Island may be named for Dunns

Alaska pioneers Mack and Mattie Dunn may soon have an island named after them if a recent proposal is passed by the state Legislature.

For almost 40 years, the couple lived near a small island 20 miles south of Wrangell in Zimovia Strait. Known locally as "Dunn's Island," a piece of legislation introduced this week by Rep. Robin Taylor, R-Wrangell, seeks to make that name official.

Originally from Anacortes, Wash., the Dunns sailed to Alaska in 1938 on their 30-foot fishing vessel. They lived on the land, building a small cabin on Dunn's Island to store their furs and home-grown produce.

Mr. Dunn died in 1976. His wife died in October 1967.
