RE: HB 189: Term Limits and Term Limit Pledges

Dear Honorable Members,

It is my understanding that you are having a hearing on this bill on April 12. I would appreciate it if this letter could be made a part of the record of testimony on the subject bill.

I support this measure and urge its passage. I was reminded of the provisions of state law when confronted with this term limits language on the ballot in the last election. This kind of government sponsored electioneering is totally out of place on the ballot which should be kept clean so as not to impede a voters choice. How can we penalize a voter for campaigning within a hundred feet of the polling booth when we have the state of Alaska campaigning on an issue right in the privacy of the polling booth? The State is saying that the term limits issue is important more than any other issue before the voters, which is nonsense. I happen to support Representative Young's position on term limits and as a voter I resent the State implying that there may be something wrong with his position on the ballot.

In addition to the policy reasons for supporting the repeals provided for in HB 189, as a lawyer and former Attorney General I am sensitive to the legal problems with these provisions of our statutes. The government has no business telling us why we should vote for a candidate. This is a First Amendment issue. While I understand Attorney General Botelho has toned down the effect of the statutes in an attempt to give the legislative intent some life, I fear he has not been stern enough. The government can abridge free speech by singling out an issue of policy discussion for government control. I fear it has done so here.

Under any analysis there is little gained here but the possibility of a lawsuit, a suit which I anticipate would be lost by the government. I have been asked whether I would bring a constitutional case against these sections, but why waste government and personal assets on defending such an action when the policy is so bad, however the Supreme Court may rule? Let the legislature act.

HB 189: Term Limits and
Term Limit Pledges
April 5, 2001

I urge you to enact this bill and repeal these provisions that constrain the right of the public to consider a clean ballot in exercising the right to vote.

Sincerely,

John Havelock

This case concerns issues of fundamental importance in any constitutional democracy. As Chief Justice Warren wrote, "[t]he right to vote freely for the candidate of one's choice is of the essence of a democratic society, and any restrictions on that right strike at the heart of representative government." Reynolds v. Sims, 377 U.S. 533, 555 (1964). Because of their unique perspective and history of defense of voting rights and constitutional liberties, these amici respectfully submit this brief in support of respondents on the merits.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This case involves a challenge to Amendment 73 to the Arkansas Constitution, adopted in November 1992 by an initiative petition. The relevant portion of the amendment provides that a person who has been elected to three or more terms to the U.S. House of Representatives, or to two or more terms to the U.S. Senate, is thereafter barred for life from appearing on the ballot for that office. Such incumbents may gain reelection only through write-in campaigns.

This lawsuit was filed in November 1992 in the Pulaski County Circuit Court. The circuit court granted summary judgment for the plaintiffs, finding the law an impermissible, state-imposed qualification for federal office. Pet. App. at 49a. The Arkansas Supreme Court affirmed. Pet. App. at 14a.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

By imposing term limits on Members of Congress, the State of Arkansas baldly asserts a power to influence the election of federal legislators. The effort is plainly inconsistent with the text, history, and consistent judicial construction of the federal Constitution.

First, the Qualification Clauses do not authorize states to add new qualifications for federal office, and have historically been interpreted to deny such a power by implication. The qualifications of federal legislators are governed by the Constitution, and do not fall within the residual state power to regulate private conduct. By imposing ballot access restrictions on certain incumbent candidates for federal office with the express purpose, and almost certain effect, of barring reelection, Arkansas has attempted to impose an additional qualification for federal office that must be rejected.

Arkansas identifies no other source of constitutional authority that permits interference with the outcome of federal elections. The Ninth and Tenth Amendments preserve only preexisting powers of the states, and confer no new power over federal offices created by the Constitution. Nor can the term limits amendment be justified as a permissible regulation of the time, place, or manner of congressional elections. Its sole and explicit purpose is to prevent the reelection of designated congressional officeholders, an effort to control the outcome of a federal election plainly unauthorized by Article I, Section 4.

Accordingly, these amici respectfully urge this Court to affirm the decision of the Arkansas Supreme Court.

January 26, 1998 -- Colorado Court Axes Term-Limits Pledges

DENVER -- A state constitutional amendment that told state legislators to vote for a proposed term-limits amendment to the U.S. Constitution has been struck down by the Colorado Supreme Court.

According to the Denver Post, the unanimous court called the measure both improperly coercive and a political death sentence for legislators who did not follow the amendment's directives.

The decision was widely hailed, from the American Civil Liberties Union of Colorado to state Sen. Charles Duke, R-Monument. Both strongly opposed Amendment 12, passed in November 1996.

"The amendment is coercive and inconsistent with representative government," Duke told the newspaper. "It coerced a state legislator into following a compulsory statewide mandate" instead of following his own best judgment or the will of his constituents. Amendment 12 did not receive much attention prior to the 1996 election. But its passage surprised a number of people who keep track of proposed constitutional amendments, the Post said. One of those, Karen A. Morrissey, challenged the amendment in court, picking up the support of Duke, several others, and the ACLU.

Specifically, the amendment directed Colorado's state and congressional representatives to support a proposed "Term Limits Amendment" to the U.S. Constitution, which would limit U.S. senators to two terms and U.S. representatives to three terms. The legislators were directed to apply for a constitutional convention and ratify the amendment when it was referred to the state.

Should the legislators fail to do as Amendment 12 directed, the words "disregarded voter instructions on term limits" were to appear on all primary and general election ballots beside the name of the politician.

Also, the amendment instructed non-incumbent candidates to sign a pledge promising to use all their legislative powers to enact the term-limits amendment to the U.S. Constitution. If they failed to take the pledge, it would be noted on the ballot next to their name.

The court said that Amendment 12 violated the political process by carving a "wholly new and unacceptable method of decision-making" and was unfair to legislators.

"Without any effective means to combat these ballot designations, lawmakers are essentially forced to choose between wholesale adherence to Amendment 12's instructions and political death," said Chief Justice Anthony Vollack.

Sponsor Statement for HB 189

On February 28, 2001, in a case entitled Cook v. Gralike, et al., the United States Supreme Court ruled that printing term limit pledges on the ballot next to a Congressional candidate's name is unconstitutional. The Missouri act which was struck down required "DISREGARDED VOTERS' INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" to be printed on ballots by the names of members failing to take certain legislative acts in support of the proposed term limit amendment. It also provided that "DECLINED TO PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" be printed by the names of the non-incumbent candidates refusing to take a "Term Limit" pledge to bring about a specified "Congressional Term Limits Amendment."

Through the Elections Clause, the Constitution delegated to the States the power to regulate the "Times, Places, Manner of holding Elections for Senators and Representatives," subject to a grant of authority to Congress to "make or alter such Regulations." The states may regulate the incidents of such elections, including balloting, only within the exclusive delegation of power under the Elections Clause.

The Supreme Court found that the requirement of printing on the ballot a candidate's lack of acceptance of a term limit pledge was not a procedural regulation. It did not regulate the time of elections; it did not regulate the place of elections; nor did it regulate the manner of elections. Rather, the court found, the requirement was plainly designed to favor candidates who are willing to support the particular form of a term limits amendment, and to disfavor those who either oppose term limits entirely or who would prefer a different proposal. The Court stated that:

...it seems clear that the adverse labels handicap candidates at the most crucial state in the election process—the instant before the vote is cast. The labels imply that the issue 'is an important—perhaps paramount—consideration in the citizen's choice, which may decisively influence the citizen to cast his ballot' against candidates branded as unfaithful. Thus far from regulating the procedural mechanisms of elections, the Missouri act attempts to dictate electoral outcomes. Such 'regulation' of congressional elections simply is not authorized by the 'Elections Clause.'

Alaska statutes AS 15.15.500-575 require that "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" be printed on the ballot adjacent to the name of any respective state senator or representative who failed to take appropriate action in support of a congressional term limit amendment to the constitution, during the preceding term of office. The same shall be printed on the ballot adjacent to the name of any United States Senator or Representative who also fails to take appropriate action during the preceding term.

Non-incumbent candidates for United States Senator and Representative, and state senator and representative who decline to take a "Term Limits' pledge shall have "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" printed adjacent to their name on every primary and general election ballot.

Any candidate for the United States Congress and the Alaska Legislature is permitted to submit to the lieutenant governor an executed copy of the Term Limits Pledge set for in AS 15.15.560(b). The lieutenant governor shall place on every election ballot "Signed TERM LIMITS pledge: Will serve no more than [3 terms] [2 terms]" next to the name of any candidate who has ever executed the Term Limits Pledge. In addition, "Broke TERM LIMITS pledge" shall be placed on every ballot next to the name of any candidate, who at any time executes the applicable Term Limits Pledge, and thereafter qualifies as a candidate for a term that would exceed the number of terms or years set for in the applicable Term Limits Pledge.

Since the Alaska statutes are so similar to those of Missouri, this United States Supreme Court ruling suggests that our statutes are unconstitutional. This bill will repeal these unconstitutional statutes.

The committee urges your support of this bill.

COOK v. GRALIKE ET AL.

CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE EIGHTH CIRCUIT

No. 99-929. Argued November 6, 2000— Decided February 28, 2001

In U. S. Term Limits, Inc. v. Thornton, 514 U. S. 779, the Court held that an Arkansas law prohibiting otherwise eligible congressional candidates from appearing on the general election ballot if they had already served two Senate terms or three House terms was an impermissible attempt to add qualifications to congressional office rather than a permissible exercise of the States' Elections Clause power to regulate the "Times, Places and Manner of holding Elections for Senators and Representatives," U. S. Const., Art., I, §4, cl. 1. In response, Missouri voters adopted an amendment to Article VIII of their State Constitution designed to bring about a specified "Congressional Term Limits Amendment" to the Federal Constitution. Among other things, Article VIII "instruct[s]" Missouri Congress Members to use all their powers to pass the federal amendment; prescribes that "DISREGARDED VOTERS' INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" be printed on ballots by the names of Members failing to take certain legislative acts in support of the proposed amendment; provides that "DECLINED TO PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" be printed by the names of nonincumbent candidates refusing to take a "Term Limit" pledge to perform those acts if elected; and directs the Missouri Secretary of State (Secretary), the petitioner here, to determine and declare whether either statement should be printed by candidates' names. Respondent Gralike, a nonincumbent House candidate, sued to enjoin petitioner from implementing Article VIII on the ground it violated the Federal Constitution. The District Court granted Gralike summary judgment, and the Eighth Circuit affirmed.

Held: Article VIII is unconstitutional. Pp. 6-15.

(a) Because petitioner's arguments that Article VIII is an exercise

of the people's right to instruct their representatives reserved by the Tenth Amendment, as well as a permissible regulation of the "manner" of electing federal legislators under the Elections Clause, rely on different sources of state power, the Court reviews the distinction in kind between reserved state powers and those delegated to the States by the Constitution. The Constitution draws a basic distinction between the powers of the newly created Federal Government and the powers retained by the pre-existing sovereign States. U. S. Term Limits, 514 U. S., at 801. On the one hand, such retained powers proceed, not from the American people, but from the people of the several States. They remain, after the Constitution's adoption, what they were before, except insofar as they are abridged by that instrument. Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 193. On the other hand, the States can exercise no powers springing exclusively from the National Government's existence which the Constitution did not delegate. Pp. 6-8.

(b) Petitioner's argument that Article VIII is a valid exercise of the State's reserved power to give binding instructions to its representatives is unpersuasive for three reasons. First, the historical precedents on which she relies—concerning the part instructions played in the Second Continental Congress, the Constitutional Convention, the early Congress, the selection of United States Senators before the Seventeenth Amendment's passage, and the ratification of certain federal constitutional amendments—are distinguishable because, unlike Article VIII, none of petitioner's examples was coupled with an express legal sanction for disobedience. Second, countervailing historical evidence is provided by the fact that the First Congress rejected a proposal to insert a right of the people "to instruct their representatives" into what would become the First Amendment. Third, and of decisive significance, the means employed to issue the instructions, ballots for congressional elections, are unacceptable unless Article VIII is a permissible exercise of the State's power to regulate the manner of holding congressional elections. Pp. 8-10.

(c) The federal offices at stake arise from the Constitution itself. See U. S. Term Limits, 514 U. S., at 805. Because any state authority to regulate election to those offices could not precede their very creation by the Constitution, such power had to be delegated to the States, rather than reserved under the Tenth Amendment. Id., at 804. No constitutional provision other than the Elections Clause gives the States authority over congressional elections. By process of elimination then, the States may regulate the incidents of such elections, including balloting, only within the exclusive delegation of their Elections Clause power. The Court disagrees with petitioner's argument that Article VIII is a valid exercise of that power in that it regulates the "manner" in which elections are held by disclosing information about congressional candidates. The Clause grants to the States "broad power" to prescribe the procedural mechanisms for holding congressional elections, e.g., Tashjian v. Republican Party of Conn., 479 U. S. 208, 217, but does not authorize them to dictate electoral outcomes, to favor or disfavor a class of candidates, or to evade important constitutional restraints, U. S. Term Limits, 514 U. S., at 833–834. Article VIII is not a procedural regulation. It does not control the "manner" of elections, for that term encompasses matters like notices, registration, supervision of voting, and other requirements as to procedure and safeguards which experience shows are necessary to enforce the fundamental right involved. See, e.g., Smiley v. Holm, 285 U. S. 355, 366. Rather, Article VIII is plainly designed to favor candidates who are willing to support the particular form of a term limits amendment set forth in its text and to disfavor those who either oppose term limits entirely or would prefer a different proposal. Cf. Anderson v. Celebrezze, 460 U. S. 780, 788, n. 9. It not only "instruct[s]" Missouri's congressional Members to promote the passage of the specified term limits amendment, but also attaches a concrete consequence to non-compliance—the printing of an adverse label by the candidates' name on ballots. The two labels impose substantial political risk on candidates who fail to comply with Article VIII, handicapping them at the most crucial stage in the election process—the instant before the vote is cast, Anderson v. Martin, 375 U. S. 399, 402. And, by directing the citizens' attention to the single consideration of the candidates' fidelity to term limits, the labels imply that the issue is an important—perhaps paramount—consideration in the citizens' choice. Ibid. Article VIII thus attempts to "dictate electoral outcomes." U. S. Term Limits, 514 U. S., at 833–834. Such "regulation" of congressional elections is not authorized by the Elections Clause. Pp. 11–15.

No. 99-929

DONALD J. GRALIKE AND MIKE HARMAN

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF
APPEALS FOR THE EIGHTH CIRCUIT

[February 28, 2001]

JUSTICE STEVENS delivered the opinion of the Court.

In U. S. Term Limits, Inc. v. Thornton, 514 U. S. 779 (1995), we reviewed a challenge to an Arkansas law that prohibited the name of an otherwise eligible candidate for the United States Congress from appearing on the general election ballot if he or she had already served three terms in the House of Representatives or two terms in the Senate. We held that the ballot restriction was an indirect attempt to impose term limits on congressional incumbents that violated the Qualifications Clauses in Article I of the Constitution rather than a permissible exercise of the State's power to regulate the "Times, Places and Manner of holding Elections for Senators and Representatives" within the meaning of Article I, §4, cl. 1.

In response to that decision, the voters of Missouri adopted in 1996 an amendment to Article VIII<sup>1</sup> of their State Constitution designed to lead to the adoption of a specified "Congressional Term Limits Amendment" to the Federal Constitution. At issue in this case is the constitutionality of Article VIII.

I

Article VIII "instruct[s]" each Member of Missouri's congressional delegation "to use all of his or her delegated powers to pass the Congressional Term Limits Amendment" set forth in §16 of the Article. Mo. Const., Art. VIII, §17(1). That proposed amendment would limit service in the United States Congress to three terms in the House of Representatives and two terms in the Senate.<sup>2</sup>

Three provisions in Article VIII combine to advance its purpose. Section 17 prescribes that the statement "DISREGARDED VOTERS' INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" be printed on all primary and general ballots adjacent to the name of a Senator or Representative who fails to take any one of eight legislative acts in support of the proposed amendment.<sup>3</sup> Section 18 provides that the

"Congressional Term Limits Amendment

"(a) No person shall serve in the office of United States Representative for more than three terms, but upon ratification of this amendment no person who has held the office of the United States Representative or who then holds the office shall serve for more than two additional terms.

"(b) No person shall serve in the office of United States Senator for more than two terms, but upon ratification of this amendment no person who has held the office of United States Senator or who then holds the office shall serve in the office for more than one additional term.

"(c) Any state may enact by state constitutional amendment longer or shorter limits than those specified in section a or b herein.

"(d) This article shall have no time limit within which it must be ratified to become operative upon the ratification of the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States."

<sup>3</sup> Section 17(2) provides that the statement shall be printed "adjacent to the name of any United States Senator or Representative who:

"(b) fails to second the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above if it lacks for a second before any proceeding of the legislative body or;

"(d) fails to vote in favor of all votes bringing the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above before any committee or subcommittee of the respective house upon which he or she serves or;

"(e) fails to reject any attempt to delay, table or otherwise prevent a vote by the full legislative body of the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above or;

"(f) fails to vote against any proposed constitutional amendment that would establish longer term limits than those in the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above regardless of any other actions in support of the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above or;

"(g) sponsors or cosponsors any proposed constitutional amendment or law that would increase term limits beyond those in the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above or;

"(h) fails to ensure that all votes on Congressional Term Limits are recorded and made available to the public."

"I support term limits and pledge to use all my legislative powers to enact the proposed Constitutional Amendment set forth in the Term Limits Act of 1996. If elected, I pledge to vote in such a way that the signification DISREGARDED VOTERS' INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS will not appear adjacent to my name."

Opinion of the Court

statement should be printed alongside the name of each candidate for Congress.<sup>5</sup>

Respondent Don Gralike was a nonincumbent candidate for election in 1998 to the United States House of Representatives from Missouri's Third Congressional District. A month after Article VIII was amended, respondent brought suit<sup>6</sup> in the United States District Court for the Western District of Missouri to enjoin petitioner, the Secretary of State of Missouri, from implementing the Article, which the complaint alleges violates several provisions of the Federal Constitution.

The District Court decided the case on the pleadings, granting Gralike's motion for summary judgment. The court first held that Article VIII contravened the Qualifications Clauses of Article I of the Federal Constitution because it "has the sole purpose of creating additional qualifications for Congress indirectly and has the likely effect of handicapping a class of candidates for Congress." 996 F. Supp. 917, 920 (1998); see 996 F. Supp. 901, 905-909 (1998). The court further held that Article VIII places an impermissible burden on the candidates' First Amendment right to speak freely on the issue of term limits by

<sup>5</sup> Section 19(5) permits a voter to appeal to the Missouri Supreme Court a determination that a statement should not be placed next to a candidate's name, and §19(6) allows a candidate to appeal to the State's highest court a determination that such a statement should be printed. In either case, clear and convincing evidence is required to demonstrate that the statement does not belong on the ballot adjacent to the candidate's name.

The remainder of Article VIII provides for automatic repeal of the Article should the specified Congressional Term Limits Amendment be ratified, §20; exclusive jurisdiction of challenges to the Amendment in the Supreme Court of Missouri, §21; and severance of "any portion, clause, or phrase" of Article VIII that is declared invalid, §22.

<sup>6</sup> Although respondent intended to run for Congress when he filed suit, under Missouri law he could not formally file a declaration for candidacy until February 1998. App. 25-26.

'punish[ing] candidates for speaking out against term limits" through putting "negative words next to their names on the ballot," and by "us[ing] the threat of being disadvantaged in the election to coerce candidates into taking a position on the term limits issue." 996 F. Supp., at 910; see 996 F. Supp., at 920. Lastly, the court found Article VIII to be an indirect and unconstitutional attempt by the people of Missouri to interject themselves into the amending process authorized by Article V of the Federal Constitution. In doing so, the court endorsed the reasoning of other decisions invalidating provisions similar to Article VIII on the ground that negative ballot designations 'place an undue influence on the legislator to vote in favor of term limits rather than exercise his or her own independent judgment as is contemplated by Article V." 996 F. Supp., at 916; see 996 F. Supp., at 920.<sup>7</sup> Accordingly, the court permanently enjoined petitioner from enforcing §§15 through 19 of Article VIII.

The United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit affirmed.<sup>8</sup> Like the District Court, it found that Article VIII 'threatens a penalty that is serious enough to compel candidates to speak—the potential political damage of the ballot labels'; 'seeks to impose an additional qualification for candidacy for Congress and does so in a manner which is highly likely to handicap term limit opponents and other labeled candidates'; and 'coerce[s] legislators into proposing or ratifying a particular consti-

term limits amendment to the Federal Constitution in two ways. It encourages Missouri's congressional delegation to support such an amendment in order to avoid an unfavorable ballot designation when running for reelection. And it encourages the election of representatives who favor such an amendment. Petitioner argues that Article VIII is an exercise of the "right of the people to instruct" their representatives reserved by the Tenth Amendment,<sup>11</sup> and that it is a permissible regulation of the "manner" of electing federal legislators within the authority delegated to the States by the Elections Clause, Art. I, §4, cl. 1.<sup>12</sup> Because these two arguments rely on different sources of state power, it is appropriate at the outset to review the distinction in kind between powers reserved to the States and those delegated to the States by the Constitution.

As we discussed at length in U. S. Term Limits, the Constitution "draws a basic distinction between the powers of the newly created Federal Government and the powers retained by the pre existing sovereign States." 514 U. S., at 801. On the one hand, in the words of Chief Justice Marshall, "it was neither necessary nor proper to define the powers retained by the States. These powers proceed, not from the people of America, but from the people of the several States; and remain, after the adoption of the constitution, what they were before, except so far as they may be abridged by that instrument." Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 193 (1819). The text of the Tenth Amendment delineates this principle:

On the other hand, as Justice Story observed, "the states can exercise no powers whatsoever, which exclusively spring out of the existence of the national government, which the constitution did not delegate to them." 1 Commentaries on the Constitution of the United States §627 (3d ed. 1858) (hereinafter Story). Simply put, "[n]o state can say, that it has reserved, what it never possessed." Ibid.

To be persuasive, petitioner's argument that Article VIII is a valid exercise of the States' reserved power to give binding instructions to its representatives would have to overcome three hurdles. First, the historical precedents on which she relies for the proposition that the States have such a reserved power are distinguishable. Second, there is countervailing historical evidence. Third, and of decisive significance, the means employed to issue the instructions, ballots for congressional elections, are unacceptable unless Article VIII is a permissible exercise of the States' power to regulate the manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives. Only a brief comment on the first two points is necessary.

Petitioner relies heavily on the part instructions played in the Second Continental Congress, the Constitutional Convention, the early Congress, the selection of United States Senators before the passage of the Seventeenth Amendment, and the ratification of certain federal constitutional amendments.<sup>13</sup> However, unlike Article VIII, none of petitioner's examples was coupled with an express legal sanction for disobedience.<sup>14</sup> At best, as an amicus curiae for

<sup>14</sup> For example, the Provincial Congress of North Carolina passed the following instruction on April 12, 1776: "Resolved, That the Delegates for this Colony in the Continental Congress be empowered to concur with the Delegates of the other Colonies in declaring Independency,

petitioner points out, and as petitioner herself acknowledges, such historical instructions at one point in the early Republic may have had "de facto binding force" because it might have been "political suicide" not to follow them.<sup>15</sup> This evidence falls short of demonstrating that either the people or the States had a right to give legally binding, i.e., nonadvisory, instructions to their representatives that the Tenth Amendment reserved, much less that such a right would apply to federal representatives. See U. S. Term Limits, Inc. v. Thornton, 514 U. S., at 802 (Tenth Amendment 'could only reserve' that which existed before'); c. f. McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 430 (1819) (rejecting argument that States had reserved power to tax corporations chartered by Congress because an "original right to tax" such federal entities "never existed").

Indeed, contrary evidence is provided by the fact that the First Congress rejected a proposal to insert a right of the people "to instruct their representatives" into what would become the First Amendment. 1 Annals of Cong. 732 (1789). The fact that the proposal was made suggests that its proponents thought it necessary, and the fact that it was rejected by a vote of 41 to 10, id., at 747, suggests that we should give weight to the views of those who opposed the proposal. It was their view that binding instructions would undermine an essential attribute of Congress by eviscerating the deliberative nature of that National Assembly. See,

e.g., id., at 735 (remarks of Rep. Sherman) (“[W]hen the people have chosen a representative, it is his duty to meet others from the different parts of the Union, and consult, and agree with them to such acts as are for the general benefit of the whole community. If they were to be guided by instructions, there would be no use in deliberation; all that a man would have to do, would be to produce his instructions, and lay them on the table, and let them speak for him”). As a result, James Madison, then a Representative from Virginia, concluded that a right to issue binding instructions would “run the risk of losing the whole system.” Id., at 739; see also id., at 735 (remarks of Rep. Clymer) (proposed right to give binding instructions was “a most dangerous principle, utterly destructive of all ideas of an independent and deliberative body, which are essential requisites in the Legislatures of free Governments”).<sup>16</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Of course, whether the members of a representative assembly should be bound by the views of their constituents, or by their own judgment, is a matter that has been the subject of debate since even before the Federal Union was established. For instance, in his classic speech to the electors of Bristol, Edmund Burke set forth the latter view:

“To deliver an opinion is the right of all men; that of constituents is a weighty and respectable opinion, which a representative ought always to rejoice to hear; and which he ought always most seriously to consider. But authoritative instructions; mandates issued, which the member is bound blindly and implicitly to obey, to vote, and to argue for, though contrary to the clearest conviction of his judgment and conscience, these are things utterly unknown to the laws of this land, and which arise from a fundamental mistake of the whole order and tenor of our constitution.” The Speeches of the Right Hon. Edmund Burke 130 (J. Burke ed. 1867).

IV

The federal offices at stake ‘aris[e] from the Constitution itself.’ U. S. Term Limits, Inc. v. Thornton, 514 U. S., at 805. Because any state authority to regulate election to those offices could not precede their very creation by the Constitution, such power ‘had to be delegated to, rather than reserved by, the States.’ Id., at 804. Cf. 1 Story §627 (‘It is no original prerogative of state power to appoint a representative, a senator, or president for the union’). Through the Elections Clause, the Constitution delegated to the States the power to regulate the ‘Times, Places and Manner of holding Elections for Senators and Representatives,’ subject to a grant of authority to Congress to ‘make or alter such Regulations.’ Art. I, §4, cl. 1; see United States v. Classic, 313 U. S. 299, 315 (1941). No other constitutional provision gives the States authority over congressional elections, and no such authority could be reserved under the Tenth Amendment. By process of elimination, the States may regulate the incidents of such elections, including balloting, only within the exclusive delegation of power under the Elections Clause.

With respect to the Elections Clause, petitioner argues that Article VIII ‘merely regulates the manner in which elections are held by disclosing information about congressional candidates.’<sup>17</sup> As such, petitioner concludes, Article VIII is a valid exercise of Missouri’s delegated power.

We disagree. To be sure, the Elections Clause grants to the States ‘broad power’ to prescribe the procedural mechanisms for holding congressional elections. Tashjian v. Republican Party of Conn., 479 U. S. 208, 217 (1986); see also Smiley v. Holm, 285 U. S. 355, 366 (1932) (‘It cannot be doubted that these comprehensive words embrace authority to provide a complete code for congressional elections’).

Opinion of the Court

Nevertheless, Article VIII falls outside of that grant of authority. As we made clear in U. S. Term Limits, 'the Framers understood the Elections Clause as a grant of authority to issue procedural regulations, and not as a source of power to dictate electoral outcomes, to favor or disfavor a class of candidates, or to evade important constitutional restraints.' 514 U. S., at 833-834. Article VIII is not a procedural regulation. It does not regulate the time of elections; it does not regulate the place of elections; nor, we believe, does it regulate the manner of elections.<sup>18</sup> As to the last point, Article VIII bears no relation to the 'manner' of elections as we understand it, for in our commonsense view that term encompasses matters like 'notices, registration, supervision of voting, protection of voters, prevention of fraud and corrupt practices, counting of votes, duties of inspectors and canvassers, and making and publication of election returns.' Smiley, 285 U. S., at 366; see also U. S. Term Limits, Inc. v. Thornton, 514 U. S., at 833. In short, Article VIII is not among 'the numerous requirements as to procedure and safeguards which experience shows are necessary in order to enforce the fundamental right involved,' Smiley, 285 U. S., at 366, ensuring that elections are 'fair and honest,' and that 'some sort of order, rather than chaos, is to accompany the democratic process,' Storer v. Brown, 415 U. S. 724, 730 (1974).

Rather, Article VIII is plainly designed to favor candidates who are willing to support the particular form of a term limits amendment set forth in its text and to disfavor those who either oppose term limits entirely or would prefer a different proposal. Cf. Anderson v. Celebrezze, 460 U. S. 780, 788, n. 9 (1983) ('We have upheld generally applicable and evenhanded [ballot access] restrictions that protect the integrity and reliability of the electoral process itself). As noted, the state provision does not just "instruct" each member of Missouri's congressional delegation to promote in certain ways the passage of the specified term limits amendment. It also attaches a concrete consequence to noncompliance—the printing of the statement "DISREGARDED VOTERS' INSTRUCTIONS ON TERM LIMITS" by the candidate's name on all primary and general election ballots. Likewise, a nonincumbent candidate who does not pledge to follow the instruction receives the ballot designation "DECLINED TO PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS."

In describing the two labels, the courts below have employed terms such as "pejorative," "negative," "derogatory," "intentionally intimidating," "particularly harmful," "politically damaging," "a serious sanction," "a penalty," and "official denunciation." 191 F. 3d, at 918, 919, 922, 925; 996 F. Supp., at 908; see id., at 910, 916. The general counsel to petitioner's office, no less, has denominated the labels as "the Scarlet Letter." App. 34–35. We agree with the sense of these descriptions. They convey the substantial political risk the ballot labels impose on current and prospective congressional members who, for one reason or another, fail to comply with the conditions set forth in Article VIII for passing its term limits amendment. Although petitioner now claims that the labels "merely" inform Missouri voters about a candidate's compliance with Article VIII, she has acknowledged under oath that the ballot designations would handicap candidates for the United States Congress. Id., at 66. To us, that is exactly the intended effect of Article VIII.

Indeed, it seems clear that the adverse labels handicap candidates "at the most crucial stage in the election process—the instant before the vote is cast." Anderson v. Martin, 375 U. S. 399, 402 (1964). At the same time, "by directing the citizen's attention to the single consideration" of the candidates' fidelity to term limits, the labels imply that the issue "is an important— perhaps paramount— consideration in the citizen's choice, which may decisively influence the citizen to cast his ballot" against candidates branded as unfaithful. Ibid. While the precise damage the labels may exact on candidates is disputed between the parties, the labels surely place their targets at a political disadvantage to unmarked candidates for congressional office.<sup>19</sup> Thus, far

<sup>19</sup>That much, apparently, also seemed clear to many Members of Congress operating under Article VIII or similar label laws adopted by other States, who consequently tailored their behavior to avoid the ballot designations. For example, in 1997, the House of Representatives voted on 11 different proposals to adopt a term limits amendment to the Constitution; 7 of those proposals were dictated by voter initiatives in 7 different States. Representative Blunt of Missouri introduced the Article VIII version to "ensure that members of the Missouri delegation have the ability to vote for language that meets a verbatim test of [the] Missouri Amendment" and thereby avoid "the scarlet letter provision." 143 Cong. Rec. H494 (Feb. 12, 1997). However, because each of the state initiatives provided a sanction similar to the ballot labels included in Article VIII, some Representatives explained that they were constrained to vote only for the version endorsed by the voters of their States, and to vote against differing versions proposed by congressional members from other States, even though they were supportive of term limits generally. See, e.g., id., at H486 (remarks of Rep. Hutchinson) ("I will vote against the bill of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. McCollum], not because I am opposed to term limits but because this particular resolution does not comply with the term limit instructions approved by the voters and the people of Arkansas"); id., at H490 (remarks of Rep. Crapo) ("Last Congress I supported the McCollum term limits bill that, as I said, supported a 12-year term limit. However, in this Congress I must oppose this bill because of the initiative passed by the people of the State of Idaho which requires me to oppose any term limits measure that does not have the same set of term limit conditions that are included in the initiative that was passed in the State"). As Representative Frank of Massachusetts put it, "[e]very State's Members get to vote on their State's term limits so they make them feel better and they do not get the scarlet letter." Id., at H487. Consequently, the most popular proposal for such an amendment, that of Representative McCollum of Florida, received 217 votes, from regulating the procedural mechanisms of elections, Article VIII attempts to "dictate electoral outcomes." U. S. Term Limits, Inc. v. Thornton, 514 U. S., at 833-834. Such "regulation" of congressional elections simply is not authorized by the Elections Clause.<sup>20</sup>

Accordingly, the judgment of the Court of Appeals is affirmed.

It is so ordered.

10 fewer than it had in the preceding Congress. Id., at H511. As for the Missouri version, it suffered a 353-to-72 defeat. Id., at H497.

<sup>20</sup>At the margins, the parties have fought over whether the Elections Clause is even applicable because it is a grant of power to "each State by the Legislature thereof" and Article VIII is the product of referendum. Compare Brief for Petitioner 38, n. 46, with Brief for Respondents 12-13, n. 8. Of course, "[w]henver the term 'legislature' is used in the Constitution, it is necessary to consider the nature of the particular action in view." Smiley v. Holm, 285 U. S. 355, 366 (1932). Nevertheless, we need not delve into this inquiry, as it is clear, for the reasons stated in the text, that Article VIII is not authorized by the Elections Clause.

In discussing the Elections Clause issue, respondents have also relied in part on First Amendment cases upholding "time, place, and manner" regulations of speech. Brief for Respondents 13-14. Although the Elections Clause uses the same phrase as that branch of our First Amendment jurisprudence, it by no means follows that such cases have any relevance to our disposition of this case.

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF
APPEALS FOR THE EIGHTH CIRCUIT

[February 28, 2001]

JUSTICE KENNEDY, concurring.

I join the opinion of the Court, holding §15 et seq. of Article VIII of the Missouri Constitution violative of the Constitution of the United States. It seems appropriate, however, to add these brief observations with respect to Part III of the opinion. The Court does not say the States are disabled from requesting specific action from Congress or from expressing their concerns to it. As the Court holds, however, the mechanism the State seeks to employ here goes well beyond this prerogative.

A State is not permitted to interpose itself between the people and their National Government as it seeks to do here. Whether a State's concern is with the proposed enactment of a constitutional amendment or an ordinary federal statute it simply lacks the power to impose any conditions on the election of Senators and Representatives, save neutral provisions as to the time, place, and manner of elections pursuant to Article I, §4. As the Court observed in U. S. Term Limits, Inc. v. Thornton, 514 U. S. 779 (1995), the Elections Clause is a "grant of authority to issue procedural regulations," and not "a source of power to dictate electoral outcomes, to favor or disfavor a class of candidates, or to evade important constitutional restraints." Id., at 833-834. The Elections Clause thus delegates but limited power over federal elections to the

KENNEDY, J., concurring

States. Id., at 804. The Court rules, as it must, that the amendments to Article VIII of the Missouri Constitution do not regulate the time or place of federal elections; rather, those provisions are an attempt to control the actions of the State's congressional delegation.

The dispositive principle in this case is fundamental to the Constitution, to the idea of federalism, and to the theory of representative government. The principle is that Senators and Representatives in the National Government are responsible to the people who elect them, not to the States in which they reside. The Constitution was ratified by Conventions in the several States, not by the States themselves, U. S. Const., Art. VII, a historical fact and a constitutional imperative which underscore the proposition that the Constitution was ordained and established by the people of the United States. U. S. Const., preamble. The idea of federalism is that a National Legislature enacts laws which bind the people as individuals, not as citizens of a State; and, it follows, freedom is most secure if the people themselves, not the States as intermediaries, hold their federal legislators to account for the conduct of their office. If state enactments were allowed to condition or control certain actions of federal legislators, accountability would be blurred, with the legislators having the excuse of saying that they did not act in the exercise of their best judgment but simply in conformance with a state mandate. As noted in the concurring opinion in Thornton, "[n]othing in the Constitution or The Federalist Papers . . . supports the idea of state interference with the most basic relation between the National Government and its citizens, the selection of legislative representatives." 514 U. S., at 842. Yet that is just what Missouri seeks to do through its law— to wield the power granted to it by the Elections Clause to handicap those who seek federal office by affixing pejorative labels next to their names on the ballot if they do not pledge to support the State's preferred position on a certain issue. Neither the design of the Constitution nor sound principles of representative government are consistent with the right or power of a State to interfere with the direct line of accountability between the National Legislature and the people who elect it. For these reasons Article VIII is void.

This said, it must be noted that when the Constitution was enacted, respectful petitions to legislators were an accepted mode of urging legislative action. See W. Miller, Arguing About Slavery 105–107 (1995). This right is preserved to individuals (the people) in the First Amendment. Even if a State, as an entity, is not itself protected by the Petition Clause, there is no principle prohibiting a state legislature from following a parallel course and by a memorial resolution requesting the Congress of the United States to pay heed to certain state concerns. From the earliest days of our Republic to the present time, States have done so in the context of federal legislation. See, e.g., 22 Annals of Cong. 153–154 (1811) (reprinting a resolution by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania requesting that the charter of the Bank of the United States not be renewed); 2000 Ala. Acts 66 (requesting targeted relief for Medicare cuts); 2000 Kan. Sess. Laws ch. 186 (urging Congress to allow state-inspected meat to be shipped in interstate commerce). Indeed, the situation was even more complex in the early days of our Nation, when Senators were appointed by state legislatures rather than directly elected. At that time, it appears that some state legislatures followed a practice of instructing the Senators whom they had appointed to pass legislation, while only requesting that the Representatives, who had been elected by the people, do so. See 22 Annals of Cong. 153–154 (1811). I do not believe that the situation should be any different with respect to a proposed constitutional amendment, and indeed history bears this out. See, e.g., 13 Annals of Cong. 95–96

(1803) (reprinting a resolution from the State of Vermont and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts requesting that Congress propose to the legislatures of the States a constitutional amendment akin to the Twelfth Amendment). The fact that the Members of the First Congress decided not to codify a right to instruct legislative representatives does not, in my view, prove that they intended to prohibit nonbinding petitions or memorials by the State as an entity.

If there are to be cases in which a close question exists regarding whether the State has exceeded its constitutional authority in attempting to influence congressional action, this case is not one of them. In today's case the question is not close. Here the State attempts to intrude upon the relationship between the people and their congressional delegates by seeking to control or confine the discretion of those delegates, and the interference is not permissible.

With these observations, I concur in the Court's opinion.

JUSTICE THOMAS, concurring in Parts I and IV and concurring in the judgment.

I continue to believe that, because they possess “reserved” powers, “the people of the States need not point to any affirmative grant of power in the Constitution in order to prescribe qualifications for their representatives in Congress, or to authorize their elected state legislators to do so.” U. S. Term Limits, Inc. v. Thornton, 514 U. S. 779, 846 (1995) (THOMAS, J., dissenting). For this reason, I disagree with the Court’s premise, derived from U. S. Term Limits, that the States have no authority to regulate congressional elections except for the authority that the Constitution expressly delegates to them. See ante, at 11. Nonetheless, the parties conceded the validity of this premise, see Brief for Petitioner 25–26; Brief for Respondents 12–13, and I therefore concur.

REBECCA MCDOWELL COOK, PETITIONER v.
DONALD J. GRALIKE AND MIKE HARMAN

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF
APPEALS FOR THE EIGHTH CIRCUIT

[February 28, 2001]

CHIEF JUSTICE REHNQUIST, with whom JUSTICE O'CONNOR joins, concurring in the judgment.

I would affirm the judgment of the Court of Appeals, but on the ground that Missouri's Article VIII violates the First Amendment to the United States Constitution. Specifically, I believe that Article VIII violates the First Amendment right of a political candidate, once lawfully on the ballot, to have his name appear unaccompanied by pejorative language required by the State. Our ballot access cases based on First Amendment grounds have rarely distinguished between the rights of candidates and the rights of voters. In Bullock v. Carter, 405 U. S. 134, 143 (1972), we said: "[T]he rights of voters and the rights of candidates do not lend themselves to neat separation; laws that affect candidates always have at least some theoretical, correlative effect on voters." And in Anderson v. Celebrezze, 460 U. S. 780, 787 (1983), we said that "voters can assert their preferences only through candidates or parties or both." Actions such as the present one challenging ballot provisions have in most instances been brought by the candidates themselves, and no one questions the standing of respondents Gralike and Harmon to raise a First Amendment challenge to such laws.*

Article I, §4, provides that "[t]he Times, Places and Manner of holding Elections for Senators and Representatives, shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof . . ." Missouri justifies Article VIII as a "time, place, and manner" regulation of election. Restrictions of this kind are valid "provided that they are justified without reference to the content of the regulated speech, that they are narrowly tailored to serve a significant governmental interest, and that they leave open ample alternative channels for communication of the information." Clark v. Community for Creative Non-Violence, 468 U. S. 288, 293 (1984). Missouri's Article VIII flunks two of these three requirements. Article VIII is not only not content neutral, but it actually discriminates on the basis of viewpoint because only those candidates who fail to conform to the State's position receive derogatory labels. The result is that the State injects itself into the election process at an absolutely critical point—the composition of the ballot, which is the last thing the voter sees before he makes his choice—and does so in a way that is not neutral as to issues or candidates. The candidates who are thus singled out have no means of replying to their designation which would be equally effective with the voter.

In Anderson v. Martin, 375 U. S. 399 (1964), we held a Louisiana statute requiring the designation of a candidate's race on the ballot violated the Equal Protection

*The Court of Appeals upheld their First Amendment claim, but based its reasoning on the view that the ballot statements were "compelled speech" by the candidate, and therefore ran afoul of cases such as Wooley v. Maynard, 430 U. S. 705 (1977). I do not agree with the reasoning of the Court of Appeals. I do not believe a reasonable voter, viewing the ballot labeled as Article VIII requires, would think that the candidate in question chose to characterize himself as having "disregarded voters' instructions" or as "having declined to pledge" to support term limits.

REHNQUIST, C. J., concurring in judgment

Clause. In describing the effect of such a designation, the Court said: “[B]y directing the citizens’ attention to the single consideration of race or color, the State indicates that a candidate’s race or color is an important— perhaps paramount— consideration in the citizens’ choice, which may decisively influence the citizen to cast his ballot along racial lines.” Id., at 402. So, too, here the State has chosen one and only one issue to comment on the position of the candidates. During the campaign, they may debate tax reform, Social Security, national security, and a host of other issues; but when it comes to the ballot on which one or the other of them is chosen, the State is saying that the issue of term limits is paramount. Although uttered in a different context, what we said in Police Department of Chicago v. Mosley, 408 U. S. 92, 96 (1972) is equally applicable here: “[Government] may not select which issues are worth discussing or debating.”

If other Missouri officials feel strongly about the need for term limits, they are free to urge rejection of candidates who do not share their view and refuse to “take the pledge.” Such candidates are able to respond to that sort of speech with speech of their own. But the State itself may not skew the ballot listings in this way without violating the First Amendment.

The People of the State of Alaska find and declare as follows:

- (a) The People of Alaska voted by more than 62 percent to limit the terms of U.S. Representatives to three terms and limit U.S. Senators to two terms.
- (b) The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that an amendment to the U.S. Constitution is necessary to limit terms of members of Congress.
- (c) There are two methods to propose amendments to the U.S. Constitution that must then be ratified by three-fourths of the States, or 38. These methods are (1) for two-thirds of both houses of the United States Congress to so vote or (2) for 34 states to apply for an amendment convention to so vote.
- (d) The Congress has refused to propose such an amendment, and by a clear majority defeated the same term limits passed by over 62 percent of the Voters of Alaska in 1994.
- (e) The Congress has a clear conflict of interest in proposing term limits on themselves.

(§ 2 1996 Ballot Measure No. 4)

Sec. 15.15.505. Purpose and intent.

The purpose and intent in enacting AS 15.15.500 - 15.15.535 is to secure the following amendment under the provisions of Article V of the United States Constitution by informing voters of acts and omissions by candidates for congressional and legislative office with respect to said constitutional amendment:

CONGRESSIONAL TERM LIMITS AMENDMENT

Section A. No person shall serve in the office of the United States Senator for more than two terms, but upon ratification, no person who has held the office of the United States Senator or who then holds the office shall serve in the office for more than one additional term.

Section B. No person shall serve in the office of United States Representative for more than three terms, but upon ratification no person who has held the office of United States Representative or who then holds the office shall serve for more than two additional terms.

Section C. This article shall have no time limit within which it must be ratified to become operative upon the ratification of the legislatures of three-fourths of the States.

It is the further purpose and intent of AS 15.15.500 - 15.15.535 to instruct all candidates, including incumbents running for retention of office, to use all of his or her delegated powers to secure the amendment to the United States Constitution, as set forth above, and further to specifically instruct the legislature of the State of Alaska to support the following proposed application to Congress:

We, the people, and legislature of the State of Alaska, due to our desire to establish term limits on the Congress of the United States, hereby make application to Congress, pursuant to our power under Article V of the United States Constitution, to call an Article V Convention.

(§ 3 1996 Ballot Measure No. 4)

Revisor's notes. In 1996, in this section "AS 15.15.500 - 15.15.535" was substituted for "this legislation" and "this act" in order to reflect the codification of 1996 Ballot Measure No. 4.

Sec. 15.15.510. Ballot information for state legislators.

(a) All primary, special and general election ballots shall have "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" printed adjacent to the name of any respective state senator or representative who during the preceding term of office:

- (1) fails to vote in favor of the application set forth above when brought to a vote or;
- (2) fails to second the application set forth above if it lacks for a second or;
- (3) fails to vote in favor of bringing the application set forth above before any committee or subcommittee upon which he or she serves in the respective house or;
- (4) fails to propose or otherwise bring to a vote of the full legislative body the application set forth above if it otherwise lacks a legislator who so proposes or brings to a vote of the full legislative body the application set forth above or;
- (5) fails to vote against any attempt to delay, table or otherwise prevent a vote by the full legislative body of the application set forth above or;
- (6) fails in any way to ensure that all votes on the application set forth above are recorded and made available to the public or;
- (7) fails to vote against any change, addition or modification to the application set forth above or;
- (8) fails to vote in favor of the amendment set forth above if it is sent to the states for ratification or;

(9) fails to vote against any amendment with longer limits if such an amendment is sent to the state for ratification.

(b) The language "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" when required by any of subsections (1) through (7) shall not appear adjacent to the names of candidates for state legislature if the State of Alaska has made an application to Congress for an Article V convention pursuant to the Act and such application has not been withdrawn, or if a Congressional Term Limits Amendment has been submitted to the States for ratification.

(1) the State of Alaska has made an application to Congress for an Article V amendment pursuant to the Act and such application has not been withdrawn or;

(2) the Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above has been submitted to the states for ratification and has been ratified by this state or the Amendment set forth above has become part of the United States Constitution.

(c) The language "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" when required by subsection (8) or (9) shall not appear adjacent to the names of candidates for state legislature if the State of Alaska has ratified the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above.

(d) The language "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" when required by any of subsections (1) through (9) shall not appear adjacent to the names of candidates for state legislature if the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above has become part of the United States Constitution.

(§ 4 1996 Ballot Measure No. 4)

Opinions of attorney general. The provisions of Ballot Measure 4 of the 1996 general election (codified at AS 15.15.510, 15.15.515, 15.15.520, and 15.15.525)(requiring that candidates for public office be given the opportunity to take a term limits pledge and, if they refuse, the language "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" be printed adjacent to their name on the ballot) are unconstitutional and the implementing regulations are therefore also unconstitutional. May 1, 1998 Op. Att'y Gen.

Sec. 15.15.515. Ballot information for members of Congress.

(a) All primary, special and general election ballots shall have "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" printed adjacent to the name of any United States Senator or Representative who during the preceding term of office:

(1) fails to vote in favor of the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above when brought to a vote or;

(2) fails to second the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above if it lacks for a second before any proceeding of the legislative body or;

(3) fails to propose or otherwise bring to a vote of the full legislative body the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above if it otherwise lacks a legislator who so proposes or brings to a vote of the full legislative body the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above or;

(4) fails to vote in favor of all votes bringing the Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above before any committee of subcommittee of the respective house upon which he or she serves or;

(5) fails to reject any attempt to delay, table or otherwise prevent a vote by the full legislative body of the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above or;

(6) fails to abstain or vote against any proposed constitutional amendment that would increase term limits beyond those in the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above regardless of any other actions in support of the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above or;

(7) sponsors or cosponsors any proposed constitutional amendment or law that would increase term limits beyond those in the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above or;

(8) fails in any way to ensure that all votes on the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above are recorded and made available to the public.

(b) The language "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" shall not appear adjacent to the names of candidates for Congress if the Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above is before the states for ratification or has become part of the United States Constitution.

(§ 5 1996 Ballot Measure No. 4)

Opinions of attorney general. The provisions of Ballot Measure 4 of the 1996 general election (codified at AS 15.15.510, 15.15.515, 15.15.520, and 15.15.525)(requiring that candidates for public office be given the opportunity to take a term limits pledge and, if they refuse, the language "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" be printed adjacent to their name on the ballot) are unconstitutional and the implementing regulations are therefore also unconstitutional. May 1, 1998 Op. Att'y Gen.

Sec. 15.15.520. Ballot information on term limit pledge for non-incumbents.

(a) Non-incumbent candidates for United States Senator and Representative, and state senator and representative shall be given an opportunity to take a "Term Limits" pledge regarding Term Limits each time they file to run for such office. Those who decline to take the "Term Limits" pledge shall have "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" printed adjacent to their name on every primary and general election ballot.

(b) The "Term Limits" pledge shall be offered to non-incumbent candidates for United States Senator and Representative, and to non-incumbent candidates for state senator and representative until a Constitutional Amendment which limits the number of terms of United States Senators to no more than two and United States Representatives to no more than three shall have become part of our United States Constitution.

(c) The "Term Limits" pledge that each non-incumbent candidate, set forth above, shall be offered is as follows:

I support term limits and pledge to use all my legislative powers to enact the proposed Constitutional Amendment set forth in the Congressional Term Limits Act of 1996. If elected, I pledge to vote in such a way that the designation "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" will not appear adjacent to my name.

Signature of Candidate

(§ 6 1996 Ballot Measure No. 4)

Opinions of attorney general. The provisions of Ballot Measure 4 of the 1996 general election (codified at AS 15.15.510, 15.15.515, 15.15.520, and 15.15.525)(requiring that candidates for public office be given the opportunity to take a term limits pledge and, if they refuse, the language "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" be printed adjacent to their name on the ballot) are unconstitutional and the implementing regulations are therefore also unconstitutional. May 1, 1998 Op. Att'y Gen.

Sec. 15.15.525. Designation.

(a) The Lieutenant Governor and state election officials shall be responsible for making a determination as to whether state and federal legislators and non-incumbent candidates shall have placed adjacent to their name on the election ballot "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" or "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS".

(b) The determination as to whether or not "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" or "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" shall be placed adjacent to a candidate's name shall be made at a time necessary to ensure placement of that designation on the ballot after a forty-five (45) day public comment period.

(c) If the official(s) with the authority to determine whether or not the designation "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" or "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" shall be placed adjacent to a candidate's name choose(s) not to place such designation adjacent to the name of a senator or representative for state or federal office, any citizen may sue within the 45 day public comment period to have such a designation made. Upon the filing of a suit, such a designation shall be made unless the candidate or the official(s) responsible for determining whether or not the designation shall appear adjacent to the candidate's name can show by clear and convincing evidence that the candidate has met the requirements set forth in this amendment and therefore should not have the designation "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" or "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" adjacent to the candidate's name.

Revisor's notes. In the last sentence of subsection (c), "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" or "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" appears after the last occurrence of "designation" even though it did not appear in the voter's pamphlet because the language was included in the text of the initiative as it was filed with the Lieutenant Governor's Office.

Opinions of attorney general. The provisions of Ballot Measure 4 of the 1996 general election (codified at AS 15.15.510, 15.15.515, 15.15.520, and 15.15.525)(requiring that candidates for public office be given the opportunity to take a term limits pledge and, if they refuse, the language "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" be printed adjacent to their name on the ballot) are unconstitutional and the implementing regulations are therefore also unconstitutional. ### Sponsor Statement for HB 189

On February 28, 2001, in a case entitled Cook v. Gralike, et al., the United States Supreme Court ruled that printing term limit pledges on the ballot next to a Congressional candidate's name is unconstitutional. The Missouri act which was struck down required "DISREGARDED VOTERS' INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" to be printed on ballots by the names of members failing to take certain legislative acts in support of the proposed term limit amendment. It also provided that "DECLINED TO PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" be printed by the names of the non-incumbent candidates refusing to take a "Term Limit" pledge to bring about a specified "Congressional Term Limits Amendment."

Through the Elections Clause, the Constitution delegated to the States the power to regulate the "Times, Places, Manner of holding Elections for Senators and Representatives," subject to a grant of authority to Congress to "make or alter such Regulations." The states may regulate the incidents of such elections, including balloting, only within the exclusive delegation of power under the Elections Clause.

The Supreme Court found that the requirement of printing on the ballot a candidate's lack of acceptance of a term limit pledge was not a procedural regulation. It did not regulate the time of elections; it did not regulate the place of elections; nor did it regulate the manner of elections. Rather, the court found, the requirement was plainly designed to favor candidates who are willing to support the particular form of a term limits amendment, and to disfavor those who either oppose term limits entirely or who would prefer a different proposal. The Court stated that:

...it seems clear that the adverse labels handicap candidates at the most crucial state in the election process—the instant before the vote is cast. The labels imply that the issue 'is an important—perhaps paramount—consideration in the citizen's choice, which may decisively influence the citizen to cast his ballot' against candidates branded as unfaithful. Thus far from regulating the procedural mechanisms of elections, the Missouri act attempts to dictate electoral outcomes. Such 'regulation' of congressional elections simply is not authorized by the 'Elections Clause.'

Alaska statutes AS 15.15.500-575 require that "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" be printed on the ballot adjacent to the name of any respective state senator or representative who failed to take appropriate action in support of a congressional term limit amendment to the constitution, during the preceding term of office. The same shall be printed on the ballot adjacent to the name of any United States Senator or Representative who also fails to take appropriate action during the preceding term.

Non-incumbent candidates for United States Senator and Representative, and state senator and representative who decline to take a "Term Limits" pledge shall have "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" printed adjacent to their name on every primary and general election ballot.

Any candidate for the United States Congress and the Alaska Legislature is permitted to submit to the lieutenant governor an executed copy of the Term Limits Pledge set for in AS 15.15.560(b). The lieutenant governor shall place on every election ballot "Signed TERM LIMITS pledge: Will serve no more than [3 terms, 2 terms]" next to the name of any candidate who has ever executed the Term Limits Pledge. In addition, "Broke TERM LIMITS pledge" shall be placed on every ballot next to the name of any candidate, who at any time executes the applicable Term Limits Pledge, and thereafter qualifies as a candidate for a term that would exceed the number of terms or years set for in the applicable Term Limits Pledge.

Since the Alaska statutes are so similar to those of Missouri, this United States Supreme Court ruling suggests that our statutes are unconstitutional. This bill will repeal these unconstitutional statutes.

The committee urges your support of this bill.

Syllabus

COOK v. GRALIKE ET AL.CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE EIGHTH CIRCUIT

No. 99-929. Argued November 6, 2000— Decided February 28, 2001

In U. S. Term Limits, Inc. v. Thornton, 514 U. S. 779, the Court held that an Arkansas law prohibiting otherwise eligible congressional candidates from appearing on the general election ballot if they had already served two Senate terms or three House terms was an impermissible attempt to add qualifications to congressional office rather than a permissible exercise of the States' Elections Clause power to regulate the "Times, Places and Manner of holding Elections for Senators and Representatives," U. S. Const., Art., I, §4, cl. 1. In response, Missouri voters adopted an amendment to Article VIII of their State Constitution designed to bring about a specified "Congressional Term Limits Amendment" to the Federal Constitution. Among other things, Article VIII "instruct[s]" Missouri Congress Members to use all their powers to pass the federal amendment; prescribes that "DISREGARDED VOTERS' INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" be printed on ballots by the names of Members failing to take certain legislative acts in support of the proposed amendment; provides that "DECLINED TO PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" be printed by the names of nonincumbent candidates refusing to take a "Term Limit" pledge to perform those acts if elected; and directs the Missouri Secretary of State (Secretary), the petitioner here, to determine and declare whether either statement should be printed by candidates' names. Respondent Gralike, a nonincumbent House candidate, sued to enjoin petitioner from implementing Article VIII on the ground it violated the Federal Constitution. The District Court granted Gralike summary judgment, and the Eighth Circuit affirmed.

Held: Article VIII is unconstitutional. Pp. 6-15.

(a) Because petitioner's arguments that Article VIII is an exercise

of the people's right to instruct their representatives reserved by the Tenth Amendment, as well as a permissible regulation of the "manner" of electing federal legislators under the Elections Clause, rely on different sources of state power, the Court reviews the distinction in kind between reserved state powers and those delegated to the States by the Constitution. The Constitution draws a basic distinction between the powers of the newly created Federal Government and the powers retained by the pre-existing sovereign States. U. S. Term Limits, 514 U. S., at 801. On the one hand, such retained powers proceed, not from the American people, but from the people of the several States. They remain, after the Constitution's adoption, what they were before, except insofar as they are abridged by that instrument. Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 193. On the other hand, the States can exercise no powers springing exclusively from the National Government's existence which the Constitution did not delegate. Pp. 6-8.

(b) Petitioner's argument that Article VII is a valid exercise of the States' reserved power to give binding instructions to its representatives is unpersuasive for three reasons. First, the historical precedents on which she relies—concerning the part instructions played in the Second Continental Congress, the Constitutional Convention, the early Congress, the selection of United States Senators before the Seventeenth Amendment's passage, and the ratification of certain federal constitutional amendments—are distinguishable because, unlike Article VIII, none of petitioner's examples was coupled with an express legal sanction for disobedience. Second, countervailing historical evidence is provided by the fact that the First Congress rejected a proposal to insert a right of the people "to instruct their representatives" into what would become the First Amendment. Third, and of decisive significance, the means employed to issue the instructions, ballots for congressional elections, are unacceptable unless Article VIII is a permissible exercise of the States' power to regulate the manner of holding congressional elections. Pp. 8-10.

(c) The federal offices at stake arise from the Constitution itself. See U. S. Term Limits, 514 U. S., at 805. Because any state authority to regulate election to those offices could not precede their very creation by the Constitution, such power had to be delegated to the States, rather than reserved under the Tenth Amendment. Id., at 804. No constitutional provision other than the Elections Clause gives the States authority over congressional elections. By process of elimination then, the States may regulate the incidents of such elections, including balloting, only within the exclusive delegation of their Elections Clause power. The Court disagrees with petitioner's argument that Article VIII is a valid exercise of that power in that it regulates the "manner" in which elections are held by disclosing information about congressional candidates. The Clause grants to the States "broad power" to prescribe the procedural mechanisms for holding congressional elections, e.g., Tashjian v. Republican Party of Conn., 479 U. S. 208, 217, but does not authorize them to dictate electoral outcomes, to favor or disfavor a class of candidates, or to evade important constitutional restraints, U. S. Term Limits, 514 U. S., at 833–834. Article VIII is not a procedural regulation. It does not control the "manner" of elections, for that term encompasses matters like notices, registration, supervision of voting, and other requirements as to procedure and safeguards which experience shows are necessary to enforce the fundamental right involved. See, e.g., Smiley v. Holm, 285 U. S. 355, 366. Rather, Article VIII is plainly designed to favor candidates who are willing to support the particular form of a term limits amendment set forth in its text and to disfavor those who either oppose term limits entirely or would prefer a different proposal. Cf. Anderson v. Celebrezze, 460 U. S. 780, 788, n. 9. It not only "instruct[s]" Missouri's congressional Members to promote the passage of the specified term limits amendment, but also attaches a concrete consequence to non-compliance—the printing of an adverse label by the candidates' name on ballots. The two labels impose substantial political risk on candidates who fail to comply with Article VIII, handicapping them at the most crucial stage in the election process—the instant before the vote is cast, Anderson v. Martin, 375 U. S. 399, 402. And, by directing the citizens' attention to the single consideration of the candidates' fidelity to term limits, the labels imply that the issue is an important—perhaps paramount—consideration in the citizens' choice. Ibid. Article VIII thus attempts to "dictate electoral outcomes." U. S. Term Limits, 514 U. S., at 833–834. Such "regulation" of congressional elections is not authorized by the Elections Clause. Pp. 11–15.

191 F. 3d 911, affirmed.

STEVENS, J., delivered the opinion of the Court, in which SCALIA, KENNEDY, GINSBURG, and BREYER, JJ., joined, in which SOUTER, J., joined, as to Parts I, II, and IV, and in which THOMAS, J., joined as to Parts I and IV. No. 99-929

REBECCA MCDOWELL COOK, PETITIONER v.
DONALD J. GRALIKE AND MIKE HARMAN

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF
APPEALS FOR THE EIGHTH CIRCUIT

[February 28, 2001]

JUSTICE STEVENS delivered the opinion of the Court.

In U. S. Term Limits, Inc. v. Thornton, 514 U. S. 779 (1995), we reviewed a challenge to an Arkansas law that prohibited the name of an otherwise eligible candidate for the United States Congress from appearing on the general election ballot if he or she had already served three terms in the House of Representatives or two terms in the Senate. We held that the ballot restriction was an indirect attempt to impose term limits on congressional incumbents that violated the Qualifications Clauses in Article I of the Constitution rather than a permissible exercise of the State's power to regulate the "Times, Places and Manner of holding Elections for Senators and Representatives" within the meaning of Article I, §4, cl. 1.

In response to that decision, the voters of Missouri adopted in 1996 an amendment to Article VIII<sup>1</sup> of their State Constitution designed to lead to the adoption of a specified "Congressional Term Limits Amendment" to the Federal Constitution. At issue in this case is the constitutionality of Article VIII.

I

Article VIII "instruct[s]" each Member of Missouri's congressional delegation "to use all of his or her delegated powers to pass the Congressional Term Limits Amendment" set forth in §16 of the Article. Mo. Const., Art. VIII, §17(1). That proposed amendment would limit service in the United States Congress to three terms in the House of Representatives and two terms in the Senate.<sup>2</sup>

Three provisions in Article VIII combine to advance its purpose. Section 17 prescribes that the statement "DISREGARDED VOTERS' INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" be printed on all primary and general ballots adjacent to the name of a Senator or Representative who fails to take any one of eight legislative acts in support of the proposed amendment.<sup>3</sup> Section 18 provides that the

"Congressional Term Limits Amendment

"(a) No person shall serve in the office of United States Representative for more than three terms, but upon ratification of this amendment no person who has held the office of the United States Representative or who then holds the office shall serve for more than two additional terms.

"(b) No person shall serve in the office of United States Senator for more than two terms, but upon ratification of this amendment no person who has held the office of United States Senator or who then holds the office shall serve in the office for more than one additional term.

"(c) Any state may enact by state constitutional amendment longer or shorter limits than those specified in section a or b herein.

"(d) This article shall have no time limit within which it must be ratified to become operative upon the ratification of the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States."

"I support term limits and pledge to use all my legislative powers to enact the proposed Constitutional Amendment set forth in the Term Limits Act of 1996. statement should be printed alongside the name of each candidate for Congress.<sup>5</sup>

Respondent Don Gralike was a nonincumbent candidate for election in 1998 to the United States House of Representatives from Missouri's Third Congressional District. A month after Article VIII was amended, respondent brought suit<sup>6</sup> in the United States District Court for the Western District of Missouri to enjoin petitioner, the Secretary of State of Missouri, from implementing the Article, which the complaint alleges violates several provisions of the Federal Constitution.

The District Court decided the case on the pleadings, granting Gralike's motion for summary judgment. The court first held that Article VIII contravened the Qualifications Clauses of Article I of the Federal Constitution because it "has the sole purpose of creating additional qualifications for Congress indirectly and has the likely effect of handicapping a class of candidates for Congress." 996 F. Supp. 917, 920 (1998); see 996 F. Supp. 901, 905-909 (1998). The court further held that Article VIII places an impermissible burden on the candidates' First Amendment right to speak freely on the issue of term limits by

<sup>5</sup> Section 19(5) permits a voter to appeal to the Missouri Supreme Court a determination that a statement should not be placed next to a candidate's name, and §19(6) allows a candidate to appeal to the State's highest court a determination that such a statement should be printed. In either case, clear and convincing evidence is required to demonstrate that the statement does not belong on the ballot adjacent to the candidate's name.

The remainder of Article VIII provides for automatic repeal of the Article should the specified Congressional Term Limits Amendment be ratified, §20; exclusive jurisdiction of challenges to the Amendment in the Supreme Court of Missouri, §21; and severance of "any portion, clause, or phrase" of Article VIII that is declared invalid, §22.

<sup>6</sup> Although respondent intended to run for Congress when he filed suit, under Missouri law he could not formally file a declaration for candidacy until February 1998. App. 25-26.

'punish[ing] candidates for speaking out against term limits" through putting "negative words next to their names on the ballot," and by "us[ing] the threat of being disadvantaged in the election to coerce candidates into taking a position on the term limits issue." 996 F. Supp., at 910; see 996 F. Supp., at 920. Lastly, the court found Article VIII to be an indirect and unconstitutional attempt by the people of Missouri to interject themselves into the amending process authorized by Article V of the Federal Constitution. In doing so, the court endorsed the reasoning of other decisions invalidating provisions similar to Article VIII on the ground that negative ballot designations "place an undue influence on the legislator to vote in favor of term limits rather than exercise his or her own independent judgment as is contemplated by Article V." 996 F. Supp., at 916; see 996 F. Supp., at 920.<sup>7</sup> Accordingly, the court permanently enjoined petitioner from enforcing §§15 through 19 of Article VIII.

The United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit affirmed.<sup>8</sup> Like the District Court, it found that Article VIII "threatens a penalty that is serious enough to compel candidates to speak—the potential political damage of the ballot labels"; "seeks to impose an additional qualification for candidacy for Congress and does so in a manner which is highly likely to handicap term limit opponents and other labeled candidates"; and "coerce[s] legislators into proposing or ratifying a particular consti-

term limits amendment to the Federal Constitution in two ways. It encourages Missouri's congressional delegation to support such an amendment in order to avoid an unfavorable ballot designation when running for reelection. And it encourages the election of representatives who favor such an amendment. Petitioner argues that Article VIII is an exercise of the "right of the people to instruct" their representatives reserved by the Tenth Amendment,<sup>11</sup> and that it is a permissible regulation of the "manner" of electing federal legislators within the authority delegated to the States by the Elections Clause, Art. I, §4, cl. 1.<sup>12</sup> Because these two arguments rely on different sources of state power, it is appropriate at the outset to review the distinction in kind between powers reserved to the States and those delegated to the States by the Constitution.

As we discussed at length in U. S. Term Limits, the Constitution "draws a basic distinction between the powers of the newly created Federal Government and the powers retained by the pre-existing sovereign States." 514 U. S., at 801. On the one hand, in the words of Chief Justice Marshall, "it was neither necessary nor proper to define the powers retained by the States. These powers proceed, not from the people of America, but from the people of the several States; and remain, after the adoption of the constitution, what they were before, except so far as they may be abridged by that instrument." Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 193 (1819). The text of the Tenth Amendment delineates this principle:

"The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people."

On the other hand, as Justice Story observed, "the states can exercise no powers whatsoever, which exclusively spring out of the existence of the national government, which the constitution did not delegate to them." 1 Commentaries on the Constitution of the United States §627 (3d ed. 1858) (hereinafter Story). Simply put, "[n]o state can say, that it has reserved, what it never possessed." Ibid.

III*

To be persuasive, petitioner's argument that Article VIII is a valid exercise of the States' reserved power to give binding instructions to its representatives would have to overcome three hurdles. First, the historical precedents on which she relies for the proposition that the States have such a reserved power are distinguishable. Second, there is countervailing historical evidence. Third, and of decisive significance, the means employed to issue the instructions, ballots for congressional elections, are unacceptable unless Article VIII is a permissible exercise of the States' power to regulate the manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives. Only a brief comment on the first two points is necessary.

Petitioner relies heavily on the part instructions played in the Second Continental Congress, the Constitutional Convention, the early Congress, the selection of United States Senators before the passage of the Seventeenth Amendment, and the ratification of certain federal constitutional amendments.<sup>13</sup> However, unlike Article VIII, none of petitioner's examples was coupled with an express legal sanction for disobedience.<sup>14</sup> At best, as an amicus curiae for petitioner points out, and as petitioner herself acknowledges, such historical instructions at one point in the early Republic may have had "de facto binding force" because it might have been "political suicide" not to follow them.<sup>15</sup> This evidence falls short of demonstrating that either the people or the States had a right to give legally binding, i.e., nonadvisory, instructions to their representatives that the Tenth Amendment reserved, much less that such a right would apply to federal representatives. See U. S. Term Limits, Inc. v. Thornton, 514 U. S., at 802 (Tenth Amendment "could only reserve that which existed before"); c. f. McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 430 (1819) (rejecting argument that States had reserved power to tax corporations chartered by Congress because an "original right to tax" such federal entities "never existed").

<sup>14</sup> For example, the Provincial Congress of North Carolina passed the following instruction on April 12, 1776: "Resolved, That the Delegates for this Colony in the Continental Congress be empowered to concur with the Delegates of the other Colonies in declaring Independency,

Opinion of the Court

Indeed, contrary evidence is provided by the fact that the First Congress rejected a proposal to insert a right of the people "to instruct their representatives" into what would become the First Amendment. 1 Annals of Cong. 732 (1789). The fact that the proposal was made suggests that its proponents thought it necessary, and the fact that it was rejected by a vote of 41 to 10, id., at 747, suggests that we should give weight to the views of those who opposed the proposal. It was their view that binding instructions would undermine an essential attribute of Congress by eviscerating the deliberative nature of that National Assembly. See,

Wadsworth) ("I have known, myself, that [instructions] have been disobeyed, and yet the representative was not brought to account for it; on the contrary, he was caressed and re-elected, while those who have obeyed them, contrary to their private sentiments, have ever after been despised for it")

Opinion of the Court

e.g., id., at 735 (remarks of Rep. Sherman) ("[W]hen the people have chosen a representative, it is his duty to meet others from the different parts of the Union, and consult, and agree with them to such acts as are for the general benefit of the whole community. If they were to be guided by instructions, there would be no use in deliberation; all that a man would have to do, would be to produce his instructions, and lay them on the table, and let them speak for him"). As a result, James Madison, then a Representative from Virginia, concluded that a right to issue binding instructions would "run the risk of losing the whole system." Id., at 739; see also id., at 735 (remarks of Rep. Clymer) (proposed right to give binding instructions was "a most dangerous principle, utterly destructive of all ideas of an independent and deliberative body, which are essential requisites in the Legislatures of free Governments").<sup>16</sup>

In any event, even assuming the existence of the reserved right that petitioner asserts (and that Article VIII falls within its ambit), the question remains whether the State may use ballots for congressional elections as a means of giving its instructions binding force.

<sup>16</sup>Of course, whether the members of a representative assembly should be bound by the views of their constituents, or by their own judgment, is a matter that has been the subject of debate since even before the Federal Union was established. For instance, in his classic speech to the electors of Bristol, Edmund Burke set forth the latter view:

"To deliver an opinion is the right of all men; that of constituents is a weighty and respectable opinion, which a representative ought always to rejoice to hear; and which he ought always most seriously to consider. But authoritative instructions; mandates issued, which the member is bound blindly and implicitly to obey, to vote, and to argue for, though contrary to the clearest conviction of his judgment and conscience, these are things utterly unknown to the laws of this land, and which arise from a fundamental mistake of the whole order and tenor of our constitution." The Speeches of the Right Hon. Edmund Burke 130 (J. Burke ed. 1867).

IV

The federal offices at stake ‘aris[e] from the Constitution itself.” U. S. Term Limits, Inc. v. Thornton, 514 U. S., at 805. Because any state authority to regulate election to those offices could not precede their very creation by the Constitution, such power ‘had to be delegated to, rather than reserved by, the States.” Id., at 804. Cf. 1 Story §627 (“It is no original prerogative of state power to appoint a representative, a senator, or president for the union”). Through the Elections Clause, the Constitution delegated to the States the power to regulate the “Times, Places and Manner of holding Elections for Senators and Representatives,” subject to a grant of authority to Congress to “make or alter such Regulations.” Art. I, §4, cl. 1; see United States v. Classic, 313 U. S. 299, 315 (1941). No other constitutional provision gives the States authority over congressional elections, and no such authority could be reserved under the Tenth Amendment. By process of elimination, the States may regulate the incidents of such elections, including balloting, only within the exclusive delegation of power under the Elections Clause.

With respect to the Elections Clause, petitioner argues that Article VIII ‘merely regulates the manner in which elections are held by disclosing information about congressional candidates.”<sup>17</sup> As such, petitioner concludes, Article VIII is a valid exercise of Missouri’s delegated power.

We disagree. To be sure, the Elections Clause grants to the States ‘broad power” to prescribe the procedural mechanisms for holding congressional elections. Tashjian v. Republican Party of Conn., 479 U. S. 208, 217 (1986); see also Smiley v. Holm, 285 U. S. 355, 366 (1932) (“It cannot be doubted that these comprehensive words embrace authority to provide a complete code for congressional elections”).

Opinion of the Court

Nevertheless, Article VIII falls outside of that grant of authority. As we made clear in U. S. Term Limits, "the Framers understood the Elections Clause as a grant of authority to issue procedural regulations, and not as a source of power to dictate electoral outcomes, to favor or disfavor a class of candidates, or to evade important constitutional restraints." 514 U. S., at 833-834. Article VIII is not a procedural regulation. It does not regulate the time of elections; it does not regulate the place of elections; nor, we believe, does it regulate the manner of elections.<sup>18</sup> As to the last point, Article VIII bears no relation to the "manner" of elections as we understand it, for in our commonsense view that term encompasses matters like "notices, registration, supervision of voting, protection of voters, prevention of fraud and corrupt practices, counting of votes, duties of inspectors and canvassers, and making and publication of election returns." Smiley, 285 U. S., at 366; see also U. S. Term Limits, Inc. v. Thornton, 514 U. S., at 833. In short, Article VIII is not among "the numerous requirements as to procedure and safeguards which experience shows are necessary in order to enforce the fundamental right involved," Smiley, 285 U. S., at 366, ensuring that elections are "fair and honest," and that "some sort of order, rather than chaos, is to accompany the democratic process," Storer v. Brown, 415 U. S. 724, 730 (1974).

Opinion of the Court

and evenhanded [ballot access] restrictions that protect the integrity and reliability of the electoral process itself). As noted, the state provision does not just "instruct" each member of Missouri's congressional delegation to promote in certain ways the passage of the specified term limits amendment. It also attaches a concrete consequence to noncompliance—the printing of the statement "DISREGARDED VOTERS' INSTRUCTIONS ON TERM LIMITS" by the candidate's name on all primary and general election ballots. Likewise, a nonincumbent candidate who does not pledge to follow the instruction receives the ballot designation "DECLINED TO PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS."

In describing the two labels, the courts below have employed terms such as "pejorative," "negative," "derogatory," "intentionally intimidating," "particularly harmful," "politically damaging," "a serious sanction," "a penalty," and "official denunciation." 191 F. 3d, at 918, 919, 922, 925; 996 F. Supp., at 908; see id., at 910, 916. The general counsel to petitioner's office, no less, has denominated the labels as "the Scarlet Letter." App. 34–35. We agree with the sense of these descriptions. They convey the substantial political risk the ballot labels impose on current and prospective congressional members who, for one reason or another, fail to comply with the conditions set forth in Article VIII for passing its term limits amendment. Although petitioner now claims that the labels "merely" inform Missouri voters about a candidate's compliance with Article VIII, she has acknowledged under oath that the ballot designations would handicap candidates for the United States Congress. Id., at 66. To us, that is exactly the intended effect of Article VIII.

Indeed, it seems clear that the adverse labels handicap candidates "at the most crucial stage in the election process—the instant before the vote is cast." Anderson v. Martin, 375 U. S. 399, 402 (1964). At the same time, "by directing the citizen's attention to the single consideration" of the candidates' fidelity to term limits, the labels imply that the issue 'is an important— perhaps paramount— consideration in the citizen's choice, which may decisively influence the citizen to cast his ballot" against candidates branded as unfaithful. Ibid. While the precise damage the labels may exact on candidates is disputed between the parties, the labels surely place their targets at a political disadvantage to unmarked candidates for congressional office.<sup>19</sup> Thus, far

Opinion of the Court

<sup>19</sup>That much, apparently, also seemed clear to many Members of Congress operating under Article VIII or similar label laws adopted by other States, who consequently tailored their behavior to avoid the ballot designations. For example, in 1997, the House of Representatives voted on 11 different proposals to adopt a term limits amendment to the Constitution; 7 of those proposals were dictated by voter initiatives in 7 different States. Representative Blunt of Missouri introduced the Article VIII version to 'ensure that members of the Missouri delegation have the ability to vote for language that meets a verbatim test of [the] Missouri Amendment" and thereby avoid 'the scarlet letter provision." 143 Cong. Rec. H494 (Feb. 12, 1997). However, because each of the state initiatives provided a sanction similar to the ballot labels included in Article VIII, some Representatives explained that they were constrained to vote only for the version endorsed by the voters of their States, and to vote against differing versions proposed by congressional members from other States, even though they were supportive of term limits generally. See, e.g., id., at H486 (remarks of Rep. Hutchinson) ('I will vote against the bill of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. McCollum], not because I am opposed to term limits but because this particular resolution does not comply with the term limit instructions approved by the voters and the people of Arkansas'); id., at H490 (remarks of Rep. Crapo) ('Last Congress I supported the McCollum term limits bill that, as I said, supported a 12-year term limit. However, in this Congress I must oppose this bill because of the initiative passed by the people of the State of Idaho which requires me to oppose any term limits measure that does not have the same set of term limit conditions that are included in the initiative that was passed in the State'). As Representative Frank of Massachusetts put it, '[e]very State's Members get to vote on their State's term limits so they make them feel better and they do not get the scarlet letter." Id., at H487. Consequently, the most popular proposal for such an amendment, that of Representative McCollum of Florida, received 217 votes, from regulating the procedural mechanisms of elections, Article VIII attempts to "dictate electoral outcomes." U. S. Term Limits, Inc. v. Thornton, 514 U. S., at 833–834. Such "regulation" of congressional elections simply is not authorized by the Elections Clause.<sup>20</sup>

Accordingly, the judgment of the Court of Appeals is affirmed.

It is so ordered.

10 fewer than it had in the preceding Congress. Id., at H511. As for the Missouri version, it suffered a 353-to-72 defeat. Id., at H497.

<sup>20</sup>At the margins, the parties have fought over whether the Elections Clause is even applicable because it is a grant of power to "each State by the Legislature thereof" and Article VIII is the product of referendum. Compare Brief for Petitioner 38, n. 46, with Brief for Respondents 12–13, n. 8. Of course, "[w]henver the term 'legislature' is used in the Constitution, it is necessary to consider the nature of the particular action in view." Smiley v. Holm, 285 U. S. 355, 366 (1932). Nevertheless, we need not delve into this inquiry, as it is clear, for the reasons stated in the text, that Article VIII is not authorized by the Elections Clause.

In discussing the Elections Clause issue, respondents have also relied in part on First Amendment cases upholding "time, place, and manner" regulations of speech. Brief for Respondents 13–14. Although the Elections Clause uses the same phrase as that branch of our First Amendment jurisprudence, it by no means follows that such cases have any relevance to our disposition of this case.

REBECCA McDOWELL COOK, PETITIONER v.
DONALD J. GRALIKE AND MIKE HARMAN

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF
APPEALS FOR THE EIGHTH CIRCUIT

[February 28, 2001]

JUSTICE KENNEDY, concurring.

I join the opinion of the Court, holding §15 et seq. of Article VIII of the Missouri Constitution violative of the Constitution of the United States. It seems appropriate, however, to add these brief observations with respect to Part III of the opinion. The Court does not say the States are disabled from requesting specific action from Congress or from expressing their concerns to it. As the Court holds, however, the mechanism the State seeks to employ here goes well beyond this prerogative.

A State is not permitted to interpose itself between the people and their National Government as it seeks to do here. Whether a State's concern is with the proposed enactment of a constitutional amendment or an ordinary federal statute it simply lacks the power to impose any conditions on the election of Senators and Representatives, save neutral provisions as to the time, place, and manner of elections pursuant to Article I, §4. As the Court observed in U. S. Term Limits, Inc. v. Thornton, 514 U. S. 779 (1995), the Elections Clause is a "grant of authority to issue procedural regulations," and not "a source of power to dictate electoral outcomes, to favor or disfavor a class of candidates, or to evade important constitutional restraints." Id., at 833-834. The Elections Clause thus delegates but limited power over federal elections to the States. Id., at 804. The Court rules, as it must, that the amendments to Article VIII of the Missouri Constitution do not regulate the time or place of federal elections; rather, those provisions are an attempt to control the actions of the State's congressional delegation.

The dispositive principle in this case is fundamental to the Constitution, to the idea of federalism, and to the theory of representative government. The principle is that Senators and Representatives in the National Government are responsible to the people who elect them, not to the States in which they reside. The Constitution was ratified by Conventions in the several States, not by the States themselves, U. S. Const., Art. VII, a historical fact and a constitutional imperative which underscore the proposition that the Constitution was ordained and established by the people of the United States. U. S. Const., preamble. The idea of federalism is that a National Legislature enacts laws which bind the people as individuals, not as citizens of a State; and, it follows, freedom is most secure if the people themselves, not the States as intermediaries, hold their federal legislators to account for the conduct of their office. If state enactments were allowed to condition or control certain actions of federal legislators, accountability would be blurred, with the legislators having the excuse of saying that they did not act in the exercise of their best judgment but simply in conformance with a state mandate. As noted in the concurring opinion in Thornton, "[n]othing in the Constitution or The Federalist Papers . . . supports the idea of state interference with the most basic relation between the National Government and its citizens, the selection of legislative representatives." 514 U. S., at 842. Yet that is just what Missouri seeks to do through its law— to wield the power granted to it by the Elections Clause to handicap those who seek federal office by affixing pejorative labels next to their names on the ballot if they do not pledge to support the State's preferred position on a certain issue. Neither the design of the Constitution nor sound principles of representative government are consistent with the right or power of a State to interfere with the direct line of accountability between the National Legislature and the people who elect it. For these reasons Article VIII is void.

This said, it must be noted that when the Constitution was enacted, respectful petitions to legislators were an accepted mode of urging legislative action. See W. Miller, Arguing About Slavery 105–107 (1995). This right is preserved to individuals (the people) in the First Amendment. Even if a State, as an entity, is not itself protected by the Petition Clause, there is no principle prohibiting a state legislature from following a parallel course and by a memorial resolution requesting the Congress of the United States to pay heed to certain state concerns. From the earliest days of our Republic to the present time, States have done so in the context of federal legislation. See, e.g., 22 Annals of Cong. 153–154 (1811) (reprinting a resolution by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania requesting that the charter of the Bank of the United States not be renewed); 2000 Ala. Acts 66 (requesting targeted relief for Medicare cuts); 2000 Kan. Sess. Laws ch. 186 (urging Congress to allow state-inspected meat to be shipped in interstate commerce). Indeed, the situation was even more complex in the early days of our Nation, when Senators were appointed by state legislatures rather than directly elected. At that time, it appears that some state legislatures followed a practice of instructing the Senators whom they had appointed to pass legislation, while only requesting that the Representatives, who had been elected by the people, do so. See 22 Annals of Cong. 153–154 (1811). I do not believe that the situation should be any different with respect to a proposed constitutional amendment, and indeed history bears this out. See, e.g., 13 Annals of Cong. 95–96

(1803) (reprinting a resolution from the State of Vermont and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts requesting that Congress propose to the legislatures of the States a constitutional amendment akin to the Twelfth Amendment). The fact that the Members of the First Congress decided not to codify a right to instruct legislative representatives does not, in my view, prove that they intended to prohibit nonbinding petitions or memorials by the State as an entity.

If there are to be cases in which a close question exists regarding whether the State has exceeded its constitutional authority in attempting to influence congressional action, this case is not one of them. In today's case the question is not close. Here the State attempts to intrude upon the relationship between the people and their congressional delegates by seeking to control or confine the discretion of those delegates, and the interference is not permissible.

With these observations, I concur in the Court's opinion.

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF
APPEALS FOR THE EIGHTH CIRCUIT

[February 28, 2001]

JUSTICE THOMAS, concurring in Parts I and IV and concurring in the judgment.

I continue to believe that, because they possess “reserved” powers, “the people of the States need not point to any affirmative grant of power in the Constitution in order to prescribe qualifications for their representatives in Congress, or to authorize their elected state legislators to do so.” U. S. Term Limits, Inc. v. Thornton, 514 U. S. 779, 846 (1995) (THOMAS, J., dissenting). For this reason, I disagree with the Court’s premise, derived from U. S.
Term Limits, that the States have no authority to regulate congressional elections except for the authority that the Constitution expressly delegates to them. See ante, at 11.
Nonetheless, the parties conceded the validity of this premise, see Brief for Petitioner 25–26; Brief for Respo ndents 12–13, and I therefore concur.

REBECCA MCDOWELL COOK, PETITIONER v.
DONALD J. GRALIKE AND MIKE HARMAN

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF
APPEALS FOR THE EIGHTH CIRCUIT

[February 28, 2001]

CHIEF JUSTICE REHNQUIST, with whom JUSTICE O'CONNOR joins, concurring in the judgment.

I would affirm the judgment of the Court of Appeals, but on the ground that Missouri's Article VIII violates the First Amendment to the United States Constitution. Specifically, I believe that Article VIII violates the First Amendment right of a political candidate, once lawfully on the ballot, to have his name appear unaccompanied by pejorative language required by the State. Our ballot access cases based on First Amendment grounds have rarely distinguished between the rights of candidates and the rights of voters. In Bullock v. Carter, 405 U. S. 134, 143 (1972), we said: "[T]he rights of voters and the rights of candidates do not lend themselves to neat separation; laws that affect candidates always have at least some theoretical, correlative effect on voters." And in Anderson v. Celebrezze, 460 U. S. 780, 787 (1983), we said that "voters can assert their preferences only through candidates or parties or both." Actions such as the present one challenging ballot provisions have in most instances been brought by the candidates themselves, and no one questions the standing of respondents Gralike and Harmon to raise a First Amendment challenge to such laws.*

Article I, §4, provides that "[t]he Times, Places and Manner of holding Elections for Senators and Representatives, shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof . . ." Missouri justifies Article VIII as a "time, place, and manner" regulation of election. Restrictions of this kind are valid "provided that they are justified without reference to the content of the regulated speech, that they are narrowly tailored to serve a significant governmental interest, and that they leave open ample alternative channels for communication of the information." Clark v. Community for Creative Non-Violence, 468 U. S. 288, 293 (1984). Missouri's Article VIII flunks two of these three requirements. Article VIII is not only not content neutral, but it actually discriminates on the basis of viewpoint because only those candidates who fail to conform to the State's position receive derogatory labels. The result is that the State injects itself into the election process at an absolutely critical point—the composition of the ballot, which is the last thing the voter sees before he makes his choice—and does so in a way that is not neutral as to issues or candidates. The candidates who are thus singled out have no means of replying to their designation which would be equally effective with the voter.

In Anderson v. Martin, 375 U. S. 399 (1964), we held a Louisiana statute requiring the designation of a candidate's race on the ballot violated the Equal Protection

*The Court of Appeals upheld their First Amendment claim, but based its reasoning on the view that the ballot statements were "compelled speech" by the candidate, and therefore ran afoul of cases such as Wooley v. Maynard, 430 U. S. 705 (1977). I do not agree with the reasoning of the Court of Appeals. I do not believe a reasonable voter, viewing the ballot labeled as Article VIII requires, would think that the candidate in question chose to characterize himself as having "disregarded voters' instructions" or as "having declined to pledge" to support term limits.

REHNQUIST, C. J., concurring in judgment

Clause. In describing the effect of such a designation, the Court said: “[B]y directing the citizen’s attention to the single consideration of race or color, the State indicates that a candidate’s race or color is an important— perhaps paramount— consideration in the citizen’s choice, which may decisively influence the citizen to cast his ballot along racial lines.” Id., at 402. So, too, here the State has chosen one and only one issue to comment on the position of the candidates. During the campaign, they may debate tax reform, Social Security, national security, and a host of other issues; but when it comes to the ballot on which one or the other of them is chosen, the State is saying that the issue of term limits is paramount. Although uttered in a different context, what we said in Police Department of Chicago v. Mosley, 408 U. S. 92, 96 (1972) is equally applicable here: “[Government] may not select which issues are worth discussing or debating.”

If other Missouri officials feel strongly about the need for term limits, they are free to urge rejection of candidates who do not share their view and refuse to “take the pledge.” Such candidates are able to respond to that sort of speech with speech of their own. But the State itself may not skew the ballot listings in this way without violating the First Amendment.

- 510. Ballot information for state legislators.
- 515. Ballot information for members of Congress.
- 520. Ballot information on term limit pledge for non-incumbents.
- 525. Designation.
- 530. Severability.
- 535. Short title.

Revisor's notes. AS 15.15.500 - 15.15.535 were enacted by 1996 Ballot Measure No. 4 and codified by the revisor of statutes in 1996.

Effective dates. 1996 Ballot Measure No. 4, which proposed enactment of law codified as AS 15.15.500 - 15.15.535, was approved by a majority of the voters in the November 5, 1996 election. It was certified on November 27, 1996 and took effect February 25, 1997.

Opinions of attorney general. Under the authority of AS 44.62.060(b), the proposed regulations implementing AS 15.15.510, 15.15.515, 15.15.520, and 15.15.525 from Ballot Measure No. 4, SLA 1996, are disapproved on the basis that the requirements imposed by those statutes impose additional qualifications for Congressional office beyond those set out in the United States Constitution. May 1, 1998 Op. Att'y Gen.

Sec. 15.15.500. Findings and declarations.

The People of the State of Alaska find and declare as follows:

- (a) The People of Alaska voted by more than 62 percent to limit the terms of U.S. Representatives to three terms and limit U.S. Senators to two terms.
- (b) The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that an amendment to the U.S. Constitution is necessary to limit terms of members of Congress.
- (c) There are two methods to propose amendments to the U.S. Constitution that must then be ratified by three-fourths of the States, or 38. These methods are (1) for two-thirds of both houses of the United States Congress to so vote or (2) for 34 states to apply for an amendment convention to so vote.
- (d) The Congress has refused to propose such an amendment, and by a clear majority defeated the same term limits passed by over 62 percent of the Voters of Alaska in 1994.
- (e) The Congress has a clear conflict of interest in proposing term limits on themselves.

(§ 2 1996 Ballot Measure No. 4)

Sec. 15.15.505. Purpose and intent.

The purpose and intent in enacting AS 15.15.500 - 15.15.535 is to secure the following amendment under the provisions of Article V of the United States Constitution by informing voters of acts and omissions by candidates for congressional and legislative office with respect to

said constitutional amendment:

CONGRESSIONAL TERM LIMITS AMENDMENT

Section A. No person shall serve in the office of the United States Senator for more than two terms, but upon ratification, no person who has held the office of the United States Senator or who then holds the office shall serve in the office for more than one additional term.

Section B. No person shall serve in the office of United States Representative for more than three terms, but upon ratification no person who has held the office of United States Representative or who then holds the office shall serve for more than two additional terms.

Section. C. This article shall have no time limit within which it must be ratified to become operative upon the ratification of the legislatures of three-fourths of the States.

It is the further purpose and intent of AS 15.15.500 - 15.15.535 to instruct all candidates, including incumbents running for retention of office, to use all of his or her delegated powers to secure the amendment to the United States Constitution, as set forth above, and further to specifically instruct the legislature of the State of Alaska to support the following proposed application to Congress:

We, the people, and legislature of the State of Alaska, due to our desire to establish term limits on the Congress of the United States, hereby make application to Congress, pursuant to our power under Article V of the United States Constitution, to call an Article V Convention.

(§ 3 1996 Ballot Measure No. 4)

Revisor's notes. In 1996, in this section "AS 15.15.500 - 15.15.535" was substituted for "this legislation" and "this act" in order to reflect the codification of 1996 Ballot Measure No. 4.

Sec. 15.15.510. Ballot information for state legislators.

(a) All primary, special and general election ballots shall have "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" printed adjacent to the name of any respective state senator or representative who during the preceding term of office:

- (1) fails to vote in favor of the application set forth above when brought to a vote or;
- (2) fails to second the application set forth above if it lacks for a second or;
- (3) fails to vote in favor of bringing the application set forth above before any committee or subcommittee upon which he or she serves in the respective house or;
- (4) fails to propose or otherwise bring to a vote of the full legislative body the application set forth above if it otherwise lacks a legislator who so proposes or brings to a vote of the full legislative body the application set forth above or;
- (5) fails to vote against any attempt to delay, table or otherwise prevent a vote by the full legislative body of the application set forth above or;
- (6) fails in any way to ensure that all votes on the application set forth above are recorded and made available to the public or;
- (7) fails to vote against any change, addition or modification to the application set forth above or;
- (8) fails to vote in favor of the amendment set forth above if it is sent to the states for ratification or;

(9) fails to vote against any amendment with longer limits if such an amendment is sent to the state for ratification.

(b) The language "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" when required by any of subsections (1) through (7) shall not appear adjacent to the names of candidates for state legislature if the State of Alaska has made an application to Congress for an Article V convention pursuant to the Act and such application has not been withdrawn, or if a Congressional Term Limits Amendment has been submitted to the States for ratification.

(1) the State of Alaska has made an application to Congress for an Article V amendment pursuant to the Act and such application has not been withdrawn or;

(2) the Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above has been submitted to the states for ratification and has been ratified by this state or the Amendment set forth above has become part of the United States Constitution.

(c) The language "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" when required by subsection (8) or (9) shall not appear adjacent to the names of candidates for state legislature if the State of Alaska has ratified the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above.

(d) The language "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" when required by any of subsections (1) through (9) shall not appear adjacent to the names of candidates for state legislature if the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above has become part of the United States Constitution.

(§ 4 1996 Ballot Measure No. 4)

Opinions of attorney general. The provisions of Ballot Measure 4 of the 1996 general election (codified at AS 15.15.510, 15.15.515, 15.15.520, and 15.15.525)(requiring that candidates for public office be given the opportunity to take a term limits pledge and, if they refuse, the language "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" be printed adjacent to their name on the ballot) are unconstitutional and the implementing regulations are therefore also unconstitutional. May 1, 1998 Op. Att'y Gen.

Sec. 15.15.515. Ballot information for members of Congress.

(a) All primary, special and general election ballots shall have "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" printed adjacent to the name of any United States Senator or Representative who during the preceding term of office:

(1) fails to vote in favor of the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above when brought to a vote or;

(2) fails to second the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above if it lacks for a second before any proceeding of the legislative body or;

(3) fails to propose or otherwise bring to a vote of the full legislative body the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above if it otherwise lacks a legislator who so proposes or brings to a vote of the full legislative body the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above or;

(4) fails to vote in favor of all votes bringing the Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above before any committee of subcommittee of the respective house upon which he or she serves or;

(5) fails to reject any attempt to delay, table or otherwise prevent a vote by the full legislative body of the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above or;

(6) fails to abstain or vote against any proposed constitutional amendment that would increase term limits beyond those in the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above regardless of any other actions in support of the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above or;

(7) sponsors or cosponsors any proposed constitutional amendment or law that would increase term limits beyond those in the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above or;

(8) fails in any way to ensure that all votes on the proposed Congressional Term Limits Amendment set forth above are recorded and made available to the public.

(§ 5 1996 Ballot Measure No. 4)

Opinions of attorney general. The provisions of Ballot Measure 4 of the 1996 general election (codified at AS 15.15.510, 15.15.515, 15.15.520, and 15.15.525)(requiring that candidates for public office be given the opportunity to take a term limits pledge and, if they refuse, the language "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" be printed adjacent to their name on the ballot) are unconstitutional and the implementing regulations are therefore also unconstitutional. May 1, 1998 Op. Att'y Gen.

Sec. 15.15.520. Ballot information on term limit pledge for non-incumbents.

(a) Non-incumbent candidates for United States Senator and Representative, and state senator and representative shall be given an opportunity to take a "Term Limits" pledge regarding Term Limits each time they file to run for such office. Those who decline to take the "Term Limits" pledge shall have "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" printed adjacent to their name on every primary and general election ballot.

(b) The "Term Limits" pledge shall be offered to non-incumbent candidates for United States Senator and Representative, and to non-incumbent candidates for state senator and representative until a Constitutional Amendment which limits the number of terms of United States Senators to no more than two and United States Representatives to no more than three shall have become part of our United States Constitution.

(c) The "Term Limits" pledge that each non-incumbent candidate, set forth above, shall be offered is as follows:

I support term limits and pledge to use all my legislative powers to enact the proposed Constitutional Amendment set forth in the Congressional Term Limits Act of 1996. If elected, I pledge to vote in such a way that the designation "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" will not appear adjacent to my name.

Signature of Candidate

(§ 6 1996 Ballot Measure No. 4)

Opinions of attorney general. The provisions of Ballot Measure 4 of the 1996 general election (codified at AS 15.15.510, 15.15.515, 15.15.520, and 15.15.525)(requiring that candidates for public office be given the opportunity to take a term limits pledge and, if they refuse, the language "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" be printed adjacent to their name on the ballot) are unconstitutional and the implementing regulations are therefore also unconstitutional. May 1, 1998 Op. Att'y Gen.

Sec. 15.15.525. Designation.

(a) The Lieutenant Governor and state election officials shall be responsible for making a determination as to whether state and federal legislators and non-incumbent candidates shall have placed adjacent to their name on the election ballot "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" or "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS".

(b) The determination as to whether or not "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" or "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" shall be placed adjacent to a candidate's name shall be made at a time necessary to ensure placement of that designation on the ballot after a forty-five (45) day public comment period.

(c) If the official(s) with the authority to determine whether or not the designation "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" or "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" shall be placed adjacent to a candidate's name choose(s) not to place such designation adjacent to the name of a senator or representative for state or federal office, any citizen may sue within the 45 day public comment period to have such a designation made. Upon the filing of a suit, such a designation shall be made unless the candidate or the official(s) responsible for determining whether or not the designation shall appear adjacent to the candidate's name can show by clear and convincing evidence that the candidate has met the requirements set forth in this amendment and therefore should not have the designation "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" or "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" adjacent to the candidate's name.

Revisor's notes. In the last sentence of subsection (c), "VIOLATED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS" or "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" appears after the last occurrence of "designation" even though it did not appear in the voter's pamphlet because the language was included in the text of the initiative as it was filed with the Lieutenant Governor's Office.

Opinions of attorney general. The provisions of Ballot Measure 4 of the 1996 general election (codified at AS 15.15.510, 15.15.515, 15.15.520, and 15.15.525)(requiring that candidates for public office be given the opportunity to take a term limits pledge and, if they refuse, the language "DECLINED TO TAKE PLEDGE TO SUPPORT TERM LIMITS" be printed adjacent to their name on the ballot) are unconstitutional and the implementing regulations are therefore also unconstitutional. May 1, 1998 Op.

Att'y Gen.

Sec. 15.15.530. Severability.

If any portion, clause, or phrase of AS 15.15.500 - 15.15.535 is, for any reason, held to be invalid or unconstitutional by a court of competent jurisdiction, the remaining portions, clauses, and phrases shall not be affected, but shall remain in full force and effect.

(§ 8 1996 Ballot Measure No. 4)

Revisor's notes. In 1996, in this section "AS 15.15.500 - 15.15.535" was substituted for "this initiative" in order to reflect the 1996 codification of 1996 Ballot Measure No. 4.

Sec. 15.15.535. Short title.

AS 15.15.500 - 15.15.535 shall be known as and may be cited as "The Congressional Term Limits Act of 1996".

Effective dates. 1998 Ballot Measure No. 7, § 1, which enacted this article, took effect on March 4, 1999.

Sec. 15.15.550. Findings and declarations.

The People of the State of Alaska find and declare as follows:

- (1) polls of the People of Alaska indicate that a clear majority favor federal and state legislators serving only a limited number of years;
- (2) The United States Congress and the Alaska Legislature have a clear conflict of interest in proposing term limits on themselves and have consistently refused to limit their own terms;
- (3) the voters of Alaska want to elect federal and state legislators that pledge to limit their own terms;

(4) the voters of Alaska want to know which candidates for the United States Congress and the Alaska Legislature support term limits and the concept of a citizen legislature.

(§ 1 1998 Ballot Measure No. 7)

Revisor's notes. In 1999, upon codification, the numbering of paragraphs (1)-(4) was substituted for (a)-(d) to conform to the style of the Alaska Statutes.

Sec. 15.15.555. Purpose and intent.

The purpose and intent in enacting AS 15.15.550 - 15.15.575 is to require the lieutenant governor to permit but not require any candidate for the United States Congress and the Alaska Legislature to submit to the lieutenant governor an executed copy of the applicable Term Limits Pledge set forth in AS 15.15.560 up until 15 days prior to the lieutenant governor's certification of the ballot in order for the ballot information set forth in AS 15.15.565(a), (b), and (c) to be included on that ballot.

(§ 1 1998 Ballot Measure No. 7)

Sec. 15.15.560. Term Limits Pledge.

(a) The lieutenant governor shall permit but not require any candidate for the United States Congress and the Alaska Legislature to submit to the lieutenant governor an executed copy of the Term Limits Pledge set forth in (b) of this section up until 15 days prior to the lieutenant governor's certification of the ballot in order for the ballot information set forth in AS 15.15.565(a), (b), and (c) to be included on that ballot.

(b) The Term Limits Pledge will be as set forth herein and will incorporate the applicable language in [ ] for the office the candidate seeks:

Term Limits Pledge for Candidates for the United States Congress

I voluntarily pledge not to serve in the United States [House of Representatives more than 3 terms] [Senate more than 2 terms] after the effective date of this provision and authorize the Lieutenant Governor to notify the voters of this action by placing the applicable ballot information, "Signed TERM LIMITS pledge: Will serve no more than [3 terms] [2 terms]" or "Broke TERM LIMITS pledge" next to my name on every election ballot and in all state sponsored voter education material in which my name appears as a candidate for the office for which the pledge refers.

(b) The lieutenant governor shall place on every election ballot and in all state sponsored voter education material the ballot information, "Signed TERM LIMITS pledge: Will serve no more than 8 years" next to the name of any candidate for the Alaska Legislature who has ever executed the Term Limits Pledge except when (c) of this section applies.

(c) The lieutenant governor shall place on every election ballot and in all state sponsored voter education material the ballot information, "Broke TERM LIMITS pledge" next to the name of any candidate who at any time executes the applicable Term Limits Pledge and thereafter qualifies as a candidate for a term that would exceed the number of terms or years set forth in the applicable Term Limits Pledge.

(d) For the purpose of this section, service in office for more than one-half of a term shall be deemed service for a term.

(e) The state-recognized proponent(s) and sponsor(s) of the initiative that enacted AS 15.15.550 - 15.15.575 shall have standing to defend it.

(f) The lieutenant governor shall implement this section by rule as long as that rule does not alter the intent of this section.

(§ 1 1998 Ballot Measure No. 7)

Revisor's notes. In 1999, "the initiative that enacted AS 15.15.550 - 15.15.575" was substituted for "this initiative" to reflect the codification of 1998 Ballot Measure No. 7 as AS 15.15.550 - 15.15.575.

Sec. 15.15.570. Severability.

If any portion of this section is held invalid for any reason, the remaining portion to the fullest extent possible shall be severed from the void portion and given the fullest force and application.

(§ 1 1998 Ballot Measure No. 7)

Sec. 15.15.575. Short title.

AS 15.15.550 - 15.15.575 shall be known as and may be cited as The Term Limits Pledge Act of 1998.
