*This bill would authorize the Alaska Retirement Management Board (ARM) to purchase transferable tax credit certificates issued under AS 43.55.023 and AS 43.55.025 for 92 percent of the face value of the certificates. The ARM board would then sell the certificates to the Department of Revenue for the full face value of the certificates, unless the commissioner of the Department of Revenue determines that economic conditions are not acceptable for the state to purchase and pay for the certificates. The proceeds of these sales would be used by the ARM board to defray the unfunded pension liabilities for which the board is responsible.

Alaska Statutes 43.55 currently offers three clearly identifiable means of obtaining and selling tax credits for petroleum exploration activity and other capital costs relating to petroleum production.

FISCAL NOTE #3

STATE OF ALASKA
2007 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

BILL NO. CSHB 48(FIN)

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

AS 43.55.025, known as the Exploration Incentive Credit, offers tax credits for either 20% or 40% of exploration expenditures incurred before July 1, 2016. The certificates issued under this program can be carried forward or transferred. Current statutes allow these credit certificates to be sold to other taxpayers; there is no provision for the state to buy credit certificates generated under AS 43.55.025 directly from the explorer to which the credit was originally issued.

Tax credits generated under AS 43.55.023, through excess capital expenditures or net losses, can also be carried forward or transferred. Current statutes allow these credit certificates to be sold to (1) other taxpayers (AS 43.55.023(e)), or (2) to the state Department of Revenue (AS 43.55.023(f)).

Although there are qualifying criteria for the state's purchase of credit certificates at AS 43.55.023(f), there are no restrictions on the amount to be paid for the certificates (other than the maximum refund per taxpayer of $25 million per year), and it is assumed that the state would pay full face value for the certificates. There are also no restrictions on the amount other taxpayers can pay for the certificates, although it is assumed they would pay less than face value and current statutes limit the amount transferred certificates can reduce a taxpayer's liability to 20 percent per year.

Given the three options and their qualifying criteria, it is difficult to assess which program certificate holders will favor. Were the expenditures to qualify under the EIC 40% credit program, then it is likely that would be the first choice. As of December 31, 2006, the EIC program issued credits totaling $34.7 million dollars over the 3.5 years since the program's inception; additional applications are pending approval by the department. If all the credits issued were sold to the ARM board for 92% of the face value and resold to the Department of Revenue, the total generated for the ARM board over the period would have been approximately $2.8 million.

Alternatively, should the expenditures qualify only for the 20% credit, then it is likely that the certificates would be transferred to the highest bidder. The highest bidder could be another taxpayer, the state Department of Revenue, or, under this bill, the ARM board.

This bill grants authority to the Alaska Retirement Management Board (ARMB) to purchase transferable tax credit certificates issued under AS 43.55.023 for 92% of the face value of the certificate and then sell the tax credit certificates to the Department of Revenue under AS 43.55.023(f) for the full face value of the certificate. Proceeds of the sale of tax credit certificates will be applied to the unfunded pension liability of the defined benefit retirement plans for which the board has responsibility. The bill will have no financial impact on the administration of the plans by the DividiRB and result in a zero fiscal note.
