SPONSOR STATEMENT HOUSE BILL 101 NATIONAL ELECTRICAL CODE

House Bill 101 was requested by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers to assure the state's adoption of the minimum electrical safety standards for the state as set by the American National Standards Institute.

The National Electrical Code and the National Electrical Safety Code are reviewed by the American National Standards Institute every three years. These codes constitute the minimum electrical safety standards for the state and are adopted through revising AS 18.60.580. House Bill 101 will eliminate the need for new legislation every three years, a costly and time-consuming exercise, by allowing the Department of Labor to adopt, by regulation, the most recent codes to constitute the minimum electrical safety standards of the state. This bill also provides for the 1993 published edition of the National Electrical Safety Code and the National Electrical Code to constitute the minimum electrical safety standards for Alaska until such time as the Department of Labor can adopt these by regulation.

In addition to the I.B.E.W., House Bill 101 has the support of the Department of Labor and carries a zero fiscal note.

House Bill No. 101, proposes to allow the department to adopt by regulation the most recent national electrical code or national electrical safety code. The bill also adopts the 1993 published edition of the National Electrical Code and the 1993 published edition of the National Electrical Safety Code in the interim.

The Department of Labor supports House Bill No. 101.
