The Honorable Lyda Green
Alaska State Senator
Room 423 State Capitol Bldg.
Juneau, Alaska 99801-1182

Dear Senator Green:

Re: SB 95, Uninsured/Underinsured Motorist Coverage (UM/UIM)

During the hearing on SB 95 before Senate Judiciary on 4/24/95, Senator Taylor, Chairman of the Committee asked that I respond to you concerning your questions on the bill.

Higher Limits Offer

As you may know, the bill started out as a repeal of the higher limits offer of UM/UIM found in AS 21.89.020(c). In Senate Labor & Commerce, we suggested that it might be more appropriate to devise a compromise position for that section and noted that a reduction of the $1,000,000/$2,000,000 offer to $1,000,000/$1,000,000 might be a good start. We pointed out that there has been a shift away from the old requirement that the purchaser of insurance could only protect self and family to the extent that the insured provided protection for a third party. A number of states have adopted this view in one form or another. There are now 18 states that have some form of higher limits offering. The move to no fault laws in the 70's with its inherent focus on protecting self, has fostered this movement to a method whereby persons under a tort system might also avail themselves of greater choices of self coverage.

The existing law was adopted because the legislature wished to allow purchasers of automobile liability insurance, which basically provides coverage for injured third parties, to consider purchase of insurance covering personal protection for the purchaser and family. It allows for limits that exceed coverage for third party bodily injury liability. Prior to the changes in 1990 (Ch 78 SLA 1990), insurers did not voluntarily offer higher limits of UM/UIM or offer other means of substantive protection.

The policy issue considered in this legislation is, does the state wish to limit the coverage for a person buying automobile insurance for their own protection to the amount that person voluntarily purchases for the protection of a third party.

The Tumbleson Case

An issue that has an impact on the subject of UM/UIM is the feature in Ch 78 SLA 1990 which provides that a not-at-fault party's underinsured motorists coverage would be available as excess in cases where the at-fault party had insurance insufficient to meet the needs of the injured not-at-fault party in an automobile accident. The recent U. S. District Court case of Colonial Insurance Company of California v. Derek Tumbleson (Case # A94-184 CV (JKS)) has placed this provision into question. The premise for this ruling is that the underinsured feature is only triggered if the at-fault third party is uninsured. This action, if it stands, further impacts the ability of the purchaser of insurance to protect personal interests to a greater extent than the state requires protection of the third party. To add to the confusion, there is another case in state court addressing a similar fact situation which arrives at a different conclusion, so we have conflicting court cases.

Pricing

Ch 78 SLA 1990 did contain a section that indicated the coverage was excess. Testimony has been tendered that the rates would go up substantially if this legislation were adopted. For example, the lobbyist for State Farm indicated the rates for this coverage would increase by as much as 80% if the coverage were made excess by this legislation. That is somewhat puzzling since State Farm made a filing following passage of Ch 78 SLA 1990 which acknowledged that the coverage was intended on an excess basis instead of the difference-in-limits approach. Presumably, they have been settling losses on the basis of their filing.

The rate filings received from other insurers following the passage of that law reflect a similar view. In any event, rates must be supported on the basis of experience or a sound evaluation of a change which results in increased claims. Further, the charges for UM/UIM are borne by the purchasers of the coverage and not by those who do not purchase it. Since insurers do best when there is a legitimate spreading of the risk, it is to their advantage to encourage purchase of the coverage.

Proposed Committee Substitute

Proposed committee substitute for SB95 version "O" is identical to version "M" for sections 1 - 4. The remaining sections deal with the timing and application of the legislation.

Section 5. This applicability provision notes that the addition of intent language (Section 1) and the change to AS 21.89.020(c) apply to new and renewal policies after the effective date of this Section, which is July 1, 1995 (per Section 8).

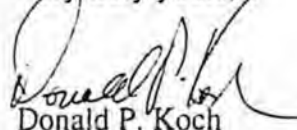

Section 6. The resolution of the Tumbleson case is clarified with the language in AS 28.20.445(b) which is in Section 3 of the bill, and the repeal of AS 28.20.445(h) and AS 28.40.100(a)(22) which is in Section 4 of the bill. These two items are made retroactive to September 2, 1990, the effective date of Ch 78 SLA 1990 by this Section. AS 28.20.445(h) and AS 28.40.100(a)(22) are near identical definitions of "underinsured motor vehicle" which were inadvertently not repealed with passage of Ch 78 SLA 1990.

Section 7. This Section makes the retroactivity of Section 6 immediate.

Section 8. See Section 5 discussion

If you have any questions on any of this, I would be happy to respond. My direct line is 465-2577. Thank you.

Very truly yours,

Donald P. Koch
Chief of Market Surveillance

Revised Uninsured and Underinsured Motor Vehicle
Coverage Rate Schedules and Rule Pages

Enclosed for filing on behalf of the State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Company of Bloomington, Illinois are revised uninsured and underinsured motor vehicle coverage rate schedules and rule pages pursuant to recent legislation in the state of Alaska.

Alaska House Bill No. 429 broadens the extent of coverage provided by the uninsured and underinsured motor vehicle coverage by mandating coverage in an excess form rather than a difference-in-limits form and also by allowing stacking in certain instances. Enclosed Exhibit I contains the present, indicated, and proposed uninsured and underinsured motor vehicle coverage rates. No changes to the additional premium charges for Uninsured Property Damage are being submitted with this filing. The income effect of the change in rates due to Alaska House Bill No. 429 is revenue neutral, the rates merely being adjusted for the change in benefits.

We respectfully request that this filing be approved, effective immediately, for both new and renewal policies dated January 1, 1991 and later. Please return the enclosed duplicate of this letter and the rate and rule pages, appropriately stamped, for completion of our files. A self-addressed, stamped envelope is enclosed for your convenience. If you should have any questions regarding this filing, please telephone me collect at 309/766-2325.

602. UNINSURED AND UNDERINSURED MOTOR VEHICLE COVERAGES

Each policy (including a named non-owner policy) providing liability coverage on motor vehicles licensed for highway use must include uninsured and underinsured motor vehicle coverage (U) for bodily injury and property damage liability with limits equal to the financial responsibility limits, unless rejected by the named insured in writing. The property damage coverage is subject to a $250 deductible. In addition, limits equal to the bodily injury liability limits of the policy and specified limits greater than the bodily injury liability limits of the policy must be offered initially and at each renewal.

Uninsured and underinsured motor vehicle coverage (UI) for bodily injury liability only is available at the option of the policyholder.

The phrase "uninsured motor vehicle coverage" in other rules of this manual includes the underinsured motor vehicle coverage referred to above.

See the rate section for the available limits of coverage and premiums.

Coverage Rate Schedules and Rule Pages

Enclosed for filing on behalf of the State Farm Fire and Casualty Company of Bloomington, Illinois are revised uninsured and underinsured motor vehicle coverage rate schedules and rule pages pursuant to recent legislation in the state of Alaska.

This is a companion filing to the State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Company filing of this date under separate cover. Our automobile insurance operation in the State Farm Fire and Casualty Company directly relates to the rates and procedures utilized by the parent Mutual Company. With this revision, we propose to maintain our current base rate relationship to the proposed State Farm Mutual rates. Limits above 500/500, which are currently not available in State Farm Fire and Casualty, will also be established using the current base rate relationship to State Farm Mutual. The income effect of the change in rates due to Alaska House Bill No. 429 is revenue neutral, the rates merely being adjusted for the change in benefits.

We respectfully request that this filing be approved, effective immediately, for both new and renewal policies dated January 1, 1991 and later. DEVELOPMENT OF THE INDICATED UNINSURED/UNDERINSURED RATES
EXPLANATORY NOTES

- Col. (1) Uninsured and underinsured limits carried by policyholder.
- Col. (2) Bodily injury liability limit factor corresponding to limits from Column (1).
- Col. (3) and (4) Indicated additive charges for uninsured and underinsured coverages, respectively. These additive charges were developed using a pricing model which has been formally presented at Casualty Actuarial Society meetings and which was published in the Fall 1987 edition of Casualty Actuarial Society Forum.

A customer purchases uninsured and underinsured coverages to make up what is lacking in the bodily injury limits of a liable party. Thus, we have used the additive charges for the bodily injury liability coverage at each limit to develop the uninsured and underinsured additive charges. This development takes into consideration the level of exposure at each limit, which depends on 1) the average coverage provided by the liable party, 2) the coverage desired by the customer, and 3) the magnitude of the uninsured population.

We have estimated the first item based on bodily injury limit distributions, the second item is known, and we have estimated the third item to be 25% by comparing uninsured and underinsured coverage frequency with bodily injury liability frequency.

- Col. (5) Column (3) + Column (4).
- Col. (6) $[(\text{Column (5a)} + \text{Column (5b)}) / 2]$. This is based on the assumption that 50% of claims will stack limits from another policy.

Dear Senator Taylor:

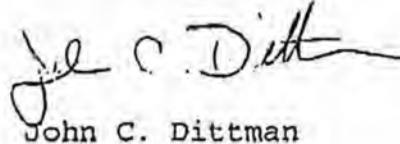

As discussed at today's hearing on SB 95, I am enclosing a copy of the recent letter we received from the State Farm adjuster, citing Tumbleson and denying excess coverage under their UIM provision.

As was further discussed at the hearing, from our brief poll of attorneys in the community, we were able to ascertain that, prior to Tumbleson, the insurers appeared to treat the law as already providing excess. Below is a list of claimants, insurance companies, and claim numbers that were paid as if the statute provided excess. I am sure there are many, many more examples, but these were all we have been able to uncover at this time:

1. Clinton Lemar, Allstate, Claim No. 332-025-216-0 SLA
2. Christopher Hall, Kemper, Claim No. 788-AE-029331-X
3. David McCown, State Farm, Claim No. 02-0167-394
4. Anthony Bartack, State Farm, Claim No. 02-018-298
5. Otis Newton, Progressive, Claim No. 92-0247636
6. Dan Ronken, USAA, Claim No. 1-61/35 454 92 47

Let me know if there is any further information you require.

Sincerely yours,

John C. Dittman

Dear Mr. Kell:

As you are aware, the limit of Mr. Wehde's underinsured motorist coverage is $100,000. The policy and the statutes require that the limit of liability be less than the UIM limit before the UIM coverage is triggered. See AS 28.20.445(h), as well as a recent decision issued in the case of Colonial Insurance Company of California v. Tumbleson. Based on the foregoing, there is no UIM coverage triggered. Therefore, I will be closing my file at this time.

4 * Section 1. INTENT. It is the intent of the legislature that this Act reverse the decision of 5 the United States District Court for the District of Alaska, in Colonial Insurance Company of 6 California v. Tumbleson, Civil No. A94-184CV (January 20, 1995), in which the court
7 determined that in some cases underinsured motor vehicle insurance was not coverage excess
8 to liability insurance coverage. It is also the intent of the legislature that underinsured motor 9 vehicle insurance should be available whenever the damages of an insured are greater than 10 amounts payable under other motor vehicle insurance coverage.

11 * Sec. 2. AS 21.89.020(c) is amended to read:

12 (c) An insurance company offering automobile liability insurance in this state
13 for bodily injury or death shall, initially and at each renewal, offer coverage prescribed
14 in AS 28.20.440 and 28.20.445 or AS 28.22 for the protection of the persons insured
15 under the policy who are legally entitled to recover damages for bodily injury or death

1 from owners or operators of uninsured or underinsured motor vehicles. The limit
2 written may not be less than the limit in AS 28.20.440 or AS 28.22.101. Coverage
3 required to be offered under this section must include the following options:

4 (1) policy limits equal to the limits voluntarily purchased to cover the 5 liability of the person insured for bodily injury or death;

6 (2) except when the coverage consists of motorcycle liability insurance,
7 and except for a named insured required to file proof of financial responsibility under 8 AS 28.20 or an applicant required to file proof of financial responsibility under 9 AS 28.20, policy limits in the following amounts when these limits are greater than 10 those offered under (1) of this subsection:

11 (A) $100,000 because of bodily injury to or death of one person
12 in one accident, and, subject to the same limit for one person, $300,000
13 because of bodily injury to or death of two or more persons in one accident;

14 (B) $300,000 because of bodily injury to or death of one person
15 in one accident, and, subject to the same limit for one person, $500,000
16 because of bodily injury to or death of two or more persons in one accident;

17 (C) $500,000 because of bodily injury to or death of one or
18 more persons [PERSON] in one accident [, AND, SUBJECT TO THE SAME
19 LIMIT FOR ONE PERSON, $500,000 BECAUSE OF BODILY INJURY TO
20 OR DEATH OF TWO OR MORE PERSONS IN ONE ACCIDENT];

21 (D) $500,000 because of bodily injury to or death of one person
22 in one accident, and, subject to the same limit for one person, $1,000,000
23 because of bodily injury to or death of two or more persons in one accident;

24 (E) $1,000,000 because of bodily injury to or death of one or
25 more persons [PERSON] in one accident [, AND, SUBJECT TO THE SAME
26 LIMIT FOR ONE PERSON, $2,000,000 BECAUSE OF BODILY INJURY TO
27 OR DEATH OF TWO OR MORE PERSONS IN ONE ACCIDENT];

28 (3) other policy limits at the option of the insurer.

29 * Sec. 3. AS 28.20.445(b) is amended to read:

30 (b) An amount payable under the uninsured and underinsured motorist
31 coverage shall be excess to an amount payable under automobile bodily injury, death,

1 or medical payments coverage, or as workers' compensation benefits and may not
2 duplicate amounts paid or payable under valid and collectible automobile bodily injury,
3 death, or medical payments coverage, or as workers' compensation benefits. For 4 purposes of this subsection, uninsured and underinsured motorist coverage is 5 excess and payable if the insured has bodily injury or property damage and the 6 damages exceed amounts payable under other valid and collectible automobile
7 liability insurance coverage.

8 * Sec. 4. AS 28.20.445(h) and AS 28.40.100(a)(22) are repealed.

9 * Sec. 5. APPLICABILITY. Sections 1 and 2 of this Act apply to a motor vehicle liability

Re Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 95

Dear Senator Kelly:

I am writing to you on behalf of State Farm regarding CSSB 95. State Farm has approximately 32% of the automobile insurance market in Alaska. We have been involved in the legislative structuring of the mandatory automobile insurance program here in Alaska from the outset. We originally proposed the mandated offer of UM/UM as a means of allowing Alaskans a way of guaranteeing for themselves protection from the uninsured and/or underinsured driver. Sadly, we have seen what started out to be a simple, affordable and easy to administer concept become something that is complicated, expensive and subject to differing opinions by many, including two of our three federal judges. Your committee has the ability to begin the process of correcting this problem, and we hope that it does so.

At the outset, we wish to state that we do not believe the answer to this problem is set forth in the original version of SB 95, nor in CSS 95, which we have reviewed as quickly as we have been able. Neither solves the excess problem created by the 1990 amendment. The CS vividly demonstrates the complexity that is created by mandating so many different kinds of offers. Neither of these solutions will stop the dramatically increasing cost of this coverage. Neither will create a coverage that is easily explained to and understood by our policyholders.

There is a much simpler, more effective solution to this problem. That is to return to where we began with this coverage. We recommend that you eliminate the mandated reoffer of this coverage at the time of every renewal. It is one thing to educate by notices sent at the time of renewal, but it is quite another to require the offer of a number of complicated, different coverages at every renewal. Second, we recommend you link the amount of UM/UM coverage one may purchase to the amount of liability coverage one chooses to purchase. We do not believe it makes any sense at all for someone to be allowed to buy more protection for themselves than they are willing to provide for someone else. Finally, we strongly recommend that you eliminate this coverage as excess. This change, made in 1990, in our view is totally unnecessary, and has proven to be expensive. The adoption of these three simple recommendations would again create in Alaska a system providing for a mandated offer of UM/UM that is simple, easy to administer, easy for our policyholders to understand and finally as affordable as such a system can be.

To see this is so, we would like to briefly explain the evolution of this coverage in Alaska. We would then like to explain the history of rate changes and set forth the effect we believe our recommended changes would have, as well as the effect we believe the other changes would have.

Finally we would like to explain why (aside from the issue of expense) we believe the idea of making this coverage excess is a bad one.

Evolution of UM/UM Coverage In Alaska

In 1983, mandatory automobile insurance was an issue that was hotly debated in this legislature. We opposed the adoption of mandatory automobile insurance in short because we believed the approach advocated through the legislation then pending would be both costly and ineffective. We instead argued the only real way one could guarantee protection from uninsured or underinsured drivers was to purchase uninsured and underinsured coverage. I enclose herewith a copy of testimony I gave before this very committee in May of 1983, and as you can see on pages 7 and 8 of that testimony, we argued for mandated offers of UM/UM to guarantee compensation to victims of financially irresponsible motorists.

Ultimately, legislation was approved which adopted a form of compulsory insurance without the administrative burdens of the legislation initially proposed, coupled with a mandated offer of UP/UNM coverage equal to the amounts the insured chose to purchase voluntarily. The original intent of this coverage was to guarantee that regardless of whether an insured was struck by an uninsured or an underinsured driver, the insured would at least be able to collect an amount equal to the limits of UM/UM they chose to purchase themselves.

In a sense, this coverage was replacement coverage, filling in the gap between the limits of the at fault party and the UM/UM limits the insured chose to purchase. The purpose of this coverage was to guarantee that the insured would always be at least in the same position he or she would have been in had the at fault party purchased liability limits equal to the UM/UM limits the insured chose to purchase. In other words, if an insured chose to purchase $100,000 of UM/UM coverage, the insured would know that regardless of the resources of the at fault party, the insured would have $100,000 of protection. If the insured was hit by someone with no insurance, the insured would have available the entire $100,000 of UM/UM coverage. If the insured was hit by someone with $50,000 of coverage, the insured would have available $50,000 of coverage from their UM/UM so again, they would recover a total of $100,000, the limit of their UM/UM coverage.

This coverage was affordable for a number of reasons. First, it was triggered only if the UM/UM limits were greater than the limits of the at fault third party. The reasoning is obvious. If the third party is insured, they cannot be said to be uninsured. If the liability limits of the third party

Senator Tim Kelly

LESSMEIER & WINTERS
ATTORNEYS AT LAW

are greater than the insured's UM/UM limits, the third party cannot be said to be underinsured.

Second, the coverage was also affordable because it was not excess. There was no reason for it to be, for the purpose was to guarantee a certain level of protection from all available sources. Thus, it was reduced dollar for dollar by the limits of the third party. This kept the cost of the coverage down.

Third, UM/UM coverage could be purchased only in an amount equal to the limits of liability coverage the insured chose to purchase. In order to guarantee a level of protection for himself, an insured had to provide that same level of protection to a third party. By purchasing higher liability limits, one is less likely to be someone else's underinsured.

Finally, the mandated offer was easy to administer. It was a one time offer. It did not need to be made repeatedly, as is the case under the present law. All of these things combined to make this coverage affordable.

This very simple concept has been modified over the years so that now the coverage once triggered is excess. There is debate about the elimination of the coverage trigger, and indeed, one federal judge has ruled that the trigger has already been eliminated. The linkage of the amount of UP/UNM to liability limits has been eliminated, as has the single mandated offer. It is no longer enough to offer the coverage just once, but it must be offered at the time of every renewal.

Rates

As you probably know, rates are driven primarily by the frequency of loss and the severity of loss. Rates are also affected by increasing administrative costs. It should come as no surprise that the changes set forth above have had a dramatic affect on rates. If you make this coverage excess the inevitable result is that our loss experience will deteriorate. If you change the trigger point our loss experience will deteriorate even more.

Our UM/UM loss experience in Alaska has been very unfavorable. We increased our UM/UM rate by 28% on January 1, 1991 and again by 13% on March 1, 1994. Assuming no changes are made in the law, our current experience indicates an increase of 47% will be necessary.

If the trigger point is changed, as advocated by Senator Donnelly, we would anticipate an additional increase of 80% for a total rate increase of 127%. On the other hand, were you to repeal the excess provisions enacted in 1990 so we went back to a pure difference in limits concept, we would anticipate a rate increase of only 15%.

In other words, our UM/UM loss experience has and continues to be poor. Regardless of what changes are going to be made a rate increase is going to be necessary. If we go back to difference in limits, a 15% increase will be necessary. If the trigger point is not changed, but once the coverage is triggered it is excess, we anticipate a 47% increase. If the trigger point is changed

March 28, 1995
Page Four

LESSMEIER & WINTERS

and the coverage is excess, we anticipate an increase of 127%.

To give a practical example, the average indicated rate under the current law (semi-annual premium) for $50,000/$100,000 is $16.78. If the law were changed to pure difference in limits, this coverage would cost $11.36. If the trigger point is changed and this is excess, this coverage would cost $30.28. Please keep in mind that the rate indication under current law is for a 47% increase.

Why Should This Coverage Be Excess?

The argument that this coverage should be excess is that an insured thinks (regardless of what the law provides) that when he has purchased UM/UIM of $50,000 he understands his insurer will pay $50,000 in addition to the limits of the at fault third party. We frankly think this is simply a question of education and understanding. The concept that under a combined coverage of UM/UIM you are guaranteeing you will have the limit you choose available and no more is an easy concept to explain and an easy concept to understand. The concept of excess coverage is more difficult to explain, and multiple coverages even more so.

The second argument that seems to be made in support of excess provisions is that the general public is better off if UM/UIM is excess. We think not. As we have seen in Alaska, to make this coverage excess is to make it more expensive. As the cost of this coverage continues to escalate, those who might have purchased it if it were more affordable, may well choose to decline it. In other words, by making this coverage excess, you take away the option of more affordable coverage. This should be apparent by looking at the rate example we have set forth above.

Just as important, even if this coverage is not excess, an insured still has available the ability to purchase significant amounts of coverage that provide guaranteed protection to whatever level the insured chooses. We seriously doubt if when purchasing this coverage, an insured chooses her level of UM/UIM limits by making estimates of what level of insurance the third party that negligently hits them is going to have in the event an accident occurs. It is simply not possible to predict whether the person that hits you is going to be insured, and if so to what level. Rather than choosing a level of UM/UIM based on the coverage a third party might have, we think most people by purchasing this coverage intend to guarantee the level of compensation of their limits. It is just not possible or practical to assume anything else.

We strongly believe our policy holders would be better off if we went back to the system of UM/UIM we originally had in Alaska. That coverage was easy to understand, easy to administer and was affordable. The changes that have been made to improve this system have had just the opposite effect. We believe it is time they be undone.

Although we have only had the CS available since Friday afternoon, we have a number of initial concerns. First of all, it appears to contemplate separate offers of UM and UIM. Frankly, we do not understand why someone would purchase UIM, but not UM. Second, the CS does not appear to have a provision for declining the UIM offer. Perhaps we are mistaken, but we could not find

March 28, 1995
Page Five

ATTORNEYS AT LAW

find it. Finally, the CS demonstrates the difficulty of understanding and then explaining in writing all of these different coverages at different levels at the outset and then again at each renewal. You could accomplish the same thing by requiring the offer at the outset, but then requiring the insurer to simply notify the insured in writing at each renewal of the availability of these coverages. This would not pose near the administrative difficulty or legal exposure as does the mandated offers at the time of each renewal. Even with these changes you end up creating a complex area of the law to deal with what was originally a simple concept.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on this legislation. If you have any questions or if we might be of additional assistance, please let me know.

STATEMENT IN OPPOSITION TO
THE ENACTMENT OF A COMPULSORY AUTOMOBILE LIABILITY
INSURANCE STATUTE IN ALASKA
HEARING BEFORE THE
SENATE LABOR AND COMMERCE COMMITTEE
MAY 31, 1983

Mr. Chairman, members of the Labor and Commerce Committee, my name is Michael Lessmeier. I am a lawyer from Juneau and I am here on behalf of Allstate Insurance Company and State Farm Insurance Company. Both Allstate and State Farm have had a long and generally negative experience with compulsory insurance. We believe compulsory insurance laws, such as the bill before you, aren't needed, create more problems than they solve, don't benefit the general public or our policyholders, will unnecessarily raise premium rates and in the final analysis, don't work.

The real question is whether the cost of compulsory insurance justifies the realistic benefit we can hope to achieve from it. We believe the answer to this question is no and we want to explain why.

The theoretical goal of compulsory insurance is to guarantee that innocent victims of automobile accidents are compensated for their injuries. But we know that the enactment of compulsory insurance does not guarantee that these people will be so compensated. Compulsory insurance has never in any state reached the objectives sought by its sponsors.

One of the reasons compulsory insurance has not been effective, is that uninsured drivers are generally made up of those who can't afford insurance, have no drivers license, do not register their vehicles, are driving stolen vehicles or vehicles involved in hit-and-run accidents. Many of these people will not purchase liability insurance regardless of whether there is a compulsory law. Others in this category include out-of-state drivers and new residents with vehicles registered elsewhere. Most of these people will continue to remain uninsured even after passing a compulsory law and this is shown by experience in other states.

For example, California spent $2.32 million to increase the percentage of its insured drivers by five (5) percent. Maryland spent $1.5 million to increase its percentage of insured drivers by the same five (5) percent. South Carolina paid $1.3 million for an eight (8) percent increase. Massachusetts, which has had a compulsory insurance law longer than any other state, still has an estimated 10 -15 percent level of uninsured drivers. Current estimates of uninsured drivers in compulsory states still range from five (5) percent to 15 percent, depending upon the level of enforcement.

Nor is the concept of compulsory insurance related to safety. The enactment of a compulsory insurance law won't reduce the number of accidents. By its very nature, compulsory insurance relates to what happens after an accident. Compulsory insurance laws simply require insurance, they do not provide a means to remove high-risk drivers from the road.

We do not believe that uncompensated injuries are reduced by the enactment of a compulsory law. We believe that on the average, insured car occupants will receive injuries from uninsured motorists at about the same rate after enactment of compulsory legislation as they do before passage of these laws. Although compulsory legislation may increase the insured population by a small percentage, we do not believe it will result in a measurable reduction in the number of bodily injuries caused by financially irresponsible drivers.

Even if we were to assume there would be a decrease in the number of bodily injuries caused by financially irresponsible drivers, the question still is whether the benefit we can realistically expect from compulsory insurance is worth the cost and we believe the cost will be significant. For example, we know there will be a significant administrative cost to the State of Alaska simply to implement and enforce the compulsory insurance legislation before you. In effect, in a time of declining state revenues, virtually a whole new bureaucracy will have to be created to implement and enforce this legislation. The administrative cost to the public is an important concern, particularly when there are other pressing needs in this state.

The second cost aspect of this legislation that must be considered is the effect on premium rates of policyholders. We believe premium rates of everyone will increase significantly because administrative costs of the industry will increase, companies in effect will be forced to take almost all applicants, the bill does away with policy defenses in certain situations, the pure premium cost in a compulsory state has been shown to increase much more rapidly than the pure premium cost in a non-compulsory state, and finally, the cost of compulsory insurance will probably lead to more claims and more litigation.

Other costs which are impossible to quantify, include the social cost to people who can't afford insurance, and the inconvenience of adding another layer of intrusion by government into people's lives. Most people currently buy insurance because they feel they need it. Liability insurance has traditionally been purchased by people who have assets to protect, not to protect others. In other words, people who, in the past, had few assets, had very little incentive to purchase liability insurance. A report, Profile of Uninsured Motorists in California showed that geographic areas with high rates of uninsureds had significantly lower median incomes, and a higher incidence of poverty level than areas with low rates of uninsured drivers. A 1981 study by the All-Industry Research Advisory Council asked households with one or more uninsured vehicles why the vehicles were uninsured. Forty percent of the people surveyed listed cost as the reason. The next major reason, "car not currently in use", was only 16 percent of the total response. In short, requiring insurance of low-income households will not compel them to purchase something they simply cannot afford. Dr. John Hall of Georgia State University testified before South Carolina's Joint-Legislative Automobile Liability Insurance Study Committee in December of 1979. Dr. Hall said:

As a practical matter, the economically disadvantaged have less real need for liability insurance to protect their own interests. As a practical matter, these persons tend to be judgment proof. In any event, they tend to be unaware of the benefits which a liability policy provides. They perceive the liability insurance policy as taking care of other people. They must pay a high premium for insurance which provides benefits for others as a condition precedent to having the right to drive. Because of their economic status, most often they are unable to purchase insurance to provide for their own injuries, and those of their families, in accidents where they are at fault. The compulsory liability insurance system forces these people to pay high premiums relative to their income for benefits for others when they cannot themselves afford adequate benefits to cover their own losses.

Dr. Hall concluded:

For these reasons, it appears morally and socially wrong to require liability insurance on a compulsory basis as a condition precedent to enjoying the privilege of automobile driving and ownership.

Not only does compulsory legislation extract a disproportionate cost from low-income groups, but it raises the price level of everyone's insurance. Compulsory insurance thus imposes the additional higher premium and administrative costs on those currently insured, which in any event is the vast majority of the driving public, to get at the remaining minority, those currently uninsured.

So the question remains, is the cost to everyone worth the realistic benefit we can hope to achieve. Bodies investigating compulsory insurance in other states have said no primarily for the same reasons. In 1981 a Tennessee Subcommittee studying automobile compulsory insurance laws made the following recommendation:

Our findings reveal that despite considerable and varied enforcement efforts in other states, including the adoption of no-fault, no state has devised a workable or cost-effective enforcement system. In addition, experience in other states indicate the adoption of compulsory insurance in Tennessee would only increase the percentage of insured drivers from the current 80 percent to 85 percent. More importantly, the cost of liability insurance plus uninsured motorist coverage in Tennessee is less than the same coverage in any compulsory state, and considerably less than the same coverage in any compulsory no-fault state. The responsible motorist should not pay more for insurance coverage nor be subjected to harassment in a futile effort to enforce a compulsory insurance law.

November 19, 1981 letter from the Tennessee Subcommittee Studying Automobile Compulsory Insurance Laws.

A similar conclusion was reached by the State Auditor of Wisconsin on March 10, 1981:

Experience in other states indicates that mandatory insurance programs do not substantially reduce the number of uninsured motorists and the cost of administering such a program is more than double the cost of the safety responsibility program.

March 10, 1981 letter from the State Auditor of Wisconsin.

If our goal is to guarantee compensation for victims of financially irresponsible motorists, we can achieve that goal more efficiently and effectively through compulsory uninsured and under-insured legislation. If every person who bought insurance included this coverage, careful drivers would be protected regardless of whether the at-fault other party had liability insurance. Only those who chose not to purchase this coverage would be without protection.

Uninsured motorist coverage is provided by companies to pay for bodily injury damages to the policyholder caused by an uninsured motorist. Virtually every state with a compulsory liability insurance law also requires insurers to offer uninsured motorist coverage, which in effect indicates a lack of faith in the effectiveness of compulsory insurance legislation. By purchasing uninsured motorist coverage, a vehicle owner is assuring that all drivers and passengers in the insured automobile will have protection against losses caused by an uninsured motorist. Compulsory automobile insurance cannot make this promise.

Compared to the cost of liability insurance, uninsured motorist coverage is very inexpensive. We urge each of you to look at your own policies to gain an idea of its cost. Furthermore, a compulsory uninsured and under-insured requirement does not impose the administrative cost to either the public or private sector that compulsory liability insurance legislation would impose.

In sum, we believe compulsory liability insurance, if enacted, will prove to be both costly and burdensome to the State of Alaska, and the insurance industry. Ultimately it will prove to be both costly and burdensome to our policyholders and to members of the general public. We urge this committee to seriously consider the cost and effectiveness of compulsory insurance before recommending such a program. We believe there are other alternatives available which cost much less and achieve much more.

We would like to express strong opposition to the committee substitute for SB 95 dealing with uninsured and underinsured motorist coverage.

We feel this bill could have serious effects on automobile insurance premiums in Alaska and could jeopardize the ability of the Alaskan consumer to purchase affordable protection.

We would appreciate your consideration of our position and your vote against this committee substitute.

Re Senate Bill 95

Dear Senator Taylor:

To respond to several of the concerns you raised following our testimony on Senate Bill 95, let me set forth the following:

1. Prior to Tumbleson, as best we have been able to determine we did give our insureds the benefit of the doubt on the trigger issue. We did so because there was ambiguity in the law, and no clear court decision. However, because the law was unclear, and we did not feel we could charge for a change we did not know would in fact occur, our premiums were not adjusted to reflect that practice. Our intent was to adjust our premiums if and when there was a judicial decision clarifying the ambiguity created by the 1990 amendment. After Tumbleson became the law, we followed it until the subsequent decision was issued.

2. The speaker from the Trial Lawyers' Association stated that this coverage in effect is meaningless at the lower levels of liability if it is different in limits coverage. That is not the case. This comment ignores the fact that UM/UM is a single, combined coverage. While it is true that at the most basic level of coverage, i.e. $50/$100/$25, the vast majority of the premium goes to the uninsured motorist portion of the coverage, it is not true that all of it does. The underinsured aspects of this coverage would be applicable in the circumstances outlined in Tumbleson, i.e. the available liability coverage was reduced by payments to non-insureds. This of course is why this coverage is very affordable at this level.

I hope this responds to any concerns that were raised. If not, please let me know and we will be happy to discuss this again with you.

Sincerely,

cc All Members of the Senate Judiciary Committee

SB 95: "An Act relating to insurance against uninsured drivers."

The existing law was adopted because the Legislature wished to allow purchasers of automobile liability insurance, which basically provides coverage for injured third parties, to consider purchase of insurance covering personal protection for the purchaser and family. It allows limits that exceed coverage for third party bodily injury liability.

The policy issue considered in this legislation is: Does the state wish to limit the coverage for a person buying automobile insurance for their own protection to the amount that person voluntarily purchases for the protection of a third party?

Alaska was the first state to determine, with the passage of the 1990 law, that an insured could seek and an insurer was required to offer greater coverage for self-protection than that for a third party. This bill would reverse that position and repeal the 1990 legislation.

Alaska has a financial responsibility and mandatory automobile insurance law that is typical of such laws under a tort system. The principal feature of such laws is that they focus on providing minimum coverage for the third party. Coverage for the purchaser is incidental. Also, typically, there is an uninsured motorist feature to allow the purchaser to protect against an uninsured at-fault third party.

Some states have adopted no-fault laws where the tort system is modified and the purchaser focuses on covering personal needs first and third party needs secondarily. The existing Alaska law creates a similar impact without modification to the tort system. In this, Alaska is unique.

The proponents of this legislation argue that the offer of high uninsured/underinsured motorist limits acts as a deterrent to the entrance of new insurers into the Alaska marketplace. The division has no direct knowledge of such an impact nor would it necessarily know that an insurer has elected not to enter our marketplace for this reason. However, there has been at least one major entrant into this market since adoption of this law. To some extent, the charge may be true since the reinsurance needed for the exposure would not be inexpensive and would be needed on a standby basis whether the coverage were selected or not. It would appear that there should be some compromise considered before reversing the existing statute.

The existing statute presently requires a mandated offer of the following limits of uninsured/underinsured motorist coverage per person/per accident:

- $100,000/$300,000
- $300,000/$500,000
- $500,000/$500,000
- $500,000/$1,000,000, and
- $1,000,000/$2,000,000

We recommend that the Legislature retain the existing statute, but consider a compromise in which the offer of $1,000,000/$2,000,000 is reduced to $1,000,000/$1,000,000. Language to accomplish this change is attached.

An issue that has an impact on this subject is another provision in Chapter 78, SLA 1990. The provision provides that a not-at-fault party's underinsured motorists coverage would be available as excess in cases where the at-fault party had insurance insufficient to meet the needs of the injured not-at-fault party in an automobile accident. The recent U. S. District Court case of Colonial Insurance Company of California v. Derek Tumbleson (Case # A94-184 CV (JKS)) has overturned this provision. The premise for this ruling is that the underinsured feature is only triggered if the at-fault third party is uninsured. This action, if it stands, further impacts the ability of the purchaser of insurance to protect personal interests to a greater extent than the state requires protection of the third party. We recommend that the Legislature also consider an amendment to this bill to repair the language that led to the court's decision. The department has not developed corrective language, but is willing to assist the committee in this effort.

Amendments Proposed

Amend Section 1 of the Bill to read:

Section 1. AS 21.89.020(c) is amended to read:

(c) An insurance company offering automobile liability insurance in this state for bodily injury or death shall, initially and at each renewal, offer coverage prescribed in AS 28.20.440 and 28.20.445 or AS 28.22 for the protection of the persons insured under the policy who are legally entitled to recover damages for bodily injury or death from owners or operators of uninsured or underinsured motor vehicles. The limit written may not be less than the limit in AS 28.20.440. Coverage required to be offered under this section shall include the following options:

(1) policy limits equal to the limits voluntarily purchased to cover the liability of the person insured for bodily injury or death;

(2) policy limits in the following amounts when these limits are greater than those offered under (1) of this subsection:

(A) $100,000 because of bodily injury to or death of one person in one accident, and, subject to the same limit for one person, $300,000 because of bodily injury to or death of two or more persons in one accident;

Sponsor Statement SB 95:

Automobile Liability

SB 95 is the reintroduction of HB 403 of the 18th Legislature. SB 95 seeks to remove the mandatory offer of uninsured and underinsured motorists coverage in excess of coverages voluntarily purchased by an insured.

Uninsured/Underinsured (UM/UM) motorist coverage protects the vehicle owner against being injured in an accident with an at fault motorist who has no bodily injury liability insurance. UI motorist coverage applies only if the uninsured motorist is legally liable for the resulting injury. Uninsured motorist coverage puts the injured insured in the same position as he would be in if the motorist actually responsible for the accident had bodily injury liability insurance. Thus, if the injured driver cannot be compensated for an injury by the negligent party who has no insurance then the injured party can turn to his own insurance company for compensation. In effect, the injured driver's insurance company must take the place of the at fault motorist who was driving without liability insurance in contemplation of Alaskan law requiring liability insurance coverage.

Three years ago, the Alaska Legislature passed legislation which requires Alaskan insurers to offer uninsured or underinsured motorist coverage of between $1 million and $2 million dollars. This mandatory coverage has increased the cost of liability insurance for all policy holders. While these increases are due to the high limits of coverage required in Alaska, the premium for UI/UM coverage is only a small part of the total insurance premium for vehicles.

SB 95 seeks to assure the Alaskan consumer competitive auto insurance premiums by encouraging a competitive marketplace. A greater number of insurance companies doing business in Alaska will, in the long run, ensure competitive premiums. SB 95 will encourage the growth of a competitive market for insurance by requiring insurance companies to provide only the requested amount of uninsured/underinsured coverage. Buyers of insurance will be able to choose their own individual level of protection.

Under current law, Alaska is the only state in the nation that requires insurers to offer UI/UM coverage of up to two million dollars. SB 95 amends AS 21.89.020(c) to require coverage that includes policy limits equal to the limit voluntarily purchased to cover the insured's liability for bodily injury or death. The policy limit for this coverage may not be less than the policy limit set in AS 28.20.440.

SB 95 will encourage a competitive market for premiums as well as providing the consumer with the individual option to purchase her desired amount of coverage. The consumer is still protected by statutory limits for UM/UTM coverage but will not be forced to pay for coverage equal to approximately $2 million dollars.

Alaska Independent Insurance Agents and Brokers is a trade organization formed by 50 independently-owned insurance agencies residing and doing business in the State of Alaska.

Our members are the point of contact between the insurance-buying public and the insurance industry doing business in our state. Our members are the first to know the concerns of the insurance-buying public and the effect of legislative actions upon the insurance industry, and the resulting impact on the consumer.

In 1990 the Alaska State Legislature passed HB429 stating carriers in the state shall initially and at renewal offer uninsured and underinsured motorist coverage, and that coverage may not be less than the statutory required coverage described in AS 28.20.440. In addition, the carrier must offer its insured the following options:

1. UM/UIM policy limits equal to limits voluntarily purchased by the insured for liability coverage.
2. UM/UIM policy limits greater than the voluntarily-purchased limits in specified optional amounts ranging from $100/$300 to $1 million/$2 million

The problem which arises is with the mandatory offering. Many carriers within the state are unwilling or unable to offer these limits. Conversely, those carriers who may want to enter the state would not do so because of the mandatory offering of the higher limits.

To encourage competition in the auto insurance marketplace, it is our recommendation at the initial purchase of insurance that UM/UIM be offered up to the limits purchased for liability coverage but not less than the limits stated in AS 28.20.440.

We feel that with this change there will be an increase of insurance markets in our state and will benefit our citizens in securing a more competitive product.

Thank you for your consideration.

Dear Ms. McBride:

This letter is to confirm Progressive's support for the changes to the Alaska statute concerning Uninsured/Underinsured Motorists coverage being proposed by the Alaska Independent Agents & Brokers.

Your changes would replace the requirement for companies to offer $1,000,000/$2,000,000 UM/UM limits with a requirement to offer UM/UM limits equal to the Bodily Injury/Property Damage limits on the policy.

We believe that these limits will provide sufficient protection for Alaskans, while eliminating a potential source of litigation and/or un-reinsured catastrophic loss for companies.

Progressive provides both preferred and non-standard automobile insurance to over 10,000 drivers in Alaska.

Re: SB 95

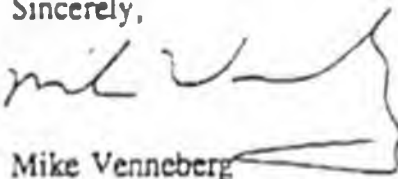

Senator Kelly,

I wish to voice my support for SB 95. This will modify the required offerings for uninsured/underinsured motorist coverage in our state.

In order to promote a desirable marketplace, which brings new carriers to our state and increased competition, we are in need of your assistance. SB 95 will modify a current requirement for offering maximum uninsured/underinsured motorist coverage to consumers. Consumers will still have the ability to purchase these high limits. In consultation with their insurance professional they will be able to choose the limits which they feel are appropriate.

I would urge the Labor & Commerce committee to support this legislation.

Sincerely,

Mike Venneberg

RE: SB 95

Senator Kelly,

Uninsured/Underinsured Motorist coverage protects a vehicle owner against being injured in an accident with an at-fault motorist who does not have the bodily injury liability insurance that is mandated by Alaskan statute. This basically means that if the injured driver cannot be compensated for an injury by a negligent party who has no insurance, he can, in fact, turn to his own insurance company for compensation. The injured driver's insurance company must take the place of the motorist who, in violation of Alaska statute, did not carry liability insurance.

SB 95 will continue to require insurance companies to offer both uninsured and underinsured motorist coverage. The change in statute does not seek to change the type of coverage offered, but rather seeks to change the limits of coverage that are mandatory. The option to purchase the protection of uninsured motorist coverage would still be available for the Alaskan consumer. The change would correspond to other mandatory coverages in requiring a minimum limit of coverage, not a maximum limit. All other mandatory coverages are set at minimum limits, not maximum limits.

Currently Alaska requires higher mandatory limits of uninsured/underinsured motorist coverage than any other state in the country. This creates an undesirable insurance climate. Alaskan consumers will benefit from a marketplace which encourages competition and the entry of new companies into the State.

I would strongly urge the Labor & Commerce committee to favorably recommend this legislation.

Sincerely,

Linda S. Hall

HISTORY

In 1990, the Alaska State Legislature passed HB 429 stating carriers in this state "shall, initially and at each renewal, offer" UM and UIM coverage, and that coverage may not be less than the statutorily required coverage described in AS 28.20.449. Additionally, and for the first time, the carrier shall offer its insured the following options:

1. UM/UIM policy limits equal to limits voluntarily purchased by the insured for liability coverage, and
2. UM/UIM policy limits greater than voluntarily purchased liability limits in specified optional amounts ranging from $100,000/$300,000 to $1,000,000/$2,000,000.

PROBLEM

Many carriers writing automobile coverage in Alaska (prior to passage of HB 429) did not offer limits up to $1,000,000/$2,000,000, and prefer not to offer the higher limits. Carriers considering coming to Alaska, as well as carriers considering expanding their writings in our state, are hesitant because of this law. This has the effect of limiting automobile coverage availability in the State of Alaska, which is not in the best interest of the Alaskan consumer. One of the ongoing goals of the Alaska Independent Insurance Agents & Brokers, Inc. is to increase insurance availability to the consumer. This law is hampering our efforts.

SOLUTION

SEC. 1 AS 21.89.020(c) is repealed and reenacted to read:

(c) An insurance company offering automobile liability insurance in this state for bodily injury or death shall offer at the time of initial purchase, coverage prescribed in AS 28.20.440 and 28.20.445 or AS 28.22, with limits equal to the limit purchased voluntarily to cover the insured's liability for bodily injury or death, for protection of the persons insured under the policy who are legally entitled to recover damages for bodily injury or death from owners or operators of uninsured or underinsured motor vehicles. The limit written may not be less than the limit in AS 28.20.440. The term "underinsured motor vehicle" shall not be construed to include an uninsured motor vehicle."

...[confirm] Progressive's support for the changes to the Alaska statute...being proposed by the Alaska Independent Agents & Brokers. We believe that these limits will provide sufficient protection for Alaskans, while eliminating a potential source of litigation and / or uninsured catastrophic loss for companies.

"In the largest personal department in an independent agency in Alaska, out of an estimated 5,000 policyholders, only one has elected to purchase the maximum limits of $1,000,000 / $2,000,000 now mandated to be offered. Other agents indicate they have never had a client purchase the high limits. These high limits do not appear to be limits that Alaskan consumers desire."

COMMENTS

DOES:

- ✓ Set minimum limits of coverage, with optional higher limits.
- ✓ Maintain a favorable legislative and judicial atmosphere for business in Alaska.
- ✓ Provide a healthy, stable market for consumers.
- ✓ Protect auto insurance rates for Alaskans.

DOES NOT:

- ✓ Change the mandatory minimum limits requirement.
- ✓ Change the type of insurance coverages offered.

EFFECTS

The basic theory underlying Uninsured / Underinsured Motorist Coverage was that an insured should have access to the same level of protection as the insured was providing to others.

As originally conceived this was to be a low cost coverage. The tendency of some courts to expand interpretation of policy language and the addition of higher limits of uninsured and underinsured protection has resulted in escalating costs which ultimately get passed on to the consumer.

Our focus is to protect the Alaskan insurance consumers by continuing to create an atmosphere that encourages competition and encourages new insurance companies to enter the Alaska market by providing a reasonably favorable legislative and judicial atmosphere in which to do business.

- ✓ Alaska has the highest mandatory limits offering for UM/UIM coverage in the Nation.

Re Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 95

Dear Senator Kelly

I am writing to you on behalf of State Farm regarding CSSB 95. State Farm has approximately 32% of the automobile insurance market in Alaska. We have been involved in the legislative structuring of the mandatory automobile insurance program here in Alaska from the outset. We originally proposed the mandated offer of UP/UNM as a means of allowing Alaskans a way of guaranteeing for themselves protection from the uninsured and/or underinsured driver. Sadly, we have seen what started out to be a simple, affordable and easy to administer concept become something that is complicated, expensive and subject to differing opinions by many, including two of our three federal judges. Your committee has the ability to begin the process of correcting this problem, and we hope that it does so.

At the outset, we wish to state that we do not believe the answer to this problem is set forth in the original version of SB 95, nor in CSS 95, which we have reviewed as quickly as we have been able. Neither solves the excess problem created by the 1990 amendment. The CS vividly demonstrates the complexity that is created by mandating so many different kinds of offers. Neither of these solutions will stop the dramatically increasing cost of this coverage. Neither will create a coverage that is easily explained to and understood by our policyholders.

There is a much simpler, more effective solution to this problem. That is to return to where we began with this coverage. We recommend that you eliminate the mandated reoffer of this coverage at the time of every renewal. It is one thing to educate by notices sent at the time of renewal, but it is quite another to require the offer of a number of complicated, different coverages at every renewal. Second, we recommend you link the amount of UP/UNM coverage one may purchase to the amount of liability coverage one chooses to purchase. We do not believe it makes any sense at all for someone to be allowed to buy more protection for themselves than they are willing to provide for someone else. Finally, we strongly recommend that you eliminate this coverage as excess. This change, made in 1990, in our view is totally unnecessary, and has proven to be expensive. The adoption of these three simple recommendations would again create in Alaska a system providing for a mandated offer of UP/UNM that is simple, easy to administer, easy for our policyholders to understand and finally as affordable as such a system can be.

To see this is so, we would like to briefly explain the evolution of this coverage in Alaska. We would then like to explain the history of rate changes and set forth the effect we believe our recommended changes would have, as well as the effect we believe the other changes would have.

Finally we would like to explain why (aside from the issue of expense) we believe the idea of making this coverage excess is a bad one.

Evolution of UP/UNM Coverage In Alaska

In 1983, mandatory automobile insurance was an issue that was hotly debated in this legislature. We opposed the adoption of mandatory automobile insurance in short because we believed the approach advocated through the legislation then pending would be both costly and ineffective. We instead argued the only real way one could guarantee protection from uninsured or underinsured drivers was to purchase uninsured and underinsured coverage. I enclose herewith a copy of testimony I gave before this very committee in May of 1983, and as you can see on pages 7 and 8 of that testimony, we argued for mandated offers of UP/UNM, to guarantee compensation to victims of financially irresponsible motorists.

Ultimately, legislation was approved which adopted a form of compulsory insurance without the administrative burdens of the legislation initially proposed, coupled with a mandated offer of UP/UNM coverage equal to the amounts the insured chose to purchase voluntarily. The original intent of this coverage was to guarantee that regardless of whether an insured was struck by an uninsured or an underinsured driver, the insured would at least be able to collect an amount equal to the limits of UP/UNM they chose to purchase themselves.

In a sense, this coverage was replacement coverage, filling in the gap between the limits of the at fault party and the UP/UNM limits the insured chose to purchase. The purpose of this coverage was to guarantee that the insured would always be at least in the same position he or she would have been in had the at fault party purchased liability limits equal to the UP/UNM limits the insured chose to purchase. In other words, if an insured chose to purchase $100,000 of UP/UNM coverage, the insured would know that regardless of the resources of the at fault party, the insured would have $100,000 of protection. If the insured was hit by someone with no insurance, the insured would have available the entire $100,000 of UP/UNM coverage. If the insured was hit by someone with $50,000 of coverage, the insured would have available $50,000 of coverage from their UP/UNM, so again, they would recover a total of $100,000, the limit of their UP/UNM coverage.

This coverage was affordable for a number of reasons. First, it was triggered only if the UP/UNM limits were greater than the limits of the at fault third party. The reasoning is obvious. If the third party is insured, they cannot be said to be uninsured. If the liability limits of the third party are greater than the insured's UP/UNM limits, the third party cannot be said to be underinsured

Second, the coverage was also affordable because it was not excess. There was no reason for it to be, for the purpose was to guarantee a certain level of protection from all available sources. Thus, it was reduced dollar for dollar by the limits of the third party. This kept the cost of the coverage down.

Third, UP/UNM coverage could be purchased only in an amount equal to the limits of liability coverage the insured chose to purchase. In order to guarantee a level of protection for himself, an insured had to provide that same level of protection to a third party. By purchasing higher liability limits, one is less likely to be someone else's underinsured.

Finally, the mandated offer was easy to administer. It was a one time offer. It did not need to be made repeatedly, as is the case under the present law. All of these things combined to make this coverage affordable.

This very simple concept has been modified over the years so that now the coverage once triggered is excess. There is debate about the elimination of the coverage trigger, and indeed, one federal judge has ruled that the trigger has already been eliminated. The linkage of the amount of UP/UNM to liability limits has been eliminated, as has the single mandated offer. It is no longer enough to offer the coverage just once, but it must be offered at the time of every renewal.

Rates

As you probably know, rates are driven primarily by the frequency of loss and the severity of loss. Rates are also affected by increasing administrative costs. It should come as no surprise that the changes set forth above have had a dramatic affect on rates. If you make this coverage excess, the inevitable result is that our loss experience will deteriorate. If you change the trigger point, our loss experience will deteriorate even more.

Our UP/UNM loss experience in Alaska has been very unfavorable. We increased our UP/UNM rate by 28% on January 1, 1991 and again by 13% on March 1, 1994. Assuming no changes are made in the law, our current experience indicates an increase of 47% will be necessary.

If the trigger point is changed, as advocated by Senator Donnell, we would anticipate an additional increase of 80% for a total rate increase of 127%. On the other hand, were you to repeal the excess provisions enacted in 1990 so we went back to a pure difference in limits concept, we would anticipate a rate increase of only 15%.

In other words, our UP/UNM loss experience has and continues to be poor. Regardless of what changes are going to be made, a rate increase is going to be necessary. If we go back to difference in limits, a 15% increase will be necessary. If the trigger point is not changed, but once the coverage is triggered it is excess, we anticipate a 47% increase. If the trigger point is changed

March 28, 1995
Page Four

LESSMEIER & WINTERS
ATTORNEYS AT LAW

and the coverage is excess, we anticipate an increase of 127%

To give a practical example, the average indicated rate under the current law (semi-annual premium) for $50,000/$100,000 is $16.78. If the law were changed to pure difference in limits, this coverage would cost $11.36. If the trigger point is changed and this is excess, this coverage would cost $30.28. Please keep in mind that the rate indication under current law is for a 47% increase.

Why Should This Coverage Be Excess?

The argument that this coverage should be excess is that an insured thinks (regardless of what the law provides) that when he has purchased UP/UNM of $50,000 he understands his insurer will pay $50,000 in addition to the limits of the at fault third party. We frankly think this is simply a question of education and understanding. The concept that under a combined coverage of UP/UNM you are guaranteeing you will have the limit you choose available and no more is an easy concept to explain and an easy concept to understand. The concept of excess coverage is more difficult to explain, and multiple coverages even more so.

The second argument that seems to be made in support of excess provisions is that the general public is better off if UP/UNM is excess. We think not. As we have seen in Alaska, to make this coverage excess is to make it more expensive. As the cost of this coverage continues to escalate, those who might have purchased it if it were more affordable, may well choose to decline it. In other words, by making this coverage excess, you take away the option of more affordable coverage. This should be apparent by looking at the rate example we have set forth above.

Just as important, even if this coverage is not excess, an insured still has available the ability to purchase significant amounts of coverage that provide guaranteed protection to whatever level the insured chooses. We seriously doubt if when purchasing this coverage, an insured chooses her level of UP/UNM limits by making estimates of what level of insurance the third party that negligently hits them is going to have in the event an accident occurs. It is simply not possible to predict whether the person that hits you is going to be insured, and if so to what level. Rather than choosing a level of UP/UNM based on the coverage a third party might have, we think most people by purchasing this coverage intend to guarantee the level of compensation of their limits. It is just not possible or practical to assume anything else.

We strongly believe our policy holders would be better off if we went back to the system of UP/UNM we originally had in Alaska. That coverage was easy to understand, easy to administer and was affordable. The changes that have been made to improve this system have had just the opposite effect. We believe it is time they be undone.

Although we have only had the CS available since Friday afternoon, we have a number of initial concerns. First of all it appears to contemplate separate offers of UP and UNM. Frankly, we do not understand why someone would purchase UNM, but not UP. Second, the CS does not appear to have a provision for declining the UNM offer. Perhaps we are mistaken, but we could not

March 28, 1995
Page Five

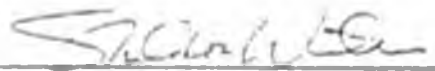

LESSMEIER & WINTERS
ATTORNEYS AT LAW

find it. Finally, the CS demonstrates the difficulty of understanding and then explaining in writing all of these different coverages at different levels at the outset and then again at each renewal. You could accomplish the same thing by requiring the offer at the outset, but then requiring the insurer to simply notify the insured in writing at each renewal of the availability of these coverages. This would not pose near the administrative difficulty or legal exposure as does the mandated offers at the time of each renewal. Even with these changes you end up creating a complex area of the law to deal with what was originally a simple concept.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on this legislation. If you have any questions or if we might be of additional assistance, please let me know.

Sincerely,

LESSMEIER & WINTERS

Dear Dave:

Enclosed is a copy of Judge Singleton's decision in the United States District Court case of Colonial Insurance Company of California v. Derek Tumbleson, Case No. A94-184 CV (JKS), which in one stroke of a pen upset and undid what you so wonderfully accomplished in sections 3 to 5, Chapter 78 SLA 1990; i.e., Alaska Statute 28.20.445(b). You sponsored the law that made underinsured motorist coverage limits excess to liability coverage limits.

Unfortunately, when AS 28.20.445(b) was passed in 1990, effective January 1, 1991, it overlooked the almost unintelligible definitions of underinsured motor vehicle contained in AS 28.20.445(h) and AS 28.40.100(22). Those two definition sections apparently should have been repealed to avoid any confusion on the issue. Also AS 28.22.211 needs to be repealed or else we are presented with the same confusion.

I request that you introduce a bill that would repeal those two definitional sections and add section 28.20.445(b) to the companion sections in 28.22. This would most easily be done by repealing section 28.22.211 and inserting in there the current language of AS 28.20.445(b).

The letter of intent to go with the legislation might read along the following lines:

"The legislature in 1990 passed a law requiring that uninsured and underinsured motorist coverage shall be excess to an amount payable under automobile bodily injury, death or medical payments coverage. The Federal Court, Anchorage District, on January 20, 1995 issued an opinion that contravened the intent of the legislature in 1990 and the major insurance carriers that have been calculating a premium on the 1990 law and paying claims based on the 1990 law are now no longer paying the benefits required by the 1990 legislature."

I really don't know what I am doing trying to write intent positions; and, frankly, I leave all of that up to you.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL

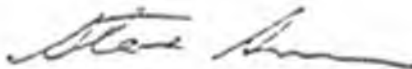

Senator Dave Donley
February 9, 1995

All I can tell you Dave, is that the practical effect of the law you sponsored in 1990 was that Allstate and State Farm made underinsured motorist coverage available to all claimants as excess insurance since January 1, 1991 until last week when they started denying all claims based on Judge Singleton's opinion, which they did not even file a case to obtain. Allstate and State Farm had a lobbyist at all of your earlier committee meetings and knew what the intent of the law was. This did not prevent Progressive Insurance Company later to be joined by Colonial Insurance Company from taking a position in the past year contrary to the intent of the 1990 Legislature when one of their attorneys found the definitional loop hole set forth in AS 28.20.445(h) and AS 28.40.100(22).

I know the Alaska Academy of Trial Lawyers would greatly appreciate anything that can be done to allow injured people to access their underinsured motorist coverage if liability limits are not sufficient to fully compensate them for their injury as has been the case from January 1, 1991 until recently. I do not know whether it is better to do this through separate legislation or possibly tack it on to the Tort Reform Bill if that has to pass the Legislature, which seems to me a fair possibility. I would suggest both approaches.

Anything that can be done, Dave, would be greatly appreciated to restore the status quo. The premiums and rates for this have already been incorporated in the current practice of the insurance companies.

Best regards,

STEVE M. SIMS

I. INTRODUCTION

This is an action for declaratory judgment in which Colonial Insurance Company of California ("Colonial") seeks a declaration that it is not obligated to pay the claims of Derek Tumbleson and his family ("Tumblesons") under the uninsured/underinsured ("UM/UIM") coverage in the auto insurance policy which Colonial issued to the Tumblesons. Both parties have moved for summary judgment and each argues that there are no disputed issues of material fact. Docket Nos. 3 and 5. The parties also argue that the remaining issues are legal issues regarding the interpretation of insurance policies which incorporate mandatory statutory provisions. Id.

II. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On April 28, 1994, Colonial filed this action for declaratory relief, seeking to avoid making payments to the Tumblesons under a UM/UIM policy issued by Colonial. Docket No. 1. Colonial alleges jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1332 (diversity of citizenship) and 28 U.S.C.

§ 2201 (Declaratory Judgment Act). Id. The Tumblesons do not contest jurisdiction but the Court nonetheless must engage in a jurisdictional inquiry. Colonial is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, having its principal place of business in Anaheim, California. Colonial has satisfied the statutory requisites for filing an action in the State of Alaska. Each of the Tumblesons are residents and domiciliaries of the State of Alaska. Accordingly, there exists complete diversity of citizenship between the parties. The Colonial UM/UIM insurance policy issued to the Tumblesons is the focus of this action, and the limits of such policy is $50,000/$100,000. Colonial seeks a declaration that the Tumblesons are not entitled to the $100,000 they seek under the UM/UIM policy. Accordingly, the amount in controversy is in excess of $50,000. Jurisdiction is thus proper under 28 U.S.C. § 1332. Because this Court has diversity jurisdiction, it sits as a trial court of the state of Alaska and will apply the substantive law of the State of Alaska. See, e.g., Jesinger v. Nevada Fed. Credit Union, 24 F.3d 1127, 1133 n.8 (9th Cir. 1994) (citing Erie Railroad Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 78 (1938)). In this case, the Court will look to decisions of the Alaska Supreme Court and AS § 28.20.445 (1994) (statute governing UM/UIM coverage in Alaska).

There are two pending motions in this case. Colonial filed a motion for summary judgment at Docket No. 3, and the Tumblesons filed a cross-motion for summary judgment at Docket No 5. Both parties contend that there exists no material issues of fact in dispute and therefore judgment should be entered as a matter of law. Id. After reviewing the briefs submitted by the parties and conducting its own independent research, the Court, in a prior order, determined that there exists no Alaska Supreme Court precedent on this issue. See Docket No. 21. In addition, it appeared that decisions from other state courts on this issue are in conflict. Id. As a result, the Court determined that it would certify this case to the Alaska

Supreme Court for resolution of the undecided issues. Id. A draft certification order was issued and the Court invited comments from the parties regarding the draft certification order. Id.

While preparing a final certification order, the Court had an opportunity to re-examine the precise issue for certification. Upon reconsideration, the Court now determines that certification is not proper because although the Alaska Supreme Court has not interpreted the specific provision of the statute at issue in this case, this Court can reasonably predict how the Alaska State Supreme will interpret such language. See ALASKA R. APP. P. 407 (1991) (Appellate Rule 407 is permissive). Moreover, contrary to what this Court originally determined, decisions from other jurisdictions with statutes similar to the one at issue are not in conflict. The state court decisions originally relied upon by the parties and the Court do not interpret statutes with language similar to the Alaska statute. Rather, those cases turned on different statutory schemes, not different interpretations of similar statutes. Accordingly, examination of those cases provides no guidance for this case.

There does exist, however, three states with statutes similar to AS § 28.20.445(h). These states are North Dakota, Colorado, and Nebraska. The high courts of Alaska and Nebraska have not yet determined the meaning of the AS § 28.20.445(h) language. The courts in North Dakota and Colorado, however, have interpreted the meaning of such language. In Colorado, the supreme court stated:

While we realize that the insureds will never be fully compensated for their loss, we see no evidence that the legislature intended to award the insureds more than they would have received if the tortfeasor had been insured or uninsured.

Union Ins. v. Houz, 883 P.2d 1057, 1065 (Colo. 1994); see also Shelter Mut. Ins. Co. v. Thompson, 852 P.2d 459, 462 (Colo. 1993); Barnett v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co., 843 P.2d 1302, 1305 (Colo. 1993); Terranova v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 800 P.2d 58, 61 (Colo.

1990); Kral v. Am. Hardware Mut. Ins. Co., 784 P.2d 759, 765 (Colo. 1989); and Leetz v. Amica Mut. Ins. Co., 839 P.2d 511 (Colo. Ct. App. 1992). The North Dakota Supreme Court reached a different conclusion, but the reasoning appears similar. See Gabriel v. Minn. Mut. Fire and Cas., 506 N.W.2d 73, 77-78 (N.D. 1993). The Colorado and North Dakota decisions are the only decisions in the country interpreting insurance statutes similar to AS § 28.20.445(h). Unfortunately, neither the North Dakota nor the Colorado Supreme Court cases address the precise issue of this case -- the applicability of section (h)(2) when the tortfeasor's liability coverage has been reduced by payments to an insured. To the contrary, each of these decisions address the applicability of the section when payments are made to persons other than an insured. The reasoning is helpful nonetheless. As a result, this case can be resolved by interpreting AS § 28.20.445 rather than certifying the case to the Alaska Supreme Court.

III. BACKGROUND FACTS

On May 9, 1993, David Schram ("Schram") rear-ended Derek Tumbleson's 1990 Pontiac with his 1990 Chevrolet pickup truck. Injured in the accident were husband Derek Tumbleson, wife Laurie Tumbleson, and their children Andrew Tumbleson, Deanna Tumbleson, and Kristin Tumbleson. At the time of the accident, Schram's vehicle was insured by State Farm with liability coverage limits of $100,000/$300,000 (per person/per occurrence). The Tumblesons' vehicle was insured by Colonial. The Tumblesons' policy included UM/UIM coverage with limits of $50,000/$100,000. Docket No. 5 at 2, Exhibit 1, p. 1. For an additional premium, the Tumblesons also purchased UM/UIM coverage with limits of $50,000/$100,000. Id. at Exhibit 2, p.1. State Farm paid $300,000 (its policy limit), to the Tumblesons in the following manner:

$100,000 plus interest & Rule 82 attorneys fees to Andrew
$100,000 plus interest & Rule 82 attorneys fees to Deanna
$ 92,500 plus interest & Rule 82 attorneys fees to Derek & Laurie (combined)
$ 7,500 to Kristin

The amounts received by the Tumblesons are allegedly insufficient to fully compensate them for their injuries. Docket No. 5. Accordingly, each of the Tumblesons are making a claim on the Colonial policy for UIM coverage. Colonial seeks a declaration that the policy does not afford coverage to persons with UIM coverage limits less than the tortfeasor's liability coverage. The Colonial policy in effect at the time of the accident is very similar to Alaska's UIM statute. The differences are purely semantic. See AS § 28.20.445.

IV. DISCUSSION

Coverage in this case turns on the definition of "underinsured motor vehicle" as set forth in the policy and in AS § 28.20.445. The Colonial policy provides coverage for an "underinsured motor vehicle," but Colonial argues that the facts are such that there does not exist an "underinsured motor vehicle." Docket No. 3. The parties rely on two separate sections of AS § 28.20.445 when determining UIM coverage. Colonial argues that AS § 28.20.445(h) ("section (h)") is the controlling, or triggering section, whereas the Tumblesons argue that AS § 28.20.445(b) ("section (b)") determines whether there exists UIM coverage. Section (b) provides, in pertinent part:

- (b) An amount payable under the uninsured and underinsured motorist coverage shall be excess to an amount payable under automobile bodily injury, death, or medical payments coverage, or as workers' compensation benefits and may not duplicate amounts paid or payable under valid and collectible automobile bodily injury, death, or medical payments coverage, or as workers' compensation benefits.

Section (h) provides, in pertinent part:

- (h) "Underinsured motor vehicle" means a motor vehicle licensed for highway use with respect to the ownership, operation, maintenance, or use of which motor vehicle there is a bodily injury or property damage insurance policy or a bond applicable at the time of the accident and the amount of insurance or bond
- (1) is less than the limit for uninsured and underinsured motorists coverage under the insured's policy; or
 - (2) has been reduced by payments to persons other than an insured, injured in an accident, to less than the limit for uninsured and underinsured motorists coverage under the insured's policy.

A. Whether Section (b) or Section (h) determines UIM coverage

The critical issue before the Court is whether the 1990 amendment to the insurance act repealed, by implication, sections (h)(1) and (2), although the amendment does not specifically reference sections (h)(1) and (2). The United States Supreme Court has outlined the types of implicit repeal:

[There are] two well-settled categories of repeal by implication -- (1) where provisions in the two acts are in irreconcilable conflict, the latter act to the extent of the conflict constitutes an implied repeal of the earlier one; and (2) if the later act covers the whole subject of the earlier one and is clearly intended as a substitute, it will operate similarly as a repeal of the earlier act.

In re Glacier Bay, 944 F.2d 577, 581 (9th Cir. 1991) (quoting Radzanower v. Touche Ross & Co., 426 U.S. 148, 154 (1976) (quoting Posadas v. Nat. City Bank, 296 U.S. 497, 503 (1936))).

The Alaska Supreme Court has expressly adopted the same categories. Peter v. State, 531 P.2d 1263, 1267 (1975) (citing Posadas, 296 U.S. at 503). The Tumblesons' argue both that section (b) and section (h) are irreconcilable and thus section (h) was impliedly repealed, and that section (b) is broad enough to cover the entire UM/UIM coverage issue, thus operating as a repeal of section (h). The arguments proffered by the Tumblesons are addressed below, but it is useful to first examine treatment of implicit repeal by the Ninth Circuit and the Supreme Court of Alaska.

The Ninth Circuit, citing United States Supreme Court decisions, stated that it does not favor repeal by implication. In re Glacier Bay, 944 F.2d at 581 (citing Radzanower, 426 U.S. at 154; Posadas, 296 U.S. at 503; and Grindstone Butte Project v. Kleppe, 638 F.2d 100, 102 (9th Cir. 1981)). Continuing, the Ninth Circuit Court stated that it will only find a statute implicitly repealed when "the new statute is clearly repugnant, in words or purpose, to the old statute" Id. (quoting Grindstone, 638 F.2d at 102) (citations omitted)). "[T]he intention of the legislature to repeal must be clear and manifest." Id. (quoting Radzanower, 426 U.S. at 154). Moreover, if two statutes are in partial conflict, "Repeal is to be regarded as implied only if necessary to make the [later enacted law] work, and even then only to the minimum extent necessary." Id. at 582 (quoting Silver v. New York Stock Exchange, 373 U.S. 341, 357 (1963)). The Alaska Supreme Court has adopted a similar unwillingness to repeal statutes by implication.

The rule for repeal by implication has long been established in the State of Alaska. Peter v. State, 531 P.2d 1263-68 (1975) (repeal by implication is not favored). Repeal by implication is limited, and it is established only when it is necessary to carry out the legislature's intent. Id.; see also Warren v. Thomas, 568 P.2d 400, 402 (Alaska 1977). If there exists any reasonable interpretation that will give effect to both statutes, the court will not impliedly repeal the statute. Id. at 1267. Each section of a statute should be read together with every other section so as to produce a harmonious whole. City of Anchorage v. Scavenius, 539 P.2d 1169, 1174 (Alaska 1975). The Alaska Supreme Court does not mechanically apply the plain meaning of a statute, however, and disregard legislative intent. Fairbanks N. Star School v. NEA-Alaska, 817 P.2d 923 (Alaska 1991) (citing Alaska Pub. Employees Ass'n v. City of Fairbanks, 753 P.2d 725, 727 (Alaska 1988)). Instead, the court has adopted a sliding scale approach toward statutory interpretation. Id. Under the sliding scale approach, "[T]he plainer the language of the statute, the more convincing any contrary legislative history must be." Id. (citing State v. Alex, 646 P.2d 203, 208 n.4 (Alaska 1982)). The arguments proffered by Colonial and the Tumblesons are subject to these standards.

Colonial contends that the two part definition of an underinsured motor vehicle set forth in section (h) determines whether there is UIM coverage available to an insured because it is the triggering mechanism for the coverage. See Docket No. 3. In Colonial's view, a determination under section (h) must first be made in order to determine whether there is "an amount payable under the uninsured and underinsured motorist coverage," because if there is no such "amount payable," section (b) never comes into play. Under an application of section (h), Colonial argues, Schram's vehicle was not an underinsured vehicle because: 1) his liability policy limits were higher than the Tumblesons' UIM coverage limits; and 2) because Schram's liability carrier made payments only to the Tumblesons, who are "insureds." Id.

The Tumblesons, on the other hand, argue that: 1) section (b) is a product of the 1990 amendment; 2) the purpose of the 1990 amendment is to provide greater UIM coverage to insureds ("excess" coverage); 3) section (b) is inconsistent with section (h) and therefore it must have been an oversight to leave section (h) in the statute; and 4) therefore the Court must determine that section (b) repeals section (h) by implication. In support of their claim, the Tumblesons rely on the specific language contained in section (b), and compare that language to certain comments made by legislators and lobbyists during the legislative process. The four-part argument proffered by the Tumblesons is addressed below.

The Tumblesons are correct in their first assertion; sections (a-c) were repealed and reenacted, thus section (b) is a product of the 1990 amendment. Docket No. 5 Exhibit 11 (1990 Alaska Sess. Laws ch. 78). The Tumblesons' second assertion is also true -- the 1990 amendment does provide greater UIM coverage and section (b) is properly characterized as "excess coverage." Under the old statute, once the UIM coverage was triggered, the amount of UIM coverage was reduced by the amount already paid out by the tortfeasor's policy. For example, if a UIM insured with a policy for $100,000 suffers $200,000 worth of injury from a tortfeasor with a $50,000 liability limit, the UIM insured would only recover $50,000 from his UIM carrier because the $100,000 UIM limit would be reduced by the $50,000 paid out by the tortfeasor's policy. Under the amended statute, however, there is no reduction of the UIM limit for payments made by the tortfeasor's policy. Under the same fact scenario, applying the new statute, the UIM insured will recover $50,000 from the tortfeasor and then $100,000 from his UIM policy. Thus, the coverage is in excess of the tortfeasor's policy. Accordingly, the Tumblesons' characterization of UIM coverage as excess coverage is correct.

The Tumblesons' third argument misperceives the relationship between sections (b) and (h). The Tumblesons interpret the "excess coverage" language of section (b) to mean that UIM coverage will always stack on top of the tortfeasor's policy, i.e., UIM insureds will recover from the tortfeasor's policy and then the UIM policy. Section (b) provides in pertinent part, "An amount payable under the uninsured and underinsured motorist coverage shall be excess to an amount payable under automobile . . . coverage . . ." The Tumblesons stress the importance of the word "excess." The Tumblesons' interpretation of "excess" is only partly correct. Once the UIM coverage is triggered, then the Tumbleson interpretation is correct. The key distinction is, however, when the UIM coverage is triggered. The triggering of UIM coverage is governed by section (h), which was not amended in 1990. If the UIM coverage is not triggered, i.e., there does not exist an "underinsured motorist," then the UIM carrier is not obligated to pay any UIM claims. In this case, the key to recovery is not the amount the UIM carrier will pay -- which is governed by section (b) once it is determined that UIM coverage exists -- but rather, whether the UIM coverage was ever triggered -- which is governed by section (h). The 1990 amendment changed the law to afford greater recovery for UIM insureds. It did not, however, change the triggering criteria. Accordingly, sections (b) and (h) are not inconsistent.¹

While the Court concludes that the plain meaning of AS § 28.20.445 is clear on its face, the Tumblesons argue that the statute should be interpreted in accordance with legislative intent. "Generally, the most reliable guide to the meaning of a statute is the words of the statute construed in accordance with their common usage." Homer Elec. Ass'n v. Towsley, 841 P.2d 1042, 1043-44 (Alaska 1992) (citing Lagos v. City & Borough of Sitka, 823 P.2d 641, 643

¹ As demonstrated in the paragraph above, the Tumblesons are correct that the 1990 amendment affords UIM insurers greater coverage. Indeed, once the UIM coverage is triggered, payments by the tortfeasor's policy does not reduce the amount of UIM coverage. The old law was coined by commentators as a "dollar-for-dollar" reduction in coverage because the UIM insured's coverage was automatically reduced by the amount of the tortfeasor's liability coverage. See Martin J. Huelsmann & William G. Knoebel, Underinsured Motorist: An evolving Insurance Concern, 17 N. Ky. L. Rev. 417 (1990) (discussing UIM coverage in detail). The new law actually eliminates the "dollar-for-dollar" reduction method. Instead, the UIM insured, once coverage is triggered, will receive up to the total UIM limit, subject to the amount of her damages. For example:

Hypotheticals	Result prior to 1990 Amendment	Result after the 1990 Amendment
$ 50,000 liability cov. $100,000 UIM coverage $200,000 in damages	UIM insured will only receive $50,000 in UIM coverage because the UIM coverage is reduced by the $50,000 already paid by the liability policy. Thus, the UIM insured realizes a $100,000 net.	UIM insured will recover $50,000 from the liability carrier and then an additional $100,000 from his UIM carrier because the UIM policy is an excess coverage (once UIM coverage is triggered).
$300,000 liability coverage $100,000 UIM coverage $500,000 in damages	Same as above, UIM insured will only receive $300,000 because for every dollar paid out by the liability carrier, the UIM coverage will be reduced by a dollar. The UIM coverage is never triggered.	UIM coverage is not triggered. As opposed to the above hypothetical, there does not exist the circumstances necessary to trigger UIM coverage in this hypothetical. Accordingly, the UIM insured will be limited to the liability coverage: $300,000.

The key to recovery is not the amount the UIM coverage will pay, but rather, whether there exists UIM coverage. As demonstrated in the first hypothetical, if the coverage is triggered, the coverage is much better under the 1990 amendment. If the UIM coverage is not triggered, the amount of recovery is the same under both pre and post 1990 amendment. The 1990 amendment changed it so that the UIM coverage will not "disappear dollar-for-dollar" when triggered. It did not change the triggering criteria. Accordingly, section (b) (excess recovery), and section (h) (triggering requirements), are not inconsistent.

(Alaska 1991)). However, even when statutory language appears clear in the abstract, the Court may consult legislative history and the rules of statutory construction when the otherwise clear language takes on another meaning when viewed in context. Id. In Homer, the controversy arose when a machine equipped with a vertical and lateral swinging lift line hit an overhead electrical line and electrocuted a worker. Id. There existed at the time of the accident a statute declaring it unlawful to place machinery within ten feet of high voltage overhead electrical lines. Id. at 1043. The issue in the case involved interpretation of the ten foot requirement. It appears that the machinery was positioned so that it was more than ten feet from the electrical line, but the moving parts of the machine could extend to within ten foot feet of the electrical line. Id. One party interpreted the statute to require that machinery be placed far enough away so that the extensions cannot reach to within the ten foot zone, whereas the other party interpreted the statute literally, requiring only that the machine be placed ten feet away. Id. at 1043, 1044. The Supreme Court of Alaska determined that the language of the statute was clear and unambiguous, but also determined that the interpretations by both parties were reasonable. The court thus concluded that it was proper to examine legislative history and ascertain its intent. Id.

Although the supreme court determined that it could examine the intent of the legislature, it nonetheless established a heavy burden for the party seeking to overcome the plain meaning. Id. at 1044. The court stated that legislative history and rules of construction must present a compelling case that the literal meaning of the language of the statute is not what the legislature intended. Id. (citing University of Alaska v. Geistauts, 666 P.2d 424, 428 n.5 (Alaska 1983) ("[w]here a statute's meaning appears clear and unambiguous, . . . the party asserting a different meaning has a correspondingly heavy burden of demonstrating contrary legislative intent."); and State v. Alex, 646 P.2d 203, 208 n.4 (Alaska 1982) (under Alaska's sliding-scale approach to statutory interpretation, the more plain the language of the statute the more convincing the evidence of contrary legislative intent must be)). The legislative record provided support for the position contrary to the plain meaning but also provided some support for the plain meaning of the statute. Id. at 1044-46. The supreme court ultimately determined that the implicit evidence proffered was insufficient because it did not present a compelling case that the legislature intended for something other than a literal interpretation. Id. at 1044. Accordingly, the court applied the literal meaning of the statute.

In an attempt to rebut Colonial's interpretation of sections (b) and (h), and in support of the proposition that the failure to repeal section (h) was an oversight, the Tumblesons cite comments made in the Alaska legislature regarding the proposed changes to AS § 28.20.445. Representative Dave Donley ("Donley") sponsored the bill which eventually became law. In citations provided by the Tumblesons, Donley refers to UIM coverage under the amendment as excess coverage." See generally Docket No. 5 Exhibit 12 (comments made to and from the legislative committee prior to passage of the bill amending AS § 28.20.445). Donley further states that he "would like to maximize the potential coverage of the insured up to the amount of their damages." Id. He does not, however, address the crucial issue, when UIM coverage is triggered. Rather, he only characterizes "excess coverage" as "anything beyond primary coverage." Id. In an article printed in the Bar Rag, the Alaska Bar Association's newspaper, Donley urges Alaskans to buy as much UIM coverage as practicable, in order "to better protect themselves and their families." See Docket No. 5 Exhibit 13 (Vol. 18, No. 3 May/June 1994). Donley continued, "Many such consumers who are later involved in serious accidents greatly regret this failure to protect themselves." Id.

There are two problems with the Tumblesons' reliance on Donley's article in the Bar Rag. First, the article does not pertain to the amendment to AS § 28.20.445 that is at issue in this case. Donley's article pertains to a bill proposing that insurance companies should not have to offer UM/UIM coverage with high limits. Donley attempted, in his article, to convey a message that automobile owners should evaluate their UM/UIM coverage and consider purchasing additional UM/UIM coverage if the current amount is inadequate. Second, Donley's article was published in the May/June 1994 issue of the Bar Rag -- several years after passage of the AS § 28.20.445 amendments. The Ninth Circuit and the United State Supreme Court have found that "statements made by a legislator after enactment of a statute and not a part of the records of the legislative body are entitled to little or no weight at all." Montana Power Co. v. Envtl. Protection Agency, 608 F.2d 334, 353 n.36 (9th Cir. 1979) (quoting Epstein v. Resor, 296 F.Supp. 214 (N.D. Cal. 1969), aff'd, 421 F.2d 930 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 965 (1970)). The Alaska Supreme Court has adopted a similar rule. In Hillman v. Nationwide Mutual Fire Ins. Co., the supreme court stated, "While the legislature is fully empowered to declare present law by legislation, it is not institutionally competent to issue opinions as to what a statute passed by an earlier legislature meant." 758 P.2d 1248 (Alaska 1988); see also Frontier Co. v. Jack White Co., 818 P.2d 640, 645 (Alaska 1991) (quoting Hillman). In light of the authority cited and the fact that Donley's article is not on point, the Court concludes that Donley's Bar Rag article is insufficient to establish legislative intent.

It is clear from Donley's comments in committee that section (b) was re-written to eliminate the dollar-for-dollar reduction of UIM coverage by the tortfeasor's policy and therefore UIM coverage is coverage in excess of the tortfeasor's policy. Equally as clear is the fact that Donley intended to afford greater protection to UIM insureds by making significant changes to Alaska's insurance law. It is not clear, however, that Donley intended to change the triggering component of the statute located in section (h). Without section (h), it would be unclear as to when an insured is entitled to UIM coverage. Arguably, it is true that section (b), if section (h) was deleted, could be interpreted to address not only the issue of the amount of coverage, but also the question of when coverage is applicable. However, this would require the absence of section (h) and a very broad interpretation of section (b). As the statute currently reads, however, the issue of when UIM coverage is triggered is addressed in section (h). Accordingly, it is the opinion of the Court that Representative Donley's comments support the language contained in section (b) but do not contradict the plain language contained in section (h), fail to establish any inconsistency between the two sections, and therefore are insufficient to convince the Court that the legislature inadvertently forgot to remove section (h) after adding section (b) or that section (h) should somehow defer to section (b).

In further support of their position that the intent of the legislature was to provide coverage in a situation such as the present case, the Tumblesons present a comment made by Don Koch ("Koch") from the Division of Insurance. Koch assisted in the drafting of the bill which later became the 1990 amendment. Docket No. 5 Exhibit 12 at 1. In his summary of the proposed bill, Koch focused on a particular flaw of the old law; specifically, the fact that the covered losses are "reduced by a variety of payments such as worker's compensation, medical payment coverage, and payments made by the [UM] or [UIM] motorist." Docket No. 5 Exhibit 12 at 1 (comments made by Koch to the legislative committee prior to passage of the bill). Koch's summary of the bill supports the Court's conclusion. But, in a later comment, Koch stated, "[The bill] would assure that if an individual bought $100,000 of uninsured or underinsured protection, and the other party has $200,000 coverage available, the first individual's $100,000 coverage would come in after the $200,000 is utilized." Docket No. 5 Exhibit 12 at 3.

Koch did not elaborate on what he meant by "after the $200,000 is utilized." Koch could have meant that the $100,000 comes in after the $200,000 is utilized by persons other than the insured. But, he also could have meant that the UIM coverage will be triggered automatically, without satisfying the requirements of section (h). Assuming that the latter is a more reasonable interpretation of his comment, the Court nonetheless finds that Koch's comment is insufficient to overcome the clear, unambiguous statutory language contained in section (h). As the Supreme Court of Alaska has stated, "the plainer the language of the statute, the more convincing any contrary legislative history must be." Id. (citing State v. Alex, 646 P.2d 203, 208 n.4 (Alaska 1982)). Furthermore, each section of AS § 28.20.445 should be read together so as to produce a harmonious whole. City of Anchorage v. Scavenius, 539 P.2d 1169, 1174 (Alaska 1975). The language contained in section (h) is plain. The legislative history proffered by the Tumblesons does not "present a compelling case that the literal meaning of the language of the statute is not what the legislature intended." Id. at 1044 (citing University of Alaska v. Geistauts, 666 P.2d 424, 428 n.5 (Alaska 1983)); see also Homer, 841 P.2d at 1043-44 ("The most reliable guide to the meaning of a statute is the words of the statute construed in accordance with their common usage"). Moreover, the interpretation suggested by the Tumblesons ignores or eliminates section (h) entirely, whereas it is reasonable to read both section (b) and section (h) together without contradiction. As the Tumblesons correctly note, "[T]he 1990 amendment to AS § 28.20.450 rewrote sections (a) - (c) of the Uninsured and Underinsured Motorists Coverage statute but carried forward this old definition." Docket No. 5 at 8 (referring to the definition of when UIM coverage is triggered -- section (h)).² The Court thus determines that sections (b) and (h) are thus not inconsistent and the literal meaning will be adopted by the Court.

The Tumblesons fourth argument is that section (b) must be controlling over section (h) because application of section (h) makes UIM coverage illusory. Docket No. 5 at 9. The minimum liability insurance required in Alaska is $50,000/$100,000. The statute also requires insurance companies to offer UM/UIM coverage to the minimum of the liability coverage purchased -- a minimum of $50,000/$100,000. It is true that under the statute, a person who purchases the minimum liability coverage and the minimum UM/UIM coverage has, in essence, purchased no UIM coverage when the situation is such that only the UIM insured makes a claim against the liability policy. It is not possible for the tortfeasor to be underinsured because if insured, the tortfeasor must have at least the statutory minimum $50,000/$100,000 coverage. Under section (h), the UIM coverage will not be triggered. The UM/UIM purchaser has, however, purchased UM coverage because it is possible that the tortfeasor is uninsured. If the tortfeasor is uninsured, the UM/UIM insured will recover up to her UM/UIM limit of $50,000.

Although there is a possibility that the UM/UIM coverage is useless in a two car collision with only the UIM insured making a liability claim against the tortfeasor who has the statutory minimum coverage amounts, the UM/UIM coverage is available under other situations. The first example was stated above, the uninsured tortfeasor situation. In addition, if more than just the UIM insured makes a claim against the tortfeasor's $50,000/$100,000 policy, then the $50,000/$100,000 UM/UIM policy that the Tumblesons label illusory is triggered. Pursuant to section (h)(2), if the tortfeasor's liability policy is the same or more than the UM/UIM policy, ² If the legislature intended to remove section (b), then the legislature now has the opportunity to remove section (h) following resolution of this decision. It is not within the powers of the judiciary to legislate.

the UM/UIM insured may nonetheless recover if payments from this policy are made to persons other than the insured. AS § 28.20.445(h)(2). Accordingly, there exist situations under AS § 28.20.445(h) where UIM coverage will be triggered and situations where it will not be triggered. The Court finds the Tumblesons' illusory argument unconvincing.³ The final inquiry for the Court is to analyze section (h) and determine whether UIM coverage is triggered in this case.

B. Section (h) application

Now that it is determined that section (h) is the triggering component of AS § 28.20.445, section (h) must be applied to the facts of this case.⁴ Section (h) is not ambiguous. Section (h) provides that the UIM insured will not receive UIM coverage if their UIM coverage is less than the tortfeasor's liability coverage [see section (h)(1)], unless the tortfeasor's liability coverage has been reduced by payments to persons other than an insured, to the point where the available limit of the tortfeasor's policy is less than the UIM limit of the UIM insured [see section (h)(2)].

Section (h)(1) precludes UIM coverage if the UIM policy limit is less than the tortfeasor's policy limit; notwithstanding the section (h)(2) exception. In this case, the tortfeasor's policy

³ It is also important to note that as a general rule, "[A] statute should be construed so that effect is given to all its provisions, so that no part will be inoperative or superfluous, void or insignificant." Id. (quoting Alascom, Inc. v. North Slope Borough Bd. of Equalization, 658 P.2d 1175, 1178 n.5 (Alaska 1983) which quotes 77 W. Va. 221, 224, 225 as statutory Const. § 46.06 (4th ed. 1973)). The Tumblesons' interpretation of AS § 28.20.445 requires the Court to deem section (h) inoperative. The Tumblesons' provide no other explanation for the existence of section (h) except that it was inadvertently left in place during the amendment five years ago.

⁴ There exist only four states that have a statute with a section similar to section (h)(2). These states are: Alaska, North Dakota, Colorado, and Nebraska. The high courts of Alaska and Nebraska have not yet determined the meaning of this section. The courts in North Dakota and Colorado have reached contrary conclusions, but the reasoning appears similar. Neither the North Dakota nor the Colorado Supreme Court cases, however, address the precise issue of this case, i.e., the applicability of section (h)(2) when the tortfeasor's liability coverage has been reduced by payments to an insured. See Union Ins. v. Houtz, 883 P.2d 1057, 1065 (Colo. 1994); Gabriel v. Minn. Mut. Fire and Cas., 506 N.W.2d 73, 77-78 (N.D. 1993).

limit is $100,000/$300,000 and the UIM limit is $50,000/$100,000. A total of $300,000 was paid to the five Tumblesons, but three of the Tumblesons received less than $50,000 each. On one hand, a section (h)(1) application appears simple -- the tortfeasor's policy is larger than the UIM policy and thus section (h)(1) precludes UIM coverage. On the other hand, the amount actually received by Derek, Laurie, and Kristin Tumbleson was less than the $50,000 individual limits. Thus, an argument can be made that Derek, Laurie, and Kristin did not realize the benefit of the $50,000 individual UIM coverage. In rebuttal, however, the Tumblesons together received $300,000, which is certainly more than the $100,000 afforded under the UIM policy - - thus Derek, Laurie, and Kristin adequately received their UIM coverage by virtue of the fact that they received their proportionate share of $300,000, the tortfeasor's liability limit. After all, they received more, by virtue of the larger tortfeasor policy, than they would have under the UIM policy alone, i.e., if the tortfeasor would have been uninsured, the $100,000 UIM policy would have been split between all five Tumblesons. Derek, Laurie, and Kristin would have probably received a small proportionate share under the latter hypothetical. Moreover, even if the tortfeasor's policy was $99,999, Derek, Laurie, and Kristin would have received a proportionate share of $199,999 (tortfeasor's liability limit plus UIM limit), which is likely to be less than their proportionate share of $300,000. Accordingly, it seems reasonable to conclude that proper application of § 28.20.445(h)(1) denies the triggering of UIM coverage in this case.³

³ In addition, the Alaska Supreme Court has determined that insurance policies should be interpreted as to provide the coverage an ordinary layperson would expect to have through her interpretation of the policy. Starry v. Horace Mann Ins. Co., 649 P.2d 937 (Alaska 1982). A reasonable layperson would interpret the language of section (b)(1) to deny coverage because $300,000 is greater than $100,000 and $300,000 was paid to the Tumblesons. The Court is also of the opinion that a layperson would interpret section (h)(2) to deny coverage because the insureds, the Tumblesons, were the only persons who received payments from the tortfeasor's policy. Section (b)(2) is discussed in the following paragraph.

Section (i)(2) may be the most critical section in regard to the triggering of UIM coverage in this case. Section (h)(2) is clear and unambiguous. UIM coverage is triggered by section (h)(2) when, although the UIM limit is less than the tortfeasor's liability limit, the resources available from the tortfeasor's policy have been reduced to below the amount of the UIM limit by payments made to persons other than the insured. For purposes of insurance law, the Tumblesons are insureds. The tortfeasor, Schram, was insured by State Farm with liability limits at $100,000/$300,000. State Farm paid $300,000 to the Tumblesons. Docket No. 5 at 2. Since the payments were made to insureds, the section (h)(2) exception is inapplicable. Accordingly, section (h)(2) does not trigger UIM coverage.

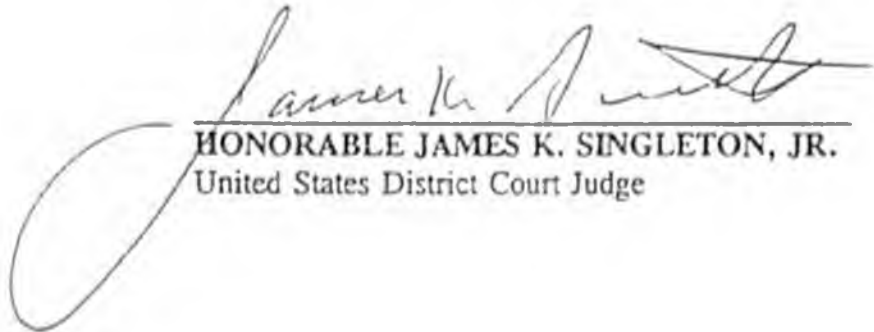

IV. CONCLUSION

The Court has reviewed the arguments presented by the Tumblesons and concludes that while the Tumblesons' raise serious public policy concerns, the statute clearly mandates that coverage does not exist. Although the Alaska legislature amended AS § 28.20.445 to provide broader UM/UIM protection, the amended section (b) is not inconsistent with the unchanged section (h) and thus section (h) is applicable to the present litigation. Section (h) determines when UIM coverage is available and section (b) determines how much compensation the UIM insured will receive. Moreover, the intent of Alaska's legislature does not conclusively demonstrate that it intended to remove section (h) or somehow make it inapplicable to this situation. Accordingly, Colonial's motion for summary judgment at DOCKET NO. 3 is GRANTED, and judgment shall be entered in favor of Colonial Insurance Company in its declaratory action. In addition, the Tumblesons' cross motion for summary judgment at DOCKET NO. 5 is DENIED.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED:

Plaintiff's motion at Docket No. 3 for summary judgment is hereby GRANTED and JUDGMENT ENTERED FOR THE PLAINTIFF. In addition, Defendants' cross motion for summary judgment at DOCKET NO. 5 is DENIED.

DATED at Anchorage, Alaska this 20th day of January, 1995.

Dear Senator Green:

Re: SB 95, Uninsured/Underinsured Motorist Coverage (UM/UIM)

During the hearing on SB 95 before Senate Judiciary on 4/24/95, Senator Taylor, Chairman of the Committee asked that I respond to you concerning your questions on the bill.

Higher Limits Offer

As you may know, the bill started out as a repeal of the higher limits offer of UM/UIM found in AS 21.89 020(c). In Senate Labor & Commerce, we suggested that it might be more appropriate to devise a compromise position for that section and noted that a reduction of the $1,000,000/$2,000,000 offer to $1,000,000/$1,000,000 might be a good start. We pointed out that there has been a shift away from the old requirement that the purchaser of insurance could only protect self and family to the extent that the insured provided protection for a third party. A number of states have adopted this view in one form or another. There are now 18 states that have some form of higher limits offering. The move to no fault laws in the 70's with its inherent focus on protecting self, has fostered this movement to a method whereby persons under a tort system might also avail themselves of greater choices of self coverage.

The existing law was adopted because the legislature wished to allow purchasers of automobile liability insurance, which basically provides coverage for injured third parties, to consider purchase of insurance covering personal protection for the purchaser and family. It allows for limits that exceed coverage for third party bodily injury liability. Prior to the changes in 1990 (Ch 78 SLA 1990), insurers did not voluntarily offer higher limits of UM/UIM or offer other means of substantive protection.

The policy issue considered in this legislation is, does the state wish to limit the coverage for a person buying automobile insurance for their own protection to the amount that person voluntarily purchases for the protection of a third party.

The Tumbleson Case

An issue that has an impact on the subject of UM/UIM is the feature in Ch 78 SLA 1990 which provides that a not-at-fault party's underinsured motorists coverage would be available as excess in cases where the at-fault party had insurance insufficient to meet the needs of the injured not-at-fault party in an automobile accident. The recent U. S. District Court case of Colonial Insurance Company of California v. Derek Tumbleson (Case # A94-184 CV (JKS)) has placed this provision into question. The premise for this ruling is that the underinsured feature is only triggered if the at-fault third party is uninsured. This action, if it stands, further impacts the ability of the purchaser of insurance to protect personal interests to a greater extent than the state requires protection of the third party. To add to the confusion, there is another case in state court addressing a similar fact situation which arrives at a different conclusion, so we have conflicting court cases.

Pricing

Ch 78 SLA 1990 did contain a section that indicated the coverage was excess. Testimony has been tendered that the rates would go up substantially if this legislation were adopted. For example, the lobbyist for State Farm indicated the rates for this coverage would increase by as much as 80% if the coverage were made excess by this legislation. That is somewhat puzzling since State Farm made a filing following passage of Ch 78 SLA 1990 which acknowledged that the coverage was intended on an excess basis instead of the difference-in-limits approach. Presumably, they have been settling losses on the basis of their filing.

The rate filings received from other insurers following the passage of that law reflect a similar view. In any event, rates must be supported on the basis of experience or a sound evaluation of a change which results in increased claims. Further, the charges for UM/UM are borne by the purchasers of the coverage and not by those who do not purchase it. Since insurers do best when there is a legitimate spreading of the risk, it is to their advantage to encourage purchase of the coverage.

Proposed Committee Substitute

Proposed committee substitute for SB95 version "O" is identical to version "M" for sections 1 - 4. The remaining sections deal with the timing and application of the legislation.

Section 5. This applicability provision notes that the addition of intent language (Section 1) and the change to AS 21.89.020(c) apply to new and renewal policies after the effective date of this Section, which is July 1, 1995 (per Section 8).

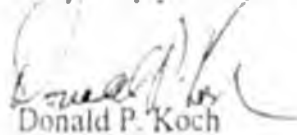

Section 6. The resolution of the Tumbleson case is clarified with the language in AS 28.20.445(b) which is in Section 3 of the bill, and the repeal of AS 28.20.445(h) and AS 28.40.100(a)(22) which is in Section 4 of the bill. These two items are made retroactive to September 2, 1990, the effective date of Ch 78 SLA 1990 by this Section. AS 28.20.445(h) and AS 28.40.100(a)(22) are near identical definitions of "underinsured motor vehicle" which were inadvertently not repealed with passage of Ch 78 SLA 1990.

Section 7. This Section makes the retroactivity of Section 6 immediate.

Section 8. See Section 5 discussion

If you have any questions on any of this, I would be happy to respond. My direct line is 465-2577. Thank you.

Very truly yours,

RE: SB 95, "An Act relating to automobile liability insurance coverage for uninsured or underinsured motor vehicles; and providing for an effective date."

Laura: This is to confirm in writing the change to CS for Senate Bill 95 () work draft version 9-LS073\F we talked about earlier this morning:

Section 4 should read: AS 28.20.445(h) and AS 28.40.100(a)(22) are repealed.

Both statutes, AS 28.20.445(h) and AS 28.40.100(a)(22) are identical definitions of UIM coverage and both must be deleted to fix the problem.

Dear Director Walsh:

RE: INDEPENDENT FILING
State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Company
NAIC #: 17625178
Revised Uninsured and Underinsured Motor Vehicle
Coverage Rate Schedules and Rule Pages

Enclosed for filing on behalf of the State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Company of Bloomington, Illinois are revised uninsured and underinsured motor vehicle coverage rate schedules and rule pages pursuant to recent legislation in the state of Alaska.

Alaska House Bill No. 429 broadens the extent of coverage provided by the uninsured and underinsured motor vehicle coverage by mandating coverage in an excess form rather than a difference-in-limits form and also by allowing stacking in certain instances. Enclosed Exhibit I contains the present, indicated, and proposed uninsured and underinsured motor vehicle coverage rates. No changes to the additional premium charges for Uninsured Property Damage are being submitted with this filing. The income effect of the change in rates due to Alaska House Bill No. 429 is revenue neutral, the rates merely being adjusted for the change in benefits.

We respectfully request that this filing be approved, effective immediately, for both new and renewal policies dated January 1, 1991 and later. Please return the enclosed duplicate of this letter and the rate and rule pages, appropriately stamped, for completion of our files. A self-addressed, stamped envelope is enclosed for your convenience. If you should have any questions regarding this filing, please telephone me collect at 309/766-2325.

Cordially,

Greg Hayward
