ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)

The Division of Finance is currently building such a website at the direction of Governor Palin. The source of the financial information will be the State's new Alaska Data Enterprise Reporting System (ALDER), which is currently in field testing by State departments.

This project has been incorporated into the Division of Finance ongoing workload. Therefore, no additional funding needs are anticipated.

SENATOR BILL WIELECHOWSKI

Sponsor Statement: SB 201 The Alaska Open Government Act

The intent of S.B. 201, the Alaska Open Government Act, is to create a free, searchable website that provides Alaskans with easy access to detailed and comprehensive information on state spending. This will encourage better understanding of state operations and, ultimately, ensure that funding is directed to the state's most important needs.

Across the country, taxpayers are clamoring for better information and greater accountability from government. The federal government recently posted its expenditures online at www.federalspending.gov, following passage of the bipartisan Federal Funding Accountability and Transparency Act. In 2007, five states (Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma, Minnesota and Hawaii) passed similar legislation calling for the creation of on-line databases with their state's expenditures. Seventeen other states are currently considering "taxpayer transparency acts," including Washington, New Mexico, Kentucky, Michigan, Illinois, Georgia, and Colorado.

SB 201 will give Alaskans easy access to detailed information on state expenditures and revenue, empowering them to become fiscal watchdogs. It will lead to greater government accountability and a public better able to assist in making difficult government decisions.

Please join me in supporting this much needed legislation.

Benefits of the Alaska Open Government Act

Thomas Jefferson's thoughts on government transparency (from 1802):

"We might hope to see the finances of the Union as clear and intelligible as a merchant's books, so that every member of Congress and every man of any mind in the Union should be able to comprehend them, to investigate abuses, and consequently to control them."

AMERICANS for TAX REFORM

Grover G. Norquist
President

January 30, 2008

Dear Committee Member,

I write to urge you to lend your support to SB 201, the Open Government Act sponsored by Sen. Bill Wielechowski.

The Open Government Act would create a single, searchable Internet website providing comprehensive information on state government finance -- both revenues and expenditures greater than $10,000, including, but not limited to grants and contracts. This measure would provide an important step towards greater fiscal accountability.

Since the passage of the Federal Funding Accountability and Transparency Act of 2006 which resulted in the creation of www.USASpending.gov, Americans for Tax Reform has been working with policymakers and activists around the country to pass legislation and get executive orders signed that emulate and ideally go beyond the federal legislation.

In 2007, five states (Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, and to a more limited extent Minnesota and Hawaii) passed legislation that mandates the creation of comprehensive websites for state expenditures. In most cases, these bills enjoyed broad bipartisan support. Several other states including Texas, Missouri, South Carolina, and, just this month, Louisiana have already taken executive action or are looking to do so.

Several of the websites mandated by legislative or executive action have already gone live, and provide taxpayers with an opportunity to track their tax dollars at a mouse click. Among these are Texas, Oklahoma and Missouri, and all these sites have been very well received so far.

This spending transparency effort is consistent with the Founding Fathers' notion of accountable government: It was Thomas Jefferson, who once said "We might hope to see the finances of the Union as clear and intelligible as a merchant's book, so that every member of Congress and every man of any mind in the Union should be able to comprehend them, to investigate abuses, and consequently to control them."

Creating such a website would provide Alaska taxpayers with a tool to access, search and easily find relevant spending information, and ultimately foster a better understanding of the ways in which government operates. Ultimately, it would help reduce fraud, waste and abuse. Opacity in the way government spends tax dollars often leaves taxpayers frustrated, and can create the perception of possible abuse of the system.

More public scrutiny will help eliminate impropriety in dealing with taxpayer dollars -- be it perceived or real impropriety.

Because it goes back to one of the most fundamental principles -- accountability -- this movement has broad bipartisan support. This is not a Right-Left issue, it is a Right-Wrong issue. There may not be agreement on how the money should be spent, but there is agreement that taxpayers should be able to scrutinize government expenditures. In today's digital age, there is no justification for keeping taxpayers in the dark as to how their tax dollars are being spent.

The founding fathers had the vision, and today, we have the tools at our disposal to make that vision a reality – at little cost to taxpayers:

- The Missouri Accountability Portal, an expenditure website created via executive order by Gov. Matt Blunt, was created without the appropriation of a single additional tax dollar
- The Oklahoma website, which just went live on December 28, 2007 and can be accessed at www.openbooks.ok.gov, initially carried a price tag of $300,000. In the end the implementing agency reported that the website cost only $8,000 plus expended staff time.
- Even the federal grant and contract website which was unveiled in December and is accessible at www.USASpending.gov was put together at a price tag of less than $1 million - and that covers grants and contracts of the entire federal government. The software that was used to create the federal site will soon be available as open source software.
- Companies like Google and Microsoft have offered to partner with states in their endeavours to make government spending information more accessible, helping to further defray cost.

One thing we suggest should be considered as this bill moves forward, is to drop the $10,000 threshold for disclosure, and to include of the actual expenditure document – the grant, contract, or purchase order for example. This would help taxpayers to get an even clearer picture of how their tax dollars are spent.

With this bill, Alaska has the opportunity to empower its taxpayers, and that is an opportunity that should not be missed.

Americans for Tax Reform urges your support for SB 201 and is looking forward to working with you to advancing accountability and transparency for the sake of Alaska taxpayers.

Alaska opens checkbook to public

By Pat Forgey | JUNEAU EMPIRE

Alaskans who want to make sure their state government is spending their money wisely can now rummage through the state's checkbook, and see what they can find.

The new Online Checkbook feature in the state's Web site lets the public look through listings of all the bills paid and grants awarded by the state government in the last six months.

"It's a very, very good tool for Alaskans to see where their money is going," said Gov. Sarah Palin at a press conference Monday.

It's a new government program that both ends of the political spectrum agree is needed. National anti-tax advocate Grover Norquist of Americans for Tax Reform and liberal Ralph Nader both support the plans to improve transparency in state government. Norquist testified before a legislative committee supporting the effort, as did Steve Cleary of the Alaska Public Interest Research Group.

Visitors to the Online Checkbook site can look up all the checks and payments made by the state so far this fiscal year, with some notable exceptions. Public employee salary information, while legally public, is not on the site. Nor are payments of less than $1,000.

Sen. Bill Wielechowski, D-Anchorage, praised the effort Monday.

"I think there are going to be times when elected officials would rather not have this online, but it holds us accountable," he said.

Among those interested in the Online Checkbook are likely to be businesses, which may want to see how much the state is paying their competitors, he said. Those businesses may even underbid their competitors the next time around, and save the state some money.

Wielechowski said other states that have made similar efforts have gotten millions of hits on their Web sites. He brought the idea for a bill requiring the Online Checkbook to the Palin administration and got a positive response.

"They came back to us and said, 'You don't need the bill. We'll just go ahead and do it ourselves,'" he said.

Wielechowski said he's still planning to go ahead with his bill, however, and said elected officials should make the call - and take the heat - about what should and should not go online.

Requiring the state to post the information online ensures that it will remain there, even when administrations change, he said.

"If the Legislature has a say, it gives it permanence," he said. "Look at how many things Palin has reversed that (former Gov. Frank) Murkowski did."

Wielechowski said Department of Administration staff who put the information online exceeded expectation., but said the early version needs more work.

"It's a good start, but it's a little rough," he said. He said he'd like to see aggregated data and more specificity. In some cases, it is difficult to tell what a bill is for.

"We'll continue to refine the tool and respond to suggestions for improvement," said Annette Kreitzer, commissioner of the Department of Administration.

Information from the site can be downloaded in both spreadsheet and PDF formats, with additional lookup and analysis options under consideration, state officials say.
