HB296

In the past five years, the issue of victims' rights has received much attention in the media and in state legislatures. See ABA, Guidelines for Fair Treatment of Crime Victims and Witnesses (1983). A number of academic commentators have addressed the topic. See, e.g., Henderson, The Wrongs of Victim's Rights, 37 Stan. L. Rev. 937 (1985); Abrahamson, Redefining Roles: The Victim's Rights Movement, 1985 Utah L. Rev. 517 (1985); Victim's Rights Symposium, 11 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1 (1984). In 1984, the Alaska legislature passed an Act Relating to Victim's Rights and Amending Criminal Rule 32(d)(2) of the Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure. Section 4 ch. 154 SLA 1984. See AS 12.55.022;

THE CRIMINAL INJUSTICE SYSTEM

VICTIMS

MAY 13, 1987

Representative Dave Donley
P.O. Box V
Juneau, Alaska 99811

Dear Representative Donley,

Thank you for writing a victim's bill. In response to your bill I will use some of my personal experiences in responding. I hope this will help legislators to better see how some of the present laws are working on the streets.

Section 3. I trust section 3 includes this example. My brother does not work and has lived and supported himself from illegal gain most of his teenage and adult life. He now has a large inheritance. He bills most of his medical, hotels, etc. to our business. We turn it over to his trust officer. His trust officer informs us that he does not pay Tom's bills. He can give Tom the money to pay the bills, but if he chooses not pay too bad for the creditor. Tom's lifestyle has never supported the paying of bills. When my dad was alive he ended up helping Tom.

Rehabilitation is making a person responsible for his actions. Whatever means it takes the person who steals must be required to repay the victim, even to the extent of paying the medical or funeral of the victim. I wish there was a way that a prison could be centered around a gold mine or some money producing project. This would alleviate the state burden and keep idle time from the prisoners. Hard work would eliminate time to feed on pornography and other mind destroying materials.

Section 5 and section 15 are so important to help the healing process of the victim. In our case, I was first enraged that this young girl could come into my families private domain and brutally murder them and than have the right to determine if I could be a part of the trial!

Our mind is the biggest enemy or our biggest friend. When your loved ones die tragically there are so many unanswered questions that flood your mind and torment you. Whenever your life is not filled with business your mind wanders to those precious lives you love and their last moments. Knowing all the gorey details was the beginning of our healing. Not knowing keeps one in a quandary. After our $10,000 court battle, (which was so unfair and unjust) knowing was the most painful thing I ever experienced, yet

after I knew, and understood I found I thought about it less and was able to deal with the pain better. Not knowing you wonder, day dream and become even more preoccupied with your thoughts.

Section 6 defining victims to include family members is imperative. When a crime is committed against a person the extended family is also affected emotionally and must be considered.

Section 7 It is about time that the victim's rights are enumerated. We certainly are careful to make sure the criminal's rights are protected. The criminal forces himself on others, hurts others and is so protected! It is hard for the perpetrator to accept responsibility for his actions because of his rights. A sociopathic mind only becomes more manipulative.

Section 8 I like the idea of the prosecuting attorney having to conferring with the victim. The prosecuting attorney should also see the whole picture. He also needs to be aware of the victim's pain. Most prosecuting attorney's tend to want to avoid the victim's pain.

Section 9 It is important for the victim to be informed of the perpetrators jail time, bail, hearings etc. The more you know the better you learn to cope and protect yourself. It is most helpful to let the victim be a part of the parole hearing. The more the victim feels he has input the better he will accept the perpetrator's release even if they disagree. I found that writing the judge a letter concerning the sentencing of Winona and Cordell to be very helpful. We even had the relatives and friends do the same. It is an impactful release to the victim and family to feel that their feelings are considered.

Section 10 Especially in murder and violence the victim's family needs to know that the perpetrator is being released.

Section 11 I support. In some cases, the prisoner's residence address and employer might be misused, but should always be known in murder or violence cases. But whatever the charge, the conditions of parole should always be extended to the victim or close family members.

Section 12 (6) I totally support and if there is a question of safety to the victim upon the escape of the offender, somehow the state needs to provide protection for the victim.

VICTIMS

for Justice

Section 13 I totally support. Every close member of a family is so affected by tragedy they always need to be considered.

Section 15 absolutely needs to be put in place. No one should have to go through what I went through in our case.

Thank you Dave for writing this legislation. It has long been needed. I trust the rest of the legislators will agree. We will certainly try to support and help you with this legislation.

Sincerely,

Janice Lienhart

it was held that the introduction of a VIS at the sentencing phase of a capital murder trial violates the Eighth Amendment and therefore the Maryland statute is invalid to the extent that it requires consideration of this information, because this information is irrelevant to a capital sentencing decision and its admission creates a constitutionally unacceptable risk that the jury may impose the death penalty in an arbitrary and capricious manner, in that: (1) since the focus of a VIS is not on the defendant, but on the character and reputation of the victim and the effect on his family, factors which may be wholly unrelated to the blameworthiness of a particular defendant, allowing the jury to rely on a VIS therefore could result (a) in imposing the death sentence because of factors—such as the degree to which a family is willing and able to express its grief, or the relative worth of the victim's character—about which the defendant was unaware and that were irrelevant to the decision to kill, and (b) in diverting the jury's attention away from the defendant's background and record and from the circumstances of the crime; (2) it would be difficult, if not impossible, to provide a fair opportunity to rebut the evidence contained in the VIS without shifting the focus of the sentencing hearing away from the defendant; and (3) the formal presentation by the state of the information in the VIS can serve no other purpose than to inflame the jury and divert it from deciding the case on the relevant evidence concerning the crime and the defendant, the admission of the VIS being inconsistent with the reasoned decisionmaking required in capital cases.

WHITE, J., joined by REHNQUIST, Ch. J., and O'CONNOR and SCALIA, JJ., dissented, expressing the view that (1) the Maryland legislature's decision—that the jury should have the testimony of the victim's family in order to assist in weighing the degree of harm that the defendant has caused and the corresponding degree of punishment that should be inflicted—was entitled to particular deference, because in a democratic society, legislatures, not courts, are constituted to respond to the will and consequently the moral values of the people, and (2) if punishment can be enhanced in noncapital cases on the basis of the harm caused, irrespective of the offender's intention to cause such harm, there is no reason why the same approach is unconstitutional in death cases, in which the state has a legitimate interest in counteracting the mitigating evidence which the defendant is entitled to put in, by reminding the sentencer that just as the murderer should be considered as an individual, so too the victim is an individual whose death represents a unique loss to society and in particular to his family.

SCALIA, J., joined by REHNQUIST, Ch. J., and WHITE and O'CONNOR, JJ., dissented, expressing the view that (1) the principle—that the amount of harm one causes bears upon the extent of his personal responsibility—is not departed from where capital punishment is concerned, and (2) the principle upon which the court's opinion rests—that the imposition of capital punishment is to be determined solely on the basis of moral guilt—does not exist, either in the text of the Federal Constitution, in the historic practices of American society, or even in the opinions of the Supreme Court.

7a, 7b. The type of information contained in victim impact statements, that is, information which describes the effect of a crime on the victim and his family, may be admissible in a capital case, other than at the sentencing phase, because such information relates directly to the circumstances of the crime; facts about the victim and family may also be relevant in a noncapital criminal trial, and there may be times that the victim's personal characteristics are relevant to rebut an argument offered by the defendant; the trial judge has the primary responsibility for deciding when this information is sufficiently relevant to some legitimate consideration to be admissible, and when its probative value outweighs any prejudicial effect.

SYLLABUS BY REPORTER OF DECISIONS

Having found petitioner guilty of two counts of first-degree murder and related crimes, the jury sentenced him to death after considering a presentence report prepared by the State of Maryland. The report included a victim impact statement (VIS), as required by state statute. The VIS was based on interviews with the family of the two victims, and it provided the jury with two types of information. First, it described the severe emotional impact of the crimes on the family, and the personal characteristics of the victims. Second, it set forth the family members' opinions and characterizations of the crimes and of petitioner. The state trial court denied petitioner's motion to suppress the VIS, rejecting the argument that this information was irrelevant, unduly inflammatory, and therefore violative of the Eighth Amendment. The Maryland Court of Appeals affirmed petitioner's conviction and sentence, finding that the VIS did not inject an arbitrary factor into the sentencing decision. The court concluded that a VIS serves an important interest by informing the sentencer of the full measure of harm caused by the crime.

Held: The introduction of a VIS at the sentencing phase of a capital murder trial violates the Eighth Amendment, and therefore the Maryland statute is invalid to the extent it requires consideration of this information. Such information is irrelevant to a capital sentencing decision, and its admission creates a constitutionally unacceptable risk that the jury may impose the death penalty in an arbitrary and capricious manner.

(a) The State's contention that the presence or absence of emotional distress of the victims' family and the victims' personal characteristics are proper sentencing considerations in a capital case is rejected. In such a case, the sentencing jury must focus on the background and record of the accused and the particular circumstances of the crime. The VIS information in question may be wholly unrelated to the blame-worthiness of a partici and may cause the s sion to turn on irr such as the degree victim's family is will articulate its grief, worth of the victi Thus, the evidence in improperly divert th tion away from the de over, it would be c impossible, to provide nity to rebut such ev shifting the focus of hearing away from th

Thus the evidence in question could ir... properly divert the jury's atten- sion away from the defendant. Moreover, it would be difficult, if not impossible, to provide a fair opportunity to rebut such evidence without shifting the focus of the sentencing hearing away from the defendant.

(b) The admission of the family members' emotionally charged opinions and characterizations of the crimes could serve no other purpose than to inflame the jury and divert it from deciding the case on the relevant evidence concerning the crime and the defendant. Such admission is therefore inconsistent with the reasoned decisionmaking required in capital cases.

OPINION OF THE COURT

Justice Powell delivered the opinion of the Court.

[1a] The question presented is whether the Constitution prohibits a jury from considering a "victim impact statement" during the sentencing phase of a capital murder trial.

In 1983, Irvin Bronstein, 78, and his wife Rose, 75, were robbed and murdered in their West Baltimore home. The murderers, John Booth and Willie Reid, entered the victims' home for the apparent purpose of stealing money to buy heroin. Booth, a neighbor of the Bronsteins, knew that the elderly couple could identify him. The victims were bound and gagged, and then stabbed repeatedly in the chest with a kitchen knife. The bodies were discovered two days later by the Bronsteins' son.

A jury found Booth guilty of two counts of first-degree murder, two counts of robbery, and conspiracy to commit robbery.¹ The prosecution requested the death penalty, and Booth elected to have his sentence determined by the jury instead of the judge. See Md Ann Code, Art 27, § 413(b) (1982). Before the sentencing phase began, the State Division of Parole and Probation (DPP) compiled a presentence report that described Booth's background, education and employment history, and criminal record. Under a Maryland statute, the presentence report in all Bronstein. His conviction was affirmed and his sentence is currently under review. See Reid v State, 305 Md 9, 501 A2d 436 (1985).

felony cases' also must include a victim impact statement (VIS), describing the effect of the crime on the victim and his family. Md. Ann. Code, Art. 41, § 4-609(c) (1986). Specifically, the report shall:

"(i) Identify the victim of the offense;

"(ii) Itemize any economic loss suffered by the victim as a result of the offense;

"(iii) Identify any physical injury suffered by the victim as a result of the offense along with its seriousness and permanence;

"(iv) Describe any change in the victim's personal welfare or familial relationships as a result of the offense;

"(v) Identify any request for psychological services initiated by the victim or the victim's family as a result of the offense; and

"(vi) Contain any other information related to the impact of the offense upon the victim or the victim's family that the trial court requires." § 4-609(c)(3).

Although the VIS is compiled by the DPP, the information is supplied by the victim or the victim's family. See § 4-609(c)(4), (d). The VIS may be read to the jury during the sentencing phase, or the family members may be called to testify as to the information.

The VIS in Booth's case was based on interviews with the Bronsteins' son, daughter, son-in-law, and granddaughter. Many of their comments emphasized the victims' outstanding personal qualities, and noted how deeply the Bronsteins would be missed.² Other parts of the VIS described the emotional and personal problems the family members have faced as a result of the crimes. The son, for example, said that he suffers from lack of sleep and depression, and is "fearful for the first time in his life." App 61. He said that in his opinion, his parents were "butchered like animals." Ibid. The daughter said she also suffers from lack of sleep, and that since the murders

2. When the statute was enacted it was unclear whether a VIS was admissible in a capital case. See § 4-609(c)(2)(i) (1986) (VIS required if victim suffered injury, whereas for a misdemeanor, VIS required if victim suffers injury or death); Lodowski v State, 302 Md 691, 761, 490 A2d 1228, 1264 (1985) (Cole, J., concurring), vacated on other grounds, 475 US —, 89 L Ed 2d 711, 106 S Ct 1452 (1986). In 1983, the Maryland General Assembly amended the VIS provision to provide that:

"In any case in which the death penalty is requested . . . a presentence investigation, including a victim impact statement, shall be completed by the Division of Parole and Probation, and shall be considered by the court or jury before whom the separate sentencing proceeding is conducted . . ." § 4-609(d) (1986).

3. The VIS stated:

"[T]he victims' son reports that his parents had been married for fifty-three years and enjoyed a very close relationship, spending each day together. He states that his father had worked hard all his life and had been retired for eight years. He describes his mother as a woman who was young at heart and never seemed like an old lady. She taught herself to play bridge when she was in her seventies. The victims' son relates that his parents were amazing people who attended the senior citizens' center and made many devout friends." she has become withdrawn and distrustful. She stated that she can no longer watch violent movies or look at kitchen knives without being reminded of the murders. The daughter concluded that she could not forgive the murderer, and that such a person could "[n]ever be rehabilitated." Id., at 62. Finally, the granddaughter described how the deaths had ruined the wedding of another close family member, that took place a few days after the bodies were discovered. Both the ceremony and the reception were sad affairs, and instead of leaving for her honeymoon, the bride attended the victims' funeral. The VIS also noted that the granddaughter had received counseling for several months after the incident, but eventually had stopped because she concluded that "no one could help her." Id., at 63.

[2a] The DPP official who conducted the interviews concluded the VIS by writing:

"It became increasingly apparent to the writer as she talked to the family members that the murder of Mr. and Mrs. Bronstein is still such a shocking, painful, and devastating memory to them that it permeates every aspect of their daily lives. It is doubtful that they will ever be able to fully recover from this tragedy and not be haunted by the memory of the brutal manner in which their loved ones were murdered and taken from them." Id., at 63-64.⁴

Defense counsel moved to suppress the VIS on the ground that this information was both irrelevant and unduly inflammatory, and that therefore its use in a capital case violated the Eighth Amendment of the Federal Constitution.⁵ The Maryland trial court denied the motion, ruling that the jury was entitled to consider "any and all evidence which would bear on the [sentencing decision]." Id., at 6. Booth's lawyer then requested that the prosecutor simply read the VIS to the jury rather than call the family members to testify before the jury. Defense counsel was concerned that the use of live witnesses would increase the inflammatory effect of the information. The prosecutor agreed to this arrangement.

The jury sentenced Booth to death for the murder of Mr. Bronstein and to life imprisonment for the murder of Mrs. Bronstein. On automatic appeal, the Maryland Court of Appeals affirmed the conviction and the sentences. Booth v State, 306 Md 172, 507 A2d 1098 (1986). The court rejected Booth's claim that the VIS injected an arbitrary factor into the sentencing decision. The court noted that it had considered this argument in Lodowski v State, 302 Md 691, 490 A2d 1228 (1985), vacated on other grounds, 475 US —, 89 L Ed 2d 711, 106 S Ct 1452 (1986), and concluded that a VIS serves an important interest by informing the sentencer of the full measure of harm caused by the crime. The Court of Appeals then examined the VIS in Booth's case, and concluded that it is a "relatively straightfor-sual punishments inflicted." The prohibitions of the Eighth Amendment apply to the States through the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. See Robinson v California, 370 US 660, 666, 8 L Ed 2d 758, 82 S Ct 1417 (1962).

It held that the death sentence had not been imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or other arbitrary factors. See Md Ann Code, Art 27, § 414(e)(1) (1982).

We granted certiorari to decide whether the Eighth Amendment prohibits a capital sentencing jury from considering victim impact evidence. 479 US —, 93 L Ed 2d 246, 107 S Ct 269 (1986). We conclude that it does, and now reverse.

II

[3, 4] It is well-settled that a jury's discretion to impose the death sentence must be "suitably directed and limited so as to minimize the risk of wholly arbitrary and capricious action." Gregg v Georgia, 428 US 153, 189, 49 L Ed 2d 859, 96 S Ct 2909 (1976) (joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and Stevens, JJ.); California v Ramos, 463 US 992, 999, 77 L Ed 2d 1171, 103 S Ct 3446 (1983). Although this Court normally will defer to a state legislature's determination of what factors are relevant to the sentencing decision, the Constitution places some limits on this discretion. See, e.g., id., at 1000-1001, 77 L Ed 2d 1171, 103 S Ct 3446. Specifically, we have said that a jury must make an "individualized determination" of whether the defendant in question should be executed, based on "the character of the individual and the circumstances of the crime." Zant v Stephens, 462 US 862, 879, 77 L Ed 2d 235, 103 S Ct 2733 (1983) (emphasis in original). See also Eddings v Oklahoma, 455 US 104, 112, 71 L Ed 2d 1, 102 S Ct 869 (1982). And while this Court has never said that the defendant's record, characteristics, and the circumstances of the crime are the only permissible sentencing considerations, a state statute that requires consideration of other factors must be scrutinized to ensure that the evidence has some bearing on the defendant's "personal responsibility and moral guilt." Enmund v Florida, 458 US 782, 801, 73 L Ed 2d 1140, 102 S Ct 3368 (1982). To do otherwise would create the risk that a death sentence will be based on considerations that are "constitutionally impermissible or totally irrelevant to the sentencing process." See Zant v Stephens, supra, at 885, 77 L Ed 2d 235, 103 S Ct 2733.

[1b] The VIS in this case provided the jury with two types of information. First, it described the personal characteristics of the victims and the emotional impact of the crimes on the family. Second, it set forth the family members' opinions and characterizations of the crimes and the defendant. For the reasons stated below, we find that this information is irrelevant to a capital sentencing decision, and that its admission creates a constitutionally unacceptable risk that the jury may impose the death penalty in an arbitrary and capricious manner.

The greater part of the VIS is devoted to a description of the emotional trauma suffered by the family and the personal characteristics of the victims. The State claims that this evidence should be considered a "circumstance" of the crime because it reveals the full extent of the harm caused by Booth's actions. In the State's view, there is a direct, foreseeable nexus between the murders and the harm to the family, thus it is not "arbitrary" for the jury to consider these factors in deciding whether to impose the death penalty. Although "victim impact" is not an aggravating factor under Maryland law,⁶ the State claims that by knowing the impact upon the family and the loss to the family, the jury is better able to assess the "aggravating quality" of the crime. Brief for Respondent 21 (Dowds v State, supra, at 490 A2d, at 1254).

[1c, 5] While the full foreseeable consequences of the defendant's actions may be considered in other criminal and civil cases, the jury cannot agree that it is the unique circumstance of the sentencing hearing. In such cases, it is the function of the jury to "express the concerns of the community on the ultimate

6. Before the jury may impose the death sentence, it must find that at least one of the following aggravating circumstances exists:

"(1) The victim was a law enforcement officer who was murdered while performing his duties.

"(2) The defendant committed the crime at a time when he was confined in a penal institution.

"(3) The defendant committed the crime in furtherance of an escape or to escape from custody, or to evade the law.

"(4) The victim was taken or was to be taken in the course of a kidnapping, abduction, or an attempt to kidnap.

"(5) The victim was a child under the age of 12 years at the time of the violation of § 2 of this article.

"(6) The defendant committed the crime pursuant to an agreement or promise of remuneration or the promise of a reward to commit the murder.

"(7) The defendant engaged another person to commit the murder and the murder was committed pursuant to the agreement.

characteristics, the nature of the crime, the possible sentencing range, and the state statute that provides for the imposition of other factors. The State is authorized to ensure that the sentencing process is not biased by some bearing on the defendant's personal responsibility or "guilt." Enmund v Florida, 498 U.S. 801, 73 L Ed 2d 888, 48 S Ct 988 (1991). To do so, the State may take into account the risk that the defendant will be based on the facts are "constitutive or totally irrelevant to the sentencing process." Enmund, supra, at 885, 48 S Ct 988.

In this case provided the types of information described the personal characteristics of the victims and the nature of the crimes. Second, it set forth the State's opinions and the reasons for the crimes and that this information is relevant to a capital sentence and that its admission is constitutionally unacceptable. The jury may impose a capital sentence in an arbitrary manner.

Part of the VIS is the imposition of the emotion caused by the family characteristics of the State claims that the defendant should be considered a factor in the crime because of the extent of the harm to the family. In the VIS is a direct, foreseeable consequence of the murders and the harm to the family, and thus it is not "arbitrary" for the jury to consider these consequences in deciding whether to impose the death penalty. Although "victim impact" is not an aggravating factor under Maryland law,⁶ the State claims that by knowing the extent of the impact upon and the severity of the loss to the family, the jury was better able to assess the "'gravity or aggravating quality'" of the offense. Brief for Respondent 21 (quoting Lodowski v State, supra, at 741-742, 490 A.2d, at 1254).

[1c, 5] While the full range of foreseeable consequences of a defendant's actions may be relevant in other criminal and civil contexts, we cannot agree that it is relevant in the unique circumstance of a capital sentencing hearing. In such a case, it is the function of the sentencing jury to "express the conscience of the community on the ultimate ques-

6. Before the jury may impose a capital sentence, it must find that at least one of the following aggravating circumstances are present:

"(1) The victim was a law enforcement officer who was murdered while in the performance of his duties.

"(2) The defendant committed the murder at a time when he was confined in any correctional institution.

"(3) The defendant committed the murder in furtherance of an escape or an attempt to escape from custody, or to evade capture.

"(4) The victim was taken or attempted to be taken in the course of a kidnapping or abduction, or an attempt to kidnap or abduct.

"(5) The victim was a child abducted in violation of § 2 of this article.

"(6) The defendant committed the murder pursuant to an agreement or contract for remuneration or the promise of remuneration to commit the murder.

"(7) The defendant engaged or employed another person to commit the murder and the murder was committed pursuant to an agreement or contract for remuneration or the promise of remuneration. (8) At the time of the murder the defendant was under sentence of death or imprisonment for life. (9) The defendant committed more than one offense of murder in the first degree arising out of the same incident. (10) The defendant committed the murder while committing or attempting to commit a robbery, arson, rape, or sexual offense in the first degree. See Md Ann Code, Art 27, § 413(d) (1982 and Supp 1986). Because the impact of the crime on the victim is not a statutorily defined aggravating circumstance, it would not be sufficient, standing alone, to support a capital sentence. § 413(f).

7. As one state court has noted: "We think it obvious that a defendant's level of culpability depends not on fortuitous circumstances such as the composition of his victim's family, but on circumstances over which he has control. A defendant may choose, or decline, to premeditate, to act callously, to attack a vulnerable victim, to commit a crime while on probation, or to amass a record of offenses. . . . In contrast, the fact tion of life or death." Witherspoon v Illinois, 391 US 510, 519, 20 L Ed 2d 776, 88 S Ct 1770, 46 Ohio Ops 2d 368 (1968). When carrying out this task the jury is required to focus on the defendant as a "uniquely individual human being[.]" Woodson v North Carolina, 428 US 280, 304, 49 L Ed 2d 944, 96 S Ct 2978 (1976) (plurality opinion of Stewart, Powell, and Stevens, JJ.). The focus of a VIS, however, is not on the defendant, but on the character and reputation of the victim and the effect on his family. These factors may be wholly unrelated to the blameworthiness of a particular defendant. As our cases have shown, the defendant often will not know the victim, and therefore will have no knowledge about the existence or characteristics of the victim's family. Moreover, defendants rarely select their victims based on whether the murder will have an effect on anyone other than the person murdered.⁷ Allowing the jury to rely on a VIS therefore could result in imposing the death sentence because of factors about which the defendant was unaware, and that were irrelevant to the decision to kill. This evidence thus could divert the jury's attention away from the defendant's background and record, and the circumstances of the crime.

[1d, 6] It is true that in certain cases some of the information contained in a VIS will have been known to the defendant before he committed the offense. As we have recognized, a defendant's degree of knowledge of the probable consequences of his actions may increase his moral culpability in a constitutionally significant manner. See Tison v Arizona, 481 US —, —, 95 L Ed 2d 127, 107 S Ct 1676 (1987). We nevertheless find that because of the nature of the information contained in a VIS, it creates an impermissible risk that the capital sentencing decision will be made in an arbitrary manner.

[1e] As evidenced by the full text of the VIS in this case, see Appendix to this opinion, the family members were articulate and persuasive in expressing their grief and the extent of their loss. But in some cases the victim will not leave behind a family, or the family members may be less articulate in describing their feelings even though their sense of loss is equally severe. The fact that that a victim's family is irredeemably bereaved can be attributable to no act of will of the defendant other than his commission of homicide in the first place. Such bereavement is relevant to damages in a civil action, but it has no relationship to the proper purposes of sentencing in a criminal case." People v Levitt, 156 Cal App 3d 500, 516-517, 203 Cal Rptr 276, 287-288 (1984).

the imposition of the death sentence may turn on such distinctions illustrates the danger of allowing juries to consider this information. Certainly the degree to which a family is willing and able to express its grief is irrelevant to the decision whether a defendant, who may merit the death penalty, should live or die. See 306 Md., at 223, 507 A2d, at 1129 (Cole, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) (concluding that it is arbitrary to make capital sentencing decisions based on a VIS, "which vary greatly from case to case depending upon the ability of the family member to express his grief").

Nor is there any justification for permitting such a decision to turn on the perception that the victim was a sterling member of the community rather than someone of questionable character.⁸ This type of information does not provide a "principled way to distinguish [cases] in which the death penalty was imposed, from the many cases in which it was not." Godfrey v Georgia, 446 US 420, 433, 64 L Ed 2d 398, 100 S Ct 1759 (1980) (opinion of Stewart, J.). See also Skipper v South Carolina, 476 US —, —, 90 L Ed 2d 1, 106 S Ct 1669 (1986) (Powell, J. concurring in judgment).

[1f, 7a] We also note that it would be difficult—if not impossible—to provide a fair opportunity to rebut such evidence without shifting the focus of the sentencing hearing away from the defendant. A threshold problem is that victim impact information is not easily susceptible to rebuttal. Presumably the defendant would have the right to cross-examine the declarants, but he rarely would be able to show that the family members have exaggerated the degree of sleeplessness, depression, or emotional trauma suffered. Moreover, if the state is permitted to introduce evidence of the victim's personal qualities,⁹ it cannot be doubted that the defendant also must be given the chance to rebut this evidence. See Gardner v Florida, 430 US 349, 362, 51 L Ed 2d 393, 97 S Ct 1197 (1977) (opinion of Stevens, J.) (due process requires that defendant be given a chance to rebut presentence report). See also, Md Ann Code, Art 27, § 413(c)(v) (1982). Putting aside the strategic risks of attacking the victim's character before the jury, in appropriate cases the defendant presumably would be

8. We are troubled by the implication that defendants whose victims were assets to their community are more deserving of punishment than those whose victims are perceived to be less worthy. Of course, our system of justice does not tolerate such distinctions. Cf. Furman v Georgia, 408 US 238, 242, 33 L Ed 2d 346, 1 S Ct 2726 (1972) (Douglas, J., concurring).

9. See n. 3, supra. The Maryland sentencing statute does not expressly permit evidence of the victim's character and community status to be included in the VIS. The Maryland Court of Appeals, however, apparently has determined that the statute only establishes the minimum amount of information that must be provided. Consideration of other information in the VIS is subject to the trial judge's discretion. See Reid v State, 302 Md. 811, 820-821, 490 A2d 1289, 1294 (1985).

This type of information is not unique to the VIS in Booth's case. In Lodowski v State, the trial court admitted a VIS based on an interview with the victim's wife that said in part:

"[The victim] was the perfect family person, he was totally devoted to his family. It was like a miracle to find a man like him—we had something very special. We had created a love that could withstand anything in life. We were not only husband and wife, but best friends." 302 Md., at 766, 490 A2d, at 1266 (Cole J., concurring)

The court in Lodowski found that VIS evipermitted to put on evidence that the victim was of dubious moral character, was unpopular, or was ostracized from his family. The prospect of a "mini-trial" on the victim's character is more than simply unappealing; it could well distract the sentencing jury from its constitutionally required task—determining whether the death penalty is appropriate in light of the background and record of the accused and the particular circumstances of the crime. We thus reject the contention that the presence or absence of emotional distress of the victim's family, or the victim's personal characteristics, are proper sentencing considerations in a capital case.¹⁰

[1g] The second type of information presented to the jury in the VIS was the family members' opinions and characterizations of the crimes. The Bronsteins' son, for example, dence in general is not constitutionally proscribed, and is relevant to a capital sentencing determination. Id., at 751, 752, 490 A2d, at 1259.

10. [7b] Our disapproval of victim impact statements at the sentencing phase of a capital case does not mean, however, that this type of information will never be relevant in any context. Similar types of information may well be admissible because they relate directly to the circumstances of the crime. Facts about the victim and family also may be relevant in a noncapital criminal trial. Moreover, there may be times that the victim's personal characteristics are relevant to rebut an argument offered by the defendant. See, e.g., Fed Rule Evid 404(a)(2) (prosecution may show peaceable nature of victim to rebut charge that victim was aggressor). The trial judge, of course, continues to have the primary responsibility for deciding when this information is sufficiently relevant to some legitimate consideration to be admissible, and when its probative value outweighs any prejudicial effect. Cf. Fed R Evid 403.

stated that his parents were "butchered like animals," and that he "doesn't think anyone should be able to do something like that and get away with it." App 61. The VIS also noted that the Bronstein's daughter:

"could never forgive anyone for killing [her parents] that way. She can't believe that anybody could do that to someone. The victims' daughter states that animals wouldn't do this. [The perpetrators] didn't have to kill because there was no one to stop them from looting. . . . The murders show the viciousness of the killers' anger. She doesn't feel that the people who did this could ever be rehabilitated and she doesn't want them to be able to do this again or put another family through this." Id., at 62.

One can understand the grief and anger of the family caused by the brutal murders in this case, and there is no doubt that jurors generally are aware of these feelings. But the formal presentation of this information by the State can serve no other purpose than to inflame the jury and divert it from deciding the case on the relevant evidence concerning the crime and the defendant. As we have noted, any decision to impose the death sentence must "be, and appear to be, based on reason rather than caprice or emotion." Gardner v Florida, supra, at 358, 51 L Ed 2d 393, 97 S Ct 1197 (opinion of Stevens, J.). The admission of these emotionally-charged opinions as to what conclusions the jury should draw from the evidence clearly is inconsistent with the reasoned decisionmaking we require in capital cases.¹¹

III

[1h] We conclude that the introduction of a VIS at the sentencing phase of a capital murder trial violates the Eighth Amendment, and therefore the Maryland statute is invalid to the extent it requires consideration of this information.¹² The decision of the Maryland Court of Appeals is vacated to the extent that it affirmed the capital sentence. The case is remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

It is so ordered.

11. The same problem is presented by the VIS summary written by the DPP, that might be viewed by the jury as representing the views of the State. As noted supra, at —, 96 L Ed 2d 447, the writer concluded that the crimes had a "shocking, painful, and devastating" effect on the family, and that "[i]t is doubtful that they will ever be able to fully recover." App 63-64. See Appendix to this opinion.

12. We note, however, that our decision today is guided by the fact death is a "punishment different from all other sanctions," see Woodson v North Carolina, 428 US 280, 303-304, 49 L Ed 2d 444, 96 S Ct 2978 (1976) (plurality opinion of Stewart, Powell, and Stevens, JJ.), and that therefore the considerations that inform the sentencing decision may be different from those that might be relevant to other liability or punishment determinations. At least 36 States permit the use victim impact statements in some contexts, reflecting a legislative judgment that the effect of the crime on victims should have a place in the criminal justice system. See National Organization for Victim Assistance, Victim Rights and Services: A Legislative Directory 32-33 (1985) (chart); McLeod, Victim Participation at Sentencing, 22 Crim L Bull 501, 507, and n 22 (1986). Congress also has provided for victim participation in federal criminal cases. See Fed Rule Crim Proc 32(c)(2)(C). We imply no opinion as to the use of these statements in non-capital cases.

"Mr. and Mrs. Bronstein's daughter, son-in-law, and daughter were interviewed and their responses are included in the Victim Impact Statement. There are also interviews of the victims' son reports that he had been married for 15 years and enjoyed a close relationship, spending a great deal of time together. APPENDIX TO OPINION OF THE COURT

"VICTIM IMPACT STATEMENT"

[The Victim Impact Statement in this case was prepared by the Maryland Division of Parole and Probation. See n 2, supra.]

"Mr. and Mrs. Bronstein's son, daughter, son-in-law, and grand-daughter were interviewed for purposes of the Victim Impact Statement. There are also four other grandchildren in the family. The victims' son reports that his parents had been married for fifty-three years and enjoyed a very close relationship, spending each day together. He states that his father had worked hard all his life and had been retired for eight years. He describes his mother as a woman who was young at heart and never seemed like an old lady. She taught herself to play bridge when she was in her seventies. The victims' son relates that his parents were amazing people who attended the senior citizens' center and made many devout friends. He indicates that he was very close to his parents, and that he talked to them every day. The victims' daughter also spent lots of time with them.

"The victims' son saw his parents alive for the last time on May 18th. They were having their lawn manicured and were excited by the onset of spring. He called them on the phone that evening and received no answer. He had made arrangements to pick Mr. Bronstein up on May 20th. They were both to be ushers in a granddaughter's wedding and were going to pick up their tuxedos. When he arrived at the house on May 20th he noticed that his parents' car wasn't there. A neighbor told him that he hadn't seen the car in several days and he knew something was wrong. He went to his parents' house and found them murdered. He called his sister crying and told her to come right over because something terrible had happened and their parents were both dead.

"The victims' daughter recalls that when she arrived at her parents' house, there were police officers and television crews everywhere. She felt numb and cold. She was not allowed to go into the house and so she went to a neighbor's home. There were people and reporters everywhere and all she could feel was cold. She called her older daughter and told her what had happened. She told her daughter to get her husband and then tell her younger daughter what had happened. The younger daughter was to be married two days later.

"The victims' granddaughter reports that just before she received the call from her mother she had telephoned her grandparents and received no answer. After her mother told her what happened she turned on the television and heard the news reports about it. The victims' son reports that his children first learned about their grandparents' death from the television reports.

"Since the Jewish religion dictates that birth and marriage are more important than death, the granddaughter's wedding had to proceed on May 22nd. She had been looking forward to it eagerly, but it was a sad occasion with people crying. The reception, which normally would have lasted for hours, was very brief. The next day, instead of going on her honeymoon, she attended her grandparents' funerals. The victims' son, who was an usher at the wedding, cannot remember being there or coming and going from his parents' funeral the next day. The victims' granddaughter, on the other hand, vividly remembers every detail of the days following her grandparents' death. Perhaps she described the impact of the tragedy most eloquently when she stated that it was a completely devastating and life altering experience.

"The victims' son states that he can only think of his parents in the context of how he found them that day, and he can feel their fear and horror. It was 4:00 p. m. when he discovered their bodies and this stands out in his mind. He is always aware of when 4:00 p. m. comes each day, even when he is not near a clock. He also wakes up at 4:00 a. m. each morning. The victims' son states that he suffers from lack of sleep. He is unable to drive on the streets that pass near his parents' home. He also avoids driving past his father's favorite restaurant, the supermarket where his parents shopped, etc. He is constantly reminded of his parents. He sees his father coming out of synagogues, sees his parents' car, and feels very sad whenever he sees old people. The victims' son feels that his parents were not killed, but were butchered like animals. He doesn't think anyone should be able to do something like that and get away with it. He is very angry and wishes he could sleep and not feel so depressed all the time. He is fearful for the first time in his life, putting all the lights on and checking the locks frequently. His children are scared for him and concerned for his health. They phone him several times a day. At the same time he takes a fearful approach to the whereabouts of his children. He also calls his sister every day. He states that he is frightened by his own reaction of what he would do if someone hurt him or a family member. He doesn't know if he'll ever be the same again.

"The victims' daughter and her husband didn't eat dinner for three days following the discovery of Mr. and Mrs. Bronstein's bodies. They cried together every day for four months and she still cries every day. She states that she doesn't sleep through a single night and thinks a part of her died too when her parents were killed. She reports that she doesn't find much joy in anything and her powers of concentration aren't good. She feels as if her brain is on overload. The victims' daughter relates that she had to clean out her parents' house and it took several weeks. She saw the bloody carpet, knowing that her parents had been there, and she felt like getting down on the rug and holding her mother. She wonders how this could have happened to her family because they're just ordinary people. The victims' daughter reports that she had become noticeably withdrawn and depressed at work and is now making an effort to be more outgoing. She notes that she is so emotionally tired because she doesn't sleep at night, that she has a tendency to fall asleep when she attends social events such as dinner parties or the symphony. The victims' daughter states that wherever she goes she sees and hears her parents. This happens every day. She cannot look at kitchen knives without being reminded of the murders and she is never away from it.

She states that she can't watch mov- ies with bodies or stabbings in it. She can't tolerate any reminder of violence. The victims' daughter re- lates that she used to be very trust- ing, but is not any longer. When the doorbell rings she tells her husband not to answer it. She is very suspi- cious of people and was never that way before.

"The victims' daughter attended the defendant's trial and that of the co-defendant because she felt some- one should be there to represent her parents. She had never been told the exact details of her parents' death and had to listen to the medical examiner's report. After a certain point, her mind blocked out and she stopped hearing. She states that her parents were stabbed repeatedly with viciousness and she could never forgive anyone for killing them that way. She can't believe that anybody could do that to someone. The vic- tims' daughter states that animals wouldn't do this. They didn't have to kill because there was no one to stop them from looting. Her father would have given them anything. The mur- ders show the viciousness of the kill- ers' anger. She doesn't feel that the people who did this could ever be rehabilitated and she doesn't want them to be able to do this again or put another family through this. She feels that the lives of her family members will never be the same again.

"The victims' granddaughter states that unless you experience something like this you can't under- stand how it feels. You are in a state of shock for several months and then a terrible depression sets in. You are so angry and feel such rage. She states that she only dwells on the image of their death when thinking of her grandparents. For a time she would become hysterical when- ever she saw dead animals on the road. She is not able to drive near her grandparents' house and will never be able to go into their neigh- borhood again. The victims' grand- daughter also has a tendency to turn on all the lights in her house. She goes into a panic if her husband is late coming home from work. She used to be an avid reader of murder mysteries, but will never be able to read them again. She has to turn off the radio or T.V. when reports of violence come on because they hit too close to home. When she gets a newspaper she reads the comics and throws the rest away. She states that it is the small everyday things that haunt her constantly and al- ways will. She saw a counselor for several months but stopped because she felt that no one could help her.

"The victims' granddaughter states that the whole thing has been very hard on her sister too. Her wedding anniversary will always be bittersweet and tainted by the mem- ory of what happened to her grand- parents. This year on her anniver- sary she and her husband quietly went out of town. The victims' granddaughter finds that she is un- able to look at her sister's wedding pictures. She also has a picture of her grandparents, but had to put it away because it was too painful to look at it.

"The victims' family members note that the trials of the suspects charged with these offenses have been delayed for over a year and the postponements have been very hard on the family emotionally. The vic- tims' son notes that he keeps seeing news reports about his parents' murder which show their house and the police removing their bodies. This is a constant reminder to him. The family wants the whole thing to be over with and they would like to see swift and just punishment.

"As described by their family members, the Bronsteins were loving parents and grandparents whose family was most important to them. Their funeral was the largest in history of the Levinson Funeral Home and the family received over one thousand sympathy cards, some from total strangers. They attempted to answer each card personally. The family states that Mr. and Mrs. Bronstein were extremely good people who wouldn't hurt a fly. Because of their loss, a terrible void has been put into their lives and every day is still a strain just to get through. It became increasingly apparent to the writer as she talked to the family members that the murder of Mr. and Mrs. Bronstein is still such a shocking, painful, and devastating memory to them that it permeates every aspect of their daily lives. It is doubtful that they will ever be able to fully recover from this tragedy and not be haunted by the memory of the brutal manner in which their loved ones were murdered and taken from them." App 59-64.

SEPARATE OPINIONS

Justice White, with whom The Chief Justice, Justice O'Connor and Justice Scalia join, dissenting.

"[T]he decision that capital punishment may be the appropriate sanction in extreme cases is an expression of the community's belief that certain crimes are themselves so grievous an affront to humanity that the only adequate response may be the penalty of death." Gregg v Georgia, 428 US 153, 184, 49 L Ed 2d 859 96 S Ct 2909 (1976) (opinion of Stewart, Powell and Stevens, JJ.). The affront to humanity of a brutal murder such as petitioner committed is not limited to its impact on the victim or victims; a victim's community is also injured, and in particular the victim's family suffers shock and grief of a kind difficult even to imagine for those who have not shared a similar loss. Maryland's legislature has decided that the jury should have the testimony of the victim's family in order to assist it in weighing the degree of harm that the defendant has caused and the corresponding degree of punishment that should be inflicted. This judgment is entitled to particular deference; determinations of appropriate sentencing considerations are "peculiarly questions of legislative policy," id., at 176, 49 L Ed 2d 859, 96 S Ct 2909 (quoting Gore v United States, 357 US 386, 393, 2 L Ed 2d 1405, 78 S Ct 1280 (1958)), and the Court should recognize that "[i]n a democratic society legislatures, not courts, are constituted to respond to the will and consequently the moral values of the people," 428 US, at 175, 49 L Ed 2d 859, 96 S Ct 2909 (quoting Furman v Georgia, 408 US 238, 383, 33 L Ed 2d 346, 92 S Ct 2726 (1972) (Burger, C.J., dissenting)). I cannot agree that there was anything "cruel or unusual" or otherwise unconstitutional about the legislature's decision to use victim impact statements in capital sentencing hearings.

The Court's judgment is based on the premises that the murderer causes a does not in general blameworthiness, and hence going to blame relevant to the capital decision. Many if not however, will look to a capital defendant appreciate the full extent he caused, including the victim's family. the premises that the harm that a murderer causes a victim's family does not in general reflect on his blameworthiness, and that only evidence going to blameworthiness is relevant to the capital sentencing decision. Many if not most jurors, however, will look less favorably on a capital defendant when they appreciate the full extent of the harm he caused, including the harm to the victim's family. There is nothing aberrant in a juror's inclination to hold a murderer accountable not only for his internal disposition in committing the crime but also for the full extent of the harm he caused; many if not most persons would also agree, for example, that someone who drove his car recklessly through a stoplight and unintentionally killed a pedestrian merits significantly more punishment than someone who drove his car recklessly through the same stoplight at a time when no pedestrian was there to be hit. I am confident that the Court would not overturn a sentence for reckless homicide by automobile merely because the punishment exceeded the maximum sentence for reckless driving; and I would hope that the Court would not overturn the sentence in such a case if a judge mentioned, as relevant to his sentencing decision, the fact that the victim was a mother or father. But if punishment can be enhanced in noncapital cases on the basis of the harm caused, irrespective of the

1. Congress considers the effect of crime on its victims a relevant sentencing consideration. Thus, presentence reports prepared pursuant to Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 32(c)(2) must include "information concerning any harm, including financial, social, psychological, and physical harm, done to or loss suffered by any victim of the offense . . ."

This Court's cases also indicate that the offender's specific intention to cause such harm,¹ I fail to see why the same approach is unconstitutional in death cases. If anything, I would think that victim impact statements are particularly appropriate evidence in capital sentencing hearings: the State has a legitimate interest in counteracting the mitigating evidence which the defendant is entitled to put in, see, e.g., Eddings v Oklahoma, 455 US 104, 71 L Ed 2d 1, 102 S Ct 869 (1982), by reminding the sentencer that just as the murderer should be considered as an individual, so too the victim is an individual whose death represents a unique loss to society and in particular to his family.

The Court is "troubled by the implication that defendants whose victims were assets to their community are more deserving of punishment than those whose victims are perceived to be less worthy," and declares that "our system of justice does not tolerate such distinctions." Ante, at —, n 8, 96 L Ed 2d 450. It is no doubt true that the State may not encourage the sentencer to rely on a factor such as the victim's race in determining whether the death penalty is appropriate. Cf. McCleskey v Kemp, 481 US —, 95 L Ed 2d 262, 107 S Ct 1756 (1987). But I fail to see why the State cannot, if it chooses, include as a sentencing consideration the particularized harm that an individual's mur-harm caused by an offense may be the basis for punishment even if the offender lacked the specific intent to commit that harm. See, e.g., United States v Feola, 420 US 671, 43 L Ed 2d 541, 95 S Ct 1255 (1975) (conviction under 18 USC § 111 [18 USCS § 111] for assaulting a federal officer does not require proof that the defendant knew the victim's status).

der causes to the rest of society² and in particular to his family. To the extent that the Court is concerned that sentencing juries might be moved by victim impact statements to rely on impermissible factors such as the race of the victim, there is no showing that the statements in this case encouraged this, nor should we lightly presume such misconduct on the jury's part. Cf. McCleskey v Kemp, supra.

The Court's reliance on the alleged arbitrariness that can result from the differing ability of victims' families to articulate their sense of loss is a makeweight consideration: No two prosecutors have exactly the same ability to present their arguments to the jury; no two witnesses have exactly the same ability to communicate the facts; but there is no requirement in capital cases that the evidence and argument be reduced to the lowest common denominator.

The supposed problems arising from a defendant's rebuttal of victim impact statements are speculative and unconnected to the facts of this case. No doubt a capital defendant must be allowed to introduce relevant evidence in rebuttal to a victim impact statement, but Maryland has in no wise limited the right of defendants in this regard. Petitioner introduced no such rebuttal evidence, probably because he considered, wisely, that it was not in his best interest to do so.³ At bottom, the Court's view seems to be that it is somehow unfair to confront a defendant with an account of the loss his deliberate act has caused the victim's family and society. I do not share that view, but even if I did I would be unwilling to impose it on States that see matters differently.

The Court's concern that the grief and anger of a victim's family will "inflamm[e] the jury," ante, at —, 96 L Ed 2d 452, is based in large part on its view that the loss which such survivors suffer is irrelevant to the issue of punishment—a view with which I have already expressed my disagreement. To the extent that the Court determines that in this case it was inappropriate to allow the victims' family to express their opinions on, for example, whether petitioner could be rehabilitated, that is obviously not an inherent fault in all victim impact statements and no reason to declare the practice of admitting such statements at capital sentencing hearings per se unconstitutional. I respectfully dissent.

2. I doubt that the Court means to suggest that there is any constitutional impediment, for example, to authorizing the death sentence for the assassination of the President or Vice-President, see 18 USC §§ 1751, 1111 [18 USCS §§ 1751, 1111], a Congressman, cabinet official, Supreme Court Justice, or the head of an executive department, 18 USC § 351 [18 USCS § 351], or the murder of a policeman on active duty, see Md Ann Code, Art 27, § 413(a)(1)(1982).

3. The possibility that the jury would be distracted by rebuttal evidence is purely hypothetical, since petitioner introduced no such evidence. It is also unclear how distracting (as opposed to offending) the jury would disadvantage the defendant, and why, if there were some disadvantage to the defendant in pressing too hard a rebuttal to a victim impact statement, he should be heard to complain of the consequences of his tactical decisions.

Woodson v North Carolina, 428 US 280, 303-304, 49 L Ed 2d 944, 96 S Ct 2978 (1976) (plurality opinion of Stewart, Powell, and Stevens, JJ.), considerations not relevant to "the defendant's 'personal responsibility and moral guilt'" cannot be taken into account in deciding whether a defendant who is eligible for the death penalty should receive it, ante, at —, 96 L Ed 2d 448 (quoting Enmund v Florida, 458 US 782, 801, 73 L Ed 2d 1140, 102 S Ct 3368 (1982)). It seems to me, however—and, I think, to most of mankind—that the amount of harm one causes does bear upon the extent of his "personal responsibility." We may take away the license of a driver who goes 60 miles an hour on a residential street; but we will put him in jail for manslaughter if, though his moral guilt is no greater, he is unlucky enough to kill someone during the escapade.

Nor, despite what the Court says today, do we depart from this principle where capital punishment is concerned. The Court's opinion does not explain why a defendant's eligibility for the death sentence can (and always does) turn upon considerations not relevant to his moral guilt. If a bank robber aims his gun at a guard, pulls the trigger, and kills his target, he may be put to death. If the gun unexpectedly misfires, he may not. His moral guilt in both cases is identical, but his responsibility in the former is greater. Less than two months ago, we held that two brothers who planned and assisted in their father's escape from prison could be sentenced to death because in the course of the escape their father and an accomplice murdered a married couple and two children. Tison v Arizona, 481 US —, 95 L Ed 2d 127, 107 S Ct 1676 (1987). Had their father allowed the victims to live, the brothers could not be put to death; but because he decided to kill, the brothers may. The difference between life and death for these two defendants was thus a matter "wholly unrelated to the[ir] blameworthiness." Ante, at —, 96 L Ed 2d 449. But it was related to their personal responsibility, i.e., to the degree of harm that they had caused. In sum, the principle upon which the Court's opinion rests—that the imposition of capital punishment is to be determined solely on the basis of moral guilt—does not exist, neither in the text of the Constitution, nor in the historic practices of our society, nor even in the opinions of this Court.

Recent years have seen an outpouring of popular concern for what has come to be known as "victims' rights"—a phrase that describes what its proponents feel is the failure of courts of justice to take into account in their sentencing decisions not only the factors mitigating the defendant's moral guilt, but also the amount of harm he has caused to innocent members of society. Many citizens have found one-sided and hence unjust the criminal trial in which a parade of witnesses comes forth to testify to the pressures beyond normal human experience that drove the defendant to commit his crime, with no one to lay before the sentencing authority the full reality of human suffering the defendant has produced—which (and not moral guilt alone) is one of the reasons society deems his act worthy of the prescribed penalty. Perhaps these sentiments do not sufficiently temper justice with mercy, but that is a question to be decided through the democratic processes of a free people, and not by the decrees of this Court. There is nothing in the Constitution that dictates the answer, no more in the field of capital punishment than elsewhere.

To require, as we have, that all mitigating factors which render capital punishment a harsh penalty in the particular case be placed before the sentencing authority, while simultaneously requiring, as we do today, that evidence of much of the human suffering the defendant has inflicted be suppressed, is in effect to prescribe a debate on the appropriateness of the capital penalty with one side muted. If that penalty is constitutional, as we have repeatedly said it is, it seems to me not remotely unconstitutional to permit both the pros and the cons in the particular case to be heard.

JOHN BOOTH, Petitioner

MARYLAND

482 US —, 96 L Ed 2d 440, 107 S Ct —

[No. 86-5020]

Argued March 24, 1987. Decided June 15, 1987.

Decision: Introduction of victim impact statement at sentencing phase of capital murder trial held to violate Eighth Amendment, and Maryland statute requiring consideration of statement held invalid.

SUMMARY

Having found a defendant guilty of two counts of first-degree murder, two counts of robbery, and conspiracy to commit robbery in connection with the robbery and murder of an elderly couple in their home, a Maryland state court jury sentenced him to death after considering a presentence report compiled by the state division of parole and probation. As required by a Maryland statute, the report included a victim impact statement (VIS), which described the personal characteristics of the victims and the emotional impact of the crimes on the family, and set forth the family members' opinions and characterizations of the crimes and the defendant. The state trial court (1) refused to suppress the VIS, (2) rejected the defendant's contention that the VIS was irrelevant and unduly inflammatory and that therefore its use in a capital case violated the Eighth Amendment of the Federal Constitution, and (3) ruled that the jury was entitled to consider any and all evidence which would bear on the sentencing decision. The jury sentenced the defendant to death for one of the murders and to life imprisonment for the other murder. The Maryland Court of Appeals affirmed the convictions and sentences, holding that a VIS serves an important interest by informing the sentencer of the full measure of harm caused by the crime (306 Md 172, 507 A2d 1098).

On certiorari, the United States Supreme Court (1) vacated the decision of the Maryland Court of Appeals to the extent that it affirmed the capital sentence, and (2) remanded the case for further proceedings. In an opinion by POWELL, J., joined by BRENNAN, MARSHALL, BLACKMUN, and STEVENS, JJ., it was held that the introduction of a victim impact statement at a capital murder trial violated the Maryland statute is invalid. This information, because the introduction of this information is a prejudicial decision and its admission to the jury may impose the death sentence in that manner, in that: (1) since the character and reputation of the defendant are factors which may be wholly irrelevant to the defendant, allowing the jury to consider them in imposing the death sentence is a violation of the Eighth Amendment which a family is willing to accept as a part of the victim's character—although the admission of this information is irrelevant to the decision of the jury on the circumstances of the crime; (2) to provide a fair opportunity to the defendant without shifting the focus of the trial to the victim; and (3) the formal presentence report (VIS) can serve no other purpose than to assist in deciding the case on the merits of the defendant, the admission of which is a violation of the decisionmaking required in a capital case.

WHITE, J., joined by REHNQUIST, J., dissented, expressing the view that the jury should have been allowed to assist in weighing the degree of culpability corresponding degree of punishment to particular deference, because the courts, are constituted to represent the values of the people, and (2) that the cases on the basis of the harm caused by the defendant to cause such harm, the admission of this information is unconstitutional in death cases in counteracting the mitigation of the harm put in, by reminding the jury that the defendant is considered as an individual, and that the defendant represents a unique loss to society.

SCALIA, J., joined by REHNQUIST, J., dissented, expressing the view that the harm one causes bears upon the determination of the punishment departed from where capital punishment is imposed upon which the court's opinion is to be determined solely on the basis of either in the text of the Federal Constitution or in the American society, or even in

TO: Members of the House Judiciary Committee

FROM: Representative Dave Donley DD

RE: Victims' Rights Bill

HB 296 is currently before the Judiciary Committee and I ask for your support in passing this legislation.

There is a need to develop methods to reduce the trauma that victims may experience in the wake of crime. All too often citizens who become involved with the criminal justice system, as victims of crime, are further victimized by the system and insensitive treatment.

When a crime is committed the chief concern of criminal justice agencies has been apprehending and dealing with the criminal. Unfortunately after the police leave the scene of the crime the victim is frequently forgotten.

HB 296 is a comprehensive bill that would give victims greater rights in the criminal and civil justice systems. When compared to other states such as California, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Michigan, Connecticut, Colorado, Florida and Arkansas, when it comes to victim's rights, Alaska is far behind. This type of legislation is long overdue.

I urge the members of the Judiciary Committee to pass HB 296 which will help to ease the hardships that victims face.

As prime sponsor of HB 296, Representative Dave Donley hopes to reduce the trauma that victims may experience in the wake of a crime. All too often citizens who become involved with the criminal justice system, as victims to crime, are further victimized by the system and insensitive treatment.

Representative Donley also realizes that when a crime is committed, the chief concern of criminal justice agencies has been apprehending and dealing with the criminal. Unfortunately, after the police leave the scene of the crime, the victim is frequently forgotten.

HB 296 is a comprehensive bill that would give victims greater rights in the criminal and civil justice systems. A few are:

*Allow the victim to attend meetings of the parole board and to comment in person on the proposed action of the board.

*Give victim access to presentence and police reports unless just cause not to is shown. Also allows victim to make a written or oral statement for use in preparation of the presentence report and at sentencing.

*Protects victim from discharge or discipline from an employer if victim is subpoenaed or requested to attend court.

*Victim will be given written notice of all trial dates involving the defendant.

*Victim will be notified if a defendant has escaped or is released on furlough, to a correctional restitution center, or an early release. Also in the case of an offender who was found guilty but mentally ill, the offender is being considered for a screening investigation to determine the need for further treatment.

*Victim will be able to appear personally in court if the offender files a motion for modification or reduction of sentence.

*Victim can make a written statement to the governor for consideration if the governor considers a pardon, commutation of sentence, reprieve, suspension or remission of a fine, forfeiture, or if the offender applies to the governor for clemency.

*Allows a victim of a crime committed by a minor to request permission to attend a hearing relating to the crime and receive assistance in the writing of that request from the Dept. of Health and Social Services.

These are only some of the rights that HB 296 will give victims. Compared to other states such as California, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Michigan, Connecticut, Colorado, Florida and Arkansas, when it comes to victim's rights, Alaska is far behind. We need your help and support to pass House Bill 296.

Please send Public Opinions Messages or Letters to your senators and representatives and to the House Judiciary Committee which is now considering this bill.

Alaska House of Representatives

Dear Chairmen Ellis and Koponen:

The staff of several Representatives have requested the Parole Board to comment on House Bill 296. Since the bill has substantial impact on many segments of the criminal justice system, and others are expected to testify on the bill, we will confine our comments to those sections of the bill that pertain directly to the parole process. Members and/or staff of the Board will be available at the hearing on November 20 to answer questions if they arise.

On page 4, lines 1-4, the definition of victim is expanded significantly. Since the definition applies to the parole process under AS 33.16, this section will have an impact on the Board. Absent some way of limiting testimony, having more than one relative of the victim testify at a parole hearing could draw a hearing out to many hours or even more than one day. Currently, we usually conduct up to 10 to 12 parole hearings a day. The financial impact could reach into the many thousands of dollars quickly.

On page 5, lines 1-5, the victim would have the right to obtain the presentence report and other reports that may be used in preparation for that report. There is no prohibition in this bill on redisclosure and even if there was, it would probably be very difficult to enforce. Currently, the presentence report and attachments provide the Board with a lot of relevant background information on which to make good parole decisions. Many community sources are helpful in preparing these reports. Many citizens will not cooperate if they thought their comments would be used by persons outside the criminal justice system. The same is true of defendants, their families and friends. Also, much of the criminal justice system information contained in the presentence report might be eliminated from the report if this bill passes, since many state and federal laws prohibit the redisclosure of those records to non-criminal justice people. If we don't get comprehensive presentence reports and attachments, our ability to make the most rational release decisions will be severely compromised. Frequently, there is information in the presentence about victims of uncharged crimes. Many of these victims are children. They or their families would not want their names or information regarding circumstances of the crimes released to the public.

Lines 19-20 on page 6 allow victims to attend parole hearings. We have a number of concerns with this section. First, the bill does not define what is intended by "attend meetings". Do you intend the victims/relatives to be present before the Board just to make a statement? Do you intend the victims/relatives to sit through the entire hearing but leave before the Board begins deliberations? Do you expect the victims/relatives to sit through the deliberations? Clearly this section is in conflict with AS 44.62.310(d)(3), which states Board hearings, like jury deliberations, are closed. Having any person who could be aligned for or against parole would be a violation of the intent of the Alaska Supreme Court, In the Matter of Robson, 575 P.2d 771 (Alaska 1978). Whatever the Legislature decides to do, this section needs to be clear on your specific intent.

The Board does not oppose having victims come to Parole Board hearings. However, the decision to allow victim attendance at hearings is expected to have a substantial impact on the cost of operating the system, on the victim, and on the ability of the Board to get the best possible information to make good parole decisions. This impact must be carefully reviewed to see if the costs to the public and the actual advantages to the victim outweigh the disadvantages.

First, let us talk about the issues impacting the victim. In Alaska, many victims are friends or family of the defendant. Many of the cases we hear involve sexual assault by a friend or family member. A lot of these victims are children. Oftentimes, there is a tremendous amount of pressure from friends or family for the victim to minimize the impact of the crime or even recant. We sometimes get letters from victims that are put in this situation now, but at least they don't have to face the defendant in person. Sometimes during the very frank and pointed questioning of Board members and staff, the names of victims of other uncharged crimes are discussed. Clearly, these folks would not like their names known to the public or their family members and this is quite possible if the victim/relative of the current crime decides to speak after leaving the hearing.

Another very important issue with victims attending hearings and speaking against defendants is possible retribution. Most defendants now show little animosity toward their victims when we discuss issues at parole hearings. However, we believe the likelihood of retribution would increase significantly if the victim were to testify against a defendant at a parole hearing. Reading a letter written by the victim is much less likely to provoke a defendant than if the victim is sitting across the table, eyeball to eyeball. We might be doing most victims more harm than good by allowing the personal appearance.

Second, let us talk about the possible impact of this section on the Board's ability to get the best possible information to make good parole decisions. The current Board hearings are closed and usually only the persons in attendance besides the Board are the prisoner and the parole officer that completed the preparole report required by statute. Prisoners get the clear message from many sources we expect to get all pertinent information when the prisoner applies for parole. Prisoners sometimes give us information damaging to their chances for parole because they think we might somehow find out about the negative information and rescind parole before they could be released from jail. In many cases, having one or more victims/victim's relatives in the room would have a chilling effect on a prisoner offering information. Not getting their pertinent information could in some cases even endanger other potential victims in the public. Even though some prisoners committed very serious crimes, some are embarrassed about the circumstances of their crimes and would be unwilling to discuss the details in front of others. Prisoners are aware that Board members and parole officers understand in the confidentiality laws regarding the material in the files and would be liable for disclosure of information outside the hearing. Therefore, they are more willing to be frank with us, not worrying about public disclosure. If we do not get the best possible information, the Board might unknowingly release a prisoner who would pose a significant risk to the public.

Honorable Johnny Ellis

Third, let us look at the increased costs of this section. Here are some of the areas of impact if victims come to parole hearings.

- a. Lengthen parole hearings, resulting in increased per diem and compensation for members and additional time for Corrections employees.
- b. Money for security staff to screen both prisoners and victims before they are allowed to come together in the hearing room.
- c. Money for security staff to be present for the protection of victims and in some cases the prisoners at parole hearings.
- d. Money to pay for representation of prisoners by counsel at parole hearings, most being represented by the Public Defender. Although rare now, with the more adversarial nature of hearings under this bill, we would expect a substantial increase in prisoners being represented by attorneys. Of course, this would also lengthen hearings.
- e. Money to pay for the increased costs of incarcerating some prisoners for longer periods of time. Some prisoners who would not pose a risk to the public and would likely be paroled now if they apply, would not apply under this bill if they had to face the victim face to face because of added embarrassment, and therefore would stay in jail.

If the committee members want the victim to be able to respond to such issues as the prisoner's comments to the Parole Board, let me suggest the following solution. We can send a copy of the prisoner's application for parole (without proposed residence or employer addresses) to the victim. Then the victim would have the information the prisoner gives the Board members regarding the crime, release plan, reasons why the prisoner thinks he/she should be granted parole, conditions to be imposed, etc. The victim could then forward their written comments to the Board.

Honorable Johnny Ellis
Honorable Nillo E. Koponen
November 18, 1987

Another issue the Legislature has to deal with is equity. What impact would this section have in ensuring all prisoners and victims are treated similarly? First of all, many victims could not afford to travel outside of their areas of residence to testify at parole hearings. Prisoners are housed in over a dozen instate institutions scattered from Ketchikan to Nome as well as the Federal Bureau Prison facilities throughout the country. Many prisoners are not incarcerated in the same town where the victim lives. This means a victim with more money might have a more significant impact on a decision to grant or not grant parole than a victim without the money, even though the impact on the victims might be identical. This legislation would favor residents of our major cities. I expect you will begin to hear from indigent victims in a couple of years.

Lines 26-28 on page 6 would require the Board to notify a victim of a decision to grant or deny parole if the victim requested. We already notify interested victims of any decision to grant parole and so notifying victims on decisions to deny would not pose a problem. However, we strongly oppose the last sentence of this same section at lines 2-3 on page 7 that would have us notify the victims of the prisoner's residence address and the employer. This would greatly increase the likelihood of confrontations between the parolee and the victim---nobody would be served by that. Many parolees have a tough enough time getting reasonable employment now--having a victim/relative/friend contact the parolee's employer at work isn't going to do anybody any good. If a prisoner can not obtain and maintain lawful employment, his/her chances of returning "to a life of crime" are increased significantly. If for some reason the victim has a dispute with the parolee, contacts should be made through the court, Parole Board, or parole officer.

These same comments apply to line 11 on page 7, regarding mandatory parolees.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on House Bill 296. We hope these issues can be resolved to everyone's satisfaction.

Very truly yours,

Alonzo B. Patterson, Jr.

Violence & Sexual Assault

DEPARTMENT OF
PUBLIC SAFETY

The Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault supports HB 296, the "Victims Rights Bill", which addresses some of the recommendations of the President's Task Force on Victims of Crime. This task force was established by the federal government in 1982 in recognition of the problems crime victims face when encountering the criminal justice system. As the report of this task force stated:

Victims who do survive their attack, and are brave enough to come forward, turn to their government expecting it to do what a good government should - protect the innocent.... Without the cooperation of victims and witnesses in reporting and testifying about crime, it is impossible in a free society to hold criminals accountable. When victims come forward to perform this vital service, however, they find little protection. They discover instead that they will be treated as appendages of a system appallingly out of balance... Somewhere along the way, the system began to serve lawyers and judges and defendants, treating the victim with institutionalized disinterest.

The Council does not have sufficient expertise to comment upon legal issues raised in this legislation. We have comments on the following sections of the bill with which we have particular interest.

Section 4 of HB 296 adds the effect of a crime on the victim to the list of factors the court may consider in aggravation of a felony sentence; Section 5 requires written notice of the sentencing hearing be given to the victim. It is important for victims to receive written notice of the sentencing hearing so that they have the opportunity to present testimony or just to be present during the hearing if they wish. The victim's testimony regarding the effect of the crime on his or her life adds balancing information for the court by presenting the impact of the crime on the victim's physical, financial and psychological well-being. As the President's Task Force states, "a judge cannot evaluate the seriousness of a defendant's conduct without knowing how the crime has burdened the victim. A judge cannot reach an informed determination of the danger posed by a defendant without hearing from the person he has victimized".

The Council questions the amendments to the definition of victim in Section 6. We do not see the advantage of expanding the definition of victim when the victim has died, is a minor or is incapacitated.

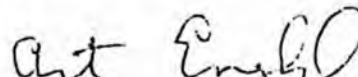

The term "victim" already includes spouse, parent, child, brother, sister and legal guardian. Adding aunt, uncle, parent-in-law, brother-in-law or sister-in-law does not seem necessary. We also wonder who would have precedence to be considered, and what would happen if different relatives have conflicting views of the situation.

The Council also has concerns about Section 7 which gives the victim access to presentence reports and to police reports. While in general the Council supports victims having access to information about the case, we think there can be a danger in a victim having access to police reports prior to a case going to trial because the information in the reports might improperly influence the victim's testimony or expose the victim to unnecessary attack on cross-examination. In addition, we think police reports should be protected as confidential information since they give the victim's name, address and other information which might need to be protected. Since the victim definition is expanded, there may be a number of other people who could have access to the police reports, and we think this is problematical. We do however, support the victim's right to make a written or oral statement for use in preparation of the defendant's presentence report and at sentencing. We would also like to suggest that a section be added in this section that the victim has the right to be informed by the Department of Corrections when the defendant has been released from jail on bail. This provision would be particularly important to battered women since they must take extra precautions such as returning to a shelter to protect themselves and their children when the batterer is released.

Section 9 gives victims the right to attend meetings of the parole board. Victims have a legitimate interest in parole hearings, not only because of their desire for the service of a just sentence, but also because of their legitimate fear of revictimization once the defendant is released.

Section 10 and Section 11 provides for the parole board to notify the victim, prior to release, of the prisoner's future geographic area and of the prisoner's residence address and employer, if known. We would recommend that "geographic area" be changed to "community" as this is a more specific term. Also, we do not see the need to release the prisoner's residence address and employer to the victim and can envision problems caused by releasing this information.

In conclusion, the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault supports efforts to ensure that the rights of crime victims are better taken into account by the criminal justice system.

POSITION PAPER

HOUSE BILL NO. 296

For an Act entitled: "An act relating to victims of crime, claims arising from criminal conduct, and service of process on prisoners; amending Rule 12(d)(2) of the Alaska Rules of Children's Procedure; and amending Rule 32(d)(2) of the Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure."

The Department supports the goals of protecting the rights of victims of crime, providing for appropriate participation of victims in court proceedings, and ensuring that victims are informed of the outcome of proceedings relating to perpetrators, including juveniles, who commit crimes. However, the Department opposes granting a blanket right to victims to attend otherwise confidential children's proceedings. The Department believes that the limited benefit from establishing such a right is not justified in light of the potential reduction in the system's effectiveness and the availability of other mechanisms for accomplishing the same goals without the potential adverse effects.

Section 13 of this bill would establish the right of a person (or related representative) to attend a children's proceeding under AS 47.10.070 if the person is the "victim of an offense that is the subject of the hearing...". This language implies that the victim may attend any child proceeding in which the offense is in any way a consideration. This would almost certainly include any adjudication, detention, and disposition hearing in delinquency cases but could include, under certain circumstances, parallel proceedings in child in need of aid cases. This provision would not provide victims with a role in these proceedings other than that of spectators nor would it oblige victims to maintain the confidentiality of information presented in these hearings.

Children's proceedings are closed to the public in order to promote the free discussion of sensitive psychological, social, and historical information concerning the child and the child's family which have relevance to the decision of the court concerning the child. Once the commission of an offense has been established (and in the vast majority of instances this occurs through admission of the youth rather than through trial) the focus of children's proceedings is not on the offense but on the causes of the child's behavior and on actions necessary to meet the needs of the child and prevent further offenses. Such actions may include assignment of custody to the state and temporary detention or long term secure treatment. In child in need of aid proceedings these actions could include termination of the parent child relationship. Though information about the offenses(s) may be presented, it is within the context of the purpose of the hearing and is not the subject of the hearing.

Victim involvement in the process may occur in a variety of ways. Victims may be called to testify at any of the children's proceeding hearings, may provide information and opinion for presentation to the court in the predisposition report, and may be allowed to attend a hearing as a spectator with permission of the court.

HB 296 could reduce the effectiveness of these proceedings by compromising the confidentiality of information presented and inhibiting the presentation of full and complete information. The attendance of victims, particularly without obliging them to maintain confidentiality, may reduce the willingness of juveniles and their families to reveal sensitive information despite its bearing on the court's decision. However, the bill would not provide a role for victims in these proceedings other than as a spectator, nor would it provide a greater opportunity for input than is already available.

The Department believes that mechanisms are available to provide appropriate and effective methods for victim involvement in delinquency proceedings and to ensure the provision of information to victims about the outcome of these proceedings without statutory change. However, because the Department supports the intent of HB 296 the Department will reexamine its administrative procedures to ensure:

1. that probation officer contact with victims occurs in juvenile cases;
2. that victims are informed about the juvenile process and encouraged to participate appropriately;
3. that information provided by victims is considered in the decision-making processes in juvenile proceedings;
4. that appropriate contact of victims with the court is facilitated;
5. that victims are informed of the outcome of juvenile proceedings.

Department Position

Because of its potential for reducing the effectiveness of juvenile proceedings without providing meaningful additional benefit to victims, the Department does not support HB 296. However, the Department could support HB 296 if section 13 were removed from the bill; thereby maintaining the confidentiality of children's proceedings.

23 improve, preserve, store, or transport the property; and

24 (C) a special assessment imposed to defray costs of a 25 public improvement benefiting the property; and 26 (3) a creditor may make a levy against exempt property of 27 any kind to enforce a claim arising from criminal conduct of the

3 (i) household goods and wearing apparel rea-
4 sonably necessary for one household;

5 (ii) books and musical instruments, if reasonably 6 held for the personal use of the debtor or a dependent of 7 the debtor; and

16 notice of a pending change in the status of the offender. The commis-17 sioner of health and social services shall give notice as required by 18 this section if

CONTINUATION of FISCAL NOTE ANALYSIS

For Bill/Resolution No. SSHB 296 (Jud.)

The proposed sponsor substitute for HB 296 (Jud.), dated March 18, 1988, amends existing law to grant new rights to the victims of crimes. These expanded rights will have a considerable impact on the Department of Law, in three important respects.

First, Section 7 provides that victims of crimes have the right to be informed by the appropriate law enforcement agency or the prosecuting attorney of the dates of "all criminal proceedings" involving the defendant relating to the case in which the victim is involved. This section enumerates various rights to be granted to victims of crimes, including the right to be informed of all criminal proceedings. But, unlike Section 8 which covers the trial and sentencing of defendants, Section 7 does not explicitly assign affirmative duties to prosecuting attorneys to provide this information. Nonetheless, the prosecuting attorney would have the best access to this information, and it is likely that victims would expect that prosecuting attorneys provide this information.

There are a variety of proceedings covered by the Rules of Criminal Procedure that would be subject to Section 7. These proceedings include arraignment, bail and omnibus hearings, evidentiary hearings, arguments on pretrial motions, and pretrial conferences. Other proceedings subject to Section 7 include post trial hearings to hear arguments on motions to set aside verdicts, and proceedings to hear arguments on aggravation and mitigation factors to be used in sentencing. The scheduled dates for most of these hearings are often postponed and rescheduled on short notice. Current AS 12.61.010 requires that a victim has the right to be informed of the dates of trial and sentencing only.

Second, Section 8 of the bill requires that, upon the request of the victim of a crime, the prosecuting attorney shall: (1) confer with the victim about the victim's testimony before the selection of the jury and the trial of the defendant; (2) give prompt actual notice to the victim of the defendant's conviction and the crimes for which the defendant was convicted, including advising the victim of his or her right to make a written or oral statement for use in preparation of the defendant's presentence report, and including advising the victim of his or her right to appear personally at the defendant's sentencing hearing to present a written or oral statement, and advising of the address and telephone number of the office that will prepare the presentence report, and advising of the time and place of the sentencing proceeding.

Third, Section 8 would also require that the prosecuting attorney notify the victim in writing of the final disposition of the case within 30 days after final disposition of the case. It appears that notification of final disposition would be required at both the trial and appellate levels. Similarly, Section 7 grants the right to victims to obtain from the prosecuting attorney at any time after the defendant's conviction a copy of the record of all the defendant's convictions.

Currently, 18,000 new criminal matters are referred to the department's criminal division each year. It is estimated that of this number about 2,000 felony cases and as many as 5,000 misdemeanor cases prosecuted involve crimes having a victim. Many felony cases have multiple victims. Moreover, in cases where the victim has died, is a minor, or is incapacitated, the term victim includes a spouse, parent, child, brother, sister, aunt, uncle, parent-in-law, brother-in-law, sister-in-law, or legal guardian of the victim. Consequently, this bill has the potential for generating a substantial body of new work at all of the department's prosecution offices. Most of this required work would be handled by paralegals and legal secretaries, except for the requirement for prosecutors to confer with victims before the selection of the jury and the trial of the defendant.

The requirements of the bill, for literally thousands of notices, and numerous subsequent requests for assistance and further information, will place an enormous burden on a reduced prosecution support staff that simply cannot be borne without additional staff resources. This is particularly true in smaller offices where, in FY 1989, clerical support will be very thin. And it is also an important consideration in the state's two largest prosecution offices, because of their overwhelming caseloads.

It will therefore be necessary to add part-time clerical assistance at Ketchikan, Kotzebue, Sitka, and Kodiak. A full-time paralegal and a full-time legal secretary would be added in Anchorage, and a full-time paralegal and a full-time legal secretary would be added in Fairbanks, because of the large number of cases at these locations, including major felonies with multiple victims. All of these locations suffered support staff reductions in FY 1988.

CONTINUATION of FISCAL NOTE ANALYSIS

For Bill/Resolution No. SSHB 296 (Jud.)

The proposed sponsor substitute for HB 296 (Jud.), dated March 18, 1988, amends existing law to grant new rights to the victims of crimes. These expanded rights will have a considerable impact on the Department of Law, in three important respects.

First, Section 7 provides that victims of crimes have the right to be informed by the appropriate law enforcement agency or the prosecuting attorney of the dates of "all criminal proceedings" involving the defendant relating to the case in which the victim is involved. This section enumerates various rights to be granted to victims of crimes, including the right to be informed of all criminal proceedings. But, unlike Section 8 which covers the trial and sentencing of defendants, Section 7 does not explicitly assign affirmative duties to prosecuting attorneys to provide this information. Nonetheless, the prosecuting attorney would have the best access to this information, and it is likely that victims would expect that prosecuting attorneys provide this information.

There are a variety of proceedings covered by the Rules of Criminal Procedure that would be subject to Section 7. These proceedings include arraignment, bail and omnibus hearings, evidentiary hearings, arguments on pretrial motions, and pretrial conferences. Other proceedings subject to Section 7 include post trial hearings to hear arguments on motions to set aside verdicts, and proceedings to hear arguments on aggravation and mitigation factors to be used in sentencing. The scheduled dates for most of these hearings are often postponed and rescheduled on short notice. Current AS 12.61.010 requires that a victim has the right to be informed of the dates of trial and sentencing only.

Second, Section 8 of the bill requires that, upon the request of the victim of a crime, the prosecuting attorney shall: (1) confer with the victim about the victim's testimony before the selection of the jury and the trial of the defendant; (2) give prompt actual notice to the victim of the defendant's conviction and the crimes for which the defendant was convicted, including advising the victim of his or her right to make a written or oral statement for use in preparation of the defendant's presentence report, and including advising the victim of his or her right to appear personally at the defendant's sentencing hearing to present a written or oral statement, and advising of the address and telephone number of the office that will prepare the presentence report, and advising of the time and place of the sentencing proceeding.

Third, Section 8 would also require that the prosecuting attorney notify the victim in writing of the final disposition of the case within 30 days after final disposition of the case. It appears that notification of final disposition would be required at both the trial and appellate levels. Similarly, Section 7 grants the right to victims to obtain from the prosecuting attorney at any time after the defendant's conviction a copy of the record of all the defendant's convictions.

Currently, 18,000 new criminal matters are referred to the department's criminal division each year. It is estimated that of this number about 2,000 felony cases and as many as 5,000 misdemeanor cases prosecuted involve crimes having a victim. Many felony cases have multiple victims. Moreover, in cases where the victim has died, is a minor, or is incapacitated, the term victim includes a spouse, parent, child, brother, sister, aunt, uncle, parent-in-law, brother-in-law, sister-in-law, or legal guardian of the victim. Consequently, this bill has the potential for generating a substantial body of new work at all of the department's prosecution offices. Most of this required work would be handled by paralegals and legal secretaries, except for the requirement for prosecutors to confer with victims before the selection of the jury and the trial of the defendant.

The requirements of the bill, for literally thousands of notices, and numerous subsequent requests for assistance and further information, will place an enormous burden on a reduced prosecution support staff that simply cannot be borne without additional staff resources. This is particularly true in smaller offices where, in FY 1989, clerical support will be very thin. And it is also an important consideration in the state's two largest prosecution offices, because of their overwhelming caseloads.

It will therefore be necessary to add part-time clerical assistance at Ketchikan, Kotzebue, Sitka, and Kodiak. A full-time paralegal and a full-time legal secretary would be added in Anchorage, and a full-time paralegal and a full-time legal secretary would be added in Fairbanks, because of the large number of cases at these locations, including major felonies with multiple victims. All of these locations suffered support staff reductions in FY 1988.

FISCAL ANALYSIS: HB 296

This bill will permit victims to appear and participate in sentencing proceedings. Based upon information provided by the deputy presiding judge for the Anchorage trial court criminal division, one-fifth of the time of a judge assigned to a criminal caseload is occupied by sentencing. It is anticipated that victim participation will extend the length of the proceeding. Given the volume of criminal cases in courts statewide, it is estimated that the equivalent of one additional judge will be required to handle the additional hearing time. Services of a retired judge appointed to serve pro tem are the least costly way of providing additional judicial resources.

MEMORANDUM

April 22, 1987

SUBJECT: Sectional analysis of victims rights bill
(Work Order No. 15-0242)

TO: Representative Dave Donley

FROM: Keith B. Levy ^{KB}
Legislative Counsel

The following is a sectional analysis of Work Order 15-0242, relating to victims of crime, claims arising from criminal conduct, and service of process on prisoners.

Section 1 provides that AS 12.61, relating to victims rights, may be cited as the "Alaska Victims Rights Act."

Section 2 provides that service of process on people in the custody of the Commissioner of Corrections in civil cases may be accomplished by delivering or mailing the summons to the Commissioner of Corrections (AS 09.05.050(a)). The commissioner is required to keep a record of each summons served and to deliver a notice of the service and a copy of the summons to the prisoner within 10 days after the date of service (AS 09.05.050(b)). The commissioner must also file, with the court having jurisdiction of the civil case, a copy of the summons and an affidavit showing that service of the summons on the prisoner has been made (AS 09.05.050(c)). Finally, the court is given authority to extend the time in which the defendant can respond to the summons (AS 09.05.050(d)).

Section 3 amends AS 09.38.065(a) to permit a creditor to levy against property that would otherwise be exempt from execution in order to enforce a claim arising from criminal conduct that resulted in a felony or misdemeanor conviction. However, certain items such as tools and professional books up to $750, and household goods and wearing apparel up to $250, remain exempt from execution.

Representative Dave Donley

Section 4 adds to the factors which a court may consider in aggravation of a felony sentence the question of whether the defendant's conduct caused substantial physical, emotional, or financial harm to the victim, or the victim's immediate family if the victim died as a result of the defendant's conduct (AS 12.55.155(c)(27)).

Section 5 provides that if the state seeks to establish a factor in aggravation of a felony or the defendant seeks to establish a factor in mitigation of a felony, the prosecutor must serve written notice of the sentencing hearing on the victim. This section also gives the victim the right to appear at sentencing hearings and to present evidence. The court is required to consider the evidence presented by the victim (AS 12.55.155(f)).

Section 6 amends the definition of the term "victim," as used in the sentencing provisions, to include the victim's aunt, uncle, parent-in-law, brother-in-law, and sister-in-law, in cases where the victim has died, is a minor, or is incapacitated (AS 12.55.185(11)). The term already includes the victim's spouse, parent, child, brother, and sister.

Section 7 adds to the list of victim's rights the right, without a court order, to obtain access to the presentence reports from the court and to obtain access to the relevant police reports from the appropriate law enforcement agency and the right to make a statement for presentencing and sentencing. (AS 12.61.010(a)). This section has the effect of amending Alaska Rule of Criminal Procedure 32(d)(2), because that section does not permit release of presentence reports without a court order, except in limited circumstances. Accordingly, this effect on the court rules is reflected in the title of the bill and is also explained in Section 14.

Section 8 adds two new provisions to AS 12.61. AS 12.61.015 sets out a list of duties of the prosecuting attorney with respect to victims of crime. These include the duty to

(1) confer with the victim before jury selection and trial;

(2) notify the victim of the defendant's conviction, the victim's right to make a sentencing statement and that the defendant will see the sentencing statement, the address and telephone number of the office that will prepare the sentencing statement, and the time and place of the sentencing proceeding; and

Page 3
April 22, 1987

(3) notify the victim in writing of the final disposition of the case within 30 days.

AS 12.61.017 makes it a class B misdemeanor for an employer of a victim of crime to penalize the victim because of the victim's cooperation in a prosecution.

Section 9 amends AS 33.16.120(c) to give victims the right to attend meetings of the parole board.

Section 10 amends existing law to provide that the parole board must notify a victim not only of its decision to grant parole, but also if it decides to deny parole (AS 33.16.120(e)).

This section also provides that the notification must include the prisoner's residence address and employer, if known.

Section 11 provides that notification to a victim of a prisoner's early release for good time served must also include the prisoner's residence address and employer, if known (AS 33.16.120(f)).

Section 12 amends AS 33.30.011 to require the Commissioner of Corrections to notify the victim or the victim's family if the offender escapes or is released on a furlough, to a correctional restitution center, or any other early release program.

Section 13 amends AS 47.10.070 to give the victim of an offense by a minor the right to attend a hearing involving the minor. In certain cases, the victim's family may attend. This section has the effect of amending Rule 12(d)(2) of the Alaska Rules of Children's Procedure by giving victims access to the children's hearing. Accordingly, this effect is reflected in the title of the bill and is also explained in Section 15 of the bill.

If I may be of further assistance, please advise.

Re: CSHB 296

Dear Representative Sund:

Section 9(a)(11) of CSHB 296 would give a victim the right to obtain a defendant's presentence report unless the court finds otherwise. It is the court system's position that a victim should make a showing of need before a presentence report is disclosed.

In deciding the issue of public disclosure of presentence reports, other courts have used the standard governing the release of grand jury materials. This standard requires that the person seeking disclosure must demonstrate that disclosure is needed in the interests of justice. Illinois vs. Abbott and Associates, 460 U.S. 557, 103 S.Ct. 1356, 75 L.Ed 2d 28⁷ (1983). The court system suggests that this is the appropriate standard to be applied when a victim seeks access to a presentence report.

The principal purpose of a presentence report is to assist the court in determining the appropriate sentence. A secondary purpose is to assist the correctional facility to which an offender is sentenced in matters such as offender classification and supervision of probationers and parolees. U.S. vs. Charmer Industries, Inc., 711 F2d 1164 (2nd Cir. 1983). To best serve these purposes, the presentence report should be as complete as possible and contain "[a]ll objective information which is significant to the decision-making process." Administrative Office of U.S. Courts, The Presentence Investigation Report 1 (1978). Sources of information for these reports may include defendant's family members, welfare and other government agencies, friends and acquaintances of the defendant, employers and law enforcement agencies. Frequently, information given to presentence investigators is given in confidence, particularly information provided by law enforcement agencies.

To insure the availability of complete and candid information to assist in sentencing, presentence reports should be confidential. "[T]he prevailing judicial view [is] that the public availability of presentence reports would likely inhibit the flow of information to the sentencing judge." Durns vs. Bureau of Prisons, 804 F2d 701 (DC Cir. 1986) citing Charmer, supra, at 1173. "[R]equiring disclosure of a presentence report is contrary to the public interest as it may adversely affect the sentencing court's ability to obtain data on a confidential basis from the accused, and from sources independent of the accused, for use in the sentencing process." U.S. vs. Martinello, 556 F2d 1215, 1216 (5th Cir. 1977).

For these reasons, the American Bar Association also has recommended that presentence reports not be made public. "No legitimate interests are served by public disclosure. The incentive for both the offender and for sources close to the offender to cooperate candidly in the presentence investigation might be lessened if they knew that their statements could become part of the public record." ABA Standards for Criminal Justice, 2nd Ed., commentary (1984).

Re: Victim's Rights Bill (HB 296)

Dear Representative Sund:

I have received your request for comment regarding the Victim's Rights Bill (HB 296) proposed by Representative Donley. I recognize the propriety of such a bill, which address the rights and concerns of victims of crime. Many of the bill's provisions are directed at giving information to victims concerning the criminal litigation in which they may have a direct interest. There are, however, three components of this bill which I believe are cause for concern:

Section 9: This section allows victims of crime to obtain a copy of the defendant's pre-sentence reports. Pre-sentence reports, prepared by the probation department, are sensitive documents, often containing highly personal information about not only a defendant, but also his/her family. These reports provide the sentencing judge with a detailed social history of defendant, spouse, parents, siblings, etc. For example, while a family history of alcoholism or psychiatric illness may prove helpful to a judge in fashioning a sentence, such information should not be otherwise available to the public because of its obviously private nature. In addition, information concerning victims of previous criminal conduct by a defendant often appears in pre-sentence reports. Information of this kind should not go beyond the court file. As the bill recognizes, federal confidentiality acts may prohibit the dissemination to victims and their families of certain information included in pre-sentence reports.

This section also gives victims access to police reports. Since the exclusionary rule applies in most criminal cases, requiring each victim or witness to testify independently about his or her recollection of events, allowing victim's to have access to these reports, which include other witness statements, could taint or alter the independent memories of the witness, and should be avoided. Additionally, sensitive police information, such as the identity of informants, should be kept confidential.

Section 11: This provision allows victims and their legal counsel to attend meetings of the parole board. This could chill the parole board's function and its need to make independent, objective decisions concerning parole matters. Pressure from victim's or their families may interfere with arriving at sound judgments concerning specific cases. Furthermore, the presence of legal counsel would create a more formal atmosphere, which in this setting inhibits the transmission of information about a potential parolee. It seems more appropriate that input from victim's at this stage be provided in writing, as is currently their right.

Section 12: This section requires the parole board provide victims with a defendant's residence address upon his/her release from prison. While it is understandable that a victim might desire information about the geographic area in which a defendant will reside, providing a specific address will in many cases encourage unwanted contact, from which hostility could arise. Therefore, limiting such disclosure to city and general neighborhood or area would serve the purpose of this section while avoiding potential conflict.

Again, I understand this bill is for the purpose of increasing the criminal justice system's sensitivity to victims' rights. That objective is a laudable one. The changes suggested above would not affect the overall impact of these proposals.

I hope these comments are helpful. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can provide further information.

Sincerely,

John Salemi

MEMORANDUM

April 18, 1988

SUBJECT: Sectional analysis of CSHB 296 ()
TO: Representative Dave Donley
FROM: Jack Chenoweth
Legislative Counsel

The following is a sectional analysis of the draft committee substitute, CSHB 296 (), designated version "Z." This version is based on changes made in a series of draft committee substitutes. It also incorporates the provisions of HB 405, a governor's bill on the subject of victims' rights.

Bill section 1 adds a short title to AS 12.61, the chapter defining the rights of a crime victim. It provides that the chapter may be cited as the "Alaska Crime Victim's Rights Act."

Bill section 2 provides that service of process in civil cases on people in the custody of the commissioner of corrections may be accomplished by delivering or mailing the summons to the commissioner of corrections (AS 09.05.050(a)). The commissioner is required to deliver a copy of the summons to the prisoner within 10 days after the date of service (AS 09.05.050(b)). The commissioner is to file with the court having jurisdiction of the civil case a copy of the summons and an affidavit showing that the summons was delivered to the prisoner (AS 09.05.050(c)). The court is authorized to extend the time in which the defendant may respond to the summons (AS 09.05.050(d)). There is provision (AS 09.05.050(e)) that the state may not be liable in damages for the commissioner's failure to comply with the requirements of this section.

Bill section 3 amends AS 09.38.065(a) to permit a creditor to levy against property that would otherwise be exempt from execution in order to enforce a claim arising from criminal conduct that resulted in a felony conviction. The amendment details specific property of the defendant that is exempt from the execution.

Bill section 4 adds a new section, AS 12.47.095, that places additional duties on the commissioner of health and social services for offenders who are determined to be guilty but mentally ill or, alternatively, who are found to be not guilty by reason of insanity. The section enumerates instances in which the commissioner must communicate to the victim, or to certain persons other than the victim, a change in the status of the offender. The section places a burden on the victim to request a notice of the offender's change of status and to act only if the victim has maintained a current address on file with the commissioner.

Bill section 5 enumerates the right of a victim to make a statement to a probation officer preparing a presentence report concerning the offender and directs the inclusion of that statement, if made in writing, in that presentence report.

Bill section 6, derived from HB 405 but modified in accordance with your instructions, adds to the rights of a victim of a violent crime (i.e. a "crime against a person," that is, a person convicted under AS 11.41) to comment in certain postconviction proceedings. The postconviction proceedings addressed in this provision are motions to modify or reduce sentence. If an offender files a motion to modify sentence and time permits, or if an offender files a motion to reduce sentence, the Department of Corrections is directed to provide notice to the victim (AS 12.55.088(d)). The victim is entitled to submit written comment (AS 12.55.088(e)). The comments are to be provided to the offender or the offender's attorneys (AS 12.55.088(f)) and considered by the court in conjunction with disposition of the motion (AS 12.55.088(g)). The responsibility to maintain a current address with the commissioner of corrections in order to receive notice under this section rests with the victim, and that address may not be disclosed (AS 12.55.088(h)).

Bill section 7 revises the definition of the term "victim" as that term is used in the sentencing provisions (AS 12.55). Victims are natural persons. As persons to whom an obligation may be due under AS 12.55 in cases where the victim has died, is a minor, or is incapacitated, the revision adds the victim's aunt, uncle, parent-in-law, brother-in-law, and sister-in-law.

Bill section 8 incorporates a definition of the term "crime against a person," a term that is used in bill section 6.

Bill section 9 adds to the list of victim's rights the right to make a statement in conjunction with preparation of a presentencing report for the offender and in conjunction with the offender's sentencing, and the right to obtain from the prosecutor, after conviction, a copy of the offender's criminal record.

Bill section 10 adds to the list of duties of the prosecuting attorney with respect to the victim of a crime. The additional provisions include the duty to ^{FELONY}

(1) confer with the victim about the victim's testimony before jury selection and trial;

(2) notify the victim of the defendant's conviction and the crimes for which convicted; the victim's rights to make a statement for use in conjunction with preparation of the presentence report and to make a statement at the time of sentencing; the address and telephone number of the office that will prepare the presentencing report; and of the time and place of the sentencing hearing;

(3) notify the victim in writing of the final disposition of the case within 30 days.

The provision directs the prosecutor's office to advise the victim that the content of the material that may be presented in conjunction with the victim's presentence statement or sentencing statement is limited, and describes the nature of what the victim may address in those statements.

Another provision of bill section 10 makes it a class B misdemeanor for an employer of a crime victim to "discipline" or to threaten to discipline the victim who cooperates in a prosecution. The provision defines the term "discipline."

Bill section 11 amends AS 33.16.120(c) to give victims the right to comment in writing or by attendance at a meeting of the Parole Board relative to proposed action that the board is considering concerning the offender. The section limits these rights to the victim and does not extend them to persons designated to act in place of the victim or the victim's attorney.

Bill section 12 amends existing law to provide that the Parole Board must notify the victim not only of its decision to grant discretionary parole, but also if it decides to deny discretionary parole.

Bill section 13 directs that, as to service of process on a paroled offender in conjunction with a civil action initiated by the victim, the commissioner of corrections is to provide the victim the address of the parolee if the address is requested by the victim and the commissioner is satisfied that the victim has initiated the action and requires the address in order to serve process.

Bill sections 14 and 15 assign certain additional responsibilities to the Parole Board when the governor refers to that board applications for executive clemency. The board is to give the victim of a "crime against a person" notice of an application for clemency and opportunity to submit written comment to the board as it considers the executive clemency request. The requirement is to be met only if the victim maintains a current mailing address and so requests.

Bill section 16 adds a new section, AS 33.30.013, that requires the commissioner of corrections to notify the victim or the victim's family if the offender escapes, is released on furlough or to a correctional restitution center, or is released on an early release program. The requirement is to be met only if the victim or other person entitled to notice maintains a current valid mailing address on file with the commissioner.

Bill section 17 adds a new program component in the Department of Public Safety. That department shall establish and maintain a victim assistance program--a paid supervisor and any volunteers--to manage the victim assistance program and to recruit, train, and evaluate the efforts of the volunteers under this program.

Bill section 18 authorizes the victim of an offense by a minor to request permission from the court to attend any hearing scheduled for the minor under AS 47.10.070. The section also directs the Department of Health and Social Services to assist a victim in preparing a written statement for submission and consideration at that proceeding, and directs that department to "make reasonable efforts to inform victims of the availability of this assistance."

Bill sections 19 and 20 directly amend pertinent court rules of criminal procedure. The change made by bill section 19

when a presentence investigation shall be completed and the report made available to the parties and their counsel; the change abets exercise of the crime victim's right to comment in conjunction with preparation of the presentence report. The court rule additions made by bill section 20, derived from HB 405, parallel the changes set out in bill section 6 covering postconviction relief for a victim of a crime against a person.

Bill section 21, an uncodified provision, directs that the amendments and additions made by this bill are to apply "to proceedings against defendants initiated on or after the effective date of the Act.

SUBJECT: Suggested language to replace * Sec. 2
(Service of process on prisoners) of draft
CSHB 296 ()

TO: Representative Dave Donley

FROM: Jack Chenoweth
Legislative Counsel

In the matter of service of summons, the applicable court rule is Alaska Rule of Civil Procedure 4(d)(11), which states, in pertinent part:

OFFICER OR AGENCY OF STATE AS AGENT FOR NON-GOVERNMENTAL DEFENDANT. Whenever, pursuant to statute, an officer or agency of the State of Alaska has been appointed as agent to receive service for a non-governmental defendant, . . . service of process shall be made in the manner provided by statute.

It is probably a good idea to insert into the text of bill section 2 something that specifies that the commissioner of corrections is, as the submission suggests, "appointed as agent to receive service of process for any prisoner committed to the custody of the Department of Corrections at the time of service."

The principal suggestion submitted by the Department of Corrections would require that, in a civil action commenced against a prisoner confined to a state facility, the plaintiff serve a copy of the summons and complaint on the superintendent of the correctional facility in which the prisoner is incarcerated rather than the commissioner of corrections as provided in the current bill draft. Though the disposition of the department's suggestion is, of course, a policy matter, there are three arguments that weigh against adoption of the change proposed. First, prisoners are legally committed to the custody of the commissioner of corrections, not to one of the commissioner's subordinates. See AS 33.-30.011 and 33.30.051. The commissioner may designate the facility at which a prisoner is to be incarcerated (AS 33.-30.061) and generally specify the applicable program to which the prisoner is to be assigned (AS 33.30.091). Second, most plaintiffs and their attorneys would not necessarily know the facility to which the prisoner is assigned and might incur costs in ascertaining that information. Third, some defendants are incarcerated "Outside," and the bill makes no provision for service of summons on an official at a correctional facility in another jurisdiction. I am of the view that the bill provision, as drafted, better accommodates sound management of the corrections system as a whole while permitting the commissioner to discharge the responsibility assigned by bill section 2 in a reasonable manner without substantial additional burden.

February 23, 1988

I trust this is responsive to the points for which the request was submitted.

Sec. 09.05.050. SERVICE OF PROCESS ON PRISONERS. (a) In a civil action against a person committed to the custody of the commissioner of corrections under state law, service of process may be effected by delivering personally or by registered or certified mail a copy of the summons and complaint to the superintendent of the correctional facility in which the prisoner is incarcerated with a copy to the prisoner. For purposes of service of process, the superintendent of the facility shall be deemed to be the appointed agent for service for any prisoner confined in the facility at the time of service. MEMORANDUM

January 14, 1988

SUBJECT: Sectional analysis of CSHB 296 ()
TO: Representative Dave Donley
FROM: Jack Chenoweth
Legislative Counsel

The following is a sectional analysis of the proposed committee substitute, denoted CSHB 296 ().

Section 1 adds a short title to existing AS 12.61, the chapter defining a victim's rights. It provides that the chapter may be cited as the "Alaska Crime Victim's Rights Act."

Section 2 provides that service of process on people in the custody of the commissioner of corrections in civil cases may be accomplished by delivering or mailing the summons to the commissioner of corrections (AS 09.05.050(a)). The commissioner is required to keep a record of each summons served and to deliver a notice of the service and a copy of the summons to the prisoner within 10 days after the date of service (AS 09.05.050(b)). The commissioner must also file, with the court having jurisdiction of the civil case, a copy of the summons and an affidavit showing that service of the summons on the prisoner has been made (AS 09.05.050(c)). The court may extend the time in which the defendant can respond to the summons (AS 09.05.050(d)).

Section 3 amends AS 09.38.065(a) to permit a creditor to levy against property that would otherwise be exempt from execution in order to enforce a claim arising from criminal conduct that resulted in a felony or misdemeanor conviction. However, certain items such as tools and professional books up to $750, and household goods and wearing apparel up to $250, remain exempt from execution.

Section 4 adds a new section, AS 12.47.095, that places new duties on the commissioner of health and social services and the attorney general for offenders who are determined to be guilty but mentally ill or, alternatively, are found to be not guilty by reason of insanity. The section enumerates instances when either of these officials must communicate to the victim, or to certain persons other than the victim, a change in the status of the offender if the victim or person other than the victim has requested notice of the change of status and has maintained a current address on file with the two state officers.

Section 5 adds to the factors that a court may consider in aggravation of a felony sentence the question of whether the defendant's conduct caused substantial physical, emotional, or financial harm to the victim, or the victim's immediate family if the victim died as a result of the defendant's conduct (AS 12.55.155(c)(27)).

Section 6 provides that if the state seeks to establish a factor in aggravation of a felony or the defendant seeks to establish a factor in mitigation of a felony, the prosecutor must serve written notice of the sentencing hearing on the victim. This section also gives the victim the right to appear, personally or by legal counsel, at sentencing hearings and to present evidence. The court is required to consider the evidence presented by the victim (AS 12.55.155(f)).

Section 7 revises the definition of the term "victim" as that term is used in the sentencing provisions. Victims are natural persons. As persons to whom obligation may be due under AS 12.55 in cases where the victim has died, is a minor, or is incapacitated, the definition presently includes the victim's spouse, parent, child, brother, sister, or legal guardian. The revision adds the victim's aunt, uncle, parent-in-law, brother-in-law, and sister-in-law (AS 12.55.185(11)).

Section 8 adds to the list of victim's rights the right to make a statement for presentencing and sentencing, either in person or by legal counsel, the right to make a statement, in person or through legal counsel, in the event the defendant moves to modify or reduce sentence, and the right to make a written statement to the governor in the event the governor considers executive clemency. (AS 12.61.010(a)).

Section 9 adds two new provisions to AS 12.61. AS 12.61.015 sets out a list of duties of the prosecuting attorney with respect to victims of crime. These include the duty to

January 14, 1988

(1) confer with the victim before jury selection and trial;

(2) notify the victim of the defendant's conviction, the victim's right to make a sentencing statement and that the defendant will see the sentencing statement, the address and telephone number of the office that will prepare the sentencing statement, the time and place of the sentencing proceeding, and of the victim's right to appear, in person or by counsel, at the sentencing hearing to address the court; and

(3) notify the victim in writing of the final disposition of the case within 30 days.

AS 12.61.017 makes it a class B misdemeanor for an employer of a victim of crime to penalize the victim because of the victim's cooperation in a prosecution.

Section 10 amends AS 33.16.120(c) to give victims the personal right to attend meetings of, or to be represented by legal counsel before, the parole board and to address the parole board, directly or through legal counsel, about proposed action that the board is considering concerning the offender. The rights granted under this subsection, as amended, may only be exercised by the victim or the victim's legal representative.

Section 11 amends existing law to provide that the parole board must notify a victim not only of its decision to grant parole, but also if it decides to deny parole (AS 33.16.120(e)). This section also provides that the notification must include the prisoner's residence address.

Section 12 provides that notification to a victim of a prisoner's early release for good time served must also include the prisoner's residence address (AS 33.16.120(f)).

Section 13 adds a new section, AS 33.30.013, that requires the commissioner of corrections to notify the victim or the victim's family if the offender escapes, is released on a furlough to a correctional restitution center, or any other early release program. It also requires the commissioner to notify the victim if the offender is considered for screening investigation to determine the need for further treatment in the event the offender has been transferred to the commissioner's custody if the offender was adjudicated guilty but mentally ill.

January 14, 1988

Section 14 amends AS 47.10.070 to give the victim of an offense by a minor the right to attend, or to be represented by legal counsel at, a hearing involving the minor. In certain cases, the victim's family may attend. This section has the effect of amending Rule 3(c) of the Alaska Child in Need of Aid Rules and Rule 3(c) of the Alaska Delinquency Rules, by giving victims access to the children's hearing. Accordingly, this effect is reflected in the title of the bill and is also explained in section 15 of the bill.

Re: House Bill 296

Dear Legislators,

We are writing on behalf of the Fairbanks Child Sexual Abuse Task Force, a coalition of agencies, organizations and associations involved in prevention and treatment of child sexual abuse. The CSATF wants to express its views on HB 296.

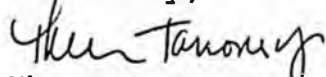

We support the bill. There is too little emphasis placed on victims' rights in both civil and criminal proceedings.

There are two minor changes we would suggest. First, we would recommend deleting subsection (1) of the new AS 12.61.015 (section 9 of the bill), which provides that the prosecuting attorney is to confer with the victim prior to selection of the jury. This gives the impression that the victim should have some say in jury selection, which in our view would be inappropriate. Prosecutors have much better experience and instinct in this area, and the new subsection could create conflicts, delay trials, and perhaps decrease convictions. Any competent prosecutor trying a case will by necessity have conferred with the victim prior to the trial, and thus we feel the best course is to delete that subsection, while retaining the remainder of the new AS 12.61.015.

Second, it might be helpful to clarify that those passages giving the victim the right to appear "by counsel" (at sentencing, before the parole board, etc.) are not intended to confer a right to appointed counsel.

Again, we would like to express our support for this bill and urge the committee to work for its enactment into law. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Theresa Tanoury

POSITION PAPER

COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTE FOR HOUSE BILL NO. 296 (HESS)

For an Act entitled: "An act relating to victims of crime, claims arising from criminal conduct, and service of process on prisoner's; and amending Rule 32(d)(2) of the Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure."

The Department supports the goals of protecting the rights of victims of crime, providing for appropriate participation of victims in court proceedings, and insuring that victims are informed to the outcome of proceedings relating to perpetrators. However, because the nature and processes of children's proceedings differ significantly from those of the adult criminal justice system the Department believes different mechanisms must be used for achieving these goals in juvenile cases.

Children's proceedings are closed to the public in order to promote the free discussion of sensitive psychological, social, and historical information concerning the child and the child's family which have relevance to the decisions of the court concerning the child. Closure also serves to promote rehabilitation by avoiding stigmatizing or labeling of youth.

Once the commission of an offense has been established (and in the vast majority of instances this occurs through admission of the youth rather than through trial) the focus of children's proceedings is not on the offense but on the causes of the child's behavior and on actions necessary to prevent further offenses. Though the offense is discussed it is in the context of determining the appropriate disposition.

Victim involvement in the process occurs in a variety of ways. Victims may be called to testify at any of the children's proceeding hearings, may provide information and opinion for presentation to the court in the predisposition report, and may be allowed to attend a closed hearing as a spectator with permission of the court.

Section 14 of this bill represents a substantial improvement over the original bill in the approach taken to providing victim access to juvenile court proceedings. This section would establish a duty of the Department of Health and Social Services to assist victims in requesting permission to attend juvenile proceedings. It would also ensure that victims are aware of their ability to make such requests and of the availability of aid in preparing requests. By maintaining court discretion in allowing spectators to attend juvenile proceedings but establishing a mechanism to facilitate victim involvement this bill avoids problems in the original bill. Broader opening of juvenile proceedings to spectators would inhibit the presentation of full and complete information, compromise confidentiality, and reduce the effectiveness of these proceedings.

Department Position

The Department supports CS HB296 as an effective means of balancing the public's interest in ensuring appropriate involvement of victims in criminal and juvenile delinquency proceedings with its interest in maintaining the confidentiality and effectiveness of the juvenile court process.

MEMORANDUM

February 25, 1988

SUBJECT: "Crime Victim's Rights Act": Comparison between CSHB 296 (HESS) and draft CSHB 296
() [version of 2/24/88]

TO: Representative Dave Donley

FROM: Jack Chenoweth
Legislative Counsel

Per your February 24 request, this memorandum briefly describes the differences between CSHB 296 (HESS) and the 2/24/88 draft of CSHB 296 ().

Title: The 2/24 draft adds the phrase "by victims of crime" after the word "claims" in recognition of bill's provisions extending the rights of crime victims against crime perpetrators. The 2/24 draft also adds a reference to a rule change in Rule 32(d)(2) of the Rules of Criminal Procedure.

Bill sections 1 and 2: There are no differences between these provisions in the drafts.

Bill section 3: The new material in this section is revised in the 2/24 bill draft to parallel certain comparable provisions in the statute defining exemptions of personal property (AS 09.38.020) in the Alaska Exemptions Act. The dollar limitations that are specified in CSHB 296 (HESS) are increased in the 2/24 draft.

Bill section 4: There are no differences between these provisions in the drafts.

Bill section 5 (2/24 draft): This section is new to the 2/24 draft; it has no comparable provision in the HESS CS. The provision is based on the February 2 suggestion of Assistant Attorney General Stephanie Joannides and speaks to a victim's right to offer material for consideration in the preparation of a presentence investigation report.

Bill section 6 (2/24 draft) and bill section 5 (HESS CS):
These sections add to the "aggravator" provision applicable to criminal sentencing. Though the subject matter between these provisions is generally the same, the approach is different. The 2/24 draft incorporates your amendment "Bi" that adds the "financial harm" provision and rewrites the aggravator provision that speaks to the impact of the crime on the victim's family.

Bill section 7 (2/24 draft) and bill section 6 (HESS CS):
The HESS CS is changed by deletion of language limiting the right of the victim to a right of appearance and omitting language saying that the victim has the right "to participate" at aggravation or mitigation proceedings and sentencing hearings, and by deletion of language authorizing the victim to be represented "by counsel." at these proceedings.

Bill section 8 (2/24 draft) and bill section 7 (HESS CS):
There are no differences between these sections of the two bills.

Bill section 9 (2/24 draft) and bill section 8 (HESS CS):
The differences between the two are these --

Paragraph (1): This provision is rewritten, based on your amendment "Bj," and broadened in the 2/24 draft to direct that the victim may obtain the dates of all criminal proceedings involving the defendant (rather than just the dates of trial and sentencing);

Paragraphs (7) and (8): The 2/24 draft is revised, based on your amendments "Bj" and "Bk," to omit appearance and representation by counsel and the sentencing hearing and at any hearing involving modification of sentencing; the victim's appearances at these proceedings must be in person;

Paragraph (10) of the 2/24 draft: The provision is new in the draft and does not have a comparable provision in the HESS CS; it adds to the rights of a victim the right to review the defendant's entire conviction record, and is based on your direction that new language be prepared and added to incorporate this right;

Paragraph (11) of the 2/24 draft: This revises the language of paragraph (10) of the HESS CS provisions applicable to a victim's access to police reports and presentence reports.

Bill section 10 (2/24 draft) and bill section 9 (HESS CS):
The 2/24 draft

-- specifies, in (a)(1), based on your amendment "Bj," that the right to the conference with the prosecuting attorney must concern the victim's testimony;

-- deletes from (a)(2)(B), based on your amendment "Bk," the opportunity of the victim to appear by counsel at a sentencing hearing; the victim may appear only personally;

-- substitutes for proposed AS 12.61.017 the new, tighter language of your amendment "Bm" that protects a victim in the exercise of the rights provided by AS 12.61 from employer interference; the changes better define "disciplinary action" that is prohibited, but at the same time specifically protect the employer's right to reduce a victim's pay and benefits when the reduction is "directly attributable to a victim's absence from employment to attend a court proceeding."

Bill sections 11 - 14 (2/24 draft) and bill sections 10 - 13 (HESS CS): There are no differences between these sections of the two bills.

Bill section 15 (2/24 draft): This provision is new in the 2/24 draft and has no counterpart in the HESS CS. It is based on your amendment "La" adding a victim's assistance program and a victim's assistance volunteer coordinator into the Department of Public Safety.

Bill section 16 (2/24 draft) and bill section 14 (HESS CS): There are no differences in this section of the two bills.

Bill section 17 (2/24 draft): This provision, a Criminal Rule change, is new in the 2/24 draft and has no counterpart in the HESS CS. The provision is based on the February 2 suggestion of Assistant Attorney General Stephanie Joannides and speaks to the availability of presentence reports to the attorneys for the parties "at the time of the aggravator and mitigator hearing and prior to sentencing."

Bill section 18 (2/24 draft) and bill section 15 (HESS CS): Except to change the reference to the bill section making the Criminal Rule change, there are no differences in this section of the two bills.

February 25, 1988

Bill section 19 (2/24 draft): This provision, speaking to the applicability of this Act, is new to the 2/24 draft and has no counterpart in the HESS CS. It is based on language of amendment "Bh" provided with my January 22 memorandum suggesting that these provisions not be made applicable to criminal matters in progress.

FISCAL ANALYSIS: HB 296

This bill will permit victims to appear and participate in sentencing proceedings. Based upon information provided by the deputy presiding judge for the Anchorage trial court criminal division, one-fifth of the time of a judge assigned to a criminal caseload is occupied by sentencing. It is anticipated that victim participation will extend the length of the proceeding. Given the volume of criminal cases in courts statewide, it is estimated that the equivalent of one additional judge will be required to handle the additional hearing time. Services of a retired judge appointed to serve pro tem are the least costly way of providing additional judicial resources.

CONTINUATION of FISCAL NOTE ANALYSIS

For Bill/Resolution No. CSHB 296 (HESS)

The proposed committee substitute for this bill amends existing law to require, among other things, that prosecuting attorneys provide certain information to the victims of crime, in three important respects.

In Section 6, the bill requires that prosecutors serve written notice upon a victim of the victim's right to appear and participate at hearings to establish aggravators or mitigators to be considered by a court in the sentencing of defendants for crimes against victims. This particular circumstance arises in most felony trials.

In Section 9, the bill requires, that upon the request of a victim of a crime, prosecuting attorneys shall: (1) confer with the victim of crime before the selection of the jury and the trial of the defendant; and (2) after trial notify the victim of the defendant's conviction and the crimes for which the defendant was convicted, including advising the victim of the victim's right to make an oral or written statement in preparation of the defendant's presentence report and sentencing, and advising the victim of the victim's right to appear personally or by counsel at the defendant's presentence hearing to present a written or oral statement, and advising the victim of the address and telephone number of the office preparing the presentence report, and advising of the time and place of sentencing.

Finally, Section 9, would require that prosecuting attorneys notify the victim in writing of the final disposition of the case within 30 days after final disposition of the case. The requirements of Section 9 would apply to both felony and misdemeanor crimes. It also appears that notification of final disposition would be required at both the trial and appellate levels.

Currently, of the 18,000 new criminal matters handled by the department each year, about 3,000 felony cases and 4,000 misdemeanor cases involve crimes having a victim. Many of the felony cases have multiple victims. Moreover, in cases where the victim has died, is a minor, or is incapacitated, the term victim includes a spouse, parent, child, brother, sister, aunt, uncle, parent-in-law, brother-in-law, sister-in-law, or legal guardian of the victim. Consequently, a substantial amount of new work must be undertaken by all of the department's prosecution offices in order to satisfy the requirements of the bill. Most of this work would be handled by paralegals and legal secretaries, except for the requirement for prosecutors to confer with victims before the selection of a jury. Where the victim is to be a witness the requirement for attorneys to confer with victims will not cause additional work. Where victims are not witnesses this requirement could consume several hundred hours of the limited attorney time that is now, and will be available in the future.

CONTINUATION of FISCAL NOTE ANALYSIS

For Bill/Resolution No. CSHB 296 (HESS)

The requirements of the bill, for literally thousands of notices, and numerous subsequent requests for assistance and further information, will place an enormous burden on a reduced prosecution support staff that simply cannot be borne without additional staff resources. This is particularly true in smaller offices where, in FY 1989, clerical support will be very thin. And it is also an important consideration in the state's two largest prosecution offices, because of their overwhelming caseloads.

It will therefore be necessary to add part-time clerical assistance at Ketchikan, Kotzebue, Sitka, and Kodiak. A full-time paralegal and a full-time legal secretary would be added in Anchorage, and a full-time paralegal and a full-time legal secretary would be added in Fairbanks, because of the large number of cases at these locations, including major felonies with multiple victims. All of these locations suffered support staff reductions in FY 1988.

In addition to the fiscal impact expected by the Department of Law, this bill could have substantial fiscal impact on the Department of Corrections and, to a lesser impact, the Department of Health and Social Services. These departments should be contacted for their comments.

Section 4 covers notification to victims of changes in the status of offenders committed to the custody of the commissioner of health and social services. The proposed section divides the responsibility for giving notice to victims between the commissioner of health and social services, the attorney general, or the prosecutor. Because offenders committed under AS 12.47 are in the custody of the commissioner of health and social services, responsibility for giving notice should reside with the commissioner.

The granting of rights to victims to participate personally or by counsel in aggravation or mitigation proceedings, sentencing proceedings and parole board meetings, as proposed by Sections 8 and 10, will result in more and lengthier hearings being held. Although the cost of this result is not quantifiable, some additional cost to the courts, prosecutors, public defenders, public advocates, connections, and the parole board will undoubtedly occur.

Lastly, the Department of Law is greatly concerned with the part of Section 8 that would give victims the right to access police reports related to the case in which the victim was involved. These reports often contain information that is provided confidentially by members of the general public and by confidential informants. The reports may also include unverified information and information that is unverifiable. Release of these reports would discourage people from coming forward with information about a crime, could expose confidential police sources and, in some cases, result in the dissemination of information that is incorrect or cannot be proven.

This part-time position is needed to provide for the victim notification and liaison requirements of CSHB 296. Written notice of a victim's rights to participate in aggravation/mitigation hearings, to provide oral and written statements in respect to presentence reports, and notice of final disposition in several thousand criminal trials, will cause a substantial additional workload for the state's prosecution support staff.

Allocation to the Legal Secretary I class is recommended because of the large amount of written notice to be handled, and the need to provide accurate, timely case scheduling information to victims.
