The Public Defender (PD) has no information regarding the extent to which tuberculosis is a problem in this state, or the frequency with which this bill would be used in a way which would trigger PD representation. Assuming that involuntary detention for tuberculosis diagnosis/treatment will be infrequent, the PD anticipates no fiscal impact.

This bill would update the state's general tuberculosis control program and the involuntary detention laws for those persons who have infectious tuberculosis but are unable or unwilling to seek treatment or take safeguards to protect the public against infections. The bill seeks to correct deficiencies in the existing law in respect to recognizing due process requirements of the United States and Alaska constitutions. The bill will allow the court to address the merits of the decision of confinement in these cases rather than focus its review on arguments regarding alleged constitutional deficiencies in the process to support a detention decision. This is corrective legislation that does not have an effect on the existing caseload, and there will not be a fiscal impact.

STATE OF ALASKA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
JUNEAU

March 21, 1995

The Honorable Gail Phillips
Speaker of the House
Alaska State Legislature
State Capitol
Juneau, AK 99801-1182

Dear Speaker Phillips:

Under the authority of art. III, sec. 18, of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a bill to update the state's tuberculosis control program to ensure that our statutes expressly recognize constitutional requirements when the state must order a person involuntarily detained or confined for essential medical testing or treatment or to protect the public health. The bill also makes miscellaneous amendments to recognize new developments in the field and to improve the reporting requirements for a case involving a person with tuberculosis.

Tuberculosis is still a serious public health problem in Alaska. Tuberculosis is a disease that can be spread through fairly routine contact such as coughing in a confined, crowded area. In 1994, tuberculosis was diagnosed in several outbreaks in rural villages in Alaska. Tuberculosis can be successfully treated, but the treatment requires a patient to take medication for six months to 24 months. Since some patients face lifestyle problems that make it difficult for that patient to voluntarily successfully complete the entire course of treatment or to isolate themselves from the public to protect the public health, it is sometimes necessary for orders to be issued and enforced to ensure that the patient is following the treatment plan or is isolated from the public. If treatment is prematurely abandoned, a patient's tuberculosis can become more resistant to treatment and place the public at risk of catching an even more difficult form of this disease in the future.

The state's tuberculosis control program and involuntary detention laws should be revised to explicitly recognize constitutional safeguards required in order to quickly respond to tuberculosis incidents and to detain or confine a person if that person is unable or unwilling to undergo treatment and is a threat to the public health. While the Department of Health and Social Services anticipates that the involuntary detention and commitment provisions in the bill will be used only rarely because most people will voluntarily take treatment and use safeguards when advised by a medical professional, the bill is necessary to allow a system to be in place to respond quickly in a crisis situation.

I urge your support of this bill in response to an important public health issue.

Sincerely,
