Sponsor Statement

Senate Bill 38

This legislation modifies existing statute dealing with living wills and would add to that statute a provision by which those who execute living wills can choose to become organ or tissue donors. By adding this provision to the statutory language of a living will, loved ones and health professionals would be fully informed of the wishes of family members and patients.

We live in a technological age in which the need for tissue and organ donation has found a much greater demand than supply. While it is not a legitimate function of government to dictate whether or not a person should become an organ or tissue donor, it is certainly a wise practice for government to facilitate this process.

In addition to adding anatomical gifts to the language of a living will, Senate Bill 38 would also instruct the Division of Motor Vehicles to indicate on drivers' licenses not only the fact that the bearer has elected to become an organ donor, but also that the individual has a living will.

Other than nominal expenses, this legislation should cost little to enforce, but may become invaluable if it increases Alaskans' participation in organ and tissue donation. Certainly any one of us, our families and loved ones, could benefit by an organ or tissue donation made less complicated by this bill.

To get an idea of the scope of organ transplants involving Alaskans, we contacted the Center for Transplant Services at the University of Washington Hospital.

Sponsor Statement - SB 38

Since 1989, 19 Alaskans have received kidney transplants through that facility. Twelve Alaskans have received liver transplants and one state resident received both a kidney and a pancreas.

To understand the need to make organ donation as uncomplicated as possible, I would like to point out that as of January 24, 1997, this one facility had a waitlist of 20 Alaskans in need of kidney transplants, 11 seeking donor livers and one state resident waiting for a donated pancreas.

The Virginia-based United Network for Organ Sharing, the national clearing house for organ transplants, has 68 Alaskans on their waitlist.

Since 1988, the United Network for Organ Sharing documents 207 Alaskans who have received donor organs.

I ask your support for Senate Bill 38.
