SB 90

State Jurisdiction over Fish and Game

The State of Alaska is currently fighting the federal government's encroachment into Alaska's Sovereign ability to manage its fish and wildlife resources. Recently, the Governor officially notified the federal government of Alaska's opposition to federal regulations regarding the management and harvest of Alaska's fishery resources in Glacier Bay. Senate Bill 90 is necessary to bolster Alaska's Sovereign authority as provided by the Alaska Statehood Act and preempt the federal government from exercising management over Alaska's fish and wildlife resources.

ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)

CSSB 90 (RES) declares that the State of Alaska has exclusive authority to manage fish and game resources within its boundaries. This creates a direct conflict with federal law and federal management authority and will undoubtedly provoke judicial challenges to the legislation. Lawsuits of this nature, i.e., involving state/federal conflicts, are normally lengthy and expensive and will have a direct, but currently unpredictable, financial impact on the department.
