ANALYSIS of SF 57 (continued from page 1)

Assumptions: (1) the decline in the number of nonresident goat hunters caused by the imposition of the guide requirement in 1989 has bottomed out, and (2) nonresident license/goat tag sales will remain at the 1990 level.

Economic Impact: In 1988, 320 nonresident goat tags were sold. In 1989 (the first year of the guide requirement), 112 tags were sold; in 1990, 90 were sold. The loss to the department of license/tag revenue for 1989 was $64,500. The loss for 1990 was $71,300. The projected loss for 1991 is $88,550 (based on the 1991 nonresident license/tag fee increase).

If passed, this legislation would boost income to local economies, as well as to the department. A 1986 study by the department found that the typical nonresident goat hunter in SE Alaska spent over $2500 for transportation, goods and services. That equates to more than $575,000 that is lost to local economies each year.
