered full-time fire suppression personnel during the fire season, which is May 1 - September 30. An additional 100 or so temporary personnel are hired as needed each year. Presently, the division has five T-28 aircraft for reconnaissance, with one aircraft providing infrared photography capabilities. Additionally, the division has two Beaver aircraft and a twin engine aircraft. Helicopters are usually contracted for each season.

The fire problem occurs primarily along the highway net, and the overwhelming number of fires are man-caused. Natural fires occur by lightning, primarily in the interior parts of the state, and although far fewer in number, they tend to consume larger areas due to the time required for suppression activities to occur, and the logistical problems attendant to the suppression efforts, including accessibility.

B. LOCAL AGENCIES WITH FIRE PROTECTION RESPONSIBILITIES AND PROGRAMS

1. LOCAL FIRE DEPARTMENTS

There are 249 fire departments in Alaska registered with the State Fire Marshal. Not all of these are a function of local government, since some exist in unincorporated villages outside any organized borough or city. Although there are more than 200 fire departments for purposes of eligibility to receive shared revenue, perhaps only half or less can be thought of as viable organizations, in terms of having training sessions, fire suppression equipment, reporting fires, etc. Many of the balance exist more on paper than in fact. Some 30 volunteer fire departments received State Revenue Sharing in FY84, totalling slightly more than $90,000.[12]

There are many variations within local fire departments in their composition and relationship to local government. Some are comprised of fully paid staffs that operate as a department of their local municipality. Others are municipal departments that have part paid staff and part volunteers. In a few instances, the fire department is a branch of the municipal public safety departments. There is at least one subscription fire department. People who pay the fee receive fire protection, while those who do not, do not receive fire protection. In smaller communities, where local governments may or may not exist, local fire departments tend to be associations of citizens volunteering their efforts to provide protection against a common problem.

In the larger communities, the firefighters are members of unions -- the International Association of Firefighters, and to a lesser extent the Inland Boatmens Union.

The recently formed Alaska Association of Fire and Arson Investigators has a statewide membership of fire and police personnel and others.

Local fire departments are often the first responder in emergency situations -- earthquake, national disaster, hazardous material spills, etc. In many communities in Alaska, the fire department also provides the emergency medical and ambulance services.

Just as the population of the communities varies, so do the firefighting capabilities and personnel training, ranging from the highly sophisticated Anchorage Fire Department with highly organized training and their own regional training center, to the small predominantly Native village that must depend upon an organized response with portable fire extinguishers.

Various attempts have been made in the past to address the problem of fire protection for rural communities, which actually means protection for homes.

[12] Jon Cecil, Department of Community & Regional Affairs.

Fire loss data show homes to be the location of most fires, and these fires result in the greatest number of injuries and death.

As early as 1972 and 1973, the Fire Chiefs Association developed a village fire extinguisher program which ultimately purchased more than 2000 extinguishers at a cost of some $37,000.[13] The effectiveness of the effort was almost doomed to be temporary, because of the lack of any follow-up activities. The concept of portable fire extinguishers being used for residential fires was conclusively demonstrated by a series of tests at the University of Alaska in 1971, which showed that a coordinated attack by extinguishers would reduce a fire in a dwelling to the extent that rescue of trapped persons would be possible.

Other bits and pieces of a local fire protection program came along in the following years. The State Fire Service Training Program published a manual, Fire Protection for Rural Communities in 1975 which dealt with numerous aspects of village fire safety. The same program had earlier created the Itinerant Instructor concept for fire protection training. A major thrust of this program was, and remains, to provide on-site instructors in the small communities that have no other means of obtaining training.[14] Also, from time to time, the Legislature has appropriated funds to buy fire trucks for certain communities, through the well-intended efforts of individual legislators. Often, however, purchase of vehicles do not represent the most effective means to obtain fire protection. Most significantly, and most recently, has been the development of the Village Public Safety Officer (VPSO) program in the Department of Public Safety. Recognizing the extremely high losses due to fire, drownings, and law enforcement problems in Alaska's bush areas, the State Troopers launched the VPSO program in 1980, whereby village men would be trained in the broad field of public safety, so that they could respond to virtually any emergency situation that occurred. The fire protection includes classroom and fireground training and refresher work. However, since the majority of VPSO-related work pertains to law enforcement, there is the continuing concern that they become too law enforcement oriented, to the detriment of their other public-safety-related responsibilities.

2. REGIONAL FIRE TRAINING CENTERS

The Regional Fire Training Center Program is the outgrowth of deliberations within the Alaska State Firefighter's Association in the early 1970s and brought into being through passage of a $7 million general obligation bond issue in 1976.

The first center completed was the Anchorage Regional Fire Training Center, in 1979. Since that time four similar centers in Juneau, Fairbanks, Bethel, and Kotzebue have been substantially completed. All five centers are maintained and operated by the host communities for training of fire services and other emergency services personnel with title to the grounds and facilities being retained by the State for a period of ten years, after which title reverts to the cities, with the single provision that the centers remain dedicated in perpetuity to the continued use for training of emergency services personnel.

Some centers have dormitory facilities which are extremely helpful when housing firefighter training. Each training center has a variety of props to assist with actual "hands-on training." The local community may assess a "use fee" to the trainees or their sponsoring agency to help offset overhead costs involved.

The Anchorage facility, alone, is currently operating with a satisfactory degree of success. This is generally attributed to the large population of firefighters and other emergency personnel in the area, and the fact that the Municipality of Anchorage has shown constant support for the program since its inception.

Delays in construction, coupled with changes in the local political structure, has had an adverse effect on the other four training centers. A further adverse effect has been caused by the inability of the State Fire Service Training Program to generate enough funding within the Department of Education to support continuing and varied training programs within the various centers. An example is the marine fire training capabilities built into the Juneau Regional Fire Training Center. There has never been sufficient funding generated to conduct a single marine fire school since the facility was completed in 1982.

3. EMERGENCY MEDICAL SERVICES

Many local fire departments in Alaska also provide varying degrees of emergency medical services (EMS). While a growing number of departments are providing increasingly professional services, none experiences more calls for assistance than the Anchorage Fire Department (AFD),[15] which has, as a result, developed perhaps the best EMS program in the state.

Anchorage EMS lists national registration as a prerequisite to application and competition for hire. Testing for the hire list normally occurs annually and consists initially of equally weighted written medical and general oral exams, and a pass/fail physical ability test. Top candidates then proceed to a medical oral board, with failure at any step up to this point resulting in failure to qualify for that year's eligibility list. An interview with the EMS Chief is the final step.

Municipal regulation requires a thorough physical examination by a physician, at the time of the actual job offer, prior to beginning work. Alaska grants licenses only upon completion of a supervised six-month internship, and AFD maintains new employees in a probationary status to the end of 12 months. No age restrictions exist beyond the National Registry's minimum of 18 years.

Following probation, new paramedics enter a career ladder consisting of three basic ranks below the administrative level. Paramedic I and Paramedic II personnel staff ambulances, with the latter designated as lead technician, and the shift supervisor is a Paramedic Lieutenant. Advancement follows a competitive testing system similar to hiring procedures. Promotion to Lieutenant is by appointment of the EMS Chief, as is the position of Paramedic Captain, who is the training officer and the other administrator in the EMS Division, directly below the Chief in the command chain. Anchorage's Fire Chief appoints the EMS Chief, who is an Assistant Chief in the AFD hierarchy.

Anchorage paramedics complete a minimum of 72 hours of continuing education annually to maintain local certification by the Medical Advisory Board (60 are required for state license renewal). Didactic and clinical categories receive equal emphasis, and training consists of both on-duty and several mandatory, paid, off-duty sessions each year.

The Anchorage Fire Department does not cross-train EMS personnel in fire suppression; EMS personnel function as paramedics only. Medics rotate fire station assignments regularly and participate in station duties and recreation with fireline crews as call volume permits.

Emergency responders work a 56-hour week on a "Kelly" schedule, rotating 24-hour tours of duty among three shifts of personnel. Salaries start at approximately $26,000/year and rise to about $40,000 at the end of the first full year off probation (two years total).

Presently, 80% of the Anchorage Fire Department's 300 full-time paid employees are emergency personnel assigned to 11 bowl-area stations and one in a near suburb. Twelve engine companies cross-function as nontransport Basic Life Support (BLS) units in layered response situations, assisting the EMS Division's five primary paramedic-manned Advanced Life Support (ALS) crews and single shift supervisor. An auxiliary force of 50 volunteers, working out of three additional stations, answers fire and EMS alarms in the less populated areas.

This configuration, coordinated by central dispatch, allows both early BLS care and three paramedics on most critical incidents. Private services are limited to pre-assessed routine transports and do not engage in field response or transport.

Paramedics deliver patients to four local hospitals: two private, one military, and one operated by the Indian Health Service. Total annual call volume first exceeded 10,000 in 1981 and grows by 5%-6% each year. Alarms per unit per 24-hour shift average eight, but vary considerably with season and location. Thirty percent of all runs involve ALS assessment or treatment skills.

A Medical Advisory Board consisting of physicians, nurses, and a paramedic representative oversees medical treatment and review. The board has backed gradually increasing levels of ALS practice by written standing orders, which currently encompass numerous invasive techniques and over 20 medications.

Discretion to use these therapies without direct verbal permission lies with the paramedics on location for all but one medication. This degree of physician trust, and the conditions that have permitted the Anchorage system to develop unhampered by many of the political problems common in other locales, contributes to an out-of-hospital save rate in medical cardiac arrest patients that has consistently rivaled other EMS services nationwide.

C. PROFESSIONAL FIRE SERVICE ORGANIZATIONS

1. ALASKA FIRE CHIEFS ASSOCIATION

Organized in 1969, the Alaska Fire Chiefs Association has continued to promote the development of the Fire Service through progressive programs of education/public relations and research.

A major activity of this association is political at the state level. The rapid growth of Alaska and the impact of oil revenues on the Fire Service mandate constant changes to the delivery services.

The Fire Chiefs and Firefighters associations jointly employ a lobbyist at the State Capitol. There are 249 fire departments registered with the State Fire Marshal. It is estimated that 120 to 130 of these departments are actually active and more than a paper department. Sixty fire departments, about 50% of the active departments, now belong to the Alaska Fire Chiefs Association. The current officers of the Alaska Fire Chiefs Association are elected for a two-year term and are:

President - Chief Alan Judson, Juneau Fire Department
1st Vice President - Chief Dewey Whetsell, Cordova Volunteer Fire Dept.
2nd Vice President - Chief William Shechter, U of A Fire Dept.

An annual conference is held each year concurrent with the firefighters' conference.

2. ALASKA STATE FIREFIGHTERS ASSOCIATION

Organized in 1962, the Alaska State Firefighters Association continues to unite and bring together, at least annually, the firefighters of Alaska to promote the latest improvements in the Fire Service and to enhance communications between departments across the state. The association is politically active, promoting the Fire Service in Alaska, and jointly employs a lobbyist with the Alaska Fire Chiefs Association.

Of the 120 to 130 active fire departments in Alaska, with an estimated 3,500 to 4,000 firefighters, 1,000 are currently members of the association.

The officers of the association serve two-year terms (same as the fire chiefs) and currently are:

President - Jason Elson, Kenai Fire Department
1st Vice President - Robert Purcell, Homer Fire Department
2nd Vice President - Curtis Jones, Glacier Fire Department

3. UNION FIREFIGHTERS

The International Association of Firefighters (I.A.F.F.) represents three fire departments in Alaska: Anchorage with 300+ firefighters, Fairbanks with 70+ firefighters, and Ketchikan with 15 firefighters. The I.A.F.F. maintains its own lobbyist and represents its members on political issues.

The strongest community involvement of the union is support of Muscular Dystrophy fund raising.

4. INLAND BOATMANS UNION

The Inland Boatmans Union of Alaska presently represents the 36 paid firefighters of the Juneau Fire Department. This union currently encourages activity with the Alaska State Firefighters Association and the Alaska Fire Chiefs Association.

5. THE ALASKA ASSOCIATION OF FIRE AND ARSON INVESTIGATORS

The AAFAI was formed in January 1984, with the specific intent to bring together those persons interested in fire and arson investigation so as to provide a uniform force to combat the problem. To date, the association is comprised of more than 125 members including those individuals representing fire departments (volunteer and paid), municipal police, Alaska State Troopers, private investigative agencies, the State Fire Marshal's Offices, law firms, and federal agencies (i.e., treasury department, consumer protection, etc.).

The association promotes a bond of friendship, understanding and cooperation between those individuals and agencies through yearly fire investigation training seminars and meetings.

The association is looking toward a statewide "Arson Information Reward Fund" including participation in a statewide Crime Stoppers Program. Also anticipated is its involvement in a mini grant fund designed to assist fire investigation personnel to obtain the necessary equipment to more adequately investigate arson.

Governing the association's activities is a nine-member board of directors and four officers.

Further information can be obtained by contacting any of the following officers:

President - Vern Long, Box 598, Kenai, Alaska 99611, 456-4002
Vice President - David Burnett, Box 598, Kenai, Alaska 99611, 283-7666
Secretary - Roy C. Isenberg, Box 598, Kenai, Alaska 99611, 269-5604
Treasurer - Jason Elson, Box 598, Kenai, Alaska 99611, 283-7666

III.

GOALS AND OBJECTIVES

GOAL A - FIRE EDUCATION AND PUBLIC AWARENESS

Inform the people of Alaska of all aspects of fire prevention, protection, and control.

OBJECTIVE 1

The State will substantially expand its fire prevention and education efforts generally, with particular emphasis upon preventing fires in all buildings, particularly in dwellings, which are both the most common place of fire occurrence and fire deaths, and the least affected by governmental efforts to ensure fire and life safety.

The occurrence of most, but not all, fires may generally be traced to a failure of fire prevention. Prevention is highly stressed by all agencies in the Fire Service, but to a large extent prevention hasn't occurred, and to the extent it has, it cannot be proven. The idea of prevention is also, to some extent, at odds with the goal of fire departments, whose personnel are described as firefighters. Although success in prevention can be measured, funding for it may be more difficult than suppression, which is more visible.

Given these inherent difficulties, state government agencies with fire protection responsibilities must assume a leadership role, and in cooperation with local governments and other allied agencies, initiate prevention efforts, particularly in the home, where the greatest number of fires occur.

The following approaches are intended to be illustrative of fire prevention efforts, but are not limited to other initiatives.

APPROACH (a)

In consultation with the fire insurance industry, local fire departments, regional housing authorities, and others, the State Fire Marshal's Office will initiate and coordinate a program of reduction of fires in dwellings by determining the feasibility of installing sprinkler systems in homes and the rate reduction in fire insurance premiums some insurance companies have for installation of home sprinkler systems, placement of smoke alarms, fire extinguishers, dead bolts, voluntarily initiated home inspections through the local fire departments, and such other actions as deemed appropriate.

RATIONALE

The Alaska Division of Insurance, which regulates the premium rates used by the insurance industry, is in agreement with home sprinklers, providing installation is done in accordance with approved standards. Those standards will be included in the 1985 Uniform Building Code which is now in the process of review at the national level.

San Clemente, California, is an example of the benefits that can occur following sprinkler installation in dwellings, which is required by local ordinance. The mandatory installation of residential sprinklers in San Clemente allowed a multifaceted savings to the homeowner and the local government. California law requires a 15% reduction to the homeowner who sprinklers his home, although most companies are giving 25%. This is a direct savings to the homeowner. The City of San Clemente is saving $3.5 million, projected over 10 years, in just the fire department, for direct personnel and equipment costs due to the reduction in required response. The savings in response personnel are utilized in the public fire-education programs creating further savings. With the sprinkler requirements, the City allows tradeoffs such as increased housing density. Water mains of one size can be extended further due to reduced fire-flow requirements. Dead-end mains are allowed in some areas, reducing costs again as a loop is not required. They have further required any structure over 35 feet to the roof or top of the parapet, or with a calculated needed fire flow in excess of 3500 gpm, to be sprinklered. San Clemente allows the installation of iron, steel, copper, or plastic piping for the sprinklers and is presently operating with its own codes addressing plastic. The Uniform Codes have yet to address this issue.

APPROACH (b)

If sprinklers prove economically feasible, legislation should be coordinated through the State Fire Marshal's Office and supported by all elements of the Fire Service community, to establish low-interest loans to homeowners for installation of sprinklers in a similar manner to existing low-interest energy conservation loans within the Department of Community and Regional Affairs.

RATIONALE

The Department of Community and Regional Affairs now has numerous low-interest loans for such home improvements as weatherization, building material loans, housing rehabilitation, home purchase assistance and so on. Low-interest loans for home sprinkler systems would appear to be a reasonable extension of existing programs.

APPROACH (c)

Upon determining that home sprinklers are feasible, the State Fire Marshal, in cooperation with the professional Fire Service organizations, and individual firefighters in Alaska will seek legislation that mandates lower fire insurance rates for homes with sprinkler systems.

RATIONALE

Upon adoption of sprinkler requirements in Alaska's codes, legislation can be sought requiring a specified percentage reduction in fire insurance premiums, similar to the situation in California.

APPROACH (d)

The Fire Marshal's Office, in cooperation with local fire departments, will initiate educational programs for bankers, architects, and builders concerning potential cost savings of insurance premiums to the homeowner as the result of sprinklers in new home construction.

RATIONALE

Several approaches merit attention. The prospective homeowner is usually not aware of ways to reduce home fire insurance premiums. Rather than attempt to broadly educate the public in this area, efforts should be made to apprise bankers, builders, and architects of potential cost-saving devices in new homes to pass along to the new homeowner and to stimulate voluntary home inspections, as requested by the homeowner.

APPROACH (e)

The State Fire Marshal and the State Fire Service Training Program, in cooperation with the State Troopers, will review the Village Public Safety Officer program to determine how existing training and equipment acquisition can be expanded to address the high rate of structural fires in rural Alaska, and similar efforts among Public Health Aides, Sanitarians, and educators, since the incidence of fire death is most acute in rural areas.

RATIONALE

The existing Village Public Safety Officer program in the Department of Public Safety is, for some rural communities, the only existing delivery system for public safety services, including fire protection. To increase fire protection in these areas means to increase the fire protection portion of the VPSO responsibilities, which are now largely law enforcement oriented. The VPSO program has the advantages of overcoming language and cultural barriers, and if properly supported, also includes community involvement. Similar fire safety efforts should be undertaken among rural Sanitarians, Public Health Nurses and Teachers.

APPROACH (f)

Through the Governor's Office, the State Fire Marshal will seek to expand the Alaska Safety and Health Advisory Council to include a permanent member of the Fire Service in Alaska to represent their interests and contribute to the Council.

RATIONALE

Someone from the Fire Service becoming a member of the Alaska Safety and Health Advisory Council should have the effect of expanding the scope of the Council in activities to include fire safety.

APPROACH (g)

The State Fire Marshal and the State Fire Service Training Program will establish regional resource centers (perhaps at Community Colleges and Regional Fire Training Centers) of audio and visual materials appropriate to prevention-oriented efforts by local fire departments, government agencies at all levels, Native regional nonprofit corporations, and others with fire protection programs and responsibilities. Copying facilities would also be helpful at these resource centers.

RATIONALE

Development of regional resource centers with appropriate audio-visual equipment should enable local fire departments, Native regional corporations, safety councils, government agencies, etc., which have fire safety responsibilities to increase and broaden existing fire safety programs and stimulate development of new initiatives. The state's media resources should be directed to cooperate with appropriate fire safety and fire prevention programs and agencies, and present their programs thru "Learn Alaska," the PBS stations and other media capabilities. The fire training centers could be the repository of the A-V materials appropriate to their region, assuming operational problems can be overcome, as more completely explained in Goal B, following.

APPROACH (h)

The State Fire Marshal's Office, in cooperation with all agencies of the Fire Service Community will initiate an on-going dialogue to address the tremendous disparity between where Alaska's fire deaths occur -- in the homes -- and where prevention-oriented efforts exist -- the larger public buildings, where fire fatalities rarely occur.

RATIONALE

From all statistical evidence practically all fire deaths and fire injuries in Alaska occur in dwellings. However, prevention activities such as plans review, code compliance aspects, on-site field inspections, and so on, are directed towards large structures with greater exposure to the public such as schools, churches, meeting halls, industrial facilities, and related structures that experience few if any fire deaths and injuries. In a very real sense, prevention efforts do not appear to be directed to the fire problem areas -- residential units and dwellings.

The targets of existing prevention efforts may have a good fire safety record precisely because of existing prevention efforts, and to that extent, the prevention efforts should be continued. However, it seems clear that prevention efforts should also be directed to where the greatest fire losses occur.

OBJECTIVE 2

The state will actively support and promote fire safety training in the public school systems in Alaska.

APPROACH (a)

In cooperation with various professional educational organizations, the State Fire Marshal's Office will attempt to institute the "Learn Not To

(GOAL A - Continued)

Burn" curriculum in the public school system in Alaska and provide for financial assistance to offset program costs, through the Department of Education or the Legislature.

RATIONALE

The key to improved fire safety over the long term is through education of our children about hazards relating to fire and how they may be abated. One has only to consider the success of the anti-cigarette smoking campaign in the school system and how school children carry home the health hazards of smoking cigarettes to realize that education of the children will be the most effective means to reduce fire losses in the future.

To educate the children means to work within the educational establishment. The State Board of Education has already passed a resolution concerning the need for fire safety education, but the resolution is only advisory in nature to the 52 school districts within the state. Since each school district is largely autonomous, contacts must be made individually with each. The Fire Marshal will work with such organizations as the Governor's Safety and Health Advisory Council, the several professional educational organizations, the Municipal League, the Conference of Mayors, Native regional corporations, the fire insurance industry, Fire Chiefs and Firefighters Associations, local fire departments, and local school boards and administrators to institute the LNTB program.

The local fire departments, as the on-scene agency with the greatest interest in developing the LNTB program in the schools should be the key agency at the local level. Their involvement is crucial to the success or failure of the program.

Fire prevention authorities, in cooperation with professional organizations, will prepare legislation to provide the financial assistance required to offset the costs of implementing this program.

GOAL B - FIRE SERVICE TRAINING

Improve the level of fire protection by assisting in the development of Fire Service personnel to their maximum performance potential.

OBJECTIVE 1

The state will assist local governments and other agencies with fire protection responsibilities to develop and maintain a comprehensive Fire Service training program to provide instructional and related services to the Fire Service community and other emergency services personnel.

APPROACH (a)

Relocate the State Fire Service Training Program to the State Fire Marshal's Office, by the request of the Governor.

(GOAL B - Continued)

RATIONALE

The Fire Service Training Program (SFSTP) has no specific statutory authority for the services it provides. The program's current existence is based on tenuous legislative intent. Lack of specific authority, and programmatic guidelines have made long-range master planning for program development and implementation virtually impossible. Constant budget problems based on the difficulty of justification without well-defined guidelines has resulted in frequent program reduction and equally frequent program cancellations as late as FY85. The State Fire Marshal (SFM) has the necessary statutory authority under which specific programmatic guidelines would be established once the proposed transfer is completed.

The relocation should occur with a minimum of disruption. The existing staff, two Education Specialists I and an Education Specialist II and the present use of the equivalent of one full-time clerical support person by the SFSTP should accompany the relocation to the SFM office. Training resources and equipment can easily be transferred to the SFM. At the Governor's direction, the conditions of transfer can be negotiated by the departments.

This move centralizes what has previously been separate and often disparate training, resulting now in the need to contact only one agency (SFM) rather than two.

The organizational structure of the expanded staff of the SFM should be decided by the SFM.

The experience of the State of Oregon, which made a similar transfer, may be of value to the proposed move for Alaska's State Fire Service Training Program.

APPROACH (b)

The State Fire Service Training Program will continue to expand upon existing fire service training programs to ensure professional development courses for all ranks of personnel within the fire service.

RATIONALE

Continuing and expanding existing SFSTP courses is needed to provide resources not readily available at the local level, in terms of obtaining training expertise for courses in the community and funding for travel and expenses associated with attending training elsewhere.

APPROACH (c)

The State Fire Service Training Program will reestablish the Technical Assistance Teams, trainee travel funds, and continue with the Itinerant Fire Instructor program.

(GOAL B - Continued)

RATIONALE

The need for the Technical Assistance Teams (TAT) to assist local fire departments and governments at all levels and community leaders with a broad range of fire-related problems was first suggested by the Alaska Municipal League three years ago. To be comprised of peer group fire officers who have solved similar problems, three TATs were formed last year. The results, which are advisory in nature to the local department or the city, were very successful. However, funding for the TATs was deleted entirely from the SFSTP's budget. Funding should be restored to provide this technical assistance.

The Itinerant Instructor program is perhaps the best known of the SFSTP various programs, providing instructors and all training materials to the typically smaller departments throughout the state. It has been in effect for many years and is of proven value. In many cases, the only training provided to many smaller departments has been through the Itinerant Instructor program. The program should be continued and expanded as required to meet the demand.

APPROACH (d)

The State Fire Service Training Program will develop new curriculum and training resources based upon state and national professional standards.

RATIONALE

Developing new curriculum and training resources based upon state and national standards is also needed. Two examples should suffice: The Firefighter I, II, and III courses have been developed nationally, but Alaska has developed only the Firefighter I course. Additional resources are necessary to develop Firefighter II and III, which are more complex. Fire and arson investigation related curriculums also need to be developed, as noted elsewhere in this report.

APPROACH (e)

The State Fire Service Training Program will establish training and education standards for Fire Service personnel, in all fire service activities.

RATIONALE

Establishment of training and education standards is another desirable effort. Such standards permit the determination of competency in a uniform manner, and provide incentives for personal advancement. Standardization of training also enhances multi-departmental response by ensuring that firefighters all employ the same procedures. Also, OSHA requires standardization of training and education.

(GOAL B - Continued)

APPROACH (f)

The State Fire Service Training Program continues to administer an adequate grant award program to support local and regional training programs.

RATIONALE

The grant award program by the state provides resources to local fire departments for training, both to employ instructors from outside the community, travel costs to receive specialized training elsewhere, and to support and enhance local training capabilities such as the purchase of a movie projector, etc. Grants are limited to $1,500 or less to one department, and $3,500 for regional use involving several departments. Some 35-40 grants have been made each year. However, the appropriation does not fund the total of all grant requests, and as a result, these maximum figures have been reduced so that each grantee receives some assistance, although less than needed.

OBJECTIVE 2

The state will maintain and encourage expansion of a comprehensive Fire Science Technology program within the community college system.

APPROACH (a)

Through the professional fire service organizations and the State Fire Marshal's Office, the State Fire Service Training Program will coordinate efforts with the University of Alaska, and the community colleges to support and further develop the Fire Science Technology programs, including exploring the nonresident extension program as a delivery system. In addition, although present circumstances do not support a four-year degree program in Alaska, information should be compiled about how a four-year degree in the Fire Science field could be attained through a combination of existing opportunities in the community college/University of Alaska system, and other universities in other states, such as Oregon, and this information should be made available to the personnel in the Fire Services.

RATIONALE

Presently, only two community colleges (Anchorage and Fairbanks) offer fire science programs, due to a combination of insufficient numbers of students (minimum of eight is required), lack of instructors, and the cost of presenting the course. One approach to surmount these problems is course presentation by video, via the "Learn Alaska" and the "Rural Learning Centers." Another approach is to carefully review personnel in local fire departments as potential instructors. Finally, the community colleges must work closely with local departments to obtain a quality program.

Encourage and support financial assistance to the five Regional Fire Training Centers to enhance regional training capabilities.

APPROACH (a)

The State Fire Marshal's Office, in conjunction with the State Fire Service Training Program will seek an appropriation of $200,000 for a two-year period for an urban and a rural regional fire training center to enable each to support training program development, course costs, student travel, training coordinators, and related administrative costs.

RATIONALE

At present, all the training centers, with the exception of Anchorage, are not being used to capacity. As a result, they are not cost effective in terms of training benefits received from the $7.1 million required for their construction. They are not being used to capacity because of lack of funds to support student travel expenses, program and course development and delivery, and the lack of someone to coordinate the numerous aspects of making a training center function in an efficient and effective manner. Although these training centers are for local use, some local governments question spending local funds to manage the centers.

Certainly, the need for training exists. There are many times more firefighters in Alaska than, for example, police officers. The Department of Transportation and Public Facilities, which provides fire protection at certain state-owned airports, estimates their fire activities involve some 700 full-time state employees and volunteers from tenant agencies at the airports, and DOT&PF is not usually thought of as a major firefighting organization. Marine firefighting training has barely occurred in Alaska. The wildlands firefighting training adds another entire dimension to training of firefighters. In addition, since the legislation creating the training center provided for the training of all emergency services personnel, the training centers can be used for emergency medical training, rescue groups, and law enforcement agencies, in addition to the Fire Service. The need for the training centers to be fully operational, in terms of personnel to be trained, should not be in doubt.

An appropriation of $100,000 for each of the two years to the State Fire Marshal's Office for sub-granting to fund one urban and one rural training center is proposed. A match by the local government of perhaps 25% would ensure local effort. Criteria could be set to determine which urban and which rural training centers would receive the funding.

Such appropriation would result in cost effective training centers and better-trained Fire Service personnel. Upon proven effectiveness, the funding should become part of the annual budget of the State Fire Marshal.

Because of the inactivity at present in the Regional Training Centers, there is increasing interest in some communities in developing their own training facility. These would probably not be as effective as a well-functioning regional facility, such as Anchorage has been able to develop, and would certainly be duplicative of already-existing training facilities that lack only the financial resources to offer training in standardized courses for all Fire Service and other emergency services personnel throughout the state.

GOAL C - CAPITAL PROJECTS

The state will support capital projects for fire and life safety on a cooperative basis with local government.

OBJECTIVE 1

The state will attempt to enhance the understanding of local government officials, concerning sources of revenue, the states capital budget process as it relates to fire protection projects and the responsibilities local governments assume when such projects are approved.

APPROACH (a)

In cooperation with the Department of Community and Regional Affairs, appropriate sections of future editions of the "Rural Capital Improvements Guidebook" and its counterpart, the "Urban Capital Improvements Guidebook," will be expanded to include a section pertaining to Objective 1. Other initiatives within the department may also be appropriate.

RATIONALE

The Department of Community and Regional Affairs continues to develop planning and other expertise about government at the local level, and has a staff of 14 Local Government Specialists located in six places throughout the state to provide on-site assistance to local governments in their respective areas. These employees are the logical delivery system through which local officials can become aware of the means to obtain capital projects pertaining to fire and life safety and the implications and responsibilities that such projects carry for local government upon award of the funding.

In addition, a representative of the Fire Marshal's Office could present seminars about meeting Objective 1 to the Local Government Specialists during their periodic conferences, and other opportunities as appropriate.

APPROACH (b)

Revenue sharing funds, derived from the existence of fire protection capabilities, should be considered by local governments for the enhancement of fire protection services.

(GOAL C - Continued)

RATIONALE

Revenue sharing funds, with the exception of funds for health services, hospitals, and road maintenance which involve federal matching, cannot be earmarked for specific purposes. Determination of the use of revenue sharing funds is recognized as a proper function of local government.

However, local fire chiefs who are not now closely associated with local government are urged to do so, particularly as involves attending public hearings concerning spending of shared revenues as required by law (Title 29). Similarly, while respecting the prerogatives of local government decisions concerning shared revenues, local officials are urged to carefully review the needs of their fire department and extend every consideration to requests by the fire chief for funds to improve fire protection services.

OBJECTIVE 2

A project review mechanism is needed to ensure that communities have both the necessary information about the most appropriate facility, and/or fire protection equipment for their community, and an understanding of the specific responsibilities that must be assumed by the community.

APPROACH (a)

A directory of various kinds of fire and life safety apparatus appropriate to the smaller communities should be developed by the State Fire Marshal's Office as a guide for local communities that wish to institute or upgrade existing fire and life safety capabilities.

RATIONALE

The past is replete with examples of inappropriate fire protection equipment being purchased by and for smaller communities that are ill-equipped to deal with it upon its arrival in the community. Lack of security, lack of warm storage, lack of trained personnel, and other problems all combine to result in poor utilization of state funds, and create an illusion of fire protection, when in fact little or no fire protection may actually exist. Local officials are often at the mercy of fire equipment salesmen, who often may not know of winter village conditions, including the lack of roads, and whose objective seems to be to make a sale, rather than to ensure the best possible fire protection equipment for available money.

The State Fire Marshal's Office, in conjunction with Fire Service professionals knowledgeable about rural, arctic firefighting conditions and requirements, should meet to develop the best firefighting response capabilities in rural Alaska. Rural areas may be categorized according to weather conditions, existence of roads, hydrants and water systems, local topography, existing fire apparatus, population, and other criteria that will, in the aggregate, produce selection criteria for fire protection equipment best suited to the several categories of communities that emerge from such efforts. Substantial information now exists with the Department of Community and Regional Affairs, the Department of Transportation and Public Facilities, and from the first Task Force. This information should be reviewed, changed as needed, printed, and made available to local governments, members of the state Legislature who often fund local requests for fire equipment, the Governor's Office, which often receives requests for fire protection funding, the Department of Community and Regional Affairs, and others.

APPROACH (b)

In accordance with AS 18.70.080-085, the revenue requests for capital projects and equipment destined for communities without a well-developed fire service should be reviewed by the State Fire Marshal's Office.

RATIONALE

Closely allied to Approach A, relating to a directory of selection criteria for fire apparatus and equipment, relevant to local conditions, is the ongoing need to assist local governments and fire departments, upon their request, in reviewing the choices they have made to ensure the desired items best meet the needs of the community and that those items in fact have been received. The directory can provide only selection criteria of equipment relative to community circumstances. Consultation with the State Fire Marshal's Office will ensure that the available dollars will be spent in the wisest manner.

Requests for equipment are received by the Department of Community and Regional Affairs and the Governor's Office from both communities and legislators. The State Fire Marshal's Office, with possible assistance from the Technical Assistance Teams, will be able to advise legislators and local officials on the long-term impact of equipment requests. The advisory assessment may include training needs, storage and security needs of equipment, recurring maintenance and operating costs, warranty coverage for major repairs, and related aspects.

Members of the legislature should be advised of these services as a means to insure that their constituents receive the greatest possible benefit from legislative appropriations.

GOAL D - ARSON

Reduce the impact and incidence of arson fires in Alaska.

OBJECTIVE 1

Coordinate the efforts and improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the various agencies that deal with the crime of arson, including but not limited to Fire Service, law enforcement, prosecutors, the insurance industry, business owners, and the public.

(GOAL D - Continued)

APPROACH (a)

Training curriculum and certification be developed by the State Fire Service Training Program for Fire Service personnel involved in investigation of fire cause and origin.

RATIONALE

Training standards and certification have been developed by the State Fire Service Training Program and are now in existence for line firefighters, officers, and instructors. These national standards in use now in Alaska are used to certify the knowledge and proficiency of individuals against known minimum standards. Local jurisdictions may add to these minimum standards as appropriate.

No similar standards have yet been developed and adopted for the purpose of state certification for individuals investigating possible arson fires in Alaska. The Alaska Association of Fire and Arson Investigators is an obvious resource agency to assist in curriculum development and certification. Fire investigators in the State Fire Marshal's Office and in the larger departments are reasonably well trained by having attended various workshops and courses both in Alaska and other states, but their expertise varies with the amount of formal training and "hands on experience;" thus, each individual fire investigator must present his own credentials in court in order to be accepted as an expert witness. Standards and certification for fire investigators would improve the proficiency of individuals to a nationally accepted level, help establish credentials as a state recognized and certified fire investigator, and generally improve the capability of the state and its political subdivisions to address the crime of arson.

APPROACH (b)

The State Fire Service Training Program will develop and offer fire and arson investigation training courses for local fire departments.

RATIONALE

The key to success in reducing arson is to initially determine, or at least highly suspect, that in fact an arson fire occurred, or probably occurred. The danger remains that evidence of arson will unwittingly be destroyed by local firefighters, particularly in the smaller communities, who may not be attentive to possible arson fires. Firefighters are certainly the first persons on the scene of a fire and must be aware of what to look for to determine possible arson. Once the cause and origin of the fire has been determined, and evidence of arson has been found, the experts in fire and arson investigation can be called in.

The Alaska Association of Fire and Arson Investigators might sponsor such training through a grant from the State Fire Service Training Program.

APPROACH (c)

In coordination with the Alaska Association of Fire and Arson Investigators, the Commissioner of Public Safety and the Attorney General shall jointly develop and maintain a special arson team of persons with the needed expertise and background in the fields of fire cause and origin, criminal investigation, and prosecution that can be called upon, at no cost, to respond to requests for assistance anywhere in the state.

RATIONALE

Historically, arson has been a crime that falls somewhere between the Fire Service and law enforcement since successful investigation requires the expertise of the Fire Investigator to initially determine the cause and origin of a fire and the expertise of the law enforcement investigator to successfully apprehend the perpetrator. Rarely has there been a single individual competent in both fields. In addition, the enmity that from time to time occurs between the Fire Service and law enforcement personnel has acted to separate the two emergency services, rather than drawing them together. Successful arson investigation, which requires both fields of expertise, has predictably suffered. As the result of relatively few arson cases being prosecuted, even with arson being formally recognized as a Part One crime by the FBI, the District Attorneys tend to not be experienced in, or knowledgeable about, arson prosecution, and may be reluctant to accept arson cases. Law enforcement personnel who in the past have attended specialized arson training courses and who were viewed as the "arson investigators" have often been transferred or reassigned to other duties. In short, the necessity for dual expertise, the resulting question of responsibility toward arson investigation, and the unfamiliarity with the crime by prosecutors, have all led to arson's being a difficult crime to detect and prove in court.

Needed is a team of capable, well-trained, experienced, and knowledgeable specialists in arson investigation from law enforcement, the Statewide Crime Lab, the fire insurance industry, and the prosecutor's office. It should be developed jointly by the department heads in state government responsible for arson investigations, law enforcement agencies, the forensic sciences, and the prosecutors. The Association of Fire and Arson Investigators can provide expert consultation in the development of the team. The team is not intended to be a "Strike Force," but rather should be comprised of individuals with long-term assignment to the team, who receive specialized training, can work well with local arson investigation personnel, and who can respond quickly upon request from the local level to suspected arson fires anywhere in the state.

APPROACH (d)

The State Fire Marshal's Office, in conjunction with the Alaska Association of Fire and Arson Investigators will explore the establishment of a statewide, toll-free arson hot line in the State Fire Marshal's Office, and the availability of private funds for an award program.

(GOAL D - Continued)

RATIONALE

The Crime Stoppers program in several Alaskan communities has proven to be a successful means to stimulate citizen involvement in crime deterrence and apprehension of suspects. A similar program is being explored now on a statewide basis for information about arson fires by the Association of Fire and Arson Investigators. The arson hot line could possibly complement Crime Stoppers in the communities in which Crime Stoppers is located, and Crime Stoppers could complement the Arson hot line in the communities in which it is located. The insurance companies could be contacted for money to use as rewards, which may be financially attractive to them.

Washington State has an ongoing, and apparently a successful arson hot line program. The Municipality of Anchorage had an arson hot line, but no longer has it, and Kodiak combines an arson line with their Crime Stoppers. These and other authorities should be contacted to study the approaches used, and the reasons why success or failure occurred, with the possibility of adopting the best of all experiences for a statewide arson hot line.

APPROACH (e)

Part of the fire education program within the State Fire Marshal's Office will contain information about arson prevention.

RATIONALE

Part of the emphasis on improved arson detection and investigation is a better understanding of the crime by the public. The impact of an arson crime extends beyond the exact item burned. Several buildings may ultimately be involved as well as the economic loss to a community.

In addition, arson losses tend to increase both the cost of insurance premiums and fire suppression. A more alert public helps to remove the mystique from the crime of arson and results in a greater willingness to come forth with possible information about the crime. All of these aspects tend to adversely impact the person contemplating arson and to increase apprehension if arson has been committed. Special award incentives have proven their effectiveness in drastically reducing the overall property loss and increasing prosecution efforts.

GOAL E - CODE ENFORCEMENT

Ensure that at least minimum fire and life safety codes are adopted in a timely manner and enforced at the state and/or local government levels.

OBJECTIVE 1

The state shall promote a uniform interagency system for building and safety code enforcement to encompass all aspects of construction and building maintenance, including but not limited to fire, electrical, structural, plumbing, sanitation, energy, handicapped and accident safety, and the provision of incentives for local jurisdictions to administer their own programs.

APPROACH (a)

The State Fire Marshal's Office will conduct semi-annual interagency workshops involving all agencies charged with code enforcement to resolve interpretational differences, overlapping authority and related problems, and to establish consistent enforcement procedures.

RATIONALE

Presently, interpretational differences by various enforcement agencies can result in one agency's approving a certain feature and another disapproving the same feature, and the granting of variances to existing codes resulting in frustrations and delays to architects, builders, and ultimately the public.

Enforcement procedures likewise suffer from similar lack of consistency. Both areas would be improved by broad agreements amongst participating agencies.

APPROACH (b)

Through the State Fire Marshal's Office, all state agencies charged with code enforcement should mutually explore the establishment of professional standards for all personnel involved in code enforcement, to ensure creditable service to the citizens of Alaska.

RATIONALE

Professionalization of personnel involved in code enforcement will lead to better service to the citizens of the state, in a similar manner to ironing out and agreeing upon code interpretation. Presently, code enforcement personnel at the state and local levels have varying backgrounds and experience in their field. As an example: The Department of Health and Social Services may request that the State Fire Marshal's Office conduct a fire inspection at the ABC Kiddy Drop in a certain community. Since the State Fire Marshal may not have a representative in the community, he will often call or write the chief of the local fire department, asking him to perform the inspection. The local department's personnel vary in their knowledge, experience, and on-site perceptions concerning code violations.

Development of professional standards could be a working subcommittee of the semi-annual interagency workshops proposed in approach A, above.

APPROACH (c)

Through the Division of Governmental Coordination in the Office of Management and Budget, all state agencies charged with fire and life safety code enforcement should review their respective new safety standards as quickly as possible after they become available, and should prepare them as a package for review to the Department of Law, leading to their adoption or rejection, within six months of their publishing date.

RATIONALE

To ensure the safety of a building, various codes are issued every three years, such as the Uniform Building Code and Uniform Fire Code, Mechanical Code, Electrical Code, etc. Revisions are issued annually, and in some cases, quarterly "Applications and Interpretations" manuals are issued. These codes and their revisions and interpretations are used by the State Fire Marshal, the State Department of Labor, and various municipalities as the minimum standards that are used for plan reviews and on-site inspections.

Obvious problems occur when inspectors do not all use the most recent codes. For example, the cities of Anchorage, Kodiak, Juneau, Soldotna, Kenai, Valdez, and perhaps others are now using the latest Uniform Building and Fire Code (1982), but the State Fire Marshal's Office is using the 1979 edition, while the Electrical Inspectors in the Department of Labor are using the 1984 edition of the National Electrical Code.

State agencies with code enforcement responsibilities should review new codes expeditiously and request priority review of them by the Department of Law, on the basis that they relate to the safety and well-being of the state's residents. Rather than proceeding individually, the agencies should form a group through the efforts of the Division of Governmental Coordination and present their new regulations to the Department of Law. If substantially backlogged, the Department of Law is urged to have the review of the regulations contracted to a private law firm. To further reduce delay, the state agencies involved are asked to have developed a working draft of the regulations they want to have promulgated.

APPROACH (d)

The State Fire Marshal's Office and the Department of Labor, Division of Labor Standards and Safety, will explore the concept of state and local code enforcement and plans review personnel being located together, while retaining individual agency identification, thereby creating a one-stop shopping center for architects and others seeking building safety approval and to explore the concept of code compliance for both new construction and remodeling done to the single-family dwelling, where not performed by local building officials.

RATIONALE

Presently, there are no fewer than nine state departments that perform a variety of building regulatory functions, ranging from AHFC inspections to waste disposal permits. Within this broad group, two agencies - the Department of Labor and the State Fire Marshal's Office - are involved in building-fire and life-safety concerns. Additionally, there may be federal and local agencies also involved in building and life safety, depending upon area and the specific project.

Grouping the building safety code and plans review people from state agencies is desirable, as well as including federal and local personnel with similar responsibilities, to the extent possible. By grouping, conflicts in interpretation can be resolved on the spot, saving time for all involved. Additionally, as each individual travels in the area, he can note deficiencies and hazards for one of the other specialists in the combined office. Each may also be able to offer assistance to the other when traveling by checking to determine that previous requirements by another inspector in a different specialty have been complied with, thereby making each other's job more efficient.

Although not now being done, and admittedly an extremely big step, and one fraught with difficulty, the concept of code compliance being extended to the single-family dwelling (from the present four-plex building or larger) in both new construction and remodeling should also be explored. Homes are by far the single greatest location of fires in Alaska, and until aggressive action is initiated, the fire loss in Alaska will remain high.

APPROACH (e)

Legislation should be developed by the State Fire Marshal's Office providing for more substantial sanctions against anyone who knowingly changes approved building plans and specifications relating to new construction without obtaining prior approval by the SFM, and anyone who circumvents life-safety codes thereby endangering the life and safety of future building occupants.

RATIONALE

The vast majority of architects design, and builders build, their buildings in compliance with the fire and life safety code. Some, however, do not, for a variety of reasons including economy in construction. At present, the existing statutes provide for a $500 fine for architects not designing to code. This amount can be described as an operating expense, and is not any measure of deterrence. The sanctions should be increased and include suspension of license of the contractor and/or architect.

APPROACH (f)

In cooperation with appropriate federal agencies, the State Fire Marshal's Office, the state and its political subdivisions should explore the adoption of NFPA 101 standards and/or the state should impose its own standards for health care facilities in coordination with federal authorities.

(GOAL E - Continued)

RATIONALE

A part of the responsibilities involved with the acceptance of federal funds is the application of the NFPA 101 standards for fire and life safety in health care facilities. NFPA 101 standards differ from those of the state, and in some cases, are less stringent than provided by state regulations. This conflict could be resolved by the S.F.M.'s using a combination of NFPA 101 regulations and state regulations.

This proposal also has disadvantages -- primarily the upgrading to state code that will have to be done, and the cost to do it, when these health care facilities are turned over to the state and/or local governments.

The Task Force recognizes the inherent problems with both the status quo and the idea of adopting NFPA 101 Standards, and makes no firm recommendation at this time, other than to identify the problem, and the need to deal with it.

APPROACH (g)

Through the State Fire Marshal's Office, local governments will be encouraged to undertake fire and life safety code enforcement, consistent with their desires and long-term objectives in fire prevention. In support of local code enforcement, legislation will be prepared by the State Fire Marshal and the Department of Community and Regional Affairs for funds to provide for the cost of the first two years' efforts by three local governments for plans review and subsequent building inspection. Provisions will be made for State Fire Marshal's Office to visit these communities periodically to support local code enforcement.

RATIONALE

Presently, only Anchorage, Fairbanks, Juneau, and Valdez provide fire and life safety code compliance. Other communities rely upon the State Fire Marshal's Office for plans review and site inspections, and of course the State Fire Marshal's Office also provides those services for areas outside organized cities and boroughs.

Fire chiefs in many cities want to perform these services, recognizing the limitations upon the State Fire Marshal's Office, and the need locally for code compliance, but local politics all but prohibit them doing so. It is far more difficult for the local fire chief to close down an unsafe structure that houses one of the few local businesses in town or for him to note deficiencies in buildings owned by community leaders, than to have a representative from the state to do so. In addition, the State has historically performed this function.

Notwithstanding the difficulties involved, and they vary in extent from one community to another, it is nonetheless desirable to have local governments assume greater fire protection responsibilities.

A financial incentive to defray the initial costs involved could be structured and awarded to those communities that undertake fire and life safety code compliance.

The issue of local government's performing code enforcement functions necessarily opens the question of the scope of fire protection responsibilities of local governments. Historically, fire protection in the United States has been a local responsibility. Code enforcement appears to be a reasonable extension of this responsibility. Coupled with a state grant to defray the first two years' costs, after which time the fees charged for plans review should offset in part future costs, enforcement of codes by local government can be a significant means to reduce fire losses in Alaska.

GOAL F - EMERGENCY MEDICAL SERVICES

The overall goal of the Alaska Emergency Medical Services (EMS) program is to establish a comprehensive, coordinated system of emergency medical services to the citizens of Alaska.[16]

OBJECTIVE 1

Ensure that citizens and visitors gain easy access to Emergency Medical Services; that initial response is expeditious; that appropriate lifesaving and stabilization measures are rendered at the scene; and that patients are transported or transferred in a timely and efficient manner to facilities capable of effecting maximum recovery and rehabilitation.

APPROACH (a)

Emergency Medical Services Section, within the Department of Health and Social Services, should continue to coordinate federal, state, and regional official and volunteer agencies involved in Alaska EMS system by providing overall medical direction for statewide EMS system development.

RATIONALE

Numerous governmental and private agencies at the federal, state, and local levels provide some aspect of emergency medical services which collectively make up the statewide EMS system. These organizations include, but are not limited to, the U.S. military, such as the Military Assistance to Safety and Traffic (MAST) program at Ft. Wainwright, the U.S. Coast Guard, the U.S. D.O.T. through development of training curricula and standards, the Alaska State Troopers, the Alaska Division of Emergency Services (Disaster Office), the EMS Section in the Department of Health and Social Services, local hospitals and medical clinics, local fire departments, local ambulance services, air ambulance and medivac services, Regional EMS Councils and other EMS training agencies, the Alaska Area Native Health Service, Native Regional Health Corporations, and local governments. Under AS 18.08.010, the EMS Section within the Department of Health and Social Services is responsible for "coordinating public and private agencies engaged in the planning and delivery of emergency medical services to plan an EMS system," and to "assist public and private agencies to deliver emergency medical services through the award of grants in aid."

---

[16] This section has been excerpted from the State EMS Plan, Department of Health and Social Services.

As the levels of EMS training and equipment become more sophisticated, the concept of medical control becomes increasingly important. Under this concept, physicians from the various medical specialities (e.g., emergency medicine, surgery, pediatrics, toxicology, etc.) assume responsibilities for training, continuing medical education, and development of treatment guidelines for categories of medical emergencies. At the local level, all pre-hospital emergency medical services must have physician sponsors or medical advisory boards to oversee the quality of medical care provided to patients in the field. This includes medical communications between physicians or hospitals, and EMTs or paramedics in the field.

This concept of medical control is part of the entire EMS system including certification requirements, planning, approval of medical equipment, development of treatment guidelines, development of communications systems, training programs, and evaluation.

The State EMS Section has routinely solicited and received assistance from the medical community to help develop a statewide, medically accountable EMS system. To assist with this effort, the EMS Section has an emergency medicine physician on contract as State EMS Medical Director, and works with a Governor-appointed Advisory Council on EMS which has four physician members.

APPROACH (b)

Certify emergency medical personnel and services according to state statutes and regulations to ensure certain minimum standards of emergency medical care.

RATIONALE

As pre-hospital emergency medical services become more sophisticated, more advanced medical care is provided in the field. In recent years, pre-hospital EMS personnel have learned such skills as the use of pneumatic anti-shock garments, intravenous therapy, esophageal obturator airways or endotracheal intubation, drug therapy, and cardiac defibrillation. Basic and advanced life support services must be proficient in applying cervical collars and backboards, using oxygen, suction, traction splints, CPR, and a wide variety of other skills.

Numerous national studies have shown that EMTs and paramedics lose these skills after certain periods of time unless they receive continuing medical education and refresher training. There also is a need for standardized curricula and qualifications for approved instructors. For these reasons, AS 18.08.080 was passed in 1978 making the Department of Health and Social Services responsible for adopting regulations establishing standards and procedures for issuance, renewal reissuance, revocation, and suspension of certificates for EMTs, EMT Instructors, and ambulance services.

These regulations have been adopted, and currently there are over 2,900 state-certified EMTs and EMT Instructors in Alaska and approximately 75 state-certified ambulance services.

In 1984, the State EMS Section, with assistance from EMT Instructors, developed state examinations and a computerized scoring system which provides the statistical reliability of questions. Using this system, the State EMS Section can provide ongoing evaluation and updating of the certification examinations.

In the future, changes in requirements or skill levels of EMS personnel should be made according to results of medical studies of EMS services and skills.

APPROACH (c)

The Regional EMS Councils should continue to provide and administer financial assistance for Regional EMS development, provide technical assistance to regional and local EMS agencies, and educate the public about appropriate action in emergencies and emergency procedures.

RATIONALE

Regional EMS Councils were formed throughout Alaska in the mid to late 1970s. These agencies, which initially received federal grants, now receive state grant funds from the state EMS Section for operating and capital equipment expenses. These regional councils provide training, continuing medical education, technical assistance, planning assistance, equipment purchase, communications system development assistance, public information and education, and testing for certified EMS personnel. With the assistance from Regional EMS Councils and state funding, there is a growing number of EMTs and trained first responders, and three times as many organized ambulance services exist in Alaska as did ten years ago. The Regional EMS Councils also provide training and continuing medical education to doctors, nurses, and mid-level practitioners (nurse practitioners), especially those working in rural areas.

As the number of organized EMS services and trained EMS responders continue to grow, there is a need for increased funding to support widespread training activities. According to needs assessments by the Regional EMS Councils, there still are significant needs for EMS training and equipment in many small rural and bush communities throughout Alaska.

APPROACH (d)

Seek improved emergency medical services through legislative action, by monitoring and evaluating EMS system development throughout the state, and by planning and prioritizing continued program development based on systematic needs assessment and epidemiological research.

RATIONALE

The EMS Section and EMS Regions have developed a planning guide entitled "Alaska EMS Goals: A Guide for Planning Alaska's Emergency Medical Services System." This planning guide uses the State Health Planning approach to planning for services by level of community (e.g., small village - Level I, subregional center - Level II, regional center - Level III, and urban center - Level IV). This planning guide also lists goals for rural highways, high-risk occupation sites, and communities with less than 25 people. Using this planning guide, the EMS regions complete community checklists on each community every year, to determine where there are EMS deficiencies and to help determine priorities for funding and technical assistance. Also, ambulance services are required to complete annual surveys which include types of services and numbers of runs by category, and the EMS Section analyzes other available sources of data, such as vital statistics to help determine the overall effectiveness of the statewide EMS system.

For FY86, the state EMS Section and EMS Regions have established priority needs for more training and medical equipment in Level I and II communities and completion of a statewide EMS communications system. The communications system includes completion of the microwave backbone along all major highways, and emergency radios (VHF or HF-SSB) for those remote villages which have reported recent communications problems with existing phones or radios. The microwave backbone on major highways provides EMS radio channels, as well as radio channels for the State Troopers, Alaska Division of Emergency Services (Disaster Office), Department of Natural Resources, Divisions of Parks and Forestry (including radio coverage for wildland fire fighting), and DOT&PF highway maintenance crews. Completion of this communications system is a high priority for the Department of Health and Social Services, EMS Section, as well as other agencies which will use this system. The Division of Telecommunications Operations has responsibility for implementation and maintenance of the system.

In future years, the State Epidemiologist should provide epidemiological research assistance to help determine specific causes and intervention strategies to reduce the high rates of deaths and injuries resulting from accidents in Alaska.

GOAL G - WILDLANDS FIRE PROTECTION

Improve the system of fire protection for both wildlands and structures in all areas of Alaska.

Better utilize and increase existing fire protection capabilities of the state and local level through a closer working relationship of wildlands and structural fire fighting resources.

APPROACH (a)

The Department of Natural Resources will propose a special an appropriation of $100,000 for the Division of Forestry for each of two years to expand the presently funded, Rural Community Fire Protection Program that provides $64,000 annually, which has been administered by the Department since 1976.

RATIONALE

The federal program has remained at $64,000 annually for many years, while the acreage the state is responsible for protecting increases almost every year. A key element in the strategy of the Department is to involve local fire departments to provide the initial response to accessible wildlands fires. Local response is advantageous to the state because local forces may succeed in extinguishing the blaze, and if not, will at least retard the spread, and thereby limit the damage. To assist local departments, whose primary objective is structural fire suppression, to be better equipped to fight all rural fires requires more than the existing federal and state aid currently available. An appropriation of $100,000 for each of two years will substantially meet existing needs without any major staff additions in the department. Subsequent-year funding will be incorporated into the Department's budget request to the Governor and the legislature.

APPROACH (b)

The Division of Foretry will transfer or make loan of wildlands fire prevention and suppression apparatus, equipment and tools from the Division of Forestry to rural firefighting agencies, primarily during the non-fire season.

RATIONALE

The wildlands fire season extends from spring until fall, but during the late fall, winter and early spring, wildlands firefighting capabilities are largely in storage, and only skeleton crews are available. The Department is willing to loan certain items of equipment that are not being used during the non-fire season to local fire departments to improve their response capabilities. The cost of maintenance must be borne by local departments. The state may experience a more frequent replacement period and the cost of increased property records and accountability.

APPROACH (c)

The Division of Forestry will expand the existing level of training of local fire departments in the techniques of wildlands fire prevention and suppression.

RATIONALE

The present training of personnel in local fire departments is on a time-available basis, which is inadequate. Additional training would be available on a scheduled basis by extending the employment period of a few seasonal employees of the Department and providing some travel funds and training aids. Annual cost is estimated at $50,000.

APPROACH (d)

In coordination with the State Fire Marshal, the Division of Forestry will provide technical assistance to groups interested in forming a volunteer fire department where none now exists, and develop agreements with local fire departments concerning their assistance in wildlands firefighting.

RATIONALE

Assisting local groups of interested citizens who wish to form a fire department will provide not only local structural fire protection, but also holds the potential for additional local suppression forces for wildlands fires. Agreements would provide for local departments making the initial attack on accessible wildlands fires. Coordination with the State Fire Marshal is essential in organizing new departments. This phase could be accomplished by $15,000 for travel expenses for existing forestry staff.

APPROACH (e)

The Division of Emergency Services within the Alaska Department of Military Affairs, the Division of Forestry within the Department of Natural Resources, and the State Fire Marshal's Office within the Department of Public Safety should plan for and implement a program that will provide the trained and organized manpower and the suppression equipment that will be needed to meet the demand of rural fire disasters that could occur within the state because of the increase in urban-rural interface.

RATIONALE

The federal government has recognized for many years that expanding rural populations create the potential for disaster fires that spread in a vegetative ground cover to involve improvements such as homes, schools, industries, businesses, farms, crops, recreation residences and many other types of developments. These fires threaten human lives as well as heavy property loss. Such fires may originate from many causes, including related disasters such as earthquake or explosions.

The federal government has set up a program under the Disaster Relief Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-288) to provide assistance to states when a disaster reaches certain proportions and relief has been requested by the Governor of the state. This program requires that the Federal Emergency Management Agency review the potential impact of a fire before assistance is granted. The State of Alaska has requested assistance for fire disasters under this program several times in the past but has received assistance on very few occasions mainly because of the delays imposed by the number of agencies and people involved.

The State of Alaska needs a disaster relief program that can be implemented in a shorter time frame than is now possible under the federal program. This program should be capable of being implemented before a fire reaches the proportions of a federal disaster.

A statewide fire disaster preparedness plan and the resources to cope with such a disaster could and should be implemented by the Division of Emergency Services, the State Fire Marshal, and the State Forester prior to the fire disaster that will occur because of the presently occurring urban-wildlands interface.

APPROACH (f)

Structural and wildlands firefighting agencies should provide mutual assistance to each other in matters requiring legislative action.

RATIONALE

Historically, wildlands and structural firefighting agencies have independently pursued their legislative objectives with little or no coordination between themselves. The Fire Chiefs Association and Firefighters Association have jointly hired a lobbyist to represent them. The Department of Natural Resources has pursued its legislative needs through the executive budget process of state government. Recognizing that both structural and wildlands firefighters are part of the fire protection community, coordination of their respective objectives would present a stronger case in the Legislature and generally enhance the protection afforded to the citizenry of the state.

GOAL H - INTERAGENCY PLANNING, COORDINATION, AND CONSOLIDATION

The Governor shall require interagency planning and coordination by all state agencies having fire safety responsibilities.

OBJECTIVE 1

Increase the accuracy, timeliness, and scope of all fire-related data in Alaska.

(GOAL H - Continued)

APPROACH (a)

Expedite final approvals by Department of Administration and Department of Public Safety, to implement the micro-computer project involving long fire departments and the State Fire Marshal's Office.

RATIONALE

The computer project involves $100,000 for the purchase of micro-computers and associated terminals. The equipment is slated for installation in the 10 local fire departments with the greatest volume of fire incidents. This will enable local departments to input their ANFIRS information directly, rather than for later entry by the Fire Marshal's Office, and for obtaining information from the data base for a number of reasons, such as for budgeting purposes, public information programs, etc. The system also allows the local departments to keep records about vehicle maintenance, training records, etc.

APPROACH (b)

The State Fire Marshal's Office and the Department of Natural Resources should jointly explore whether the ANFIRS data base can be expanded to include wildlands fire data also, thereby creating a single point for compilation of all fire-related data in Alaska.

RATIONALE

Currently, state wildlands fire data is gathered and analyzed by the state Department of Natural Resources, and fire data from local fire departments is gathered and analyzed by the State Fire Marshal. Some degree of duplication of effort and possibly computer resources must occur. Although, historically, wildlands firefighting and structural firefighting have been thought of as essentially separate elements, the increasing state wildlands fire responsibility, the build-up of structures in semi-rural settings, and the proposed increase in coordination between these two fire-related functions all seem to argue convincingly that the data-gathering resources of both agencies might be combined, with a broader scope and higher-quality data output as the result. A combined data function would also serve to further coordinate the activities of both agencies.

APPROACH (c)

The State Fire Marshal, in conjunction with the state's forensic pathologists will determine how to improve the reporting data concerning fires and fire fatalities, caused directly or indirectly by alcohol abuse.

RATIONALE

Existing statistics about causes of fires often indicate the cause as "wood stove," "cigarette," or similar causal factor. Unavailable is any reliable data that show the extent to which, if any, alcohol abuse contributes to these fires. The fire caused by a "woodstove," may in fact have occurred as the result of an intoxicated person throwing a flammable liquid on the fire to get it burning a bit better. The "cigarette," in itself a difficult way to start a fire, may have dropped onto the bed, when the intoxicated person passed out, and who several hours later died from smoke inhalation from a smoldering mattress. Other, almost unlimited examples are known to fire service personnel through out the state.

The extent of alcohol abuse as the basic cause of the fire must be known if Alaska is to have any significant success with its fire prevention efforts, since the thrust of the prevention effort must be directed to the true cause of the fire. The cause of the fatality on the smoldering couch was, in strict medical terms asphyxiation, but in practical terms was alcohol abuse.

To the extent alcohol abuse can be shown to be a major cause of fire, then prevention efforts should be expanded to include work with alcohol abuse agencies and through them, to stress the fire-related hazards of alcohol abuse.

OBJECTIVE 2

The state will perform Master Fire Planning as a cooperative venture with related agencies at the federal, state, regional and local levels.

APPROACH (a)

In cooperation with the Department of Law and the several borough governments, the State Fire Marshal will research whether future Fire Service areas at the local level will, to the extent possible, be developed in such a manner as to preclude creation of islands with no fire protection services, and whether existing islands with no fire protection services will, to the extent possible, be incorporated into one or more of the existing Fire Service areas.

RATIONALE

The problem created in the wake of newly emerging fire service districts is that certain areas do not elect to provide fire protection for themselves and, as a result, form islands surrounded by Fire Service districts. Fires occur within these islands with no fire fighting capabilities, and from time to time result in substantial loss of property and even life. The most recent of a long series of incidents that could be quoted occurred in the Fairbanks area in which two single family dwellings were completely destroyed by fire. One resulted in a fatality, and the other an injury. Such incidents cause considerable anguish to neighboring firefighters, and always result in substantial media coverage. This problem, and the closely allied one of fires occurring next to a Fire Service district, have plagued the Fire Service since before statehood. The fact that the problem still exists is an indication of the difficulties encountered when attempting to solve it.

Although some may say that the residents didn't vote for fire protection and thus were not part of a Fire Service area, and therefore deserve no protection, the fact remains that the minority who did vote for fire protection have been denied it by the majority who, for their own reasons, voted the issue down. There is also the humanitarian aspect of firefighters who hear anguished cries for help, as a person literally burns to death, as occurred in the Fairbanks example, but who cannot respond to those cries for help because the house is not in a Fire Service area.

The issue has defied resolution for many years, and cannot be solved by a three-month effort by the Task Force. However, the problem is recognized here as one of the most pressing issues within the Fire Service community, and deserves continuing analysis and work toward solving it.

Several approaches merit further research:

(1) When new areas are proposed for creation of a new Fire Service area, boroughs may be able to require that such efforts cannot result in islands of unprotected territory. Thus, the lines of the proposed Fire Service district would have to be redrawn to ensure that no unprotected pockets occur.

(2) Seek legal opinion, and possibly legislative action authorizing the State Fire Marshal to request a fire department to respond to a fire outside their area, although without adversely affecting protection resources within the area.

(3) Legislative authorization to charge the homeowners in the unprotected areas for liability insurance, use of equipment and personnel time of the responding department.

None of the foregoing are without disadvantages, and as a result, this report recommends no specific action at this time, other than the extreme necessity of further analysis and research of the matter, with the hope of leading to a resolution of the problem.

APPROACH (b)

The state will establish by legislation a State Fire Commission, as a part of state government, to function as a central focal point for all fire-protection-related projects and programs.

RATIONALE

At present, there are only two agencies within state government with significant responsibilities for fire protection -- the Department of Natural Resources, with authority for wildlands firefighting, and the Division of Fire Prevention within the Department of Public Safety. The Division, popularly referred to as the Fire Marshal's Office, has only 13 professionals and four support personnel in the entire state. This agency never has been able to meet all of its statutory responsibilities, due to inadequate staffing. The Department of Natural Resources has only recently assumed major wildlands firefighting programs, having earlier relied on federal agencies. The agency assumes steadily increasing amounts of acreages resulting from transfers of lands to private ownership through the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act and other programs, and consequently, there is need to increase its fire suppression capabilities.

When the Task Force first met, the idea of a State Fire Commission as a broad policy making body to determine what is in the best interests of the state as concerns fire protection was initially discussed, but was deferred pending completion of all the Goals, Objectives, and Programs the Task Force knew they had to consider. As the Goals and Objectives part of the Task Force report developed, the key to implementation of the various "Approaches" was, in almost every case, action by the state. As the process continued, it became clear that a very substantial increase in personnel would have to occur in the State Fire Marshal's Office, if the recommendations in the "Approach" sections would have any chance of success. A cursory review of all the "Approaches" in the preceding goals will bear out the overwhelming work load being proposed for the State Fire Marshal. However, even if adequately staffed, the Fire Marshal is not involved in all aspects of fire protection in the state, such as industrial fire safety and fire insurance in the private sector, local fire departments, aviation firefighting, or fire service training. Similarly the Division of Forestry is involved only in wildlands fires. Thus neither is able to act as a focal point for all fire related programs in the state, both public and private.

When the report was finished, Task Force members felt they had identified most, if not all, of the serious and pressing issues facing the Fire Service community in Alaska, and had proposed reasonable ways to address the issues, but they were not satisfied with having identified the means whereby their recommendations could be successfully carried out. Few members are optimistic about being able to obtain the additional employees needed in the Fire Marshal's Office, which since statehood has been subservient to the primary concerns of the Department of Public Safety which is law enforcement. Even if the prospect of obtaining additional employees is bright, the State Fire Marshal's Office could not offer the perspective and flexibility that could be obtained from a relatively autonomous, broadly conceived, policy and advisory group to the Chief Executive for dealing with the broad range of issues of concern to the entire fire service community at all levels of government, as well as the private sector.

The idea of a State Fire Commission was again considered in the context of a means to implement the actions recommended by the Task Force. Envisioned is a body similar to the State Board of Education, or the Board of Fisheries, the Board of Game, or the Liquor Control Board. Each is a policy-setting body within their respective fields. The State Board of Education for example, sets policy regarding education in grades K-12, but doesn't administer the Department of Education, nor do the Fish and Game Boards administer the Department of Fish and Game. In similar manner, the State Fire Commission would set policy for state agencies with fire protection responsibilities, would not administer the Fire Marshal's Office, or any other agency with program resposibilities. The Fire Commission could not, of course set policy for local departments, federal agencies or private industry, but could make recommendations to them.

The need for a policy setting body within the fire service at the state level can be well illustrated. One group of needs concerns decision-making by state fire program administrators. Fire Service training at the state level for example is now determined by one person -- the program supervisor. Due to fiscal constraints he has determined that his program would not become involved in training industrial fire brigades. With no overall policy setting group, private industry can only take their concerns to a local legislator, write the Governor or do nothing. Similarly, other officials make decisions about aviation fire safety, fire code enforcement, plans review, wildlands firefighting, etc. All hope their decisions are in the best interest of the state, but at the moment are made in the context of their own agency programs and goals because they are without a mechanism to determine how their decisions impact other state, local, or federal agency fire-related efforts, i.e. there is no overall policy setting group to indicate otherwise, and thus no system of checks and balances with or coordination among state-level fire-related activities.

Another reason for a policy group is to determine what activities the state, local governments and private industry are not performing that should be performed in order to reduce the toll of fire deaths to provide focus or programmatic guidelines. This information would be in the form of recommendations to the Governor for state actions, to the professional fire associations and the Municipal League as concerns local actions, to individual federal agencies appropriate to the recommendations, etc. In short a Fire Commission is seen as providing the broad base of reference or perspective not now available but seen needed to address the wide array of problems and issues facing the Fire Service, and to coordinate a largely diverse group of agencies with fire service programs and responsibilities at all levels of government, and in private industry.

The concept of a Commission has substantial precedence in the other emergency services fields. The law enforcement field is represented by the Police Standards Council whose function is not as broad as that forseen for the Fire Commission. The Emergency Medical Services has a State Advisory Council on Emergency Medical Services comprised of an eleven-member, Governor-appointed board which advises the Department of Health and Social Services on a wide array of planning policies and priorities. Of the three emergency services, only the Fire Service has no broad, relatively autonomous, policy-setting group of the nature of a Council or Commission.

Envisioned by the Task Force is a legislatively-created State Fire Commission, with clearly defined duties, that would in effect provide for overall coordination and balance within the state's fire prevention and control program, and develop and oversee the actual implementation of the state's Fire Service program. Fortunately, certain other states have well-functioning Fire Commissions, and the U. S. Fire Administration has written extensively about a "model" Fire Commission. The Task Force has borrowed from both, after having previously and independently arrived at the conclusion that a Fire Commission could best address Alaska's fire protection needs.

Both the federal model, and the commissions in more than 20 other states the Task Force has information about, have membership that strongly reflects the fire service and affected groups which provides the mechanism for balancing the various views, and represents a true focal point for all fire prevention and control activities.

The State Fire Commission concept being recommended by the Task Force would have members broadly representative of the Fire Service in the state, both in terms of functional specialty and geographic representation, with staggered terms to ensure continuity. Members would be chosen by the Governor. Functional specialties should include code enforcement, wildlands fire protection, structural fire protection in both urban and rural areas, aviation fire protection, marine fire protection, arson investigation, fire insurance, industrial fire protection, fire prevention, public fire education and training for the fire service. Agencies representing these specialties, and others deemed desirable for agency representation include:

- Fire Insurance Industry
- Department of Labor (codes)
- Fire Marshal (codes, fire prevention and public education)
- The technical building professions (codes)
- Department of Natural Resources (wildlands fires)
- Urban Fire Departments (structural fires)
- Association of Fire and Arson Investigators (arson)
- The Legislature
- Rural Fire Departments (structural and wildlands fires)
- Alaska Fire Chiefs/Firefighters Association (fire officers and firefighters)
- Coast Guard (marine firefighting)
- Department of Transportation and Public Facilities (aviation firefighting)
- Supervisor, State Fire Service Training Program (training and education)
- Alaska Municipal League (local government)
- Department of Community & Regional Affairs (fire-related projects with local government)

The proposed State Fire Commission would be located within the Governor's Office and would be administratively tied to either the Governor's Office or to the Department of Public Safety through the Fire Marshal's Office.

The members of the Commission would elect a chairman from their membership. The Commission would also hire an executive director who would serve at the pleasure of the Commission. A two- or three-person staff, (similar to the staff of the Police Standards Council and the EMS Council), and a secretary to accomplish the staff work as directed by the Commission would be needed. The director and staff should be co-located with the State Fire Marshal for maximum coordination of activities and access to information and technical assistance. This location would also permit close liaison with the Division of Forestry and the State Forester for wildlands-fires-related information and technical assistance, and to the Department of Transportation with their aviation fire safety responsibilities.

The State Fire Commission members would serve without compensation, except for travel and per diem, which would be paid by the state at the prevailing rates. The Commission should meet monthly during its formative period during the first year, then reduce the frequency to every other month, or quarterly meetings thereafter.

Specific Responsibilities of the Commission would include:

* Obtain, study, and analyze data, statistics, and other information concerning fire causes and prevention in Alaska, and develop recommendations leading toward increased fire safety in the state.

* Exercise policy making authority and establish operational guidelines for all state agencies with fire protection responsibilities and make recommendations to private industry, local governments and federal agencies having fire protection programs.

* Develop and maintain a liaison with all fire protection agencies within the state, both public and private, in the furtherance of Commission activities.

* Foster research and inquire into both the unique causes of fire related to the arctic environment and methodologies of successful fire prevention and control under arctic conditions, including an informational exchange program with other nations similarly situated within the Arctic Rim.

* Recommend legislative and executive actions that will result in more effective and efficient fire prevention and suppression.

* Recommend information and actions designed to resolve conflicts among agencies with overlapping fire-related programs and responsibilities.

* Act as a focal point for all federal assistance and program liaison between the State of Alaska and federal agencies pertaining to fire prevention and control.

* Develop and submit an annual report to the Governor, the Legislature, and the Fire Service community on the activities, recommendations, and accomplishments of the Commission during the preceeding fiscal year.

* Develop a statewide Master Fire Plan, in cooperation with all agencies in the fire service community.

* Take such other actions as may be deemed necessary or appropriate to carry out its mandate of reducing fire losses in Alaska.

* * *

There appear to be three options available to the Governor and the Legislature in order that Alaska's fire losses -- the worst in the western world -- can be effectively reduced.

A. Maintain the Status Quo.

This option, in the view of the Task Force, is not a viable one, since it would perpetuate the fractured, diverse, and uncoordinated Fire Service effort that presently exists, and that undoubtedly contributes to Alaska's fire-loss record being the worst in the United States and the industrialized world. Nonetheless, it is a choice.

B. Substantially increase the capabilities of the State Fire Marshal's Office, through additional staff.

This option would improve the overall situation, but would not provide the broad base of support, perspective, and involvement that a State Fire Commission offers.

C. Create a State Fire Commission.

A State Fire Commission, for all the reasons previously described, offers the best way to address the wide array of fire protection issues and needs for Alaska.

The Task Force earnestly asks the support of the Governor and the Legislature to create the Alaska State Fire Commission, so that the recommendations of both the first Task Force and the second Task Force can be implemented, the fire loss record in Alaska be reduced, and improve the safety and well-being of the residents of Alaska.

IV.

ANNUAL ACTION PLAN

GOAL A - FIRE EDUCATION AND PUBLIC AWARENESS

Inform the people of Alaska of all aspects of fire prevention, protection, and control.

OBJECTIVE 1

The State will substantially expand its fire prevention and education efforts generally, with particular emphasis upon preventing fires in all buildings, particularly in dwellings which are both the most common places of fire occurrence and fire deaths, and the least affected by governmental efforts to ensure fire and life safety.

The following approaches are intended to be illustrative of fire prevention efforts, but are not limited to other initiatives.

APPROACH (a)

In consultation with the fire insurance industry, local fire departments, regional housing authorities, and others, the State Fire Marshal's Office will initiate and coordinate a program of reduction of fires in dwellings by determining the feasibility of installing sprinkler systems in homes and the rate reduction in fire insurance premiums some insurance companies have for installation of home sprinkler systems, placement of smoke alarms, fire extinguishers, dead bolts, voluntarily-initiated home inspections through the local fire departments, and such other actions as deemed appropriate. (One year feasibility effort includes hiring a full time Education Specialist)

APPROACH (b)

If sprinklers prove economically feasible, legislation should be coordinated through the State Fire Marshal by all elements of the Fire Service community to establish low- interest loans to homeowners for installation of sprinklers in a similar manner to existing low-interest energy conservation loans within the Department of Community and Regional Affairs.

APPROACH (c)

Upon determining that home sprinklers are feasible, the State Fire Marshal, in cooperation with the professional Fire Service organizations and individual firefighters in Alaska, will seek legislation that mandates lower fire insurance rates for homes with sprinkler systems.

APPROACH (d)

The Fire Marshal's Office, in cooperation with local fire departments, will initiate educational programs for bankers, architects, and builders concerning potential cost savings of insurance premiums to the homeowner as the result of sprinklers in new home construction.

APPROACH (e)

The State Fire Marshal and the State Fire Service Training Program, in cooperation with the State Troopers, will review the Village Public Safety Officer program to determine how existing training and equipment acquisition can be expanded to address the high rate of structural fires in rural Alaska.

APPROACH (f)

Through the Governor's Office, the State Fire Marshal will seek to expand the Alaska Safety and Health Advisory Council to include a permanent member of the Fire Service in Alaska to represent their interests and to contribute to the Council.

APPROACH (g)

The State Fire Marshal and the State Fire Service Training Program will establish regional resource centers - (perhaps at community colleges and Regional Fire Training Centers) - of audio and visual materials appropriate to prevention-oriented efforts by local fire departments, government agencies at all levels, Native regional nonprofit corporations, and others with fire protection programs and responsibilities. Copying facilities would also be helpful at these resource centers.

APPROACH (h)

The State Fire Marshal, in cooperation with all agencies of the Fire Service community will initiate an on-going dialogue to address the tremendous disparity between where Alaska's fire deaths occur--in the home, and where prevention-oriented efforts exist--in the larger buildings where fire deaths rarely occur.

OBJECTIVE 2

The state will actively support and promote fire safety training in the public school systems in the state.

APPROACH (a)

In cooperation with various professional educational organizations, the State Fire Marshal's Office will attempt to institute the "Learn Not To Burn" curriculum in the public school system in Alaska and provide for financial assistance to offset program costs, through the Department of Education or the Legislature.

GOAL B - FIRE SERVICE TRAINING

Improve the level of fire protection by assisting in the development of Fire Service personnel to their maximum performance potential.

OBJECTIVE 1

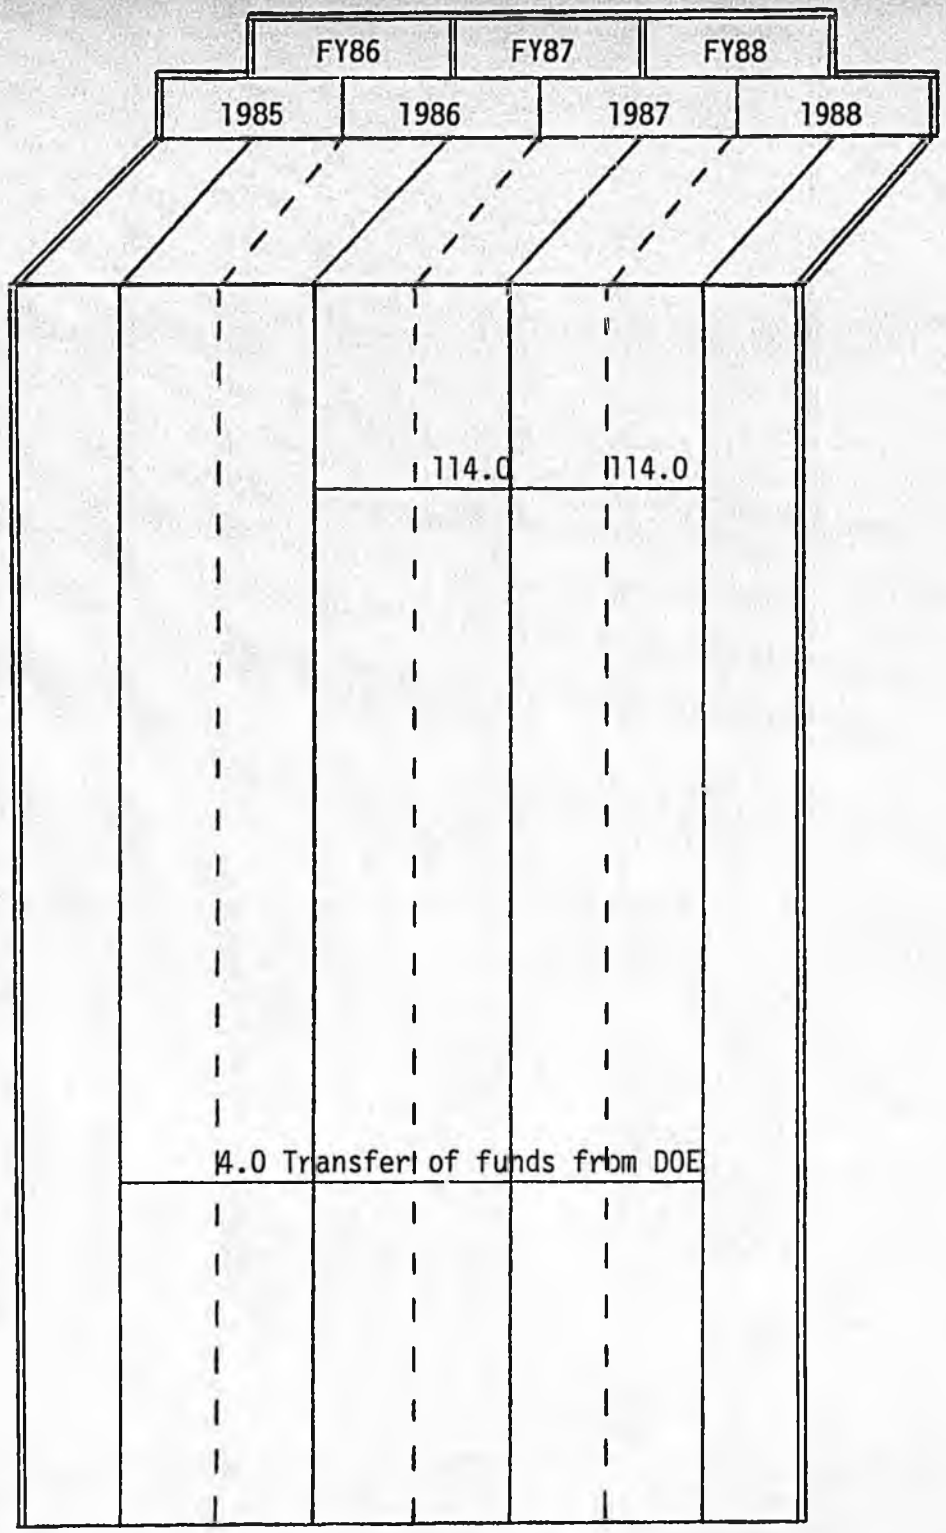
The state will assist local governments and other agencies with fire protection responsibilities to develop and maintain a comprehensive Fire Service Training Program to provide instructional and related services to the Fire Service community and other emergency services personnel.

APPROACH (a)

Relocate the State Fire Service Training Program to the State Fire Marshal's Office, by request of the Governor.

APPROACH (b)

The State Fire Service Training Program will continue to expand upon existing Fire Service Training Programs to ensure professional development courses for all ranks of personnel within the Fire Service. (See Following Page)



(GOAL B - FIRE SERVICE TRAINING, Continued)

APPROACH (c)

The State Fire Service Training Program will reestablish the Technical Assistance Teams, trainee travel funds, and continue with the Itinerant Fire Instructor program.

APPROACH (d)

The State Fire Service Training Program will develop new curriculum and training resources based upon state and national professional standards.

APPROACH (e)

The State Fire Service Training Program will expand training and education standards for Fire Service personnel in all fire service activities.

APPROACH (f)

The State Fire Service Training Program will continue to administer an adequate grant award program to support local and regional training programs.

OBJECTIVE 2

The state will maintain and encourage expansion of a comprehensive Fire Science Technology program within the community college system.

APPROACH (a)

Through the professional Fire Service organizations and the State Fire Marshal's Office, the State Fire Service Training Program, will coordinate efforts with the University of Alaska, and the community colleges to support and further develop the Fire Science Technology programs, including exploring the nonresident extension program as a delivery system. In addition, although present circumstances do not support a four-year degree program in Alaska, information should be compiled about how a four-year degree in the Fire Science field could be attained through a combination of existing opportunities in the community college/University of Alaska system, and other universities in other states, such as Oregon, and make this information available to the personnel in the Fire Services.

OBJECTIVE 3 -

Encourage and support financial assistance to the five Regional Fire Training Centers to enhance regional training capabilities.

APPROACH (a)

The State Fire Marshal's Office, in conjunction with the State Fire Service Training Program will seek an appropriation of $250,000 for a two-year period for an urban and a rural regional fire training center to enable each to support raining program development, course costs, student travel, training coordinators, and related administrative costs.

GOAL C - CAPITAL PROJECTS

The state will support capital projects for fire and life safety on a cooperative basis with local government.

OBJECTIVE 1

The state will attempt to enhance the understanding of local government officials concerning sources of revenue and the state's capital budget process as it relates to fire protection projects and the responsibilities local governments assume when such projects are approved.

APPROACH (a)

In cooperation with the Department of Community and Regional Affairs, appropriate sections of future editions of the "Rural Capital Improvements Guidebook," and its counterpart, the "Urban Capital Improvements Guidebook," will be expanded to include a section pertaining to Objective 1. Other initiatives within the Department may also be appropriate.

APPROACH (b)

Revenue sharing funds, derived from the existence of fire protection capabilities, should be considered by local governments for the enhancement of fire protection services.

OBJECTIVE 2

A project review mechanism is needed to ensure that communities have both the necessary information about the most appropriate facility and/or fire protection equipment for their community, and an understanding of the specific responsibilities that must be assumed by the community.

APPROACH (a)

A directory of various kinds of fire and life safety apparatus appropriate to the smaller communities should be developed by the State Fire Marshal's Office as a guide for local communities that wish to institute or upgrade existing fire and life safety capabilities.

APPROACH (b)

In accordance with AS 18.70.080-085, the revenue requests for capital projects and equipment destined for communities without a well- developed Fire Service should be reviewed by the State Fire Marshal's Office.

GOAL D - ARSON

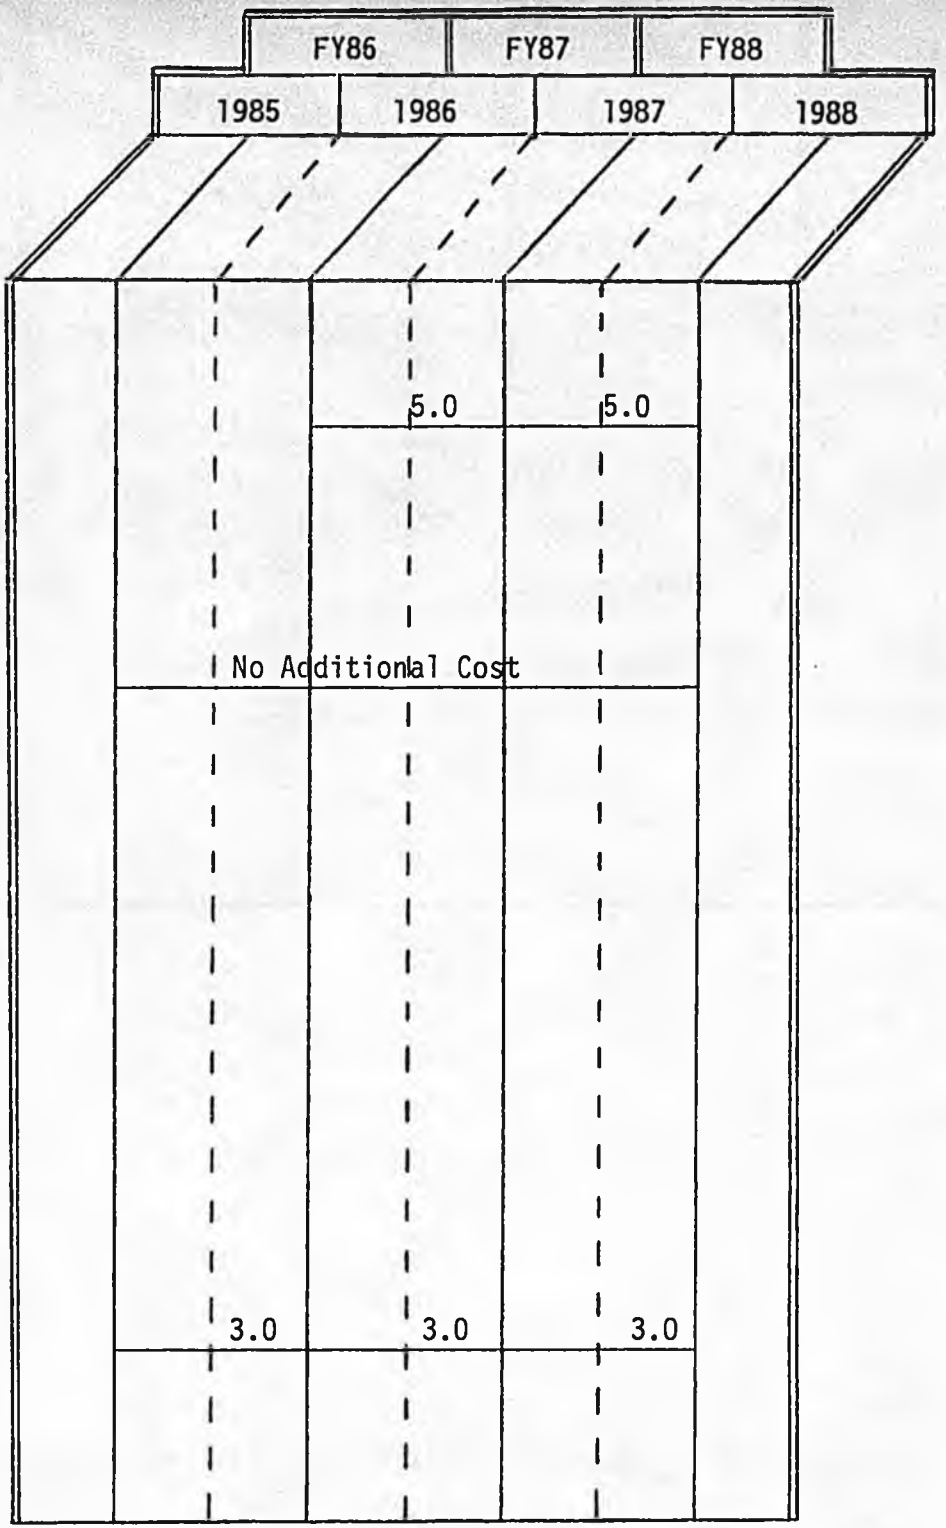
Reduce the impact and incidence of arson fires in Alaska.

OBJECTIVE 1

Coordinate the efforts and improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the various agencies that deal with the crime of arson, including but not limited to Fire Service, law enforcement, prosecutors, the insurance industry, business owners, and the public.

APPROACH (a)

Training curriculum and certification be developed by the State Fire Service Training Program for emergency services personnel involved in investigation of fire cause and origin.



(GOAL D - ARSON, Continued)

APPROACH (b)

The State Fire Service Training Program will develop and offer arson training courses for local fire departments.

APPROACH (c)

In coordination with the Alaska Association of Fire and Arson Investigators, the Commissioner of Public Safety and the Attorney General shall jointly develop and maintain a special fire investigation team of persons with the needed expertise and background in the fields of fire cause and origin, criminal investigation, and prosecution who can be called upon, at no cost, to respond to requests for assistance at no cost anywhere in the state.

APPROACH (d)

The State Fire Marshal's Office, in conjunction with the Alaska Association of Fire and Arson Investigators, will explore the establishment of a statewide, toll-free Arson Hot Line in the State Fire Marshal's Office, and availability of private funds for an award program.

APPROACH (e)

Part of the fire education program within the State Fire Marshal's Office will contain information about arson prevention.

GOAL E - CODE ENFORCEMENT

Ensure that at least minimum fire and life safety codes are adopted in a timely manner and enforced, at the state and/or local government levels.

OBJECTIVE 1

The state shall promote a uniform interagency system for building and safety code enforcement to encompass all aspects of construction and building maintenance, including but not limited to fire, electrical, structural, plumbing, sanitation, energy, handicapped and accident safety, and provide incentives for local jurisdictions to administer their own programs.

APPROACH (a)

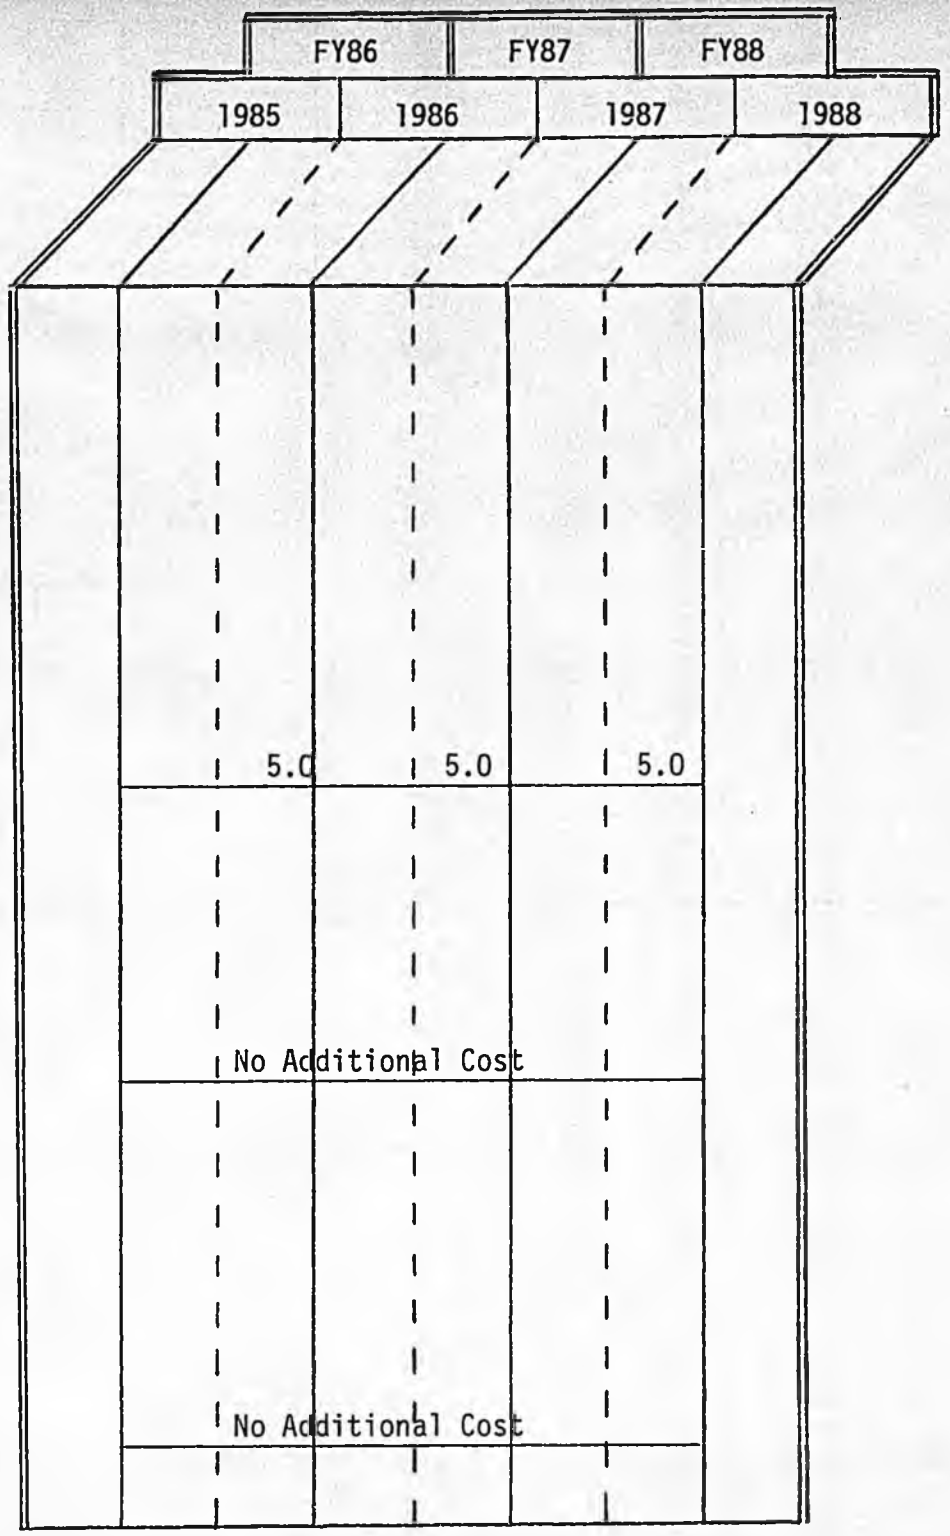
The State Fire Marshal's Office will conduct semi-annual interagency workshops involving all agencies charged with code enforcement to resolve interpretational differences, overlapping authority and related problems, and to establish consistent enforcement procedures.

APPROACH (b)

Through the State Fire Marshal's Office, all state agencies charged with code enforcement should mutually explore the establishment of professional standards for all personnel involved in code enforcement, to ensure creditable service to the citizens of Alaska.

APPROACH (c)

Through the Division of Governmental Coordination in the Office of Management and Budget, all state agencies charged with fire and life safety code enforcement should review their respective new safety standards as quickly as possible after they become available, and should prepare them as a package for review to the Department of Law, leading to their adoption or rejection, within six months of their publishing date.



APPROACH (d)

The State Fire Marshal's Office and the Department of Labor, Division of Labor Standards and Safety, will explore the concept of state and local code enforcement and plans review personnel being located together, while retaining individual agency identification, thereby creating a one-stop shopping center for architects and others seeking building safety approval and to explore the concept of code compliance for both new construction and remodeling of single-family dwellings, where not performed by local building officials.

APPROACH (e)

Legislation should be developed by the State Fire Marshal's Office providing for substantial sanctions against anyone who knowingly changes approved plans and specifications relating to new construction without obtaining prior approval by the State Fire Marshal, and to anyone who circumvents life-safety codes thereby endangering the life and safety of future building occupants.

APPROACH (f)

In cooperation with appropriate federal agencies, the State Fire Marshal's Office and local political subdivisions will explore the adoption of NFPA 101 standards and/or the state will impose its own standards for health care facilities in coordination with federal authorities.

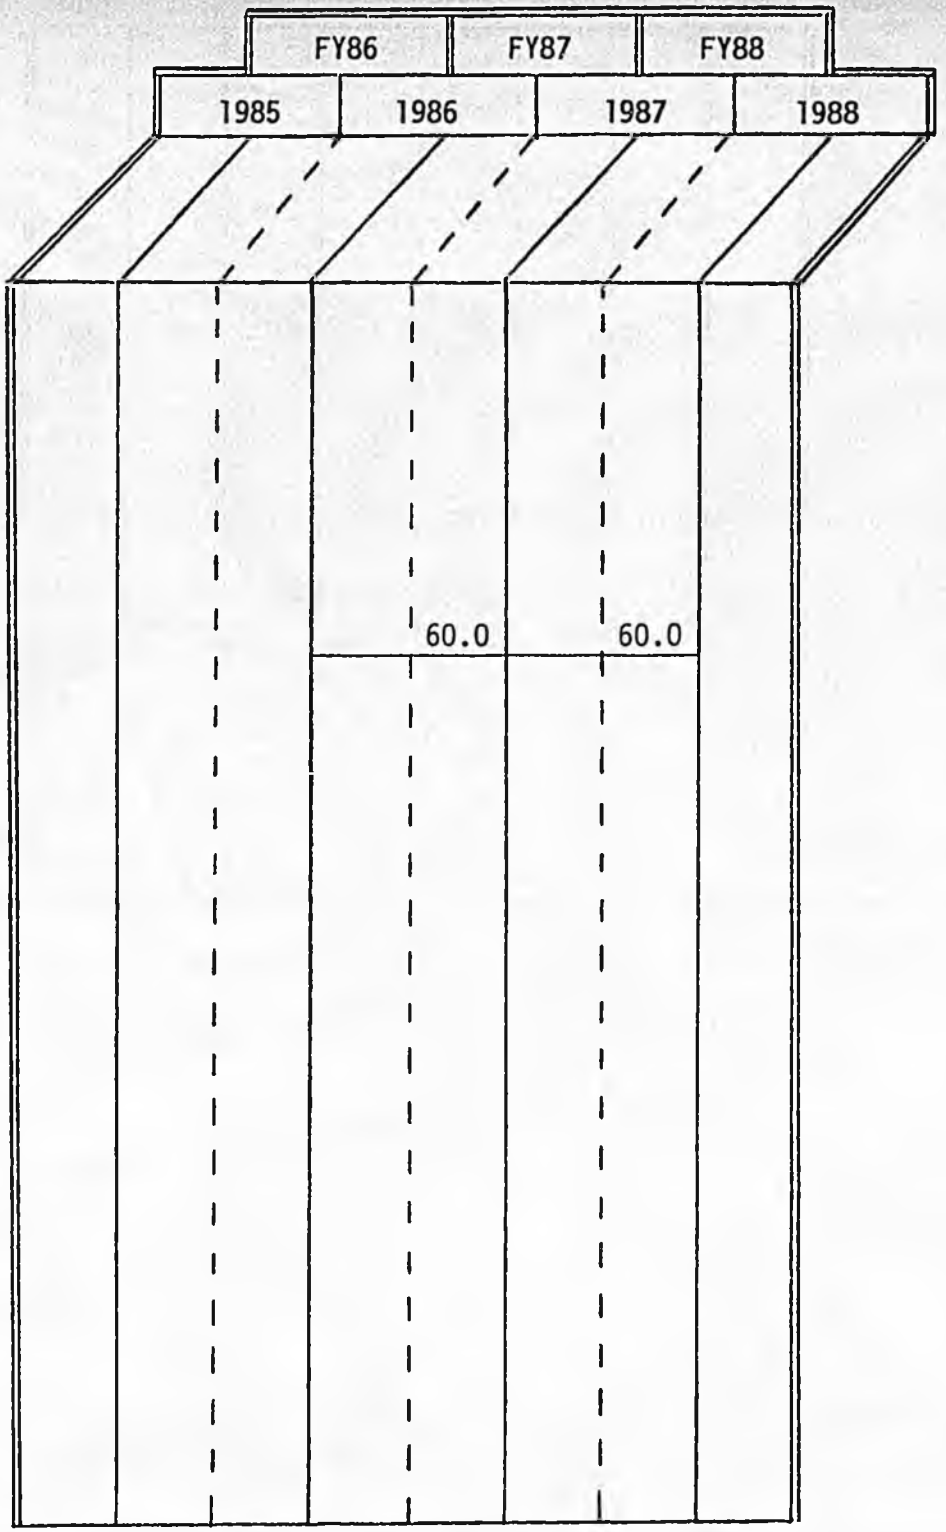
APPROACH (g)

Through the State Fire Marshal's Office, local governments will be encouraged to undertake fire and life safety code enforcement, consistent with their desires and long-term objectives in fire prevention. In support of local code enforcement, legislation will be prepared by the State Fire Marshal and the Department of Community and Regional Affairs for funds to provide the cost of the first two years' efforts by three local governments for plan reviews and subsequent building inspection. Provisions will be made whereby the State Fire Marshal's Office visits these communities periodically to support local code enforcement.



GOAL F - EMERGENCY MEDICAL SERVICES

The overall goal of the Alaska Emergency Medical Services (EMS) program is to establish a comprehensive, coordinated system of emergency medical services to the citizens of Alaska.

OBJECTIVE 1

Ensure that citizens and visitors gain easy access to Emergency Medical Services, that initial response is expeditious, that appropriate lifesaving and stabilization measures are rendered at the scene, and that patients are transported or transferred in a timely and efficient manner to facilities capable of effecting maximum recovery and rehabilitation.

(GOAL F - EMERGENCY MEDICAL SERVICES, Continued)

APPROACH (a)

The Emergency Medical Services Section, within the Department of Health and Social Services, should continue to coordinate federal, state, and regional official and volunteer agencies involved in Alaska EMS system by providing overall medical direction for statewide EMS system development.

APPROACH (b)

Certify emergency medical personnel and services according to state statutes and regulations to ensure certain minimum standards of emergency medical care.

APPROACH (c)

The Regional EMS Councils should continue to provide and administer financial assistance for Regional EMS development, provide technical assistance to regional and local EMS agencies, and educate the public about appropriate action in emergencies and emergency procedures.

APPROACH (d)

Seek improved Emergency Medical Services through legislative action by monitoring and evaluating EMS system development throughout the state and by planning and prioritizing continued program development based on systematic needs assessment and epidemiological research.

GOAL G - WILDLANDS FIRE PROTECTION

Improve the system of fire protection for both wildlands and structures in all areas of Alaska.

OBJECTIVE 1

Better utilize, and increase existing fire protection capabilities of the state and local level through a closer working relationship of wildlands and structural firefighting resources.

APPROACH (a)

The Department of Natural Resources will request an appropriation of $100,000 for the Division of Forestry for each of two years to expand the presently-funded, primarily wildlands fire protection-oriented Rural Community Fire Protection Program that provides $64,000 annually, which has been administered by the Department since 1976.

APPROACH (b)

The Division of Forestry will transfer or make loan of wildlands fire prevention and suppression apparatus, equipment and tools from the Division of Forestry to structural firefighting agencies, primarily during the nonfire season.

APPROACH (c)

The Division of Forestry, in cooperation with the State Fire Service Training Program expand the existing level of training of local fire departments in the techniques of wildlands fire prevention and suppression.

APPROACH (d)

In coordination with the State Fire Marshal, the Division of Forestry will provide technical assistance to groups interested in forming a volunteer fire department where none now exist, and develop agreements with local fire departments concerning their assistance in wildlands firefighting.

APPROACH (e)

The Division of Emergency Services within the Alaska Department of Military Affairs, the Division of Forestry within the Department of Natural Resources, and the State Fire Marshal's Office within the Department of Public Safety should plan for and implement a program that will provide the trained and organized manpower and the suppression equipment that will be needed to meet the demand of rural fire disasters that will occur within the state because of the increase in urban-rural interface.

APPROACH (f)

Structural and wildlands firefighting agencies should provide mutual assistance to each other in matters requiring legislative action.

GOAL H - INTERAGENCY PLANNING, COORDINATION, AND CONSOLIDATION

The Governor shall require interagency planning and coordination by all state agencies having fire safety responsibilities.

OBJECTIVE 1

Increase the accuracy, timeliness, and scope of all fire-related data in Alaska.

APPROACH (a)

Expedite final approvals by Department of Administration and Department of Public Safety, to implement the micro-computer project involving local fire departments and the State Fire Marshal's Office.

APPROACH (b)

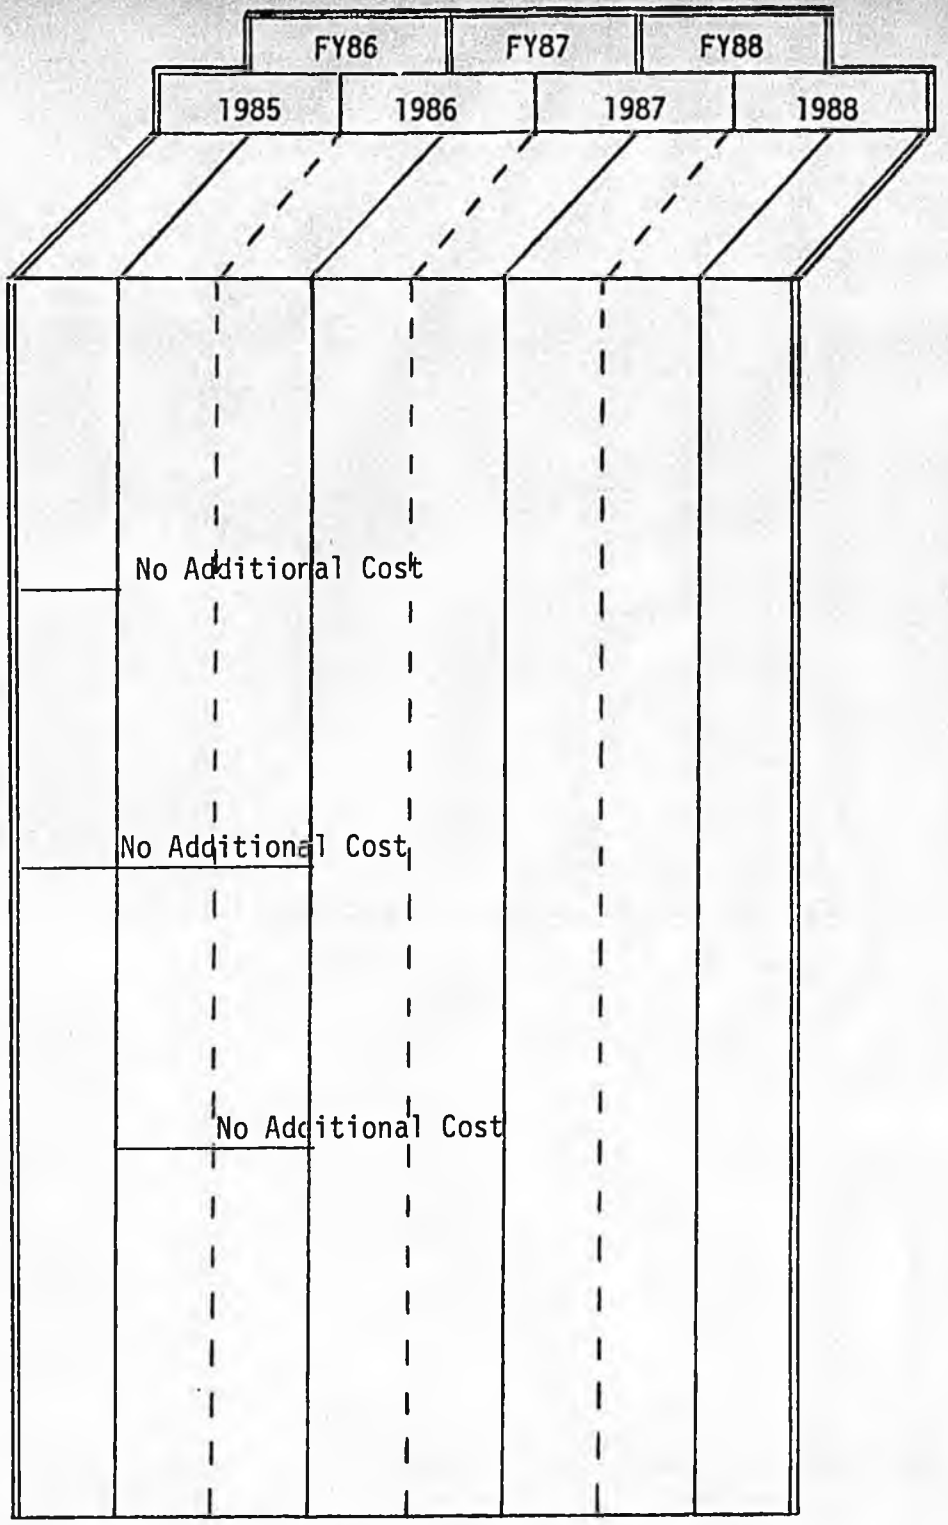
The State Fire Marshal's Office and the Department of Natural Resources should jointly explore whether the ANFIRS data base can be expanded to include wildlands fire data, thereby creating a single point for compilation of all fire-related data in Alaska.

APPROACH (c)

The State Fire Marshal, in conjunction with the state's forensic pathologists, will determine how to improve the reporting data concerning fire and fire fatalities caused directly or indirectly by alcohol abuse.

OBJECTIVE 2

The state will perform Master Fire Planning as a cooperative venture with related agencies at the federal, state, regional, and local levels.



(GOAL H - INTERAGENCY PLANNING, COORDINATION, AND CONSOLIDATION - Continued)

APPROACH (a)

In cooperation with the Department of Law, and the several borough governments, the State Fire Marshal will research whether future Fire Service areas at the local level will, to the extent possible, be developed in such a manner as to preclude creation of islands with no fire protection services and whether existing islands with no fire protection services will, to the extent possible, be incorporated into one or more of the existing fire service areas.

APPROACH (b)

The state will establish by legislation a State Fire Commission as a part of state government, to function as a central focal point for all fire-protection-related projects and programs.

PROPOSALS FOR LEGISLATIVE ACTION

V. PROPOSALS FOR LEGISLATIVE ACTION

Although each of the legislative proposals recommended by the Task Force are contained in the previous Goals and Objectives Section, they are also restated here, both as an aid to monitoring the implementation of the recommendations, and to comply with the provisions of the enabling legislation.

Following are the recommendations of the Task Force that require legislative action:

1. Provide low-interest loans to homeowners for the purpose of installing sprinklers in residences. (Recommended for introduction in 1985-1986 session).

   (GOAL A, Objective 1, Approach (b), Page 40)

2. Provide for an appropriation to fund the program development of both an urban and a rural fire training center.

   (GOAL B, Objective 3, Approach (a), Page 47)

3. Provide for sanctions against anyone who knowingly changes approved building plans and specifications relating to new construction without obtaining prior approval by the State Fire Marshal, and anyone who circumvents life safety codes thereby endangering the fire and life safety of future building occupants.

   (GOAL E, Objective 1, Approach (e), Page 56)

4. Provide an appropriation to fund start-up expenses for the first two years for local governments who elect to perform fire and life safety code enforcement.

   (GOAL E, Objective 1, Approach (g), Page 57)

5. Provide an appropriation to the Department of Natural Resources for a grant program to local governments for the improvement of rural firefighting capabilities.

   (GOAL G, Objective 1, Approach (a), Page 62)

6. Provide for the establishment of the Alaska State Fire Commission and its funding to act as the coordinating mechanism of all fire-related functions and responsibilities of government and private organizations in Alaska.

   (GOAL H, Objective 2, Approach (b), Page 67)

VI.

PROPOSALS FOR EXECUTIVE ACTION

VI. PROPOSALS FOR EXECUTIVE ACTION

Most of the recommendations of the Task Force can be implemented through increased attention, priority, and resources, by the various department heads in state government, as approved by the Governor. A few actions, however, seem more appropriately implemented by an Executive Order or similar support by the Governor. These are as follows:

1. Provide for consolidation of fire-related programs by relocating the Office of the State Fire Service Training Program from the Department of Education to the Department of Public Safety, Division of Fire Prevention.

2. Provide for consolidation of fire-related responsibilities, specifically fire and life safety code enforcement, by having code enforcement personnel in the Department of Labor co-located within the Department of Public Safety, Division of Fire Prevention, while maintaining existing departmental identities.

   (GOAL E, Objective 1, Approach (d), Page 55)

3. Provide for the continuation of the Alaska Fire Prevention and Control Task Force on an ad hoc basis, through request to the Commissioners involved, in order to continue to develop approaches to fire safety in Alaska, and to monitor the progress of the recommendations in this report, as required by the enabling legislation.

   (Part VII, Page 92)

4. Expand the existing "ad hoc" Task Force to include at least one member from the wildlands firefighting community.

   (Part VII, Page 92)

5. Adopt the concept of the Alaska State Fire Commission and include it as part of the Executive Budget to the Legislature for the 1984-85 session.

   (GOAL H, Objective 2, Approach (b), Page 67)

VII.

REVIEW OF THE IMPLEMENTATION PROCESS

VII. REVIEW OF THE IMPLEMENTATION PROCESS

The enabling legislation that created the second Task Force on Fire Prevention and Control (SB 80 and 81, HB 687 and 688) required that the Task Force identify methods "to review the progress of the implementation" (emphasis added). This provision seems to indicate that the Legislature intended that the work of the Task Force would in some way continue after the Task Force itself ceased to exist after the legislatively prescribed 120 days. With one exception, all Task Force members are government employees at the local or state level. Each has volunteered to continue in an ad hoc capability after the Task Force expires should that be desired, since each member wants the efforts of the Task Force utilized to reduce Alaska's fire losses. Each has indicated the possibility of attending additional meetings utilizing respective agency funds for any required travel. The Task Force could therefore continue in an unofficial capacity to monitor the implementation of its recommendations - at least until July 1, 1985.

The Task Force as presently constituted does not include anyone representing wildlands fire prevention and control. If the Task Force continues as an ad hoc group, it could better represent the entire fire service community if a representative of the Division of Forestry was appointed by the Governor to the ad hoc Task Force.

Without doubt, the recommendation of the greatest impact is to legislatively create the Alaska State Fire Commission, as more completely described in Goal H. The primary purpose of the Commission is to be the single state focal point for all aspects of the fire service in Alaska. Within this broad mandate is the inherent responsibility to coordinate the numerous and presently diverse fire-protection-related efforts of federal, state, and local governments, as well as professional organizations, private industry, and the public at large, into a cohesive, well-planned effort to reduce the fire problem in Alaska.

Legislative action to create the State Fire Commission is recommended during the 1985 session of the Legislature. If enacted, the Commission would become active on July 1, 1985, replacing the ad hoc Task Force.

Therefore, it is recommended that with the Governor's approval, the Task Force continue the momentum developed to date by shifting into and acting in an unofficial status until July 1, 1985, when it is hoped the State Fire Commission comes into being which can then continue to oversee the implementation of means to reduce Alaska's fire burden in an official capacity.

APPENDICES

APPENDIX A

Indentical enabling legislation was introduced into both Houses of the Legislature. HB 687 which follows and the HB 688 which was the appropriations measure was introduced and passed in the House. SB 80 and SB 81 were indentical measures in the Senate.

HOUSE BILL NO. 687

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

THIRTEENTH LEGISLATURE - SECOND SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act providing for a task force on fire prevention and control; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. TASK FORCE ON FIRE PREVENTION AND CONTROL. The Alaska Task Force on Fire Prevention and Control is established in the Office of the Governor.

* Sec. 2. MEMBERSHIP. The task force consists of seven members appointed by the governor, without regard to political affiliation, to be selected as follows:

(1) one person who is a member of both the Alaska State Firefighters Association and the Alaska Fire Chiefs Association from a list of nominees provided by the associations;

(2) the state fire marshal;

(3) the supervisor of the fire service training program in the Department of Education;

(4) a representative from the emergency medical services advisory council from a list of nominees submitted by the council;

5) a representative of the division of local government assistance in the Department of Community and Regional Affairs;

6) a representative of the division of labor standards and safety in the Department of Labor; and

(7) a representative from the Office of the Governor who shall serve as chairman of the task force.

* Sec. 3. OBJECTIVES. The objectives of the task force are to complete the work of the former Alaska Task Force on Fire Prevention and Control established in sec. 1, ch. 157, SLA 1980, including to

(1) identify and provide a detailed account of the fire loss problem in the state, including causal factors;

(2) identify and define the present roles and relationships of the agencies in the state that are involved in fire protection activities at the local, regional, state, and federal levels;

(3) recommend organizational or operational modifications to improve the effectiveness of the state's fire protection system;

(4) provide documentation that will assist all government agencies and fire fighting services in effectively meeting their fire protection responsibilities.

* Sec. 4. MEETINGS AND HEARINGS. The task force shall meet at the call of the chairman. Public hearings and meetings may be held in areas of the state that are representative of its urban and rural fire protection problems.

* Sec. 5. COMPENSATION. The members of the task force serve without compensation but are entitled to per diem and travel expenses authorized for boards and commissions under AS 39.20.180.

* Sec. 6. DUTIES. The task force shall

(1) request and review information concerning the causes and nature of fire losses in the state;

(2) study the activities of the various fire protection agencies in the state;

(3) submit to the governor and the legislature its final report making recommendations to improve fire prevention and control in the state, identifying methods to implement the recommendations and to review the progress of the implementation, and proposing legislation for recommendations needing legislative action.

* Sec. 7. This Act is repealed 120 days after the effective date of this Act.

* Sec. 8. This Act takes effect immediately in accordance with AS 01.-10.070(c).

CS FOR SENATE BILL NO. 211 (State Affairs)

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to compensation for victims of certain crimes."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. It is the intent of the legislature that ch. 96, SLA 1983 is retroactive to October 23, 1981 for the purpose of compensating victims under AS 18.67.080 and sec. 2 of this Act.

* Sec. 2. Notwithstanding AS 18.67.130(a)(1), compensation may be made under AS 18.67.080 for injuries or death suffered by a victim after October 22, 1981 and before October 23, 1983 as a result of the operation of a motor vehicle, boat, or airplane by an intoxicated offender if the application for compensation is filed with the board no later than two years after the effective date of this Act.

Suggested CS CSSB 211

FISCAL NOTE ANALYSIS
SB 211

The Violent Crimes Compensation Board has 39 claims pending, for the specified time period, that would be affected by this bill. Historically, the Board's denial rate is approximately 1/3 of the claims filed. This means approximately 26 claims would be awarded. The average cost per claim is $5000.00. Victims of drunk drivers have a much higher average award cost due to the multiple injuries incurred and the length of time needed for recuperation. The states that compensate DWI victims place the average award at double the cost for these victims. Of the 39 claims, approximately 2/3 or 26 claims would be awarded. Nineteen of the claims would be awarded at $10,000.00 per claim, and ten would be awarded at $5000 per claim for a total of $225,000.00.

The Highway Safety Planning agency gave us the number of alcohol-related accidents which have occurred in 1981, 1982 and 1983. For those three years, there were 157 fatalities and 2,912 injuries. While many of these would not apply for a number of reasons, a conservative estimate would be 15 fatalities (10 fatalities @ $25,000.00 each and 5 fatalities @ $40.000.00 each) for a total cost amount of $450,000.00; an estimated 50 injuries ($10,000.00 each) would apply for a total cost of $500,000.00.

Because of the increased claims, there would be more hearings and more travel for the hearings. A conservative estimate would be 20 more hearings at a cost of approximately $800.00 per hearing and the travel to the hearings would be 20 trips at $400.00 per trip.

This should be a single separate continuing appropriation.

POSITION PAPER - SB 211

SUPPORT

SB 211 - "An Act relating to compensation for victims of certain crimes."

The intent of this bill is to make the amended statute (ch. 96, SLA 1983) retroactive to October 1981.

The statute was amended to include victims living with or related to the offender and victims of drunk drivers and the effective date of this amendment was October 23, 1983. This bill would make the amended statute retroactive to October of 1981, which gives the new classes of victims two years to apply for compensation. The original statute gives victims two years in which to apply. The Board supports this bill because it gives all classes of victims the same eligibility requirements.

THIRD JUDICIAL DISTRICT)

Hugh Malone, being first duly sworn upon his oath, states as follows:

1. That I was a member of the State of Alaska House of Representatives, Thirteenth Legislature, First Session.

2. That during my service in that session, I offered Floor Amendment No. 2 to Senate Bill No. 86 which amendment provided that the provisions of the bill be retroactive to January 1, 1981. Floor Amendment No. 2 was passed by the House and subsequent to notice of reconsideration, I was approached and advised that the amendment was probably in part redundant because incidents occurring two years prior to the effective date of the act would be covered. As a result, I directed research and inquiries be conducted on this question, and upon being advised that the provisions of the Bill would cover incidents occurring up to two years prior to its effective date, I moved and asked the House for unanimous consent that Senate Bill 86 be returned for a second reading for the purpose of rescinding the adoption of Floor Amendment No. 2 and for unanimous consent that Amendment No. 2 be withdrawn. The House made no objection and it was so ordered and Senate Bill 86 passed the house unamiously on reconsideration.

3. That I communicated the information which I obtained regarding coverage of incidents occurring up to two years prior to the effective date of the Act to fellow legislators prior to withdrawal of my amendment and passage of Senate Bill 86.

4. That I would not have sought withdrawal and reconsideration of my Floor Amendment No. 2 unless I had been informed and believed that provisions of the Bill would cover incidents occurring up to two years prior to the effective date of the Act. Based on the original passage of my Amendment No. 2 by a margin of 28 in favor and 10 against it is my belief that my Floor Amendment No. 2 would have been retained as a part of Senate Bill 86 except for my request for withdrawal and rescission.

5. That based on all of the foregoing it is my opinion and belief that Senate Bill 86 was passed with the intent that its coverage include incidents occurring up to two years prior to the effective date of the legislation.

Nola K. Capp, being first duly sworn under oath, states as follows:

1. I am the Administrator for the Violent Crimes Compensation Board, and have been emplcyed in this position since July, 1976.

2. As Administrator for the Board, I am responsible for maintaining the records of the Board; for preparation of the Board's budget, including fiscal notes attached to legislation; for the processing of claims for compensation, including reviewing applications, gathering additional information and presenting claims to the Board.

3. During the First Session, Thirteenth Alaska Legislature, I prepared fiscal notes for Senate Bill 86 and House Bill 104; however, no fiscal note was prepared for the final version of HCS CSSB 86 (Jud) am H.

4. Upon adoption of Senate Bill 86 as Ch. 96, SLA 1983, the legislature included $287,000 to fund expanded coverage of claims under the Violent Crimes Compensation Act (AS 18.67).

5. On or about June 26, 1983, during consideration of SB 86 on the House floor, I received a phone call from Royce Weller, Legislative Assistant to Representative Hugh Malone. Mr. Weller asked whether a specific case, which occurred during 1982, would be eligible for compensation. I told Mr. Weller that it was my belief, consistent with previous Board action, that if the class of eligible individuals was expanded, eligibility would be retroactive under AS 18.67.130(a).

6. Subsequent to the passage of SB 86, on or about July 26, 1983, I spoke with Assistant Attorney General Patrick W. Conheady, to ascertain the effective date of SB 86 and to seek a more definitive opinion on the retroactive application of the new law. Mr. Conheady advised me that the effective date of the new law would be October 23, 1983, and that it appeared to him that coverage would be retroactive to October 23, 1981.

7. At the suggestion of Douglas F. Standberg, Chairman of the Board, and Assistant Attorney General Conheady, on July 27, 1983 letters were sent out advising potential claimants of the presumed retroactive application of Ch. 96, SLA 1983.

8. At the direction of the Board in order to further clarify certain provisions of the new law, I requested on November 29, 1983, a written opinion from Assistant Attorney General Conheady regarding time limitations for eligibility under the amended statute.

9. On February 7, 1984, I received a written opinion from Assistant Attorney General Conheady which reversed his earlier oral opinion regarding retroactive application of the new law.

10. Since receipt of the opinion, the Board has denied all claims for compensation for injuries to the newly created class of victims which occurred prior to October 23, 1983.

Nola K. Capp, being first duly sworn upon her oath, states as follows:

1. That there are 37 claims presently pending before the Violent Crimes Compensation Board similarly situated to the claims of JoAnne C. Boyle in this matter which claims are covered by the stipulation as to application and the resultant order dated July 12, 1984.

2. That in my capacity as administrator for the Violent Crimes Compensation Board, I prepared the fiscal notes for Senate Bill 86 and Sponsor Substitute for House Bill 104, First Session, Thirteenth Alaska Legislature and my calculations in preparing those fiscal notes were based on the assumption that applicants who had been injured under circumstances which would allow coverage under the expanded portions of the act within two years prior to the effective date of the act would be eligible to make application for compensation.

3. That consistent with that understanding, upon the passage of Chapter 96 SLA, 1983 I wrote letters to each of the district attorneys for the State of Alaska and advised them that victims of drunk drivers would be eligible to apply for compensation "if the incident occurred on or before OCTOBER 23, 1981." 4. That consistent with my understanding set forth above, I advised various newspaper reporters that victims of drunk drivers involved in accidents dating back to October 23, 1981, were eligible to apply for compensation under Chapter 96, SLA 1983. 5. That in approximately August of 1983, I appeared on a daytime television interview show in Anchorage, Alaska as a representative of the Violent Crimes Compensation Board and stated that coverage for victims of drunk drivers under Chapter 96, SLA 1983 extended to incidents occurring after October 23, 1981.

That in June of 1983, I was contacted by Royce Weller, Administrative Assistant to Representative Hugh Malone and he inquired whether the amendments to the Violent Crime Compensation Board authority proposed by Senate Bill 86 would apply only to incidents occurring after the effective date of the act or whether it would extend back two years from the effective date of the Act. Re: Crime victims

Dear Mr. Krumm:

The Violent Crimes Compensation Board statute was recently revised to include two new classes of victims who were previously excluded:

VICTIMS OF DRUNK DRIVERS

VICTIMS RELATED TO OR LIVING WITH OFFENDERS

Any victims in these classes are eligible to apply if the incident occurred on or after OCTOBER 23, 1981, as this law becomes effective on October 23 of this year. After that date, the two-year limit will apply to these victims just as it applies to all others.

We are enclosing a supply of revised application forms. Please discard any of the old goldenrod applications and the old green emergency award applications, along with the old brochures. The new applications are green and the new emergency award applications are blue.

Victim advisement cards are still good, as these restrictions were not listed. New posters and brochures will be available within three months. Meanwhile, please blank out restriction #5 on the poster. We will be distributing these new materials to you as soon as possible.

Please distribute this to your staff, and do not hesitate to call us if you have any questions about the new law.

Victims injured by drunken drivers will be eligible for up to $25,000 from the state under a new law that goes into effect in October.

Under the law, the Violent Crimes Compensation Board can cover costs for victims of drunken driving accidents dating back to Oct 23, 1981. The crime victims law previously excluded motor vehicle, boat and airplane accident victims from receiving compensation.

The state provided $465,000 to victims of violent crimes last year, says program administrator Nola Capp, and has alloted $552,000 for next year.

"It's awfully hard to know how many claims we're going to have," Capp said. "We're just holding our breath."

In addition to expanding the program to cover drunken drivers, the new version also allows the state to provide payments to relatives of people convicted of crimes.

Capp cited as an example the case of an 11-year-old Kenai boy who was present when his father killed his mother in 1982. The father was convicted and the boy moved in with his grand ents in Oregon, who living on tight fixed inco Under the new law, the program will be able to vide aid for the boy.

110. Nature of the compensation
130. Limitations on awarding compensation
162. Crime victim compensation fund

Sec. 18.67.080. Awarding compensation. (a) In a case in which a person is injured or killed by an incident specified in AS 18.67.101(1), or by the act of any other person which is within the description of offenses listed in AS 18.67.101(2), the board may order the payment of compensation in accordance with the provisions of this chapter:

(1) to or for the benefit of the injured person;

(2) in the case of personal injury or death of the victim, to a person responsible or who had been responsible for the maintenance of the victim who has suffered pecuniary loss or incurred expenses as a result of the injury or death;

(3) in the case of death of the victim, to or for the benefit of one or more of the dependents of the victim; or

(4) to the provider of a service under AS 18.67.110(b).

(b) For the purposes of this chapter, a person is considered to have intended an act notwithstanding that by reason of age, insanity, drunkenness, or otherwise, he was legally incapable of forming a criminal intent.

(c) In determining whether to make an order under this section, the board shall consider all circumstances determined to be relevant, including provocation, consent or any other behavior of the victim which directly or indirectly contributed to his injury or death, the prior case or social history, if any, of the victim, his need for financial aid, and any other relevant matters.

(d) An order may be made under this section whether or not a person is prosecuted or convicted of an offense arising out of the act which caused the injury or death involved in the application. Upon application made by an appropriate prosecuting authority, the board may suspend proceedings under this chapter for a period it considers appropriate on the ground that a prosecution for an offense arising out of the act which caused the injury or death involved in the application has been commenced or is imminent. (§ 1 ch 203 SLA 1972; am § 5 ch 132 SLA 1975; am § 3 ch 35 SLA 1979; am § 1 ch 96 SLA 1983)

Effect of amendments. — The 1983 amendment added paragraph (a)(4).

Sec. 18.67.101. Incidents and offenses to which AS 18.67.010 — 18.67.180 apply. The board may order the payment of compensation in accordance with the provisions of this chapter for personal injury or death which resulted from

(1) an attempt on the part of the applicant to prevent the commission of crime, or to apprehend a suspected criminal, or aiding or attempting to aid a police officer to do so, or aiding a victim of crime; or

(2) the commission or attempt on the part of one other than the applicant to commit any of the following offenses: murder in any degree, manslaughter, criminally negligent homicide, assault in the first or second degree, kidnapping, sexual assault in any degree, sexual abuse of a minor, robbery in any degree, contributing to the delinquency of a minor under AS 11.51.130(a)(4), threats to do bodily harm, or driving while intoxicated or another crime resulting from the operation of a motor vehicle, boat, or airplane when the offender is intoxicated. (§ 2 ch 35 SLA 1979; am § 2 ch 96 SLA 1983)

Effect of amendments. — The 1983 amendment substituted the language beginning "threats to do bodily harm, or driving while intoxicated" for "or threats to do bodily harm" at the end of paragraph (2).

Sec. 18.67.110. Nature of the compensation. (a) The board may order the payment of compensation under this chapter for

(1) expenses actually and reasonably incurred as a result of the personal injury or death of the victim;

(2) loss of earning power as a result of total or partial incapacity of the victim, and reasonable expenses of job retraining of or similar employment-oriented rehabilitative services for the victim;

(3) pecuniary loss to the dependents of the deceased victim; and

(4) any other loss resulting from the personal injury or death of the victim which the board determines to be reasonable.

(b) The board may order that compensation under (a) of this section for a service provided as a result of the personal injury or death of the victim be paid directly to the provider of the service. (§ 1 ch 203 SLA 1972; am § 7 ch 132 SLA 1975; am § 3 ch 96 SLA 1983)

Effect of amendments. — The 1983 amendment added subsection (b).

Sec. 18.67.130. Limitations on awarding compensation. (a) No order for the payment of compensation may be made under AS 18.67.080 unless

(1) the application has been made within two years after the date of the personal injury or death;

(2) the personal injury or death was the result of an incident or offense listed in AS 18.67.101 that had been reported to the police within five days of its occurrence or, if the incident or offense could not reasonably have been reported within that period, within five days of the time when a report could reasonably have been made; and

(3) in the discretion of the board, the applicant has cooperated with law enforcement and prosecution officials to further prosecution of the offender if appropriate and to avoid further injury by the offender to the applicant and injury to persons in the care of the applicant who are exposed to possible injury by the offender.

(b) No compensation may be awarded if the victim

(1) [Repealed, § 8 ch 96 SLA 1983.]

(2) [Repealed, § 8 ch 96 SLA 1983.]

(3) violated a penal law of the state, which violation caused or contributed to his injuries or death; or

(4) is injured as a result of the operation of a motor vehicle, boat or airplane unless the vehicle was used by the offender while intoxicated or as a weapon in deliberate attempt to injure or kill the victim.

(c) No compensation may be awarded under this chapter in an amount in excess of $25,000 per victim per incident. However, in the case of the death of a victim who has more than one dependent eligible for compensation, the total compensation that may be awarded as a result of that death may not exceed $40,000. The board may prorate the total awarded among those dependents according to relative need.

(d) Orders for payment of compensation under this chapter may be made only as to injuries or death resulting from incidents or offenses occurring on and after July 1, 1971. (§ 1 ch 203 SLA 1972; am §§ 9, 10 ch 132 SLA 1975; am § 4 ch 35 SLA 1979; am §§ 4 — 6, 8 ch 96 SLA 1983)

Effect of amendments. — The 1983 amendment, in subsection (a), added the paragraph (1) and (2) designations, added paragraph (3), and made minor word changes. In subsection (b), the amendment repealed paragraphs (1) and (2) and inserted "by the offender while intoxicated or" in paragraph (4). In subsection (c), the amendment deleted the former last sentence and made a minor word change.

Sec. 18.67.162. Crime victim compensation fund. There is created a crime victim compensation fund which shall be administered by the Violent Crimes Compensation Board. The fund consists of money appropriated to it by the legislature. The fund shall be administered in accordance with the provisions of this chapter. Money distributed from the fund shall be in addition to other sources of compensation provided in this chapter. (§ 7 ch 96 SLA 1983)

Dear Ms. Capp:

I understand that due to a reversal of opinion by Patrick Conheady several victims of DWI whose applications had been accepted in good faith by the Board have been denied compensation.

The case testing Conheady's opinion, Joanne Boyle v VCCB & St of Alaska, has just been given a briefing schedule. At the earliest, an opinion may be expected in December. If the opinion goes against the victims, we may want to consider corrective legislation.

My question is how many people were effected by this reversal? What is the amount of their claims? How many more claims can we expect? Essentially, what would be the cost if the state allowed claims back to October 23, 1981?

Sincerely yours,

Dear Senator Rodey:

In reply to your letter requesting information on the cost to the State if the opinion on the case of Joanne Boyle vs. V.C.C.B. and the State of Alaska goes against the victims, the following is the best estimate we are able to project.

In FY 84, we received 37 claims which would be effected by this reversal. Historically, two-thirds of the claims received are awarded. The average amount per claim is $10,000.00 (other states have informed us that victims of drunk drivers cost approximately twice the amount of other types of victims, due to the multiple injuries incurred) and if the 24 claims were awarded, the cost would be approximately $240,000.00.

It is impossible to predict with a great deal of accuracy as we do not have any count on the number of D.W.I. incidents since October of 1981. However, $240,000.00 to $250,000.00 per year should be sufficient.

Thank you for your interest in our program.

SUBJECT: Two Year Limitation
On Amended Statute

This is in reply to your verbal request as to the sequence of events leading up to the verbal opinion from the Attorney General's Office regarding the two year limitation.

On Saturday, June 25th, 1983, Royce Weller from Representative Malone's Office called me in Anchorage (I was there for a Board Meeting). I attempted to call him back that night, but no response, and he called me early Sunday morning, June 26th. He asked if a specific case would be eligible for compensation if Senate Bill 86 passed. The case in question happened in 1982, and I told Mr. Weller, according to the Statute, a claimant had two years in which to apply, so that case would be eligible.

CSSB 86 was signed by the Governor on July 25th, 1983. I called Pat Conheady in the Attorney General's Office to find out when the law would become effective. He said this would happen ninety days after the Governor signed it, which would be October 23rd, 1983, and since the claimant had two years in which to apply, any incident occurring after October 23rd, 1981, would be eligible.

Because of this verbal opinion, I informed Law Enforcement agencies, District Attorney Offices and claimants they would be eligible if the incident occurred after October 23rd, 1981.

At the Board Meeting in November, the Board requested I get this opinion in writing. As you know, the written opinion states nothing prior to October 23rd, 1983, will be eligible.

Please note the following correction to my memo on this matter early transmitted to your office.

Mr. Patrick W. Conheady, Assistant Attorney General, verbally assured Nola Capp that the bill would be retroactively applied on the day the Governor signed it, not on the day that the bill was voted on by the House. On the day the bill was voted on, Royce Weller, a legislative aide to Representative Malone, called Ms. Capp and asked if victims would have two years in which to apply for compensation. She replied in the affirmative. Thereafter, the amendment which would make the bill retroactive was withdrawn.

I have requested Nola Capp to write me a letter detailing all conversations that she had with Rep. Malone, his staff and Mr. Conheady.

MEMORANDUM

TO: SENATOR JALMAR KERTTULA

FROM: ELIZABETH J. HICKERSON

RE: RETROACTIVE APPLICATION OF AMENDMENTS TO VIOLENT CRIME COMPENSATION ACT

DATE: FEBRUARY 29, 1984

Last session you introduced SB 86 which amended the Violent Crimes Compensation Act by enlarging the class of injuries which are compensable under the Act to include offenses wherein the victim is related to the offender. SB 86 was amended by the House of Representatives to also include victims of drunk drivers. The bill became law (Ch. 96, SLA 1983) with an effective date of October 23, 1983.

I was informed by Nola Capp, Director of the Violent Crimes Compensation Board, that the Attorney General's Office ~~had~~ issued an opinion on February 7, 1984. The opinion stated that the enacted amendments could not be given retroactive application and therefore the Board should not award compensation for any injury wherein the offense occurred before October 23, 1983, if the applicant was a victim that was related to the offender or if the injury was the result of an offense involving a drunk driver. Attached is a list of applications that will be ineligible because of this opinion. I was also contacted by Sara Hannan of your staff and requested to respond to this Attorney General's opinion, as your office had had inquiries on this matter.

A copy of the AG's opinion is enclosed. I contacted Keith Levy, Legal Services, and requested that he review the opinion. Mr. Levy agreed with the opinion and its conclusion that the amendments could not be given retroactive application. A copy of Mr. Levy's memorandum is enclosed.

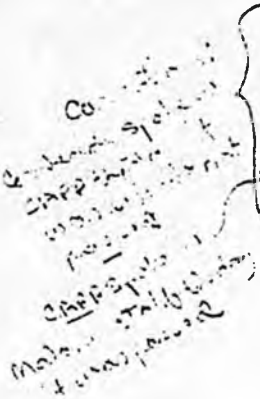
Both the Attorney General and Mr. Levy based their conclusions on the following facts.

1. No statute is retrospective unless expressly declared therein. (AS 01.10.090)

2. Chapter 96, SLA 1983 contains no express provision making it retrospective.

3. An amendment to make SB 86 retrospective was introduced in the House and was subsequently withdrawn, which indicated an intent to make the revisions adopted prospective only.

What Mr. Patrick W. Conheady, Assistant Attorney General, did not include in his opinion is the fact that on the day SB 86 was being considered by the House he was contacted by Nola Capp and verbally assured her that the bill would allow consideration of claims arising up to two years prior to the effective date. This information was conveyed to Representative Malone and therefore the retrospective amendment was withdrawn.



This action by the House seemed to be reasonable given the fact that AS 18.67.130 provides:

> No order for the payment of compensation may be made under AS 18.67.080 unless > (1) the application has been made within two years after the date of the personal injury or death.

Therefore, the legislature assumed that if the effective date of SB 86 would be sometime in 1983 (October 23, 1983 actual date) those persons injured within the preceding two years would be eligible to apply for compensation. Unfortunately, Mr. Conheady changed his opinion.

According to Mr. Levy, if the legislature intended Chapter 96, SLA 1983 to be retrospectively applied this could be accomplished by amending the law. I requested Mr. Levy to draft legislation which would achieve this. You should be receiving it tomorrow. I have not indicated that you support a change in the law, but rather have requested this draft for your review.

Please contact my office when you have made a decision on this matter.

MEMORANDUM

February 24, 1984

SUBJECT: Retroactive effect of amendments to Violent Crimes Compensation Act (Chapter 96, SLA 1983)

TO: Elizabeth Hickerson KBL
Senate Advisory Council

FROM: Keith B. Levy
Legislative Counsel

You have requested an opinion on the impact of a memorandum by the Attorney General dated February 7, 1984, relating to the retrospective effect of certain amendments to the Violent Crimes Compensation Act made by ch. 96, SLA 1983. I have reviewed the Attorney General's opinion and agree with his conclusions. Specifically, there is a general rule that legislation is not retrospective unless the legislature exhibits a clear intent that it operate retrospectively. Since ch. 96, SLA 1983 does not show such intent, it is prospective only.

AS 01.10.090 specifically provides, "no statute is retrospective unless expressly declared therein." Citing this section, the Supreme Court of Alaska has consistently stated that statutes are not to be applied retrospectively unless the bill contains a specific clause indicating retroactive application, or some other manifest intent of retrospective effect by the legislature. City and Borough of Juneau v. Commercial Union Insurance Co., 598 P.2d 957 (Alaska 1979); Matanuska Maid v. State, 620 P.2d 182 (Alaska 1980); Stephens v. Rogers Construction, 411 P.2d 205 (Alaska 1966).

Chapter 96, SLA 1983 contains no express provision making it retrospective. Moreover, as the Attorney General points out, an amendment to make it retrospective was introduced, and subsequently withdrawn. This action would actually indicate a contrary intent, that the amendments to the Violent Crimes Compensation Act be prospective only.

Therefore, I agree with the Attorney General's conclusion that ch. 96, SLA 1983 does not have retrospective effect.

If the legislature wishes to cure this problem by making the operation of the amendments to the Violent Crimes Compensation Act retrospective, this could be done by amending ch. 96, SLA 1983 to add a specific clause making the Act retrospective. A new bill would be required, and as you are aware, it would have to be introduced by a committee since the personal bill deadline has already passed. In this way the legislature could make ch. 98, SLA 1983 retrospective to any specific date it chooses.

SUBJECT: Retroactive application of amendments to violent crime compensation act

Daniel W. Hickey
Chief Prosecutor

BY: Patrick W. Conheady
Assistant Attorney General
Chief, Pretrial Services

You have requested our opinion on the retroactive application of recently enacted amendments to the Violent Crimes Compensation Act, AS 18.67. These amendments, contained in Ch. 96, SLA 1983, enlarge the class of injuries which are compensable under the Act to include offenses to innocent victims arising out of driving while under the influence accidents, and offenses wherein the victim is related to the offender. You further request our opinion as to the extent of retroactivity, if found, that should be accorded compensation under the Act given the Limitations of Actions section contained in the Act, AS 18.67.130 (a)(1). I have reviewed the legislative history of Ch. 96, SLA 1983, including committee action, letters of intent, debate in both Houses of the Legislature and floor action. Based on this review and research into other areas of the law, it is my considered opinion that Ch. 96, SLA 1983 cannot be given retroactive application; rather, in reviewing applications for compensation to the Board for injuries within the amended class, the Board should not award compensation for any injury wherein the offense occurred before the effective date of Ch. 96, SLA 1983, October 23, 1983.

Confusion as to the applicable time when the offense occurred arises under AS 18.67.130(a)(1), which provides:

> "No order for the payment of compensation may be made under AS 18.67.080 unless > (1) the application has been made within two years after the date of the personal injury or death..."

This provision is a limitation on the actionable claim. It is the time period during which a claim must be brought, or it is foreclosed. By broadening the class of actionable claims, the Legislature may have intended that any newly actionable claim which occurred two years prior to the effective date of the amendments, and which therefore could be claimed under AS 18.67.130(a)(1), should be compensable. In fact, that intent was conveyed to the Board's Administrator, Ms. Nola Capp, by Royce Weller, a legislative aide to Representative Malone during the course of floor action in the House of Representatives on June 25, 1983. However, absent a manifest intention of the Legislature to give these amendments this intent, retroactive application can not attach.

In construing these provisions, it is necessary to look to the General Rules of Statutory Construction. AS 01.10.020 provides:

> "The provisions of AS 01.10.040-01.10.090 shall be observed in the construction of the laws of the state unless the construction would be inconsistent with the manifest intent of the legislature."

AS 01.10.090 further provides:

> "No statute is retrospective unless expressly declared therein."

Construed together, these sections preclude retroactive application absent (1) a specific provision on retroactivity contained in Ch. 96, SLA 1983, or (2) some other manifest intent on the part of the Legislature. As has been recognized by our Supreme Court,

> "Statutes are not to be applied retrospectively unless the language used by the Legislature indicates the contrary."

City and Borough of Juneau v. Commercial Union Insurance Co., 598 P.2d 957, 958-959 (Alaska 1979) (emphasis added). This view has been consistently recognized by the Supreme Court. See Matanuska Maid, Inc. v. State, 620 P.2d 182 (Alaska 1980); Stephens v. Rogers Construction Co. 411 P.2d 205 (Alaska 1966).

In spite of the communication between Ms. Capp and Mr. Weller of Representative Malone's staff, the manifest intent necessary to overcome AS 01.10.090 is not present. In fact, the legislative history indicates a contrary intent.

The legislation containing these amendments (CSSB 86) was brought up for second reading in the House on June 25, 1983. At that time, the House adopted a judiciary committee substitute. This substitute was then amended to include the victims of drunk drivers. 1983 House Journal, 1990. A second amendment which would have given retroactivity to portions of the Act was then passed. 1983 House Journal, 1991. HCSSB 86am then passed the House.

Later that same legislative day, HCSSB 86am was brought back before the House on reconsideration. 1983 House Journal, 2006. The House returned the bill to second reading, the retroactive application amendment was withdrawn, and the legislation passed in its final form. This action may have resulted from the mistaken belief that AS 18.67.130(a)(1) allowed for consideration of claims arising up to two years prior to the effective date; however, the official legislative history clearly manifests a contrary intent--the Legislature clearly considered retroactive application and rejected it.

In that claims brought under the newly expanded class of offenses must be for an offense which occurred after October 22, 1983, it is not necessary for me to address your other questions. If you have need for further clarification on this issue, do not hesitate to contact me.

Dear Senator DeVries:

Enclosed is the information you requested regarding the establishment of an exploited child unit. I've included a draft of legislation which I hope will be helpful to you. Also, I've included letters from Anchorage Police Chief Brian Porter, Alaska State Trooper Colonel Mike Kolivosky and Corrections Commissioner Roger Endell which detail the concept of the unit. Please keep in mind these letters specifically referred to the unit as it was initially conceived, with a different manpower breakdown. What we envision now is an eleven-man unit staffed with five agents from the Anchorage Police Dept., four agents from the Alaska State Troopers and one from the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The total cost would be 985-thousand dollars a year.

Thank you very much for your efforts, further information on the problem of exploited children will be forthcoming.

Sincerely,

Marroyce Hall

MEMORANDUM March 18, 1985

SUBJECT: Sectional analysis of SB 219

TO: Senator Edna DeVries

FROM: Billy G. Berrier BGB
Director
Division of Legal Services

You have requested a sectional analysis of Senate Bill 219 which establishes a special unit for investigation of criminally exploited and missing children.

Section 1 is legislative findings. The legislature finds there is an escalation of crime committed by and against children and that delinquent acts by children are frequently the result of their criminal and sexual exploitation. It further finds the need to establish a cooperative local, state and federal effort to combat incidents of certain named crimes against children.

Section 2 creates a new section of law, Sec. 18.65.086.

(a) Establishes a special unit within the State Troopers for investigating incidents of missing children and criminal exploitation of children.

(b) Requires the commissioner of public safety to annually submit to the legislature a report concerning the activities of the special unit. The report must be submitted within 30 days of convening of the legislature. The paragraph also contains a nonexclusive list of matters which must be included in the report.

(c) Contains definitions of terms as used in this section. A child is a person under 18. Criminal exploitation of children means the use of a child by an adult in a criminal manner for gratification or profit of the adult.

Section 3 provides that this act takes effect July 1, 1985.

It is to be noted that the investigative power of the special unit is cast in broad, general terms while the findings are in specific terms. The specificity is guidance for the special unit but is not limiting except for the stress in the findings on cooperative efforts.

SPECIAL UNIT FOR THE INVESTIGATION OF CRIMINALLY EXPLOITED AND MISSING CHILDREN

Juvenile Unit - Funded by direct appropriation apart from the current law enforcement budget. A new and separate investigative section would be established consisting of a minimum of nine investigators and a supervisor with appropriate clerical support. These investigators should be officers with experience in working with juveniles and in investigative techniques that relate to semi-organized and organized criminal activities. The purpose of the section would be to initiate and follow through investigation into the forces responsible for juvenile prostitution, both male and female, and those forces behind the rising juvenile drug problem and fencing operations involving juveniles. The notable difference between this unit and other units presently in existence is that they would self-initiate these investigations, rather than responding to isolated cases presented to them. It would allow this section to expand upon other investigations presented by other units and to initiate investigations based on intelligence reports from other agencies or information provided by informants. This unit should have the flexibility to work varying hours and have available communications equipment to permit discreet investigation and surveillance.

Specific areas of concern should be (1) juvenile pornography, both the sale and distribution of and the making of, (2) adults and groups who gain by juvenile prostitution activities, (3) organized or semi-organized activities involving the sale and use of drugs by juveniles, (4) organized or semi-organized activities in which juveniles are used as the source of stolen property to be fenced.

As cases in these areas begin to be made, consideration should be given to the establishment of special prosecutors to be funded to handle these cases from beginning to end for the purpose of maintaining the necessary confidentiality of any investigation involving juveniles as victims and/or participants in sensitive areas and for the purpose of maintaining direction in the legal system throughout investigations that will necessarily be involved, complicated and sensitive.

To be effective, this unit must have available to it sources of funds to be used for the paying of confidential informants and to be used for such special operations as purchases of stolen property and drugs through undercover operatives. In addition, this unit must have the capability to operate discreetly, involving the use of unmarked cars and certain kinds of surveillance equipment and office security equipment.

The Juvenile Unit would be utilized as appropriate to assist, coordinate and work with state and national law enforcement efforts in juvenile crime and exploitation cases.

SPECIAL UNIT FOR THE INVESTIGATION OF CRIMINALLY EXPLOITED AND MISSING CHILDREN.

The Child Exploitation Unit would be upgraded to encompass missing children and will be developed on the concept of the Metro Drug Unit with cooperation between law enforcement agencies.

This concept would be an efficient liason to actively work cases in connection with the new State Trooper Centralized Missing Persons Bureau.

The majority of Alaska's missing juveniles live in Anchorage or migrate from the Bush and rural community to Anchorage. Missing and runaway juveniles and children run the highest risk of exploitation by criminal adults. This co-effort will provide vital informational linkages in cases originating locally as well as State-wide.

The originally stated title, SPECIAL UNIT FOR THE INVESTIGATION OF CRIMINALLY EXPLOITED AND MISSING CHILDREN should be retained for the following reasons:

(1) Currently "exploited and missing" is the most accepted phrase and the best definition for the specific kinds of child crimes to be addressed by the unit.

Other units and groups nationally include:

CHILD EXPLOITATION TASK FORCE, LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

EXPLOITED CHILD UNIT, LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

SEXUALLY EXPLOITED CHILD UNIT, NEW YORK, NEW YORK

NATIONAL CENTER FOR MISSING AND EXPLOITED CHILDREN, WASHINGTON, D.C.

(2) Start-up funds for Unit last year was designated to the Special Unit for the Investigation of Criminally Exploited Children.

(3) The ongoing effort to establish the Unit has had good newspaper coverage and public visibility. The terminology was accepted by all branches of law enforcement participating in the project last year. See appended material, Col. Kolivosky, Chief Porter, Roger Endell, Dan Hickey, Anchorage Times, etc.

As to the additional changes in the body of the bill, we queried our law enforcement and legal advisors. They felt that the terminology for the unit was not specific enough, and as written, could be mistaken for other child projects currently existing within law enforcement.

Dear Ms. Hall:

I wanted to take the time to formally follow up on our several discussions both in Anchorage and on the phone since then. In particular to salute the Alaska Juvenile Youth Commission for your excellent work in "Exploited Children - Juvenile Crime" published May, 1983. I was delighted to receive a copy from you and have shared it with our Crime Commission Director for Lou. and Jefferson Co., Ernie Allen. He too extends his compliments for a job well done.

It also occurred to me that I should probably share with you my thoughts on the creation of an exploited child unit in your city. Initially, I should indicate that other than my reading of your report I was in Anchorage only for 2 days as an expert witness in forensic social work with exploited children investigations for the State V. Chico Rodriguez case resulting in 25 guilts verdicts. During this time I got to practically "live with" Investigator Frank Feichtinger and had the in depth opportunity of examining his work as an investigator with/for child victims of exploitation. His knowledge of the "pressure points" in this work including the nexus between these children and the motor-cycle gangs, organized crime, and extortion of "community pillars" is exemplary. His ability to supportively work with and for the child victims of exploitation and commitment to their protection is truely outstanding. Inv. Feichtinger has brought the best of law enforcement skills and personal commitment to children AS CHILDREN to bear in an area of very limited expertise. He was selected by the F.B.I. as one of 27 national experts in this area of investigation to attend the first FBI "Seminar on the Sexual Exploitation of Children" at the FBI Academy, Quantico, Va., during the last week of May, 1983. His selection is certainly indicative of his national reputation as an excellent investigator in this area. As one of the attendees at that Seminar, I can attest to the level of expretise of each of those present as being inordinately high and thus a splendid reflection of his credentials/reputation in this field.

ATTACHMENT #3

All of this is to say that I would recommend that you continue to follow through with the plans developed by the Alaska Juvenile Crime Commission to set up a local/state exploited child unit. Further, it would be my hope and professional recommendation that Investigator Frank Feichtinger be secured as the law enforcement officer to lead such a unit is its early stages given his credentials and proven experience in this field. Such expertise is critical at the early stages of such a new unit/task force. Should an investigator "new" and/or "untried" be chosen no matter how good, you should expect a much more "bumpy road" in this most important project. Care must always be taken to remember that we must all work jointly in and for the best interests of the children who are victims of adult depravity. Inv. Feichtinger certainly has demonstrated in person to me and by reputation his ability and commitment to that end as an excellent exploited child investigator.

I would be most interested in receiving a copy of your newly passed laws in this area and any further developments along the way to the creation of an exploited child unit. Please be assurred that I stand reay to assist you in any way that might be helpful in such a cause. Feel free to share this letter with your colleagues.

ALASKA JUVENILE CRIME COMMISSION REPORT

Statistical Progression of Sexually Abused Male Juveniles Into Criminal Behavior

ATTACHMENT #4

CONCLUSIONS:

FROM THESE VERY CONSERVATIVE STATISTICAL PROJECTIONS THE FOLLOWING CONCLUSIONS CAN BE INFERRED:

Sexual exploitation of juvenile males is a significant and highly contributing factor to subsequent delinquency and criminal behavior.

The cycle of victim progressing to criminal and to sexual offender/exploiter, if not broken, will lead to a geometric type progression of criminal behavior, dollar loss to society, and inability of law enforcement to contain criminal behavior.

Dollar loss noted in these statistics applies only to burglary crimes and does not include dollar loss due to other crimes such as larceny, robbery, fraud, etc. that would probably greatly exceed that mentioned.

Dollar loss to society in the form of increased jail requirements, law enforcement expenditures, court system costs, social service expenditures, etc. is not considered and is astronomical in comparison to dollar loss figures from burglary crimes alone.

Crimes that will result against persons such as assault, homicide, robbery, etc. are not addressed.

Sexual exploitation of children also covers categories not addressed in these projections such as female prostitution, male prostitution and incestuous crimes that probably equal if not exceed in dimension the projections listed here.

Sexual exploitation of children is a hidden problem that has been a significant and root cause of today's crime problem and that if left unaddressed and not diminished will geometrically progress into an out of control causational factor of criminal behavior to a greater impact on our state and future.

STATISTICAL PROGRESSION OF SEXUALLY ABUSED MALE JUVENILES INTO CRIMINAL BEHAVIOR

THE FOLLOWING FIGURES APPLY TO SEXUALLY EXPLOITED MALE JUVENILES WHERE THE SUSPECT IS OTHER THAN A FAMILY MEMBER. SIMILAR FIGURES COULD PROBABLY BE APPLIED WHERE FEMALE JUVENILES ARE VICTIMS. INFORMATIONAL SOURCES INCLUDE ANCHORAGE POLICE DEPARTMENT. F.B.I., ALASKA STATE TROOPERS. LOUISVILLE EXPLOITED CHILDRENS UNIT AND McLAUGHLIN YOUTH CENTER.

ASSUMPTIONS

1. THE AVERAGE ADULT MALE ABUSER WILL SEXUALLY EXPLOIT FIVE CHILDREN IN A ONE YEAR PERIOD.

2. SEXUAL ABUSE IS A SIGNIFICANT CONTRIBUTING FACTOR TO SUBSEQUENT DELINQUENT BEHAVIOR.

3. 50% OF THE MALE JUVENILES SO AFFECTED WILL ACT OUT IN A DELINQUENT MANNER.

   a. Each of this 50% of sexually assaulted youth will commit [average] 10 felony crimes in a one year period.

   b. Anchorage has approximately 3200 burglaries per year.

   c. 39.8% of all forceable entry burglaries and 30.7% unlawful entry burglary arrests were male juveniles. 42% of all auto thefts were juveniles.

   d. Average police time expended per burglary is 8 hours. [Police] [Add costs: court, probation, Mc Laughlin, support services].

   e. 80% OF ALL JUVENILES [MALE] WHO SEXUALLY ABUSE OTHERS, HAVE BEEN SEXUALLY ABUSED THEMSELVES.

   f. 50% of all male juveniles committing serious felony assaults [homicide and first degree assault] have been sexually exploited.

4. 20% of all boys admitted but not institutionalized at McLaughlin Youth Center have been sexually exploited. [One thousand boys are admitted to Mc Laughlin each year but not institutionalized.]

5. 60% OF ALL THE BOYS INSTITUTIONALIZED AT MYC HAVE BEEN SEXUALLY EXPLOITED.

PROJECTION OF ESTIMATED COST OF ACTIVITIES BASED ON KNOWN STATISTICAL FACTORS. (Cost covers only police man hours and actual dollar cost as a result of burglary property loss as an indicator of cost to the community.

ASSUMPTION:

EACH OF THE 30 BOYS COMMITTING THESE CRIMES WILL SPEND 5 YEARS IN JAIL IN A 10 YEAR PERIOD.

150.....Years in jail spent by victims of this one exploiter.

ASSUMPTION:

Of the 1200 crimes committed. 1000 will be burglaries.

$3,000,000.... PROPERTY LOSS IN 4 YEARS AS A RESULT OF THIS ONE EXPLOITER.

COMPUTATION #6

ASSUMPTION:

1. 200 boys admitted to MYC each year have been sexually exploited.

2. 200 additional boys not admitted to MYC have been exploited.

3. 400 additional boys have been exploited but have not displayed subsequent significant delinquent behavior during the year.

400.....Boys exploited who have acted out delinquently.
4000.....Felony crimes committed.
32.000.....Police man hours expended in investigation
15.4.....Police Officers investigating these crimes.

COMPUTATION #7

ASSUMPTIONS:

80.....Boys have been exploited each year.
200.....Will engage in a criminal lifestyle.
10.....Felony crimes will be committed by each boy each year.
60%.....Of those crimes will be property crimes with average dollar loss of $3,000.00.

23%.....Will sexually abuse others during that period.
200,000.....Felony crimes committed.
120,000.....Property crimes committed.
$36,000,000. Property loss.
46.....Sex offenders created.

ASSUMPTION:

Each of the 200 boys will spend 5 years in jail as a result of their crimes.

1000.....Man years of jail time over a 10 year period for each years victims of sexual exploitation.
10,000.....Man years each 10 years for victims of sexual exploitation.
100.....Exploiters.
250.....Kids/year (Delinquent)
2500.....Felony crimes (80% property crimes).
2000.....Property crimes.
$6,000,000.... Property loss.
9.6.....Officer full-time investigating victim's crimes.

COMPUTATION #8

ASSUMPTION:

Of the 46 sexual offenders created in one year, 25% will begin to sexually exploit juvenile males within 10 years.

10 years from now =

11..... New and additional sexual exploiters.
550..... Juvenile males sexually exploited by these additional exploiters in subsequent 10 year period.

137.....Of those exploited will lead a criminal lifestyle.
13,700.....Felony crimes will be committed by the juveniles so exploited in 10 year period.
34.....New sexual offenders will be created, at least 25% of whom will enter the exploiter cycle.

Dear Senator DeVries:

I strongly recommend that Frank Feichtinger be invited to testify on legislation regarding the Child Exploitation Unit, background checks, the runaway bill, and hearsay evidence. Detective Feichtinger is currently assigned to investigate exploited child cases, as a result of the initial state funding for the Child Exploitation Law Enforcement Project. He was also selected by the FBI as one of the twenty-seven local and state experts in the nation three years ago.

Secondly, I have spoken with another member of the Unit, Agent Ken Marischen, FBI. Ken is specially trained in child exploitation cases, kidnapped, and missing children cases from a federal perspective. He indicated that he would also be glad to testify if invited through his supervisor.

Enclosures include Juvenile Justice Digest, FBI report referencing child exploitation and Frank Feichtinger, correspondence from John Rabun, Founder of the Exploited Child Unit, Louisville, Kentucky. John Rabun is currently Deputy Director of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

The men behind the Rodriquez c

Troubled teens find a friend

by Jeff Berliner
Times Writer

Some of Anchorage's most troubled youngsters — teen-agers who continually have been on the wrong side of the law — seem to have found a friend on the right side of the law.

One might not suppose that a police officer would befriend those he puts behind bars.

But nothing about this cop and the things he's done are what you might list in your stereotype of a police officer.

The problem is that Frank Feichtinger, along with everything else, is self-effacing. And in his reluctance to talk about himself, he gives credit for his accomplishments to others.

Police Chief Brian Porter, various of his collegues in the Anchorage Police Department, a couple of former assistant district attorneys, the folks at McLaughlin Youth Center — they're all responsible for helping to crack the Chico Rodriquez case and awaken this community to the problems of abused youth, Feichtinger says.

That case — the biggest commercial child exploitation case in Alaska history — resulted in 25 felony convictions against Rodriquez for his role in using drugs and money to lure an estimated 60 Anchorage boys into the folds of a prostitution, pornography and burglary operation.

But if Feichtinger shuns the cop-with-a-cause label, he quietly goes about his business. The Rodriquez case is only the most famous of a series of cases he has cracked where the victims are young boys.

Rodriquez defense lawyer Mitchel Schapira attacked Feichtinger for befriending Rodriquez' victims, winning them over and thus winning the case.

That attack seemed to be the only thing that ruffled the otherwise soft-spoken Feichtinger throughout the tension-filled, three-week trial.

The trial is over, Rodriquez may spend the rest of his life in jail and Feichtinger has gone on to other cases. But he still maintains his relationships with many of the troubled youths involved in the case — and many others who had no part in the trial.

Teens who have broken more laws than they are years old look with respect at Feichtinger.

And Feichtinger, fully aware of all their legal transgressions, accepts these youths as individuals who need the care and concern of society if they are not to be relegated to a life of crime.

That's why, every year when he and his wife are finished wrapping Christmas presents for their own children, 6 and 4, they wrap more presents for society's rejects, housed at McLaughlin.

That's why when he contemplates a fishing trip to get away from the pressures of police work, he might take one of McLaughlin's delinquents out on a pass to join the weekend outing.

That's why when his family retreats into the peacefulness of its Eagle River home, it may be hosting a youth welcome nowhere else except McLaughlin.

Some of these self-confessed delinquents, who have rejected the values behind

Olson says he's been working almost non-stop ever since, so this summer "I decided to do all those things everybody comes up here to do" — fishing, kayaking, and getting out into the unpopulated wilds.

He went to Bristol Bay to fish at Egegik, south of Naknek, happy for a foray back nek, happy for a foray back into the bush, but this time leaving his lawbooks behind.

Single, with few possessions and nothing to tie him to Anchorage or Fairbanks, Olson probably has been the state's most-traveled prosecutor.

"It's great. I've seen a lot of the state," probably more than many who have been here far longer, he says. "I've never turned down an opportunity to go somewhere and do a trial."

Until the Rodriquez case vaulted his name into print almost every day last May, few had heard of him.

"I have closer friendships and know people better in the small towns in the state than in Anchorage," he says.

Flying out to a village to interview witnesses in preparation for trials, Olson says he frequently wanted to spend more time in the state's far-flung villages — and sometimes did.

But more often, his duties demanded that he leave these Bush villages before he was ready.

Then, in January, he decided to settle down — by his standards, anyway. Olson spent a full five months in the Anchorage office. Much of that time was spent preparing and trying the Rodriquez case.

Although he had called Anchorage or Fairbanks home for much of the previous five years, most of that time those cities were simply a home base from which he set out to rural Alaska on Bush cases.

When he decided to stay for the first half of this year, he took over the sex crimes unit because "I think the psychological aspect of it all is interesting."

He asks himself this: "What is it that causes these people to be sex offenders? And what is it that causes the victims (in the Rodriquez case, for example) to keep going back?"

Although Olson terms these cases "emotionally hard" — more so than other kinds of crimes he's prosecuted — "I've always liked dealing with kids. It's hard for these kids to get up and talk about this stuff.... It's such a major emotional assault for these kids. These kids really hurt. You can't help but feel for them."

More than presenting evidence necessary for conviction, Olson shares the injury and by so doing manages to get young victims of sexual assault to relate their painful experiences.

"I don't have any special training and I don't know how other people approach it," he says, "I just know you can't go in and pretend like you're their friend."

When the victims are young and must reveal bad things they have done, Olson says, "You have to convince them that you're doing it not just because it's your job as a prosecutor, but because you really care about them."

Olson says that has been what motivated him. If he wasn't concerned about the victims, he couldn't successfully prosecute the case, he says.

"You can't talk to a sexual assault victim without having something go between you."

That "something" was the ingredient that made the Rodriquez case his toughest, Olson says, because "each kid is a separate person, who reacts differently, and who must trust you."

But once that bond is established, Olson says he has what it takes to sound convincing to a jury.

Taking the Rodriquez case victory as his swan song, Olson has transformed his Alaskan wanderlust into wandering the world for a while.

Before leaving the country earlier this month, he came back to Anchorage for the Rodriquez sentencing. But the judge got sick, the sentencing was put off and Olson went on his way. He had cleaned out his desk for the last time one week after the Rodriquez convictions were returned, in early June. He returned to Anchorage hoping to personally write the last chapter in the case.

"Maybe I'll really miss this," he says of trial work. "I don't know when I'll return or where I'll go or what I'll do. I just want a break to figure out what else I want to do."

Officer accepts teens

Feichtinger's badge, accept the man behind the badge.

Many of these youths have come of age, some are still behind bars, others have vowed to go straight, but whether on the witness stand at the Rodriquez trial or to a reporter visiting them in jail, they speak of Frank Feichtinger with one voice.

These young criminals and victims of abuse got no deals from Feichtinger. Yet they from Feichtinger. Yet they trust him. They accept him in the same way he has accepted them — as a person. And it is that which has helped many change their lives.

Feichtinger does not go around proselytizing. He is not a zealot out to save today's youth from the evils of the world. He doesn't even want to talk about it. He refused to consent to an interview until it had been approved by the police community relations office.

And he doesn't hide behind a cloak of righteousness and purity. He admits vices — he smokes and swears too much — and says he's really befriended McLaughlin's unwanted for one reason: "I like them, and I care about them."

But he also knows that if these youths — runaways, juvenile delinquents, sexually abused boys — don't find some genuine concern by society and society's authority figures, they'll graduate from McLaughlin to prison.

Feichtinger came to McLaughlin as an employee because he liked working with kids. Working with the residents and earning their trust, he soon began hearing tales of abuse, by someone called "Chico."

Feichtinger had already spent four years with the Alaska State Troopers, where he was involved in a controversial shooting incident, before going to McLaughlin for a six-month stint. He moved on to the Anchorage police and had been there for about a year and a half when, as a patrolman, he began what was to become a year-long investigation into the Rodriquez operation.

He had other duties to perform, and continued to juggle 30 to 40 cases while investigating Rodriquez. It was Porter's commitment to break the state's largest juvenile sex abuse case that permitted him to succeed, says Feichtinger, now an investigator in the police sex crimes unit.

A 33-year old political science major from Rutgers University, Feichtinger says he was attracted to police work by the "thought of adventure and excitement," and the upper New York state native was won over to Alaska when the military stationed him here.

Although he is just one of many anonymous police investigators who go about the business of solving crimes, Feichtinger has recently earned recognition for his unusual ability to win the confidence of male sexual assault victims. He handles all sorts of rape cases, but Feichtinger's forte is the out-of-the-ordinary case, like Rodriquez, where he succeeds in getting boys to reveal instances of sexual abuse.

And one of the nation's foremost experts on the sexual abuse of juveniles, John Rabun Jr., says Feichtinger's departure from typical police questioning techniques to gain the confidence, trust — and key evidentiary information — from juveniles is the wave of the future in the field.

Those techniques do not involve a routine question-and-answer interrogation. Rather, Feichtinger says, they simply involve "give and take, caring about the kid, and talking — earning their trust."

Police and other officials have found a natural reluctance on the part of sexual assault victims to talk about what [illegible] That reluctance is [illegible] volvement was homosexual. And an almost impenetrable wall of silence is erected if the juvenile consented to have sex in exchange for shelter or protection or money or drugs.

"I like to find out why people do what they do," he says. "Police officers are taught to solve crimes and make arrests. But it bothers me when one of these kids commits a crime again and again. I wonder what it is that's keeping them at the bottom. Certainly having kids of my own makes me want to deal with these issues. I grew up on the right side of the track, but this area of exploited children is a critical one."

The work, Feichtinger says, "is not altruism. I enjoy it. And the rewards are great. Basically, they're kids I like."

those regulations can be bypassed in certain cases.

One problem, said Sierra Club spokesman Jack Hession, will probably be defining which landowners' property is "effectively surrounded by" national park land. Like inholders whose lands are completely engulfed by national parks, such landowners are guaranteed access under the proposed regulations.

And they are not required to get congressional approval. It is up to the Interior Department to determine what can and cannot be built.

Another issue is over what type of "access" inholders are guaranteed, Hession said — do the regulations allow a footpath, a gravel road, a major pipeline, a railroad?

Hession and another environmental spokesman, attorney Eric Smith of Trustees for Alaska, agreed that the proposed regulations seem to reflect a shift within the Interior Department.

Earlier regulations did not authorize inholders to build such major facilities as a pipeline for their "access" and bypass congressional review, they said.

"I don't think they were talking about pipelines when they were talking about access to inholdings," Smith said of the intent of in Congress when the lands act was passed.

"It's another attempt by Secretary Watt to circumvent the clear intent of the Alaska Lands Act," Hession said.

Babcock said his company has not taken a definite stand on whether Bear Creek should be considered "effectively surrounded by" national lands. But he offered a definition of an inholder during testimony at a recent hearing:

" 'Effectively surrounded by' means that physical barriers would preclude adequate or feasible access to the land question unless access across th (conservation) unit is afforde Physical barriers include, wit out limitation, mountain terrai extensive marsh areas, shallo water depths and presence of ic for large periods of the year."

Jim Jinks, deputy director c the Resource Developmer Council for Alaska Inc., said hi organization has one concer about the proposed regulations Do they provide reasonable ac cess?

The council is still studyin the issue and has not yet drafte its written comments, he said.

But the key point is that whil the regulations allow for "rea sonable access" to an inholder they don't outline whether th inholder will get the most direc or economically feasible route.

And that could be a very im portant point for a company that wants to develop valuable re sources, especially in the arctic where development costs are high.

Whatever the case, Jinks thinks Bear Creek is definitely an "inholder" and should be afforded the streamlined process for access.

Smith does not agree.

That disagreement and others probably will continue at least until Nov. 14, the deadline for written comments on the regulations to be submitted to Interior.

SUBJECT: Crimina[illegible]ited Childre[illegible]

We have reviewed the materials submitted on criminally exploited children in Alaska and wish to express our support for the formation of a special law enforcement unit in Anchorage to deal with this serious problem. The unit would be a joint State and local cooperative effort similar to the successful Anchorage Metro Drug Unit. The cost is estimated at $375.0 for FY 85 and would include one Anchorage P.D. Sergeant, one Anchorage Police Officer, one Anchorage clerical position, and one State Trooper Sergeant.

While we recognize the seriousness of criminal exploitation of children and that this is a growing problem, it is not feasible at this time for either the Anchorage Police Department or the Division of Alaska State Troopers to divert limited existing resources to form the proposed special unit. We would, however, be pleased to participate in such an effort if funding is provided. Therefore, I urge your support of an appropriation in the amount of $375.0 to fund a special investigative unit on criminally exploited children.

Further details are available upon request. Your consideration of the requested appropriation to deal with this problem is appreciated.

MEMORANDUM State of Alaska

TO Allen Blume
Special Assistant

DATE: October 31, 1983

TELEPHONE NO:

FROM Roger V. Endell
Deputy Commissioner
Adult Corrections Agency

SUBJECT: Alaska Juvenile Crime Commission Report

Thank you for forwarding the Alaska Juvenile Crime Commission Report to me. The connection between child sexual abuse and delinquent behavior is clear to people and agencies working with such children. The various components of the justice system can and must work together on this problem. In the material furnished by Ms. Marroyce Hall, the geometric progression of cost to the State both in monetary and human terms, from just one instance of child sexual abuse, is well illustrated.

The commission is recommending that a statewide special unit for the investigation of sexually exploited children be developed and funded. Corrections would support such a move. Although in the short range, it may result in further overcrowding of our already overcrowded prison system, in the long range, the fewer children exploited, the fewer children become delinquents and possibly adult criminals.

The commission makes a number of recommendations for legislative action. All these recommendations merit further examination; in particular, I believe the following are worthwhile:

1. Strengthening child prostitution and pornography laws.

2. Funding specialized training for State personnel involved with handling exploited children and juvenile offenders with a history of exploitation (This would include McLaughlin Youth Center staff and Juvenile Probation staff as well as law enforcement personnel).

3. Fund juvenile emergency centers.

4. Provide incentive for the creation of non-profit group, halfway and foster homes, but ensure quality care through adherence to rigorous standards and frequent program monitoring and audits.

5. Establish a 24-hour information and referral hotline for exploited and abused children.

In the prevention section of the commission's report, of particular interest is the in-district suspension from school to include counseling and further referral if necessary. This appears to be a possible alternative to complete suspension from school.

GEORGE M. SULLIVAN,
MAYOR

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY
Division of Police Services

Marroyce Hall
Chairman
People for Better Education
Anchorage, Alaska

Dear Ms. Hall:

In response to your request for our views on how the present juvenile system is functioning, and what changes we would propose, I am including the following observations and suggestions. These suggestions are not complete but they do provide some insight into the problem that law enforcement agencies face and attempt to cope with.

Status offenders are rapidly becoming a major problem in the Anchorage Area. Many juveniles are living away from home without their parents permission. Because of the present laws, police departments, social agencies and the juvenile courts are helpless to prevent or correct these situations. These juveniles are becoming involved in criminal offenses and placing themselves in positions that are detrimental to their morals and welfare, and yet our "system" is helpless to correct these faults. In the meantime, many parents are attempting to seek assistance from all available agencies but are unable to get any help because of current laws and attitudes. It should be kept in mind that, even though the parents have lost all control over their children, and are unable to obtain needed assistance, the parents are still responsible for their childrens' actions.

I would submit the following suggestions for consideration. Lower the juvenile age from 18 years to 16 years. Juveniles today are much more sophisticated and are committing much more serious offenses than several years ago. A large percentage of our major crimes are being committed by juveniles in the 16-18 year group. If society is going to protect juveniles from being responsible for their own actions, then society owes it to the citizen to protect them from the criminal juvenile offender.

Another alternative would be to provide adequate social services and agencies to identify and work with families as a whole. Too much attention is devoted to the rights and needs of the juvenile and parents are ignored. It is necessary that both the juvenile and parents be considered when counseling or other social therapy is recommended.

ATTACHMENT #8

I would suggest the laws be changed to bring back parental control within the home. Today's attitudes and thinking by many well-meaning groups are weakening the family structure. This trend should be reversed.

Juvenile offenders that commit serious crimes against persons and property should have their names and addresses made public. I believe that society has a right to know who these offenders are. I don't feel, however, that all juvenile offenders should have this information released, the criteria being, should society have to protect itself from a particular type of offender such as a rapist or burglar.

Establish a local ordinance to enable police officers to take CHINS (children in need of supervision) into custody and place them under supervision until subsequent contact by the proper agency. Keep in mind that many runaways are leaving the foster homes they are now being placed in. I maintain that if a juvenile is going to be counseled and steps taken to place this child in the proper environment, the first step is to ensure that this juvenile will be available for this evaluation. In many instances that is not the case today. There are many more issues that could be addressed, such as the role of the juvenile court, probation officers, institutions, etc.; however, with the emphasis on juvenile diversion and rehabilitation rather than on punishment, deterents to delinquincy behavior are rapidly disappearing.

I strongly feel that one of the primary goals of a police department is to divert juvenile offenders from the court systems. However, without the necessary support from other agencies in the community, this approach is a failure as the attached documents will support.

Many supporting agencies do an excellent job, but fail in their role because of lack of staff and funds. Some are restricted, as are parents, because of some laws pertaining to juveniles. Also, I don't feel that the schools fulfill their responsibilities in the role they play in identifying and preventing problem behaviorial patterns. More training and specialization is needed by law enforcement agencies.

The problems are many and I don't feel that there are any certain solutions. It will take community involvement by many citizens before any progress is made toward lowering the juvenile problem we face in Alaska. Politics, money, personnel, attitudes, philosophies - all play roles in the system. There are as many solutions as there are children, and until such time as we begin to do what is in the best interest of each individual child and parent; based on each individual case; our juvenile problem will continue to grow.

We have been asked to briefly outline the scope and estimated cost of a Special Unit for the Investigation of Criminally Exploited Children.

Background:

I have discussed this proposition with Colonel Mike Kolivosky, Director of the Alaska State Troopers, and have agreed that:

1. Such a unit could be beneficial if operated under the task force concept of the current Metropolitan Drug Enforcement Unit.

2. While these offenses are an important area of concern, neither AST nor APD could lose existing budget to begin this function as an independent unit.

3. If funded, the unit would operate, as the Metro Drug Unit, in the Greater Anchorage Area and periodically in the Matanuska-Susitna Valley.

Scope:

Initial and followup investigation of cases involving juveniles:

1. Prostitution.

2. Organized burglary/larceny offenses.

3. Narcotics.

4. Runaway.

5. missing children last year

6.

ATTACHMENT #9

This unit would place emphasis on the exploitive aspects of these crimes. Priority would be given as listed above. The unit would coordinate with the Metropolitan Drug Unit and regular investigation units of the Anchorage Police Department and Alaska State Troopers as required.

General Considerations:

Funding should begin at least eight (8) months in advance of operational implementation so as to provide for recruitment and training of replacement personnel.

Sincerely,

Brian S. Porter
Chief of Police

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

The Alaska State Troopers have been asked for input in the creation of a Special Unit for the Investigation of Criminally Exploited Children.

At this time it appears that the Alaska State Troopers would be able to furnish one person of the rank of Sergeant on a part-time basis with the responsibility for initiating and conducting investigations in the State Trooper area of jurisdiction on matters pertaining to juvenile exploitation and victimization to include juvenile pornography, juvenile prostitution and other crimes involving juveniles which are considered to be organized or semi organized.

If a new position and adequate funding was authorized, the position would be that of a full time Sergeant. The Trooper Sergeant would in the performance of his duties act as a member of this special unit, which would be housed in the Anchorage area, and in cooperation with the Special Unit leader, he would be responsible for coordinating or working with other members of the Task Force in conducting investigations of matters pertaining to juvenile exploitation and victimization. He would be responsible for developing sources of information concerning these areas and in coordination with the Special Unit Leader develop, collect and furnish pertinent intelligence information to further enforcement efforts. He would, as a member of the Special Unit assist other members in their child exploitation victimization investigations. He will also assist other law enforcement agencies and activities in this type of investigation when requested.

The Sergeant will be responsible for the coordination enforcement efforts involving similar offenses with criminal and juvenile justice agencies in other states. He will also coordinate enforcement and investigative efforts with appropriate federal agencies on interstate matters.

ATTACHMENT #10

The person assigned to this Special Unit must be prepared to cope with juvenile personalities and problems and have a Proclivity for communicating with juveniles

The total anticipated expenses for the Department of Public Safety, State of Alaska, would be $79,084. These expenses are broken down as follows:

1.	One State Trooper Sergeant assigned to the Criminal Investigation Bureau, Anchorage - salary and benefits (78C - 12 O/T)	$68,392
2.	One lease car	4,452
3.	Travel and Per Diem	2,000
4.	Telephone	1,020
5.	Miscellaneous (office supplies, vehicle expenses, etc.)	3,220
6.	Clerical support (use existing)	-0-

FROM: TRP SAGRAVES/INV. FEICHTINGER, Child Sexual Abuse Unit

SUBJECT: Statistical Information, Unit Caseload.

Per your request, attached is a breakout of open cases presently assigned to individual members of the Child Sexual ABuse Unit. The unit was effective on December 1, 1984 and initially consisted on one supervisor (APD), two investigators (APD), and one Trooper Investigator and one clerk (APD). Effective February 1, 1985 an additional investigator (APD) was added to the unit. It is our understanding that on or about March 1, 1985, another investigator (APD) will be added to the unit. When the unit was first formed, the APD sworn personnel assigned brought with them to the unit, cases they had been assigned in their previous units that were still open. The three initial APD investigators assigned to the unit had previously been assigned in units dealing with child sexual abuse crimes.

Presently, the unit is assigned all cases involving the sexual abuse of minors where a family member is the abuser, all cases involving the sexual abuse of minors in which the victims are 10 years of age or younger, and some cases involving the sexual abuse of minors in which the victims are 11-18 years of age. The Sexual Assault Unit of APD is handling the other reported cases involving victims 11-18 years of age. The unit is not handling cases in which minors are being exploited in other than sexual ways such as involvement of minors with adults in narcotics rings and stolen property rings. These cases are being handled by other investigative units within APD. However, some of the sexual exploitation cases presently being handled by the unit also involve other types of exploitation and are being investigated by the unit.

It has been the experience of the investigators in the unit that have worked these kinds of cases for some time that the average amount of investigative time required to handle one single victim inter-family case is approximately 24 man-hours. Multiple victim inter-family cases and single victim exploitation/abuse cases require a man-hour expenditure varying between the two previously stated averages.

In addition to the cases listed and attached, unit members have identified approximately 50-100 suspected or known multiple victim exploiters in the Anchorage area. A pro-active approach is needed to investigate these persons and their activities and there is presently insufficient man-power to do so. Presently, the unit is responding almost entirely re-actively to reported cases and at present is unable to deal effectively even with that. Presently the unit is in a posture where valid cases must be prioritized such that only those involving cooperative victims and situations involving current jeopardy to the victims are being worked.

In reference to the attached forms detailing presently assigned and open cases we feel that it is necessary to explain some of the categories listed. The blocks labeled "Inter-family and Exter-family" are self explanatory. The block marked "Multiple Victims" indicates and case where there is more than one known victim and could include numerous known victims. If the blocks entitled "Drug Violations, Pornography, or Commercial Prostitution" are checked it indicates that violations of this nature are involved in the case and are being worked as a part of the case. The block entitled "Sexual Assault" refers to cases where the victim (adult or juvenile) was assaulted forceably and is likened to the "stranger rape" situation. The block marked "Sexual Abuse" indicates cases in which a minor was sexually abused, either consentually or forceably. The block marked "Sexual Exploitation" refers to those cases involving sexual abuse in which there are known or suspected multiple victims and there appears to be a pattern of ongoing behavior on the part of the prepetrator in continuing the sexual abuse of known victims and seeking out new victims; in short cases involving a fixated pedophile.

Attached also is a copy of a recent "job description" submitted by Inv. Feichtinger in reference to his duties in this area that had been prepared for an APD classification study now in progress. This attachment is provided for your information and probably accurately describes the job duties, at present, if an investigator in this unit.

For your information, during the month of December, 1984, (the first month this unit was in existence) approximately 44 new cases were taken in. During the month of January, 1985, approximately 58 new cases were taken in. So far this month the unit has taken in approximately 23 new cases. This does not include information that has been received from various sources indicating sexually abusive/exploitive situations where no victims have yet come forward.

Sex abuse cases burden police

by Earl Swift
Times Writer

City police and Alaska State Trooper detectives have identified as many as 100 Anchorage adults who have or suspected to have sexually abused more than one child each. But two detectives reported last week the officers may be unable to investigate the cases because they are overworked and understaffed.

A Feb. 14 memorandum written to trooper commander Col. Michael Kollvosky by a city detective and a trooper assigned to the Anchorage Police Department's Child Sexual Abuse Unit indicates the unit's members have identified approximately "50 to 100 suspected or known multiple-victim exploiters in the Anchorage area."

But, the memo reads, "there is presently insufficient manpower" within the unit to investigate the unreported cases, because the detectives assigned to the detail are struggling to crack 125 cases already reported to them.

Written by trooper investigator Roy Sagraves and police investigator Frank Feichtinger, the memo states the unit "is responding almost entirely (to reported cases) and at present is unable to deal effectively with even that.

"Presently the unit is in a posture where valid cases must be prioritized such that only those involving cooperative victims and situations involving current jeopardy to the victims are being worked," the memo says.

Police overwhelmed by sex abuse cases

Sundberg said Friday the memo was written at the colonel's request after Sundberg learned the new unit was buried in cases.

The memo states the unit — established Dec. 1 — took on 44 new cases during its first month of operation, 68 new cases in January, and 23 more during the first half of February. "This does not include information that has been received from various sources indicating sexually abusive/exploitive situations where no victims have yet come forward."

The detail originally was comprised a police corporal, two city detectives, Sagraves and a police clerk. A police investigator joined it Feb. 1 and another city officer is scheduled to be added March 15.

"Given the resources we have, what you see is what we have," police Investigations Division commander Capt. Del Smith said Friday. "I can't speculate on what I'd do with more people because I'm not programmed to get any more.

"We've assigned six people including the trooper, and the last one much earlier than we'd anticipated because of this caseload," he said. "Those six people are about as many as I have worked in any other unit."

But even with the extra officers, the detectives' caseload will be heavy. For example, the document shows of the 125 reported cases, 30 involve incest, each single-victim family case requiring an average of 24 manhours to complete.

"I wanted an update on that particular program, and as a result Col. Kollvosky asked Trooper Sagraves to put that memo together," Sundberg said. "The memorandum does show that the unit has a large caseload."

Anchorage police Investigations Division commander Del Smith said he realized the unit was carrying a heavy load, but said he had committed the maximum number of officers possible to the program.

Smith said he also realized that the detail's load of reported cases prevented its officers from opening investigations on their own into the 50 to 100 unreported cases of more organized forms of child exploitation.

"But the incest cases are a fact," he said. "They are occurring. We must deal with them when we get reports.

"I'll tell you, I've got a lot more incest cases coming," he added.

Kollvosky, meanwhile, said he viewed the memo as reflecting the unit's new status. "When you're starting out I'm sure you're going to take a little time to figure out what's going on and who is supposed to do what," the colonel said.

Sagraves and Feichtinger declined to comment on the memo Friday, and unit leader Cpl. Steve Wilmer could not be reached

DEPARTMENT OF LAW

CRIMINAL DIVISION

March 30, 1984

The Honorable John Sackett
The Honorable Don Bennett
Co-Chairman, Committee on Finance
Alaska State Senate
Pouch V
Juneau, Alaska 99811

Re: Special Investigative Unit
Criminal Exploitation of Children

Dear Senators Sackett and Bennett:

I have been requested by Senator Kelly's office to provide you with fiscal information describing the impact on the Department of Law's prosecution program by the inclusion in the operating budget of a line-item grant of $200.0 to the Municipality of Anchorage for the creation of a special child exploitation investigative unit. This appropriation is presently included in the House budget within the Department of Public Safety, Commissioner's Office.

The creation of such a unit was originally proposed with a funding level of $375,000 to create a five member investigation team within the Alaska State Troopers and the Anchorage Police Department. In response to this proposal, we provided the Office of Management and Budget with a description of resources that would be required for the Anchorage District Attorney's Office in order to properly handle the cases which the State Troopers and the Anchorage Police believed would result from the unit's efforts. Those needed resources included a senior level prosecuting attorney, a paralegal assistant and a legal secretary for total costs of $224,600.

As I understand the intent of the funding presently included in the House budget, the proposed unit would be reduced to three members and located exclusively in the Anchorage Police Department. Chief Porter had previously estimated that the work of the unit as originally proposed would result in approximately 25 additional major felony cases per year. It can be expected that considerably fewer cases would result at the reduced level and the impact on our department would be reduced accordingly.

We would anticipate that the work of this unit would result in 12 to 15 major felony cases per year involving approximately 15 to 20 defendants. Because of the nature of the cases and based on our past experience in this area, we would anticipate that these cases would involve between 40 and 60 individual criminal offenses.

From our experience prosecuting major felony cases of this nature, we have learned that these cases typically result in complex and lengthy investigations and trials. In addition to the primary crime of sexual exploitation of children, there are also drug, property and vice crimes generally involved. A good example of one of these cases is the prosecution in State v. Rodriquez last year in Anchorage which involved 28 separate counts of child exploitation, sexual assault and prostitution offenses. The defendant was convicted of 25 counts and received a sentence of 133 years with 83 years to serve.

To insure that the cases are properly handled, a prosecuting attorney should be assigned early in the investigative phase and remain with the case as it develops. A senior level prosecuting attorney will be required to properly prepare these cases and prosecute the resulting charges.

Cases of this nature also generally involve multiple victims. The Rodriquez case, for example, involved 11 victims. Due to the sensitive nature of the crimes involved, victim/witness services are required in order to properly prepare youthful victims who face the difficult ordeal of appearing at trial as witnesses. A paralegal assistant is required to perform these services and to generally assist in case preparation and presentation.

In an effort to keep the overall fiscal impact to a minimum, and in light of the reduced capability of the unit reflected at the funding level included in the House budget, we believe that we can do an acceptable job through a prosecuting attorney position at the Attorney IV rather than Attorney V level and a half-time paralegal assistant position. The total costs associated with these positions, which include case related costs for projected witness travel and similar items, is $127,700. Attached is a detail sheet breaking these costs down by each position and budgetary object code. Please let us know if there is any further information that we can provide.

Very truly yours,

NORMAN C. GORSUCH

LAW ENFORCEMENT/CRIME COMMITTEE

4. Increase efforts to educate juveniles and increase public awareness of the role drugs play in health and overall crime.

5. Personal property confiscated from drug arrests should be sold at auction and the proceeds used to recover the costs of investigations. Automobiles seized could be used as surveillance vehicles and defray the cost of rental vehicles for the Metro Drug Unit and the Felony Suppression Squad.

JUVENILE CRIMES

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The State should appropriate funds for emergency shelter of juvenile runaways with sufficient manpower and social services provided.

2. Juveniles convicted of felony-like crimes should be fingerprinted and those records should be available to law enforcement when probable cause has been established.

3. The statute governing classification of fingerprints allowed in the criminal justice computer system should be amended to include juvenile prints and other licenses acquired by individuals that are of public record but to which law enforcement does not have ready access.

4. We advocate that the Alaska Exclusionary Rule be uniform with the Federal Exclusionary Rule.

LAW ENFORCEMENT/CRIME COMMITTEE

SCHOOL CRIMES

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The State should appropriate funds for a multi-media anti-drug and alcohol attitude campaign and parental involvement in youth and school activities. We should encourage parents to teach their children moral and social values.

2. The Anchorage School District should consider incorporating parenting instruction in their curriculum to teach emotional as well as physical nurturing of children.

3. The APD should hire four more juvenile officers rather than pull manpower from the other departments, already short-manned.

4. The Anchorage School District employee applicants should be screened under Chapter 66 of the Sessions Laws for contributing to minors' arrest records as well as sexual offenses, much the same as school bus drivers.

5. The Anchorage School District should remain firm in their policy of fingerprinting teacher applicants. The School District should first avail themselves of local law enforcement services in conducting preliminary criminal record checks. Use of the fingerprint cards is necessary for positive confirmation of applicants found to have criminal records through local law enforcement record checks.

6. Municipality of Anchorage merchants should be provided with a current school calendar and should be advised of regular school hours and the Pass System during school hours.

LAW ENFORCEMENT/CRIME COMMITTEE

CHILD ABUSE/SEXUAL ASSAULT

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Support and cooperation should be extended to the Alaska Juvenile Crime Commission in their efforts to acquire funding for specially trained units to deal with criminally exploited juveniles.

2. Agencies that work with children should be encouraged and instructed in how to avail their agencies of the provisions of Chapter 66 of the Session Laws of Alaska. This law allows their agencies to request criminal record checks by the Alaska State Troopers of their employees to determine whether they have a history of convictions for sex crimes or crimes against children.

3. The Anchorage School District should continue (or institute if no programs are in effect) courses on physical and sexual abuse at the elementary school level. Staff should be instructed to detect abuse and report to appropriate authorities. Junior and senior high school courses in self-defense against rape attempts should be provided.

4. All runaway juvenile cases reported to APD should be reported to the FBI for NCIC entry within 24 hours. Parents and legal guardians should be made aware of what steps APD will take in locating their child, including an FBI report, when they report their child missing.

ROBBERY/LARCENY/BURGLARY

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Recommend prosecution of burglary/property crimes offenders as a deterrent to others.

McLaughlin study shows history of abuse

Jeff Berliner
es Writer

Eighty percent of the teeners at McLaughlin Youth Cenwere abused before they re sent to McLaughlin, and 68 cent were abused sexually.
d 40 percent of those delinnts said they have abused
ers in the same way they re abused.

A in-house survey detailing
Laughlin residents' history of se concluded that the delin-ncy of McLaughlin's resi-nts can be traced back to idhood abuse.

Although there have been na-
nal studies of such abuse,
Laughlin superintendent
ry Jackowski said this is the t such local look at the incice of abuse.

The study was prompted, Jackowski said, by the Carlos "Chico" Rodriquez case and subsequent estimates of the number of youths who have been victims of sexual abuse.

Rodriquez was convicted of 25 felonies as part of an illicit commercial network employing under-age younths as prostitutes, pornography stars and burglars. Police contend that as many as 60 Anchorage youngsters were used by Rodriquez. Rodriquez will be sentenced Sept. 30.

Although the report does not mention Rodriquez by name, Jackowski said it was that case — and the revelations that so many youngsters were involved — that prompted McLaughlin to survey its residents.

"The Rodriquez case showed us how extensive this kind of thing was, how many kids were involved," Jackowski said. "We knew it was occurring here. but we thought it was on a smaller scale. We had no idea how extensive it was."

The survey, dated Aug. 25 and submitted in the Rodriquez case file this week, was conducted by McLaughlin clinical services administrator George Buhite. Sixty youths, or about half of McLaughlin's current population, took part in the survey.

Most of the McLaughlin residents questioned, like most of the victims in the Rodriquez case, were boys.

"The exact connection between abuse and delinquency cannot be determined on the basis of this study," Buhite concluded. "However, the conc sion is inescapable that th adolescents have been vict ized. The residents' victimizat and the subsequent humiliat and anger is a significant con buting factor to their de quency."

Although Jackowski said abuse problems which surfac in the Rodriquez case have led new programs and counseling McLaughlin, Buhite said the s vey will be studied further "w a goal of gaining a greater und standing of these problems a to expand our research in the ture."

Among the findings in the port are:

- Eighty percent report m tiple incidents of physical abu

Some report being tied up, food being withheld or being burned.

- Sixty percent of McLaughlin's population said they ran away from home for fear of more physical abuse.
- Forty percent of McLaughlin's residents acknowledged committing the same kind of physical abuse against others. One-fourth of those who were sexually abused admitted committing such acts later.
- Sixty-eight percent reported sexual abuse and 25 percent of the McLaughlin population has been "extremely sexually abused."
- Twenty-seven percent of these underage youths said they have had sex for money and the same percentage said they were forced to have sex with someone.

THE RUNAWAY-THROWAWAY JUVENILES OF ANCHORAGE

Who are the runaway-throwaways? Where do they come from?

The answer to this question is simple - from everywhere, from all cultural and social backgrounds, rich and poor alike. Some come from the lower 48 states to Alaska seeking the other parent or family member in divorce situations. Others come from average working or middle class homes right here in our state. Still others come from families that make well over $60,000 dollars a year. Runaways come from the full range of the economic spectrum, from the poorest families of our state to the wealthiest. No stratum is immune. Any child can fall victim to the street life and the hell it brings to them.

I meet many types of youth that the Justice system does not reach here in Alaska. Although my contact is only with juveniles in the Anchorage area, some come from other states and others come from rural Alaska. The runaway who becomes a throwaway is generally very transient individual. He or she often moves from one city to another, from one state to another and becomes prey for not only organized rings but also random preditors.

Dave was 16 at that time. His parents had left him here in Anchorage when they came to this state for vacation. They told him that he was old enough now to take care of himself. He was left with some money, but it soon ran out. He tried to get a job, and held on to a few, working in a couple of fast food restaurants here in town. It was never enough to keep him properly fed and supply his shelter needs. The rooming house he stayed at when he had the money charged $5.00 dollars a night. Like most runaways he was very determined to make it on his own and enter the adult world. For a period, he could not get a job and started panhandling in the downtown Anchorage area. During the winter, if he did not have enough money for a room, he slept under the blower vent from the grill of McDonalds next to the Sunshine Mall. He had purchased a sleeping bag previously and hid this and his other possessions when he panhandled during the day. He was sexually molested by a drunk adult male who offered to help him with a place to stay.

Jeff: My contact with Jeff came approximately two years ago in a shoplift incident. Often runaways will shoplift from stores for money and clothing. It is quite easy to go for some time without being caught. Most stores do not have security floor walkers. Jeff was 15 at the time I apprehended him. He had runaway from home many times before this and his parents just did not care anymore nor did they report him as a runaway. He often talked to his parents by telephone and always lied about his true situation. Jeff stayed with friends at first, often staying a month or more, at least until his welcom wore out. He was a heavy user of drugs - popping pills, smoking marijuana and often mixed drugs with alcohol. His addiction stopped him from getting or holding a job. He was raped by an adult male one evening when he was very high on LSD (Lysergic Acid Diethylamide).

ATTACHMENT #15

Mike: I first met Mike when he tried to panhandle some money from me. He told me that time that he had not eaten in a week, and from the looks of him I could believe it. He was 16 and could not have weighed more than 100 pounds on a 5'6" frame of a body. I took him to a restaurant for a meal. He ate three complete dinners. He had made money before by prostituting himself for $30.00 dollars a trick, but was once beaten up after the sex act by his client and robbed of all his money. Since then he said that he would never prostitute himself again, that he would starve first.

Mary: I met Mary in one of the downtown malls. She was a prostitute and only 16. She was a Native and had got pregnant from a boy in her village and attempted an abortion on herself with a wire hanger, had a miscarriage and ran away. She was picked up by a pimp, often beaten and never left with enough money to return back to her village. She was also strung out on drugs which her pimp supplied for her. She died of an overdose.

Gregg: Picked up by a patrol officer wandering the streets of downtown Anchorage. He was poorly clothed and in a dazed and disoriented condition. It was found that he had been the import of a homosexual ring from Seattle He had been sexually abused for nearly two years. He could not provide enough information to make a case against his captors. At the time he was taken into protective custody he was eleven years old.

While there is a certain spontaneity about the involvement of street kids and runaways in prostitution, i.e., when you are hungry and need to survive on the streets, the options may be few, there is also ample evidence of networks and organization in child prostitution and pornography. Cases continually produce child prostitutes who know each other, who tend to service overlapping clientele, adults who may make referrals to each other, as well as exchange photographs and information.

An apparent by-product of this "netowrking", and the type of adult who tends to frequent the areas in which child sex flourishes (i.e., professional, prominent, affluent, with family, etc.) is the growth of extortion as a spin-off. This further demonstrates the potential for child victimization, murder and other violence.

We have discovered that treatment and follow up for identified child prostitutes/exploited children generally is very difficult. While there are many excellent models nationally of community based treatment centers and shelters, unfortunately the data is not ample on success stories. In this community our priority has been identification of the adult exploiters along with the protection of the child. Ultimately the child must be prepared to cope with the environment in which he or she was exploited.

Regarding adult customers for child pornography and prostitution, the sample is far less and the conclusions drawn are less objectively based. However, to date there is reason to believe that adult pedophiles tend to be white well-established males, 40-60 years old, are or have been married generally have from 2 to 4 children, and are earning in excess of $35,000 per year. They are usually college-educated and most are professional persons and well thought of by the community.

FBI ACADEMY STAFF ESTABLISHES LAW ENFORCEMENT NETWORK FOR CHILD EXPLOITATION CASES

By Betty B. Bosarge
Editor, Washington Crime News Services

In an effort to help law enforcement officers throughout the United States and Canada who are investigating child sex offenders, the staff of the FBI Academy's Behavioral Sciences Unit has established a network of Federal, state and local officers who have been specializing in child sex exploitation cases.

"To effectively work interjurisdictional cases in this sensitive and difficult to penetrate area, personal contact among officers is extremely necessary," Supervisory Special Agent Kenneth V. Lanning of the Behavioral Sciences Unit told Juvenile Justice Digest.

With the help of FBI field office agents, Lanning invited 25 officers from throughout the nation to a meeting at the Academy recently. During the five-day working seminar, the officers got to know each other on a personal basis. They came from local police and sheriff's departments, Federal agencies working on child pornography and missing children cases, and state agencies and prosecutors' offices.

According to Lanning, the objectives of the seminar were to:

OJJDP GRANT AWARD

The Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (OJJDP) has awarded Project Helping Hand, of Washington, D.C., $266,663 to operate a youth assistance program, the U.S. Department of Justice has announced. The project is intended to reduce the formal adjudication of youths in juvenile court, increase community involvement in delinquency abatement, and incorporate significant private sector training and management activities. Additional information about the grant, number 83-JS-AX-0005, can be obtained by calling Albert E. Strong in Washington on 202-293-0079.

"There is a virtual epidemic of child tragedies occurring across the country," said Rosie Norris, chairperson of ECHO. "We feel it is a problem the community must get involved in. Through ECHO we hope to provide a forum for community involvement. We want to prevent a tragedy before it happens here."

Louisville is the second city to organize a chapter of ECHO. The first chapter was formed in northern Kentucky in 1981.

- Examine the nature, scope and extent of the problem of sexual exploitation of children.
- Examine the status of the existing law enforcement response to the problem, including intra-agency, interagency and interdisciplinary cooperation.
- Identify and analyze successful and unsuccessful investigative techniques.
- Identify sources of information, expertise and training for law enforcement.
- Develop and encourage personal contact and communication in the law enforcement community.

Setting Up Task Forces

"The 50-hour program was a working seminar and not merely a lecture-type seminar," Lanning explained. "Its success depended on the ability and willingness of each of the attendees to present and participate in the discussion of various topics concerning the sexual exploitation of children."

Did the seminar meet its goals? If Lanning's enthusiasm is an indicator, the United States now has its first working network of officers who specialize in child sex cases. And it is a network which Lanning invites other police in the U.S. and Canada to tap into.

The FBI has made child sex exploitation one of its targeted priority crimes, Lanning said. As soon as possible, the Bureau hopes to train at least one agent in most field offices to investigate these cases. In addition, the FBI has already established one joint task force specializing in child sex exploitation cases. Operating out of the New York City field office, the task force consists of FBI agents, U.S. Customs Service officers, investigators from the U.S. Postal Service, and officers from the New York City, Nassau and Suffolk County, Long Island, Police Departments.

"We're looking more and more at the task force idea around the country to help solve the manpower problem," Lanning explained. Child sex exploitation cases, like narcotics cases, are manpower intensive and require close cooperation among several agencies in order to crack multi-state and international trafficking rings.

Reaching Agreement

Attendees at the Academy seminar unanimously agreed on the following points, Lanning told JJD:

1. The sexual exploitation of children is a broad and pervasive problem with every child in America a potential victim.
2. There is a desperate need to increase public awareness concerning the nature and scope of the problem.
3. Effective investigation of the sexual exploitation of children requires intra-agency, interagency and interdisciplinary cooperation and personal contact between all those involved.
4. The prime concern for law enforcement involvement in these types of cases should be the welfare of the child victim.
5. Law enforcement officers involved in the investigation of the sexual exploitation of children need to be carefully selected and trained.
6. Law enforcement agencies need to take a proactive investigative approach to the problem and not wait for cases to be reported.

"This is how the working level officers feel," Lanning said. "They all agreed that these are the priority issues in the area of child sex exploitation."

Interagency working arrangements and the sharing of information seems to be the biggest stumbling block in aggressively pursuing cases and arresting perpetrators, Lanning explained. Along with this are the interdisciplinary problems.

"The officers need to establish personal contact with judges, prosecutors and social services workers," he told JJD. "These interagency and interdisciplinary problems can be overcome. For example, effective work is being done by our Task Force in New York, as well as the Exploited and Missing Children's Unit in Louisville, Kentucky."

However, the need for personal contacts can lead to other problems. What happens when an officer who specializes in child sex cases gets transferred? Are his contacts lost forever?

The officers attending the seminar felt that the officer being transferred should introduce his replacement to his contacts. In other words, keep the network alive.

Every Officer Must Be Trained

If a law enforcement agency decides to establish a child sex exploitation unit, Lanning says the agency can't just tell the newly assigned officers to "go out and investigate these cases.

"Specialized training is an absolute necessity," he advises. "The officers in these units also need to be selected carefully. And, supervisors have to monitor the officers. There is a problem with what we call 'the isolation effect.' Officers working child sex cases can become too emotionally involved."

How long should the training be and what should be covered? Lanning says it can last from one day, covering the basics, to a week or more. Some of the topics which need to be included in a training session are:

- The Nature of Deviant Sexual Behavior: This segment of the training would cover sex offenses in general.

- Understanding the Nature and Dynamics of Pedophilia.

- MOs of Pedophiles: This segment of the training must stress that most pedophiles are "average people," Lanning said. They are not "dirty old men in raincoats." A person can be "a nice guy" and still be a child molester. Because most people focus on a misleading stereotype of what a child molester is, prevention is difficult; it is hard for officers to convince parents that the usual molester is someone the child knows and someone the parents trust, such as the scout leader, teacher, minister, neighbor who is nice to children, etc. "There's a problem of a great deal of denial on the part of parents when we tell them the child's teacher, for example, is a molester," Lanning said. "They say it can't be true because 'he is such a nice guy.' They have a tendency to argue that there is a police frame-up of the 'nice guy' molester – and this is something that office[illegible]rking these cases must be told in training."

- Concepts of Collecting Pornography: Here the training should focus on how collectors establish networks to foster comaraderie among themselves – support groups, Lanning said. Some of these groups are international and national, such as the North American Man-Boy Love Association (NAMBLA), and others are clubs of local or regional collectors. Many of the collectors keep in touch with each other by sharing photos through the mail and writing descriptive letters about "what they are doing with their newest little boy," Lanning said. "They want to validate themselves with each other and have someone who will tell them that what they're doing is OK."

- Recognition/Prevention: Some police departments are still focusing on the "stranger/danger" prevention programs too heavily, while not informing parents that most molesters (about 85 percent) are people the children know and trust, Lanning said. While the "stranger/danger" posters and programs are necessary, officers in sex exploitation units must be trained in the preventive aspects of child molesting and then work with crime prevention units to get the message of the "friendly molester" out to the children and their parents.

Interviews And Investigations

Another area of training must focus on how to interview child victims.

"In most cases, where you're dealing with a syndicated pedophile ring or a single molester who has a string of kids, you'll find that strong bonds develop between the molester and the child," Lanning explained. "This requires special interviewing techniques on the part of the officer.

"The officer must understand that the secret to the pedophile's success in his ability to seduce kids is that he gives them attention and benefits for the sexual favors. He sometimes treats them better than their parents do. But all this is done solely to seduce the kids."

Another problem officers have to be aware of is the fact that most pedophiles have an age preference for the children they are molesting. When the boys or girls start to mature, they get dumped, leaving the child in some cases with a broken heart and wondering why his "good friend" doesn't like him anymore. In other cases, the molesters will use the older youths to recruit younger children.

"Officers have to understand these different types of bonding relationships when they are conducting interviews with child victims," Lanning explained. "They have to know the 'age appropriate' type of questions to ask. They also have to establish a rapport with the kids and, in the case of younger children, this often means getting down on the floor to play with them.

"The key to successful interviewing of child victims is for the officer to be able to take on some of the characteristics of the molester – by this I mean he has to replace the molester's bond with the child without the sexual interest," he said. "The officer has to get the child to bond with him and communicate.

"Some officers just can't do this," Lanning said. "This is why it is so important to establish interdisciplinary working relationships with other people in the local juvenile justice community. Sometimes there will be a physician, social worker, juvenile court officer, or someone else who can easily establish bonds with the kids and help with the interview."

When it comes to training in investigative methods, Lanning says that what must be stressed are the MOs of the molesters and how they themselves bond into groups.

"How do they get the kids they are molesting?" he asked. "The answer to that question will help the officer do preventive law enforcement – break into the groups of pedophiles."

Officers must also go out and teach prevention to parents and other adults responsible for the safety and welfare of children, Lanning said. They must teach parents to ask the question "why?"

"For example, over and over again we run into situations where, when Mr. Jones is arrested for molesting, the parents and other people in the community can't understand it," Lanning said. "They think the police might have made a mistake by arresting Mr. Jones. They say, 'Mr. Jones likes kids so it can't be true what the police are saying about him.

"But they never ask WHY Mr. Jones is so popular with the kids. Many parents are just thankful that Mr. Jones is a good babysitter and is providing a place for them to dump their kids.

"In a recent case, for example, in which a young boy was molested and murdered by an 18-year-old, the parents and neighbors were mystified. But they should have been suspicious before the murder had a chance to occur. They should have asked: 'Why does this 18-year-old male spend all his time playing with the eight-year-olds?' "

Should the police attempt to turn every citizen into a detective who turns in neighbors with an unusual interest in being nice to children?

"If you want to protect your children these days, then that's what you have to do," Lanning said. "But the biggest need is for good effective communication between parents and their children. Those of us in law enforcement have found that children usually don't know how to tell their parents about the molester. When kids tell their parents, they usually tell them in a vague way.

"For example, the child will say: 'Mommy, Mr. Jones isn't nice.' In a case like this, the police officers have to teach the parents how to follow up on the child's statement," Lanning said. "The parents then have to ask the child: 'What did Mr. Jones do that isn't nice?' By and large, you can believe kids, expecially if they have details. Where did the kid learn that kind of stuff? Generally, the kids are not lying."

Using A Proactive Approach

Officers who are investigating child sex exploitation cases should not sit around waiting for kids to be exploited, Lanning argues. They should take a proactive approach and go out and find the cases.

How does an officer do this? "By knowing how these people operate and how they pick up kids," Lanning explained. "The officer should be able to intervene in the process."

Some suggestions for intervention are hanging out around the places vulnerable kids go, such as video arcades, and using informants to penetrate molester and child porn rings.

"Gain entry into the world of the pedophile," Lanning said. "Go seek him out, identify him and arrest him. But don't entrap him."

One of the main stumbling blocks many police departments face is a shortage of manpower, which makes proactive law enforcement difficult in time-intensive cases such as child sex exploitation. This is where interjurisdictional task forces can help out.

Basically the techniques for investigating these cases are similar to other undercover investigative activities, such as narcotics trafficking.

"But here I would advise the officers to be very careful about impersonating pedophiles," Lanning said. "They must use a lot of discretion and the officers should be extremely careful about being accused of being the source of child porn themselves."

The FBI's Network

The officers who met at the FBI Academy did not form an official organization. They felt that the best way to work is to get to know each other on an informal basis and then keep in contact as the need arises.

"Everyone who was at the seminar has agreed to work with and help any other department with cases," Lanning said. "They can help you with setting up a unit, sharing information, etc. But I recommend that anyone who wants to plug into this network contact people on the list from their geographical areas and arrange to meet them and get acquainted."

The Behavioral Sciences Unit at the FBI Academy will be conducting training programs for FBI agents which deal with child sex exploitation. In addition, they periodically travel to field offices to conduct training seminars.

Since the Bureau hopes to train specialists in most of its field offices, the best way for state and local police to get training is to contact the training coordinator at their area field office, Lanning advised. He said the Academy would like to host a seminar series on child sex exploitation for state and local law enforcement officers who are new to this specialty, but this is still in the planning stages.

Several of the officers who attended the seminar are also involved in providing training to fellow police in their areas, Lanning said. They agreed that they would be willing to conduct training sessions as their schedules permit.

Following is a list of the Federal, state and local law enforcement personnel who attended the special seminar at the Academy to establish the network. Two of the officers on the list – Frank Feichtinger and R. P. Tyler – are members of the network but were unable to attend the seminar due to scheduling conflicts.

JOB LISTINGS

• Staff Attorney, National Center for Youth Law, San Francisco. The National Center for Youth Law (NCYL) is seeking applicants for a staff attorney position. NCYL is a non-profit Corporation founded in 1970 to represent the interests of poor children and adolescents nationwide. It is funded by the Legal Services Corporation as part of a national system of legal services for the poor. Its primary role is to work with local legal services programs by providing expertise in various areas of the law affecting poor youths. NCYL provides support services to legal services field programs: conducts training programs; collects and disseminates information and analysis on issues affecting youth; and engages in state and Federal litigation at both the trial and appellate court level. The Center staff is currently working on issues related to youth employment, abuse and neglect, public benefits, housing discrimination against families with children, juvenile justice, health, nutrition, and mental health. Salary: $20,000 to $41,000, depending upon experience. Excellent fringe benefits. Filing Deadline: Sept. 15. Late applications may be considered, depending upon the size of the applicant pool. Job Requirements: Membership in the bar of any state, preferably for at least three years. Either involvement in substantive issues affecting children or experience in poverty law, preferably both. A willingness and ability to spend substantial amounts of time in Federal and state court litigation. Excellent writing ability. How To Apply: Please send resume, including references and a writing sample, to: Terry Hancock, National Center for Youth Law, 1663 Mission Street, 5th Floor, San Francisco, CA 94103. Minority, women, and disabled attorneys are urged to apply. ■

In Utah . . .

SUSPECT HELD IN CHILD KILLINGS

The bodies of five young boys kidnapped during the last five years were found in the Watsatch Mountains of Utah July 25 by authorities led there by statements from a Salt Lake City man accused of killing the children.

Arthur G. Bishop, 32, alias Roger W. Downs, was arrested early July 25 and charged with first-degree murder after he told authorities where the bodies of the five boys were located, said Deputy Salt Lake County Attorney John T. Nielsen. Nielsen said questioning Bishop led to the discovery of the five bodies, but the county attorney would not say if Bishop confessed to the murders.

"I did not say he made a confession . . . as a result of talking to him, we were able to determine the location of the graves," Nielsen said.

The victims were identified as: Alonzo Daniels, Salt Lake City, who was 4 when he disappeared Oct. 16, 1979; Kimley Peterson, Sandy, who was 11 when he disappeared Nov. 8, 1980; Danny Davis, Midvale, who was 4 when he was abducted from a south Salt Lake supermarket Oct. 20, 1981; Troy Ward, Salt Lake City, 6, who vanished June 26; and Graeme Cunningham, 13, Salt Lake City, who disappeared July 14.

Nielsen declined to say how the boys were killed.

Daniels, Davis and Peterson were found buried in shallow graves southeast of Cedar Fort, just west of Utah Lake and about 50 miles south of Salt Lake City. The bodies of Ward and Cunningham were found in Big Cottonwood Creek, 20 miles southeast of Salt Lake City in the Wasatch Mountains. They both disappeared from the Liberty Park area in central Salt Lake City.

Bishop is a bookkeeper and has been placed on a "suicide watch" in his jail cell. County Attorney Ted Cannon said Bishop quit using his real name in 1981 and his parents filed a missing persons report. He is also said to have used the name Lynn E. Jones, Cannon said. The investigation of Bishop "is now in kind of slow-down, wrap it up stage. It will take us a couple of months to get this all tied together," Salt Lake City Police Capt. John Pollei said on July 29.

A routine inquiry to several western states where Bishop lived was sent out by police, Pollei said, "but at this time he is not a suspect in any abductions or murders in other states." ■

* Sec. 3. COMPENSATORY PAYMENT. A compensatory payment, equal to three and one-half percent of an officer's or employee's basic pay for the period between December 16, 1984 and June 15, 1985, must be paid to each officer or employee covered by AS 16.43.060, AS 22.05.140(a), AS 22.07.090(a), AS 22.10.190(a), AS 22.15.220(a), AS 22.15.220(b), AS 39.20.010, AS 39.20.030, AS 39.20.080(a), AS 39.20.080(b), AS 39.27.011(a), or AS 42.05.091, for any base pay earned during that period.

* Sec. 4. EMPLOYEES OF THE JUDICIAL [AND LEGISLATIVE BRANCHES.] (a) The permanent and temporary employees of the judicial branch [and the permanent employees of the legislative branch] are entitled to receive salary adjustments comparable to those received by the classified and partially exempt employees of the executive branch under AS 39.27.011(a) as that subsection is reenacted in secs. 1 and 2 of this Act.

(b) The [legislative and] judicial employees described in (a) of this section are entitled to receive compensatory payments comparable to those received under sec. 3 of this Act.

* Sec. 5. EMPLOYEES OF THE UNIVERSITY OF ALASKA. The employees of the University of Alaska who are not members of a collective bargaining unit are entitled to receive salary increases in accordance with the compensation policy of the board of regents of the University of Alaska.

* Sec. 6. Sections 1, 4, and 5 of this Act take effect July 16, 1985.

* Sec. 7. Section 2 of this Act takes effect July 16, 1986.

* Sec. 8. Section 3 of this Act takes effect August 1, 1985.

Non-Covered employees are those not represented by a labor relations bargaining unit. The same rates and conditions are applied to these employees as were awarded the General Government and the Supervisory bargaining units. The regular FY 86 salary increase is five percent. In addition, a lump sum payment, called compensatory payment, will be made in early FY 86 retroactively covering the last six months of FY 85. The compensatory payment is a one-time payment that will not be perpetuated in an agency base budget in future years.

Negotiations over conflicting methods of assigning funding sources to the University salary increase are continuing between the University of Alaska and the Office of the Governor.

Dear Senator Bennett:

Under the authority of art. III, sec. 18, of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a bill to provide salary adjustments for state officers and employees not covered by a collective bargaining agreement. This bill provides a salary increase in three steps: a lump sum, three and one-half percent "compensatory payment," payable after August 1, 1985, covering the period from December 16, 1984 through June 15, 1985; a five percent increase for the period from July 16, 1985 through July 15, 1986; and an additional four percent increase for the period July 16, 1986 through July 15, 1987. Following past practice for a number of years, these increases parallel those provided for in the current collective bargaining agreement for the general government unit.

Sincerely,

Bill Sheffield

Dear Mr. Chairman:

I am pleased to provide the information requested by your committee during the March 26 hearing on SB 225. The following table shows the dollar amount increases a "typical" employee would receive under this bill.

Range/Step	3.5% Compensatory Payment	FY 86 Increase	FY 87 Increase
30F	$1,428.84	$4,080.00	$3,264.00
29C	1,241.10	3,552.00	2,820.00
26C	1,113.63	3,180.00	2,544.00
23C	937.44	2,676.00	2,136.00
20C	766.29	2,184.00	1,752.00
17C	625.80	1,788.00	1,428.00
14C	506.10	1,452.00	1,152.00

I have used Step C within a range because it is the typical average step of employees. It is also the specific step in Range 26 for commissioners of the Alaska Commercial Fisheries Entry Commission and the Alaska Public Utilities Commission, and District Court Judges. The exception is Range 30. All officers or employees at this range are at Step F by statute, the Governor and Supreme Court Justices.

The 3.5% compensatory payment calculation is based on Section 3 of SB 225. It assumes that an employee or officer is at the indicated step for the entire period of December 16, 1984, through June 15, 1985. It also assumes there is not overtime, shift differential, or other premium pay involved.

The FY 86 increase is based on Section 1 of SB 225. It also assumes that an employee or officer is at the indicated step for the entire period and that no premium pay is involved. The FY 86 increase is the increase over current rates. It is not affected by Section 3 of the bill.

RECEIVED
MAR 28 1985

The FY 87 increase is based on Section 2 of SB 225. The same assumptions apply. The FY 87 increase is the increase over the FY 86 rates in Section 1.

Enclosed is a computer printout that counts the number of Executive Branch employees and officers affected by SB 225. It is arranged in range order. Where the State's payroll system does not require a range or job class to pay an employee or officer, the data is missing. There are a total of 131 employees or officers with no range information. They are listed first. There are 1,146 employees and officers of the Executive Branch affected by SB 225.

I would be happy to provide any additional information you may want with regard to SB 225.

Sincerely,

Michael P. McMullen

Re: SB 225 (compensation of state officers and employees not covered by collective bargaining)

Dear Senator Abood:

A slight modification of the amendment proposed in my March 21, 1985 letter to you is required, as follows:

Change the proposed sec. 4(a)(3) as follows:

> (3) permanent and temporary employees of the executive branch who are in the exempt service under AS 39.25, who are not members of a collective bargaining unit established under the Public Employment Relations Act (AS 23.40.070 -- 23.40.260), and who are not otherwise statutorily covered by AS 39.27.011(a).

It turns out that there are some exempt executive-branch employees who, notwithstanding their exempt status, are in a collective bargaining unit. These are the certificated teachers in the correspondence studies program of the Department of Education. (See AS 39.25.110(7).) This slight change in my March 21 language makes clear that the bill will not affect any existing collective bargaining agreement. Also, inserting the word "statutorily" makes clear that sec. 4's benefits apply to employees who might be administratively plugged into the AS 39.27.011(a) salary schedule.

I would like to add two comments, with reference to your committee's hearing on this bill this morning:

> (1) One of the committee members inquired about the second scheduled salary increase -- i.e., the one provided in sec. 2 for FY 87. The reason for this increase is the same as for the bill generally. It attempts to track the provisions and duration of the current agreement for the general government unit. The whole idea of treating this group of employees on an equal basis with those covered by collective bargaining requires this second step. There is precedent for this multi-step approach. See, e.g., secs. 1, 16, and 30, ch. 3, SLA 1980. An additional advantage to this approach is that it relieves the legislature from having to deal with the matter every single year.

(2) It should be borne in mind that the employees covered by this bill did not receive an increase during 1984. The bill should be considered in light of the fact that it provides cost-of-living increases spanning three years, not just two.

Again, thank you for your consideration of this matter.

Yours truly,

NORMAN C. GORSUCH

Re: SB 225 (compensation of state officers and employees not covered by collective bargaining)

Dear Senator Abood:

A drafting oversight in this bill (currently in your committee) has been identified. The following amendment will take care of it:

Page 3, line 27 -- page 4, line 6:

Delete all material and substitute the following for it:

* Sec. 4. EMPLOYEES OF JUDICIAL AND LEGISLATIVE BRANCHES AND CERTAIN EXEMPT EMPLOYEES OF EXECUTIVE BRANCH. (a) The following employees are entitled to receive salary adjustments comparable to those received by the classified and partially exempt employees of the executive branch under AS 39.27.011(a) as that subsection is reenacted in secs. 1 and 2 of this Act:

(1) permanent and temporary employees of the judicial branch;

(2) permanent employees of the legislative branch;

(3) permanent and temporary employees of the executive branch who are in the exempt service under AS 39.25 and who are not otherwise covered by AS 39.27.011(a).

(b) The employees described in (a) of this section are entitled to receive compensatory payments comparable to those provided under sec. 3 of this Act.

Although the format of this substitute sec. 4 is somewhat different from the original, the only substantive change is the addition of what is now identified as (a)(3). This amendment makes express what everyone was assuming about the coverage of this bill. The Office of Management and Budget assures this department that this amendment does not require a change in the fiscal information already provided to the legislature for this bill. No increased costs will result.

proposed am. by AG

The effect of this amendment is to assure that, on the face of the bill, all exempt state employees are treated equally, whether they are in the legislative, the judicial, or the executive branch.

The bill itself provides for two kinds of benefits: scheduled salary increases and a lump-sum payment. By the lead-in language for AS 39.27.011(a), the schedules in secs. 1 and 2 of the bill apply to classified and partially exempt employees in the executive branch who are not members of a collective bargaining unit. Several other compensation statutes plug into a specific range and step of the schedule in AS 39.27.011(a). Thus, those people are also covered by the scheduled increases. The bill's sec. 3, providing for the lump-sum payment, picks up all of those officers and employees.

A problem arises, however, with regard to some exempt officers and employees, such as the members of the Alaska Oil and Gas Conservation Commission and the employees of the governor's office, who, although being employed on a full-time basis and receiving an annual salary, do not have their salary statutorily plugged into AS 39.27.011(a). That being the case, they are not expressly covered either by the scheduled increases in secs. 1 and 2 of the bill or by the lump-sum payment in sec. 3.

The original version of sec. 4 of the bill expressly takes care of exempt employees in the legislative and judicial branches who are in that situation, but fails to do so for the similarly situated employees in the executive branch. The amendment set out above would treat them all the same.

Thank you for your consideration of this matter.

Yours truly,

The Honorable Mitch Abood
The State Senate

Dear Mr. Abood:

At this time I wish to make a brief statement regarding the Subsistence Hunting and Fishing regulations, specifically the talk of elimination or restriction of non-resident hunters. I hope we may be able to testify in person or meet with you to discuss this above matter further in the near future as this is a bad time for myself and the over 400 other Registered Guides in the State since the majority of us are in the field.

There has been plenty of subsistence protection available in the Fish and Game Regulations over the last years. Rural residents had several advantages available to them not readilly accessible to the general urban public. These included Controlled Use Areas and special seasons during December, January, February and even into March under some circumstances for moose and caribou. What these hunts are designed for is rural residents who hunt on snow machines.

For example last year in my guide area some residents of Togiak rode snow machines to within 70 miles of Aniak to hunt caribou. They killed approximately 65 caribou during March. This hunt took place 120 miles from their village. The snow cover was unusually deep last winter enabling them to travel relatively easily. The distances involved suggest to me that this was a sport hunt. If they had spent the same money on meat as they did on gasoline they could have purchased more meat then the caribou yielded. These hunts occurred in Units 18 and 19. Unit 18 has no September or sport season to protect the caribou herd in that area. Yet the Fish and Game has been pressured into allowing a February subsistence hunt for several years. These winter hunts result in more caribou of both sexes and ages being taken in one season than all my non-resident hunters would kill in 20 years.

The deep snow in April led to the killing of 13 brown bears in Unit 18 by residents of Goodnews Bay. It has been several years since the snow cover has allowed access to the mountains where the bears den and spend the first 2 weeks in the spring. Again all sexes and ages were killed. My clients take about 2 bears a year on the average for that part of Unit 18. The median age of our bears is over 12 years old and 80% males. We would have to hunt 6 years to equal the take of one of 1 week in the area. There was a herd of 19 moose around Goodnews Lake. Last April 17 gutpiles were spotted around the lake and the other 2 moose couldn't be located.

The very people who would get the priority use of the local game if numbers were reduced are the ones whc caused the reduction in the first place. The system of controlled Use Areas and late seasons hunts provide all the opportunity and advantage necessary for the rural residents.

I might point out that 2 years ago I did a study for the Alaska Professional Hunters Association to determine the impact of non-resident hunters in Alaska. I found some surprising statistics. Non-residents bought about 0.7% of the Hunting Liscenses in the State. They took 0.5% of the game harvest. The non-resident tag sales generated about 95% of the licenses and tag fees collected by the State. If one adds to this the matching funds provided by the Pitman Roberts Act the impact of non-residents in terms of money generated is very important. The impact on the game herds could be called minimal.

In conclusion there already exists mechanics for Subsistence preference. Eliminating or restriction of non-resident hunters makes no sense from a fiscal or biological standpoint. After the conclusion of our hunts in October and November my fellow guides and myself would like very much to testify on this issue.

Sincerely,

Kelly Vrem

March 21, 1985

RECEIVED
MAR 26 1985

Senator Mitch Abood
Pouch V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Mitch,
The recent Alaska Supreme Court decision (Madison Case) has resulted in a potentially chaotic and explosive situation. It leaves nearly all of Alaska's people as "priority subsistence users" under the subsistence law and it precludes restricting these subsistence users until sport and commercial fishing is closed down. Although on the outside this may appear to be fair, it creates an unmanageable mess of the Dept of Fish and Game and renders the Board of Fisheries nearly useless. This could be disasterous to the sportfishing, commercial and hunting industries. Additionally, some rivers cannot stand an efficient harvesting method without a threat to the fish resource. The current legislation proposed by the Administration will not resolve these issues and, as a permanent bill, will harm sport and commercial fisheries.

The citizens of Alaska did not vote or participate in the designation of "rural" Alaska as the only ones qualified for priority subsistence, nor is the definition of "rural" or "subsistence priority" clearly understood. These are issues that need full public discussion prior to considering a permenent change to the subsistence law. Therefore, as an interim measure, the Alaska Sportfishing Association calls for immediate action to:

1. Enact legislation this session with a termination or sunset clause expiration date of December 31, 1985, that will enable the Dept of Fish and Game and particularly the Boards of Fish and Game to limit subsistence fishing in the same manner as they were before the Madison decision.

2, Immediately take action that will insure that prior to the 1986 legislative session the priority subsistence issue is fully aired at public hearings with this input assembled and given to the 1986 legislature.

3. During the 1986 legislative session, thoroughly debate the subsistence priority statute and bring about a long term, fair solution for resource users in all areas of the state.

One possible means of identifying the Boards authority in a temporary law for this year would be to include the eight points utilized by the Board.

We believe that a true subsistence priority need does exist for a very few long time residents in very remote areas. Putting any individual in a position where he has priority of a resource, if even legal, over all other people in Alaska, and the world for that matter, is a law and priority that must be severely restricted.

Hope this helps. What are your feelings?

To: Alaska State Legislators:

On March 19, 1985 the Steering Committee of the Kenai River Sportfishing Association unanimously approved the following motion:

" We favor interim legislation this session having a sunset clause of December 31, 1985 that accomplishes:

(1) Return of the regulatory jurisdiction of fish and game back to the boards of fish and game as it existed prior to the Madison decision of February 22, 1985 by the Alaska Supreme Court.

(2) That the legislature then cause to have public hearings held state wide prior to the 1986 legislative session that would frame legislation that would accomplish a permanent solution to the relationship between subsistence, sport, commercial and personal use fisheries as well as all aspects of recreational and subsistence hunting."

Chaos must be removed from the management of our fish and game resource until a permanent solution be gained from public input from all citizens of the State of Alaska on the permanent use and allocation of fish and game. We cannot allow any situation to continue that has the potential of causing severe damage to the fishery resource. Resource regulation must be preserved.

Dear Senator Abood

SB 23/m

I'm a native year resident of Alaska and one whose livlihood relys on commercial harvest of herring and salmon both in PWS and western Alaska . . . and strive to continue as such. I am in favor of the governors bill, 23B, tooth and nail.

After having worked hard in the industry since my move to Alaska and taking the cards as they fall in this volitile industry, I can only laugh at the timing of the Maldison Decission (or cry) as a week pryor to the judges' rolling making the Anchorage paper I bought a PWS. drift permit for $55,000. This fishery is directly effected by the decission as are the 400 + commercial fishermen who hold permits to fish the fleets, tender skippers, thier crew, and the vessle owners who service the fleet out on the grounds, the canneries and thier workers who process the harvest, and the townspeople & thier families who also provide support and services in some way or other in the town of Cordova. Ironic how at a time when this sector of the industry is starting to recover from the economic woes suffered since the 1st botulism incident, my purchase of a P.W.S. Drift Permit, and a forecasted bumper crop w/ very favorable market condition . . . that something such as this should creep onto the scene!

The town of Cordova relys heavily on the revenue connected w/ the Copper River flats fishery and a blow to one of its few supporting economies may well be the town's demise.

Another reason to support the governors bill is to save the lives of who knows how many potential drowning victums. I imagine that there aren't presently lifeguard stations along the river in China but, you can bet your hip-waders, lives will be lost when hordes of orbanites scramble to the riverside trying to dipnet their rightfull quota.

And how many of those fish will not be used after they're cold & stiff in the freezer at home? I've seen more than one dipnetters freezer full of freezerburned sockeye yet to be used, after the 1st or 2nd year in the deep freeze. How much finally ends its migration to spawning grounds at the Anchorage dump feeding the seagulls and ravens!

I question how much the supreme court Justices thought this one out? Sure, everyone has a right to access of the states resources and they do presently under state fish & game regulations in an orderly and carefully monitored manner. The implementation of the judges ruling would create utter chaos throughout the state in trying to divide the resources evenly between user groups, enforce regulations in the field, monitor the takes accurately, and educate the general public how to go about whatever subsistance endeavour(s) safely, both to themselves & others... Not to mention dealing out direct competition to those in Alaska who really do have a subsistance way of life and have traditionally, namely Alaska natives and those living in remote parts throughout the State. Seems like just another attempt at stomping out the frontier spirit that is the foundation of this great Land.

I thought we, the people of Alaska, resolved this subsistance issue in 1982 by ballot.

I believe those who understand the fish and wildlife checks & balances best should be left to regulate this matter w/ a fairly free hand as they have done so well in the past w/ legislation that was sound at one time, that the governor's bills will help resurrect... for the good of us all now (this season) and for generations to come.

Please, support Governor Sheffield's bill. The people of Alaska wanted it in 1982 . . . the people want it now for the good of the future to come.

I wasn't aware that so few (The Supreme Court Justices) could be thought to represent the feelings of the states people. That's not thier place, its yours. Be there for us!

Sincerly,

Todd Ward

To whom it may concern:

I am concerned about the situation that may develope in Cordova if adequate steps are not taken to ensure the commercial fisherman's livelihood. The ruling by the Alaskan Supreme Court on the subsistence use of salmon threatens Cordova's economy which is based entirely on the commercial fishing of salmon. The laws need to be changed or modified to protect this way of life. Subsistence use of salmon by all Alaskans, rural and urban, is a knife in the back to the commercial fisheries. The economic repercussions of the decline or total lose of the commercial fisheries in Cordova, would be felt by all Alaskans.

Is the right of all Alaskans to the salmon worth the complete demise of a way of life for the fisherman? I don't think so! I would appreciate anything you could do to protect our commercial fisheries.

I am writing to request your support of Senate Bill # 231 regarding the future of commercial fishing on the Copper River Flats; and thus, the future of the Cordova community. I have happily been a year round resident of Cordova for five years. I am not a permit holder, but have worked at fishing related jobs as well as non-fishing related jobs. My experiences show me that all facets of employment in Cordova are heavily dependent on the success of our fishermen.

I urge you to take a close look at the problems we Cordovans are facing if these bills do not pass. How you vote is a decision only you can make, but a matter of such consequences deserves your attention. Thank you very much.

Dear Senator Wood,

I am writing to urge you to support SB 231 or any similar legislation that would give the Alaska Board of Fish and Game the power back to regulate and manage our fish + game resources.

This matter is very important to me as I derive all my income from commercial fishing. I've lived in Cordova for 33 years and have gillnetted for the past 14 years. I feel that the recent Madison ruling is very unfair to me. I realize that some people need subsistance and should have it, but the ruling says every resident can claim subsistance. Many of these have a mean of making a living without subsistance. How can they have priority over myself (as a commercial fisherman) when it is my only means of supporting my family?

Pleas consider this matter carefully as it affects my way of life. It also threatens the community of Cordova. Commercial fishing creates many jobs in the city and is its financial base. Without the fishing industry Cordova's future will be very bleak. Please push to get this issue resolved this session.

Thank you.

I am a concerned citizen of Cordova and I feel I must write to urge your Committee to support Senate Bill # 231, or similar legislation, which will allow the Alaska Board of Fisheries to manage the Copper River fishery as the people of Alaska intended them to do.

The people of Cordova depend almost entirely on the commercial fisheries of the area and have little else except Government employment to keep the people employed. The loss of fishing on Copper River flats will directly affect about 500 gill net fishermen, 40 tendermen and 100-200 cannery workers. Further, the loss of the Copper River fishery will greatly impact fishery supporting business including fuel dock, repair and maintenance shops, hardware and grocery stores.

With the high prices of fuel, groceries, etc. the loss of the Copper River fishery will make a ghost town of Cordova next winter. Then the only fishermen who could afford to fish here would be the commuters from Seattle and California.

Again, I urge your support of Senate Bill # 231 or similar legislation.

I am writing this letter regarding the Subsistence Ruling by the Supreme Court in Feb.

I have lived in Cordova my entire life. After graduating from high school, I worked in local canneries until I met and married my husband, a Fisherman. Since having children of my own, I babysit during the summer months for friends that run a fish-buying tender for a local cannery.

The purpose of my introduction is to stress the fact that Cordova's entire economy depends on commercial fishing in one way or another.

This new subsistence ruling will have a disastorous impact on our community. We subsist in the fisheries as it is our livelihood; our entire income and whole future depends on fishing.

Subsistence is defined as: A means of support; the state of maintaining ones existence; livelihood, etc. And who better defines that than a commercial fisherman?

I support Senate Bill 231 or any similar bill, and urge you to make this your first priority because it is definetely Cordovas and we need your help.

Dear Senator Abood, I am asking that you support Senate bill #231. Common logic clearly dictates that the Alaska Board of fisheries and Game must have the power to regulate and manage fish and game resources. Dear Legislator 3-31-85

I am writing in support of Governor Sheffield's subsistence bill.

I was raised in Anchorage since 1956 and my family relied heavily on sport caught moose, caribou and salmon. We never considered ourselves subsistence users. This food was incidental to our hunting and fishing. It was the sport and not the food which sent us to Alaska's wilds.

In 1972 my wife and I moved to the Aleutian Chain for four years. Here we witnessed people living a true subsistence lifestyle. Their wealth is their knowledge of the land and resultant ability to provide the majority of their needs from it. To these people the need for food, not sport, was the compelling factor.

In 1976 my family moved to Nabesna in the Copper River Basin. The majority of these people live in a more cash orientated economy. Subsistence is important to supplement their lifestyle.

The subsistence lifestyle is a part of Alaskas past and present which should be protected. I would not favor a system of subsistence which "Doles" out fish and game like welfare on a needs basis. The subsistence lifestyle deserves to be encouraged and lived with pride.

Under Governor Sheffields bill, subsistence would be regulated as in the past based on rural residency. I feel this is a good solution as it is less need orientated. One of our subsistence groups our Alaska natives have traditionally shared food within the community. Today this most successful hunters are those who can afford the use of snowmachines, outboards ect. To deprive these people subsistence opportunity thru a needs based program, would affect many others within this community.

The recent ruling by the Alaska Supreme Court creates a situation, which cheats the true subsistence user. The subsistence lifestyle needs to be protected by priority. To allow everyone to become a subsistence user cheats the true subsistence user of his protection by priority. I further feel it is a joke to allow Anchorage and Fairbanks residents equality under subsistence as subsistence is a lifestyle that cannot coexist in a city enviroment. We must address this problem immediately to restore balance to our subsistence program. If we do so, we will create a new user group, the non subsistence user. I feel this would impact tru - subsistence, commercial fishing, sport fishing and sport hunting. It will be harder to solve in the future than now as undoubtably some will not want to loose this new found subsistence rights. The Copper River stands as an excellent example of a new user group being created under the pretext of subsistence. One can argue that the Copper River dipnet fishing is done more for a weekend outing, rather than based on a need to put food on the table. Often more is spent on this recreational outing to catch these fish than if these subsistence? users had bought these fish from the market at home.

On the Copper River personal use was created to protect both the true subsistence users and commercial fishermen by giveing a lower priority to recreational dipnetting. I have nothing against recreational dipnetting so long as it is called such and managed as such.

Today we are back at square 1 with Anchorage and Fairbanks recreational dipnetters having a priority over commercial fishermen and threatning the priority of the true subsistence users to this resource.

What is the future of the Copper River commercial fisherman and true subsistence users as our state population grows?

What is the future of our sport fishing, commercial fishing, sport hunting and subsistence users in other areas of the State of Alaska?

Will recreational gillnetting close the world famous Kenai sport fishery?

Please address this problem rationally, responsibly and quickly by passing governor Sheffield's subsistence bill.

SUBSISTENCE SB 231

With the recent Supreme Court decision, the State now has the direction and opportunity to assure to All Alaskans the equal consideration to take fish and game for their own personal consumptive use. This decision supports the Constitution's provision that "Wherever occuring in their natural state fish, wildlife and waters are reserved to the people for common use." The court stressed that common 'use' and not priority 'users was the main intent and should be the effect of the subsistence regulations. They found that all consumptive users, and not just rural residents, are eligible priority subsistence users.

Government and its laws should apply even handedly to All Alaskans and make sure that whatever criteria is used is not unjustly discrimintory in intent or effect. The Constitution does not on a whole and should not have severe restrictive provisions. This same need should be observed by any legislation and should be used to make sure that its clear intent is to protect and insure the equal and just consideration of All Alaskans.

But the same politics that supported the illegal discrimintory subsistence regulations are at work to speedily fix their court failure. Their main weapon, now as in the past, is their threats aimed at the majority of Alaskans. One such threat is that the over 200,000 sportfishermen will be severly impacted by the Supreme Court decision. The court, in fact, said that all personal consumptive user were to be given equal consideration. As most so-called sport fishermen eat the fish that they catch, any priority subsistence use must include them. And those 'pure sport fishermen' who catch and release are not harvesters of the resource, therefore have a negligible impact. With an annual harvestoof well over 100,000,000 salmon, All Alaskan should be entitled to the equal opportunity to take fish for their own dinner table.

Another political threat used is that the federal government will deny our State the right to manage our fish and game unless the subsistence priority is based on rural residency. When the Feds mandate that the resource must be managed as they say, the State has in fact already lost the right of management authority. This restriction resulted from State politics that requested and supports such residency discrimination. When Ron Sommerville, Alaska's representative during early d-2 / ANILCA, opposed this federal mandated discrimination he was removed from his Washinton D.C. post. Governor Hammond admitted in a public meeting of the Boards of Fish and Game that Sommerville was removed because of Native pressure. His replacement, John Katz, has compromised the Alaskan public's constitutional rights on this and many other issues. For the State not to politically and judicialy oppose this discrimintory action, which specifically denies equality to all residents of Anchorage, Fairbanks, Juneau and Ketchikan, shows a planed sell out of our rights. This plan includes the continued lobbying action of Larry Spengler, Attorney General office, supporting a priority subsistence use of Alaska's fish and game to be as discrimintory and restrictive as has been politcally motivated. Alaska would be better served if our Attorney General would be motivated by a responsibility to assure that all residents are not discrimintorly restricted in their rights.

The history of Governor Sheffield's stern actions has been a well known threat to any state employee who would question these unconstitutional subsistence regulations. He fired Fish and Game Commissioner Ron Skoog and Game Division Chief Ron Sommerville because of their private personal stands against these regulations. And he then requested the resignations of all Board of Fish and Game members when they began questioning the balatant directions ordered by Larry Spengler. It is time that All Alaskans are again "equal" under the law, no matter where they reside, and that such equality is promoted by our State and is not necessitated by continued court challenges by its residents.

Dear Sir.

As a commercial fisherman who is very dependent upon the Copper River gillnet fishery for my livelyhood, I am very concerned about the current threat by subsistance usage and possible loss of this fishery to commercial fisherman.

I think the problem lies with the definition of subsistance. As for us fishermen we really are completly dependent upon these fish. Our homes, vehicles & vessels are centered around this fishery. We are ~~not casual uses~~ as the ultimate subsistance users. We are not casual users as seems to be the case with many urban up-river people who travel hundreds of miles to fish under the guise of subsistance.

I urge you to support SB231 and manage the Copper River fishery as had been done successfully under the Board of Fish pre-Madison decision plan. This plan was agreed upon by the various factions involved: true rural subsistance users, sports fisherman, and commercial fishermen.

your support of this bill will help keep our fishing industry which is very important to the State of Alaska alive and healthy.

Dear Alaska State Legislators;

I am a homemaker & mother, I live (5) water miles Northwest of Cordova on the North end of Hawkins Island in the Deep Bay area.

I am strongly in support of Senate Bill # 231 and House Bill # 288, and urge all Senate and House Chairman and Co-Chairman to work as quickly as possible at resolving these major issues.

My personal reasons are as follows; Fishing is our only source of an income which in turn is our survival. Survival meaning we must purchase fishing and hunting license, shells, fuel to even go get game meat.

In order to make jelly, bread or even grow a hand full of potatoes it takes an income to purchase flour, sugar or seed potatoes, and much work to even try to grow a small kelp box garden, do to our poor gardening conditions in this area, compared to Anchorage, Palmer and Fairbanks with such good growing seasons.

You must take in to consideration, our moose and deer, in the Prince William Sound, Copper River and the surrounding Cordova area. All the moose and deer were transplanted here prior to Statehood. This makes a limit on all the game meat in this area, which is set up to ensure that our children will have moose and deer when they grow up. The Alaska Fish and Game regulate these rules to ensure future stocks, this is done in the best interest of the people.

If the State was to open subsistance hunting to all residents it would distroy all that the dept. of Fish amd Game has worked so hard to protect for the future of all Alaskans.

As for the Copper River Red Salmon run; in 1982 my husband caught 2,865 red salmon, 1983 was 1,323 red salmon, 1984 was 741 red salmon. Each year we have been cut back on our take of the Copper River Red Salmon to ensure the brood stock and to assure that the subsistance fisherman get thier increased quota of Red Salmon each year.

My husband in 1982 paid $57.30, 1983 paid $26.46, 1984 $14.82, this was just the Aquaculture asesment for Copper River Red Salmon and by the time the cannerys mached the $.02 per fish it totaled $98.58 paid out for our catch to ensure the preservation of our future Copper River Red Salmon through the Aquaculture. Please also note that the subsistance fishermen do not pay the $.02 per fish nor do they quit fishing during the closers by the State of Alaska Dept. of Fish and Game. Those closers are designed to give proper escapement to ensure the proper amuont of brood stock escapement.

If the Copper River Fishermen have to cut back much more there will not be a Copper River Fisherman left.

Please understand , I beleave that subsistance is very important but not to the point of destruction-meaning our resourses can not handle every resident becoming a subsitance user. Please study this issue with the up-most care, because rivers, streams, forests and fields can only provide just so much and when it's gone it's gone forever. The Alaska State Fish And Game have been slowly accomplishing a goal, why not leave it there at least they have some facts and figures and a future to work with.

To me subsistance means a need and a need means necessity which brings us back to subsistance which is the minimum food and shelter necessary to support life-not the want for the food.

I beleave hunting and fishing is still a privilege and honor that the State of Alaska provides by over seeing the resources and keeping them balanced.

People that have a good income, meaning average income or higher should be willing to purchase a hunting or fishing license and leave the subsistance to the person or persons that truely need it for the reasons of survival, not for the want or greed. Remember the key words to subsistance is in the Websters Dictionary. Thank you for your concerns and time on thhse important issues.

Senator Abood 4/7/85

As a P.W.S Drift Gillnetter & a 5 year resident of Alaska I am concerned about the recent Madison Vs. State, Supreme Court ruling. I am afraid if the Legislature does not pass the govenors S.B. 231 & H.B. 288 that we will start Fishing May 13 and its highly possible that Subsistence Fisherman in the upper Copper River will file an injunction Contesting the Board of Fishes upper River Allocation and put a stop to commercial Fishing on the Lower Copper thereby stripping me of my Livelyhood. I have serious qualms about ammending a sunset clause in these Bills, as next year is an election year and this is an issue that should be dealt with in a biological & common sense manner. I realize you people have your work cut out for you with the budget. however without a permanent Fix the Commercial Fishing industry will not be able to stabilize thereby increasing your work Load on the budget and placing even more dependence on the oil Revenues. In this day and age diversity is the Key to Sucsess. I am not against Supsistence or Sport Fishing but I Feel that the word rural needs to be in the Law. because the rural people dependent on the resource can't afford ~~to~~ to have thousands of urban residents competing with them for a limited resource. Please support the govenors bill as a permanent Fix. it allows different user groups to have a fair Shake through Annual Proposals and meetings to resolve problem Areas. Thank You

I don't expect a responce an would appreciate none as you and your staff have a tremendous workload already

Dear Senator,

I would like to urge you to support SB-231 or any legislation that will keep the Alaska Board of Fish and Game as managers and regulators of our fish and game. I live in Cordova and fishing is my only means of making a living. I have four months to make a years waige and the Copper River fishery makes up to 70% of my income. If we loose any time fishing, especially the first part of the run, where 50% of the fish go up river in 2-3 weeks, it is definately going to make it hard, if not impossible, to make my financial ends meet.

Please support SB-231 and please push to get the issue resolved this season. Fishing is scheduled to begin May 13, 1985.

Thank-you very much,

Sincerely,

Dear Senator Abood,

I am writing with great concern regarding SB#231. I feel it is crucial that SB#231 should be supported or for that matter any similar legislation that will give back to the Alaska Board of Fish & Game the power to regulate and manage our fish and game resources.

If SB#231 is not passed, I know Cordova and its businesses will not survive.

Will you please push to get this issue resolved this session because the gillnet seasoning is coming up fast, May 12 or so and it is very important to me and all Cordova that SB#231 is passed as soon as possible.

Thank you,

Dear Representative,

Please take immediate action, Concerning Senate Bill #231 or House Bill # 288.

Unless Fish & Game open the Copper River fishery by the beginning of May, our family and the city of Cordova will have no income to sustain them. Cordova's only industry is fishing.

My husband, age 42, has been fishing in Cordova all of his life and the early red run may be as much as 90% of his yearly income.

It is hard to understand how it could be allowed for people who have regular jobs and or sources of income to take fish they don't need and put others out of work.

I am hoping that the Judiciary and Finance Committees will waive Senate Bill #231 so this can be resolved in time.

Thank you,

Im writing to you on behalf of the Subsistance Fishing ordeal. I think that the Legislature should find some way to solve the fishing problem Alaskans are faced with. My Father is a commercial fisherman, and without the money he makes during the fishing season, we may starve this winter.

Im seriously hoping that you'll give the matter at hand some thought and fast action.

Dear Legislator:

Am asking for your immediate support of Senate Bill 231 and House Bill 288 for the following reasons.

1) Subsistence merely means existence or an aid to existence. Not all people of Alaska need to catch fish in order to exist. Those that do, ought to have the opportunity to do so, those that don't should be restricted. The ADFG and Board of Fisheries have, and need to be allowed to continue to regulate such. Many residents of the state can't use 200 fish. The fish are not in prime condition as they are at the mouth of a river. Others waste or sell their subsistence fish, or are actually sport fishing, driving hundreds of miles for an outing while others indeed need the resource.

2) The state legislature is not qualified, able, and definitly lacks the time to regulate a fisheries. Therefore, give the proper agency the ADFG, the authority to do so. Shelving both of these bills will eventually undermine commercial fishing in all fishing districts in Alaska. Besides the Copper River and Cook Inlet regions, others will be invaded as access improves. The dipnetters and true subsisters have been getting their fair share of fish. They don't require expensive boats, gear, andpermits. Look at Oregon and Washington. They allowed a judge to kill their fisheries, especially during difficult times with their other industries. How about the Stikine River? Fishing there is practically wiped out following Canadian fishing at the headwaters. When salmon survive the difficult cylcle back to their spawning grounds, let em.

3) My final reason deals with the community of Cordova and others like it. Who's to pay for the vessels and permits? How are the banks to withstand the defaults? Who wants to foot our welfare checks? Class action litigation against the state, including legislators and the CFEC will undoubtly follow. How can the state deny a resident the right to make a living he or she's had for a lifetime?

Please, urge for quick action on this matter. Passage must be concluded prior to May 1, 1985. The red season peak(highest priced reds in Aklaska) lasts only 2-3 weeks starting in May. Most fisherman make their boat and permit payments from reds and use the silver season to the survive the winter. Keep a historic way of life alive.

Cordially,

Dear Senator Abood,

I am writing to request your support on SB#231 or any similar legislation that would give the Alaska Board of Fish and Game the power back to regulate and manage our fish and game resources. If not passed this could virtually destroy Cordova. Cordovas main industry is fishing and the only industry that is keeping Cordova alive today. We cannot depend on tourisum.

Many Cordova fishermen would loose their boats if they are not able to fish (gill-net) and their only way of making a living. Does the state want to see this happen? Nearly all of the Cordova fleet is financed thru the state. What will this do to the state?

My husband is a tender operator, picking up the fish from the fishermen and delivering them to the cannery. This is our only means of employment. We certainly want to be emplyed and not on Welfare.

I urge you, along with all of Cordova, to please give this bill your support.

I am writing this letter because of my great concern of what has happened in the past month dealing with subsistance. I would just like to start by telling you a little about myself and family. Jeff my husband and I work on our 28 ft. double ender boat. Starting May 15th to September each year salmon fishing on the Copper River flats. I also do the bookkeeping for the business. I am a member of the Fish and Game Advisory Committee for this area. I am well aware of the problems we have had in the past. I was on the Fish and Game Committee when it was first decided to bring before the Board of Fish, having the user group subsistance, Personal Use, Commercial. I was very happy to see it pass. I believe the Legislature did an excellent way to manage the resource.

I do not want to give you the impression that I am only involved in fishing issues, because this is not the case. I am on the Cordova Hospital Auxiliary, and a board of director on the Women's Resource Center and am very active in both.

My husband was born a Commercial fisherman and at age 13 years old, he is now 34 years old. Our livelihood depends on fishing, we depend on the Copper River flats for 25 percent of our living and 15 percent on the Prince William Sound.

Besides fishermen, the community of Cordova also depends on fishing, thus I believe SB.23 must pass and pass in this session.

Now all its quite simple if we fishermen cannot meet our obligations to our creditors, they in turn cannot meet theirs, which can cause great problems in the real future as far as economic hardship.

I am positive Cordova will not be the only community affected in the near future in Alaska

Dear Senator Abood,

I am a commercial fisherman's wife who is very concerned about the courts interpretation of priority in allocating fish. Giving subsistence users priority over commercial fishermen means financial disaster to us personally and to the future of the Copper River salmon. For the last three years we have worked hard in Prince William Sound and now find ourselves with an investment in a doomed industry.

I am asking for immediate action this session to protect our livelihood. Commercial fishing was under strict regulation by the state board of fish and game. I feel qualifying as a subsistence user should also be strictly limited. Salmon are a fragile resource - mismanagement one year will effect every link in its food chain for at least 10-15 years in the future.

Senator Abood,

I urge you to read my enclosure, which I took from the "Alaska" magazine, March 1985 issue page 16, written by Robert A. Henning. This article expresses my feelings, and the feelings of most people I know.

I also urge you to support Senate Bill #231 & House Bill #288.

Fishing is my living and I want to go on living. C.M. DeVilbiss

Main Trails & Bypaths.

We recently passed the opinion that sportsman anglers should not be allowed to fish salmon after the fish have entered their fresh-water spawning streams . . . and we were bitterly taken to task by at least one Anchorage resident whose opinion was that we were "far out of touch with Alaskans and especially South-Central and Western Alaska sport-fishing enthusiasts."

Well, Mr. Anchoragite . . . "we" (that's polite for editorial use to keep from using the big personal pronoun) have fished an awful lot of Alaskan rivers for more than half a century, and we've seen the changes in both regulations and the type of fisherman in Alaska. In years past, nobody except a few Natives took salmon out of spawning streams. It just wasn't done. There were markers at the mouths of streams beyond which commercial fishermen were not allowed, and, maybe because there were not too many of us sports fishermen, it was natural that since we didn't have to fish spawning salmon runs, we didn't.

The problem, reduced to simple terms, is largely with numbers and attitude. Now, we'll agree that it is great for folks to be able to go catch, with rod and reel, bright sockeye and bright silvers . . .even bright kings . . .for their annual stuffing of the freezer or the Sears canning equipment . . .but for folks to think pink-sided or black-jowled kings or silvers are "trophy" is kind of hard to swallow for a guy who grew up with bright sea fish. And for anybody to think a turned humpback or dog salmon is good fodder . . .that just shows they "don't know no better."

People ask this old-timer once in awhile as to "What changes do we notice in Alaska, over the years?" Well, we'll have to be honest and say that the "new breed" of sports fisherman who've arrived in Alaska in recent years, and the biologists and the fish management programs that have resulted, are among the greatest . . . and most serious changes . . . we've noticed.

The question put to us by our outraged Anchorage reader deserves some discussion. Times have changed. A lot of people have changed. And it may be a good time to begin bringing out a lot of untouchable subjects and begin fashioning a little more thoughtful ethic among all fishermen . . . Native as well as White . . . and their administrators.

Our Anchorage complainer accused us of leaning to the Native subsistence fishermen and "against" non-Native fishermen . . . sportsmen. The answer to that criticism is yes and no . . . "yes," because we believe time-honored (and against the total fish run numbers, extremely small) traditional takings of spawning fish were . . . and note we said "were" . . . legitimate, and "no" because what is being lost in the shuffle of this whole "subsistence" fishing management problem is that there are probably more whites than there used to be Natives, qualified for "subsistence" fishing on spawning streams, plus the fact that for a variety of legal and economic reasons, there are now many more Natives than there were before . . . you don't have to be "half," you can be "quarter" . . . the collective Native health and living conditions have greatly improved . . . in many instances, it is more profitable to be Native . . . and, not insignificantly, there is no longer stigma in being non-white.

The old Native, in his fewer numbers, did not take much. The new Native, and his white neighbors privileged to have subsistence, are not only legally allowed salmon from spawning streams, but where in years past fishing in streams for salmon was discouraged for Natives in any great numbers and totally disallowed in any commercial sense, and prohibited altogether for whites, now a new generation of biologists and fish and game administrators has abandoned all old stream-watching protection systems and has jumped headlong into political administration of fish stocks . . . for votes . . . trying to answer pressure from all gear groups and certainly answering to pressure from Native groups . . . and we hasten to emphasize here, a "new" kind of Native group . . . not the old-time folks who truly lived off the land, but the modern-day political corporations spawned by whites themselves.

In actual administration practices for fish and game protection, no longer are stream watchmen put out for a few weeks or a few months at the mouths of important salmon streams to inhibit or prevent poaching of salmon above the markers. Any number of important fish runs are being gradually whittled down to dangerous stock levels by legal subsistence fishing. Many runs could be wiped out in a season, for all time, if a handy market should appear.

White rights? What rights does a pair of white school teachers pulling $50 to $100 thousand a year in wages have for "subsistence" sockeye they can take from a spawning stream with a drag net or with other gear?

Sooner or later we are going to have to come to grips with the fact that the blood lines between Natives and whites have become blurred . . . even the political rights of inheritance for Native rights and for fish permits have become blurred.

Political fights, gear fights, and racial fights . . . plus the importation of new "sportsman" fishing ethics . . . have collided in places like the crowded Kenai River and the Russian. Probably only improved policing and sharing rules will smooth things out on the Kenai, but there are other rivers where rules and regulations might be better adjusted before the fact. We need more ethic, more concern for preserving what we can of what used to be.

Let us understand that there are too many new whites, too many only partly native Natives, too many politicians and too many fish and game administrators controlled by politicians. It is a time for soul searching.

Kreaky, our bald-headed eagle at Angoon, was sure nice and white in the head and tail feathers in November, when this was being written. Probably fresh winter feathers, and he wasn't getting them so stained with spawning salmon. Incidentally, with the herring into winter holes, salmon runs over, and bottom fish moved out to deeper water, Kreaky was making a meal the other day of a big starfish. He'll be after the unwary duck or sea gull soon.

Asked about subsistence fishing, Kreaky says, "At the best it's lousy, this subsistence fishing. Some years there are hardly any fish in the streams at all. Maybe one day there won't be any salmon. Hope there will still be herring . . .but if all the eggs get shipped to Japan . . . can we have herring without eggs?"

My name is Dan Strickland. I am 31 years old and live with my wife Pamela in Cordova. We just had our first child, a son, 14 days ago. I came to Alaska 13 years ago and have worked for the Department of Fish and Game for 4 years, and as a commercial fisherman for 9.

I realize the complexity of a subsistence definition and the politics of relating this definition to fish and game management, from my work with the Eskimos and their marine mammal harvest, but I can hardly believe the recent Supreme Court decision making all Alaskans, rural and urban both, subsistence users with first priority.

You know all the arguments pro and con I'm sure. I would just like to add my voice in support of Senate Bill #231 and House Bill #288.

With the support of the state of Alaska my wife and I have built a lifestyle for the last 9 years. Please, please, do not obliterate what we have struggled for for the last decade. Support passage of Senate Bill #231 and House Bill #288. Thank you very much.

I live in Cordova and I run a small fish business, along with Tom Johnson also of Cordova. The whole of our business runs strictly off the Copper River red and king salmon run.

I'm writing to you now, in the hopes that you will support Senate Bill #231. If the bill is not passed, I'm afraid the future of the people of Cordova and our children will be limited to handouts from the state welfare. .I know this sounds drastic, but everything in this small fishing town is centered around the commercial fishing fleet. Personally the affects on myself if this bill is not passed will be devastating as I have no other means from which I depend. I feel stuck between a rock and a hard spot as we who depend on commercial fishing are a minority. I only hope you will take our livelihoods into serious concideration.

Dear Senator Abood,

I am writing in support of Senate Bill 231 which addresses subsistance use of Alaska fish and game resources. As a resident of Cordova, Alaska and a member of the City Council, I believe the passage of this bill to be very important.

The Board of Fish and Game clearly needs an expansion of the categories of user groups. The recent decision of the Alaska State Supreme Court appears to allow almost all non-commercial users of fish or game to claim subsistence status. I believe that most people fishing in the recreational net fisheries do not literally depend on the fishery for their existence. The fishing is done largely for sport, and partly for the resulting "gourmet" food that results. An example is the fishery at Chitina. Most of the dipnetters are participating not out of economic necessity but because of the recreational value of the fishing, and the fun of harvesting their own foods from the wild.

This is a legitimate use of the resource and needs to be provided for, but it is not a true subsistence use. A category of "personal use" must be created to allow for and regulate this harvest. This use should not have priority rating above other established user groups.

Commercial fishermen have a long history of dependence on the fish resource. The City of Cordova is dependent on commercial fishing for its existence. Commercial fishing ranks second only to oil in value to Alaska, and it is by far the most valuable renewable resource of Alaska. Please help perpetuate this value.

Sincerely,

Oliver Osborn

Addressing The Senate STATE AFFAIRS COMMITEE

Dear Senator as a Copper River commercial Salmon Gillnet Fisherman and a ten year resident of Alaska, I urge you to support Senate Bill # 231 or similar legislation to save the Copper River Salmon Fishery, my proffession, and the town of Cordova. Failure to stop unlimited Subsistance usage by the Urban masses of the State will end the Traditional 70 year old commercial Fishery on the Copper River, as well as take 75% of my yearly earned income away. As a Gillnet Fisherman for Salmon, the Copper River Fishery provides the bulk of my yearly catch and supports my livelihood. Cutting off the Copper River commercial fishing season would put a serious threat to the town of Cordova's very existance. Cordova's local economy depends on the revenue generated thru the Copper River Fishery. All local business's would face the possibilily of closing their doors in the event of NO Commercial Fishing on the Copper River. Without this Fishery my profession as a Gillnetter would be seriously jeopardized. I reley totally on the income from Salmon Fishing. If the Fishery is taken away from me, I have no way to make a living and have limited training in other Fields of work. How would You as a Senator like it if a law was passed that basicaily eliminated politicans as a bread earning profession, thus forcing you to find another way to earn a living?

You would probably react the same way I am and make an effort to protect your way of life and career. My Career as a Drift Gillnetter is likely to be finished without the Copper River Fishery. I strongly urge you To support legislation that would return the power back to the Alaska Board of Fisheries and Game to regulate the resource. They have studied the Copper River Fish Stocks and have a set management plan. We must protect the resource above all else. Unlimited Subsistance harvests would soon eventually wipe out the Copper River Salmon runs. I feel Subsistance should be based on the individuals needs and traditional use basis. Those individuals who need the Salmon to help survive should be able to take what they can personally consume. For one individual to take 200 Salmon or a Family 500 Salmon when they cannot in all probability consume that many Fish is absurd. That makes an under-the-table Fish Sale situation likely for illegally dealing with the surplus Fish. It turns every Subsistance fisherman into a Commercial Fisherman on the 200 fish quota system. How many Families actually eat that many fish? There are only a few choices with that many fish, Sell them, Smoke them, or blantantly waste them! I myself eat a lot of Salmon annually. Including Canning, Smoking, and gifts to relatives,

(Cont.)

I have personal use of 30 to 50 Salmon at the most, and Iam a professional Fisherman! There should be a personal use fishery for all resident Alaskans, but it should regulated by need. Those residents who need the fish To subsist on would get them under Senate Bill #231. This Bill would also allow Traditional use groups, such as Commercial Fisherman, and Copper River Valley resident to be able to continue our set-way of existance and help assure management of future stocks of Salmon. I have my whole life's investment tied up in the industry at age 32. I have State backing on a resident loan from the Alaska Commercial Fishing and Agriculture Bank. All in all I have over $100,000 tied up in my fishing business. I live a modest existance and work hard and take many risks against the ocean just to get by on most years I have participate in this Fishery. So its not as easy or lucrative as many might seen to think about the life of an Alaskan Commercial Fisherman. It should be my constitutional right to be allowed to continue this traditional way to make a living. Why is my profession any different than anyone elses? Give me a chance to earn a living! With Alaska's concern over falling oil Revenues, the State should be concerned about enhancing its Commercial Fishing Industry, not pinching it out of existance and those who earn their livings from it.

PETITION TO OPPOSE SEN. VIC FISHER'S ANTI WOLF HUNTING BILL

TO: Governor Bill Sheffield, Alaska State Legislature and the Board of Game

We, the undersigned, as qualified voters in the State of Alaska, hereby strongly support management of wolves in Alaska in order to promote an environment that includes an abundance of wildlife. We oppose Sen. (Victor Fisher's anti-hunting bill that would eliminate aerial gunning of wolves. This is not a legislative issue. We ask the governor and the board of game to start listening to the local advisory committees and residents of the areas affected. We ask that the professional opinions and data collected by our own Department of Fish and Game be respected and used for good wildlife management.

ALASKA OUTDOOR COUNCIL

SUBSISTENCE CONSENSUS POINTS

AUGUST 21, 1985

1. Permitting: A permit will be required for subsistence preference use. Permitting will be based on personal or family qualifications--not on the locality in which one lives nor upon racial, cultural or ethnic considerations.

2. Limiting Qualifications: Qualifications for the permit will be very restrictive, requiring that: (1) the wild resource taken be used for personal and family consumptive use only; (2) the applicant must assert and establish that he needs the subsistence because it is reasonably necessary for his survival or the survival of his dependent family; and (3) the permit should be limited to a family unit with income from all sources at or below Federal poverty levels with no more than one subsistence license per family unit.

3. Subsistence Seasons and Bag Limits: The permit holders will be subject to specific subsistence regulations regarding applicable or substituted species by area, seasons, quotas, bag limits and methods and means as authorized by the Boards of Fish or Game. The opportunity to harvest will be given a preference but no guarantee of harvest is intended.

4. Preference Not Priority: The preference will not be an absolute priority over sport, commercial or recreational use. These latter uses need not necessarily be eliminated before subsistence preference use is restricted or regulated.

5. Trade and Barter: Trade provisions will be similar to those in current state law. Subsistence use may include trade, barter or sharing for personal or family consumption of wild renewable resources and must be limited to the first exchange. No cash exchanges or commercial sale shall be included in subsistence use.

OVERVIEW

Game Board Meeting
June 1985

I. Eluska: The Game Board must adopt separate subsistence hunting regulations consistent with Madison, or the "subsistence defense" can be used and many regulations will be unenforceable.

II. Madison:

A. Unless sustained yield will be jeoprodized, subsistence hunting must be authorized on any game population that has been hunted in the past and used for food, shelter, fuel, clothing, tools, transportation, customary trade, barter, or sharing; subsistence hunting means hunting by any Alaskan for these purposes.

B. If subsistence hunting of a game population must be restricted (significantly impaired)to protect the resource, then non-subsistence uses (non-state resident hunting) must be eliminated first.

C. If subsistence hunting on a game population must still be restricted (significantly impaired), then the board must use the three criteria listed in AS 16.05.255(b) to determine how hunting opportunities are to be distributed among Alaskans:

(1) customary and direct dependence upon the resource as the mainstay of one's livelihood;

(2) local residency; and

(3) availability of alternative resources.

III. Therefore, in order to have enforceable regulations, for each game population which has been hunted for food, etc., by Alaskans, the board should:

A. Adopt separate subsistence regulations.

B. Examine the current regulations to see if they prohibit any Alaskan from subsistence hunting, fail to provide the same legal subsistence hunting opportunity to all Alaskans, or otherwise significantly impair subsistence uses.

C. If so, eliminate non-state residents, and see if it is still necessary to significantly impair subsistence uses, to protect the resource.

D. If so, apply tier 2 standards.

Dear Committee Chairman;

Could you please see that all the members of your committee recieve a copy of my letter in support of Senate Bill #231 and House Bill #288 to help ensure the safety and future of all our natural resourses and wildlife throughout all Alaska. Thank you all for your time and hard work, If I can be of any help to any one of our legislators with our fishing records please let us know.

Signed;

Dear Alaska State Legislators;

I am a homemaker & mother, I live (5) water miles Northwest of Cordova on the North end of Hawkins Island in the Deep Bay area.

I am strongly in support of Senate Bill # 231 and House Bill # 288, and urge all Senate and House Chairman and Co-Chairman to work as quickly as possible at resolving these major issues.

My personal reasons are as follows; Fishing is our only source of an income which in turn is our survival. Survival meaning we must purchase fishing and hunting license, shells, fuel to even go get game meat.

In order to make jelly, bread or even grow a hand full of potatoes it takes an income to purchase flour, sugar or seed potatoes, and much work to even try to grow a small kelp box garden, do to our poor gardening conditions in this area, compared to Anchorage, Palmer and Fairbanks with such good growing seasons.

You must take in to consideration, our moose and deer, in the Prince William Sound, Copper River and the surrounding Cordova area. All the moose and deer were transplanted here prior to Statehood. This makes a limit on all the game meat in this area, which is set up to ensure that our children will have moose and deer when they grow up. The Alaska Fish and Game regulate these rules to ensure future stocks, this is done in the best interest of the people.

If the State was to open subsistance hunting to all residents it would distroy all that the dept. of Fish amd Game has worked so hard to protect for the future of all Alaskans.

As for the Copper River Red Salmon run; in 1982 my husband caught 2,865 red salmon, 1983 was 1,323 red salmon, 1984 was 741 red salmon. Each year we have been cut back on our take of the Copper River Red Salmon to ensure the brood stock and to assure that the subsistance fisherman get thier increased quota of Red Salmon each year.

My husband in 1982 paid $57.30, 1983 paid $26.46, 1984 $14.82, this was just the Aquaculture asesment for Copper River Red Salmon and by the time the cannerys mached the $.02 per fish it totaled $98.58 paid out for our catch to ensure the preservation of our future Copper River Red Salmon through the Aquaculture. Please also note that the subsistance fishermen do not pay the $.02 per fish nor do they quit fishing during the closers by the State of Alaska Dept. of Fish and Game. These closers are designed to give proper escapement to ensure the proper amuont of brood stock escapement.

If the Copper River Fishermen have to cut back much more there will not be a Copper River Fisherman left.

Please understand , I beleave that subsistance is very important but not to the point of destruction-meaning our resourses can not handle every resident becoming a subsitance user. Please study this issue with the up-most care, because rivers, streams, forests and fields can only provide just so much and when it's gone it's gone forever. The Alaska State Fish And Game have been slowly accomplishing a goal, why not leave it there at least they have some facts and figures andda future to work with.

To me subsistance means a need and a need means necessity which brings us back to subsistance which is the minimum food and shelter necessary to support life-not the want for the food.

I beleave hunting and fishing is still a privilege and honor that the State of Alaska provides by over seeing the resources and keeping them balanced.

People that have a good income, meaning average income or higher should be willing to purchase a hunting or fishing license and leave the subsistance to the person or persons that truely need it for the reasons of survival, not for the want or greed. Remember the key words to subsistance is in the Websters Dictionary. Thank you for your concerns and time on thhse important issues.

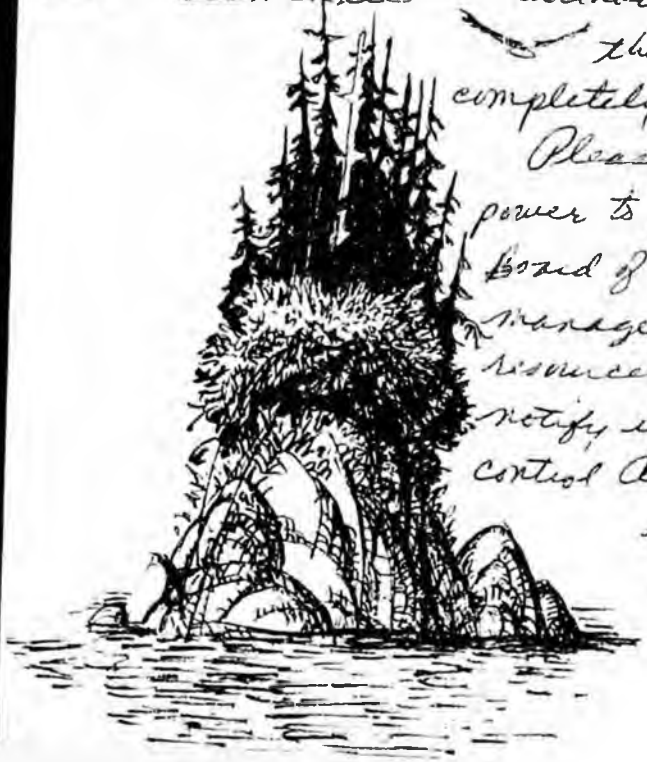
Senator Abood
Chairman, State Affairs Committee

Dear Senator Abood,

I am writing to request your prompt support of SB # 231 regarding our state fisheries management. It is critical for our community, the fishing industry, and our state central that this bill be expediently endorsed by the Senate.

The resources of our great state will disappear rapidly if there is random and wanton usage without management. Violating Federal laws regarding subsistence allows for the possibility of Federal take-over. This would eliminate our authority to manage the resource completely.



Please exercise your power to give authority to Board of Fisheries to manage and allot our resources, before the Feds notify us that they control Alaskan salmon!

Sincerely,

Dear Senator Abood
I'm writing to support speedy passage of Senate Bill #231 and House Bill #288 to save the Copper River Salmon fishery.

As a resident and employee in the city of Cordova I have become very aware of the large contribution the P.W.S. gillnetters make to the economic base here. I don't believe Cordova can survive without healthy fisheries.

I believe that the State Fish and Game Board have done a pretty good job, if preservation and growing numbers of Salmon are any indication, and a return to the system that has worked well is the best solution.

As an Alaskan I favor subsistence for those who need it. Has anyone considered an income ceiling for subsistence permit holders?

We are all anxiously watching the outcome of these bills as the futures of so many hang in the balance.

Sincerely
Carol Emmett

SIR

I Am Quite Concerned about The Madison decision, and I Believe Because of This decision That There is a good Chance of The Fishing Time on The Copper River delta Being Reduced OR Completely Closed for Commercial Fishing This year, Thus Spelling Desaster for The Economy of Cordova and all Commercial Fishermen That fish The Copper River.

Therefore I urge you To do Everything within your Power To Pass SB# 231 OR any other Legislation That will give the Alaska Board of fisheries and game The Power To Regulate and Manage The Resources the way They have Been Regulated The past 3 years

Dear Senator Abood:

I am writing regarding the recent court ruling overturning regulation of subsistance use by the State Department of Fish and Game. As a commercial fisherman in Cook Inlet I am concerned that a protracted legislative hearing on the issue may spell financial disaster for me.

I have to assume that you and the majority of your legislative body are fairly well versed on the issue and I cannot understand Senator Bennet's response to the matter unless it represents his constituents narrow interests. There is no justification for not considering the issue now. The Department of Fish and Game had done a commendable job in balancing uses in forming a subsistence policy based on true need and merit. I think it is unfortunate that a small number of individuals who could not justifiably be considered as subsistence users have been able to overturn the present regulation.

Action is needed to put the matter on this sessions legislative agenda. From what I have read of Governor Sheffield's bill I would support his approach. I would like to request your assistance in bringing a subsistence bill to the Governor's desk this session. My personal financial future is dependent on being able to fish a normal commerical salmon season in Cook Inlet.

Thank you for any assistance you can give to this matter.

Sincerely,

Earl N. Kari

Dear Senator Abood,

I am writing this letter because I am very much concerned about the pending disaster that is threatening our gillnet fishery in the Copper River area.

I am a resident of Cordova and a commercial fisherman. My own economic stability is threatened as well as the ecomonomy of Cordova.

I rely on the gillnet fishery for a large portion of my livelihood. The City of Cordova is heavily dependent upon the Copper River gillnet fishery and it's loss due to subsistance (personal use) conflicts, threatens the economic well being of our entire city!

I therefore urge your support for Senate Bill 231 and House Bill 288 or a means for keeping us fishing and maintaining the strength and future of this important industry in Alaska.

Dear Senator Abood,

I am a commercial fisherman and hold a PWS Gillnet permit. I am writing to you concerning Senate Bill 231.

As both a commercial and sports fishing enthusiast I feel it is imperative to rectify the situation created by the Madison Decision. Our fisheries resource has been managed very well by the ADF&G to provide sports, commercial and legitimate subsistance users a fair share while maintaining a healthy fish runs.

The impact on the gillnet fishing without Senate Bill 231 would be very serious.

Please help us retain our livelihood by passing Senate Bill 231 this session.

Dear Sirs,

As a commercial fisherman, an Area E limited entry permit holder and a resident of Cordova, Alaska, I urge you to support SB #231. Please return to the Alaska Board of Fisheries and Game the power to regulate and manage our fish and game resources.

The implications of the Madison Decision on myself and this community are economically devastating. If SB #231 is not acted upon in an expedient and just manner financial hardships to the extent of filing a chapter eleven will ensue for myself and a good portion of my fellow fishermen in Prince William Sound and Cook Inlet. Is commercial fishing no longer an Alaskan tradition?

RE: SB # 231, HB # 288

Dear Senator Elrod,

There has been a lot of discussion on the Madison opinion, its implications on our Natural Resource mangement plans, and the Administrations bill presented to the House and Senate. My residence is Cordova, Ak. I have been making my livelihood from commercial fishing on the Copper River Flats since I was 16 years of age. I've been fishing for 16 years. I would like to give you my perspective on the Madison opinion as it stands, how it may/will affect this commercial fisheries, and the effect that SB#231 will have on remeding this.

Subsistence defined in regulation by the Board of Fisheries followed a set of criteria that put the State in compliance with the Federal Governments Alaska Native Lands Claim Act (ANiLCA) Specifically, one had to be a RURAL resident that customarily and traditionally used a natural resource for subsistence needs. At the time that this definition was drafted, reports showed that the resource was being used by many residents of Alaska outside of the Rural defined area,(Dept. of Fish and Game- Subsistence Division reports). Now, I will go back to the Copper River. RURAL was defined as the Copper Basin Drainage. Statistics compiled showed that 98.5% of the subsistence permits for dipnetting salmon were outside of the basin area. 80-85% were from the Urban areas of Anchorage, Fairbanks, and the large military bases. A PERSONAL USE category was defined by regulation for the residents outside of the Basin area. At that time it was determined that urban demands on the resource were not true subsistence needs. The PERSONAL USE category recognized the use of the Salmon resource by a quasi-recreational homepack group of residents.

The main difference between Personal Use as defined by regulation and Subsistence as defined by the Madison Opinion is that Personal Use has a QUOTA of 60,000 salmon in the Copper River. Under Subsistence there would be no quota. The bag limits under personal use are Individual 15, Household 30 (about 150 lbs of dressed salmon). Under Subsistence limits are Household 200 (about 1000 lbs of dressed salmon).The impact of these figures of the Personal use use put into Subsistence use (by including personal use as Subsistence) on the Copper River Redsalmon Resource would severely restrict the commercial fleet in 1985, and surely replace it in future years!

SB #231 defines Subsistence so that it is in compliance with ANiLCA. This is done by inserting RURAL as a criteria. This Bill also defines a personal use category to give all residents an equal opportunity to recreate in the Resource.

SB # 231 has been put in the following committees:

Senate State Affairs
Senate Resources
Senate Judiciary
Senate Finance
Rules

HB # 288 has been put in the following committees

House Resources
House Judiciary Rules

In Conclusion, I urge you to take action on waiving SB# 231 from Senate Judiciary and Senate Finance. Please give this Bill the time and attention that it deserves. But don't let it die because of being put in too many committees!

We fishermen and the citizens of Cordova are very much afraid of the Madison Opinions' impact on our economic dependence on the Copper River Salmon Resource

IN THE SENATE

BY THE RULES COMMITTEE BY REQUEST OF THE GOVERNOR

SENATE BILL NO.

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to the taking of fish and game for subsistence and personal use; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. FINDINGS. The legislature finds that:

(1) the taking of fish stocks and game populations for personal and family consumption and related uses is essential to the health, safety, and general welfare of Alaskans domiciled in rural communities or rural areas in which the taking of fish and game for such uses is a significent part of the economy of the community or area; and

(2) the taking of fish stocks and game populations for personal, sport, and commercial uses is also of economic and recreational importance to Alaskans who reside anywhere in the state.

Sec. 2. AS 16.05.251(a) is amended to read:

(a) The Board of Fisheries may adopt regulations it considers advisable in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.-62) for

(1) setting apart fish reserve areas, refuges and sanctuaries in the waters of the state over which it has jurisdiction, subject to the approval of the legislature;

(2) establishing open and closed seasons and areas for the taking of fish;

(3) setting quotas, bag limits, harvest levels, and sex and size limitations on the taking of fish;

(4) establishing the means and methods employed in the pursuit, capture and transport of fish;

(5) establishing marking and identification requirements for means used in pursuit, capture and transport of fish;

(6) classifying as commercial fish, sport fish, personal use fish or predators or other categories essential for regulatory purposes;

(7) watershed and habitat improvement, and management, conservation, protection, use, disposal, propagation and stocking of fish;

(8) investigating and determining the extent and effect of disease, predation, and competition among fish in the state, exercising control measures considered necessary to the resources of the state;

(9) prohibiting and regulating the live capture, possession, transport, or release of native or exotic fish or their eggs;

(10) establishing seasons, areas, quotas and methods of harvest for aquatic plants;

(11) establishing the times and dates during which the issuance of fishing licenses, permits and registrations and the transfer of permits and registrations between registration areas is allowed; however, this paragraph does not apply to permits issued or transferred under AS 16.43;

(12) personal use fishing.

*Sec. 3. AS 16.05.940(23) is amended to read:

(23) "subsistence uses" means the customary and traditional uses by rural (IN) Alaska residents of wild, renewable resources for direct personal or family consumption as food, shelter, fuel, clothing, tools, or transportation, for the making and selling of handicraft articles out of nonedible by-products of fish and wildlife resources taken for personal or family comsumption, and for the customary trade, barter, or sharing for personal or family consumption; for the purposes of this paragraph, "family" means all persons related by blood, marriage, or adoption, and any person living within the household on a permanent basis;

*Sec. 4. AS 16.05.940 is amended by adding a new paragraph to read:

(28) "personal use fishing" means the taking, fishing for, or possession of finfish, shellfish, or other fishery resources, by Alaska residents for personal use and not for sale or barter, with gill or dip net, seine, fish wheel, long line, or other similar means defined by the Board of Fisheries.

*Sec. 5. This Act takes effect immediately in accordance with AS 01.-10.070(c).

Passed 3/24/85

Resolution of Joint Board of Fisheries & Board of Game

WHEREAS, it is unclear to what extent the boards may restrict subsistence harvest after the Madison ruling and as a result, substantial and significantly disruptive reallocations of opportunities to harvest fish stocks and game populations may be necessary. For example:

1. The commercial gill net fishery which is an important component of the Prince William Sound economy may need to be significantly restricted in 1985 or, eventually, even closed. Prior to the Madison decision the Board of Fisheries had adequate regulatory flexibility to accommodate both the historic commercial fishery and other users.

MARCUS F. JENSEN
P.O. BOX 2220
JUNEAU, ALASKA 99803

April 29, 1985

Dear Editor:

Governor Sheffield gave a radio talk on Sunday, April 28, on his subsistence bill, House Bill 288. His talk indicated a lack of understanding of the problem. His bill adds the word "rural" to circumvent the recent Alaska Supreme Court decision. The "Madison" decision says existing state law provides for subsistence regulations but that they must cover both rural and urban Alaskans.

While HB 288 would allocate subsistence only to "rural" residents, it fails to define "rural". Who are the rural residents of Alaska? Are they those individuals living in cities and towns served by roads, commercial aircraft, ferries and trains? Or are they the individuals residing in truly remote areas? And should subsistence be available only to "rural" Alaskans? The Governor should address the intent and scope of his proposal. Merely tossing the Boards another law on subsistence that further restricts their ability to fairly allocate the resources among the various beneficial uses is not the answer.

The answer must include protection of the resources and fairness in the allocation of their uses.

The Governor says he is afraid of federal take-over as is provided for in ANILCA. Instead of meekly complying with a bad federal act, perhaps he should use his authority to test the validity of the federal act. Many lawyers feel it is unconstitutional. By testing the federal act the Governor would be representing most Alaskans who want to control their own resource without federal intervention. This is what statehood was all about.

The need for a state subsistence act is greatly diminished when one understands that 42 million acres were given to the Natives for top priority use for subsistence. This land mass is equal to one mile wide and sixty five thousand miles long. It should raise a few animals.

The Governor's proposed law will only further confuse and alienate people and it is not needed. We should all accept the Alaska Native Claims Act for what it was--settlement of aboriginal claims including special claims on fish and game, and get on with fair and equitable allocation of these resources for all Alaskan citizens.

Sincerely yours,

Marcus F. Jensen

SPECIAL NOTICE

4/29/85

Alaska Subsistence Issue--Myths & Facts

Recent comments by the Governor, members of the Legislature and certain special interst groups have created a growing sense of hysteria over the Alaskan subsistence issue. As a result, numerous distortions of fact have occurred in order to panic the general public, the various user groups and the legislature into supporting a quick fix to the extremely complicated subsistence law. For your information, we are providing you a copy of our 4/17/85 Special Notice on the issue and we are also including herein a few comments on some of the myths and facts that have been circulated recently to the Legislature and the public.

MYTH - The Governor's proposed bills (HB 288 & SB 231) will return the subsistence situation to pre-Madison (Supreme Court Ruling) by inserting the word "rural" into the existing State law and by creating a "personal use fishery" category.

FACT - The Governor's bills do not resolve the major problems clearly enunciated in the Madison Supreme Court ruling. His bills will allow the Boards of Fisheries and Game to eliminate urban users from subsistence uses but the Court also ruled (Supreme Court Opinion #2911):

1. The Boards must adopt regulations giving subsistence uses an absolute priority (Page 5).

2. The Boards must eliminate competing uses such as sport or commercial uses before restricting subsistence uses (Page 16 & 17).

MYTH - The Governor's proposed legislation will solve the potential crises situations involving sport fishing in Cook Inlet, commercial fishing in Prince William Sound and sport hunting throughout Alaska this spring and summer.

FACT - The Madison Supreme Court ruling essentially eliminated the regulations that the Board of Fisheries had established descriminating between Alaskans on the basis of residency--including the ten point criteria used by the Board. Even if the Governor's legislation were to pass there is not enough time under the Administrative Procedures Act for regulations to be properly adopted before the fishing and hunting seasons commence. The only means for immediate relief is under the emergency powers of the Commissioner of Fish and Game.

MYTH - The creation of a "personal use fishery" will provide for urban subsistence needs.

Fact - The personal use fishery provided in the Governor's bill gives no priority to the personal use fishery. Whenever it comes in conflict with subsistence uses, it must be eliminated along with sport or commercial uses. In addition, there is no proposed "personal use hunting" provision in the Governor's bills.

MYTH - The Governor's bills resolve the subsistence problems.

Fact - HB 288 and SB 231 further exacerbate a growing conflict between urban and rural users by giving an ultimate priority over use of common property resources to a portion of Alaskan residents based on their residency.

MYTH - The Governor is concerned with Federal takeover of Fish and Wildlife Management.

Fact - The Governor and the majority in the House refused to accept an amendment to HB 288 which would keep us in compliance with the Federal law but would have provided a sunset clause next year.

MYTH - The Federal Government will manage fish and wildlife if HB 288 does not pass in its present form.

FACT - Deputy Under Secretary Willam P Horn in his April 18, 1985 correspondence to Representative Goll indicated that "we would afford the State an opportunity to correct the program deficiencies". He also indicated "the Department has no immediate plans to undertake activities to discharge its obligations under Sections 805 (a), (b), and (c) if it is finally determined that the Madison decision puts the State in non-compliance and there are indications that the State will act to come into compliance". He did indicate that a Federal Court could require the Federal Government to assume subsistence management, however.

MYTH - The Anchorage Sportfishing organizations support HB 288.

FACT - Both the Alaska Sportfishing Association and the Kenai River Sportfishing Association have indicated:

1. They oppose HB 288 in its present form.

2. They favor a permanent solution to the Alaska subsistence law conflicts.

3. They favor legislation with a sunset clause which will allow the Boards of Fisheries and Game to regulate in the interim.

4. They favor hearings during the interim .

MYTH - The Governor's bills resolve the Court of Appeals ruling on the Eluska case.

Fact - The Eluska case provided that the State could not continue to provide for subsistence uses under sport regulations and a subsistence priority must be provided by regulation. The court held that the Board may not retrict subsistence hunting at all in an area in which sport or commercial hunting is permitted. Lacking regulations giving subsistence a priority, a subsistence user may essentially harvest game unrestricted. The Governor's proposal does not deal with this issue in any way.

MYTH - The Governor supports taking politics out of fish and game management by proposing HB 288.

FACT - The Governor's bills insert politics into management by legislatively instructing the Boards of Fisheries and Game to discriminate against most of Alaskans in the allocation of Alaska's common property fish and wildlife resources.

MYTH - Residents of Anchorage, Fairbanks, Juneau and Ketchikan may be allowed to participate in subsistence uses if HB 288 is passed.

FACT - ANILCA requires that a definition of the term "rural" requires that Anchorage, Fairbanks, Juneau and Ketchikan be considered urban and ineligible for subsistence.

MYTH - The Legislature and this Administration will take up the State subsistence law next year if there are still problems.

FACT - This Administration and many legislators promised to correct the problems three years ago; however, they failed to do so until the recent Supreme Court decision foced them to address the issue this year.

There remain several major questions that should be answered:

1. Why does the Governor and certain special interest groups oppose a thorough review of the State subsistence law during the next year. Especially, if an interim law with a sunset clause could be passed keeping us in compliance with the Federal law while giving the regulatory Boards authority to regulate during the interim?

2. Why must all existing subsistence users in Anchorage, Fairbanks, Juneau and Ketchikan be eliminated from participating in legitimate subsistence activities if they also have the same needs?

3. Why does this Administration and certain special interest groups oppose a precise definition of the word "rural" if it is inserted into the State's law so that Alaskan's will know if they are subsistence users or not?

4. Why do the supporters of HB 288 oppose defining the term "restrict" which will allow for subsistence uses to be regulated?

5. Why do the supporters of HB 288 oppose amendments which will provide that in some cases, as determined by the regulatory Boards, that subsistence, sport and commercial uses may all be regulated rather than requiring that all sport and commercial uses be eliminated before restricting any subsistence uses?

6. Why do the supporters of HB 288 oppose "personal use fishing" including "hook and line" fishing?

7. Why do the supporters of HB 288 oppose a definition of "priority" to include a reasonable preference but not an exclusive use?

8. Why do the supporters of HB 288 oppose amendments which will exclude new Alaskan residents who move into a subsistence community from having a priority over Alaskans elsewhere who have greater dependency and history of use of the same fish and wildlife resources?

These are questions whose answers may help unravel the political web that is making the issue of subsistence nearly impossible to deal with.

SPECIAL NOTICE

4/17/85

Alaska Subsistence Issue

This special notice summarizes, from the Alaska Outdoor Council's point of view, the most important issues involved in the present controversies surrounding the State's subsistence law. Because the legislature is examining amendments to the law, it is important that the amendment process carefully consider all major problems with the existing law so that these controversies are not perpetuated.

The Alaska Supreme Court Ruling

The Alaska Supreme Court February 22, 1985 struck down a Board of Fisheries regulation that had identified eligibility for subsistence fishing in the Cook Inlet region. Under the regulation, certain residents of the Kenai Peninsula had been eliminated from subsistence fishing.

The Court opinion emphasized the following points:

1. The State law requires the Boards to adopt regulations permitting "subsistence uses".

2. The State subsistence law does not allow the Boards of Fisheries and Game to distinguish between rural and urban subsistence fish and game users.

3. The State law does not allow the Boards to restrict subsistence use to a specific community, unless the resource is in jeopardy.

4. A major point of departure from the State's previous position was the ruling by the Court that all sport and commercial uses must be eliminated before subsistence uses are restricted in any way.

The Alaska Court of Appeals Ruling

On April 12, 1985 the Alaska Court of Appeals issued a ruling dealing with the State's prosecution of a subsistence hunter who had taken a deer on Kodiak Island during the closed season. The court indicated:

1. "Substantial uncertainty" exists on these issues but the defendant is correct in arguing that his unregulated subsistence use is legitimate in the absence of regulations to the contrary.

2. The Board of Game must (emphasis added) adopt subsistence regulations according to the State's 1978 subsistence law.

3. The State has failed to carry out its responsibilities by not adopting subsistence regulations.

4. "A potential subsistence user must be able to determine before he or she hunts whether the hunt will comply with the law before he or she can be subjected to criminal prosecution for his or her hunting."

5. "The State must prove guilt beyond a reasonable doubt by convincing a jury that the hunting in question was not a subsistence use."

The practical effects of this case means that in instances where the State Boards have failed to identify and provide for existing subsistence uses, the subsistence users may legally participate in that activity. Since the Boards has recognized only a relatively few subsistence uses, most of the State could be essentially unregulated for subsistence.

The Administration Proposal

The Sheffield Administration introduced HB 288 and SB 231 to insert the word "rural" into the State law and provide for a "personal use fishery" category. This offers a patchwork response to the court rulings, fails to correct major flaws in the law and will perpetuate the present political atmosphere of direct competition between urban and rural residents.

The Alaska Outdoor Council Position

The Alaska Outdoor Council offers the following points and option as a basis for permanently correcting the flaws in the present subsistence law:

1. The courts rulings have focused on several critical issues involved with the socially divisive State subsistence law and any changes should be carefully considered and the public fully involved.

2. The Governor created a Subsistence Task Force two years ago that was a total failure and was disbanded.

3. Legislative action this session should focus on clarifying the elements of the issue as the first step in resolving this controversy. Poorly crafted amendments will cause the issue to emerge annually. Due deliberations and consideration of all alternatives are essential.

4. If it is determined, after full deliberations by the legislature, that immediate temporary corrective measures are essential, we propose that the legislature consider passing a law creating a one year moratorium or "freeze" on the subsistence law which will give them, the public and the Administration one full year to appropriately tackle the entire issue.

5. The 7 year history of controversy and court rulings is a clear statement that neither the public nor the elected public officials clearly understand "subsistence".

6. Other specific recommendations:

a. The position of the Alaska Outdoor Council membership has consistently been that subsistence should be based on some equitable basis of individual or family "need".

b. No common property resources, under provisions of the State Constitution, should be allocated on an exclusive use priority basis.

c. No subsistence user qualifications should be based on residency, including any community.

d. Terms like "Customary and traditional", "rural" or "family" must be clearly defined if they are used in any form in the law. It is imperative for the legislature to clearly define the terms of any subsistence law to allow an Alaskan resident to determine whether he is or is not a subsistence user.

e. The term "customary trade" must exclude all commercial sales.

f. The law must authorize the Boards of Fisheries and Game to regulate subsistence uses at any time, when appropriate.

g. Competing uses should not be eliminated whenever there is a conflict with subsistence uses.

h. The Boards should be allowed to regulate subsistence uses at historic levels of harvest.

i. The term "restricted" must be clearly defined to allow on-going regulation of subsistence uses.

SB 231

United States Department of the Interior

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20240

April 18, 1985

Honorable Peter Goll
Chairman, House Special Committee on Fisheries
Alaska State Legislature, Pouch V
Juneau, Alaska 99811

Dear Mr. Goll:

Thank you for your letter of April 1 regarding the State of Alaska's subsistence program and the recent Madison decision. In early 1982, the Department of the Interior certified that Alaska's subsistence program was in compliance with Title VIII of the Alaska Lands Act (ANILCA). This action followed extensive consultation between the State authorities and the Department. We had advised the State that the program which was certified (and the focus of the Madison case) was not the only approach that would comply with Title VIII. Although the focus during recent years has been on the urban and rural classifications, ANILCA specifies that rural residency is not the only criterion to be used in determining eligibility for the preference for nonwasteful subsistence taking. Section 803 provides that eligibility for the preference may be limited to those rural residents for whom subsistence is customary and traditional.

Our preliminary review of the Madison decision indicates that it puts the State in a position of non-compliance. The decision appears to require that, under Alaska law, the subsistence preference be extended to urban residents--an extension barred by Title VIII. We have written your Attorney General and asked for his opinion on this preliminary assessment. We prefer not to make a final ruling on the effect of a State of Alaska court decision which focused solely on a State statute and State implementing regulations without the views of Alaska's chief legal officer.

RECEIVED

If our final determination remains the same as our preliminary assessment, we would afford the State an opportunity to correct the program deficiencies. Since the apparent non-compliance is the result of an unexpected court ruling rather than willful action by the State's executive or legislative branches, we are persuaded that Title VIII implicity requires us to provide the State with a reasonable opportunity to take appropriate corrective action. Efforts by the State to comply with the spirit if not the letter of Title VIII would lend support to this approach. Consequently, the Department has no immediate plans to undertake activities to discharge its obligations under Sections 805 (a), (b), and (c) if it is finally determined that the Madison decision puts the State in non-compliance and there are indications that the State will act to come into compliance. Please note, however, that this course of action is not completely free of risk. It is possible someone could pursue the judicial remedy specified in Section 807 and argue that we must take immediate action under Sections 805 (a), (b), and (c). Should a Federal court agree with that assertion, the Department could be compelled to assume subsistence management on public lands notwithstanding our decision to afford the State an opportunity to come back into compliance with Title VIII.

You posed a series of questions regarding how we would take action pursuant to Section 805. Since we have not yet prepared plans for assumption of subsistence management, many of your questions cannot be answered. Nonetheless, it is likely that some form of NEPA compliance will be required. We could however, invoke the emergency rulemaking authorities under the Administrative Procedures Act to save additional time.

If Federal action is required, coordination with the State would be extremely important since the one-third of Alaska that is non-Federal land would remain subject to State fish and game management. The resulting dual management scheme would cause many problems and is one of the primary reasons why we are strongly supportive of continued State management and hope that the State will cure the apparent deficiencies created by the Madison decision.

You also inquired about an arrangement, following Federal action, under which the State would continue on-the-ground management of fish and wildlife resources under the aegis of the Federal Government. The legality of such an arrangement is currently under review but your Department of Fish and Game might be barred from complying with the statutorily-required Federal directions if existing State law did not permit distinctions to be made between customary and traditional rural subsistence users and other users of fish and wildlife resources.

Your last question addressed the Department's ability to discharge the management responsibilities it might have to assume under Section 805. Presently we do not have such capabilities; however, we shall take all required steps to acquire such capability if necessary to fulfill our legal obligations.

I trust that this is responsive to your concerns. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

William P. Horn

Mr. Bill Horn
Deputy Undersecretary
Department of the Interior
Washington, D.C. 20240

Dear Mr. Horn:

A recent ruling by the Alaska Supreme Court striking down regulations governing subsistence fishing in Cook Inlet has resulted in the submission of Legislation modifying the state's subsistence law. State compliance with the provisions of ANILCA is an issue that concerns many lawmakers as the legislation is being dealt with in committee.

A timely response by Department of the Interior to the following issues would help the Legislature in its deliberations.

1) Has the Department of Interior reviewed the Madison decision? If so, has it made a determination of whether it would put the state in the position of non-compliance with ANILCA?

2) What kinds of situations would put Alaska in non-compliance with ANILCA?

If the courts or federal government determines the state is not in compliance with ANILCA and the federal government steps in to manage fish and wildlife on federal lands:

1) What kind of regulation promulgating process would the Department of the Interior undertake for fish and game management? Do you envision a NEPA-type process? If so, how long would it take from regulation proposal to enactment?

2) How would the Department of the Interior coordinate its fish and wildlife management on federal areas with state management within state jurisdiction? Does Interior envision problems with a dual management system?

3) Would Interior opt for a management approach where the state continues to be the fish and wildlife manager with federal approval?

4) Does Interior have the in-house expertise to adequately handle the management responsibilities that it might be delegated?

I respectfully request your prompt response to these questions as the subsistence Legislation is under consideration in the House. Please contact me if you need clarifications. Thank you for your consideration of my informational request.

Sincerely,

Representative Peter Goll

Dear Senator Mitch Abood;

I am very concerned about the new subsistence ruling. If it is not changed back to rural; it could wipe out Cordova's economy this year.

Cordova survives from commercial gillnetting on the Copper River Delta. We have already lost our winter crabfishery three years ago. If gillnetting on the Copper River Delta is cutback or discontinued, it will spell disaster for Cordova this summer.

It is very important that emergency legislation is completed before May 15-85.

Please do all you can to support HB#288 and SB#231.

Dear Senator Abood,

It is of great importance to the City of Cordova that the matter of subsistence be clarified before the adjournment of the 1985 session of the 14th Legislature. Fishing is our only industry and fish our only export. Not having this controversial matter settled will have a devasting effect on Cordova and most other coastal communities which are already suffering from economic woes due to lower exvessel prices, reduced fishing time and the loss of winter crab fishing from depleted stocks. The salmon industry is in operation from May 15th until approximately October 1st, a period of only 4 1/2 months. If the subsistence issue remains unsettled it could represent a 50% reductions in fishing time and a complete shutdown of our gillnet fishery representing over 500 permits. Using last years figures that would represent a loss of $8,000,000 in raw product alone not to mention hundreds of other jobs in local processing plants and $240,000 in raw fish tax. Some legislators may feel they can procrastinate on this issue, but the coastal communities of this state cannot afford to see their only resource swim upstream while the subject is being debated in the Halls of Juneau. I personally feel that subsistence should be handled on a case by case basis taking into account historical and customary use, need and regional residency. This is not to say that all Alaskans cannot share in the fishery since we can all buy a sport fishing license and try our luck with rod and reel or dip net.
I would appreciate your support of Senate Bill 231. It is very important that this issue be settled before the 1st of May.

Unless action is taken immediately, there will be no comm. fishing on the Copper River flats. Do you have any idea what this will do to Cordova? Why do some of our own state senators seem so horribly ignorant on our commercial fishing industry?. It will be here long after the oil is gone; but only if we take care of it. What is happening now doesn't fall into that category.

As a life long commercial fisherman, and native of Alaska I feel your support of Senate Bill 231 is necessary for my family to remain in Cordova.

Commercial fishing on the Copper River starts May 15, so resolving this issue this session is of utmost importance. If we dont go fishing the 15th of May or there abouts the fish will have gone by, the best fish prices will have gone by. Because when Valdez, Cook Inlet and Bristol Bay come on line, our fish prices fall in line with theirs.

It is almost certain Cordova will become a ghost town without fishing the Copper River. Some years 80% of my income comes from these fish.

Right now Cordova, is a Commercial salmon fishing town, we do not have any other industry.

I'm writing in regards to S.B. #231, it's a nessecity to me that this bill or something similiar be passed. I'm a second generation fisherman of Cordova, and the family head of four. I have always made my living as a fisherman, and don't have an alternative resource should the Copper River be closed to commercial fishing 70% of my income derives from the Copper River fisheries. I've invested heavily in my trade, without it it will be impossible of me to make my payments as well as support my family. Nonsupport of this bill does not only hurt myself, and other gillnetters of this area, but will also be crucial to the economy of Cordova. Also, it would force us to leave our community in which we were reared, to try and seek employment elsewhere. I believe we need to keep our faith in the Board of Fish, where the sport, dipnetters and subsistance fisherman all had a fair and equal opportunity to the fish due them. We have always gone fishing in May - PLEASE HELP KEEP IT THIS WAY.

Hodel hears oil lease oppositio

By Julie Settle

KING SALMON—Secretary of the Interior Donald Hodel heard extensive testimony from fishermen and other residents adamantly opposed to the scheduled oil and gas lease sales in Bristol Bay, but maintained his "hands are tied" from halting oil and gas development in western Alaska.

Despite the fact that Bristol Bay fishermen are busily readying their boats and equipment for the salmon season, nearly 200 fishermen and affected residents left their chores to attend the public meeting held in King Salmon. Nineteen of these fishermen presented testimony, and all spoke in favor either of a delay or cancellation of North Aleutian Shelf sale No. 92.

No one at the meeting spoke in favor of proceeding with the lease sale as scheduled.

Prior to the public meeting, Secretary Hodel met with Gov. Bill Sheffield, who has consistently and strongly urged that the lease sale in Bristol Bay be delayed (see Gov. Sheffield's Editorial, page 2). Bob Blake, president of the United Fishermen

Lease delay refused

WASHINGTON—The hopes of western Alaska fishermen who want Congress to delay the oil lease sale on the North Aleutian Shelf were shattered June 20 by the House Interior Subcommittee on Appropriations.

The subcommittee voted not to include Bristol Bay's Sale 92 area in the oil development moratorium due to last-minute pressure from Alaska's Congressional delegation and oil companies who favor the lease sale.

The Alaska delegation did not feel that the fishermen's concerns over the possible environmental effects on the fishery resources of the eastern Bering Sea were valid. The delegation supports the lease sale as scheduled, despite the fact that United Fishermen of Alaska, the state of Alaska, the Environmental Protection Agency, National Marine Fisheries Service and Bristol Bay communities have raised significant concerns about oil development in the area.

Lease Sale 92 will hit the auction block in December unless Interior Secretary Donald Hodel recommends a delay.

Those concerned about the impact of oil development on fisheries in this area should write to Sens. Ted Stevens and Frank Murkowski and Rep. Don Young and urge them to ask Hodel to delay the lease sale.

OVERVIEW

Game Board Meeting
June 1985

I. Eluska: The Game Board must adopt separate subsistence hunting regulations consistent with Madison, or the "subsistence defense" can be used and many regulations will be unenforceable.

II. Madison:

A. Unless sustained yield will be jeoprodized, subsistence hunting must be authorized on any game population that has been hunted in the past and used for food, shelter, fuel, clothing, tools, transportation, customary trade, barter, or sharing; subsistence hunting means hunting by any Alaskan for these purposes.

B. If subsistence hunting of a game population must be restricted (significantly impaired)to protect the resource, then non-subsistence uses (non-state resident hunting) must be eliminated first.

C. If subsistence hunting on a game population must still be restricted (significantly impaired), then the board must use the three criteria listed in AS 16.05.255(b) to determine how hunting opportunities are to be distributed among Alaskans:

(1) customary and direct dependence upon the resource as the mainstay of one's livelihood;

(2) local residency; and

(3) availability of alternative resources.

III. Therefore, in order to have enforceable regulations, for each game population which has been hunted for food, etc., by Alaskans, the board should:

A. Adopt separate subsistence regulations.

B. Examine the current regulations to see if they prohibit any Alaskan from subsistence hunting, fail to provide the same legal subsistence hunting opportunity to all Alaskans, or otherwise significantly impair subsistence uses.

C. If so, eliminate non-state residents, and see if it is still necessary to significantly impair subsistence uses, to protect the resource.

D. If so, apply tier 2 standards.

MEMORANDUM May 9, 1985

SUBJECT: Sectional analysis of a draft bill entitled "An Act relating to fishing and hunting."

TO: Senator Mitchell Abood
Chairman, Senate State Affairs Committee

FROM: Edward H. Hein EHH
Legislative Counsel

Section 1 amends AS 16.05.251(b), which establishes the subsistence fishing priority and requires the Board of Fisheries to adopt subsistence fishing regulations. This bill section would allow the board to provide for the issuance of and set fees for subsistence fishing licenses and would make the adoption of subsistence regulations discretionary, rather than mandatory. Only those subsistence uses specified in statute or regulation would be allowed. The board would be allowed to determine allocations and regulate seasons, catch limits, methods and means of taking, quotas, etc. Fish taken by a subsistence licensee's dependents, as well as by the licensee, would be counted toward the catch limit established by the board. This bill section deletes the ANILCA or "second-tier" criteria for distinguishing among subsistence users.

Sec. 2 amends AS 16.05.255(b), which establishes the subsistence hunting priority and requires the Board of Game to adopt subsistence hunting regulations. This bill section does to subsistence hunting precisely what section 1 does to subsistence fishing.

Sec. 3 amends the definition of "subsistence fishing" to allow the use of hook and line, and rod and reel gear. It also limits subsistence fishing statutorily to state residents. Subsistence hunting is already limited to residents by statute at AS 16.05.257.

Sec. 4 establishes a system for licensing subsistence fishermen and hunters and their dependents. Proposed

AS 16.05.258(a) requires the boards of fisheries and game to provide for the issuance of three types of subsistence licenses: fishing, hunting, and combination. Subsection (b) provides that an applicant for a subsistence license must be a state resident 16 years of age or older; has to claim as dependents all those living in the applicant's household and also all those who depend on the applicant to provide fish or game, which constitutes a minimum part of the dependent's diet; cannot be claimed as a dependent by another applicant; must prove that the applicant and all of the applicant's dependents rely on subsistence-caught fish or game for their diet and don't have access to alternative food resources for any of four reasons; and must notify everyone claimed as a dependent that they cannot apply for a subsistence license.

Subsection (c) establishes new "second-tier" criteria for distinguishing among subsistence users. If a shortage of fish or game necessitated it, the Department of Fish and Game could require that subsistence license applicants also meet maximum income requirements set jointly by the boards of fisheries and game. Subsection (d) requires the boards to establish income limits for subsistence license applicants, based on the cost of living in the applicant's home community or area. Subsection (e) requires applicants to use forms provided by the department.

Subsection (f) prohibits a person from holding both a subsistence license and a sport or commercial or guiding license for taking the same kind of resource. The subsection also applies to dependents of the license holder. E.g.: a person could not hold both a limited entry permit and a subsistence fishing permit, but could hold a limited entry permit and a sport hunting license. Likewise, a person could not obtain a subsistence fishing license if someone the person claims as a dependent holds a sport or commercial fishing license or permit. Subsection (g) prohibits a person from subsistence fishing or hunting unless the person has a current subsistence license in possession or is a dependent hunting or fishing with the license holder. Subsection (h) makes subsistence licenses nontransferable.

Proposed AS 16.05.259(a) provides for expiration of subsistence licenses five years after issuance. Subsection (b) requires annual validation of subsistence licenses by a fish and game employee or agent to assure that license holders continue to meet qualifications for the license. Subsection (c) requires the department to revoke all subsistence licenses of a person who is convicted of a fish or game violation, who makes a false statement on a subsistence license applications, who holds two or more licenses impermissibly, or who alter or lends a subsistence license. Subsection (d) makes persons whose licenses are subject to revokation under subsection (c), and persons convicted of subsistence fishing or hunting without a license, ineligible to apply for a subsistence license, with length of the the period of ineligibility varying with the number of convictions.

Sec. 5 makes it a class B misdemeanor to hold two licenses impermissibly, to subsistence fish or hunt without a license, or to alter or lend a subsistence license.

Sec. 6 excludes subsistence hunting from the provisions of AS 16.05.330 - 16.05.430, which currently govern sport fishing, hunting, and trapping.

SUBJECT: Subsistence fishing and hunting

TO: Kurt Dzinich
Senate Advisory Council

FROM: Edward H. Hein EHA
Legislative Counsel

Bill Hall of your staff has referred to me several questions from Senator Abood about subsistence fishing and hunting. The questions and my responses follow.

1. What are the present statutes and regulations for the Department of Fish and Game and the Fish and Game Boards regarding subsistence?

I have enclosed copies of the statutes and regulations relating to subsistence.

2. Does the Alaska Supreme Court ruling (the Madison decision) conflict with statutes? How?

3. Do the regulations conflict with State Statutes? In what way?

The decision in Madison v. Alaska Department of Fish and Game, 696 P.2d 168 (Alaska, 1985), does not "conflict" with the statutes. What can be said is that the court in Madison interpreted the subsistence fishing statutes differently than the Board of Fisheries and the Department of Fish and Game has been interpreting them. The court concluded that the statutes did not authorize the board to limit the subsistence priority initially to persons in rural communities, which the board had effectively done through its regulations. The court held that a regulation relating to Cook Inlet subsistence fishing (5 AAC 01.587) is invalid because it is inconsistent with AS 16.05.251(b), 16.05.940(22), and 16.05.940(23), and inconsistent with the legislature's intent in enacting the 1978 subsistence law. The court found that the intent of the subsistence law was to protect subsistence users and to give them a priority over other fisheries resources users when there is a shortage of these resources. The court also found that qualifying for subsistence use could not be made to depend initially on where in the state a person resided. The state may distinguish among subsistence users and restrict or even eliminate subsistence use of a particular resource when necessary to manage the resources on a sustained-yield basis, but only after eliminating all other types of takings of the resource. Because the criteria for Cook Inlet subsistence fishing set out in 5 AAC 01.597 had the effect of limiting the subsistence priority to residents of rural communities from the outset, the court held the regulation invalid for going beyond the authority conferred to the board by statute.

4. How does the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act (ANILCA) fit in?

Title VIII of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act, 16 U.S.C. 3111 - 3126 (P.L. 96-487, "ANILCA"), regulates subsistence management and use on federal public land in Alaska. Among the stated goals of this portion of the Act is the "continuation of the opportunity for subsistence uses by rural residents of Alaska, including both Natives and non-Natives". Sec. 801. In order to further the achievement of that goal, the Act establishes a preference for rural subsistence users.

The Act does not define "rural", but the report of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee (Senate Report No. 96-413, November 14, 1979) aids in the understanding of what the Congress had in mind:

> Although many residents of cities such as Ketchikan, Juneau, Anchorage, and Fairbanks harvest renewable resources from the public lands for personal or family consumption, by its very nature a "subsistence use" is something done only by Native and non-Native residents of "rural" Alaska. The Committee adopted an amendment to clarify this point by limiting application of the definition to areas of "rural" Alaska including communities such as Dillingham, Behtel, Nome, Kotzebue, Barrow, and other Native and non-Native villages scattered throughout the State. However, the Committee > does not intend to imply that the rural nature of such communities is a static condition; the direction of the economic development and rural character of such communities may change over time. It should be emphasized that this amendment is not intended to impose a "durational" rural residency requirement in the definition or impede the traditional movement of Alaska residents between the rural areas and the major population centers and vice versa. Nor does the amendment prohibit the taking of fish and wildlife on certain public lands by normal residents. Rather, nonsubsistence uses may continue in accordance with existing law but do not enjoy any preference eon the public lands, and, consequently, may be restricted pursuant to Section 804 when necessary to protect subsistence resources or to ensure the satisfaction of the subsistence needs of rural residents. (Page 233).

State law until Madison effectively limited the subsistence priority to residents of rural communities. But the Court has said that such a restriction is not allowed under the state statutes unless non-subsistence uses of fish and game are first eliminated and even then, only if sustained-yield is jeopardized. To maintain subsistence management authority on federal land in Alaska the state laws must be consistent with the federal requirements, i.e., must provide a subsistence priority for rural residents. Because Madison ruled that state statutes do not authorize such compliance with ANILCA, there is at least some risk that the state could lose subsistence management authority over federal land in Alaska (and accompanying federal funds) if the legislature fails to amend existing statutes and allow the Boards of Fisheries and Game to comply. ANILCA authorizes "local residents and other persons and organizations aggrieved by a failure of the State or the Federal Government to provide for the priority for subsistence uses" by rural residents to bring an expedited suit in federal district court to require that the priority be protected. Sec. 807. This means that the federal government could be forced by the courts to resume subsistence fish and game management on federal land in Alaska even if the government doesn't want to.

5. What options are currently available to Fish and Game?

The Department of Fish and Game and the Boards of Fisheries and Game have no option but to comply with state statutes, as interpreted by the Alaska Supreme Court in Madison. They are still under a constitutional duty to manage fish and game resources in accordance with sustained-yield principles. In doing this they may, if necessary, restrict takings for non-subsistence uses, then takings for subsistence uses. Without further authorization from the legislature, the department and the boards may not initially limit the subsistence priority to rural residents as provided in ANILCA.

(11) establishing the times and dates during which the issuance of fishing licenses, permits and registrations and the transfer of permits and registrations between registration areas is allowed; however, this paragraph does not apply to permits issued or transferred under AS 16.43.

(b) The Board of Fisheries shall adopt regulations in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62) permitting the taking of fish for subsistence uses unless the board determines, in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act, that adoption of the regulations will jeopardize or interfere with the maintenance of fish stocks on a sustained-yield basis. Whenever it is necessary to restrict the taking of fish to assure the maintenance of fish stocks on a sustained-yield basis, or to assure the continuation of subsistence uses of such resources, subsistence use shall be the priority use. If further restriction is necessary, the board shall establish restrictions and limitations on and priorities for these consumptive uses on the basis of the following criteria:

(1) customary and direct dependence upon the resource as the mainstay of one's livelihood;

(2) local residency; and

(3) availability of alternative resources.

(c) If the Board of Fisheries denies a petition or proposal to amend, adopt, or repeal a regulation, the board, upon receiving a written request from the sponsor of the petition or proposal, shall in addition to the requirements of AS 44.62.230 provide a written explantion for the denial to the sponsor not later than 30 days after the board has officially met and denied the sponsor's petition or proposal, or 30 days after receiving the request for an explanation, whichever is later. Effect of amendments. — The 1984 amendment, effective July 3, 1984, in subsection (a), substituted "bag limits, harvest levels, and sex and size limitations" for "and bag limits" in paragraph (3), deleted "engaging in biological research" from the beginning of paragraph (7), substituted "and management, conservation, protection, use, disposal, propagation and stocking of fish" for "fish management, protection, propagation and stocking" in paragraph (7), repealed paragraph (9), and renumbered former paragraphs (10)-(12) as present paragraphs (9)-(11). The amendment also added subsection (c).

Effect of amendments. — The 1983 amendment rewrote the existing language of this section and designated that language subsection (a) and added subsection (b).

Sec. 16.05.255. Regulations of the Board of Game. (a) The Board of Game may adopt regulations it considers advisable in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62) for

(1) setting apart game reserve areas, refuges and sanctuaries in the waters or on the lands of the state over which it has jurisdiction, subject to the approval of the legislature;

(2) establishing open and closed seasons and areas for the taking of game;

(3) establishing the means and methods employed in the pursuit, capture and transport of game;

(4) setting quotas and bag limits on the taking of game;

(5) classifying game as game birds, song birds, big game animals, fur bearing animals, predators or other categories;

(6) investigating and determining the extent and effect of predation and competition among game in the state, exercising control measures considered necessary to the resources of the state and designating game management units or parts of game management units in which bounties for predatory animals shall be paid;

(7) engaging in biological research, watershed and habitat improvement, and game management, protection, propagation and stocking;

(8) entering into cooperative agreements with educational institutions and state, federal, or other agencies to promote game research, management, education, and information and to train persons for game management;

(9) prohibiting the live capture, possession, transport, or release of native or exotic game or their eggs;

(10) establishing the times and dates during which the issuance of game licenses, permits and registrations and the transfer of permits and registrations between registration areas and game management units or subunits is allowed.

(b) The Board of Game shall adopt regulations in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62) permitting the taking of game for subsistence uses unless the board determines, in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act, that adoption of the regulations will jeopardize or interfere with the maintenance of game resources on a sustained-yield basis. Whenever it is necessary to restrict the taking of game to assure the maintenance of game resources on a sustained-yield basis, or to assure the continuation of subsistence uses of such resources, subsistence use shall be the priority use. If further restriction is necessary, the board shall establish restrictions and limitations on and priorities for these consumptive uses on the basis of the following criteria:

(1) customary and direct dependence upon the resource as the mainstay of one's livelihood;

(2) local residency; and

(3) availability of alternative resources. (§ 3 ch 206 SLA 1975; am § 5 ch 151 SLA 1978)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Establishment of quotas must be in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62). State v. Tanana Valley Sportsmen's Ass'n, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1716 (File No. 3433), 583 P.2d 854 (1978).

Sec. 16.05.256. Nonresident and nonresident alien permits. Whenever it is necessary to restrict the taking of big game so that the opportunity for Alaska residents to take big game can be reasonably satisfied in accordance with sustained yield principles, the Board of Game may, through a permit system, limit the taking of big game by nonresidents and nonresident aliens to accomplish that purpose. (§ 3 ch 74 SLA 1982)

Sec. 16.05.257. Subsistence hunting regulations. (a) The Board of Game, at its regularly scheduled annual meeting and other meetings held under authority of AS 16.05.300(a), shall consider and may adopt regulations providing for subsistence hunting in a game management unit or subunit or a portion of a unit or subunit upon

(1) recommendation of the department, based on biological evidence;

(2) the recommendation of the active local advisory committees for that game management unit or subunit or a portion of a unit or subunit;

(3) the written petition of not less than 100 interested residents of that game management unit or subunit; or

(4) the written petition of not less than 25 interested residents of an area which is requested for establishment as a subsistence area within a game management unit or subunit.

(1) the establishment of subsistence hunting areas;

(2) the regulation of transportation methods and means to protect subsistence hunting within subsistence hunting areas, including the prohibition or limitation of pack animals, mechanized vehicles and aircraft, other than watercraft or wheeled vehicles operating on a road maintained by public funds;

(3) the establishment of open and closed seasons and areas to protect subsistence hunting;

(4) the limitation of hunting to only one sex of the animal.

(c) Regulations may not be adopted by the Board of Game under (a), (b) or (f) of this section unless, in addition to the requirements of AS 44.62.180 — 44.62.290, the department

(1) holds public hearings, after reasonable notice, at least 30 days before the meeting at which the regulation is to be adopted, with at least one of the hearings being held in close proximity to the area potentially affected;

(2) presents at the hearings the information provided for in (e) of this section;

(3) makes the information provided for in (e) of this section available to the appropriate advisory committees and to petitioners if consideration of adoption of regulations was prompted by petitions under (a)(3) or (4) of this section; comments shall be received by the board until 10 days before any adoption of regulations.

(d) A petition submitted under (a)(3) — (4) of this section shall contain a complete description of the area requested as a subsistence area and a specification of the species within the area considered necessary for subsistence use. A petition or recommendation made under (a)(2), (3) or (4) of this section must be filed with the department at least 75 days before the meeting of the board at which the petition or recommendation is to be considered.

(e) The department shall investigate, by collecting existing data, and, when necessary, conducting new studies, every petition or recommendation made under (a)(2), (3) or (4) of this section to the extent practicable within the time available and provide the following information:

(1) the concentration of the species to be affected and carrying capacity of the area to be affected;

(2) the current hunting practices in the area, including numbers of animals taken and by what methods and means and whether the take is subsistence or recreational;

(3) the dependence of persons in the area for subsistence use of a species;

(4) the population trends of the affected fish and game in the area;

(5) whether the affected fish and game population is able to support a nonsubsistence harvest; and

(6) other information considered necessary by the section of subsistence hunting and fishing.

(f) The Board of Game at any time may review and change the boundaries of a subsistence area upon

(1) the recommendation of the department, based on biological evidence;

(2) the written petition of not less than 25 interested residents of that area; or

(3) the majority vote of the active local advisory committees for that area.

(g) The department shall submit a report to the legislature during the first 10 days of each legislative session beginning after January 1, 1977. The report shall include, but is not limited to, a listing of the specific subsistence areas established or modified during the preceding year and the species subject to subsistence use within those areas.

(h) In this section

(1) "subsistence hunting" means the taking of game animals by a state resident for subsistence uses by means defined by the Board of Game;

(2) "subsistence hunting area" means an area in which only subsistence hunting of the affected species is permitted and which is managed for maximum food potential.

(i) The Board of Game may not make a decision denying, creating or changing a subsistence hunting area unless the decision is based on specific written findings of fact regarding all the information provided in accordance with (e) of this section. NOTES TO DECISIONS

Regulations adopted under this section must be in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62). State v. Tanana Valley Sportsmen's Ass'n, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1716 (File No. 3433), 583 P.2d 854 (1978).

While this section, which authorizes the Board of Game to adopt regulations providing for subsistence hunting, does not specifically refer to the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62), it appears clear that it merely sets forth an additional purpose for which regulations may be promulgated. State v. Tanana Valley Sportsmen's Ass'n, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1716 (File No. 3433), 583 P.2d 854 (1978).

Issuance of permits based on verbal instructions to agents held improper. — The issuance of permits for the killing of caribou in certain specified areas of the state based on verbal instructions to the permit agents as to the need of individual applicants does not conform to requirements of the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62). State v. Tanana Valley Sportsmen's Ass'n, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1716 (File No. 3433), 583 P.2d 854 (1978).

(2) "barter" means the exchange or trade of fish or game, or their parts, taken for subsistence uses

(A) for other fish or game or their parts; or

(B) for other food or for nonedible items other than money if the exchange is of a limited and noncommercial nature;

(3) "a board" means either the Board of Fisheries or the Board of Game;

(4) "commercial fisherman" means an individual who fishes commercially for, takes, or attempts to take fish, shellfish, or other fishery resources of the state by any means, and includes every individual aboard a boat operated for fishing purposes who participates directly or indirectly in the taking of these raw fishery products, whether participation is on shares or as an employee or otherwise; however, this definition does not apply to anyone aboard a licensed vessel as a visitor or guest who does not directly or indirectly participate in the taking; and the term "commercial fisherman" includes the crews of tenders or other floating craft used in transporting fish;

(5) "commercial fishing" means the taking, fishing for, or possession of fish, shellfish, or other fishery resources with the intent of disposing of them for profit, or by sale, barter, trade, or in commercial channels; the failure to have a valid subsistence permit in possession, if required by statute or regulation, is considered prima facie evidence of commercial fishing if commercial fishing gear as specified by regulation is involved in the taking, fishing for, or possession of fish, shellfish, or other fish resources;

(6) "commissioner" means the commissioner of fish and game unless specifically provided otherwise;

(7) "department" means the Department of Fish and Game unless specifically provided otherwise;

(8) "domestic mammals" include musk oxen, bison, and reindeer, if they are lawfully owned;

(9) "fish" means any species of aquatic finfish, invertebrate, or amphibian, in any stage of its life cycle, found in or introduced into the state, and includes any part of such aquatic finfish, invertebrate, or amphibian;

(10) "fish derby" means a contest in which prizes are awarded for catching fish;

(11) "fishing derby association" means a civic, service, or charitable organization in the state, not for pecuniary profit, whose primary purpose is to promote interest in fishing for recreational purposes and which has been in existence for five years before applying for a permit under this chapter, but does not include an organization formed or operated for gaming or gambling purposes;

(12) "fish or game farming" means the business of propagating, breeding, raising, or producing fish or game in captivity for the purpose of marketing the fish or game or their products, and "captivity" means having the fish or game under positive control, as in a pen, pond, or an area of land or water which is completely enclosed by a generally escape-proof barrier;

(13) "fur dealing" means engaging in the business of buying, selling, or trading in animal skins, but does not include the sale of animal skins by a trapper or hunter who has legally taken the animal, or the purchase of animal skins by a person, other than a fur dealer, for the person's own use;

(14) "game" means any species of bird, reptile, and mammal, including a feral domestic animal, found or introduced in the state, except domestic birds and mammals; and game may be classified by regulation as big game, small game, fur bearers or other categories considered essential for carrying out the intention and purposes of AS 16.05 — AS 16.40;

(15) "hunting" means the taking of game under AS 16.05 — AS 16.40 and the regulations adopted under those chapters;

(16) "nonresident" means a person who is not a resident of the state;

(17) "nonresident alien" means a person who is not a citizen of the United States and whose permanent place of abode is not in the United States;

(18) "operator" means the individual by law made responsible for the operation of the vessel;

(19) "resident" means a person who for 12 consecutive months has maintained a permanent place of abode in the state and who has continually maintained a voting residence in the state; and in the case of a partnership, association, joint stock company, trust, or corporation, "resident" means one that has its main office or headquarters in the state; however, a member of the military service who has been stationed in the state for the preceding 12 consecutive months is a resident for the purposes of this paragraph, and the dependent of a resident member of the military service, who has been living in the state for the preceding year is a resident for the purposes of this paragraph, and a person who is an alien but who for one year has maintained a permanent place of abode in the state is a resident for the purposes of this paragraph;

(20) "seizure" means the actual or constructive taking or possession of real or personal property subject to seizure under AS 16.05 — AS 16.40 by an enforcement or investigative officer charged with enforcement of the fish and game laws of the state;

(21) "sport fishing" means the taking of or attempting to take for personal use, and not for sale or barter, any fresh water, marine, or anadromous fish by hook and line held in the hand, or by hook and line with the line attached to a pole or rod which is held in the hand or closely attended, or by other means defined by the Board of Fisheries;

(22) "subsistence fishing" means the taking of, fishing for, or possession of fish, shellfish, or other fisheries resources for subsistence uses with gill net, seine, fish wheel, long line, or other means defined by the Board of Fisheries;

(23) "subsistence uses" means the customary and traditional uses in Alaska of wild, renewable resources for direct personal or family consumption as food, shelter, fuel, clothing, tools, or transportation, for the making and selling of handicraft articles out of nonedible by-products of fish and wildlife resources taken for personal or family consumption, and for the customary trade, barter, or sharing for personal or family consumption; for the purposes of this paragraph, "family" means all persons related by blood, marriage, or adoption, and any person living within the household on a permanent basis;

(24) "take" means taking, pursuing, hunting, fishing, trapping, or in any manner disturbing, capturing, or killing or attempting to take, pursue, hunt, fish, trap, or in any manner capture or kill fish or game;

(25) "taxidermy" means tanning, mounting, processing, or other treatment or preparation of fish or game, or any part of fish or game, as a trophy, for monetary gain, including the receiving of the fish or game or parts of fish or game for such purposes;

(26) "trapping" means the taking of mammals declared by regulation to be fur bearers;

(27) "vessel" means a floating craft powered, towed, rowed, or otherwise propelled, which is used for delivering, landing, or taking fish within the jurisdiction of the state, but does not include aircraft. (§ 2 art I ch 95 SLA 1959; am §§ 1 — 4 ch 131 SLA 1960; am § 1 ch 21 SLA 1961; am §§ 1, 2 ch 102 SLA 1961; § 9 art III ch 94 SLA 1959; am § 23 ch 131 SLA 1960; am § 1 ch 160 SLA 1962; am §§ 13, 14 ch 31 SLA 1963; am § 2 ch 32 SLA 1968; am § 3 ch 73 SLA 1970; am § 1 ch 91 SLA 1970; am § 4 ch 110 SLA 1970; am § 1 ch 90 SLA 1972; am § 5 ch 82 SLA 1974; am §§ 26, 82 ch 127 SLA 1974; am §§ 18 — 20 ch 206 SLA 1975; am § 12 ch 105 SLA 1977; am §§ 14, 15 ch 151 SLA 1978; am § 1 ch 78 SLA 1979; am § 1 ch 24 SLA 1980; § 4 ch 74 SLA 1982; am § 24 ch 132 SLA 1984)

Effect of amendments. — The 1984 amendment, effective July 3, 1984, substituted "AS 16.05 — AS 16.40" for "this chapter" in the introductory language and paragraphs (14), (15) and (20); in paragraph (9), substituted "invertebrate, or amphibian" for "invertebrates and amphibians" and "its" for "their" preceding "life cycle" and added the language beginning "and includes any part of such aquatic finfish"; reworded the contents of paragraph (13); inserted "reptile" near the beginning of paragraph (14); substituted "those chapters" for "it" in paragraph (15); substituted "this paragraph" for "this chapter" in three places in paragraph (19); inserted "of" following "taking" in paragraph (22); deleted "for the purposes of this chapter" preceding "does not include aircraft" in paragraph (27); and repealed paragraph (28), defining "visitor."

Editor's notes. — Section 1, ch. 111, SLA 1974, provides: "It is the intent of this Act to authorize the private ownership of salmon hatcheries by qualified nonprofit corporations for the purpose of contributing, by artificial means, to the rehabilitation of the state's depleted and depressed salmon fishery. The program shall be operated without adversely affecting natural stocks of fish in the state and under a policy of management which allows reasonable segregation of returning hatchery-reared salmon from naturally occurring stocks."

For legislative findings concerning salmon enhancement and purpose of AS 16.10.375 — 16.10.620, see § 1, ch. 59, SLA 1979, in the 1979 Temporary and Special Acts and Resolves.

Sec. 16.10.375. Regional salmon plan. The commissioner shall designate regions of the state for the purpose of salmon production and have developed and amend as necessary a comprehensive salmon plan for each region, including provisions for both public and private nonprofit hatchery systems. Subject to plan approval by the commissioner, comprehensive salmon plans shall be developed by regional planning teams consisting of department personnel and representatives of the appropriate qualified regional associations formed under AS 16.10.380. (§ 2 ch 161 SLA 1976; am § 2 ch 154 SLA 1977)

Sec. 16.10.380. Regional associations. (a) The commissioner shall assist in and encourage the formation of qualified regional associations for the purpose of enhancing salmon production. A regional association is qualified if the commissioner determines that

(1) it is comprised of associations representative of commercial fishermen in the region;

(2) it includes representatives of other user groups interested in fisheries within the region who wish to belong; and

(3) it possesses a board of directors which includes no less than one representative of each user group that belongs to the association.

(b) In this section "user group" includes, but is not limited to, sport fishermen, processors, commercial fishermen, subsistence fishermen, and representatives of local communities.

(c) A qualified regional association, when it becomes a nonprofit corporation under AS 10.20.005 — 10.20.725, is established as a service area in the unorganized borough under AS 29.03.020 for the purpose of providing salmon enhancement services. (§ 2 ch 161 SLA 1976; am § 2 ch 59 SLA 1979)

Effect of amendments. — The 1979 amendment added subsection (c).

TITLE 5.
FISH AND GAME

Editor's Note: Due to the frequency of regulatory changes in fish and game matters, section, subsection, paragraph, and subparagraph designations in 5 AAC have in many cases been re-used following repeal of the earlier material in those provisions.

Editor's Note: Beginning in 1980 with Register 75, history notes are being supplied for fish and game regulations as they are being amended or adopted.

any means, or for any purpose, is prohibited within 300 feet of any dam, fish ladder, weir, culvert or other artificial obstruction.

(l) The taking of rainbow trout and steelhead is prohibited.

(f) The use of explosives and chemicals is prohibited.

(g) Subsistence fishing by the use of a line attached to a rod or pole is prohibited except when fishing through the ice on the Kotzebue-Northern, Norton Sound-Port Clarence, Yukon, Kuskokwim and Bristol Bay areas.

(h) Each subsistence fisherman shall plainly and legibly inscribe his first initial, last name, and address on his fishwheel, or on a keg or buoy attached to gill nets and other unattended subsistence fishing gear.

(i) All pots used to take fish must contain an opening in the webbing of a side wall of the pot which has been laced, sewn or secured together by untreated cotton twine or other natural fiber no larger than 120 thread, which upon deterioration or parting of the twine produces an opening in the web with a perimeter equal to or exceeding one-half of the tunnel eye opening perimeter.

(j) Persons licensed under AS 43.75.011 to engage in a fisheries business may not receive for commercial purposes or barter or solicit to barter for subsistence taken salmon or their parts. Further restrictions on the bartering of subsistence taken salmon or their parts may be implemented by emergency order for a specific time or area if circumvention of management programs is occurring because of illegal bartering activities.

(k) No person may use a gill net web that contains less than 30 filaments in the taking of salmon for subsistence purposes. (In effect before 1983; am 4/16/83, Reg. 86)

5 AAC 01.015. SUBSISTENCE FISHING PERMITS AND REPORTS. (a) Salmon may be taken only under the authority of a subsistence fishing permit issued by the commissioner or his local representative, unless a permit is specifically not required in a particular area by the subsistence regulations in this chapter, or unless the fisherman is retaining salmon from his commercial catch consistent with 5 AAC 01.020.

(b) If a subsistence fishing permit is required by this chapter, the following permit conditions apply unless otherwise specified by the subsistence fishing regulations in this chapter:

(1) the numbers of fish taken for subsistence use may not exceed the limits set out in the permit;

(2) permits must be obtained from a local representative of the department prior to subsistence fishing;

(3) permits must be retained in the possession of the permittee and be readily available for inspection while taking fish. A person who transports subsistence-taken fish shall have a subsistence fishing permit in his possession;

(4) the permit may designate the species and numbers of fish to be harvested, time and area of fishing, the type and amount of fishing gear and other conditions necessary for management or conservation purposes;

(5) if specified on the permit, each subsistence fisherman shall keep accurate daily records of the catch involved, showing the number of fish taken by species, location and date of the catch and such other information as the department may require for management or conservation purposes;

(6) subsistence fishing reports must be completed on forms provided by the department and submitted to the department office from which the permit was issued at a time specified by the department for each particular area and fishery;

(7) if applicable, the total annual possession limit for the permittee must be entered on each permit by the local representative of the department issuing the permit; if applicable, the local representative of the department issuing the permit shall require from an applicant documented

Cape Prince of Wales and west of 141° West longitude, including those waters draining into the Chukchi Sea and Arctic Ocean.

5 AAC 01.500. DESCRIPTION OF KODIAK AREA. The Kodiak area includes all waters of Alaska south of a line extending east from Cape Douglas (58° 52′ N. lat.), west of 150° W. long., north of 55° 30′ N. lat.; and east of the longitude of the southern entrance of Imuya Bay near Kilokak Rocks (156° 20′ 13″ W. long.).

Authority: AS 26.05.251(a)(2) and (b)

5 AAC 01.510. FISHING SEASONS AND WEEKLY FISHING PERIODS. (a) Salmon for subsistence purposes may be taken by seines and gill nets daily from 6:00 a.m. until 9:00 p.m. January 1 through December 31, except that purse-seine vessels registered for salmon net fishing may not be used to take salmon for subsistence purposes from June 1 through September 15.

(b) Repealed 6/30/83.

(c) Fish other than salmon may be taken at any time unless restricted by the terms of a subsistence fishing permit. (In effect before 1983, am 6/30/83, Reg. 86)

Authority: AS 16.05.251

5 AAC 01.520. LAWFUL GEAR AND GEAR SPECIFICATIONS. (a) Unless restricted by this section or under the terms of a subsistence fishing permit, fish may be taken by gear listed in 5 AAC 01.010(a).

(b) Salmon may only be taken by gill net and seine.

(c) Halibut may be taken only by a single hand-held line with not more than two hooks attached to it.

(d) Subsistence fishermen must be physically present at the net at all times the net is being fished.

Authority: AS 16.05.251(a)(2),(4),(7), (12) and (b)

5 AAC 01.525. WATERS CLOSED TO SUBSISTENCE FISHING. The following waters are closed to the subsistence taking of salmon:

(1) all waters of Mill Bay and all those waters bounded by a line from Spruce Cape to the northernmost point of Woody Island, then to the northernmost point of Holiday Island, then to a point on Near Island opposite the Kodiak small boat harbor entrance and then to the small boat harbor entrance;

(2) all freshwater systems of Little Afognak River and Portage Creek drainage in Discoverer Bay;

(3) repealed 4/13/80;

(4) all waters closed to commercial salmon fishing in the Barbara Cove, Chiniak Bay, Saltery Cove, Pasagshak Bay, Monashka Bay and Anton Larsen Bay as described in 5 AAC 18.350, and all waters closed to commercial salmon fishing within 100 yards of the termius of Selief Bay Creek and north and west of a line from the tip of Last Point to the tip of River Mouth Point in Afognak Bay;

(5) repealed 4/13/80;

(6) all waters 300 yards seaward of the terminus of Monks Creek.

Authority: AS 16.05.251(a)(2),(7),(10) and (b)

5 AAC 01.530. SUBSISTENCE FISHING PERMITS. (a) A subsistence fishing permit is required for taking salmon, trout and char for subsistence purposes. A subsistence fishing permit is required for taking herring and bottomfish for subsistence purposes during the commercial herring sac roe season from May 1 through June 30.

(b) A subsistence salmon fishing permit allows the holder to take 25 salmon plus an additional 25 salmon for each member of the same household whose names are listed on the permit. An additional permit may be obtained if it can be shown that more fish are needed.

(g) In that portion of the Kenai River from its mouth upstream to the Kenai bridge, herring may only be taken from April 1 through May 31.

(h) Repealed 6/30/83.

(i) Trout, grayling, char and burbot may not be taken for subsistence purposes in freshwater. (In effect before 1981; am 5/6/81, Reg. 78; am 5/17/81, Reg. 78; am 6/30/83, Reg. 86)

Authority: AS 16.05.251

5 AAC 01.570. LAWFUL GEAR AND GEAR SPECIFICATIONS. (a) Unless restricted in this section, 5 AAC 01.575, or under the terms of a subsistence fishing permit, fish may be taken by gear listed in 5 AAC 01.010(a).

(b) Salmon may be taken only as follows:

(1) in the Tyonek subdistrict, by set gill nets not exceeding 10 fathoms in length, six inches in mesh size, and 45 meshes in depth;

(2) in the Port Graham subdistrict, by set gill nets not exceeding 35 fathoms in length, six inches in mesh size, and 45 meshes in depth;

(A) repealed 5/17/81;

(B) repealed 5/17/81;

(C) repealed 5/17/81;

(3) no part of a set gill net may be set or operated within 600 feet of any part of another set gill net.

(d) In the Northern and Central districts, subsistence fishermen holding a subsistence permit must be physically present at the net at all times while the net is being fished.

(e) Bottomfish may be taken by legal gear for commercial bottomfish fishing in the area.

(f) In taking smelt

(1) the mesh size of gill nets may not exceed two inches and no gill net may exceed 50 feet in length except in the Kenai River no gill net may exceed 20 feet in length;

(2) dip nets may not be used in waters of the Kenai Peninsula;

(3) subsistence fishermen taking smelt in the Kenai River must be physically present at the net at all times the net is being fished.

(g) In taking herring

(1) the mesh size of gill nets may not exceed two inches and no gill net may exceed 50 feet in length;

(2) subsistence fishermen taking herring in the Kenai River must be physically present at the net at all times the net is being fished.

(h) Halibut may be taken only by a single hand-held line with not more than two hooks attached to it. (In effect before 1981; am 5/6/81, Reg. 78; am 5/17/81, Reg. 78)

Authority: AS 16.05.251(a)(2),(4),(7), (12) and (b)

5 AAC 01.575. WATERS CLOSED TO SUBSISTENCE FISHING. (a) The taking of salmon is prohibited in the following waters:

(1) those waters described in 5 AAC 39.290;

(2) all waters of the Northern district not part of the Tyonek subdistrict;

(3) the Seldovia Bay, Barbara Creek, Tutka Bay, Humpy Creek, and Northshore subdistricts of the Southern district;

(4) the Central, Kamishak Bay, Barren Island, Outer and Eastern districts.

(b) The taking of herring and smelt is prohibited in the Central district east of 152° West longitude and south of the latitude of Ninilchik. (In effect before 1981; am 5/6/81, Reg. 78; am 5/17/81, Reg. 78)

Authority: AS 16.05.251(a)(2),(7),(10) and (b)

5 AAC 01.580. SUBSISTENCE FISHING PERMITS. (a) Only one subsistence salmon fishing permit may be issued to each household per year

(1) subsistence salmon fishing permits for the Tyonek subdistrict will be issued only to those persons domiciled in the village of Tyonek; subsistence taking of a range of wild resources in proximity to the community or primary residency.

(b) The board will identify established geographic communities which may be participating in a subsistence system. The board will then apply all of the characteristics in (a) of this section to the communities and to subcommunities, groups and individuals within the communities to determine which uses are customary and traditional and therefore, which communities are eligible for the subsistence priority.

(c) For purposes of this section, a "community" is generally considered to be several households of full-time residents who all reside in a specific geographic area because of common interests. (Eff. 4/14/82, Reg. 82)

5 AAC 01.610. FISHING SEASONS. (a) Unless restricted in this section and 5 AAC 01.625, or unless restricted under the terms of a subsistence fishing permit, fish may be taken at any time in the Prince William Sound area.

(b) Salmon may be taken in the Upper Copper River District only as follows:

(1) in the Glennallen Subdistrict, from June 1 through September 30;

(2) in the Chitina Subdistrict, only when that subdistrict is open to personal use salmon fishing;

(3) when the Copper River subsistence fishery is closed or restricted because of an inadequate escapement of sockeye or chinook salmon, the fishery may be reopened September 1 for the taking of coho salmon, which constitute the majority of the salmon at that time.

(c) Repealed 6/30/83.

(d) Herring spawn on kelp may be taken only during the open commercial herring spawn on kelp season. (In effect before 1983; am 6/30/83, Reg. 86; am 4/28/84, Reg. 90)

Authority: AS 16.05.060
AS 16.05.251

5 AAC 01.620. LAWFUL GEAR AND GEAR SPECIFICATIONS. (a) Fish may be taken by gear listed in 5 AAC 01.010(a) unless restricted

(1) only one type of gear may be specified on a permit;

(2) only one permit per year may be issued to a household;

(3) permits must be returned to the department no later than October 31, or a permit for the following year may be denied as provided in 5 AAC 01.015(c);

(4) during closed fishing periods, the department's Chitina permit issuing station may be closed or operated at reduced hours to reduce manpower costs.

(f) The total annual possession limit for an Upper Copper River District subsistence salmon fishing permit is as follows:

(1) 30 salmon for a household with one person;

(2) 60 salmon for a household with two persons;

(3) 10 salmon for each additional person in a household over those specified in (2) of this subsection;

(4) upon request, permits for additional salmon will be issued with the following limits:

(A) no more than a total of 200 salmon for a permit issued to a household with one person;

(B) no more than a total of 500 salmon for a permit issued to a household with two or more persons. (In effect before 1982; am 4/14/82, Reg. 82; am 4/28/84, Reg. 90)

Authority: AS 16.05.251

5 AAC 01.640. MARKING OF SUBSISTENCE-TAKEN SALMON. No person may possess salmon taken under the authority of an Upper Copper River District subsistence fishing permit unless the dorsal fin has been immediately removed from the salmon. (Eff. 4/28/84, Reg. 90)

Authority: AS 16.05.251

5 AAC 01.645. SUBSISTENCE BAG AND POSSESSION LIMITS. (a) Possession limits for salmon in the Upper Copper River District are described in 5 AAC 01.630(f).

(b) In locations open to commercial salmon fishing and in conformance with commercial salmon fishing regulations, the annual subsistence salmon limit is as follows:

(1) 15 salmon for a household of one person;

(2) 30 salmon for a household of two persons;

(3) 10 salmon for each additional person in a household over those specified in (2) of this subsection;

(4) no more than five king salmon may be taken per permit.

(c) The daily bag and possession limit for halibut is two. No person may possess sport-taken and subsistence-taken halibut on the same day. (In effect before 1984; am 4/28/84, Reg. 90)

Authority: AS 16.05.251

5 AAC 01.647. COPPER RIVER SUBSISTENCE SALMON MANAGEMENT PLAN. (a) The purpose of this plan is to ensure that adequate escapement of salmon in the Copper River system occurs and that subsistence uses, as described under AS 16.05.251 and 5 AAC 99.010, are accommodated.

(b) The following are directives pertaining to the management of Copper River System salmon:

(1) this policy governs only those salmon which pass the department sonar counters located at the Million Dollar Bridge;

(2) the department will manage the Copper River commercial salmon fishery to attain a total escapement into the Copper River of 411,000 salmon to ensure that an adequate escapement reaches the spawning grounds and to provide for hatchery brood stock and for subsistence, personal use, and sport fisheries;

(3) repealed 4/28/84;

(4) repealed 4/28/84.
