The Honorable Brian Porter
Speaker of the House
Alaska State Legislature
State Capitol
Juneau, AK 99801-1182

Dear Speaker Porter:

People in the last decades of the twentieth century have had to address an important question that those before have not confronted: How do we achieve the delicate balance when releasing personal information between individual rights and the need to protect the public? One decision that has already been made in Alaska and other states is that some criminal justice information should be available to people making sensitive employment and license decisions. We have decided, for example, that an employer in a nursing home should be able to know whether a prospective employee has been convicted of elder abuse or other crimes; or that a person operating a day care center should have access to criminal history information for prospective child care workers.

This bill I transmit today adopts The National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact (Compact) which simplifies procedures and establishes a framework for inter-state sharing of criminal history records. The records are intended for use in noncriminal justice matters, such as employee background checks, as allowed by law.

The National Criminal History Access and Child Protection Act, which adopts the Compact, was enacted in 1998. Two states have adopted the Compact and other states are now considering it. Adoption by a majority of states is expected within the next few years.

The Compact would not change or expand the decisions Alaskans have already made about employers and licensing agents who should have access to criminal history information. Nor would adoption of the Compact change any of the procedures, such as submission of fingerprints and payment of a fee through the state repository, for obtaining information. Rather, adoption of the Compact would allow persons who may obtain criminal justice information under present law to obtain more complete and accurate information.

Currently, Alaska obtains out-of-state criminal history information from the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI). The information available depends on records that have been supplied to the FBI by other states. However, states may fail to provide information to the FBI or, as a matter of state policy, do not submit certain records to the FBI. Thus, the information in the FBI's files is often incomplete. By adopting the Compact, Alaska will obtain the records directly from other Compact states instead of relying on the accuracy of the FBI's duplicate repository. The information would be distributed according to Alaska law. Further, as a Compact state, Alaska would supply its criminal history records (other than information that is sealed under Alaska law such as juvenile records) to other Compact states upon request.

The bill simplifies Alaska law for dissemination of records by allowing all past conviction information to be released, rather than basing release on time lapsed since the date of unconditional discharge. This ensures that all relevant information is available and removes the current confusion in determining the unconditional discharge date.

The bill also allows the state to release all information about prior convictions, not just for a "serious offense." This solves the dilemma of trying to determine whether a crime in another jurisdiction would be a serious offense in Alaska and expands the relevant information available to interested persons.

Sincerely,

Tony Knowles
Governor

Dear Representative James:

This is to request a hearing of House Bill 292, An Act adopting the National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact.

The National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact simplifies procedures and establishes a framework for inter-state sharing of criminal history records. The records are intended for use in noncriminal justice matters, such as employee background checks, as allowed by law.

The National Criminal History Access and Child Protection Act, which adopts the Compact, was enacted in 1998. Four states have adopted the Compact (Montana, Nevada, Georgia, Florida) and approximately twelve other states are introducing legislation to adopt the compact this year. Adoption by a majority of states is expected within the next few years.

The Compact would not change or expand the decisions Alaskans have already made about employers and licensing agents who should have access to criminal history information. Nor would adoption of the Compact change any of the procedures, such as submission of fingerprints and payment of a fee through the state repository, for obtaining information. Rather, adoption of the Compact would allow persons who may obtain criminal justice information under present law to obtain more complete, timely and accurate information.

Summary of Public Safety Testimony on HB 292 by Ken Bischoff, Director, Division of Administrative Services (465-5488)

HB 292 Does not: change who has access to criminal justice information, state or national. Requestors of this information will still require a basis authorized in law to receive this information.

HB 292 does the following:

1. Section 2 contains the language necessary to adopt the National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact. The National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact allows states to get national criminal history records by exchanging state records directly with other states, instead of relying on the FBI to keep duplicate records of all state criminal records. Because not all states manage to send duplicates of all their records to the FBI, exchanging records directly between states will provide more complete and timely access to criminal justice information for the purposes of licensing and employment. The Department of Public Safety will be better able to respond to employers and licensing agencies that are attempting to comply with Alaska Statutes and federal laws. Examples include:

- ✓ Alaska Bar Association (AS 08.08)
- ✓ Alaska Securities Act (AS 45.55)
- ✓ Assisted Living Homes (AS 47.33)
- ✓ Certification of Teachers (AS 14.20)
- ✓ Child Care, Child Placement and Maternity Homes (AS 07.35)
- ✓ Collection agencies (AS 08.24)
- ✓ Concealed handgun permits (AS 18.65.700)
- ✓ HUD Housing Opportunity Program (PL 104-120)
- ✓ Licensing of School Bus Drivers (AS 28.17)
- ✓ National Child Protection Act (PL 18.20)
- ✓ Regulation of Hospitals (AS 18.20)
- ✓ Security Guard Licensing (AS 18.65.410)
- ✓ Any agency that employs or licenses persons to be in authority over children or vulnerable adults (AS 12.62.160)

The Department performs approximately 20,000 of these types of checks each year.

2. Section 1 makes two house-keeping changes to AS 12.62 to provide more appropriately, all relevant information contained in a criminal history record to authorized employers and regulatory agencies. This would include arrest information without court dispositions and information beyond the ten year "unconditional discharge date" that is difficult to compute.

This change is needed to mitigate research and costs associated with filtering specific information to be able to respond to Alaska's 20,000 requests as well as national requests which will be received as a result of adoption of the compact.

3. Section 3 updates the definition of serious offense referenced by AS 12.62 regarding release of criminal justice information.

Introduction

This report consists of several informational resources relating to the proposed National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact (Compact). Adoption of the Compact by the U.S. Congress and the States will facilitate the full implementation of the Interstate Identification Index (III) as a decentralized system for the exchange of criminal history records for noncriminal justice purposes among States and the Federal government.

Included in this report are the following materials:

- An overview of the III system, including information setting forth its benefits;
- A list of the minimum standards for State participation in the III;
- A summary of the major provisions of the Compact;
- A summary of the importance of the Compact's ratification to further implementation of the III system;
- A copy of the Compact, along with a section-by-section analysis; and
- Correspondence from the U.S. Department of Justice relating to the introduction of the Compact in the Congress.

The purpose of the Compact is to authorize and require participating State criminal history repositories and the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) to make all unsealed criminal history records available in response to authorized noncriminal justice requests, for such purposes as background checks on those seeking employment with children or the elderly. The requests will be fingerprint-supported, and the dissemination and use of the records will be governed by the receiving State's laws.

When ratified, the Compact will eliminate the duplicate maintenance of criminal history records by the States and the FBI. The Compact was introduced first in Congress, which has adopted it. State legislatures may now ratify the Compact in essentially identical form. No ratifying State may thereafter unilaterally amend the Compact. The Compact supersedes any conflicting State laws in States where it is adopted. This will result in a uniform dissemination policy among States, while still ensuring that each State may apply its own laws within the State.

The governor-appointed Membership Group of SEARCH, The National Consortium for Justice Information and Statistics, has formally endorsed the Compact. In addition, the Advisory Policy Board to the Criminal Justice Information Services Division of the FBI and the National Sheriffs' Association have endorsed the Compact.

The Compact was included in Senate Bill 2022, which was passed by Congress and signed into law by the president in October 1998.¹

Section I: The System

Role and Benefits of the Interstate Identification Index System

A National System

The Interstate Identification Index (III), is an "index-pointer" criminal history record system that ties the computerized files of the FBI and the State-level centralized files maintained by each State into a national system. This system will serve as the vehicle for the National Instant Criminal Background Check System (NICS) that will be used for point-of-sale screening of firearm purchasers.

The FBI maintains the III system's automated index, which can be accessed by Federal, State and local criminal justice agencies throughout the country to conduct name searches to determine whether a particular individual has a criminal record anywhere in the country and, if so, to be pointed to the Federal or State file(s) from which the record(s) may be obtained on-line. The FBI also maintains the National Fingerprint File (NFF) which contains fingerprints of all the individuals in the index. The NFF provides a means of positive identification of subjects in the index and can be searched to identify individuals who give false names to police or employers in an attempt to hide their criminal pasts.

State Role

States can participate in the III system in two phases:

- In the first phase, the State's centralized criminal history record repository agrees to make its III-indexed records available in response to requests from Federal or out-of-State criminal justice agencies for criminal justice purposes. During this phase, the FBI continues to maintain duplicate records of offenders from this State in order to meet the needs of Federal and out-of-State noncriminal justice agencies that need the records for employment screening and other authorized noncriminal justice purposes.
- In the second phase of participation, a State agrees to make its III-indexed records available on an interstate and Federal-State basis for both criminal justice and noncriminal justice purposes.

The Compact is privacy-neutral in that it respects the intrastate dissemination laws for each State. At the same time, it permits ratifying states with sufficient interstate record-dissemination authority to become full participants in the III system.

Decentralization

As particular States become full III participants in the course of the ongoing phased implementation of the system, the FBI ceases to maintain duplicate criminal records for persons arrested and prosecuted in those States. Eventually, when all of the States have become full III participants, the FBI's centralized files of State offender records will be discontinued and all users of criminal history records — for criminal justice purposes as well as authorized noncriminal justice purposes — will obtain those records directly from the States' central computerized files (or from the FBI if the offender has a Federal record).

Benefits

Elimination of Duplication

Duplicate maintenance of criminal history records by the States and the FBI, and attendant costs, will be eliminated.

- The States will be relieved of the burden and cost of submitting arrest fingerprints and charge/disposition data to the FBI for all arrests for felonies and serious misdemeanors. Instead, they will submit only fingerprints and textual identification data for each person's first arrest, to update the III automated index and the NFF.
- The FBI will be relieved of the burden and cost of maintaining records on State offenders and receiving and processing fingerprint cards for all State arrests. Instead, it will maintain the III automated index, the NFF and full criminal records of Federal offenders.

Increased Record Quality

There will be an increase in the completeness of records made available on an interstate basis for both criminal justice and noncriminal justice purposes, including the screening of firearms purchasers and child care providers through the NICS. This is because records maintained in the State repositories are more up-to-date than the FBI's files. Also, many of the States maintain records of some misdemeanor offenses that have not been submitted to the FBI. These records will become available through the III system for NICS purposes and other authorized uses.

Increased System Security

There will be an increase in system security through the use of written agreements with all user agencies covering authorized access, transaction logging and record validation by record providers.

Faster Response Times

Some noncriminal justice users will enjoy faster response times because they will be receiving electronic responses rather than mailed record responses from the FBI and because of increased efficiency at the State level resulting from increased automation and system improvements preceding III participation.

Cost Savings

In most States (those that already have efficient automated systems), full participation in the III system will result in no significant new burdens and probably will result in overall cost savings. Evaluations of the NFF Pilot Project, which is implementing the decentralization phase of III on a State-by-State basis, have confirmed that start-up costs are reasonable and that the FBI and the four participating States have experienced cost savings. In the States, savings have also been realized at the local level because fingerprint cards for the FBI no longer need to be prepared for second and subsequent offenses.

Uniform Dissemination Standard

Ratification of the Compact will establish a uniform nationwide standard governing the interstate dissemination of criminal history records for noncriminal justice purposes.

- This will ensure that Federal agencies will continue to receive the State records they need to screen persons for employment in sensitive positions and for other authorized purposes and that authorized State agencies will continue to receive the out-of-State records they need to screen State employees and licensees.
- Each State will determine what criminal history record information is disseminated within its borders for noncriminal justice purposes. States will continue to apply their own dissemination laws to in-State use of their own records and they will screen out-of-State records received through III pursuant to their own laws.

Minimum Standards for State Participation in the Interstate Identification Index

A State must meet the following minimum standards to participate in the III:²

Fingerprint Identification Matters

Standard No. 1 - The State has a central repository for criminal history record information with fingerprint identification capability; that is, the ability to match fingerprint impressions. Although full technical fingerprint search capability is desirable, it is not a requirement.

Standard 2 - The State's central repository serves as the sole conduit for the transmission of arrest, judicial and correctional fingerprint cards for criterion offenses within the State to the FBI (single-source submission). Submission of related final disposition reports and expungements to the Identification Division via the central repository is desirable. Single-source submission of information to the FBI should not be unduly delayed by the State agency.

Standard 3 - The central repository maintains the subject's fingerprint impressions or a copy thereof as the basic source document of each Index record and to support each arrest event in the criminal history record.

Standard 4 - The central repository agrees to continue submitting all criterion arrest, court and correctional fingerprint cards and, when possible, the related final disposition reports to the FBI until such time as a study is completed regarding the NFF and approval is given to submitting only the first arrest fingerprint card (single-print submission).

Record Content and III Maintenance

Standard No. 5 - Each record maintained by the State contains all known arrest, disposition and custody-supervision data for that State.

Standard No. 6 - The State agrees to remove or expunge the State Identification Number (SID) from a III record when corresponding record data no longer exist at the State level.

Standard No. 7 - The State agrees to conduct a regularly scheduled audit to identify discrepancies and synchronize III records pointing to the State's database.

Standard No. 8 - Record completeness, accuracy and timeliness are considered by the State to be of primary importance and are maintained at the highest level possible.

Record Response

Standard No. 9 - The State agrees to respond immediately to III record requests via the National Law Enforcement Telecommunications System with the record or an acknowledgment and notice when the record will be provided.

Standard No. 10 - Record responses will have any alphabetic and/or numeric codes translated to literals (words or easily understood abbreviations) in order that the record responses can be readily understood.

Standard No. 11 - The State agrees not to include in its III response any out-of-State criminal history record information maintained in its files.

Accountability

Standard 12 - A single agency within each State agrees to be responsible for ensuring that the standards of participation are met.

Standard 13 - The State agrees to maintain records and provide dissemination in accordance with the civil and constitutional rights of individuals reflected in the records.

Standard 14 - The State agency executes a written agreement with the FBI to comply with the standards of participation.

Section II: The Compact

Major Provisions of the National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact

Major provisions of the proposed National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact include the following:

- The Compact will bind the FBI and ratifying States to participate in the noncriminal justice access program of III in accordance with the Compact and established system policies.
- Authorized users will be the same as those currently authorized to obtain records from the FBI's files.
- Participating State repositories will be authorized and required to make all unsealed criminal history records available in response to authorized noncriminal justice requests.
- All noncriminal justice access to the system will be through the FBI and the State repositories and will be based upon fingerprint identification of record subjects to ensure positive identification.
- Release and use of information obtained through the system for noncriminal justice purposes will be governed by the laws of the receiving States, and the receiving repositories will be required to screen record responses and delete any information that cannot be released legally within the State.
- The Compact will establish a compact council, composed of Federal and State officials and other members representing user interests, to establish operating policies for noncriminal justice uses of the III system.

Ratification of the Compact has not yet been made a condition of State participation in III. It is expected that all participating States will ratify the Compact since, in most States, the Compact will provide record dissemination authority now lacking under State laws.

The Importance of the National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact

Ratification of the interstate Compact by the Congress and by the States is critical to further implementation of the decentralization phase of the III system for three main reasons:

Assured Record Availability

First, as the FBI's files of State criminal history records are decentralized, the FBI loses its ability to ensure that records will be available to the many agencies, including large Federal agencies, that are authorized by Federal law to obtain criminal history records for specified purposes. Such agencies will become dependent on records supplied by the State repositories, and there needs to be some means of assuring that these records will remain available for all authorized III users and purposes.

An interstate compact is the most effective means of providing such long-term assurances. Once in effect, a compact cannot unilaterally be amended in any material respect by any party. Such a party can only renounce the compact completely and renunciation of a compact that has been ratified by the States in reliance on mutual obligations solemnly undertaken by all of them would be an extremely serious undertaking for any State. For these reasons, a compact is preferable to uniform State laws or independent State legislative action as a means to bind the States to long-term III participation.

Uniform Interstate Dissemination Policy

Second, compacts supersede conflicting State laws; thus, ratification of the Compact by the States will have the effect of amending some of their record dissemination laws. The Compact amends the dissemination laws to the extent necessary to overcome existing restrictions that keep most State repositories from being able to participate in the III system as providers of records for noncriminal justice purposes. Further, after ratifying the Compact, no

State will be able to reinstitute any such restrictions by legislation because any such statute would be in conflict with the Compact and thus void.

Only one or two more States can participate in the NFF under existing legal authority. The others will need to amend their record dissemination laws and, for the reasons mentioned above, a compact is the best way to accomplish such amendments in a consistent and lasting manner.

Strong State Role

Finally, the States need assurances that they will have a policy voice sufficient to protect their interests as the III system evolves in the future. The FBI will maintain the III automated index and the NFF and will, therefore, be in a strong position to influence future developments affecting the system. However, since the records available through the system will be predominantly State-maintained records, the States need to be able to ensure that uses of those records will be consistent with their concerns in areas such as individual privacy, system security and data quality.

The Compact provides these assurances by establishing a policymaking council with authority to oversee the use of the III system for noncriminal justice purposes. A majority of the members of the council must be State officials selected by the participating States. Since the council will have authority to establish policy affecting some aspects of FBI operations, the Compact must be ratified by the U.S. Congress.

National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact and Section-by-Section Analysis

Senate Bill 2022, which includes the Compact, was passed by Congress and signed into law by the president in October 1998.³ The section-by-section analysis of the Compact is a statement of Sen. Mike DeWine (R-OH), which was read into the October 16, 1998, edition of the Congressional Record.⁴

TITLE II—NATIONAL CRIMINAL HISTORY ACCESS AND CHILD PROTECTION ACT

Section 201. Short Title.

This title may be cited as the "National Criminal History Access and Child Protection Act".

Subtitle A—Exchange of Criminal History Records for Noncriminal Justice Purposes

Section 211. Short Title.

This subtitle may be cited as the "National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact Act of 1998".

Section 212. Findings.

Congress finds that—

(1) both the Federal Bureau of Investigation and State criminal history record repositories maintain fingerprint-based criminal history records;

(2) these criminal history records are shared and exchanged for criminal justice purposes through a Federal-State program known as the Interstate Identification Index System;

(3) although these records are also exchanged for legally authorized, noncriminal justice uses, such as governmental licensing and employment background checks, the purposes for and procedures by which they are exchanged vary widely from State to State;

(4) an interstate and Federal-State compact is necessary to facilitate authorized interstate criminal history record exchanges for noncriminal justice purposes on a uniform basis, while permitting each State to effectuate its own dissemination policy within its own borders; and

(5) such a compact will allow Federal and State records to be provided expeditiously to governmental and nongovernmental agencies that use such records in accordance with pertinent Federal and State law, while simultaneously enhancing the accuracy of the records and safeguarding the information contained therein from unauthorized disclosure or use.

(b) CRIMINAL JUSTICE AGENCIES AND OTHER GOVERNMENTAL OR NONGOVERNMENTAL AGENCIES.—The FBI, to the extent authorized by section 552a of title 5, United States Code (commonly known as the "Privacy Act of 1974"), and State criminal history record repositories shall provide criminal history records (excluding sealed records) to criminal justice agencies and other governmental or nongovernmental agencies for noncriminal justice purposes allowed by Federal statute, Federal Executive order, or a State statute that has been approved by the Attorney General, that authorizes national indices checks.

Upon subsequent entering into this Compact by additional States, it shall become effective among those States and the Federal Government and each Party State that has previously ratified it. When ratified, this Compact shall have the full force and effect of law within the ratifying jurisdictions. The form of ratification shall be in accordance with the laws of the executing State.

ARTICLE VIII—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

(a) RELATION OF COMPACT TO CERTAIN FBI ACTIVITIES.—Administration of this Compact shall not interfere with the management and control of the Director of the FBI over the FBI's collection and dissemination of criminal history records and the advisory function of the FBI's advisory policy board chartered under the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. (2) become effective 180 days after written notice of renunciation is provided by the Party State to each other Party State and to the Federal Government.

ARTICLE X—SEVERABILITY

The provisions of this Compact shall be severable, and if any phrase, clause, sentence or provision of this Compact is declared to be contrary to the constitution of any participating State, or to the Constitution of the United States, or the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person, or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of this Compact and the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person, or circumstance shall not be affected thereby. If a portion of this Compact is held contrary to the constitution of any Party State, all other portions of this Compact shall remain in full force and effect as to the remaining Party States and in full force and effect as to the Party State affected, as to all other provisions.

ARTICLE XI—ADJUDICATION OF DISPUTES

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Council shall—

(1) have initial authority to make determinations with respect to any dispute regarding—

NATIONAL CRIME PREVENTION AND PRIVACY COMPACT OF THE NATIONAL CRIMINAL HISTORY ACCESS AND CHILD PROTECTION ACT SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

Section 211.—This section provides the short title of the Act.

Section 212.—This section sets forth the congressional findings upon which the Act is predicated. The section reflects congressional determinations that both the FBI and the states maintain fingerprint-based criminal history records and exchange them for criminal justice purposes and also, to the extent authorized by federal law and the laws of the various states, use the information contained in these records for certain noncriminal justice purposes. Although this system has operated for years on a reciprocal, voluntary basis, the exchange of records for noncriminal justice purposes has been hampered by the fact that the laws and policies of the states governing the noncriminal justice use of criminal history records and the procedures by which they are exchanged vary widely. A compact will establish a uniform standard for the interstate and federal-state exchange of criminal history records for noncriminal justice purposes, while permitting each state to continue to enforce its own record dissemination laws within its own borders. A compact will also facilitate the interstate and federal-state exchange of information by clarifying the obligations and responsibilities of the respective parties, streamlining the processing of background search applications and eliminating record maintenance duplication at the federal and state levels. Finally, the compact will provide a mechanism for establishing and enforcing uniform standards governing record accuracy and protecting the confidentiality and privacy interests of record subjects.

Section 213.—This section sets out definitions of key terms used in this subtitle. Definitions of key terms used in the compact are set out in Article I of the compact.

Section 214.—This section formally enacts the compact into federal law, makes the United States a party, and consents to entry into the Compact by the States.

Section 215.—This section outlines the effect of the Compact's enactment on certain other laws. First, subsection (a) provides that the Compact is deemed to have no effect on the FBI's obligations and responsibilities under the Privacy Act. The Privacy Act became effective in 1975, and can generally be characterized as a federal code of fair information practices regarding individuals. The Privacy Act regulates the collection, maintenance, use, and dissemination of personal information by the federal government. This Section makes clear that the Compact will neither expand nor diminish the obligations imposed on the FBI by the Privacy Act. All requirements relating to collection, disclosure and administrative matters remain in effect, including standards relating to notice, accuracy and security measures.

Second, enactment of the Compact will neither expand nor diminish the responsibility of the FBI and the state criminal history record repositories to permit access, direct or otherwise, to criminal history records under the authority of certain other federal laws (enumerated in subsection (b)(1)). These laws include the following:

The Security Clearance Information Act (Section 9101 of Title 5, United States Code) requires state and local criminal justice agencies to release criminal history record information to certain federal agencies for national security background checks.

The Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act prescribes a waiting period before the purchase of a handgun may be consummated in order for a criminal history records check on the purchaser to be completed, and also establishes a national instant background check system to facilitate criminal history checks of firearms purchasers. Under this system, licensed firearms dealers are authorized access to the national instant background check system for purposes of complying with the background check requirement.

The National Child Protection Act of 1993 (42 U.S.C. § 5119a) authorizes states with appropriate state statutes to access and review state and federal criminal history records through the national criminal history background check system for the purpose of determining whether care providers for children, the elderly and the disabled have criminal histories bearing upon their fitness to assume such responsibilities.

The Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 authorizes federal and state civil courts to have access to FBI databases containing criminal history records, missing person records and court protection orders for use in connection with stalking and domestic violence cases.

The United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended by the Housing Opportunity Program Extension Act of 1996, authorizes public housing authorities to obtain federal and state criminal conviction records relating to public housing applicants or tenants for purposes of applicant screening, lease enforcement and eviction.

The Native American Housing Assistance and Self-Determination Act authorizes Indian tribes or tribally designated housing entities to obtain federal and state conviction records relating to applicants for or tenants of federally assisted housing for purposes of applicant screening, lease enforcement and eviction. Nothing in the Compact would alter any rights of access provided under these laws.

Subsection (b)(2) provides that the compact shall not affect any direct access to federal criminal history records authorized by law. Under existing legal authority, the FBI has provided direct terminal access to certain federal agencies, including the Office of Management and Budget and the Immigration and Naturalization Service, to facilitate the processing of large numbers of background search requests by these agencies for such purposes as federal employment, immigration and naturalization matters, and the issuance of security clearances. This access will not be affected by the compact.

Subsection (c) provides that the Compact's enactment will not affect the FBI's authority to use its criminal history records for noncriminal justice purposes under Public Law 92-544—the State, Justice, Commerce Appropriations Act of 1973. This law restored the Bureau's authority to exchange its identification records with the states and certain other organizations or entities, such as federally chartered or insured banking institutions, for employment and licensing purposes, after a federal district court had declared the FBI's practice of doing so to be without foundation. (See Menard v. Mitchell, 328 F. Supp. 718 (D.D.C. 1971)).

Subsection (d) provides that the Council created by the Compact to facilitate its administration is deemed not to be a federal advisory committee as defined under the Federal Advisory Committee Act. This provision is necessary since nonfederal employees will sit on the Compact Council together with federal personnel and the Council may from time to time be called upon to provide the Director of the FBI or the Attorney General with collective advice on the administration of the Compact. Without this stipulation, such features might cause the Council to be considered an advisory committee within the meaning of the Federal Advisory Committee Act. Even though the Council will not be considered an advisory committee for purposes of the Act, it will hold public meetings.

Similarly, to avoid any question on the subject, Subsection (e) provides that members of the Compact Council will not be deemed to be federal employees or officers by virtue of their Council membership for any purpose other than to effect the Compact. Thus, state officials and other nonfederal personnel who are appointed to the Council will be considered federal officials only to the extent of their roles as Council members. They will not be entitled to compensation or benefits accruing to federal employees or officers, but they could receive reimbursement from federal funds for travel and subsistence expenses incurred in attending council meetings.

Section 216.—This Section admonishes all federal personnel to enforce the Compact and to cooperate in its implementation. It also directs the U.S. Attorney General to take such action as may be necessary to implement the Compact within the federal government, including the promulgation of regulations.

Section 217.—This is the core of the subtitle and sets forth the text of the Compact:

Overview. This briefly describes what the Compact is and how it is meant to work. Under the Compact, the FBI and the states agree to maintain their respective databases of criminal history records and to make them available to Compact parties for authorized purposes by means of an electronic information sharing system established cooperatively by the federal government and the states.

Article I—Definitions. This article sets out definitions for key terms used in the Compact. Most of the definitions are substantially identical to definitions commonly used in federal and state laws and regulations relating to criminal history records and need no explanation. However, the following definitions merit comment:

(20) Positive Identification. This term refers, in brief, to association of a person with his or her criminal history record through a comparison of fingerprints or other equally reliable biometric identification techniques. Such techniques eliminate or substantially reduce the risks of associating a person with someone else's record or failing to find a record of a person who uses a false name. At present, the method of establishing positive identification in use in criminal justice agencies throughout the United States is based upon comparison of fingerprint patterns, which are essentially unique and unchanging and thus provide a highly reliable basis for identification. It is anticipated that this method of positive identification will remain in use for many years to come, particularly since federal and state agencies are investing substantial amounts of money to acquire automated fingerprint identification equipment and related devices which facilitate the capturing and transmission of fingerprint images and provide searching and matching methods that are efficient and highly accurate. However, there are other biometric identification techniques, including retinal scanning, voice-print analysis and DNA typing, which might be adapted for criminal record identification purposes. The wording of the definition contemplates that at some future time the Compact Council might authorize the use of one or more of these techniques for establishing positive identification, if it determines that the reliability of such technique(s) is at least equal to the reliability of fingerprint comparison.

(21) Sealed Record Information. Article IV, paragraph (b), permits the FBI and state criminal history record repositories to delete sealed record information when responding to an interstate record request pursuant to the Compact. Thus, the definition of "sealed" becomes important, particularly since state sealing laws vary considerably, ranging from laws that are quite restrictive in their application to others that are very broad. The definition set out here is intended to be a narrow one in keeping with a basic tenet of the Compact—that state repositories shall release as much information as possible for interstate exchange purposes, with issues concerning the use of particular information for particular purposes to be decided under the laws of the receiving states. Consistent with the definition, an adult record, or a portion of it, may be considered sealed only if its release for noncriminal justice purposes has been prohibited by a court order or by action of a designated official or board, such as a State Attorney General or a Criminal Record Privacy Board, acting pursuant to a federal or state law. Further, to qualify under the definition, a court order, whether issued in response to a petition or on the court's own motion, must apply only to a particular record subject or subjects referred to by name in the order. So-called "blanket" court orders applicable to multiple unnamed record subjects who fall into particular classifications or circumstances, such as first-time non-serious drug offenders, do not fit the definition. Similarly, sealing orders issued by designated officials or boards acting pursuant to statutory authority meet the definition only if such orders are issued in response to petitions filed by individual record subjects who are referred to by name in the orders. So-called "automatic" sealing laws, which restrict the noncriminal justice use of the records of certain defined classes of individuals, such as first-time offenders who successfully complete probation terms, do not satisfy the definition, because they do not require the filing of individual petitions and the issuance of individualized sealing orders.

Concerning juvenile records, each state is free to adopt whatever definition of sealing it prefers.

Article II—Purposes. Five purposes are listed: creation of a legal framework for establishment of the Compact; delineation of the FBI's obligations under the Compact; delineation of the obligations of party states; creation of a Compact Council to monitor system operations and promulgate necessary rules and procedures; and, establishment of an obligation by the parties to adhere to the Compact and its related rules and standards.

Article III—Responsibilities of Compact Parties. This article details FBI and state responsibilities under the Compact and provides for the appointment of Compact Officers by the FBI and by party states. Compact officers shall have primary responsibility for ensuring the proper administration of the Compact within their jurisdictions.

The FBI is required to provide criminal history records maintained in its automated database for noncriminal justice purposes described in Article IV of the Compact. These responses will include federal criminal history records and, to the extent that the FBI has such data in its files, information from non-Compact States and information from Compact States relating to records which such states cannot provide through the III System. The FBI is also responsible for providing and maintaining the centralized system and equipment necessary for the Compact's success and ensuring that requests made for criminal justice purposes will have priority over requests made for noncriminal justice purposes.

State responsibilities are similar. Each Party State must grant other states access to its III system-indexed criminal history records for authorized noncriminal justice purposes and must submit to the FBI fingerprint records and subject identification information that are necessary to maintain the national indices. Each state must comply with duly established system rules, procedures, and standards. Finally, each state is responsible for providing and maintaining the telecommunications links and equipment necessary to support system operations within that state.

Administration of Compact provisions will not be permitted to reduce the level of service available to authorized criminal justice and noncriminal justice users on the effective date of the Compact.

Article IV—Authorized Record Disclosures. This article requires the FBI, to the extent authorized by the Privacy Act, and the state criminal history record repositories to provide criminal history records to one another for use by governmental or nongovernmental agencies for noncriminal justice purposes that are authorized by federal statute, by federal executive order, or by a state statute that has been approved by the U.S. Attorney General. Compact parties will be required to provide criminal history records to other compact parties for noncriminal justice uses that are authorized by law in the requesting jurisdiction even though the law of the responding jurisdiction does not authorize such uses within its borders. Further, the responding party must provide all of the criminal history record information it holds on the individual who is the subject of the request (deleting only sealed record information) and the law of the requesting jurisdiction will determine how much of the information will actually be released to the noncriminal justice agency on behalf of which the request was made. This approach provides a uniform dissemination standard for interstate exchanges, while permitting each compact party to enforce its own record dissemination laws within its borders.

To provide uniformity of interpretation, state laws authorizing noncriminal justice uses of criminal history records under this article must be reviewed by the U.S. Attorney General to ensure that the laws explicitly authorize searches of the national indices.

Records provided through the III System pursuant to the Compact may be used only by authorized officials for authorized purposes. Compact officers must establish procedures to ensure compliance with this limitation as well as procedures to ensure that criminal history record information provided for noncriminal justice purposes is current and accurate and is protected from unauthorized release. Further, procedures must be established to ensure that records received from other compact parties are screened to ensure that only legally authorized information is released. For example, if the law of the receiving jurisdiction provides that only conviction records may be released for a particular noncriminal justice purpose, all other entries, such as acquittal or dismissal notations or arrest notations with no accompanying disposition notation, must be deleted.

Article V—Record Request Procedures. This article provides that direct access to the National Identification Index and the National Fingerprint File for purposes of conducting criminal history record searches for noncriminal justice purposes shall be limited to the FBI and the state criminal history record repositories. A noncriminal justice agency authorized to obtain national searches pursuant to an approved state statute must submit the search application through the state repository in the state in which the agency is located. A state repository receiving a search application directly from a noncriminal justice agency in another state may process the application through its own criminal history record system, if it has legal authority to do so, but it may not conduct a search of the national indices on behalf of such an out-of-state agency nor may it obtain out-of-state or federal records for such an agency through the III System.

Noncriminal justice agencies authorized to obtain national record checks under federal law or federal executive order, including federal agencies, federally chartered or insured financial institutions and certain securities and commodities establishments, must submit search applications through the FBI or, if the repository consents to process the application, through the state repository in the state in which the agency is located.

All noncriminal justice search applications submitted to the FBI or to the state repositories must be accompanied by fingerprints or some other approved form of positive identification. If a state repository positively identifies the subject of such a search application as having a III System-indexed record maintained by another state repository or the FBI, the state repository shall be entitled to obtain such records from such other state repositories or the FBI. If a state repository cannot positively identify the subject of a noncriminal justice search application, the repository shall forward the application, together with fingerprints or other approved identifying information, to the FBI. If the FBI positively identifies the search application subject as having a III System-indexed record or records, it shall notify the state repository which submitted the application and that repository shall be entitled to obtain any III System-indexed record or records relating to the search subject maintained by any other state repository or the FBI.

The FBI and state repositories may charge fees for processing noncriminal justice search applications, but may not charge fees for providing criminal history records by electronic means in response to authorized III System record requests.

Article VI—Establishment of Compact Council. This article establishes a Compact Council to promulgate rules and procedures governing the use of the III System for noncriminal justice purposes. Such rules cannot conflict with the FBI's administration of the III System for criminal justice purposes. Issues concerning whether particular rules or procedures promulgated by the Council conflict with FBI authority under this article shall be adjudicated pursuant to Article XI.

The Council shall consist of 15 members from compact states and federal and local criminal justice and noncriminal justice agencies. All members shall be appointed by the U.S. Attorney General. Council members shall elect a Council Chairman and Vice Chairman, both of whom shall be compact officers unless there are no compact officers on the Council who are willing to serve, in which case at-large members may be elected to these offices.

The 15 Council members include nine members who must be state compact officers or state repository administrators, four at-large members representing federal, state and local criminal justice and noncriminal justice interests, one member from the FBI's advisory policy board on criminal justice information services and one member who is an FBI employee. Although, as noted, all members will be appointed by the U.S. Attorney General, they will be nominated by other persons, as specified in the Compact. If the Attorney General declines to appoint any person so nominated, the Attorney General shall request another nomination from the person or persons who nominated the rejected person. Similarly, if a Council membership vacancy occurs, for any reason, the Attorney General shall request a replacement nomination from the person or persons who made the original nomination.

Persons who are appointed to the Council who are not already federal officials or employees shall, by virtue of their appointment by the Attorney General, become federal officials to the extent of their duties and responsibilities as Council members. They shall, therefore, have authority to participate in the development and issuance of rules and procedures, and to participate in other actions within the scope of their duties as Council members, which may be binding upon federal officers and employees or otherwise affect federal interests.

The Council shall be located for administrative purposes within the FBI and shall have authority to request relevant assistance and information from the FBI. Although the Council will not be considered a Federal Advisory Committee (see Section 215(d)), it will hold public meetings and will publish its rules and procedures in the Federal Register and make them available for public inspection and copying at a Council office within the FBI.

Article VII—Ratification of Compact. This article states that the Compact will become effective immediately upon its execution by two or more states and the United States Government and will have the full force and effect of law within the ratifying jurisdictions. Each state will follow its own laws in effecting ratification.

Article VIII—Miscellaneous Provisions. This article makes clear that administration of the Compact shall not interfere with the authority of the FBI Director over the management and control of the FBI's collection and dissemination of criminal history records for any purpose other than noncriminal justice. Similarly, nothing in the Compact diminishes a state's obligations and authority under Public Law 92-544 regarding the dissemination or use of criminal history record information (see analysis of Section 214, above). The Compact does not require the FBI to obligate or expend funds beyond its appropriations.

Article IX—Renunciation. This article provides that a state wishing to end its obligations by renouncing the Compact shall do so in the same manner by which it ratified the Compact and shall provide six months' advance notice to other compact parties.

Article X—Severability. This article provides that the remaining provisions of the Compact shall not be affected if a particular provision is found to be in violation of the Federal Constitution or the constitution of a party state. Similarly, a finding in one state that a portion of the Compact is legally objectionable will have no effect on the viability of the Compact in other Party States.

Article XI—Adjudication of Disputes. This article vests initial authority in the Compact Council to interpret its own rules and standards and to resolve disputes among parties to the Compact. Decisions are to be rendered upon majority vote of Council members after a hearing on the issue. Any Compact party may appeal any such Council decision to the U.S. Attorney General and thereafter may file suit in the appropriate United States district court. Any suit concerning the compact filed in any state court shall be removed to the appropriate federal district court.

The Honorable Newt Gingrich
Speaker
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Mr. Speaker:

Enclosed is a legislative proposal to provide congressional approval of the National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact ("Compact"). This Compact will allow for decentralized and more efficient exchange of criminal history records for noncriminal-justice purposes among the states and the federal government.

Currently, arrest fingerprint cards are submitted to the FBI by Federal, State, and local agencies on a voluntary basis. Law enforcement agencies, primarily local police and sheriffs' offices, maintain a system of records specific to their state or locality and submit duplicate prints of arrested and charged persons to the FBI to receive information on an individual's prior nationwide criminal history. The FBI reports its findings and maintains the fingerprint card, along with the accompanying data, in its criminal-history files. The FBI has maintained a duplicate set of criminal-history records since 1924 and today has over 200 million fingerprint cards on file.

Use of fingerprint-based criminal-history record information for noncriminal-justice purposes is increasingly in demand. This bill would do nothing to expand or diminish the noncriminal-justice purposes for which criminal history records may be used; it is merely intended to facilitate their exchange in a more efficient and effective manner. Specifically, this Compact would establish both a legal framework for the cooperative exchange of criminal-history records for noncriminal-justice purposes, and a Compact Council to monitor system operations and promulgate necessary rules and procedures.

The primary goal of the Compact is to provide a decentralized national records system that will provide at least the same level of service as the existing centralized FBI record system at reduced cost. The Compact will use the same electronic criminal history record information sharing system for noncriminal-justice purposes that is currently employed for criminal justice purposes. The necessity for duplicate records at the Federal level will be eliminated, and states will no longer need to send the FBI duplicate sets of fingerprints for an individual's second or subsequent arrest.

Subsequent inquiries regarding an individual will automatically produce an index of the states in which that individual has a criminal record. Implementation of the Compact will permit a requesting state to access directly another state's records electronically so long as it is seeking the information based on fingerprint identification for a noncriminal-justice purpose authorized under its own laws and Federal law.

The savings associated with decentralization of criminal history records maintenance are significant. The savings arise from avoiding the costs of processing fingerprint cards and related data maintenance at both the Federal and State levels. In addition, the Compact is expected to provide a higher level of data quality. Currently, in some instances disposition information is not submitted to the FBI by the States. Without complete dispositions, the utility of record information included in the centralized record system is somewhat limited as many uses rely on the conviction data. Various studies by the FBI and others have shown that state records are often more complete than those of the FBI.

The Compact was prepared by the Criminal Justice Information Services (CJIS) Advisory Policy Board with FBI support. The CJIS Board is chartered under the Federal Advisory Committee Act (Public Law 92-463, 86 Stat. 770) to advise the Director of the FBI on policies addressing information systems. It has 29 members and is made up primarily of senior policy-level officials from federal, state and local criminal justice agencies. In addition, Attorneys General in both Democratic and Republican Administrations have approved the concept of the Compact.

The Compact Clause of the Constitution, Article I, Section 10, Clause 3, generally requires congressional consent for agreements or compacts among the states. While we do not believe that congressional approval is constitutionally mandated in this instance because the United States will be a party to the Compact, we believe that congressional approval, whether constitutionally mandated or not, will be an important factor in achieving the goals of the Compact.

The office of Management and Budget advises that submission of this proposed legislation is consistent with the Administration's program. An identical letter and enclosures have been forwarded to the President of the Senate.

We urge prompt congressional consideration of this important legislation.

Sincerely,
