Account number. May show an account or other unique number the creditor assigned to distinguish your account.

Box 1. Shows the date the debt was canceled.

Box 2. Shows the amount of debt canceled.

Box 3. Shows interest if included in the canceled debt in box 2. See Pub. 525, Taxable and Nontaxable Income, to see if you must include the interest in gross income.

Box 5. Shows a description of the debt. If box 7 is completed, box 5 shows a description of the property.

Box 6. If the box is marked, the creditor has indicated the debt was canceled in a bankruptcy proceeding.

Box 7. If, in the same calendar year, a foreclosure or abandonment of property occurred in connection with the cancellation of the debt, the fair market value (FMV) of the property will be shown, or you will receive a separate Form 1099-A, Acquisition or Abandonment of Secured Property. Generally, the gross foreclosure bid price is considered to be the FMV. For an abandonment or voluntary conveyance in lieu of foreclosure, the FMV is generally the appraised value of the property. You may have income or loss because of the acquisition or abandonment. See Pub. 544, Sales and Other Dispositions of Assets, for information about foreclosures and abandonments.

64

WEDBUSH MORGAN SECURITIES
Investment Bankers for Entrepreneurs
1000 WILSHIRE BLVD., SUITE 855
LOS ANGELES, CA 90017
www.wedbush.com
Phone: (213) 688-8000

1099-CONSOLIDATED TAX STATEMENT
Tax Year 2007 Copy B For Recipient

Department of the Treasury - Internal Revenue Service
(Keep for your records)

FEDERAL ID NUMBER: 95-2495390

TAXPAYER ID NUMBER [redacted]
ACCOUNT NUMBER: CGMH 2451-6117

JAN - 5 2009

The following detailed information is NOT provided to the Internal Revenue Service, but is being provided to you as a courtesy. The IRS box numbers referenced for individual items listed below comprise the totals shown on the 1099 forms from the previous pages.

1099-DIV DIVIDENDS AND DISTRIBUTIONS

DESCRIPTION	CUSIP	EX-DIVIDEND DATE	DATE	ACTIVITY	AMOUNT	IRS BOX	COUNTRY	NOTES
HANCOCK SVRGN INVS CL A	47803P302	03/19/07	03/22/07	QUALIFIED DIVIDEND	$4.42	1B
HANCOCK SVRGN INVS CL A	47803P302	06/18/07	06/21/07	QUALIFIED DIVIDEND	$5.58	1B
HANCOCK SVRGN INVS CL A	47803P302	09/17/07	09/20/07	QUALIFIED DIVIDEND	$4.48	1B
HANCOCK SVRGN INVS CL A	47803P302	12/12/07	12/17/07	QUALIFIED DIVIDEND	$6.38	1B
TOTAL DIVIDENDS					$20.86
HANCOCK SVRGN INVS CL A	47803P302		12/17/07	CAPITAL GAIN	$194.80	2A
TOTAL CAPITAL GAINS DISTRIBUTIONS					$194.80

WEDBUSH MORGAN SECURITIES
Investment Bankers for Entrepreneurs
1000 WILSHIRE BLVD., SUITE 855
LOS ANGELES, CA 90017
www.wedbush.com
Phone: (213) 688-3000

1099-CONSOLIDATED TAX STATEMENT
Tax Year 2007 Copy B For Recipient

Department of the Treasury - Internal Revenue Service
(Keep for your records)

FEDERAL ID NUMBER: 95-2495390

TAXPAYER ID NUMBER: [redacted]
ACCOUNT NUMBER: CGMH 2451-6117

This section lists non-federally reported activity, which may be useful in helping you prepare your tax return. This activity may or may not be taxable at the state or local level and will NOT be furnished to the Internal Revenue Service. Please review this information with your tax advisor.

BOX	NON-FEDERALLY REPORTED ACTIVITY TOTALS FOR TAX YEAR 2007
1.	MARGIN INTEREST	$0.00
2.	OID EXEMPT MUNICIPAL INTEREST	$0.00
4.	RETURN OF CAPITAL OR PRINCIPAL	$0.00
5.	OID INCOME SUBJECT TO ALT MIN TAX	$0.00
7.	EXEMPT UIT INVESTMENT EXPENSES	$0.00
8.	PARTNERSHIP (MLP) DISTRIBUTIONS	$0.00
9.	ACCRUED INTEREST ON PURCHASES	$0.00
10.	PURCHASES	$215.66
11.	OPTION TRANSACTIONS	$0.00

PURCHASES

DESCRIPTION	CUSIP	DATE	ACTIVITY	QUANTITY	PRICE	AMOUNT	NOTES
HANCOCK SVRGN INVS CL A	47803P302	03/22/07	PURCHASE	0.23600	$0.0000	$4.42
HANCOCK SVRGN INVS CL A	47803P302	06/21/07	PURCHASE	0.27400	$0.0000	$5.58
HANCOCK SVRGN INVS CL A	47803P302	09/20/07	PURCHASE	0.21800	$0.0000	$4.48
HANCOCK SVRGN INVS CL A	47803P302	12/17/07	PURCHASE	0.34500	$0.0000	$6.38
COCK SVRGN INVS CL A	47803P302	12/17/07	PURCHASE	10.53000	$0.0000	$194.80
TOTAL PURCHASES						$215.66

JAN - 5 2009

Return Mail Processing Only
Not For Client Correspondence
P.O. Box 5275
Sioux Falls, SD 57117-5275

Retirement Account

AT 01 010851 69407H 42 A3DGT

WELLS FARGO BANK IRA C/F
OLGA B COOK
513 9TH AVE
FAIRBANKS AK 99701-4901

Financial Consultant: GK46

Contact Us At:
ROBERT BELL
301 W. NORTHERN LIGHTS BLVD.,
ANCHORAGE AK 99503
(907) 456-8918
24 Hour Assistance: (866) 281-7436

Last Statement Date:
October 31, 2008

Account Number:
W20977829

See Page 2 for important messages about your account. You may also review your account information online at http://www.wellsfargo.com. Ask us for more details.

Portfolio Summary

November 1, 2008 - November 30, 2008		Current Value	Previous Value
87 %	Cash, Cash Sweep & Money Mkt Fds	$16,473.32	$16,428.95
13 %	Stocks	2,436.66	2,408.54
Total Portfolio Value		$18,909.98	$18,837.49

Year to Date Change in Assets

Total Asset Value as of November 30, 2008	$18,909.98
Total Asset Value as of December 31, 2007	19,463.92
Net Change	($553.94)

Income Summary

	November 30, 2008	Year to Date
Wells Fargo Cash Sweep - FDIC	$0.02	$0.17
Taxable Money Market Funds	22.85	341.20
Equity Securities & Mutual Funds	21.50	99.84
Total Income	$44.37	$441.21

Investment and Insurance Products:
- Are NOT insured by the FDIC or any other federal government agency
- Are NOT deposits of or guaranteed by the Bank or any Bank Affiliate
- May Lose Value

Wells Fargo Investments, LLC (Member SIPC), a non-bank affiliate of Wells Fargo & Company. Wells Fargo Cash Sweep is held at Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., a bank affiliate of Wells Fargo & Company, and is FDIC-insured up to applicable limits and is Not SIPC covered. Precious metals are not SIPC covered or FDIC insured.

WELLS FARGO

1. This statement is provided to clients of Wells Fargo Investments, LLC ("WFI")(member SIPC). All orders and transactions shall be solely for your account and risk, shall be subject to the constitution, rules, regulations, customs, usages, rulings and interpretations of the exchange or market and the clearing facility, if any, where the transactions are executed and/ or settled and to all applicable laws and regulations.

2. It is your responsibility to review your statement and promptly report any inaccuracy or discrepancy to us. Any oral communication must be confirmed to us in writing at the address on the front of your statement to protect your rights, including rights under the Securities Investor Protection Act. We will consider this account statement correct unless we receive written notice from you of a suspected error within 30 days of receipt.

3. Securities and other assets (except brokered certificates of deposit and Wells Fargo Cash Sweep) are Not FDIC Insured, May lose value and are Not bank guaranteed, but are protected against broker-dealer insolvency up to a value of $500,000 (limited to $100,000 for cash claims) by SIPC. Explanatory brochure available by calling 202-371-8300 or at www.sipc.org. Please refer to your Brokerage Account Agreement under the section titled Not FDIC Insured or contact us for further information. Please be aware that SIPC account protection features do not protect against investment losses. The Wells Fargo Cash Sweep is held at Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. and (along with brokered CDs) is FDIC-insured up to applicable limits. Please see the Disclosure Statement for Sweep Features for further information. Precious metals are not SIPC covered or FDIC insured.

4. If you maintain a margin account, this is a combined statement of your general account and of a special memorandum account maintained for you under Regulation T of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. The permanent record of the separate account as required by Regulation T is available for your inspection upon written request.

Free credit balances may be used in the conduct of WFI's business subject to applicable rules and regulations. Any free credit balance in your account is payable immediately on demand.

5. If you trade options in your account, you are responsible to inform WFI of any change in your investment objectives or financial situation. Exercise notices for option contracts are allocated among client's short positions pursuant to a procedure that selects those contracts from among customer short option positions including positions established on the date of assignment. All short options positions are liable for assignment at any time. Commissions and other charges incurred in connection with the execution of option transactions have been included in confirmations of these transactions previously furnished to you. A summary of this information will be furnished upon written request.

6. Taxable dividends and interest reported on this statement for retirement plan accounts are generally exempt from year-end government reporting. If earnings are taxable in the tax year received, you will receive a Form 1099 at year-end. The information is provided as a convenience only, and may vary from the year-end tax report. There is no representation regarding the taxability of earnings at the state or local levels.

7. A copy of the financial statements for WFI is available for personal inspection at its main offices in Minneapolis, Minnesota or a copy will be furnished upon written request.

8. Under the NASD Regulation's Public Disclosure Program, the NASDR provides certain information regarding the disciplinary history of broker/dealers and their associated persons. Such information can be obtained from the NASDR Public Disclosure Program hotline number (1-800-289-9999) or the NASDR web site (www.nasdr.com). An investor brochure that includes information describing the NASDR Public Disclosure Program will be furnished upon written request.

9. Payment for Order Flow: WFI may receive payment for order flow from various market centers, but payment for order flow is not a consideration for any routing decisions. Unless otherwise instructed, WFI routes equity orders taking into consideration, among other factors, the quality and speed of execution, price improvement statistics, liquidity enhancements, NASDAQ report cards, and T+1 reports. WFI uses compensation received from market centers to help offset costs associated with executing orders. Payment information on specific market centers can be found by selecting the Wells Fargo Investments Equity Order Routing Information link on the bottom of the Wells Fargo Brokerage web site at www.wellsfargo.com/investing/styles/ and clicking on the Material Aspects of the Relationship link next to each market center. Information on payments and/ or credits received in connection with a specific transaction will be furnished upon written request.

Notice of Availability of Order Routing Information: WFI prepares quarterly reports describing its order routing practices for non-directed orders routed to a particular venue for execution. These reports are publicly available through a link at the bottom of the Wells Fargo Brokerage web site, www.wellsfargo.com/investing/styles/. WFI will furnish a printed copy of the quarterly report upon written request. In addition, WFI will provide on request more detailed information relating to the routing of any order in the six months prior to the request.

10. Dividend reinvestment transactions were affected by WFI acting as agent. Additional information regarding these transactions will be furnished upon written request.

11. Open orders will remain in effect until executed or canceled by you or until the expiration date on the open order confirmation previously sent to you. Failure to cancel an open order may result in the transaction being executed for your account. WFI has no responsibility to cancel an open order at its own initiative.

12. The prices of securities displayed on your statement are derived from various sources, and in some cases may be higher or lower than the price you would actually receive in the market. For securities listed on an exchange or trading continually in an active marketplace, the price reflects market quotations at the close of your statement period. For certificates of deposit ("CDs"), the value shown reflects the market value of the CDs. The actual value of the CDs may be different from their purchase price. CDs held until maturity are redeemed by the issuer at their face value. If CDs are sold prior to maturity, the result could be a significant loss of principal. The secondary market for CDs may be limited. The maturity value of CDs can be found under the "Quantity" section. If the CD market value listed appears as 'N/A', the market value was not available at the time this statement was prepared. Please note that any unpriced positions are not reflected in the total account value reported on this statement. For bonds trading less frequently, we generally rely on outside pricing services or a computerized pricing model which cannot always give us actual market values. Similarly, some annuity values provided by outside carriers may be estimates.

If we cannot obtain a price or estimate, "N/A" appears. Direct Participation Program (DPP) and Real Estate Investment Trust (REIT) securities are generally illiquid; the value of the security will be different than its purchase price.

13. In the event of a partial CALL of corporate or municipal bonds, or preferred stock held in bulk segregation, the securities to be called will automatically be selected on a random basis, as is customary in the securities industry. The probability that your securities will be selected is proportional to the amount of your holdings relative to the total holdings. A detailed description of the random selection procedure is available upon written request.

14. All information provided with respect to cost basis is derived from transactions in the account or information supplied by you or other sources. There is no guarantee as to the accuracy of cost basis information or the profit and loss information provided. Accordingly cost basis information is not intended for tax reporting purposes. Please inform us in the event that a cost basis is not accurate.

Reported gains and losses are based on a tax lot basis and are not based on an average cost. This information should not be used for tax purposes.

15. The information provided in this statement is for informational purposes only and should not be used for tax preparation. This information is not intended and should not be construed as tax, accounting or legal advice. Please consult your tax advisor regarding the tax consequences of your investment decisions.

When reporting your taxes please rely exclusively on Form 1099 and other tax reporting forms that WFI will provide to you at year-end.

16. Complaints should be directed to the Branch Office Manager. If you are unable to reach the Branch Office Manager, complaints may be directed to Wells Fargo Investments, Attn: Compliance Department, P.O. Box 7898, San Francisco, CA, 94120-9816 or by calling 866-415-6982.

17. For a change of address, please send your request to WFI at the address shown on the front of this statement.

WFI / WT REV. 10/08 v.09

WELLS FARGO

WELLS FARGO BANK IRA C/F
OLGA B COOK

Account number: W20977829
Financial Consultant: ROBERT BELL
Phone Number: (907) 456-8918

JAN - 5 2009

Activity Summary

	Amount
Total Asset Value as of October 31, 2008	$18,837.49
Cash/Cash Sweep/Money Mkt Fds Activity for November
Closing Balance as of 10/31/2008	16,428.95
Income	44.37
Closing Balance as of 11/30/2008	$16,473.32

Important Information About Your Account

Focus on Year-End Planning Guide
Now is the time to start thinking about your financial strategies for year end and beyond. Our Focus on Year-End Planning: Guide for Investors covers broad investment trends you should be thinking about, as well as some short-term tax-planning steps to take before year-end. Contact a Wells Fargo Investment Professional for your complimentary copy today.

Bring 2009 into Focus
Concerned about recent volatility? Log on to wellsfargo.com/focus2009 to view our exclusive Focus 2009 Economic Outlook webcast with Wells Fargo Bank Chief Investment Officer Dean Junkans. Gain perspective on market volatility and how you should position your portfolio for the year ahead. After watching the webcast, contact your Wells Fargo Investments Professional to review your overall financial situation.

Portfolio Value

CASH, CASH SWEEP & MONEY MKT FDS 87%

Quantity	Description	Market Price	Market Value	Estimated Annual Income
	WELLS FARGO CASH SWEEP FDIC INSURED Average Yield: .17%		$152.32
16,321.00	WF ADVANTAGE MONEY MARKET FD CL A 30 Day Yield: 1.71%	1.00	16,321.00	279
	Cash, Cash Sweep & Money Mkt Fds Subtotal		$16,473.32	$279

STOCKS 13%

Quantity	Description	Symbol	Market Price	Long/ Short	Market Value	Estimated Annual Income
200	ASSOCIATES FIRST CAP CORP RESIDUAL VALUE OBLG	ASFZ	$0.0002	Long	$0.04
11	EDEN BIOSCIENCE CORP	EDEN	0.87	Long	9.57

WELLS FARGO

WELLS FARGO BANK IRA C/F
OLGA B COOK

Account number: W20977829
Financial Consultant: ROBERT BELL
Phone Number: (907) 456-8918

Portfolio Value (continued)

STOCKS (continued) 13%

Quantity	Description	Symbol	Market Price	Long/ Short	Market Value	Estimated Annual Income
200	LTV CORP NEW	LTVCQ	0.001	Long	0.20
86	PUGET ENERGY INC NEW	PSD	24.48	Long	2,105.28	86
27	SUPERVALU INC	SVU	11.91	Long	321.57	18
	Stocks Subtotal				$2,436.66	$104

	Total Market Value	Total Estimated Annual Income
TOTAL PORTFOLIO VALUE	$18,909.98	$383

Activity Details

PURCHASES AND SALES & SWEEPS

SETTLED TRADES & SWEEPS

Trade Date	As Of Date	Description	Symbol/ CUSIP	Settle Date	Activity	Accrued Interest	Quantity	Price	Amount
11/18/08	11/18/08	WELLS FARGO CASH SWEEP FDIC INSURED	09999361	11/18/08	SWEEP				($21.50)
11/28/08	11/28/08	WELLS FARGO CASH SWEEP FDIC INSURED	09999361	11/28/08	REINVEST INT				(0.02)
11/28/08	11/28/08	WF ADVANTAGE MONEY MARKET FD CL A	09999752	11/28/08	REINVEST DIV				(22.85)
	TOTAL								($44.37)

INCOME

WELLS FARGO CASH SWEEP & MONEY MARKET FUNDS

Date	Description		Activity	Amount
11/28/08	WELLS FARGO CASH SWEEP .17% 30 DAY AVG. YIELD	FDIC INSURED PERIOD ENDING 11/30/08	INTEREST	$0.02
11/28/08	WF ADVANTAGE MONEY	MARKET FD CL A	DIVIDEND	22.85
	TOTAL			$22.87

WELLS FARGO

WELLS FARGO BANK IRA C/F
OLGA B COOK

Account number: W20977829
Financial Consultant: ROBERT BELL
Phone Number: (907) 456-8918

JAN - 5 2009

Activity Details (continued)

INCOME (continued)

STOCKS

Date	Description	Activity	Amount
11/17/08	PUGET ENERGY INC NEW	DIVIDEND	$21.50
	TOTAL		$21.50

Cash Flow Analysis

CHRONOLOGICAL TRANSACTION SUMMARY

Date	As Of Date	Description	Activity	Quantity	Price	Debit	Credit	Balance
		Beginning Cash Balance						$0.00
11/17/08	11/15/08	PUGET ENERGY INC NEW	DIVIDEND				$21.50	$21.50
11/18/08	11/18/08	WELLS FARGO CASH SWEEP	SWEEP			(21.50)		0.00
11/28/08	11/28/08	WELLS FARGO CASH SWEEP	INTEREST				0.02	0.02
11/28/08	11/28/08	WELLS FARGO CASH SWEEP	REINVEST INT			(0.02)		0.00
11/28/08	11/28/08	WF ADVANTAGE MONEY	DIVIDEND				22.85	22.85
11/28/08	11/28/08	WF ADVANTAGE MONEY	REINVEST DIV			(22.85)		0.00
		Ending Cash Balance						$0.00

IRA Account Summary & Beneficiary Designation

	Current Tax Year	Previous Tax Year
Contributions	$0.00	N/A
Distributions	$0.00	N/A
Rollovers	$0.00	N/A
Tax Withheld	$0.00	N/A
12/31/07 Fair Market Value:		N/A

According to our records, you have designated the following beneficiaries for your retirement account. This section is provided for your informational purposes only, and reflects the latest entry in our system as of the date this statement was produced. At the time of death, assets will be dispersed based upon the latest written designation on file. If this information is incorrect or incomplete please call your financial consultant.

Primary Beneficiary (ies)	Relationship	Percentage
Not available - please provide

Contingent Beneficiary (ies)	Relationship	Percentage
None

71

GunnAllen Financial
5002 W. Waters Ave.
Tampa, FL 33634-1313
Phone: 800.889.2914

Individual Retirement Account Statement

JAN - 5 2009

* 00110872 01 AT 0.346 TR 00388 X111PD08 000000

IRA FBO DENNIS E COOK
PERSHING LLC AS CUSTODIAN
431 BIRCH HILL ROAD
FAIRBANKS AK 99712-1621

Account Number: 0CK-908899
Statement Period: 10/01/2008 - 10/31/2008

Valuation at a Glance

	This Period
Beginning Account Value	$21,237.62
Dividends/Interest	192.54
Change in Account Value	-5,065.84
Ending Account Value	$16,364.32
Estimated Annual Income	$814.73

Your Registered Representative:
K. BRISARD / P. BRISARD
(212) 618-1834

FDIC insured bank deposits are not securities, are not held by Pershing LLC, and are not covered by the Securities Investor Protection Corporation. These bank deposits are covered by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Asset Allocation

	Value Last Period	Value This Period	Percent Allocation
Cash, Money Funds, and FDIC Deposits[1]	943.04	1,135.58	7%
Equities	4,720.58	4,874.04	30%
Mutual Funds	9,790.00	6,574.70	40%
Exchange-Traded Products	5,784.00	3,780.00	23%
Account Total (Pie Chart)	$21,237.62	$16,364.32	100%

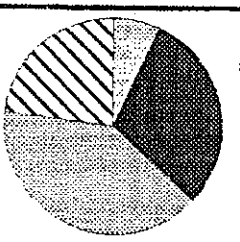
1 Includes FDIC insured bank deposits.



Asset Allocation percentages are rounded to the nearest whole percentage.

Pie Chart allocation excludes all asset classes which net to a liability.

DALBAR RATED FOR COMMUNICATION

Clearing Through Pershing LLC, a subsidiary of The Bank of New York Mellon Corporation
Member FINRA, NYSE, SIPC

Summary of Gains and Losses

	Realized		Unrealized
	This Period	Year-to-Date	This Period
Short-Term Gain/Loss	0.00	-6,731.89	-9,978.31
Net Gain/Loss	0.00	-6,731.89	-9,978.31

This summary excludes transactions where cost basis information is not available.

Customer Service Information

Your Registered Representative: BCB

:RISARD / P. BRISARD
20TH FL
14 WALL ST
NEW YORK NY 10005-2123

Contact Information

Telephone Number: (212) 618-1834

Customer Service Information

Service Hours: Weekdays 08:30 a.m. - 05:30 p.m. EST
Customer Service Telephone Number: (800) 889-2914
Web Site: www.gunnallen.com

Investment Objective: SHORT TERM GROWTH

If you have any questions concerning your investment objective or wish to make a change, please contact Your Registered Representative.

Prior Year-End Fair Market Value: $35,640.15 will be furnished to the Internal Revenue Service.

Portfolio Holdings

Quantity	Opening Date	Account Number	Activity Ending	Opening Balance	Closing Balance	Accrued Income	Income This Year	30-Day Yield	Current Yield
Cash, Money Funds, and FDIC Deposits 7.00% of Portfolio
FDIC Insured Bank Deposits
SERVE INSURED DEPOSITS
1,135.580	10/01/08	0CK908899	10/31/08	943.04	1,135.58	0.02	5.35	N/A	0.00%
Total FDIC Insured Bank Deposits				$943.04	$1,135.58	$0.02	$5.35
Total Cash, Money Funds, and FDIC Deposits				$943.04	$1,135.58	$0.02	$5.35

Clearing Through Pershing LLC, a subsidiary of The Bank of New York Mellon Corporation
Member FINRA, NYSE, SIPC

GunnAllen Financial
5002 W. Waters Ave.
Tampa, FL 33634-1313
Phone: 800.889.2914

Individual Retirement Account Statement

JAN - 5 2009

Statement Period: 10/01/2008 - 10/31/2008

Portfolio Holdings (continued)

Quantity	Acquisition Date	Unit Cost	Cost Basis	Market Price	Market Value	Unrealized Gain/Loss	Estimated Annual Income	Estimated Yield
Equities 30.00% of Portfolio
Common Stocks
)EN BIOSCIENCE CORP COM PAR
Dividend Option: Cash
Security Identifier: EDEN
11.000	Please Provide	N/A	Please Provide	0.8200	9.02	N/A
SLTV CORP NEW NO STOCKHOLDERS
EQUITY 12/07/01
Dividend Option: Cash
Security Identifier: LTVCQ
200.000	Please Provide	N/A	Please Provide	0.0001	0.02	N/A
Total Common Stocks			$0.00		$9.04	$0.00	$0.00
Real Estate Investment Trusts
ANNALY CAP MANAGEMENT INC
Dividend Option: Cash
Security Identifier: NLY
350.000	02/08/08	20.8070	7,282.49	13.9000	4,865.00	-2,417.49	770.00	15.82%
Total Real Estate Investment Trusts			$7,282.49		$4,865.00	-$2,417.49	$770.00
Total Equities			$7,282.49		$4,874.04	-$2,417.49	$770.00

Quantity	Acquisition Date	Unit Cost	Cost Basis	Market Price	Market Value	Unrealized Gain/Loss	Estimated Annual Income	Estimated Yield
Mutual Funds 40.00% of Portfolio
Mutual Funds
SLATIN AMERICAN DISCOVERY FUND INC
Closed End Fund
Security Identifier: LDF
Dividend Option: Cash
400.000	Please Provide	N/A	Please Provide	11.9540	4,781.60	N/A	12.64	0.26%

Portfolio Holdings (continued)

Quantity	Acquisition Date	Unit Cost	Cost Basis	Market Price	Market Value	Unrealized Gain/Loss	Estimated Annual Income	Estimated Yield
Mutual Funds (continued)
Mutual Funds (continued)
LATIN AMERICAN DISCOVERY FUND INC (continued)
150.000	07/31/08	25.7530	3,863.00	11.9540	1,793.10	-2,069.90	4.74	0.26%
550.000	Total		$3,863.00		$6,574.70	-$2,069.90	$17.38
Total Mutual Funds			$3,863.00		$6,574.70	-$2,069.90	$17.38
Total Mutual Funds			$3,863.00		$6,574.70	-$2,069.90	$17.38

Quantity	Acquisition Date	Unit Cost	Cost Basis	Market Price	Market Value	Unrealized Gain/Loss	Estimated Annual Income	Estimated Yield
Exchange-Traded Products 23.00% of Portfolio
Exchange-Traded Products
MARKET VECTORS RUSSIA ETF TR SHS
BEN INT
Security Identifier: RSX
Dividend Option: Cash
200.000	01/31/08	46.3550	9,270.92	18.9000	3,780.00	-5,490.92	22.00	0.58%
Total Exchange-Traded Products			$9,270.92		$3,780.00	-$5,490.92	$22.00
Total Exchange-Traded Products			$9,270.92		$3,780.00	-$5,490.92	$22.00

	Cost Basis	Market Value	Unrealized Gain/Loss	Accrued Interest	Estimated Annual Income
Total Portfolio Holdings	$21,551.99	$16,364.32	-$9,978.31	$0.00	$814.73

[5] Unrealized gains and losses are not reported for securities for which cost basis or market value is not available.

The values, where indicated, of real estate investment trusts (REITs) and direct participation programs (DPPs), including limited partnerships, have been provided by the REITs or DPPs, generally through an intermediary. The values are not guaranteed and are intended to reflect an estimate of the interest in the REIT or DPP represented by the units or shares described above. REIT and DPP securities are generally illiquid, and the value may not be realized when you seek to liquidate the security. Where no value is indicated, please note that:

- REIT or DPP securities are generally illiquid
- The value of the security may be different from its purchase price
- Accurate valuation information is not available.

Please note the values for DPPs and REITs which are provided by the REITs and DPPs may not reflect recent activity and do not reflect an independent evaluation of the REIT or DPP.

Disclosures and Other Information

GunnAllen Financial
5002 W. Waters Ave.
Tampa, FL 33634-1313
Phone: 800.889.2914

Individual Retirement Account Statement

JAN - 5 2009

Statement Period: 10/01/2008 - 10/31/2008

Portfolio Holdings (continued)

Pricing - Securities prices may vary from actual liquidation value. Prices shown should only be used as a general guide to portfolio value. Prices are received from various pricing services. However, pricing services are sometimes unable to provide timely information. Where pricing sources are not readily available, particularly on certain debt securities, estimated prices may be generated by a matrix system taking various factors into consideration. The pricing of listed options takes into account the last closing price, as well as the current bid and offer prices. Where securities have not been priced, such securities have not been included in the Asset Allocation information at the beginning of this statement.

Investment - The dollar amount of Mutual Fund distributions, Money Market Fund dividend income, Bank Deposit interest income, or dividends for other securities shown on your Statement may have been reinvested. You will not receive confirmation of these reinvestments. However, information pertaining to these transactions which would otherwise appear on confirmations, including the time of execution and the name of the person from whom your security was purchased, will be furnished to you upon written request to your introducing firm. In dividend reinvestment transactions, Pershing acts as your agent and receives payment for order flow, the source and nature of which payment will be furnished to you upon written request to your introducing firm.

Option Disclosure - Information with respect to commissions and other charges incurred in connection with the execution of option transactions has been included in confirmations previously furnished to you. A summary of this information is available to you promptly upon your written request directed to your introducing firm. In order to assist your introducing firm in maintaining current background and financial information concerning your option accounts, please promptly advise them in writing of any material change in your investment objectives or financial situation. Expiring options which are valuable are exercised automatically pursuant to the exercise by exception procedure of the Options Clearing Corporation. Additional information regarding this procedure is available upon written request to your introducing firm.

Foreign Currency Transactions - Pershing may execute foreign currency transactions as principal for your account. Pershing may automatically convert foreign currency to or from U.S. dollars for dividends and similar corporate action transactions unless you instruct your financial organization otherwise. Pershing's currency conversion rate will not exceed the highest interbank conversion rate identified from customary banking sources on the conversion date or the prior business day, increased by up to 1%, unless a particular rate is required by applicable law. Your financial organization may also increase the currency conversion rate. This conversion rate may differ from rates in effect on the date you executed a transaction, incurred a charge, or received a credit. Transactions converted by agents (such as depositories) will be billed at the rates such agents use.

Proxy Vote - Securities held by you on margin (securities not fully paid for by you) may be lent by Pershing to itself or others in accordance with the terms outlined in the Margin Agreement. The right to vote your shares held on margin will be reduced by the amount of shares on loan. The Proxy Voting Instruction Form sent to you may reflect a smaller number of shares entitled to vote than the number of shares in your margin account.

Exchange-Traded Products - Exchange-traded products may include any combination of exchange-traded funds, exchange-traded notes, and other exchange-traded products.

Transactions in Date Sequence

Process/ Settlement Date	Trade/ Transaction Date	Activity Type	Description	Quantity	Price	Accrued Interest	Amount
10/17/08	10/16/08	MONEY MARKET INTEREST REINVESTED	RESERVE INS DEPOSITS INTEREST REINVESTED				-0.04
10/17/08	10/16/08	MONEY MARKET FUND INTEREST RECEIVED	RESERVE INS DEPOSITS INTEREST CREDITED				0.04

Transactions in Date Sequence (continued)

Process/ Settlement Date	Trade/ Transaction Date	Activity Type	Description	Quantity	Price	Accrued Interest	Amount
10/29/08		CASH DIVIDEND RECEIVED	350 SHRS ANNALY CAP MANAGEMENT INC RD 09/18 PD 10/29/08				192.50
10/30/08		MONEY MARKET DEPOSIT	RESERVE INS DEPOSITS				-192.50

Transactions Summary	Total Amount	Currency
UNITED STATES DOLLAR	0.00	USD

The price and quantity displayed may have been rounded.

FDIC Insured Bank Deposits

Date	Activity Type	Description	Amount	Balance
Sweep FDIC Insured Bank Deposits
RESERVE INSURED DEPOSITS
Account Number: 0CK908899	Activity Ending: 10/31/08
10/01/08	Opening Balance
10/15/08	Deposit	INTEREST CREDITED	943.04	943.04
10/16/08		YIELD .05%	0.04	943.08
'16/08		STILLWATER NATL BANK		943.08
../16/08		A/O 10/16 $943.08		943.08
10/30/08	Deposit	DEPOSIT	192.50	1,135.58
10/31/08	Closing Balance			$1,135.58
Total FDIC Insured Bank Deposits				$1,135.58

The FDIC Insured Bank Deposits are not securities and are not covered by the Securities Investor Protection Corporation (SIPC). The Bank Deposits at each bank are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) up to $100,000 for each category of legal ownership and $250,000 for each individual retirement account and certain other self directed retirement accounts. Please review this in connection with other deposits you may have at each respective bank.

GunnAllen Financial
5002 W. Waters Ave.
Tampa, FL 33634-1313
Phone: 800.889.2914

Individual Retirement Account Statement

Statement Period: 10/01/2008 - 10/31/2008

Income and Expense Summary

	Current Period Tax Deferred	Year-to-Date Tax Deferred
Dividend Income
Equities	192.50	755.92
Interest Income
FDIC Insured Bank Deposits	0.04	5.35
Total Dividends, Interest, Income and Expenses	$192.54	$761.27
Distributions
Long - Term Capital Gain Distributions	0.00	2,878.12
Short - Term Capital Gain Distributions	0.00	451.64
Total Distributions	$0.00	$3,329.76

Messages

Although a money market mutual fund seeks to preserve the value of your investment at $1.00 per share, it is possible to lose money by investing in a money market mutual fund. Please see the money market mutual fund's prospectus or contact your investment professional for additional information.

FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION (FDIC)-INSURED BANK DEPOSITS ARE NOT PROTECTED BY SECURITIES INVESTOR PROTECTION CORPORATION (SIPC).

YOU MAY VIEW CURRENT MONEY MARKET FUND RATES BY VISITING WWW.PERSHING.COM AND SELECTING THE LINK AT THE BOTTOM OF THE PAGE TITLED "MONEY MARKET FUND AND FDIC INSURED BANK RATES AND BANK LISTS." PLEASE NOTE THAT WE MAY NOT OFFER ALL OF THE MONEY MARKET FUNDS LISTED ON THE PERSHING WEBSITE.

Clarity is the cornerstone of trust between investors and their financial representative. Please visit www.gunnallen.com and read our "Investor's Bill of Rights."

A0030322CSE11LDP

DALBAR RATED FOR COMMUNICATION

Account Number: 0CK-908899
IRA FBO DENNIS E COOK

PAR-02-ROLL

Clearing Through Pershing LLC, a subsidiary of The Bank of New York Mellon Corporation
Member FINRA, NYSE, SIPC

JAN - 5 2009

78

GunnAllen Financial
5002 W. Waters Ave.
Tampa, FL 33634-1313
Phone: 800.889.2914

Brokerage
Account Statement

JAN - 5 2009

* 00110685 01 AT 0.346 TR 00388 X111PD08 000000

DENNIS E COOK
714 4TH AVE STE 200
FAIRBANKS AK 99701-4470

Account Number: 0DA-011636
Statement Period: 10/01/2008 - 10/31/2008

Your Registered Representative:
K. BRISARD / P. BRISARD
(212) 618-1834

Valuation at a Glance

	This Period
Beginning Account Value	$19,591.48
Dividends/Interest	330.00
Change in Account Value	-2,454.00
Ending Account Value	$17,467.48
Estimated Annual Income	$1,320.00

Asset Allocation

	Value Last Period	Value This Period	Percent Allocation
Cash, Money Funds, and FDIC Deposits	1,745.48	2,075.48	12%
Equities	17,846.00	15,392.00	88%
Account Total (Pie Chart)	$19,591.48	$17,467.48	100%

Asset Allocation percentages are rounded to the nearest whole percentage.

Pie Chart allocation excludes all asset classes which net to a liability.

DALBAR RATED FOR COMMUNICATION

Clearing Through Pershing LLC, a subsidiary of The Bank of New York Mellon Corporation
Member FINRA, NYSE, SIPC

Summary of Gains and Losses

	Realized		Unrealized
	This Period	Year-to-Date	This Period
Short-Term Gain/Loss	0.00	0.00	-3,833.98
Long-Term Gain/Loss	0.00	0.00	-3,727.96
Net Gain/Loss	0.00	0.00	-7,561.94

This summary excludes transactions where cost basis information is not available.

Customer Service Information

Your Registered Representative: BCB

K. BRISARD / P. BRISARD
20TH FL
14 WALL ST
NEW YORK NY 10005-2123

Investment Objective: None Specified

Contact Information

Telephone Number: (212) 618-1834

Customer Service Information

Service Hours: Weekdays 08:30 a.m. - 05:30 p.m. EST
Customer Service Telephone Number: (800) 889-2914
Web Site: www.gunnallen.com

Please discuss your investment objective with Your Registered Representative.

Portfolio Holdings

Quantity	Opening Date	Account Number	Activity Ending	Opening Balance	Closing Balance	Accrued Income	Income This Year	30-Day Yield	Current Yield
Cash, Money Funds, and FDIC Deposits 12.00% of Portfolio
Cash Balance				1,745.48	2,075.48
Total Cash, Money Funds, and FDIC Deposits				$1,745.48	$2,075.48	$0.00	$0.00

Quantity	Acquisition Date	Unit Cost	Cost Basis	Market Price	Market Value	Unrealized Gain/Loss	Estimated Annual Income	Estimated Yield
Equities 88.00% of Portfolio
Common Stocks
AECOM TECHNOLOGY CORP COM
Dividend Option: Cash
Security Identifier: ACM
400.000	07/12/07	26.9500	10,779.96	17.6300	7,052.00	-3,727.96
Total Common Stocks			$10,779.96		$7,052.00	-$3,727.96	$0.00

Clearing Through Pershing LLC, a subsidiary of The Bank of New York Mellon Corporation
Member FINRA, NYSE, SIPC

GunnAllen Financial
5002 W. Waters Ave.
Tampa, FL 33634-1313
Phone: 800.889.2914

Brokerage Account Statement

Statement Period: 10/01/2008 - 10/31/2008

JAN - 5 2009

Portfolio Holdings (continued)

Quantity	Acquisition Date	Unit Cost	Cost Basis	Market Price	Market Value	Unrealized Gain/Loss	Estimated Annual Income	Estimated Yield
Equities (continued)
Real Estate Investment Trusts
VALY CAP MANAGEMENT INC
Dividend Option: Cash
Security Identifier: NLY
600.000	02/04/08	20.2900	12,173.98	13.9000	8,340.00	-3,833.98	1,320.00	15.82%
Total Real Estate Investment Trusts			$12,173.98		$8,340.00	-$3,833.98	$1,320.00
Total Equities			$22,953.94		$15,392.00	-$7,561.94	$1,320.00

	Cost Basis	Market Value	Unrealized Gain/Loss	Accrued Interest	Estimated Annual Income
Total Portfolio Holdings	$25,029.42	$17,467.48	-$7,561.94	$0.00	$1,320.00

[3] The cost basis of securities positions acquired prior to the availability of the PORTFOLIO EVALUATION SERVICE for this account, or delivered into this account, has been provided to PERSHING by your financial institution, and we make no representation as to the accuracy of such cost basis.

The values, where indicated, of real estate investment trusts (REITs) and direct participation programs (DPPs), including limited partnerships, have been provided by the REITs or DPPs, generally through an intermediary. The values are not guaranteed and are intended to reflect an estimate of the interest in the REIT or DPP represented by the units or shares described above. REIT and DPP securities are generally illiquid, and the value may not be realized when you seek to liquidate the security. Where no value is indicated, please note that:

- REIT or DPP securities are generally illiquid
- The value of the security may be different from its purchase price
- Accurate valuation information is not available.

Please note the values for DPPs and REITs which are provided by the REITs and DPPs may not reflect recent activity and do not reflect an independent evaluation of the REIT or DPP.

Disclosures and Other Information

Pricing - Securities prices may vary from actual liquidation value. Prices shown should only be used as a general guide to portfolio value. Prices are received from various pricing services. However, pricing services are sometimes unable to provide timely information. Where pricing sources are not readily available, particularly on certain debt securities, estimated prices may be generated by a matrix system taking various factors into consideration. The pricing of listed options takes into account the last closing price, as well as the current bid and offer prices. Where securities have not been priced, such securities have not been included in the Asset Allocation information at the beginning of this statement.

Portfolio Holdings (continued)

Reinvestment - The dollar amount of Mutual Fund distributions, Money Market Fund dividend income, Bank Deposit interest income, or dividends for other securities shown on your Statement may have been reinvested. You will not receive confirmation of these reinvestments. However, information pertaining to these transactions which would otherwise appear on confirmations, including the time of execution and the name of the person from whom your security was purchased, will be furnished to you upon written request to your introducing firm. In dividend reinvestment transactions, Pershing acts as your agent and receives payment for order flow, the source and nature of which payment will be furnished to you upon written request to your introducing firm.

Option Disclosure - Information with respect to commissions and other charges incurred in connection with the execution of option transactions has been included in confirmations previously furnished to you. A summary of this information is available to you promptly upon your written request directed to your introducing firm. In order to assist your introducing firm in maintaining current background and financial information concerning your option accounts, please promptly advise them in writing of any material change in your investment objectives or financial situation. Expiring options which are valuable are exercised automatically pursuant to the exercise by exception procedure of the Options Clearing Corporation. Additional information regarding this procedure is available upon written request to your introducing firm.

Foreign Currency Transactions - Pershing may execute foreign currency transactions as principal for your account. Pershing may automatically convert foreign currency to or from U.S. dollars for dividends and similar corporate action transactions unless you instruct your financial organization otherwise. Pershing's currency conversion rate will not exceed the highest interbank conversion rate identified from customary king sources on the conversion date or the prior business day, increased by up to 1%, unless a particular rate is required by applicable law. Your financial organization may also increase the currency conversion rate. This conversion rate may differ from rates in effect on the date you executed a transaction, incurred a charge, or received a credit. Transactions converted by agents (such as depositories) will be billed at the rates such agents use.

Proxy Vote - Securities held by you on margin (securities not fully paid for by you) may be lent by Pershing to itself or others in accordance with the terms outlined in the Margin Agreement. The right to vote your shares held on margin will be reduced by the amount of shares on loan. The Proxy Voting Instruction Form sent to you may reflect a smaller number of shares entitled to vote than the number of shares in your margin account.

Transactions in Date Sequence

Process/ Settlement Date	Activity Type	Description	Quantity	Price	Accrued Interest	Amount
10/29/08	CASH DIVIDEND RECEIVED	600 SHRS ANNALY CAP MANAGEMENT INC RD 09/18 PD 10/29/08				330.00

Transactions Summary	Total Amount	Currency
UNITED STATES DOLLAR	330.00	USD

The price and quantity displayed may have been rounded.

Income and Expense Summary

	Current Period		Year-to-Date
	Taxable	Non Taxable	Taxable	Non Taxable
Dividend Income
Equities	330.00	0.00	948.00	0.00

GunnAllen Financial
5002 W. Waters Ave.
Tampa, FL 33634-1313
Phone: 800.889.2914

Brokerage
Account Statement

JAN - 5 2009

Statement Period: 10/01/2008 - 10/31/2008

Income and Expense Summary (continued)

	Current Period		Year-to-Date
	Taxable	Non Taxable	Taxable	Non Taxable
Interest Income
Credit Interest	0.00	0.00	7.58	0.00
Total Dividends, Interest, Income and Expenses	$330.00	$0.00	$955.58	$0.00

Messages

Although a money market mutual fund seeks to preserve the value of your investment at $1.00 per share, it is possible to lose money by investing in a money market mutual fund. Please see the money market mutual fund's prospectus or contact your investment professional for additional information.

Clarity is the cornerstone of trust between investors and their financial representative. Please visit www.gunnallen.com and read our "Investor's Bill of Rights."

A0030391CSF111DP
DALBAR RATED FOR COMMUNICATION
Account Number: 0DA-011636
DENNIS E COOK
PAR-02-ROLL
Clearing Through Pershing LLC, a subsidiary of The Bank of New York Mellon Corporation
Member FINRA, NYSE, SIPC

GunnAllen Financial
5002 W. Waters Ave.
Tampa, FL 33634-1313
Phone: 800.889.2914

Brokerage
Account Statement

JAN - 5 2009

* 00041345 02 MB 0.494 TR 00215 X220WD04 100000

Account Number: 0DA-011636
Statement Period: 08/01/2008 - 09/30/2008

DENNIS E COOK
714 4TH AVE STE 200
FAIRBANKS AK 99701-4470

Your Registered Representative:
K. BRISARD / P. BRISARD
(212) 618-1834

Valuation at a Glance

	This Period
Beginning Account Value	$22,175.48
Change in Account Value	-2,584.00
Ending Account Value	$19,591.48
Estimated Annual Income	$1,320.00

Asset Allocation

	Value Last Period	Value This Period	Percent Allocation
Cash, Money Funds, and FDIC Deposits	1,745.48	1,745.48	9%
Equities	20,430.00	17,846.00	91%
Account Total (Pie Chart)	$22,175.48	$19,591.48	100%

Asset Allocation percentages are rounded to the nearest whole percentage.

Pie Chart allocation excludes all asset classes which net to a liability.

DALBAR RATED FOR COMMUNICATION

A01144G9CSF220D2

Clearing Through Pershing LLC, a subsidiary of The Bank of New York Mellon Corporation
Member FINRA, NYSE, SIPC

Summary of Gains and Losses

	Realized		Unrealized
	This Period	Year-to-Date	This Period
Short-Term Gain/Loss	0.00	0.00	-4,103.98
Long-Term Gain/Loss	0.00	0.00	-1,003.96
Net Gain/Loss	0.00	0.00	-5,107.94

This summary excludes transactions where cost basis information is not available.

Customer Service Information

...ar Registered Representative: BCB	Contact Information	Customer Service Information
K. BRISARD / P. BRISARD 20TH FL 14 WALL ST NEW YORK NY 10005-2123	Telephone Number: (212) 618-1834	Service Hours: Weekdays 08:30 a.m. - 05:30 p.m. EST Customer Service Telephone Number: (800) 889-2914 Web Site: www.gunnallen.com
Investment Objective: None Specified		Please discuss your investment objective with Your Registered Representative.

Portfolio Holdings

Quantity	Opening Date	Account Number	Activity Ending	Opening Balance	Closing Balance	Accrued Income	Income This Year	30-Day Yield	Current Yield
Cash, Money Funds, and FDIC Deposits 9.00% of Portfolio
Cash Balance				1,745.48	1,745.48
Total Cash, Money Funds, and FDIC Deposits				$1,745.48	$1,745.48	$0.00	$0.00

Quantity	Acquisition Date	Unit Cost	Cost Basis	Market Price	Market Value	Unrealized Gain/Loss	Estimated Annual Income	Estimated Yield
Equities 91.00% of Portfolio
Common Stocks
AECOM TECHNOLOGY CORP COM
Dividend Option: Cash
Security Identifier: ACM
400.000	07/12/07	26.9500	10,779.96	24.4400	9,776.00	-1,003.96
Total Common Stocks			$10,779.96		$9,776.00	-$1,003.96	$0.00

Clearing Through Pershing LLC, a subsidiary of The Bank of New York Mellon Corporation
Member FINRA, NYSE, SIPC

GunnAllen Financial
5002 W. Waters Ave.
Tampa, FL 33634-1313
Phone: 800.889.2914

Brokerage Account Statement

JAN - 5 2009

Statement Period: 08/01/2008 - 09/30/2008

Portfolio Holdings (continued)

Quantity	Acquisition Date	Unit Cost	Cost Basis	Market Price	Market Value	Unrealized Gain/Loss	Estimated Annual Income	Estimated Yield
Equities (continued)
Real Estate Investment Trusts
INALY CAP MANAGEMENT INC
Dividend Option: Cash
Security Identifier: NLY
600.000	02/04/08	20.2900	12,173.98	13.4500	8,070.00	-4,103.98	1,320.00	16.35%
Total Real Estate Investment Trusts			$12,173.98		$8,070.00	-$4,103.98	$1,320.00
Total Equities			$22,953.94		$17,846.00	-$5,107.94	$1,320.00

	Cost Basis	Market Value	Unrealized Gain/Loss	Accrued Interest	Estimated Annual Income
Total Portfolio Holdings	$24,699.42	$19,591.48	-$5,107.94	$0.00	$1,320.00

3 The cost basis of securities positions acquired prior to the availability of the PORTFOLIO EVALUATION SERVICE for this account, or delivered into this account, has been provided to PERSHING by your financial institution, and we make no representation as to the accuracy of such cost basis.

The values, where indicated, of real estate investment trusts (REITs) and direct participation programs (DPPs), including limited partnerships, have been provided by the REITs or DPPs, generally through an intermediary. The values are not guaranteed and are intended to reflect an estimate of the interest in the REIT or DPP represented by the units or shares described above. REIT and DPP securities are generally illiquid, and the value may not be realized when you seek to liquidate the security. Where no value is indicated, please note that:

- REIT or DPP securities are generally illiquid
- The value of the security may be different from its purchase price
- Accurate valuation information is not available.

Please note the values for DPPs and REITs which are provided by the REITs and DPPs may not reflect recent activity and do not reflect an independent evaluation of the REIT or DPP.

Disclosures and Other Information

Pricing - Securities prices may vary from actual liquidation value. Prices shown should only be used as a general guide to portfolio value. Prices are received from various pricing services. However, pricing services are sometimes unable to provide timely information. Where pricing sources are not readily available, particularly on certain debt securities, estimated prices may be generated by a matrix system taking various factors into consideration. The pricing of listed options takes into account the last closing price, as well as the current bid and offer prices. Where securities have not been priced, such securities have not been included in the Asset Allocation information at the beginning of this statement.

Portfolio Holdings (continued)

Reinvestment - The dollar amount of Mutual Fund distributions, Money Market Fund dividend income, Bank Deposit interest income, or dividends for other securities shown on your Statement may have been reinvested. You will not receive confirmation of these reinvestments. However, information pertaining to these transactions which would otherwise appear on confirmations, including the time of execution and the name of the person from whom your security was purchased, will be furnished to you upon written request to your introducing firm. In dividend reinvestment transactions, Pershing acts as your agent and receives payment for order flow, the source and nature of which payment will be furnished to you upon written request to your introducing firm.

Option Disclosure - Information with respect to commissions and other charges incurred in connection with the execution of option transactions has been included in confirmations previously furnished to you. A summary of this information is available to you promptly upon your written request directed to your introducing firm. In order to assist your introducing firm in maintaining current background and financial information concerning your option accounts, please promptly advise them in writing of any material change in your investment objectives or financial situation. Expiring options which are valuable are exercised automatically pursuant to the exercise by exception procedure of the Options Clearing Corporation. Additional information regarding this procedure is available upon written request to your introducing firm.

Foreign Currency Transactions - Pershing may execute foreign currency transactions as principal for your account. Pershing may automatically convert foreign currency to or from U.S. dollars for dividends and similar corporate action transactions unless you instruct your financial organization otherwise. Pershing's currency conversion rate will not exceed the highest interbank conversion rate identified from customary 'king sources on the conversion date or the prior business day, increased by up to 1%, unless a particular rate is required by applicable law. Your financial organization may also increase the currency conversion rate. This conversion rate may differ from rates in effect on the date you executed a transaction, incurred a charge, or received a credit. Transactions converted by agents (such as depositories) will be billed at the rates such agents use.

Proxy Vote - Securities held by you on margin (securities not fully paid for by you) may be lent by Pershing to itself or others in accordance with the terms outlined in the Margin Agreement. The right to vote your shares held on margin will be reduced by the amount of shares on loan. The Proxy Voting Instruction Form sent to you may reflect a smaller number of shares entitled to vote than the number of shares in your margin account.

Income and Expense Summary

	Current Period		Year-to-Date
	Taxable	Non Taxable	Taxable	Non Taxable
Dividend Income
Equities	0.00	0.00	618.00	0.00
Interest Income
Credit Interest	0.00	0.00	7.58	0.00
Total Dividends, Interest, Income and Expenses	$0.00	$0.00	$625.58	$0.00

Messages

SEMI-ANNUAL STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL CONDITION

Pursuant to The Securities Exchange Act of 1934, Pershing LLC (Pershing) provides individual investors with certain financial information on a semi-annual basis.

Pershing's June Statement of Financial Condition is now available, and on June 30, 2008, Pershing's net capital of $1.3 billion was 15.54% of aggregate debit balances and exceeded the minimum requirements by $1.1 billion.

Pershing is also required to provide the most recent financial information as of this statement mailing. In accordance with this requirement, on July 31, 2008, Pershing's net capital of $1.3 billion was 16.22% of aggregate debit balances and exceeded the minimum requirement by $1.1 billion.

A copy of the June 30, 2008, Statement of Financial Condition is available at www.pershing.com/footer/sofc.html. You may also request a free, printed copy by calling (888) 860-8510.

GunnAllen Financial
5002 W. Waters Ave.
Tampa, FL 33634-1313
Phone: 800.889.2914

Brokerage Account Statement

Statement Period: 08/01/2008 - 09/30/2008

JAN - 5 2009

Messages (continued)

Although a money market mutual fund seeks to preserve the value of your investment at $1.00 per share, it is possible to lose money by investing in a money market mutual fund. Please carefully read the money market mutual fund prospectus for additional information or contact your investment professional.

There are additional risks involved in trading equity securities either before or after regular market sessions. If you are considering participating in extended-hours trading, please be sure to review the Extended-Hours Trading section of Pershing's Disclosure Statement (found under Additional Disclosures). The Disclosure Statement is available at www.pershing.com/disclosurestatement.html or, if you are not able to retrieve the document online, you may call Pershing's Self-Service Hotline at (888) 860-8510. Select option 4, Disclosure Statement, where you will be prompted to either say or enter your account number. The document will then be mailed to the address of record for your account.

Clarity is the cornerstone of trust between investors and their financial representative. Please visit www.gunnallen.com and read our "Investor's Bill of Rights."

FOR ADDITIONAL INFORMATION REGARDING ORDER ROUTING PRACTICES AND THE VENUES TO WHICH YOUR GUNNALLEN FINANCIAL INC ORDERS ARE ROUTED, YOU MAY VISIT WWW.GUNNALLEN.COM AND SELECT THE LINK ENTITLED SEC RULE 606 DISCLOSURE.

UPON WRITTEN REQUEST TO GUNNALLEN FINANCIAL INC, YOU MAY OBTAIN THE IDENTITY OF THE VENUE TO WHICH YOUR ORDERS WERE ROUTED FOR THE SIX MONTHS PRIOR TO YOUR REQUEST AND THE TIME OF THE TRANSACTIONS THAT MAY HAVE RESULTED FROM SUCH ORDERS.

GUNNALLEN FINANCIAL INC SENDS CERTAIN EQUITY ORDERS TO EXCHANGES, ELECTRONIC COMMUNICATION NETWORKS, OR BROKER DEALERS DURING NORMAL BUSINESS HOURS AND DURING EXTENDED TRADING SESSIONS. CERTAIN OF THESE MARKET CENTERS PROVIDE PAYMENTS TO YOUR INTRODUCING BROKER OR CHARGE ACCESS FEES DEPENDING UPON THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE ORDERS AND ANY SUBSEQUENT EXECUTION. IN ADDITION, YOUR INTRODUCING BROKER DEALER MAY EXECUTE CERTAIN EQUITY ORDERS AS PRINCIPAL. YOUR INTRODUCING BROKER DEALER REALIZED 100% OF ANY TRADING PROFITS GENERATED FROM TRADING WITH CLIENT ORDERS AS PRINCIPAL.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

GENERAL INFORMATION

1. All orders and transactions shall be solely for your account and risk shall be subject to the constitution, rules, regulations, customs, usages, rulings and interpretations of the exchange or market and the clearing facility, if any, where the transactions are executed and/or settled, or if applicable, of the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority and to all applicable laws and regulations.
2. Whenever you are indebted to Pershing LLC ("Pershing") for any amount, all securities held by it for you in any account in which you have any interest shall secure all your liabilities to Pershing, and Pershing may in its discretion at any time, without tender, demand or notice to you, close or reduce any or all of your accounts by public or private sale or purchase or both of all or any securities carried in such accounts; any balance remaining due Pershing to be promptly paid by you.
3. Whenever you are indebted to Pershing for any amount, all securities carried for your account are or may be, without further notice to you, loaned or pledged by Pershing, either separately or under circumstances which will permit the commingling thereof, with other securities for any amount less than, equal to or greater than your liabilities to Pershing, but not under circumstances for an amount prohibited by law.
4. Title to securities sold to you, where Pershing has acted as principal, shall remain with Pershing until the entire purchase price is received or until the settlement date, whichever is later.
5. Any free credit balance carried for your account represents funds payable upon demand which, although properly accounted for on Pershing's books of record, are not segregated and may be used in the conduct of its business.
6. You may have received confirmations for transactions which do not appear on your statement. If so, the transactions will appear on your next periodic statement. Such transactions must be considered by you when computing the value of your account. This is especially true if you have written options which have been exercised.
7. If you maintain a margin account, this is a combined statement of your general account and a special memorandum account maintained for you under Regulation T of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. The permanent record of the separate account as required by Regulation T is available for your inspection upon request.
8. Interest charged on debit balances in your account appears on the statement. The rate of interest and period covered are indicated. The rate may change from time to time due to fluctuations in money rates or other reasons. Interest is computed as described in material previously furnished to you. Please contact your financial institution if you desire additional copies.
9. A financial statement of Pershing is available for your personal inspection at Pershing's offices. A copy of it will be mailed upon your written request or you can view it online at Pershing.com.
10. This statement should be retained for your records.
11. Dividends, interest and other distributions shown on this statement were classified as taxable or nontaxable based on certain information known as of the distribution date. This classification is subject to change and is solely intended for use as general information. After year end, Pershing is required to provide tax information to the Internal Revenue Service and other governmental authorities. At that time Pershing will provide that information on the annual tax information statement to you; use that statement to prepare your tax filings. The tax statement also includes other useful information to assist in accumulating the data to prepare your tax returns.
12. Pershing does not provide tax, investment or legal advisory services and no one associated with Pershing is authorized to render such advice. Do not rely upon any such advice, if given. Investors are encouraged to consult their tax advisors to determine the appropriate tax treatment of their business.
13. Pershing provides account protection for the net equity of securities positions and cash held in your account. Of this total, the Securities Investor Protection Corporation (SIPC) provides $500,000 of coverage, including $100,000 for claims for cash. Pershing provides additional protection on terms similar to SIPC for account net equity in excess of $500,000 through a commercial insurer. The account protection applies when a SIPC member firm fails financially and is unable to meet obligations to securities clients, but it does not protect against losses from the rise and fall in the market value of investments.
14. Pershing trades for its own account as a market maker, specialist, odd lot dealer, block positioner, arbitrageur and/or investor. Consequently, at the time of any transaction you may make, Pershing may have a position in such securities, which position may be partially or completely hedged.
15. If average price transaction is indicated on the front of this statement your financial institution or Pershing may have acted as principal, agent or both. Details available upon request.
16. This statement will be deemed conclusive and an account stated unless you advise Pershing in writing of any objection to it within ten days after receipt. Any such objection should be sent to Pershing at One Pershing Plaza, Jersey City, NJ 07399, Attn: Compliance.
17. You are advised to report promptly any inaccuracy or discrepancy in your account (including unauthorized trading) to your financial organization and Pershing, the custodian of your account. Please be advised that any oral communication should be re-confirmed in writing to further protect your rights, including your rights under the Securities Investor Protection Act. Your financial organization's contact information can be found on the first page of this statement. Pershing's contact information is as follows: Pershing LLC; Legal Department; One Pershing Plaza; Jersey City, New Jersey 07399; (201) 413-3330.

ERRORS AND OMISSIONS EXCEPTED.

PORTFOLIO HOLDINGS

This section includes the net market value of the securities in your account on a settlement date basis, including short positions, at the close of the statement period. The market prices have been obtained from quotation services, which we believe to be reliable; however, we cannot guarantee their accuracy. Securities for which a price is not available are marked "N/A" and are omitted from the Total.

The Annual Income, which is an estimated figure, is the current interest or most recently declared dividend for each security and is annualized. This figure particularly on equity mutual funds can vary substantially from one year to the next. As a result, actual amounts distributed may be more or less than those estimated on this statement. The Annual Income is then divided by the current Market Value to give the Estimated Yield which too could vary substantially because the income is estimated and it does not take account of your holding period. Annual Income has been obtained from sources believed to be reliable, but no assurance can be made as to accuracy.

Accrued interest represents interest earned but not yet received.

THE ROLE OF PERSHING

Pershing carries your account as clearing broker pursuant to a clearing agreement with your financial institution. Pershing may accept from your financial institution without inquiry or investigation (i) orders for the purchase and sale of securities and other property and (ii) any other instructions concerning your account. Pershing is not responsible or liable for any acts or omissions of your financial institution or its employees and it does not supervise them. Pershing provides no investment advice nor does it assess the suitability of any transaction or order. Pershing acts as the agent of your financial institution and you agree that you will not hold Pershing or any person controlling or under common control with it liable for any investment losses incurred by you.

Pershing performs several key functions at the direction of your financial institution. It acts as custodian for funds and securities you may deposit with it directly or through your financial institution or that it receives as the result of securities transactions it processes. Inquiries concerning the positions and balances in your account may only be directed to the Pershing Customer Service Department at (201) 413-3333. All other inquiries regarding your account or activity should be directed to your financial institution. For a description of other functions performed by Pershing please consult the Disclosure Statement provided to you upon the opening of your account.

Your financial institution is responsible for adherence to the securities laws, regulations and rules which apply to it regarding its own operations and the supervision of your account, its sales representatives and other personnel. Your financial institution is also responsible for approving the opening of accounts and obtaining account documents; the acceptance and, in certain instances, execution of securities orders; the assessment of the suitability of those transactions, where applicable; the rendering of investment advice, if any, to you and in general, for the ongoing relationship that it has with you.

Pershing may capture and store data about you such as your financial information and investment objectives. However, Pershing is not reviewing this information and evaluating whether your investments comport with your financial status and objectives and you hereby release Pershing from any liability to do so. Similarly, Pershing may capture and store information about whether a broker or an introducing firm is registered in a given state. You hereby release Pershing from any liability to review this data or to evaluate whether a particular security is registered or exempt from registration in your State.

This notice is not meant as a definitive enumeration of every possible circumstance, but as a general disclosure. If you have any questions regarding this notice or if you would like additional copies of the Disclosure Statement, please contact your financial institution.

PAYMENT FOR ORDER FLOW PRACTICES

The following statement is provided to you as required by Rule 11Ac1-3 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

Pershing sends certain equity orders to exchanges, Electronic Communication Networks, or broker-dealers during normal business hours and during extended trading sessions. Certain of these venues provide payments to Pershing or charge access fees to Pershing depending upon the characteristics of the order and any subsequent execution. In addition, Pershing may execute certain equity orders as principal. The details of these payments and fees are available upon written request. Pershing receives payments for directing listed options order flow to certain option exchanges. Compensation is generally in the form of a per option contract cash payment. Compensation is generally in the form of a per option contract cash payment. For a listing of organizations that pay Pershing for order flow, please refer to www.pershing.com/orderflow.htm.

Best Execution

Notwithstanding the previous paragraph regarding payment for order flow, Pershing selects certain market centers to provide execution of over-the-counter and exchange-listed securities transactions which agree to accept orders, transmitted electronically up to a specified size, and to execute them at or better than the national best bid or offer (NBBO). On certain larger orders, or if the designated market centers do not make a market in the subject security, Pershing directly contacts market centers to obtain an execution. The designated market centers to which orders are automatically routed are selected based on the consistent high quality of their executions in one or more market segments and their ability to provide opportunities for executions at prices superior to the NBBO.

If an order for an exchange-listed security is not immediately executable on the exchange to which it is routed, such order may be represented in the national marketplace using the various means available for price discovery. Pershing also regularly reviews reports for quality of execution purposes.

ARBITRATION

ARBITRATION DISCLOSURES:

- ALL PARTIES TO THIS AGREEMENT ARE GIVING UP THE RIGHT TO SUE EACH OTHER IN COURT, INCLUDING THE RIGHT TO A TRIAL BY JURY, EXCEPT AS PROVIDED BY THE RULES OF THE ARBITRATION FORUM IN WHICH A CLAIM IS FILED.
- ARBITRATION AWARDS ARE GENERALLY FINAL AND BINDING; A PARTY'S ABILITY TO HAVE A COURT REVERSE OR MODIFY AN ARBITRATION AWARD IS VERY LIMITED.
- THE ABILITY OF THE PARTIES TO OBTAIN DOCUMENTS, WITNESS STATEMENTS AND OTHER DISCOVERY IS GENERALLY MORE LIMITED IN ARBITRATION THAN IN COURT PROCEEDINGS.
- THE ARBITRATORS DO NOT HAVE TO EXPLAIN THE REASON(S) FOR THEIR AWARD.
- THE PANEL OF ARBITRATORS WILL TYPICALLY INCLUDE A MINORITY OF ARBITRATORS WHO WERE OR ARE AFFILIATED WITH THE SECURITIES INDUSTRY.
- THE RULES OF SOME ARBITRATION FORUMS MAY IMPOSE TIME LIMITS FOR BRINGING A CLAIM IN ARBITRATION. IN SOME CASES, A CLAIM THAT IS INELIGIBLE FOR ARBITRATION MAY BE BROUGHT IN COURT.
- THE RULES OF THE ARBITRATION FORUM IN WHICH THE CLAIM IS FILED, AND ANY AMENDMENTS THERETO, SHALL BE INCORPORATED INTO THIS AGREEMENT.

If any of the above Terms and Conditions are unacceptable to you, please notify Pershing immediately in writing by certified mail to One Pershing Plaza, Jersey City, NJ 07399, Attn: Compliance.

JAN - 5 2009

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

ARBITRATION AGREEMENT

ANY CONTROVERSY BETWEEN YOU AND US SHALL BE SUBMITTED TO ARBITRATION BEFORE THE FINANCIAL INDUSTRY REGULATORY AUTHORITY OR ANY OTHER NATIONAL SECURITIES EXCHANGE ON WHICH A TRANSACTION GIVING RISE TO THE CLAIM TOOK PLACE (AND ONLY BEFORE SUCH EXCHANGE).

NO PERSON SHALL BRING A PUTATIVE OR CERTIFIED CLASS ACTION TO ARBITRATION, NOR SEEK TO ENFORCE ANY PREDISPUTE ARBITRATION AGREEMENT AGAINST ANY PERSON WHO HAS INITIATED IN COURT A PUTATIVE CLASS ACTION; WHO IS A MEMBER OF A PUTATIVE CLASS WHO HAS NOT OPTED OUT OF THE CLASS WITH RESPECT TO ANY CLAIMS ENCOMPASSED BY THE PUTATIVE CLASS ACTION UNTIL: (I) THE CLASS CERTIFICATION IS DENIED; (II) THE CLASS IS DECERTIFIED; OR (III) THE CUSTOMER IS EXCLUDED FROM THE CLASS BY THE COURT. SUCH FORBEARANCE TO ENFORCE AN AGREEMENT TO ARBITRATE SHALL NOT CONSTITUTE A WAIVER OF ANY RIGHTS UNDER THIS AGREEMENT EXCEPT TO THE EXTENT STATED HEREIN.

THE LAWS OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK GOVERN.

WRAP ACCOUNT CUSTOMERS WHO ELECTED NOT TO RECEIVE IMMEDIATE CONFIRMATION OF TRANSACTIONS

The following Terms and Conditions are applicable only if your account is a wrap fee managed account, and the trade confirmations are not sent to you (sent only to your portfolio manager) pursuant to your instruction:

1. The following information will be furnished to you upon request to your financial institution (introducing firm) ("Introducing Firm"), with respect to any transaction for which a trade confirmation was not sent to you:
   - The market upon which any transaction was executed;
   - The time of day that any transaction was executed;
   - The name of the person from whom any security was purchased, or to whom such security was sold;
   - The source and amount of other commissions received in connection with any transaction; and
   - A copy of the trade confirmation.
2. Introducing Firm effected each transaction for which a trade confirmation was not sent to you, as your agent.
3. In connection with each equity security and certain other securities sold, Introducing Firm charges to you, and remits to a regulatory organization or national securities exchange, a "Trans. Fee". Pershing calculates this Fee based on amounts paid by Introducing Firm to the applicable regulatory organization or national securities exchange. This, in turn, is based on the value of the applicable securities sold. To determine the exact amount of this Fee with respect to any transaction, please contact the Introducing Firm.
4. Introducing Firm does not receive any payment for order flow for any transaction for which a trade confirmation was not sent to you.
5. Call features may exist for securities. Call features for fixed income securities may affect yield. Complete information will be provided upon request.
6. If any transaction involves an asset-backed security, including a municipal collateralized mortgage obligation, which represents an interest in or is secured by a pool of receivables or other financial assets that are subject continuously to prepayment, then the actual yield of such security may vary according to the rate at which the underlying receivables or other financial assets are prepaid. Information concerning the factors that affect yield (including at a minimum estimated yield, weighted average life, and the prepayment assumptions of underlying yield) will be furnished to you, upon request to Introducing Firm.
7. The ratings that appear in the description of some fixed income securities have been obtained from ratings services which Pershing believes to be reliable; however, Pershing cannot guarantee their accuracy. Securities for which a rating is not available are marked "UNRATED".

If any of the above Terms and Conditions are unacceptable to you, please notify Pershing immediately in writing by certified mail to One Pershing Plaza, Jersey City, NJ 07399, Attn: Compliance.

CONFIRMATION COMMITTEE REPORT

Action date: 2/4/09

In accordance with AS 24.60.130, the Judiciary Committee has reviewed the qualifications of the following Chief Justice's appointee and recommends that this name be forwarded to the House for ratification:

Select Committee on Legislative Ethics

Dennis "Skip" Cook
(Incumbent)

This does not reflect intent by any of the members to vote for or against this individual during any further sessions for the purposes of ratification.

Signature:	Printed Last Name
	LYNN
	Gruenberg
	Coghill
	Holmes
	GATTO
Chair:	Dahlstrom
Chair:

Please return to the Chief Clerk's office.

CONFIR-MATIONS 2010

Alaska State Legislature

House of Representatives

Office of the Chief Clerk

State Capitol, Room 216
Juneau, AK 99801-1182
Phone: (907) 465-3725
Fax: (907) 465-5334

Official Business

MEMORANDUM

Date: January 27, 2010

To: Representative Ramras, Chair
Judiciary Committee

From: Suzi Lowell
Chief Clerk

Subject: Chief Justice's Appointments

Speaker Chenault referred the following appointments by Chief Justice Walter L. Carpeneti to the Judiciary Committee:

Select Committee on Legislative Ethics
H. Conner Thomas (incumbent) of Nome
Gary Turner (incumbent) of Soldotna

The committee reports are attached for your use.

Attachments as noted

Alaska State Legislature

House of Representatives

Office of the Chief Clerk

Official Business

State Capitol, Room 216
Juneau, AK 99801-1182
Phone: (907) 465-3725
Fax: (907) 465-5334

MEMORANDUM

Date: 2010

To: All Committees

From: Suzi Lowell
Chief Clerk

Subject: Confirmation Committee Report (Signature Page) for Governor's Appointments

The attached Confirmation Committee Report (signature page) should be used in conjunction with the Referral for Confirmation form for the Governor's appointments to boards and commissions requiring legislative confirmation. After a committee has reviewed the qualifications of the appointee(s), the Referral for Confirmation form(s) should be dated and attached to a signature page. Have members sign the signature page and return the confirmation packet to the Chief Clerk's office.

Please use a single signature page for multiple appointees if the names of all members signing the report are the same for each attached referral. This change allows members to sign once for multiple appointments.

Attached are several signature pages for your use. We used colored paper to make them easier to identify. If you anticipate needing more forms or need assistance, please call Nancy McMullen at 6809.

Note: A separate report, including the signatures, will be used for department commissioners.

Attachments

CONFIRMATION COMMITTEE REPORT

Action date: 2/17/10

In accordance with AS 24.60.130, the Judiciary Committee has reviewed the qualifications of the following Chief Justice's appointee and recommends that this name be forwarded to the House for ratification:

Select Committee on Legislative Ethics

H. Conner Thomas
(Incumbent)

This does not reflect intent by any of the members to vote for or against this individual during any further sessions for the purposes of ratification.

Signature:	Printed Last Name
	LYNN
	[illegible]
	HERRON
	Holmes
	GATTO
Chair:	RAMRAS
Chair:

Please return to the Chief Clerk's office.

CONFIRMATION COMMITTEE REPORT

Action date: 2/17/10

In accordance with AS 24.60.130, the Judiciary Committee has reviewed the qualifications of the following Chief Justice's appointee and recommends that this name be forwarded to the House for ratification:

Select Committee on Legislative Ethics

Gary Turner
(Incumbent)

This does not reflect intent by any of the members to vote for or against this individual during any further sessions for the purposes of ratification.

Signature:	Printed Last Name
	LYNN
	Greenberg
	Gatto
	HERRON
	Holmes
Chair:	RAMRAS
Chair:

Please return to the Chief Clerk's office.

Alaska State Legislature

House of Representatives

Office of the Chief Clerk

State Capitol, Room 216
Juneau, AK 99801-1182
Phone: (907) 465-3725
Fax: (907) 465-5334

Official Business

REFERRAL FOR CONFIRMATION

Date Referred: February 3, 2010

Committee: Judiciary

Board of Governors of the Alaska Bar Association
Donald McLean – Wasilla
Appointed: 3/1/2007
Reappointed: 3/1/2010 Term Expires: 3/1/2013

Action Date: 2/17/10
(Same date as on the accompanying signature page)

Note: Attach to a signature page and return to the Chief Clerk's office.

Alaska State Legislature

House of Representatives

Office of the Chief Clerk

State Capitol, Room 216
Juneau, AK 99801-1182
Phone: (907) 465-3725
Fax: (907) 465-5334

Official Business

REFERRAL FOR CONFIRMATION

Date Referred: February 3, 2010

Committee: Judiciary

Public Defender
Quinlan Steiner – Anchorage
Appointed: 10/14/2005
Reappointed: 10/9/2009 Term Expires: 10/14/2013

Action Date: 2/17/10
(Same date as on the accompanying signature page)

Note: Attach to a signature page and return to the Chief Clerk's office.

Alaska State Legislature

Official Business

House of Representatives

Office of the Chief Clerk

State Capitol, Room 216
Juneau, AK 99801-1182
Phone: (907) 465-3725
Fax: (907) 465-5334

REFERRAL FOR CONFIRMATION

Date Referred: February 3, 2010

Committee: Judiciary

Violent Crimes Compensation Board
Nora G. Barlow – Anchorage
Appointed: 3/1/2010 Term Expires: 3/1/2011

Action Date: 2/17/10
(Same date as on the accompanying signature page)

Note: Attach to a signature page and return to the Chief Clerk's office.

CONFIRMATION COMMITTEE REPORT

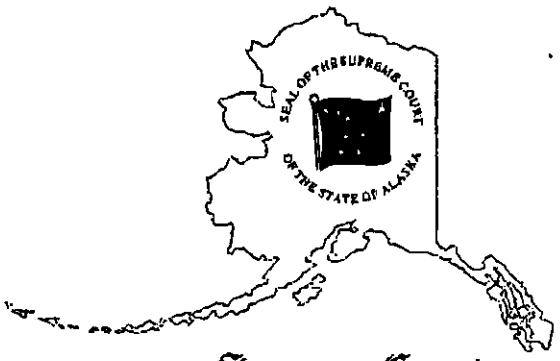
Action date: 2/17/10

The Judiciary Committee has reviewed the qualifications of the following Governor's appointee(s) as shown on the attached Referral for Confirmation forms(s) and recommends that the name(s) be forwarded to a joint session for consideration:

This does not reflect intent by any of the members to vote for or against this individual during any further sessions for the purposes of confirmation.

Signature:	Printed Last Name
	LYNN
	Gutierrez
	GATTO
	HERRON
	Holmes
Co-Chair:	RAMRAS
Co-Chair:

Please attach appointee Referral for Confirmation form(s) and return to the Chief Clerk's office.



Chambers of
Walter L. Carpeneti
Chief Justice

Supreme Court
State of Alaska

P.O. Box 114100
Juneau, Alaska
99811-4100

(907) 463-4771
Fax (907) 463-3475

January 22, 2010

The Honorable Gary Stevens
Senate President
State Capitol, Room 111
Juneau, Alaska 99801-1182

The Honorable Mike Chenault
Speaker of the House
State Capitol, Room 208
Juneau, Alaska 99801-1182

Dear President Stevens
and Speaker Chenault:

In my capacity as Chief Justice, and pursuant to AS 24.60.130(b)(3), I am re-nominating Gary J. Turner to serve another term as a public member of the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics.

Mr. Turner is the Director of Kenai Peninsula College, a campus of the University of Alaska, and is also a retired Air Force officer. For purposes of determining compliance with AS 24.60.130(c), Mr. Turner is a Republican.

Mr. Turner can be reached at (907) 262-2366 (home) or (907) 262-0315 (work). His mailing address is 215 River Watch Drive, Soldotna, Alaska 99669, and his e-mail address is Gary.Turner@uaa.alaska.edu. Please let me know if I can provide you with any other information on this matter.

Sincerely,

Walter L. Carpeneti

Walter L. Carpeneti

cc: Gary Turner
Joyce Anderson

GARY J. TURNER

215 River Watch Drive
Soldotna AK 99669
(907) 262-0315 (work), 262-0316 (fax)
(907) 262-2366 (home)
Gary.Turner@uaa.alaska.edu

Qualifications Summary

Education and public affairs professional with 30 years experience in communications management in NASA, U.S. Air Force, PR agency, corporate and university environments. Extensive experience in media relations, environmental risk communication, crisis and issues management and community relations.

Professional Experience

College Director/CEO

University of Alaska, Kenai Peninsula College, Soldotna, AK; June 2002-Present

- Serve as chief academic and administrative officer for 3,000 student college system. Lead 242 employees at four locations in Anchorage, Soldotna, Homer and Seward.

Senior Vice President & General Manager

Weber Shandwick Worldwide, Seattle, WA; August 2000 – October 2001

Program Manager, Public Affairs

NASA Marshall Space Flight Center, Ai Signal Research, Inc, Huntsville, AL; June 1996 - August 2000

Coordinator and Instructor, Continuing Education and Program Development

University of Alaska Southeast, Ketchikan AK; August 1995 - June 1996

State Executive Director

Alaskans for Drug-Free Youth, Ketchikan, AK; August 1994 - April 1995

Director, Public Affairs

Eielson Air Force Base, Alaska; April 1992 - August 1994

Director, Visitor Services Division

U.S. Air Force Academy, CO; May 1991 - April 1992

Academic Instructor

U.S. Air Force Academy, CO; May 1990 - May 1991

From 1979-1990, served in variety of public affairs roles at U.S. Air Force bases in Belgium, NORAD and U.S. Space Command in Colorado Springs, and Fairchild Air Force Base, Washington.

Education

- Master of Arts, Mass Communication, University of Denver, 1989.
- Bachelor of Science, Liberal Arts, University of the State of New York, 1983.

Professional Associations

- Member, Kenai River Sportfishing Association Board of Directors; 2003-present
- Member, Kenai River Guide Advisory Board; 2007-present
- Chair, Kenai River Guide Academy; 2005-present
- Retired Air Force Public Affairs officer; Top Secret clearance at retirement.

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT
Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT FOR: PUBLIC OFFICIALS, LEGISLATORS & CANDIDATES

EXECUTIVE BRANCH: Governor, Lt. Gov., commissioners, directors, special assistants and legislative liaisons; state boards and commissions; procurement and investment officers; city/borough officials; candidates.

JUDICIAL BRANCH: Justices, judges and magistrates.

LEGISLATIVE BRANCH: Legislators, legislative directors, Select Committee on Legislative Ethics.

FOR MORE INFORMATION, INSTRUCTIONS, BLANK FORMS, SAMPLE FORMS & QUESTIONS:
Visit APOC online at: doa.alaska.gov/apoc :

- To find detailed instructions and sample disclosures, under the heading "How do I..." click "Complete my initial, annual or final Public Official Financial Disclosure Statement"
- To find blank Financial Disclosure forms for public officials and legislators as well as a Guide to Financial Disclosure in Alaska, under the heading "Quick Links" click "APOC Forms"
- To find the laws and regulations that APOC administers and enforces, there is a link to "Statutes" or "APOC Statutes & Regulations" throughout the APOC Web site.

Contact APOC directly:

- ANCHORAGE: 2221 E. Northern Lights Blvd., Rm 128, Anchorage, AK 99508 / 907-276-4176 / Fax 907-276-7018
- JUNEAU: 240 Main St., Rm 500 / P.O. Box 110222, Juneau, AK 99811 / 907-465-4864 / Fax 907-465-4832
- TOLL-FREE: 800-478-4176 / Online contact info: http://doa.alaska.gov/apoc/

→ THIS IS A PUBLIC DOCUMENT ←

THIS REPORT IS A SWORN STATEMENT. YOUR SIGNATURE ON THE LAST PAGE CERTIFIES THAT THIS DISCLOSURE IS TRUE, CORRECT and COMPLETE.

NAME: Gary J. Turner

MAILING ADDRESS: 215 River Watch Dr. Soldotna AK 99669
Street address or P.O. box, city, zip code

CONTACT PHONE(S): 262-2366 (H) 262-0315 (W) Fax: 262-0316

E-MAIL: ingjt@uaa.alaska.edu

SPOUSE / DOMESTIC PARTNER: Marlene M. Turner

DEPENDENT CHILDREN: 0 NON-DEPENDENT CHILDREN LIVING WITH YOU: 0
Report number of children, including stepchildren, adoptive children. Legislative filers: List non-dependent children living with you.

NAME NON-DEPENDENT CHILDREN LIVING with YOU:

ARRIVED
DEC 15 2009
APOC-ANCH
MAIL FAX ELE

WHY ARE YOU FILING? ☒ OFFICE HOLDER or ☐ CANDIDATE

Office held or sought: Select Committee on Legislative Ethics

☐ INITIAL STATEMENT: Due 30 days from appointment – for new public officials.

☒ ANNUAL STATEMENT: Due by ~~March 15~~ Jan 15 for incumbent officials.

☐ FINAL STATEMENT: Due 90 days after leaving office – include data up until leaving office.

☐ CANDIDATE STATEMENT: Due when filing declaration of candidacy

no date stamp

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

SCHEDULE A: SOURCES OF INCOME OVER $1,000

1. SALARIED EMPLOYMENT NONE: check box → ☐

Report each employer who paid you, your spouse, domestic partner or children covered by reporting requirements more than $1,000. Include amount of income, dates of employment, terms of employment, amount of time worked. Income means anything of value and covers all forms of compensation, including deferred income. DESCRIBE THE WORK PERFORMED IN SUFFICIENT DETAIL TO MAKE IT CLEAR TO A PERSON OF ORDINARY UNDERSTANDING.

EARNED BY: ☒ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Total income: $ 124,000

☒ Full-time ☐ Part-time ☐ Seasonal ☐ Commission ☐ Project ☐ Hourly / Dates: Jan 1, – Dec 31, 200

If work is not full-time, specify amount of time worked (months/days/hours):

Employer: University of Alaska

Address: Po Box 755140 Fairbanks AK 99775

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of SERVICES PROVIDED:

College Director, Kenai Peninsula College

EARNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☒ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Total income: $ 33,550

☒ Full-time ☐ Part-time ☐ Seasonal ☐ Commission ☐ Project ☐ Hourly / Dates: Jan 1- Dec 31, 2009

If work is not full-time, specify amount of time worked (months/days/hours):

Employer: Kenai Peninsula Borough

Address: 144 N. Binkley St., Soldotna AK 99669

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of SERVICES PROVIDED:

Admin Clerk in Capital Project office

EARNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Total income: $

☐ Full-time ☐ Part-time ☐ Seasonal ☐ Commission ☐ Project ☐ Hourly / Dates:

If work is not full-time, specify amount of time worked (months/days/hours):

Employer:

Address:

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of SERVICES PROVIDED:

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

103

DEC 15 2009

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

SCHEDULE A: SOURCES OF INCOME OVER $1,000

2. SELF-EMPLOYMENT: NON-RETAIL NONE: check box → ☒

Disclose each client, customer or business that paid you, your spouse/domestic partner or child more than $1,000. Self-employment includes sole proprietors, partnerships, limited liability companies, professional corporations. List each source of income over $1,000 by name and amount. Exemptions: if the identity of the source of income is confidential by law, you may be excused from disclosing the source. To obtain an exemption, you must qualify under the law, you must file a written request, and you must receive an exemption from the commission. Exemption rules: Public officials, candidates: 2 AAC 50.100-102. Legislators: 2 AAC 50.775-780.

Income means anything of value and covers all forms of compensation, including deferred income.

EARNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Total income: $_____

☐ Full-time ☐ Part-time ☐ Seasonal ☐ Commission ☐ Project ☐ Hourly / Dates: _____

If work is not full-time, specify amount of time worked (months/days/hours): _____

Business name: _____

Client / Customer name: _____

Client / customer address: _____

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of services provided: _____

_____

_____

EARNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Total income: $_____

☐ Full-time ☐ Part-time ☐ Seasonal ☐ Commission ☐ Project ☐ Hourly / Dates: _____

If work is not full-time, specify amount of time worked (months/days/hours): _____

Business name: _____

Client / customer name: _____

Client / customer address: _____

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of services provided: _____

_____

_____

EARNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Total income: $_____

☐ Full-time ☐ Part-time ☐ Seasonal ☐ Commission ☐ Project ☐ Hourly / Dates: _____

If work is not full-time, specify amount of time worked (months/days/hours): _____

Business name: _____

Client / customer name: _____

Client / customer address: _____

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of services provided: _____

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

SCHEDULE A: SOURCES OF INCOME OVER $1,000

3. SELF-EMPLOYMENT – RETAIL NONE: check box → ☒

List each self-employment retail business that was a source of income of more than $1,000. Individual retail clients/customers do not need to be disclosed with these exceptions. You must disclose (1) customers with a line of credit extending through two or more billing cycles, (2) customers with ongoing contracts to purchase goods or services, and (3) customers who are offered discounts not available to the general public.

Income means anything of value and covers all forms of compensation, including deferred income.

EARNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Total income: $_____

☐ Full-time ☐ Part-time ☐ Seasonal ☐ Commission ☐ Project ☐ Hourly / Dates: _____

If work is not full-time, specify amount of time worked (months/days/hours):_____

Business name: _____

Client/customer name/address (if applicable): _____

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of services provided: _____

_____

EARNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Total income: $_____

☐ Full-time ☐ Part-time ☐ Seasonal ☐ Commission ☐ Project ☐ Hourly / Dates: _____

If work is not full-time, specify amount of time worked (months/days/hours):_____

Business name: _____

Client/customer name/address (if applicable): _____

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of services provided: _____

_____

4. RENTAL INCOME NONE: check box → ☐

OWNER:	TENANTS WHO PAID > $1,000 (For property outside Alaska managed by agent, list AGENT instead of tenant)	AMOUNT
☐ Filer
☐ Spouse or domestic partner
☐ Child
☐ Co-owner with others

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

DEC 16 2009

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

SCHEDULE A: SOURCES OF INCOME OVER $1,000

5. DIVIDENDS and INTEREST

NONE: check box → ☐

Disclose source and amount of income over $1,000 from dividends and interest. Include bank accounts, capital gains, money market accounts, certificates of deposit, Native corporation dividends, Permanent Fund dividends.

RECIPIENT	SOURCE	AMOUNT
☒ Filer ☐ Child ☒ Spouse/ partner	AK PFD	2610
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner

6. OTHER INCOME

NONE: check box → ☐

List source and amount of income over $1,000 not listed elsewhere in this form, including sale of goods or property, pensions, IRA cash-outs, honorariums, alimony, child support, shared living expenses and government entitlements.

RECIPIENT	SOURCE	AMOUNT
☒ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner	Air Force retirement	21,000
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner

7. GIFTS WORTH MORE THAN $250

NONE: check box → ☐

Report gifts worth more than $250 (including gifts from a single source with a cumulative value more than $250) – except gifts from spouse, domestic partner, parent, child, sibling, grandparent, aunt, uncle, niece or nephew. Include travel expenses, discounts not available to the public, loans forgiven or loans paid by a third party. Legislators must submit more detailed disclosure reports to the Legislative Ethics Committee.

RECIPIENT	DESCRIPTION	SOURCE	VALUE
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE".

DEC 15 2009

106

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

SCHEDULE B

BUSINESS INTERESTS NONE: check box → ☐

Report business interests even if they were NOT a source of income, including businesses in which you/family:

- Served as stockholder, owner, officer, director, partner, proprietor, employee or held an interest.
- Had ownership interests of more than $1,000 in a publicly traded corporation.
- Had any other ownership interest in a business, including shares in non-publicly traded corporations, sole proprietorships, limited liability companies. Include options to buy.
- Include non-profit organizations, corporations, businesses, associations, trade groups.

If the business was a source of income over $1,000, it must also be reported in Schedule A.

☒ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Position/Type of interest: Board of Directors

Business name: Kenai River Sportfishing Association

Business address: Po Box 1228 Soldotna AK 99669

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of business activity: Non profit sportfishing organization

☒ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Position/Type of interest: Board member

Business name: Kenai River Guide Advisory Board

Business address: Kenai River Center, Funny River Rd, Soldotna AK 99669

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of business activity: Advise Kenai River Special Management Area on guide industry issues

☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Position/Type of interest: _____

Business name: _____

Business address: _____

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of business activity: _____

☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Position/Type of interest: _____

Business name: _____

Business address: _____

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of business activity: _____

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

DEC 15 2009

107

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

SCHEDULE C

REAL PROPERTY INTERESTS NONE: check box → ☐

Include your home, a rent-to-own home, rental property, vacant property, recreational property, options to buy, business property and real estate interests held in a limited liability company, limited partnership or trust. Include property owned or sold during the reporting period. If property is jointly owned, check all boxes that apply.

OWNER(S): ☒ Filer / ☒ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / ☐ Other co-owner: _____

Street address or legal description: 215 River Watch Dr

City or borough / State: Soldotna AK 99669

Ownership interest: Home owner

(Such as home owner, option to buy, owned through business entity or trust, leasehold, partnership)

OWNER(S): ☒ Filer / ☒ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / ☐ Other co-owner: _____

Street address or legal description: Lot 8, Block 3, Mooring by the River, Plat 84-160

City or borough / State: Soldotna AK 99669

Ownership interest: Vacant lot - own

(Such as home owner, option to buy, owned through business entity or trust, leasehold, partnership)

OWNER(S): ☒ Filer / ☒ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / ☐ Other co-owner: _____

Street address or legal description: Lot 13, Block 1, Mooring by the River, Plat 84-160

City or borough / State: Soldotna AK 99669

Ownership interest: Vacant lot - own

(Such as home owner, option to buy, owned through business entity or trust, leasehold, partnership)

OWNER(S): ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / ☐ Other co-owner: _____

Street address or legal description: _____

City or borough / State: _____

Ownership interest: _____

OWNER(S): ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / ☐ Other co-owner: _____

Street address or legal description: _____

City or borough / State: _____

Ownership interest: _____

(Such as home owner, option to buy, owned through business entity or trust, leasehold, partnership)

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT
Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

SCHEDULE D

BENEFICIAL INTERESTS: TRUSTS & RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS over $1,000 / NONE: ☐

Report each beneficial interest in a trust or retirement account that exceeded $1,000 during the reporting period. Report stocks, bonds, mutual funds, cash accounts, CDs, deferred compensation plans, profit-sharing accounts, employee benefit accounts, retirement accounts (such as IRA, 401K, SEP or Keogh) trust funds (including blind trusts) and limited partnerships. "Managed by" means the filer, employer, business, investment entity or name of the company that manages the account. Identify individual investments if you or family members manage or personally control the investments. "Identify fund or companies" means the individual companies or accounts where you are the manager and you control the investments; if a mutual fund, investment company or other third party entity manages and controls the investments, list the name or type of fund where the assets are held. You do NOT need to list the dollar value of the assets, but you must identify the assets by owner, manager and name.

ASSETS – OWNED BY: ☒ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / PERCENT: 100

ASSETS – MANAGED BY: Fidelity Investments

ASSETS – IDENTIFY FUND or COMPANIES: Fidelity Freedom 2020

ASSETS – OWNED BY: ☒ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / PERCENT: 100

ASSETS – MANAGED BY: Alaska PERS

ASSETS – IDENTIFY FUND or COMPANIES: Univ. of Alaska retirement

ASSETS – OWNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☒ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / PERCENT: 100

ASSETS – MANAGED BY: Alaska PERS

ASSETS – IDENTIFY FUND or COMPANIES: Global Balanced, Brandes INVST, T. Rowe Price SmallCap, S+P 500 Stock Index, Sentinel Sustainable, Money Market Fund

ASSETS – OWNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / PERCENT:

ASSETS – MANAGED BY:

ASSETS – IDENTIFY FUND or COMPANIES:

ASSETS – OWNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / PERCENT:

ASSETS – MANAGED BY:

ASSETS – IDENTIFY FUND or COMPANIES:

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

DEC 15 2009

109

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT
Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

SCHEDULE E

1. LOANS, LOAN GUARANTEES & DEBTS OVER $1,000 NONE: check box → ☐

Report each creditor or lender to whom more than $1,000 was owed during the reporting period. Report guarantor of each loan. List financial obligations, including mortgages on property owned or sold during the reporting period; loans that have been guaranteed; delinquent taxes; alimony; child support payments; medical bills; boat and vehicle loans; business and personal loans; escrows; student loans; signature loans and promissory notes. Loans include secured, unsecured and contingent loans. Do NOT list credit card obligations or revolving charge accounts.

DEBTOR: ☒ Filer / ☒ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child

☒ LENDER / ☐ CREDITOR / ☐ GUARANTOR / NAME: First National Bank of Alaska

DEBTOR: ☒ Filer / ☒ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child

☒ LENDER / ☐ CREDITOR / ☐ GUARANTOR / NAME: USAA

DEBTOR: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child

☐ LENDER / ☐ CREDITOR / ☐ GUARANTOR / NAME: _____

DEBTOR: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child

☐ LENDER / ☐ CREDITOR / ☐ GUARANTOR / NAME: _____

2. FOR LEGISLATIVE BRANCH FILERS ONLY NONE: check box → ☒

Legislative branch filers must report additional details: original amount of the obligation, the current balance owed, interest rate, length of the loan and whether a written agreement exists for a creditor or lender who:

- Lobbies or hired lobbyists
- Had contracts or sought contracts worth more than $10,000 with any state agency
- Was a municipal or local government entity
- Was affected financially – in an amount exceeding $1,000 – by an act of the legislature or state agency decision, including actions affecting professional or occupational licenses; natural resource permits or quotas; assessments; tax rates; health, safety or environmental standards; insurance or business practices.

DEBTOR: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child

☐ LENDER or ☐ CREDITOR / Name: _____

Address: _____

Original loan: $_____ Balance owed: $_____ Interest rate: _____%

Term: ☐ _____ years ☐ _____ months / WRITTEN LOAN AGREEMENT? ☐ Yes / ☐ No

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

DEC 15 2009

110

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT
Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

SCHEDULE F

1. LEASES: GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS & LEASES

NONE: check box → ☒

List all contracts, bids and offers to contract with the state or any state or municipal agency or entity. Report contract interests as individual, sole proprietor, family member, partnership, professional corporation, limited liability company or through a corporation in which filer or family members held a controlling interest.

CONTRACTOR: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / TYPE of INTEREST: _____

☐ Bid / ☐ Offer / ☐ Held / CONTRACT ID (name/number): _____

CONTRACTING AGENCY: _____

CONTRACT DESCRIPTION: _____

_____

CONTRACTOR: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / TYPE of INTEREST: _____

☐ Bid / ☐ Offer / ☐ Held / CONTRACT ID (name/number): _____

CONTRACTING AGENCY: _____

CONTRACT DESCRIPTION: _____

_____

2. LEASES: NATURAL RESOURCE LEASES

NONE: check box → ☒

List natural resource leases – including mineral, timber, oil and gas leases – held, bid or offered during the reporting period. Report lease interests as individual, sole proprietor, family member, partnership, professional corporation, limited liability company; or corporation in which you or family (individually or together) held controlling interest.

LEASEHOLDER: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / TYPE of INTEREST: _____

☐ Bid / ☐ Offer / ☐ Held / LEASE ID (name/number): _____

LEASE DESCRIPTION: _____

LEASEHOLDER: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / TYPE of INTEREST: _____

☐ Bid / ☐ Offer / ☐ Held / LEASE ID (name/number): _____

LEASE DESCRIPTION: _____

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

DEC 15 2009

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT
Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

SCHEDULE G

1. CLOSE ECONOMIC ASSOCIATIONS

NONE: check box → ☒

EXEMPT: Municipal and local officials are exempt from reporting close economic associations. Members of state boards and commissions are exempt from reporting close economic associations. Local officials and state board/commission members do NOT have to complete this section. Check the box for NONE.

STATE PUBLIC OFFICIALS: Disclose financial relations with legislators, other public officials and lobbyists.

LEGISLATIVE BRANCH: Disclose financial relations with public officials, lobbyists, other legislators, and legislative employees. Report close economic association detailed information to the Legislative Ethics Committee.

CLOSE ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION means a financial relationship between public officials, legislators and lobbyists, including shared interests in a business, property, association, partnership, corporation or LLC.

CHANGES: Report new close economic associations within 60 days.

PERSON DISCLOSING ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child

PERSON with WHOM ASSOCIATION EXISTS: _____

DESCRIPTION of ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION: _____

_____

PERSON DISCLOSING ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child

PERSON with WHOM ASSOCIATION EXISTS: _____

DESCRIPTION of ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION: _____

_____

2. FILERS WITH A LOBBYIST SPOUSE or DOMESTIC PARTNER

NONE: ☒

EXEMPT: Local officials and members of state boards and commissions are EXEMPT. Check NONE.

STATE PUBLIC OFFICIALS with a lobbyist spouse or domestic partner: Report names and addresses of each employer of the lobbyist and the total monetary value received from each of the lobbyist's employers.

LEGISLATIVE BRANCH filers with a lobbyist spouse or domestic partner: Disclose employer of lobbyist and compensation, and report details to t he Legislative Ethics Committee.

CHANGES: Report changes in lobbyist's employer within 48 hours of the change.

LOBBYIST'S EMPLOYER: NAME & ADDRESS	COMPENSATION

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

DEC 15 2009

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

CERTIFICATION

I certify under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and the information in this disclosure statement is, to the best of my knowledge, true, correct and complete. A person who makes a false sworn certification which he or she does not believe to be true is guilty of perjury.

SIGNATURE Gary J Turner

If you are filing online, you must have an Electronic Filing Agreement with APOC to use an electronic signature.

Gary J. Turner — NAME of FILER

12/12/09 Home — DATE &PLACE SIGNED / FILED

All officials and candidates who are required to file disclosure statements are solely responsible for filing complete, accurate and truthful statements by the deadlines.

WHERE TO FILE THIS STATEMENT

STATE OFFICIALS: File initial, annual and final statements with the Alaska Public Offices Commission.

STATE CANDIDATES: File with the Division of Elections along with Declaration of Candidacy.

BOROUGH / MUNICIPAL / CITY OFFICIALS and CANDIDATES: File with city or borough clerk where you hold or seek office.

FILE ELECTRONICALLY to APOC: doa.apoc.reports@alaska.gov

THIS IS A PUBLIC DOCUMENT

NOTE: Public officials who are required to file this disclosure statement may have additional obligations to disclose conflicts of interest or potential conflicts under state executive, legislative or judicial ethics rules or personnel rules. Legislators who are required to file this disclosure statement have additional disclosure and reporting requirements imposed by the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics. Local officials may also be governed by local ethics ordinances or personnel rules.

Disclosure forms, guidelines, laws and regulations are online: www.apoc.alaska.gov or from APOC offices

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION

ANCHORAGE OFFICE:
2221 E. Northern Lights Blvd – Rm 128
Anchorage, AK 99508-4149
907-276-4176 / Toll-free 800-478-4176
Fax 907-276-7018

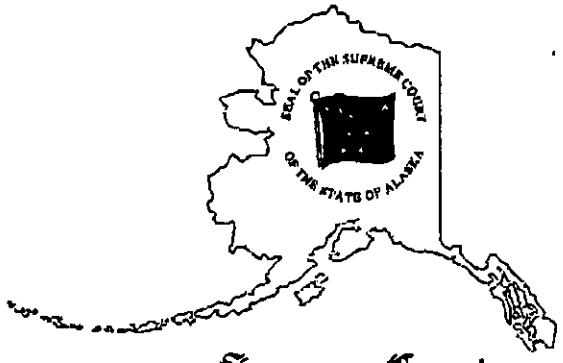
JUNEAU OFFICE:
240 Main St. – Rm 500
Mail: P.O. Box 110222
Juneau, AK 99811-0222
907-465-4864 / Fax 907-465-4832

E-mail APOC: doa.apoc@alaska.gov
File electronic disclosure statements to: doa.apoc.reports@alaska.gov

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

DEC 1 5 2009

113



Chambers of
Walter L. Carpeneti
Chief Justice

Supreme Court
State of Alaska

P.O. Box 114100
Juneau, Alaska
99811-4100

(907) 463-4771
Fax (907) 463-3475

January 22, 2010

The Honorable Gary Stevens
Senate President
State Capitol, Room 111
Juneau, Alaska 99801-1182

The Honorable Mike Chenault
Speaker of the House
State Capitol, Room 208
Juneau, Alaska 99801-1182

Dear President Stevens
and Speaker Chenault:

In my capacity as Chief Justice, and pursuant to AS 24.60.130(b)(3), I am re-nominating H. Conner Thomas to serve another term as a public member of the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics.

Mr. Thomas is an associate and partner in a small general practice law firm, Lewis & Thomas, P.C. For purposes of determining compliance with AS 24.60.130(c), Mr. Thomas is a Democrat.

Mr. Thomas can be reached at (907) 443-5226. His mailing address is P.O. Box 865, Nome, Alaska, 99762, and his e-mail address is connernomelaw@gci.net. Please let me know if I can provide you with any other information on this matter.

Sincerely,

Walter L. Carpeneti

Walter L. Carpeneti

cc: H. Conner Thomas
Joyce Anderson

H. Conner Thomas
P.O. Box 865
Nome, Alaska 99762
907-443-5226/fax: 907-443-5098
e-mail: connernomelaw@gci.net

EDUCATION

University of Louisville, School of Law, Louisville, Kentucky, J.D. (1977)

University of Kentucky, Lexington, Kentucky, B.A. Economics (1973)

EMPLOYMENT

Lewis & Thomas, P.C., August 1986 to present - Nome, Alaska
Formerly Larson Timbers & Thomas P.C.
Associate and partner in a small general practice law firm

State of Alaska, Public Defender Agency, May 1983 to August 1986 - Nome, AK
Representing indigent criminal defendants

State of Alaska Court System – Magistrate, September 1982 to May 1983 - Nome, AK
Arraign criminal defendants, preside over misdemeanor trials, and preside as master in child in need of aid and juvenile delinquency cases

Alaska Legal Services Corporation, October 1979 to September 1982- Nome, AK
Staff and supervising attorney for law office representing indigent clients in civil cases

U.S. Department of Interior, May 1979 to October 1979 – Anchorage, AK
Land adjudicator

VISTA Volunteer, October 1977 to January 1979 – Fairbanks and Nome, AK
Staff attorney with Protection and Advocacy for developmentally disabled - Fairbanks
Staff attorney with Alaska Legal Services Corporation- Nome

ORGANIZATIONS

Legislative Ethics Committee, Public Member – January 1999 to present

Nome Kennel Club, President, Board of Directors – December 1992 to present

Alaska Civil Liberties Union, Board of Directors – April 1994 to October 1997

Citizen Review Committee, Department of Health & Social Services – October 1985 to January 1987

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT FOR:
PUBLIC OFFICIALS, LEGISLATORS & CANDIDATES

EXECUTIVE BRANCH: Governor, Lt. Gov., commissioners, directors, special assistants and legislative liaisons; state boards and commissions; procurement and investment officers; city/borough officials; candidates.

JUDICIAL BRANCH: Justices, judges and magistrates.

LEGISLATIVE BRANCH: Legislators, legislative directors, Select Committee on Legislative Ethics.

FOR MORE INFORMATION, INSTRUCTIONS, BLANK FORMS, SAMPLE FORMS & QUESTIONS: Visit APOC online at: doa.alaska.gov/apoc:

- To find detailed instructions and sample disclosures, under the heading "How do I..." click "Complete my initial, annual or final Public Official Financial Disclosure Statement"
- To find blank Financial Disclosure forms for public officials and legislators, under the heading "Quick Links" click "APOC Forms"
- To find the laws and regulations that APOC administers and enforces, there is a link to "Statutes" or "APOC Statutes & Regulations" throughout the APOC Web site.

Contact APOC directly:

- ANCHORAGE: 2221 E. Northern Lights Blvd., Rm 128, Anchorage, AK 99508 / 907-276-4176 / Fax 907-276-7018
- JUNEAU: 240 Main St., Rm 500 / P.O. Box 110222, Juneau, AK 99811 / 907-465-4864 / Fax 907-465-4832
- TOLL-FREE: 800-478-4176 / Online contact info: http://doa.alaska.gov/apoc/

THIS IS A PUBLIC DOCUMENT – DO NOT INCLUDE CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION
(i.e., SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBERS, ACCOUNT NUMBERS)

THIS REPORT IS A SWORN STATEMENT. YOUR SIGNATURE ON THE LAST PAGE CERTIFIES THAT THIS DISCLOSURE IS TRUE, CORRECT and COMPLETE.

NAME: H. Conner Thomas

MAILING ADDRESS: P.O Box 865 Nome, Alaska 99762
Street address or P.O. Box, city, zip code

CONTACT PHONE(S): 907-443-5226 Fax: 907-443-5098

RECEIVED JAN 13 2010 APOC-ANCH FAX ELB 1-11-10

E-MAIL: connernomelaw@gci.net

SPOUSE / DOMESTIC PARTNER: Margaret A. Thomas

DEPENDENT CHILDREN: one NON-DEPENDENT CHILDREN LIVING WITH YOU: none
Report number of children, including stepchildren, adoptive children. Legislative filers: List non-dependent children living with you.

NAME NON-DEPENDENT CHILDREN LIVING with YOU:

WHY ARE YOU FILING? X☐ OFFICE HOLDER or ☐ CANDIDATE

Office held or sought: Public Member Select Committee Legislative Ethics

☐ INITIAL STATEMENT: Due 30 days from appointment for new public officials (and annually thereafter).

X ANNUAL STATEMENT: Due by January 11, 2010 – for incumbent officials.

☐ FINAL STATEMENT: Due 90 days after leaving office – From_____through _____.
(Include all information not reported on a previously filed statement through your last day of office.)

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

☐ CANDIDATE STATEMENT: Due when filing declaration of candidacy

SCHEDULE A: SOURCES OF INCOME OVER $1,000

1. SALARIED EMPLOYMENT NONE: check box → ☐

Report each employer who paid you, your spouse, domestic partner or children covered by reporting requirements more than $1,000. Include amount of income, dates of employment, terms of employment, amount of time worked. Income means anything of value and covers all forms of compensation, including deferred income.
DESCRIBE THE WORK PERFORMED IN SUFFICIENT DETAIL TO MAKE IT CLEAR TO A PERSON OF ORDINARY UNDERSTANDING.

EARNED BY: ☐X Filer / X Spouse/domestic partner / Child / Total income: $ $33,240.9

☐ Full-time ☐ Part-time X Seasonal ☐ Commission ☐ Project ☐ Hourly / Dates: _____

If work is not full-time, specify amount of time worked (months/days/hours): _____

Employer: Nome Public Schools

Address: P.O. Box 131, Nome, Alaska 99762

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of SERVICES PROVIDED: Title I paraprofessional

_____

_____

_____

EARNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Total income: $_____

☐ Full-time ☐ Part-time ☐ Seasonal ☐ Commission ☐ Project ☐ Hourly / Dates: _____

If work is not full-time, specify amount of time worked (months/days/hours): _____

Employer: _____

Address: _____

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of SERVICES PROVIDED: _____

_____

_____

EARNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Total income: $_____

☐ Full-time ☐ Part-time ☐ Seasonal ☐ Commission ☐ Project ☐ Hourly / Dates: _____

If work is not full-time, specify amount of time worked (months/days/hours): _____

Employer: _____

Address: _____

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of SERVICES PROVIDED: _____

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

JAN 13 2010

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT
Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

SCHEDULE A: SOURCES OF INCOME OVER $1,000

2. SELF-EMPLOYMENT: NON-RETAIL NONE: check box → ☐

Disclose each client, customer or business that paid you, your spouse/domestic partner or child more than $1,000. Self-employment includes sole proprietors, partnerships, limited liability companies, professional corporations. List each source of income over $1,000 by name and amount. Exemptions: if the identity of the source of income is confidential by law, you may be excused from disclosing the source. To obtain an exemption, you must qualify under the law, you must file a written request, and you must receive an exemption from the commission. Exemption rules: Public officials, candidates: 2 AAC 50.100-102. Legislators: 2 AAC 50.775-780.
Income means anything of value and covers all forms of compensation, including deferred income.

EARNED BY X Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Total income: $ 108,000.00

X Full-time ☐ Part-time ☐ Seasonal ☐ Commission ☐ Project ☐ Hourly / Dates: _____

If work is not full-time, specify amount of time worked (months/days/hours): _____

Business name: Lewis & Thomas, P.C.

Client / Customer name: Attachment A

Client / customer address: Attachment A DETAILED DESCRIPTION of services provided: Legal Services

_____

_____

EARNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Total income: $ _____

☐ Full-time ☐ Part-time ☐ Seasonal ☐ Commission ☐ Project ☐ Hourly / Dates: _____

If work is not full-time, specify amount of time worked (months/days/hours): _____

Business name: _____

Client / customer name: _____

Client / customer address: _____

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of services provided: _____

_____

EARNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Total income: $ _____

☐ Full-time ☐ Part-time ☐ Seasonal ☐ Commission ☐ Project ☐ Hourly / Dates: _____

If work is not full-time, specify amount of time worked (months/days/hours): _____

Business name: _____

Client / customer name: _____

Client / customer address: _____

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of services provided: _____

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

JAN 12 2010 AK

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

SCHEDULE A: SOURCES OF INCOME OVER $1,000

3. SELF-EMPLOYMENT – RETAIL

NONE: check box → ☐

List each self-employment retail business that was a source of income of more than $1,000. Individual retail clients/customers do not need to be disclosed with these exceptions. You must disclose (1) customers with a line of credit extending through two or more billing cycles, (2) customers with ongoing contracts to purchase goods or services, and (3) customers who are offered discounts not available to the general public.

Income means anything of value and covers all forms of compensation, including deferred income.

EARNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Total income: $_____

☐ Full-time ☐ Part-time ☐ Seasonal ☐ Commission ☐ Project ☐ Hourly / Dates: _____

If work is not full-time, specify amount of time worked (months/days/hours):_____

Business name: _____

Client/customer name/address (if applicable): _____

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of services provided: _____

_____

EARNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Total income: $_____

☐ Full-time ☐ Part-time ☐ Seasonal ☐ Commission ☐ Project ☐ Hourly / Dates: _____

If work is not full-time, specify amount of time worked (months/days/hours):_____

Business name: _____

Client/customer name/address (if applicable): _____

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of services provided: _____

_____

4. RENTAL INCOME

NONE: check box → ☐

OWNER:	TENANTS WHO PAID > $1,000 (For property outside Alaska managed by agent, list AGENT instead of tenant)	AMOUNT
☐ Filer ☐ Spouse or domestic partner ☐ Child ☐ Co-owner with others

SCHEDULE A: SOURCES OF INCOME OVER $1,000

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

JAN 12 2010

119

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT
Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

5. DIVIDENDS and INTEREST

NONE: check box → ☐

Disclose source and amount of income over $1,000 from dividends and interest. Include bank accounts, capital gains, money market accounts, certificates of deposit, Native corporation dividends, Permanent Fund dividends.

RECIPIENT	SOURCE	AMOUNT
x Filer ☐ Child x Spouse/ partner	Wells Fargo Securities Brokerage Account – See Attachments B&D	$7,302.36
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner	Fidelity Retirement – See Attachment C	$1,414.75
x Filer x Child x☐ Spouse/ partner	Alaska Permanent Fund Dividends	$3,915.00
x Filer xChild xSpouse/ partner	Savings Account Interest	$5.57
X Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner	PERS Account – See Attachment F	$1,162.13
☐ Filer ☐ Child X Spouse/ partner	New York Life – See Attachment G	$1,547.13

6. OTHER INCOME

NONE: check box → ☐

List source and amount of income over $1,000 not listed elsewhere in this form, including sale of goods or property, pensions, IRA cash-outs, honorariums, alimony, child support, shared living expenses and government entitlements.

RECIPIENT	SOURCE	AMOUNT
x Filer ☐ Child x Spouse/ partner	Wells Fargo Securities Account (Stock Sales) – Attachment B	$32,543.91
X Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner	Wells Fargo IRA – Attachment D	$2,124.36
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner

7. GIFTS WORTH MORE THAN $250

NONE: check box → ☐

Report gifts worth more than $250 (including gifts from a single source with a cumulative value more than $250) – except gifts from spouse, domestic partner, parent, child, sibling, grandparent, aunt, uncle, niece or nephew. Include travel expenses, discounts not available to the public, loans forgiven or loans paid by a third party. Legislators must submit more detailed disclosure reports to the Legislative Ethics Committee.

RECIPIENT	DESCRIPTION	SOURCE	VALUE
☐ Filer ☐ Child x Spouse/ partner	Cash	Henry Landsberger	$5,329.01
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner
☐ Filer ☐ Child ☐ Spouse/ partner

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

JAN 1 3 2010

120

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

SCHEDULE B

BUSINESS INTERESTS NONE: check box → ☐

Report business interests even if they were NOT a source of income, including businesses in which you/family:
- Served as stockholder, owner, officer, director, partner, proprietor, employee or held an interest.
- Had ownership interests of more than $1,000 in a publicly traded corporation.
- Had any other ownership interest in a business, including shares in non-publicly traded corporations, sole proprietorships, limited liability companies. Include options to buy.
- Include non-profit organizations, corporations, businesses, associations, trade groups.

If the business was a source of income over $1,000, it must also be reported in Schedule A.

x Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Position/Type of interest: _____

Business name: Lewis & Thomas, P.C.

Business address: P.O. Box 61, Nome, Alaska 99762

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of business activity: Law Practice

x Filer /xSpouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Position/Type of interest: _____

Business name: Wells Fargo Investment Account – See Attachment B

Business address: _____

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of business activity: _____

☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Position/Type of interest: _____

Business name: _____

Business address: _____

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of business activity: _____

☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / Position/Type of interest: _____

Business name: _____

Business address: _____

DETAILED DESCRIPTION of business activity: _____

SCHEDULE C

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

JAN 13 2010

121

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

REAL PROPERTY INTERESTS

NONE: check box → ☐

Include your home, a rent-to-own home, rental property, vacant property, recreational property, options to buy, business property and real estate interests held in a limited liability company, limited partnership or trust. Include property owned or sold during the reporting period. If property is jointly owned, check all boxes that apply.

OWNER(S): x Filer / x Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / ☐ Other co-owner: _____

Street address or legal description: Lots, 13B, 14B, and 15B, First Addition to Banner Creek Subdivision, Cape Nome, Recording District

City or borough / State: _____

Ownership interest: Owner

(Such as home owner, option to buy, owned through business entity or trust, leasehold, partnership)

OWNER(S): xFiler / xSpouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / ☐ Other co-owner: _____

Street address or legal description: Lots 5,6 Melsing Creek Subdivision, Second Judicial District, Cape Nome, Recording District

City or borough / State: _____

Ownership interest: _____

(Such as home owner, option to buy, owned through business entity or trust, leasehold, partnership)

OWNER(S): ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / ☐ Other co-owner: _____

Street address or legal description: _____

City or borough / State: _____

Ownership interest: _____

(Such as home owner, option to buy, owned through business entity or trust, leasehold, partnership)

OWNER(S): ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / ☐ Other co-owner: _____

Street address or legal description: _____

City or borough / State: _____

Ownership interest: _____

OWNER(S): ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / ☐ Other co-owner: _____

Street address or legal description: _____

City or borough / State: _____

Ownership interest: _____

(Such as home owner, option to buy, owned through business entity or trust, leasehold, partnership)

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

JAN 1 3 2010

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT
Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

SCHEDULE D

BENEFICIAL INTERESTS: TRUSTS & RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS over $1,000 / NONE: ☐

Report each beneficial interest in a trust or retirement account that exceeded $1,000 during the reporting period. Report stocks, bonds, mutual funds, cash accounts, CDs, deferred compensation plans, profit-sharing accounts, employee benefit accounts, retirement accounts (such as IRA, 401K, SEP or Keogh) trust funds (including blind trusts) and limited partnerships. "Managed by" means the filer, employer, business, investment entity or name of the company that manages the account. Identify individual investments if you or family members manage or personally control the investments. "Identify fund or companies" means the individual companies or accounts where you are the manager and you control the investments; if a mutual fund, investment company or other third party entity manages and controls the investments, list the name or type of fund where the assets are held. You do NOT need to list the dollar value of the assets, but you must identify the assets by owner, manager and name.

ASSETS – OWNED BY: x Filer / Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / PERCENT:100%

ASSETS – MANAGED BY: Fidelity (401K Plan); Wells Fargo (IRA); State of Alaska SBS & PERS;

ASSETS – IDENTIFY FUND or COMPANIES: See Attachments C, D,E, F

ASSETS – OWNED BY: ☐ Filer / x Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / PERCENT:_____

ASSETS – MANAGED BY: New York Life Annuity; Sunlife Canada Annuity; Wells Fargo (IRA); State of Alaska PERS;

ASSETS – IDENTIFY FUND or COMPANIES: See Attachments G,H, I, J

ASSETS – OWNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / x Child / PERCENT:_____

ASSETS – MANAGED BY: T. Rowe Price (529 College Savings Account)

ASSETS – IDENTIFY FUND or COMPANIES: See Attachment K

ASSETS – OWNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / PERCENT:_____

ASSETS – MANAGED BY:_____

ASSETS – IDENTIFY FUND or COMPANIES:_____

ASSETS – OWNED BY: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / PERCENT:_____

ASSETS – MANAGED BY:_____

ASSETS – IDENTIFY FUND or COMPANIES:_____

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE".

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

SCHEDULE E

1. LOANS, LOAN GUARANTEES & DEBTS OVER $1,000 NONE: check box → x

Report each creditor or lender to whom more than $1,000 was owed during the reporting period. Report guarantor of each loan. List financial obligations, including mortgages on property owned or sold during the reporting period; loans that have been guaranteed; delinquent taxes; alimony; child support payments; medical bills; boat and vehicle loans; business and personal loans; escrows; student loans; signature loans and promissory notes. Loans include secured, unsecured and contingent loans. Do NOT list credit card obligations or revolving charge accounts.

DEBTOR: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child

☐ LENDER / ☐ CREDITOR / ☐GUARANTOR / NAME:_____

DEBTOR: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child

☐ LENDER / ☐ CREDITOR / ☐GUARANTOR / NAME:_____

DEBTOR: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child

☐ LENDER / ☐ CREDITOR / ☐GUARANTOR / NAME:_____

DEBTOR: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child

☐ LENDER / ☐ CREDITOR / ☐GUARANTOR / NAME:_____

2. FOR LEGISLATIVE BRANCH FILERS ONLY NONE: check box → ☐

Legislative branch filers must report additional details: original amount of the obligation, the current balance owed, interest rate, length of the loan and whether a written agreement exists for a creditor or lender who:

- Lobbies or hired lobbyists
- Had contracts or sought contracts worth more than $10,000 with any state agency
- Was a municipal or local government entity
- Was affected financially – in an amount exceeding $1,000 – by an act of the legislature or state agency decision, including actions affecting professional or occupational licenses; natural resource permits or quotas; assessments; tax rates; health, safety or environmental standards; insurance or business practices.

DEBTOR: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child

☐ LENDER or ☐ CREDITOR / Name: _____

Address: _____

Original loan: $_____ Balance owed: $_____ Interest rate: _____%

Term: ☐ _____ years ☐ _____ months / WRITTEN LOAN AGREEMENT? ☐ Yes / ☐ No

SCHEDULE F

1. LEASES: GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS & LEASES NONE: check box → ☐

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

JAN 1 3 2010

List all contracts, bids and offers to contract with the state or any state or municipal agency or entity. Report contract interests as individual, sole proprietor, family member, partnership, professional corporation, limited liability company or through a corporation in which filer or family members held a controlling interest.

CONTRACTOR: X Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / TYPE of INTEREST: Professional Services Contract

☐ Bid / ☐ Offer / XHeld / CONTRACT ID (name/number): 2006-0200-5577 – Legal Services

CONTRACTING AGENCY: State of Alaska; Department of Administration

CONTRACT DESCRIPTION: Court appointed Legal Services

CONTRACTOR: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / TYPE of INTEREST: _____

☐ Bid / ☐ Offer / ☐ Held / CONTRACT ID (name/number): _____

CONTRACTING AGENCY: _____

CONTRACT DESCRIPTION: _____

_____

2. LEASES: NATURAL RESOURCE LEASES

NONE: check box → ☐

List natural resource leases – including mineral, timber, oil and gas leases – held, bid or offered during the reporting period. Report lease interests as individual, sole proprietor, family member, partnership, professional corporation, limited liability company; or corporation in which you or family (individually or together) held controlling interest.

LEASEHOLDER: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / TYPE of INTEREST: _____

☐ Bid / ☐ Offer / ☐ Held / LEASE ID (name/number): _____

LEASE DESCRIPTION: _____

LEASEHOLDER: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child / TYPE of INTEREST: _____

☐ Bid / ☐ Offer / ☐ Held / LEASE ID (name/number): _____

LEASE DESCRIPTION: _____

SCHEDULE G

1. CLOSE ECONOMIC ASSOCIATIONS

NONE: check box → ☐

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

JAN 13 2010

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

EXEMPT: Municipal and local officials are exempt from reporting close economic associations. Members of state boards and commissions are exempt from reporting close economic associations. Local officials and state board/commission members do NOT have to complete this section. Check the box for NONE.

STATE PUBLIC OFFICIALS: Disclose financial relations with legislators, other public officials and lobbyists.

LEGISLATIVE BRANCH: Disclose financial relations with public officials, lobbyists, other legislators, and legislative employees. Report close economic association detailed information to the Legislative Ethics Committee.

CLOSE ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION means a financial relationship between public officials, legislators and lobbyists, including shared interests in a business, property, association, partnership, corporation or LLC.

CHANGES: Report new close economic associations within 60 days.

PERSON DISCLOSING ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child

PERSON with WHOM ASSOCIATION EXISTS: _____

DESCRIPTION of ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION: _____

_____

PERSON DISCLOSING ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION: ☐ Filer / ☐ Spouse/domestic partner / ☐ Child

PERSON with WHOM ASSOCIATION EXISTS: _____

DESCRIPTION of ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION: _____

_____

2. FILERS WITH A LOBBYIST SPOUSE or DOMESTIC PARTNER NONE: ☐

EXEMPT: Local officials and members of state boards and commissions are EXEMPT. Check NONE.

STATE PUBLIC OFFICIALS with a lobbyist spouse or domestic partner: Report names and addresses of each employer of the lobbyist and the total monetary value received from each of the lobbyist's employers.

LEGISLATIVE BRANCH filers with a lobbyist spouse or domestic partner: Disclose employer of lobbyist and compensation, and report details to t he Legislative Ethics Committee.

CHANGES: Report changes in lobbyist's employer within 48 hours of the change.

LOBBYIST'S EMPLOYER: NAME & ADDRESS	COMPENSATION

CERTIFICATION

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

JAN 1 3 2010

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
2010 FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Covers the reporting period Jan. 1, 2009– Dec. 31, 2009

I certify under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and the information in this disclosure statement is, to the best of my knowledge, true, correct and complete. A person who makes a false sworn certification which he or she does not believe to be true is guilty of perjury.

SIGNATURE H. Conner Thomas

If you are filing online, you must have an Electronic Filing Agreement with APOC to use an electronic signature.

H. Conner Thomas — NAME of FILER

1/10/10 Nome, Alaska — DATE & PLACE SIGNED / FILED

All officials and candidates who are required to file disclosure statements are solely responsible for filing complete, accurate and truthful statements by the deadlines.

WHERE TO FILE THIS STATEMENT

STATE OFFICIALS: File initial, annual and final statements with the Alaska Public Offices Commission.

STATE CANDIDATES: File with the Division of Elections along with Declaration of Candidacy.

BOROUGH / MUNICIPAL / CITY OFFICIALS and CANDIDATES: File with city or borough clerk where you hold or seek office.

FILE ELECTRONICALLY to APOC: doa.apoc.reports@alaska.gov

THIS IS A PUBLIC DOCUMENT

NOTE: Public officials who are required to file this disclosure statement may have additional obligations to disclose conflicts of interest or potential conflicts under state executive, legislative or judicial ethics rules or personnel rules. Legislators who are required to file this disclosure statement have additional disclosure and reporting requirements imposed by the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics. Local officials may also be governed by local ethics ordinances or personnel rules.

Disclosure forms, guidelines, laws and regulations are online: doa.alaska.gov/apoc or from APOC offices

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION

ANCHORAGE OFFICE:
2221 E. Northern Lights Blvd – Rm 128
Anchorage, AK 99508-4149
907-276-4176 / Toll-free 800-478-4176
Fax 907-276-7018

JUNEAU OFFICE:
240 Main St. – Rm 500
Mail: P.O. Box 110222
Juneau, AK 99811-0222
907-465-4864 / Fax 907-465-4832

E-mail APOC: doa.apoc@alaska.gov
File electronic disclosure statements to: doa.apoc.reports@alaska.gov

GIVE DETAILED DESCRIPTIONS WHERE REQUESTED. USE EXTRA PAGES IF NECESSARY.	CHECK ALL BOXES THAT APPLY. For example, check multiple boxes for joint property owners	IF YOU HAVE NOTHING TO REPORT or A SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO YOU, CHECK "NONE"

JAN 1 8 2010

2009 Disclosures

Conrad Klemzak P.O. Box 1990 Nome, AK 99762	Roy Adams P.O. Box 29 Kivalina, AK 99750	Sitnasuak Native Corp. P.O. Box 905 Nome, AK 99762	Johnnie Carter c/o Alaska Court System P.O. Box 317 Kotzebue, AK 99752
Patricia Beckner P.O. Box 1817 Nome, AK 99762	Leo Douglas P.O. Box 47 Shungnak, AK 99773	Diana Ellanna P.O. Box Nome, AK 99762	Janalee Minnich P.O. Box Kotzebue, AK 99752
Charles Myers P.O. Box 125 Selawik, AK 99770	Lorin Downing P.O. Box 1074 Kotzebue, AK 99752	Barbara Keena 1045 16th Ave. S. St. Cloud, MN 56301	Sean Penetac P.O. Box 337 Nome, AK 99762
Calvin Gooden P.O. Box 2018 Nome, AK 99762	Estate of Xavier Pete c/o Box 61 Nome, AK 99762	Jake Sherman P.O. Box 878 Nome, AK 99762	Cynthia Poeppe P.O. Box 765 Kotzebue, AK 99752
Golovin Native Corporation P.O. Box 62099 Golovin, AK 99762	Ron Hunnicutt P.O. Box 472 Kotzebue, AK 99752	Jerry Austin P.O. Box 110 St. Michael, AK 99659	Elim Native Corporation P.O. Box 390910 Elim, AK 99739
Frank Lane P.O. Box 578 Kotzebue, AK 99752	Jeremiah Pete P.O. Box 1017 Stebbins, AK 99	Jeffrey Avery 189 E. Nelson Wasilla, AK 99654	Jim West, Jr. P.O. Box 967 Nome, AK 99762
Louis Warnke-Green P.O. Box 278 Nome, AK 99762	Duane Sampson P.O. Box 1088 Kotzebue, aK 99752	Bobby Frankson P.O. Box 209 Pt. Hope, AK 99766	Mario Casados P.O. Box 83 Pt. Hope, AK 99766
Mike Owens P.O. Box 1515 Nome, AK 99762	Blanche Cragle 4741 Hwy. 22 South Dickenson, ND 58601	Chester Koonuk P.O. Box 85 Pt. Hope, AK 99766	Lawrence Westlake, Jr. P.O. Box 110 Kiana, AK 99749
Sarah Kristiansen P.O. Box 444 Nome, AK 99762	Danny Aukon, Jr. P.O. Box 1968 Nome, AK 99762	Barbara Earp 21228 Lowland Ave. Eagle River, AK 99577	Brenda Green P.O. Box 1602 Nome, AK 99762
Michael West P.O. Box 751 Nome, AK 99762	Richard Patterson P.O. Box 1362 Barrow, AK 99723	Office of Public Advocacy 900 W. 5th Ave., Suite 525 Anchorage, AK 99501	Axel Odden P.O. Box 1043 Nome, AK 99762

JAN 1 3 2010

EXHIBIT
tabbies
A

Kathleen Haugan c/o Alaska Court System P.O. Box 317 Kotzebue, AK 99752

JAN 1 3 2010

130

WELLS FARGO ADVISORS

010809 02 MAAD 50 AUTOMIXED AADC 945
H CONNER THOMAS &
MARGARET A THOMAS JTWROS
PO BOX 865
NOME AK 99762-0865

4,585

SNAPSHOT
Current period ending November 30, 2009

ACCOUNT NAME: H CONNER THOMAS &
MARGARET A THOMAS JTWROS

ACCOUNT NUMBER: [redacted]

EXHIBIT B

Your Financial Advisor:
LISA DOCHE & RALPH PAPETTI
Phone: 480-419-9600 / 800-453-6737

20551 NORTH PIMA RD
SUITE 200
SCOTTSDALE AZ 85255

JAN 18 2010

If you have more than one account with us, why not link them and receive summary information for your entire household? Contact Your Financial Advisor for more details.

Message from Wells Fargo Advisors

WELLS FARGO & CO. WAS FOUNDED ON WALL STREET MORE THAN 150 YEARS AGO, AND OPENED ITS FIRST OFFICE IN SAN FRANCISCO IN 1852. TODAY, WELLS FARGO ADVISORS CARRIES ON THE COMPANY'S STORIED TRADITION OF HELPING FAMILIES MANAGE THE IMPORTANT ASPECTS OF THEIR FINANCIAL LIFE.

Wells Fargo Advisors, LLC, member NYSE/SIPC. Brokerage accounts are carried by First Clearing, LLC (FCC), member NYSE/SIPC.

Additional information

Gross proceeds

Portfolio detail

Cash and Sweep Balances

Bank Deposit Sweep - Consists of monies he deposited at one or more additional banks affili
FDIC rules. For additional information on the B

DESCRIPTION
Cash
BANK DEPOSIT SWEEP Interest Period 11/01/09 - 11/30/09
Total Cash and Sweep Balances

* APY measures the total amount of the interest yield is expressed as an annualized rate, based

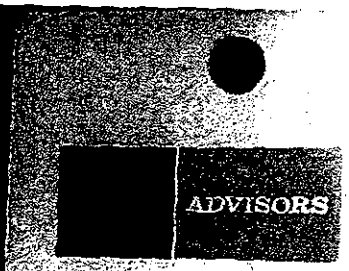
Stocks and Options

Stocks

DESCRIPTION
AMGEN INC AMGN Acquired 09/04/07
FIRST TRUST ETF NYSE ARCA BIOTEC FBT Acquired 07/24/07 Acquired 07/24/07
Total
GARMIN LTD GRMN Acquired 05/03/07

JAN 3 2010



Stocks and Options

Stocks continued

DESCRIPTION	C
I SHARES S&P GLOBAL TECHNOLOGY SECTOR INDEX FD IXN Acquired 01/11/06 Acquired 09/26/07	2
Total	3
INDEX SHS INC MSCI S KOREA WEBS INDEX FUND WEBS INDEX SERIES EWY Acquired 09/26/07	2
ISHARES BARCLAYS TIPS BOND FUND TIP Acquired 07/24/09	1
MARKET VECTORS ET GLOBAL ALTERNATIVE ENERGY GEX Acquired 05/01/09 Acquired 05/13/09	40 20
Total	60
NORTEL NETWORKS CORP NRTLQ Acquired 06/18/08
RYDEX S&P EQUAL WEIGHT FINANCIAL RYF Acquired 04/11/08 Acquired 06/04/08	37 7
Total	45
SECTOR SPDR TR TECHNOLOGY SELECT SECTOR XLK Acquired 12/19/03	50

JAN 1 3 2010

WSP63RLD 01080

Stocks and Options

Stocks continued

DESCRIPTION Acquired 12/21/04
Total
TEVA PHARMACEUTICAL ADR INDS LTD TEVA Acquired 08/17/04
Total Stocks
Total Stocks and Options

Cost information for one or more securities is not available.

Mutual Funds

Mutual fund shares are priced at net asset value.

Open End Mutual Funds

DESCRIPTION
ALLIANCEBERNSTEIN FDS INTERNATIONAL GROWTH FUND CL A AWPAX Acquired 02/19/99 Reinvestments
Total
FIRST EAGLE FDS INC OVERSEAS FD CL A SGOVX Acquired 12/10/02 Reinvestments
Total

JAN 1 3 2010

[redacted]

WELLS FARGO ADVISORS

Mutual Funds

Open End Mutual Funds continue

DESCRIPTION
GOLDMAN SACHS TR FINL SQUARE MONEY MKT FD INSTL CLASS FSMXX
Acquired 07/25/06
Acquired 12/20/07
Reinvestments
Total
HARTFORD FORTIS FUNDS SMALLCAP GRWTH CL A HSLAX
Acquired 09/15/05
Acquired 03/31/06
Reinvestments
Total
HARTFORD MUT FDS INC CAP APPREC FD CL A ITHAX
Acquired 09/15/05
Acquired 04/24/08
Reinvestments
Total
KEELEY FUNDS INC SMALL CAP VALUE FUND CLASS A SHARES KSCVX
Acquired 09/27/07
Acquired 10/15/09
Reinvestments
Total
PIMCO FDS PAC INVT MGMT SER-COMMODITY REAL RETURN STRAT FD INSTL CL PCRIX
Acquired 12/01/03
Acquired 10/15/09
Reinvestments
Total

JAN 13 2010

WSP63

[redacted]

Mutual Funds

Open End Mutual Funds continued

DESCRIPTION

VAN KAMPEN MID CAP GROWTH FUND CLASS A VGRAX
Acquired 07/14/05
Reinvestments

Total

VAN KAMPEN AMERICAN FRANCHISE FUND CLASS A
Acquired 08/04/09

WT MUT FD CRM MID CAP VALUE FD INSTL CL
Acquired 09/15/05
Reinvestments

Total

Total Open End Mutual Funds

Closed End Mutual Funds

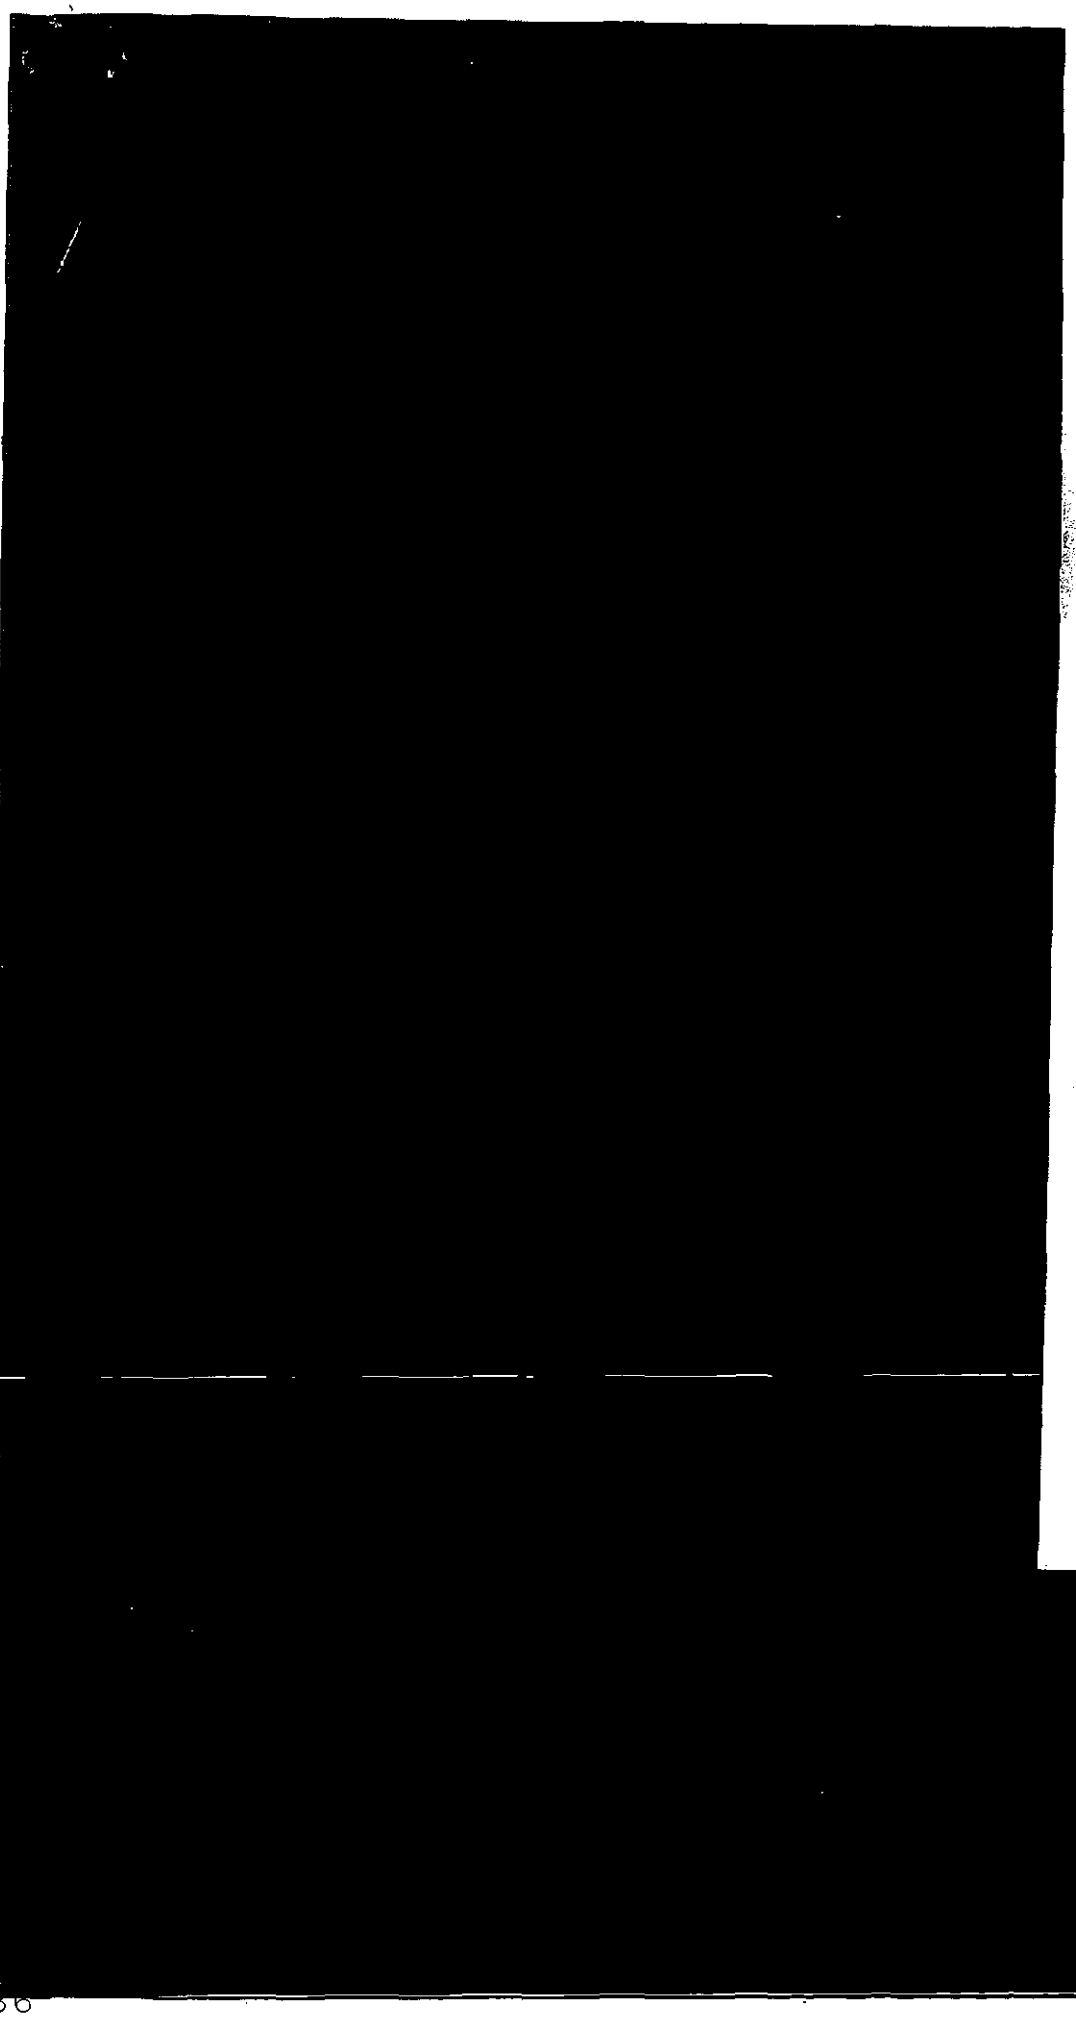
DESCRIPTION

BLACKROCK REAL ASSET EQUITY TR
BCF
Acquired 07/09/07
Acquired 07/09/07
Acquired 07/09/07
Acquired 07/09/07
Acquired 05/13/09

Total

COHEN & STEERS WORLDWID REALTY INCOME FUND INC
RWF
Acquired 06/04/09

JAN 1 3 2010



WELLS FARGO ADVISORS

Mutual Funds

Closed End Mutual Funds continu

DESCRIPTION
ADVENT/CLAYMORE GLOBAL CONVERTIBLE SECURITIES & INCOME FUND AGC Acquired 06/04/08 Acquired 06/04/08 Acquired 10/15/09
Total
NUVEEN INSD MUN OPPTY FD INC NIO Acquired 12/27/94 Acquired 09/26/07 Acquired 02/18/09
Total
Total Closed End Mutual Funds
Total Mutual Funds

Bank Deposit Sweep Allo

Monies on deposit at each bank, together bank in accordance with FDIC rules for a and therefore not covered by SIPC. Settl that occurs after 2 PM ET on the last busir

DESCRIPTION
WELLS FARGO BANK, N.A.
Total Bank Deposits

JAN 1 8 2010

WSP

Lewis & Thomas, P.C. 401(K) Profit Sharing Plan

Fidelity INVESTMENTS

Retirement Savings Statement

March 1, 2009 - May 31, 2009

H CONNER THOMAS
P.O. BOX 865
NOME, AK 99762

For information virtually 24 hours a day call:
1-800-835-5097
Internet Address: http://netbenefits.401k.com
Representatives are available 8:30 AM - 8:00 PM

Your Account Summary

Beginning Balance
Your Contributions
Change in Market Value
Ending Balance

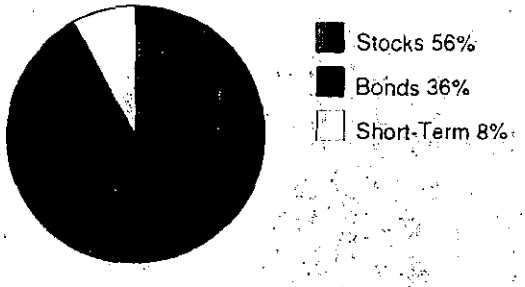
Additional Information
- Vested Balance
- Dividends & Interest

Your Personal Rate of Return

This Period	19.2%
Year to Date	7.5%

Your Personal Rate of Return is calculated with a time-weighted formula, widely used by financial analysts to calculate investment earnings. It reflects the results of your investment selections as well as any activity in the plan account(s) shown. There are other Personal Rate of Return formulas used that may yield different results. Remember that past performance is no guarantee of future results.

Your Asset Allocation



Your account is currently allocated among the asset classes specified above. Percentages and totals may not be exact due to rounding.

The Additional Fund Information section lists the allocation of your blended funds.

Market Value of Your Account

Displayed in this section is the value of your account for the statement period, in both shares and dollars.

Investment	Shares on 02/28/2009	Shares on 05/31/2009	Price on 02/28/2009	Price on 05/31/2009	Market Value on 02/28/2009	Market Value on 05/31/2009
Blended Investment*
Fid Freedom 2015			$7.72	$9.16
Account Total

Remember that a dividend payment to fund shareholders reduces the share price of the fund, so a decrease in the share price for the statement period does not necessarily reflect lower fund performance.

* Some of your investments are classified as a Blended Investment. Blended Investments may include a mixture of stocks, bonds, and/or short term assets. Please refer to the "Additional Investment Information" section to determine the allocation of your blended investments' underlying assets. The asset breakdown of your portfolio is reflected in the pie chart in the "Asset Allocation" section.

Please read this statement carefully. Any error must be reported to Fidelity Inv

13266 K1013266 0001 20090606 K100

JAN 13 2010

EXHIBIT C

137

Market Value of Your Account (continued)

Please refer to NetBenefits and other Plan information, such as your SPD, for a description of your right to direct investments under the Plan. For information on any plan restrictions on those rights, please contact your benefits office.

To help achieve long-term retirement security, you should give careful consideration to the benefits of a well-balanced and diversified investment portfolio. Spreading your assets among different types of investments can help you achieve a favorable rate of return, while minimizing your overall risk of losing money. This is because market or other economic conditions that cause one category of assets, or one particular security, to perform very well often cause another asset category, or another particular security, to perform poorly. If you invest more than 20% of your retirement savings in any one company or industry, your savings may not be properly diversified. Although diversification is not a guarantee against loss, it is an effective strategy to help you manage investment risk.

In deciding how to invest your retirement savings, you should take into account all of your assets, including any retirement savings outside of the Plan. No single approach is right for everyone because, among other factors, individuals have different financial goals, different time horizons for meeting their goals, and different tolerances for risk. It is also important to periodically review your investment portfolio, your investment objectives, and the investment options under the Plan to help ensure that your retirement savings will meet your retirement goals. Visit the Department of Labor website http://www.dol.gov/ebsa/investing.html for information on individual investing and diversification.

Your Contribution Elections as of 06/05/2009

This section displays the funds in which your future contributions will be invested.

Investment	Percent
Fid Freedom 2015	100%
Total	100%

Contributions	Employee Deferral	Profit Sharing	Rollover
This Period	[redacted]	$0.00	$0.00
Year To Date	[redacted]	$0.00	$0.00
Inception To Date	[redacted]	$0.00	$0.00
Vested Percent	100.00	100.00	100.00
Total Account Balance	[redacted]	[redacted]	[redacted]
Total Vested Balance	[redacted]	[redacted]	[redacted]

Your Account Activity

Use this section as a summary of transactions that occurred in your account during the statement period.

Activity	Fid Freedom 2015
Beginning Balance	[redacted]
Your Contributions
Change in Market Value
Ending Balance
Dividends & Interest

A Message from Fidelity Investments

To access performance information on the investment options available in your Plan - log onto NetBenefits at www.401k.com or call your plan's toll-free number.

Before investing in any mutual fund, please carefully consider the investment objectives, risks, charges and expenses. For this and other information, call or write Fidelity for a free prospectus. Read it carefully before you invest.

Fidelity Brokerage Services LLC, Member NYSE, SIPC, 300 Puritan Way, Marlborough, MA 01752.

JAN 1 8 2010

139

WELLS FARGO ADVISORS

009656 02 MAAD 43 AUTOMIXED AADC 945
H CONNER THOMAS IRA
FCC AS CUSTODIAN
PO BOX 865
NOME AK 99762-0865

WSP63FLD

43,053

JAN 1 2 2010

SNAPSHOT
Current period ending November 30, 2009

ACCOUNT NAME: H CONNER THOMAS IRA
FCC AS CUSTODIAN

ACCOUNT NUMBER: [redacted]

EXHIBIT D

Your Financial Advisor:
LISA DOCHE & RALPH PAPETTI
Phone: 480-419-9600 / 800-453-6737

20551 NORTH PIMA RD
SUITE 200
SCOTTSDALE AZ 85255

If you have more than one account with us, why not link them and receive summary information for your entire household? Contact Your Financial Advisor for more details.

Message from Wells Fargo Advisors

WELLS FARGO & CO., WAS FOUNDED ON WALL STREET MORE THAN 150 YEARS AGO, AND OPENED ITS FIRST OFFICE IN SAN FRANCISCO IN 1852. TODAY, WELLS FARGO ADVISORS CARRIES ON THE COMPANY'S STORIED TRADITION OF HELPING FAMILIES MANAGE THE IMPORTANT ASPECTS OF THEIR FINANCIAL LIFE.

Wells Fargo Advisors, LLC, member NYSE/SIPC. Brokerage accounts are carried by First Clearing, LLC (FCC), member NYSE/SIPC.

[redacted]

WELLS FARGO [redacted]

Additional information

Gross proceeds

Portfolio detail

Cash and Sweep Balances

Bank Deposit Sweep - Consists of monies deposited at one or more additional banks a FDIC rules. For additional information on the

DESCRIPTION
Cash
BANK DEPOSIT SWEEP Interest Period 11/01/09 - 11/30/09
Total Cash and Sweep Balances

* APY measures the total amount of the inter yield is expressed as an annualized rate, bas

Stocks and Options

Stocks

DESCRIPTION
VANGUARD UTILITIES ETF VPU Acquired 08/07/09
Total Stocks
Total Stocks and Options

JAN 13 2010

WSP63R.D

[redacted]

Mutual Funds

Mutual fund shares are priced at net asset v

Closed End Mutual Funds

DESCRIPTION
BLACKROCK FLOATING RATE INCOME TRUST FRA Acquired 09/14/06 Acquired 06/27/07
Total
BLUE CHIP VALUE FD INC BLU Acquired 08/07/09
EVERGREEN INCOME ADV FD EAD Acquired 08/17/04 Acquired 06/27/07
Total
Total Closed End Mutual Funds
Total Mutual Funds

Bank Deposit Sweep Allocati

Monies on deposit at each bank, together with a bank in accordance with FDIC rules for a total o and therefore not covered by SIPC. Settlement that occurs after 2 PM ET on the last business d

DESCRIPTION
WELLS FARGO BANK, N.A.
Total Bank Deposits

JAN 1 3 2010

Division of Retirement & Benefits
C/O Great-West Retirement Services
P.O. Box 173764
Denver, CO 80217-3764

STATE OF ALASKA

H C THOMAS
BOX 865
NOME AK 99762

Statement Period: 07/01/2009 - 09/30/2009
Participant ID: [redacted]
Plan: 98214
State of Alaska

98214-01 457 Plan = Alaska Deferred Compensation Plan (DCP) \ 98214-03 401(a) Plan = Alaska Supplemental Benefits-Annuit Plan (SBS-AP)

Account Summary

	98214-03 401(a) Plan
Balance as of June 30, 2009	$[redacted]
Change in Value	[redacted]
Expenses	[redacted]
Balance as of September 30, 2009	$[redacted]

Up to date account information, investment returns, and plan highlights can be obtained 24 hours a day online at www.alaska.gov/drb.

GREEN IS TWICE-AS-NICE! You re already saving the green by investing in your retirement plan, but did you know that you can alsc receive your quarterly statements and stuffers electronically? Visit our website today to sign up for Online File Cabinet.

Investment Selection for Future Contributions

All future contributions will be directed as follows:

100% Alaska Balanced Trust

JAN 7 3 2010

Great-West
RETIREMENT SERVICES®
"Securities, when offered, are offered through GWFS Equities, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Great-West Life & Annuity Insurance Company."
Great-West Retirement Services
P.O. Box 173764, Denver, CO 80217-3764

EXHIBIT
tabbies
E

STATE OF ALASKA

H C THOMAS
[redacted]

Account Summary by Investment Option

	Beginning Balance	Deposits	Change in Value	Transfers	Withdrawals /Expenses	Ending Balance	Endin Unit Share
Alaska Balanced Trust	[redacted]		[redacted]		[redacted]	[redacted]	[redacted]
Totals	[redacted]		[redacted]		[redacted]	[redacted]

Account Summary by Contribution Source

	Beginning Balance	Deposits	Change in Value	Transfers	Withdrawals /Expenses	Ending Balance
Employee Before Tax	[redacted]		[redacted]		[redacted]	[redacted]
Employer Before Tax	[redacted]		[redacted]		[redacted]	[redacted]
Totals	[redacted]		[redacted]		[redacted]	[redacted]

Beneficiary Information

Great-West Retirement Services does not currently hold a beneficiary designation on your account. You may update this information by visiting your plan s website at www.state.ak.us/drb. Log in to your account and click on the "Change Beneficiary" link under the Change Account menu option.

General Information

	Employee	Employer	Total
2008 Year-End Balance:	[redacted]	[redacted]	[redacted]

JAN 1 3 2010

Alaska Public Employees' Retirement System

2009 Annual Benefit Statement

The account and service information contained in this statement is based on data reported by your employer(s). Please contact your employer(s) about any discrepancies. The benefit information shown is an estimate. While every effort has been made to ensure the accuracy of your statement, please know it does not have the force and effect of the law, rule, or regulations governing the payment of benefits. All benefits will be paid under the provisions of the applicable Alaska Statutes and Federal law.

H CONNOR THOMAS
PO BOX 865
NOME, AK 99762-0865

The Alaska Division of Retirement & Benefits is pleased to provide you with this personalized benefit statement highlighting the financial security you are building for the future. It also summarizes the protection you and your family have against financial losses that may occur because of your disability or death. This statement is produced using data as of 6/30/2009. Please review the statement carefully, verifying total years of service and personal data such as birth date, marital status, etc.

Your benefits are a significant portion of your compensation package. The value of your benefits will continue to increase over time and you will want to compare this statement with those you receive in the future to measure your progress. Most financial planners suggest you need 80% to 85% of your current monthly income to maintain your standard of living at retirement. When you are two years away from retirement, visit our website or contact the Division of Retirement and Benefits to enroll in a retirement planning seminar.

Personal Information

Name: H CONNOR THOMAS
Retirement ID Number: [redacted]
BirthDate: 12/20/1951 Marital Status: M

Account Summary as of 6/30/2009

- Our records indicate you are in Tier 1
- Your total service is 3.12328 years
- You are not vested in PERS
- Your estimated average monthly earnings are $[redacted]
- You currently have no service indebtedness

Annual Contribution Summary

7/1/2008 Account Balance:	$[redacted]
Mandatory Contributions Made:	$0.00
Mandatory Interest Earned:	$[redacted]
6/30/2009 Account Balance:	$[redacted]

Projected Retirement Summary

Your current PERS status means that you must be 55 years old and be vested or have 30 years of service to be eligible for normal retirement.

Monthly plan benefits shown on this statement were estimated under the normal retirement option, which provides you with a monthly income for your lifetime. Surviving beneficiaries are eligible to receive money from the PERS. If a retiree was eligible for health insurance benefits at the time of death, their surviving spouse may continue to be eligible for the same health insurance benefits.

JAN 1 8 2010

EXHIBIT
F

New York Life Insurance and Annuity Corporation
(A Delaware Corporation)
PO Box 130539
Dallas, TX 75313
(800) 695-1314

The Company You Keep

NEW YORK LIFE

ANNIVERSARY NOTICE

MRS MARGARET A THOMAS
PO BOX 865
NOME, AK 99762-0865

Agent/Representative
JOHN LUKEHART CLU CHFC
701 W 8TH AVE STE 900
ANCHORAGE, AK 99501-3467
(907) 257-5213

Welcome to your Single Premium Retirement Annuity-2 Update! This notice is designed to keep you in touch with your policy as it continues to grow in value.

CLIENT ID	POLICY NUMBER	POLICY DATE	ANNUITANT
[redacted]	[redacted]	1/13/1992	MRS MARGARET A THOMAS

TOTAL PREMIUM	ANNIVERSARY DATE
$18,388.23	1/13/2009

CASH VALUE AS OF 1/13/2008:	$ [redacted]
INTEREST EARNED FOR POLICY YEAR:	[redacted]
WITHDRAWAL(S) DURING POLICY YEAR:	0.00
SURRENDER CHARGES INCURRED DURING POLICY YEAR:	0.00
CASH VALUE AS OF 1/13/2009:	$ [redacted]

INITIAL PREMIUM EFFECTIVE ANNUAL YIELD GUARANTEED TO 1/13/2010: 4.00%

Your continued satisfaction is important to us. Both your agent and I will be happy to answer any questions you may have. Just give us a call!

Sincerely,

George E. Wilson, FLMI
Service Center Vice President

JAN 13 2010

EXHIBIT
tabbies
G

Sun Life Financial®

Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada
P.O. Box 9133 Wellesley Hills, MA
Tel: (800) 752-
Website: www.sunlife-us

QUARTERLY STATEM

January 1, 2009 to September 30,

PREPARED FOR:

MARGARET A THOMAS 403B PLAN
PO BOX 865
NOME AK 99762-0865

101729-11

BROKER/DEALER:

LISA L DOCHE
WACHOVIA SECURITIES LLC
20551 N PIMA RD
STE 200
SCOTTSDALE AZ 85255

Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada (U.S.) (Sun Life) is a member of the Sun Life Financial group of companies. Sun Life provides this confirmation on behalf of the broker/dealer of record, who is acting as agent of Sun Life.

12/31/2008 Value	09/30/2009 Value
$[redacted]	$[redacted]

CONTRACT INFORMATION

Contract No. [redacted] Compass 3 Fixed/Variable Annuity

Issue Date:	January 07, 1992	Agent Number:	3000-235611
Annuitant Name:	MARGARET A THOMAS	Dealer Number:	01094-021178
Primary Beneficiary:	H CONNER THOMAS

CURRENT INVESTMENT PERFORMANCE

Variable Investment Option	Beginning Value 12/31/2008	Current Year Net Activity	Number of Units	Unit Value	Ending Value 09/30/2009	Net Change in Value
Total Return	$[redacted]	$[redacted]	4104.71330	$[redacted]	$[redacted]	$[redacted]
Grand Total	$[redacted]	$[redacted]			$[redacted]	$[redacted]

HISTORICAL TRANSACTION SUMMARY

Investment Option	January 07, 1992 - September 30, 2009 (Issue Date to Present) Investments	Withdrawals	January 01, 2009 - September 30, 2009 (Year to Date) Investments	Withdrawals
Total Return	$[redacted]	$0.00	$0.00	$0.00
Government Securities	$[redacted]	$0.00	$0.00	$0.00
Total	$[redacted]	$0.00	$0.00	$0.00

If you find an error in this statement, you should notify us at the address or telephone number provided on the statement. Unless we receive notice of any such error from you within 60 days of the period ending date of this statement, we may not be responsible for correcting the error.

DEATH BENEFIT INFORMATION

Listed below are the applicable death benefit values for your contract:

- Account Value [redacted]
- Net Purchase Payments [redacted]
- 7th Anniversary Account Value [redacted]

JAN 1 3 2010

Greatest of above amounts is: 7th Anniversary Account Value

Total Death Benefit amount as of statement date [redacted]

ADDITIONAL CONTRACT INFORMATION

EXHIBIT
tabbies
H

No fund transfer(s) processed during this contract year. Please refer to the trans of your prospectus for more information about the policy.

147

WELLS FARGO ADVISORS

031043 02 MAAD 140 AUTOMIXED AADC 945
MARGARET A THOMAS IRA R/O
FCC AS CUSTODIAN
PO BOX 865
NOME AK 99762-0865

SNAPSHOT
Current period ending September 30, 2009

ACCOUNT NAME: MARGARET A THOMAS IRA R/O
FCC AS CUSTODIAN

ACCOUNT NUMBER: [redacted]

EXHIBIT
I

Your Financial Advisor:
LISA DOCHE & RALPH PAPETTI
Phone: 480-419-9600 / 800-453-6737

20551 NORTH PIMA RD
SUITE 200
SCOTTSDALE AZ 85255

JAN 13 2010

If you have more than one account with us, why not link them and receive summary information for your entire household? Contact Your Financial Advisor for more details.

Message from Wells Fargo Advisors

THE WACHOVIASEC.COM WEB SITE IS MOVING. BEGINNING OCT. 19, THE WACHOVIASEC.COM WEB ADDRESS WILL TAKE YOU TO WELLSFARGOADVISORS.COM. YOU CAN ACCESS YOUR ACCOUNT(S) AS WELL AS VALUABLE INFORMATION ABOUT THE MARKETS AND OUR PRODUCTS AND SERVICES ON THAT WEB SITE.

[redacted]

Portfolio detail

Cash and Sweep Balances

Bank Deposit Sweep - Consists of monies l deposited at one or more additional banks af
FDIC rules. For additional information on the

DESCRIPTION
BANK DEPOSIT SWEEP Interest Period 09/01/09 - 09/30/09
Total Cash and Sweep Balances

* APY measures the total amount of the intere yield is expressed as an annualized rate, bas

Mutual Funds

- Mutual fund shares are priced at net asset val

Open End Mutual Funds

DESCRIPTION
PRINCIPAL INVESTORS SAM COM GROWTH PORTFOLIO A SAGPX Acquired 11/08/05 Acquired 11/14/05 Reinvestments
Total
Total Open End Mutual Funds
Total Mutual Funds

JAN 1 2 2010

WSP63FLD

[redacted]

Alaska Public Employees' Retirement System

2009 Annual Benefit Statement

The account and service information contained in this statement is based on data reported by your employer(s). Please contact your employer(s) about any discrepancies. The benefit information shown is an estimate. While every effort has been made to ensure the accuracy of your statement, please know it does not have the force and effect of the law, rule, or regulations governing the payment of benefits. All benefits will be paid under the provisions of the applicable Alaska Statutes and Federal law.

MARGARET A THOMAS
PO BOX 865
NOME, AK 99762-0865

The Alaska Division of Retirement & Benefits is pleased to provide you with this personalized benefit statement highlighting the financial security you are building for the future. It also summarizes the protection you and your family have against financial losses that may occur because of your disability or death. This statement is produced using data as of 6/30/2009. Please review the statement carefully, verifying total years of service and personal data such as birth date, marital status, etc.

Your benefits are a significant portion of your compensation package. The value of your benefits will continue to increase over time and you will want to compare this statement with those you receive in the future to measure your progress. Most financial planners suggest you need 80% to 85% of your current monthly income to maintain your standard of living at retirement. When you are two years away from retirement, visit our website or contact the Division of Retirement and Benefits to enroll in a retirement planning seminar.

Personal Information

Name: MARGARET A THOMAS
Retirement ID Number: [redacted]
BirthDate: 5/4/1957 Marital Status: M

Account Summary as of 6/30/2009

- Our records indicate you are in Tier 1
- Your total service is 5.11095 years
- Your service has been calculated using the alternate PERS option for school district employees
- You are vested in PERS
- Your estimated average monthly earnings are $[redacted]
- You currently have no service indebtedness
- Amount previously refunded to you is $[redacted]
- Your 2008 Reported Earnings were $[redacted]

Annual Contribution Summary

7/1/2008 Account Balance:	$[redacted]
Mandatory Contributions Made:	$[redacted]
Mandatory Interest Earned:	$[redacted]
6/30/2009 Account Balance:	$[redacted]

Projected Retirement Summary

Your current PERS status means that you must be 55 years old and be vested or have 30 years of service to be eligible for normal retirement.

Monthly plan benefits shown on this statement were estimated under the normal retirement option, which provides you with a monthly income for your lifetime. Surviving beneficiaries are eligible to receive money from the PERS. If a retiree was eligible for health insurance benefits at the time of death, their surviving spouse may continue to be eligible for the same health insurance benefits.

JAN 1 3 2010

EXHIBIT
tabbies
J

THE UNIVERSITY OF ALASKA COLLEGE SAVINGS PLAN

THEY DREAM. YOU PLAN. WE HELP.

P.O. Box 17479, Baltimore, MD 21297-1479 • 1-800-478-0003 • uacollegesavings.com

ACCOUNT STATEMENT
January 1, 2009 to December 31, 2009

[redacted]

ACCOUNT HOLDER OR CUSTODIAN

H CONNER THOMAS
PO BOX 865
NOME AK 99762-0865

YEAR-TO-DATE ACCOUNT SUMMARY

2009 Beginning Balance		$[redacted]
+	YTD Contributions	$[redacted]
-	YTD Distributions	$0.00
+/-	Gain/Loss	$[redacted]
Total Ending Balance		$[redacted]

This year when you check "yes" on line 6 of your 2010 PFD application and contribute to the U A College Savings Plan, you'll be entered to win a $25,000 scholarship account or one of four $2,500 scholarship accounts awarded by the Education Trust of Alaska. Certain restrictions apply, visit uacollegesavings.com for more information.

ACCOUNT SUMMARY BY BENEFICIARY

BENEFICIARY NAME	YEAR TO DATE CONTRIBUTIONS	YEAR TO DATE DISTRIBUTIONS	ENDING BALANCE
MALSIE E THOMAS	[redacted]	$0.00	[redacted]
	[redacted]	$0.00	[redacted]

JAN 13 2010

EXHIBIT
tabbies
K

Alaska State Legislature

House of Representatives

Office of the Chief Clerk

Official Business

State Capitol, Room 216
Juneau, AK 99801-1182
Phone: (907) 465-3725
Fax: (907) 465-5334

MEMORANDUM

Date: February 5, 2010

To: Representative Ramras, Chair
Judiciary Committee

From: Suzi Lowell
Chief Clerk

Subject: Governor's Appointment(s)

The Speaker referred the following Governor's appointment(s) to the Judiciary Committee:

Attorney General
Daniel S. Sullivan
Appointed: 6/16/2009

Board of Governors of the Alaska Bar Association
Donald McLean – Wasilla
Appointed: 3/1/2007
Reappointed: 3/1/2010 Term Expires: 3/1/2013

Public Defender
Quinlan Steiner – Anchorage
Appointed: 10/14/2005
Reappointed: 10/9/2009 Term Expires: 10/14/2013

Violent Crimes Compensation Board
Nora G. Barlow – Anchorage
Appointed: 3/1/2010 Term Expires: 3/1/2011

Gerad G. Godfrey – Eagle River
Appointed: 2/19/2003
Reappointed: 4/6/2004 Reappointed: 3/1/2007
Reappointed: 3/1/2010 Term Expires: 3/1/2013

The Referral for Confirmation page(s), resume(s), and a signature page are attached for your use. In addition, copies of the resume(s) are also being sent electronically.

Attachments as noted

Donald Rae McLean

P.O. Box 873836
Wasilla,Alaska 99687

Education

Bachelor of Science with Distinction Biology 1974
Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University

Doctor of Dental Surgery 1978
Medical College of Virginia/Virginia Commonwealth University

Executive Juris Doctorate (in progress) expected completion: 2008
Concord School of Law

Professional Employment History

General Dentist (Captain) 1978-82
Elmendorf AFB,Alaska

Private Practice of Dentistry 1982-present
Wasilla,Alaska

Professional Licensure

Alaska State Dental License AK#522
Virginia State Dental License(inactive) #0401006134

Personal History

Born March 9,1952 in Hopewell,Virginia
Parents:Charles L. McLean(deceased) and Katherine J. McLean who presently resides in Lynchburg,Virginia
Married 31 years to Lynne F. McLean and 3 children; Kimberly(29 y.o.), Nicole(26 y.o.), and Christopher(20 y.o.)
Interests include agriculture,sports,education and the news

QUINLAN STEINER

2205 Arlington Drive ♦ Anchorage, AK ♦ 907. 317.4746

Education:

Northwestern School of Law of Lewis & Clark College — Portland, OR Juris Doctor — 1998

Seattle University — Seattle, WA
B.A. Business Administration — 1989

West Anchorage High School — Anchorage, AK 1984

Work Experience:

Alaska Public Defender Agency — Anchorage, AK
Director – Public Defender — 2005 – Present

Appointed to serve as the Public Defender for the State of Alaska and Director of the Alaska Public Defender Agency. The Public Defender Agency's mission is to provide constitutionally mandated legal representation to indigent individuals appointed by the courts in criminal and other state-initiated litigation.

Primary responsibilities include: directing organizational development in accordance with agency goals; personnel supervision and management; budget management; and testifying before the legislature on proposed legislation and budget proposals. Initiatives implemented: statewide case management system; regional organizational structure; new lawyer trial school; expanded recruiting program; mentoring program; and centralized appellate and post-conviction case processing.

Alaska Public Defender Agency — Anchorage, AK
Assistant Public Defender — 1998 - 2005

Appellate Attorney: drafted appellate briefs and conducted oral argument before the Alaska Court of Appeals and the Alaska Supreme Court; consulted with and advised trial attorneys on trial litigation issues; advised the Public Defender on pending legislation and other legal issues affecting the Agency.

Trial Attorney: managed a District and Superior Court trial caseload in Anchorage and for St. Paul Island; and conducted felony and misdemeanor trials. Other Activities: trained and supervised legal interns and new attorneys; served as a member of the Public Defender Training Conference Committee; personally developed and implemented training sessions on trial advocacy, motion writing, and legal analysis for the Agency's new lawyers; and participated in meetings of the Appellate Rules Committee, Pattern Jury Instruction Committee, and Appellate Delay Committee.

Alaska Public Defender Agency — Anchorage, AK
Investigator Intern / Legal Extern — 1995, 1997

Volunteered as an investigator in 1995 prior to attending law school. As a law student, served as legal extern in criminal law. Duties included conducting bail hearings, drafting appellate briefs, and conducted an oral argument before the Alaska Court of Appeals.

Intec Inc. — Anchorage, AK
Financial Assistant/Lead Backcountry Guide — 1993-1995

Duties as financial assistant included strategic planning, preparing financial statements, and bookkeeping. Duties as backcountry guide included conducting backcountry ski and glacier travel trips, trip planning, meal preparation, and ensuring safety of clients and assistant guides.

National Bank of Alaska — Juneau, AK
Loan Officer — 1990-1992

Completed management training program and worked as a loan officer in Juneau branch office. Commercial lending experience: business acquisition, lines of credit, letters of credit, equipment & inventory, commercial real estate, interim construction, SBA & BIA guaranteed, fishing boats. Consumer lending experience: automobile, boat, home equity, and personal. Participated in local branch board meetings on local and statewide financial outlook.

Northwest Deck Construction — Seattle, WA
Co-Owner — 1987-1989

Established company designing and constructing residential decks; responsible for project schedule management; preparation of financial statements and tax returns.

Activities:

Member Alaska Bar Association (1998 – present)
Criminal Rules Committee (October 2006 – present)
Member of the Criminal Justice Working Group (2008 – present)
Youth Court Bar Class Instructor – Spring 2008
Panel Member for Anchorage Mayor's Anti-Gang and Youth Violence Summit: Law Enforcement and Legal Issues Related to Gangs (November 15, 2006)
Panel Member on Ethics in Criminal Law Practice at University of Southern Maine School of Law (2005)
University of Alaska, Adjunct Professor: Criminal Procedure (2002)
Alaska Youth Court, Mock Trial Judge (2000)
Member of Denali Expedition (1994)
Member University of Colorado Ski Team (1984-1986)
Member Alyeska Ski Club (until 1984; represented Alaska at the Junior Olympics)

NORA G. BARLOW
DeLisio Moran Geraghty & Zobel, P.C.
943 W. 6th Avenue
Anchorage, AK 99501
(907) 279-9574

EDUCATION:

1991	University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law with Distinction, Order of the Coif
1989	London Institute of International Business and Commercial Law "Fundamental Rights in Europe and the United States." Hon. Anthony Kennedy, Associate Justice, United States Supreme Court
1986	University of California, Berkeley, Bachelor of Arts, Environmental Science; Emphasis Biology

EMPLOYMENT:

2006-present	DeLisio Moran Geraghty & Zobel, P.C. Associate Attorney; General civil litigation practice with an emphasis in defense of employment law cases and workers' compensation claims.
2004-2006	Russell Wagg Cooper & Gabbert, P.C., Anchorage, AK Associate Attorney; Emphasis in workers' compensation defense.
2003-2004	Attorney General's Office, Anchorage, AK Assistant Attorney General, Office of Special Prosecutions and Appeals; Environmental Prosecutor.
2002-2003	District Attorney's Office, Anchorage, AK Assistant District Attorney; Felony Prosecution of Property Crimes and Sexual Assaults.
1999-2002	Office of the County Counsel, Contra Costa County, Martinez, CA Deputy County Counsel;Assigned to Juvenile Dependency and Conservatorship Unit.
1995-1999	Heller Ehrman White & McAuliffe, San Francisco, CA and Anchorage, AK Associate Attorney; Complex civil litigation practice.
1992-1995	Burr Pease & Kurtz, Anchorage, AK Associate Attorney; General civil litigation practice.
1991-1992	Law Clerk:"Hon. H. Russell Holland, Judge, United States District Court for the District of Alaska and Hon. James M. Fitzgerald, Senior Judge, United States District Court for the District of Alaska
Summer 1990	Pillsbury Madison & Sutro, San Francisco, CA Summer Associate

BAR ADMITTANCE: Admitted in California 1992
Admitted in Alaska 1993

COMMUNITY ACTIVITIES: Committee Member, Annual Jewish Cultural Gala
Volunteer, Bean's Café
Volunteer, Aquarian Charter School
Volunteer, Camp Gan Israel

Antoinette Mallott
102 Cordova Street
Juneau, Alaska 99801
March 10, 2010

Chief Justice Dana Fabe
Alaska Supreme Court
303 K Street
Anchorage, Ak 99501-2084

Dear Chief Justice Fabe,

I am interested in serving on the Legislative Ethics Committee. Please review my resume and this letter of interest.

Currently, I reside in Juneau and Yakutat, Alaska, where we have our second home. I have lived in southeast Alaska for almost forty years. My involvement in the local native community is through my membership in Alaska Native Sisterhood and Alaska Native Brotherhood. My family has been involved in cultural and traditional events for many years. My husband and I have supported strong family values of responsibility, hard work ethics, kindness, ties to our ancestral lands and people and being a good person.

I am a registered Democrat and my voter registration is in Yakutat. I retired from teaching in 2003.

If you have any questions, please call me at the following numbers; Juneau: 586-6937, cell- 321-2022 (does not work in Yakutat) and Yakutat: 784-3074.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Antoinette Mallott
Antoinette Mallott

Resume
Antoinette Mallott

Residence:

102 Cordova Street
Juneau, Alaska 99801

Status:

Married: Byron I. Mallott Children: Anthony, Joseph and Benjamin

Date of Birth: October 27, 1947, Rampart, Alaska

Background:

I am an Alaskan Native and have spent my entire life in Alaska. I have been involved in education for the past thirty years, both as a teacher and parent. I strongly believe that it is imperative to develop and strengthen students' self-esteem and academic skills. It is equally important to establish a positive relationship with parents and support their involvement with their children's academic and social achievements.

My experience in the teaching profession included knowledge about the public laws of inclusion for students with learning, physical and emotional disabilities. I have worked with ESL (English Second Language) students and supported their rights to seek and obtain academic assistance in core subjects, such as reading, math and writing.

During my years of teaching at Gastineau Elementary School, I was on SCOT, a collaboration team composed of teachers, administrators and other support staff members. Our team met weekly to discuss learning and behavioral problems of students that classroom teachers were concerned about. Parents were requested to be present during these meetings. We were responsible for coming up with educational or behavioral plans to assist the students in their classrooms.

I was a Site Council member and facilitator for seven years at Gastineau. My duties included setting the monthly agendas, conducting the meetings, communication with parents, teachers and other members and carrying out the directions on decisions made for improving the school climate, safety of the students and staff and review and approval of curricula.

One of the many duties that a teacher has is writing academic and learning diagnostic reports for parents and administrators. I am confident that I possess the ability to organize, evaluate and present information effectively.

Education:

Bachelor of Elementary Education, University of Alaska, Fairbanks, 5/72
Master's in Elementary Education, University of Alaska, Juneau, 5/87

Professional Experiences:

2006 -2010	Care Coordinator for Catholic Community Services, Yakutat
1998-2003	Librarian and ESL teacher, Juneau
1990-1998	Classroom teacher, Juneau
1986-1990	Substitute teacher, Juneau
1982-1983	Chairperson for the Commissioner's Task Force on Native Achievement, Department of Education
1979-1980	3rd grade teacher, Yakutat
1978-1979	Headstart director and teacher, Yakutat
1977-1978	Resource coordinator, Indian Studies Program, Anchorage
1974-1976	2nd/3rd grade teacher, Yakutat
1972-1974	3rd grade teacher, Juneau
1970-1972	Home-School coordinator, State of Alaska Boarding Home Program, Fairbanks
1970	Summer flight attendant, TransWorld Airlines, Kansas City, Kansas
1968-1970	Travel agent, Roger's Travel Agency, Fairbanks

Alaska State Legislature

Official Business

House of Representatives

Office of the Chief Clerk

State Capitol, Room 216
Juneau, AK 99801-1182
Phone: (907) 465-3725
Fax: (907) 465-5334

MEMORANDUM

Date: March 22, 2010

To: Representative Ramras, Chair
Judiciary Committee

From: Suzi Lowell
Chief Clerk

Subject: Chief Justice's Appointment

Speaker Chenault referred the following appointment by Chief Justice Walter L. Carpeneti to the Judiciary Committee:

Select Committee on Legislative Ethics
Antoinette Mallott

The committee report is attached for your use.

Attachment as noted

CONFIRMATION COMMITTEE REPORT

Action date: 3-31-2010

In accordance with AS 24.60.130, the Judiciary Committee has reviewed the qualifications of the following Chief Justice's appointee and recommends that this name be forwarded to the House for ratification:

Select Committee on Legislative Ethics

Antoinette Mallott

This does not reflect intent by any of the members to vote for or against this individual during any further sessions for the purposes of ratification.

Signature:	Printed Last Name
	HERRON
	LYNN
	Holmes
Chair:	Dahlstrom

Please return to the Chief Clerk's office.

Alaska State Legislature

House of Representatives

Office of the Chief Clerk

Official Business

State Capitol, Room 216
Juneau, AK 99801-1182
Phone: (907) 465-3725
Fax: (907) 465-5334

REFERRAL FOR CONFIRMATION

Date Referred: February 3, 2010

Committee: Judiciary

Violent Crimes Compensation Board
Gerad G. Godfrey – Eagle River
Appointed: 2/19/2003
Reappointed: 4/6/2004 Reappointed: 3/1/2007
Reappointed: 3/1/2010 Term Expires: 3/1/2013

Action Date: 2/25/10
(Same date as on the accompanying signature page)

Note: Attach to a signature page and return to the Chief Clerk's office.

CONFIRMATION COMMITTEE REPORT

Action date: 2/23/10

The Judiciary Committee has reviewed the qualifications of the following Governor's appointee(s) as shown on the attached Referral for Confirmation form(s) and recommends that the name(s) be forwarded to a joint session for consideration:

This does not reflect intent by any of the members to vote for or against this individual during any further sessions for the purposes of confirmation.

Signature:	Printed Last Name
	LYNN
	Greenberg
	HERRON
	Holmes
Chair:	KAUFER

Please attach appointee Referral for Confirmation form(s) and return to the Chief Clerk's office.

Gerad Godfrey
P.O. Box 770892
Eagle River, AK 99577

Hm. (907) 694-6154
Cel. (907) 229-8860

Objective:
Reappointment to serving on Alaska's Violent Crimes Compensation Board.

Strengths:
Diverse work experience throughout Alaska from laborer to administrative fields. Perpetually seeking to learn. Exceptional communicator both orally and written. Optimistic yet realistic. Creative while pragmatic. Highly motivated to help reduce the occurrence of violent crimes in Alaska and continue to aid victims through education, prevention and outreach.

Voluntary Civic Activity:
2003-Present – Appointed Chair of Alaska's Violent Crimes Compensation Board by last two Governors. Chairing a quasi-judicial board which adjudicates claims and distributes funds to innocent violent crime victims in Alaska while coordinating with full time staff in Juneau. Cultivating and nourishing fruitful relationships with local and state politicians as well as state commissioners in order to maintain board's statutory and fiscal homeostasis or augment it. Oversee preparation and submission of annual report to Alaska's legislators, select state commissioners and Governor.

2002-Present – Volunteer lobbyist for innocent victims of violent crimes. Annual trips to Juneau to meet with legislators, commissioners and the Governor's office on behalf of crime victims regarding public safety issues, legislation and fund allocation for crime victim services.

2007-Present – Created the Helping Hands Healing Hearts Program. A committee designed to consolidate the numerous victim advocacy groups in order to educate and assist the faith based community in dealing with violent crime victims by bridging the gap between faith based organizations and government/non-faith based organizations.

2002-2003 – Appointed by Mayor of Anchorage to Municipal Emergency 911 Oversight Task Force. Ad Hoc committee which explored and researched existing detriments, then potential remedies, to Anchorage's critically deficient emergency response system. Culminated with proposed upgrades and enhancements submitted to Mayor. Spoke on national television on topic.

Work Experience:
-2009-Present- Afognak Native Corporation, Legal Department, Anchorage, Alaska. Corporate Risk and Compliance. Work in the Corporation's legal department while engaging in all facets of corporate risk and compliance as it applies to all of the corporation's departments, field offices, property, projects, contracts and 6,000+ employees primarily employed in 8(a) fields of work.

Continued:

Work Experience continued:

-2006-2009- Doyon Universal Services, Security Division, Port of Anchorage. Port Security. Uphold and enforce United States Coast Guard Regulations governed by 33 CFR 105 as mandated by the Department of Homeland Security. Control Anchorage Port access points by land and water. Conduct patrols and video surveillance. Conduct vehicle/cargo screens random and for cause. Conduct declarations of security on all moored ships. Oversee security concerns of port expansion.

-2001-2006- Doyon Universal Services, Security Division, Valdez, Alaska. Port Security. Control Alyeska Marine Terminal facility access points. Patrol Alyeska property as well as the pipeline right of way. Run surveillance from land, air and water. Enforce APSC policies and procedures as well as USCG regulations. Function as field training officer. Function as step-up supervisor of 8 employees.

-1998-2001- Regional Environmental Training Center, Fort Richardson, Alaska. Facilitator. Facility oversight regarding security and integrity. Fulfill all requests of facility Executive Director. Accommodate instructors' needs to ensure they are adequately equipped and prepared to conduct their training at all times. Ensure continuity of all scheduled training.

-1997-1998 - Guardsmark Security, Anchorage, Alaska. Assistant Administrator/H.R. Specialist. Recruit and interview applicants. Conduct background checks. Hire and place new personnel at various contracts. Administer payroll and keep contracts fully staffed. Tend to logistical, technical and human resource issues of all account supervisors. Supervise all account supervisors. Deputy Administrator in overall management of all contracts within Alaska. Meet and maintain corporate headquarter goals and expectations.

-1993-1997 - Nana/Marriott Catering Service, Prudhoe Bay, Alaska. (Seasonally/College) Laborer/Prep Cook in industrial kitchens in Arctic Circle oilfield camps.

-1985-1992 - Commercial Fisherman, Kodiak, Alaska. (Seasonally/Jr.High/High School/College) Lived and worked on a 55 foot commercial fishing boat with 4 other crewmen. Skiffman then served as deck boss of crew.

Education:

-B.S. Criminal Justice/Counseling Psychology, University of Great Falls, 1996
Great Falls MT. Honors: Dean's List
-Alaska Department of Public Safety Training Academy, 1998
Sitka, AK.
-ETT Certification, 2001
Anchorage, AK.
-Public Agency Training Council NCJ First Line Supervisor Certificate 2005
Fairbanks, AK.
-2006-Current Final Year Law Student, J.D of Law, Concord Law School of Kaplan University, Los Angeles, CA. Honors: Outstanding Performance Award-Contract Law, Passed California Baby Bar Exam first attempt

References:
Carl Marrs- Phone# 360-0279

Vicki Otte- Phone# 223-3330

Regina Chennault- Phone# 244-1689

Nancy Dahlstrom- Phone# 694-4929

Gerad Godfrey
P.O. Box 770892
Eagle River, AK 99577

Cell 229-8860
Home 694-6154
geradg@gmail.com

HB

2

Alaska State Legislature

Interim:
600 E. Railroad Ave
Wasilla, AK 99654

Phone: (907) 376-3725
Fax: (907) 376-4768

Session:
Alaska State Capitol, Rm 108
Juneau, AK 99801-1182

Phone: (907) 465-3743
Fax: (907) 465-2381
Toll Free: (800) 565-3743
Rep_Carl_Gatto@legis.state.ak.us

Representative Carl Gatto

Chair, House Military and Veteran Affairs Committee
District 13 - Palmer

SPONSOR STATEMENT
CSHB 2 (HHS)

"An Act relating to the issuance of a certificate of birth resulting in stillbirth."

HB 2 brings closure to parents who have suffered the loss of a stillborn child by giving them a Birth Certificate reflecting that they had a child who was stillborn. To paraphrase one parent of a stillborn child: being able to receive a Birth Certificate for my daughter would make me feel complete in that it would acknowledge that my daughter existed, even if it was only for a short while. This is true not only for her but also heard from other parents that have suffered this loss.

Under current law parents of stillborn children receive a fetal death certificate. HB 2 allows parents the option of requesting a certificate of birth for their stillborn child. This birth certificate is optional, and if the parents choose to receive a Birth Certificate they have the option of naming their child.

There are twenty-five states that now offer parents of stillborns the option of obtaining a Birth Certificate for their child. I urge your support for CSHB 2 (HHS).

LEGAL SERVICES

DIVISION OF LEGAL AND RESEARCH SERVICES
LEGISLATIVE AFFAIRS AGENCY
STATE OF ALASKA

(907) 465-3867 or 465-2450
FAX (907) 465-2029
Mail Stop 3101

State Capitol
Juneau, Alaska 99801-1182
Deliveries to: 129 6th St., Rm. 329

MEMORANDUM January 22, 2009

SUBJECT: Sectional Summary (HB 2 (Work Order No. 26-LS0003\A)

TO: Representative Carl Gatto
Attn: Sandra Wilson

FROM: Jean M. Mischel
Legislative Counsel

You have requested a sectional summary of the above-described bill.

As a preliminary matter, note that a sectional summary of a bill should not be considered an authoritative interpretation of the bill and the bill itself is the best statement of its contents. If you would like an interpretation of the bill as it may apply to a particular set of circumstances, please advise.

Section 1. Establishes a process for the bureau of vital statistics to issue a certificate of birth resulting in a stillbirth at the request of a parent of the stillborn child. Requires the bureau to transmit the certificate to the local registrar for filing with the fetal death certificate.

JMM:lmb
09-002.lmb

Sandra Wilson

From: Hoyt Family [mehoyt@mtaonline.net]
Sent: Tuesday, January 20, 2009 7:30 PM
To: Sandra Wilson
Subject: RE: Hello

Sandra,
HB 2, to create a 'Birth Certificate resulting in a Still Birth' would make me and a lot of people feel complete. My daughter was still born at 36 weeks and we had a large funeral for her. The idea that the state will only accept the fact that she died is so heart breaking. How can a person die with out being born? Having that piece of paper in my hand would bring closure to the entire grieving process. This would validate that my little girl was once here and apart of our lives.

Thanks so much for bringing this bill forward.

Michelle Hoyt
Project Linus - Alaska Chapter
Providing Security thru Blankets

-----Original Message-----
From: Sandra Wilson [mailto:Sandra_Wilson@legis.state.ak.us]
Sent: Tuesday, January 20, 2009 4:44 PM
To: Carletta Gemmell; Chauna Sheppard; Colleen; Dayna Murphy; Dina Banez; Gretchen Mangrobang; Kaylene Johnson; Lynnette Haas; Michelle Hoyt; Rhonda Crawford; Sandy Thomas; WesCin Yuill
Subject: Hello

Hello everyone. Today was the first day of session and I am preparing the packet that will accompany our request for hearing. I need updated letters of support. You can either write new ones or use the same ones as last year but I need them to reflect the new bill number for this bill which is HB 2. The sooner you can get these to me the sooner I will get a request in. Again I thank everyone for being willing to take the time and send me these letters.

Sincerely,

Sandra Wilson
Staff to Rep. Carl Gatto
907-465-3163
Sandra_wilson@legis.state.ak.us

January 20, 2009

To the Alaska Legislature

In Support of HB 2
This is the Story of Daniel Gavin Sheppard,

My name is Chauna and in 2002, I became pregnant for the first time in my life at the age of 32. We were overjoyed and considered this a miracle baby after being diagnosed with Fertility problems.

I walked on air with happiness, eating healthier, drinking extra water and taking every breath with my precious baby in mind. That summer we purchased a larger car, a crib and swing, stocked up on diapers of various sizes, and dozens of outfits, We went to child birth classes and even did relaxation exercises at home to prepare for labor. I never missed a doctor appointment and even switched doctors so I could get higher quality care. We got ultrasound videos and pictures. I really enjoyed feeling his regular kicking, rolling and occasional hic ups.

Daniel was due on November 26th, 2002. It was that morning that after a bit of poking and juice drinking that I couldn't seem to wake my son. My doctor sent me to the maternity ward where using a Doppler speaker they couldn't hear a heartbeat. At that point we had an ultrasound where we could not see any heart movement in those tiny, clearly visible, ribs on the tv screen. It was the most painful reality of my life to know my baby had died.

I was induced at apx 2:30pm that day. We went through 17 hours of labor that including an epidural, pain and nausea medication, IV's and 2 hours of pushing. Daniel Gavin was born weighing 7lb 14oz and 19 inches long at 7:30am on November 27, 2002.
His warm, soft, beautiful body was placed on my chest where my husband and I cuddled and kissed and loved him even more than the day before. The nurse bathed him. We dressed him and friends and family came to hold him as well. I distinctly remember one dear friend rocking him just like he was any other baby. The hospital took foot prints and cut a lock of hair for us to keep. They also gave us two camera's to take pictures of our beautiful boy. We were so lucky to be able to keep him with us for 12 hours. We sang to him and prayed before we had to let him go and begin the long painful journey of grief.

The next day the hospital gave us a generic card with his name and birthday on it written in marker and told us that we won't get a birth certificate because he never took a breath. This was a harsh blow after all we had been through. After all, I had given birth to Daniel and he was certainly born.

We drove home from the hospital on Thanksgiving Day with an empty car seat, empty arms and broken hearts.

As sad as this was, we still love Daniel so much, he will always be a part of our family. We do things on his birthday and other times of the year to show him our love. Though we never saw his eyes or heard him cry, my son Daniel is such a gift and we are so thankful for him. There never has been a day when I thought I wasted 9 months carrying him or a time when I wish he never existed. Never, ever... I wish the State of Alaska would not treat him as such.

In 1892 American Author Mark Twin said, "Favored above Kings and Emporers is the stillborn child." I wish stillbirth and the experience of having to deliver a dead baby was respected in this manner today.

This tragedy strikes everywhere. According to the Center for Positive Outcomes in Pregnancy in Washington DC, there are more than 39,000 stillbirths in the U.S. every year.

Historically, we share this horrific experience with John Quincy Adams, Rutherford Hayes, Ernest and Pauline Hemingway, and John and Jackie Kennedy, whose stillborn daughter is buried with her parents and siblings.

Ask any woman why she would endure the pain and agony of giving birth and she will tell you because of the 'reward' at the end...it is 'all worth it' we frequently hear. But what about the silent births- the women who get no reward for all their hard work...

I am writing this today asking you for your support...Please pass HB 2.

Sincerely,

Chauna Sheppard
4032 Reka Drive #K-1
Anchorage, AK 99508
(907) 333-7650
chauna18@hotmail.com

All of our Family & Friends -

Our son, Declan Murphy Stich, was stillborn Thursday, December 6th at 3:22pm. He was a beautiful 4 pounds 15 ounces and 18.5 inches, just the right size for a baby of 37 weeks.

It was discovered at Dayna's Wednesday morning checkup that Declan's heart had stopped beating. He must have passed away between midnight and nine o'clock, because we both felt his movements the night before. We decided to induce her labor on Wednesday night. Dayna's labor was short and Declan's delivery was without complication. Dayna is healthy and beginning the process of recovery.

We were able to keep Declan with us for several hours after his birth. He was so perfect - absolutely perfect with no sign of distress or problem. We will cherish those precious few moments with our special little boy forever. We took photographs of our own, but we also had a photographer from Now I Lay Me Down To Sleep (a volunteer organization) take images for us so we may share this experience with everyone. We've attached several select pictures from our camera, and we understand if anyone is uncomfortable or uneasy viewing these. The camera does not do Declan justice, he looked very much like a normal sleeping baby.

We are, of course, completely distraught. However, our memories of the time we did have with Declan are raising our spirits. The hospital staff did some wonderful molds of his feet and cut a lock of his hair, so we do have some very physical momentos of him.

Many people have asked about his name. Declan is a VERY Irish name meaning "Full of goodness". The most famous bearer of the name Declan was St. Declan, an early Irish saint who preached in Ireland prior to the arrival of St. Patrick.

I wish I had an explanation as to why Declan has died so unexpectedly, but hopefully a limited autopsy and the results of a large battery of tests will shed some light. However, most fetal deaths like this simply have no explanation. Dayna's pregnancy was completely normal and without complication, and there were no indications that anything like this could happen. We do hope to determine if there may be problems with future pregnancies or if there is a genetic disorder that could have caused a problem.

While we will grieve for Declan and the life we've lost with him, we both feel that life must now move on. We understand that many of you will have questions or want to talk about what has happened, please don't hesitate to speak with us. It has probably been just as hard, or even harder, experience for all of you that don't have the details or latest news. We appreciate your grief for our loss and hope that this email and future conversations with us can assuage the anguish that you may feel.

We would like to thank everyone that has called, emailed, sent flowers, provided a meal, or even just given us space during these past few days. We would particularly like to show our appreciation for the professional services provided by the nursing staff at Providence Hospital (Marcie & Tricia), Dr. Allison Gibbs & Midwife Tonya Kirk from Anchorage Women's Clinic, photography by Janna Maile (http://www.photoartsak.com) from The Now I Lay Me Down To Sleep Foundation, Evergreen Mortuary (http://www.evergreenfuneral.com), and Dayna's brother Matt for fabricating Declan's urn.

We ask that anyone who feels a need to make a contribution on behalf of our experience please consider a donation to The Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep Foundation. The web page for donations is: http://www.nowilaymedowntosleep.org/pageDisplay.php?page=42

While we've tried to include everyone that we touch in our daily lives as a recipient of this email, we don't have addresses for many friends or acquaintances. Please forward this to anyone that you feel needs to receive it, and we apologize if anyone receives this message more than once.

All our love - Steve & Dayna

--

Steve Stich
Dayna Murphy
8040 Fairwood Cir
Anchorage, AK 99518
907-770-9132

Mayme Ohnemus

P.O. Box 754
Cooper Landing, Alaska 99572
Phone & Fax: (907) 595-1214

February 22, 2009

Representative Carl Gatto
E. Railroad Ave.
Wasilla, Alaska 99654 Phone: 376-3704 Fax: 376-6180

RE: HB 2: Stillbirth Certificate

Dear Representative Gatto:

Thank you for sponsoring HB 159 Stillbirth Certificate last year and for sponsoring HB 2 this year. I sent you some information October 16, 2008 regarding the loss of our granddaughter, Evynn Nicole Ohnemus. My daughter-in-law shared her desire to obtain a Stillbirth Certificate for our granddaughter Evynn Nicole Ohnemus born March 5, 2006. She received a note about HB 2 and asked me to contact you since I am planning to be in Juneau February 26th.

I'm so proud Amber asked me to speak on behalf of our family. She wants me to relay the pain and anguish we have suffered during the time of losing our sweet baby; tell you how the flame went out of our lives upon her death and about the huge void we have had in our lives from that loss three years ago.

Our nineteen month old grandson has rekindled the flame in our lives and continues to give us a lot of joy. We're expecting another grandbaby in July and life feels good again. Evynn's spirit is with us always and we miss her. It's important, especially to her mother and father that Evynn Nicole Ohnemus is treated with the greatest respect. She lived and she died. A Stillbirth Certificate is a small thing to ask for a family that suffered the greatest of losses, their baby.

Thank you reintroducing the bill for parents to be able to obtain a Stillbirth Certificate. This is very important to the healing process for the families of stillborn babies. Thank you for this opportunity to share our story. I urge Representatives and Senators to give 100% support for HB 2.

Sincerely,

Mayme Ohnemus

Mayme

Enclosed: I am enclosing a letter from my daughter-in-law and the information I sent before including letter, picture page and a copy of This N That, written for the Sexy Seniors soon after the loss of our granddaughter - my husband and I couldn't bear to talk about our loss for several weeks but our friends and families deserved to know why we were grieving. They also shared in our loss.

February 21, 2009

Sandra Willson, staff
Carl Gatto
Juneau, Alaska

RE: HB 2 Certificate of Still Birth

To Whom It May Concern:

Thank you for sponsoring HB 2 again this year.

My name is Amber Mullican-Ohnemus. Three years ago my husband and I lost our daughter to stillbirth at 43 wks. There was no apparent cause of death. I was very disappointed the bill failed last year. It is an amazingly hard issue to deal with for me and my whole family. When we found out Evynn would not get a birth certificate it made things even harder to deal with since it seemed she was not considered alive at all. She was a wanted and planned for child. She was alive for 10 months until that gut wrenching day in March 2005. She deserves the dignity of having a birth certificate just as much as children who die of any cause minutes or even days after their births. It would mean a lot to me and my family to have a certificate of still birth to place in her baby book The death certificate we got was so cold and hurtful it felt like she never existed in life only death.

Please, think of all of the lives you can help change for the better by providing this meaningful certificate. You may not be able to bring back our children but you can at least let us have peace with knowing they mattered and were acknowledged.

Thank you for your support on this issue,

Sincerely,

Amber W. Mullican-Ohnemus, B.S.N., R.N., CNOR.

P.O. Box 1442
Soldotna, AK 99669
907-260-4922

Newsweek

A Vast and Sudden Sadness

Each year thousands of families experience stillbirth. As science seeks causes, parents use photography to honor their babies and cope with their grief.

Claudia Kalb
NEWSWEEK
From the magazine issue dated Feb 9, 2009

Marirosa Anderson was still sweating from a workout when her cell phone rang at 8:20 p.m. on Nov. 11, a particularly cold night in northern Virginia. Anderson had planned to spend the evening with her husband and two small children. Then she saw the caller-ID number. She took a deep breath, readied herself and answered the phone. Karen Harvey, a labor-and-delivery nurse at Inova Fairfax Hospital, gave her the rundown. A baby was about to be delivered by C-section and the parents wanted photographs. Could she come right over?

Anderson threw on jeans and a sweatshirt, grabbed her camera bag and ran out the door. At the hospital, Harvey led her to a quiet room where Laurie Jackson and her husband, Michael, were waiting. Laurie's pregnancy had been easy and enjoyable, filled with the happy buzz of baby showers and the lovely air of expectation. But during a routine check that Tuesday afternoon—just three days before her due date—the Jacksons were given the incomprehensible news that their baby no longer had a heartbeat. The night before, Laurie had felt the baby kicking. Now she and Michael were confronting the impossible: saying hello and goodbye to their firstborn child at the very same time.

Anderson introduced herself, then took out her camera, turning her attention to a perfect little girl who lay still in a bassinet, peaceful in a white cotton blanket with pink and blue stripes. "She's precious," Anderson said. Then she started to shoot. The baby's face. Click. Her tiny hands. Click. Her little pink feet. Click. Now it was time for the three of them. Laurie cradled her baby girl in the crook of her elbow, Michael leaned in next to her. Together they studied their daughter's face—her mouth resembled Laurie's family, the rest was pure Michael—they whispered to each other, they came together as a family. Their baby girl weighed six pounds, seven ounces and she was 19 inches long. They named her Brenna Rose.

Pregnancy is supposed to be the most wonderful time, brimming with anticipation, kicking with newness and life. But as novelist Elizabeth McCracken writes in "An Exact Replica of a Figment of My Imagination," a recent memoir about the death of her first baby, "this is the happiest story in the world with the saddest ending." Stillbirth happens more often than we imagine—10 times more often than sudden infant death syndrome, or SIDS, a condition most every parent knows about and dreads. Every year some 26,000 babies die during or after the 20th week in their mothers' womb (a loss before that is considered a miscarriage) or die during birth. In at least half of all cases, doctors have no idea what went wrong. The impact is impossible to measure. Mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters, grandparents, aunts, uncles, cousins and friends—all must figure out how to absorb the vast and sudden sadness, to grieve and, in many instances, to reconcile with a God who has shaken their faith to its core.

Decades ago, stillborn babies were whisked away from their parents to morgues; doctors and nurses pretended nothing happened, mothers were medicated with Valium, parents suffered their sorrow alone. It was in the late 1970s and early 1980s that the medical and psychological thinking about stillbirth began to evolve when researchers started studying the impact of a baby's death and parents began telling their stories. From silence and detachment came acknowledgment and remembrance. Today nurses encourage parents to hold the babies. Molds of hands and feet are created. Locks of hair are collected. And photographs are taken. Not just the clinical snapshots that nurses have been capturing for years, but striking and sensitive portraits that have burgeoned since the formation of a group called Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep in 2005.

Volunteer photographers who belong to the group, including Anderson, take pictures of stillborn babies—and babies expected to die soon after birth—for their parents at no cost. The idea was born from the life of Maddux Haggard, who was 6 days old and on life support in Colorado when his parents, Cheryl and Mike, decided they wanted pictures of their baby and contacted Sandy Puc', a local photographer well known for her beautiful baby portraits. After that photo session four years ago, Cheryl Haggard and Puc' founded Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep, which has since grown to 7,000 photographers, most of them professionals, across the globe.

Photographing the dead may seem strange, even morbid, especially in our American culture so uncomfortable with death. Those feelings are only intensified when the dead are the newly-born or just hours or days old. "We associate giving birth with life, with the future, with the defiance of death," says Irving Leon, a psychologist at the University of Michigan Medical Center in Ann Arbor who specializes in reproductive loss. "To have that smashed, violated so powerfully, it's something people don't want to look at, both literally and metaphorically."

Postmortem photography, though, has a long and treasured past. In the 19th century, when people died at home, families spent much of their savings on expensive silver daguerreotypes depicting their loved ones after they had passed away. Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep is a modern-day incarnation of this "memento mori" photographic genre (Latin for "remember your death"). Memories facilitate grieving, says Leon, which is critical to long-term healing. Holding a baby, talking to her and photographing her—all create memories that help parents cope with a devastating loss.

Parents who are hesitant about holding their babies often change their minds toward the end of a shoot, realizing that they'll have no other chance to embrace their child. And the sessions bestow a quiet time for mothers and fathers to treasure and honor their babies without any interruption from nurses or doctors. In years past, parents didn't expect all of their children to live. Today babies are dreamed about and dwelt on, and the deep attachment that develops between parents —especially mothers—and their unborn children starts earlier than ever before. At eight weeks, a baby's heartbeat can be seen on ultrasound; parents now find out gender and assign names months before their babies are born. All this has intensified the grief reactions many women feel after they suffer not just a stillbirth, but a miscarriage too, says Leon.

Studies show that mothers benefit from bonding with their stillborn babies. Joanne Cacciatore, a researcher at Arizona State University, studied 3,000 women and found that those who had the chance to see and hold their babies had fewer symptoms of depression and anxiety. This benefit may be temporarily reversed during a subsequent pregnancy. And nobody should be pressured to hold their babies. But more than 80 percent of women who did not regretted the lost opportunity. Cacciatore, whose fourth baby, Cheyenne, died in 1994, calls this a period of "ritualization," a time for parents to honor their child and to feel some semblance of control during an emotionally chaotic time. Holding a stillborn baby allows women to connect and then separate themselves from their babies after months united in the same body. And it gives parents the chance to create positive memories, rather than live with the unknown: What did she feel like? Whose nose did she have? Was she peaceful?

Doctors, nurses and social workers who encounter stillbirth have come to know this, and their thinking about how to care for patients has evolved enormously. Elisabeth Kübler-Ross's seminal 1969 book, "On Death and Dying," exposed the impact of loss and the long and intricate process of grieving. Parents of stillborn babies started talking about what it felt like to lose their children; physicians and psychologists began challenging the hush-hush approach. Michele Schwarzmann, director of maternal child health at Mercy Medical Center in Baltimore, can't forget the first stillbirth she witnessed in the 1970s. " 'Michele, you can't cry, you have to be strong'," she remembers her supervisor telling her. A decade later, Schwarzmann says she was finally allowed to express her sadness: "I sobbed for every baby I never got to cry over."

Stillbirth is in many ways a medical mystery. Despite its gravity, it has been largely overlooked. Even today, researchers don't know the true incidence of stillbirth nor do they fully understand why it happens. In some cases, doctors can identify a cause—a prenatal infection that travels from mother to baby, a genetic anomaly, a placental abruption, an umbilical-cord accident. But in at least half of all cases—more than 10,000 a year—they can't pinpoint the problem. "Over the last 50 years, we've put a lot of research and clinical energy into preventing sick babies from dying after birth and a lot of energy into premature babies," says Dr. Robert Silver, an Ob-Gyn at the University of Utah School of Medicine. "We haven't put the same energy into stillbirth."

All that became clear at a workshop held by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD) in 2001. "We realized that we needed to do a study that was larger than anything undertaken in this country," says Dr. Catherine Spong, chief of NICHD's Pregnancy & Perinatology Branch. With NICHD funding, Silver and other researchers began collecting data on more than 500 stillbirths at five sites around the country. Now they're analyzing the information. The hope is that the new information will help researchers sort out how to reduce a woman's risk for stillbirth, identify problems in advance so that couples can prepare for a loss and, ultimately, save lives.

No matter how good the science gets, however, some number of babies will continue to die and parents will continue to grapple with the shock. Not long after joining Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep in 2007, photographer Jennifer Clark got a call from a hospital near Salt Lake City. The parents, Melina and Tom Anderson (unrelated to Marirosa Anderson), had three other children—a son, Jack, then 6, and two daughters, Amy, 4, and Mae, 2—and they were excited about welcoming their fourth, another girl, named Ella. At 39 weeks, however, the baby's heartbeat started dropping precipitously and Melina had to have an emergency C-section under general anesthesia. Melina remembers waking up and hearing her doctor say, "I'm so sorry, she didn't make it." The umbilical cord, wrapped tightly four times around the baby's neck and once around her arm, had cut off her blood supply. Melina "made the kind of sound you never want to hear," says Tom. "Not really a scream, but almost. A moan." And then she started to cry.

Clark was nervous. "I remember standing outside the door before I went in and I prayed," she says. "I wanted to make photos they would cherish." She also remembers a sense of peacefulness as she worked. It was a sacred time, and she was buoyed by the gratitude shown by Tom and Melina. But she was also profoundly saddened. At times, she had to put her camera down to wipe the tears from her eyes as she captured the images. Amy touching Ella's fingers. Mae, in her pink-and-yellow kitty-cat pajamas, a pacifier in her mouth, peering at the baby's face. Jack, who had accompanied his mother to every doctor's appointment. Tom and Melina looking at their daughter's face.

The next day Tom carried his daughter to a hospital exit next to the ER, far from the place where new mothers are wheeled out with newborns in their arms and smiles on their faces. A mortuary attendant strapped Ella onto a gurney and drove off in a big white van. In the weeks after Ella's burial, Melina suffered both physical and emotional pain. Her breasts had to be bandaged to stop the milk from coming in—a poignant reminder of what should have been. Pregnant women brought tears to her eyes; new babies made her think about the milestones she was missing with Ella. But tangled up in the sadness was the conviction that Ella needed to be remembered. Clark's images allowed Melina to savor a face that was fading from her memory. And the Andersons' tributes to their daughter now assure her a constant place in the family. On the first anniversary of Ella's birth, the Anderson family held hands at her grave and sang "Happy Birthday." Then they went out for dinner and shared a birthday cake.

When Clark first heard about Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep, she felt a powerful urge to participate, but she never imagined that she'd find herself on the other side of the lens. Last year Clark was overjoyed to discover she was pregnant. Her first three babies were healthy. This time, Clark's fetus was diagnosed with trisomy 18, a genetic disorder so catastrophic that less than 10 percent of babies make it to their first birthday. The Clarks, devout Mormons, never considered terminating the pregnancy. Above all else, they prayed that their little boy would be born alive and that he would live for some time—hours, days, weeks, maybe even long enough to go home.

Connor Clark was born on Dec. 22 at 5:54 p.m. For just over an hour, his parents, his siblings —Ellison, 10, Sydney, 7, and Hayden, 2—his grandparents and some of his many aunts and uncles held him, talked to him, rejoiced in him. Two photographers from Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep shot the sobbing and the smiles, the kisses, the hugs, the gentle cradling and the embrace between Jennifer and her husband, Spencer, when they realized they were losing their son. At 7:20 p.m., Connor took his last breath. At his funeral service two days after Christmas, the Clarks showed a powerful video compilation of black-and-white photographs set to music for their family and friends. A life deeply mourned, a life lovingly celebrated.

To learn more about Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep, visit their website . For additional information on stillbirth and to find support resources for families, visit the M.I.S.S. Foundation and First Candle. LINKwww.firstcandle.org And for more on research conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Development, you can visit their site .

With Andy Murr

URL: http://www.newsweek.com/id/182572

© 2009

Department of Health and Social Services
Alaska Bureau of Vital Statistics

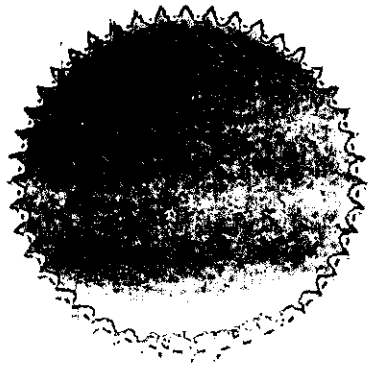
Certificate of Birth Resulting in Stillbirth

According to Alaska State Records

Bump Nevels Was Delivered on August 1, 2002

In Cicely, Alaska

To Carolyn Anne Puckett and John Earl Nevels



Date Issued: 11/29/2005

FD Number: 2002999999

This certificate is not proof of live birth

FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Fiscal Note Number:
Bill Version: HB 002
() Publish Date:

Identifier (file name): HB002-DHSS-BVS-02-18-09
Dept. Affected: Health & Social Services
Title: Birth Certificate for Stillbirth
RDU: Public Health
Component: Bureau of Vital Statistics
Sponsor: Gatto
Requester: House HSS
Component Number: 961

Expenditures/Revenues (Thousands of Dollars)

Note: Amounts do not include inflation unless otherwise noted below.

	Appropriation Required	Information
OPERATING EXPENDITURES	FY 2010	FY 2010	FY 2011	FY 2012	FY 2013	FY 2014	FY 2015
Personal Services
Travel
Contractual
Supplies
Equipment
Land & Structures
Grants & Claims
Miscellaneous
TOTAL OPERATING	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
CAPITAL EXPENDITURES
CHANGE IN REVENUES (

FUND SOURCE (Thousands of Dollars)

1002 Federal Receipts
1003 GF Match
1004 GF
1005 GF/Program Receipts
1037 GF/Mental Health
Other Interagency Receipts
TOTAL	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0

Estimate of any current year (FY2009) cost:

POSITIONS

Full-time
Part-time
Temporary

ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)

HB002 would require the Bureau of Vital Statistics (BVS) to issue, upon the request of a parent, a "certificate of birth resulting in a stillbirth" for an intrauterine fetal death occuring after 20 complete gestational weeks. These certificates would cost $20 each. Approximately 50 stillbirths are recorded in Alaska annually. Based on response in other states passing similar legislation, it is expected most families would request such a certificate. The division has adequate budget authorization to receive these additional receipts, resulting in a zero fiscal note - even though there will be a cost to the requestor similar to other certificates. (Continued on P. 2)

Prepared by: Beverly Wooley, Director
Phone 269-8126
Division: Public Health
Date/Time 1/23/09 12:00 AM

Approved by: Alison Elgee, Assistant Commissioner
Date 2/18/2009
DHSS Finance & Management Services

FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA

2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

BILL NO. HB002

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

Minimal programming and administrative time will be neccessary to issue such certificates - amounting to an estimated $1,000 annually. Assuming 50 certificates are issued each year at $20 each, costs will be covered by the fee. The BVS budget is funded primarily by receipt supported services; all certificates issued - birth, death, fetal death - require a $20 fee.

HB

4

Alaska State Legislature

Chairman
State Affairs Committee

Member
Judiciary Committee
Labor & Commerce Committee
Health & Social Services Committee
Military & Veterans Affairs Committee

Finance Subcommittees
Labor and Workforce Development
Military and Veterans' Affairs
Public Safety

A Communication From
REPRESENTATIVE BOB LYNN
District 31 Anchorage

E-Mail: Representative_Bob_Lynn@legis.state.ak.us
"Bob Lynn's Alaska Blog" www.RepLynnBlog.com

Session:
Alaska State Capitol, #104
Juneau, AK 99801-1182

Phone: (907) 465-4931
Fax: (907) 465-4316
Toll Free: (800) 870-4391

Interim:
716 W. 4th Ave., #650
Anchorage, AK 99501-2133

Phone: (907) 269-0205
Fax: (907) 269-0207

SPONSOR STATEMENT

HB 4

An Act relating to false caller identification

Warning: The name and number you see and trust on your caller ID system may be false. Both private individuals and commercial entities can now cause false caller identification to be displayed on your caller identification screen.

False caller identification is more than pranks, or annoyance. The power to create serious mischief and facilitate fraud with Caller ID spoofing technology is almost unlimited, and it can be potentially dangerous.

For example, some financial institutions use Caller ID to authenticate telephone requests for personal account information. With a few personal tidbits and your spoofed number, an impostor could access your bank or credit card account. Scam artists who appear to be phoning from a reputable agency can defraud their victims with ease. There's also potential for hoaxing emergency calls with false Caller ID to law enforcement or the fire departments. Predators may use Caller ID spoofing to help them commit crimes against women and children.

HB 4 doesn't get into how the spoofing gets to the display on your phone caller ID. Anyone can spoof telephone caller identification systems. In fact an entire telephone spoofing industry has emerged, and is growing daily. For the price of a ten-dollar calling card one can change what someone sees on their Caller ID display and even change their voice.

HB 4 will make it class A misdemeanor for any person, with the intent to defraud, to make a call or engage in other conduct that results in display of false caller information on a recipient's phone or caller ID System.

Alaska should take whatever action possible within its jurisdiction to stem the abuse of "Caller ID Spoofing." I respectfully request your support for HB 4.

Revised January 30, 2009

FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Fiscal Note Number:
Bill Version: HB004-LAW-CRIM-1-30-09
() Publish Date:

Identifier (file name):
Title: An Act relating to false caller identification
Sponsor: Representative Gardner
Requester: Judiciary

Dept. Affected: LAW
RDU: CRIMINAL
Component: Criminal Justice Litigation
Component Number: 2202

Expenditures/Revenues (Thousands of Dollars)

Note: Amounts do not include inflation unless otherwise noted below.

	Appropriation Required	Information
OPERATING EXPENDITURES	FY 2010	FY 2010	FY 2011	FY 2012	FY 2013	FY 2014	FY 2015
Personal Services
Travel
Contractual
Supplies
Equipment
Land & Structures
Grants & Claims
Miscellaneous
TOTAL OPERATING	***		***	***	***	***	***
CAPITAL EXPENDITURES
CHANGE IN REVENUES ( )

FUND SOURCE (Thousands of Dollars)

1002 Federal Receipts
1003 GF Match
1004 GF
1005 GF/Program Receipts
1037 GF/Mental Health
Other Interagency Receipts
TOTAL	***		***	***	***	***	***

Estimate of any current year (FY2009) cost:

POSITIONS

Full-time
Part-time
Temporary

ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)

The bill would create a new statute making it a class A misdemeanor for a person to knowingly insert false information into a caller identification system.

The Department of Law does not anticipate a significant fiscal impact from passage of this legislation but acknowledges it is difficult to predict with any certainty the extent to which such violations may occur or the cost of prosecuting them.

Prepared by: Robert Meiners, Deputy Director — Phone 907-465-5427
Division: Administrative Services Division — Date/Time 1/30/09 4:00 PM
Approved by: Talis Colberg, Attorney General — Date 1/30/2009
Department of Law

(Revised 9/10/2008 OMB)

ADVERTISEMENT

Technology facilitates Caller ID spoofing

AP Associated Press

Rep. Tim Murphy, R-Penn., picks up his telephone handset in his office in the Cannon House Office building on Capital Hill, Wednesday, March 1, 2006 in Washington. Last fall, Murphy's office started getting phone calls from constituents who complained about receiving recorded phone messages that bad-mouthed Murphy.The constituents were especially upset that the messages appeared to come from the congressman's own office. At least, that's what Caller ID said. In the last few years, Caller ID spoofing has become much easier. Millions of people have Internet telephone equipment that can be set to make any number appear on a Caller ID system. (AP Photo/Pablo Martinez Monsivais)

By Peter Svensson, AP Technology Writer | March 1, 2006

NEW YORK --Last fall, U.S. Rep. Tim Murphy's office started getting phone calls from constituents who complained about receiving recorded phone messages that bad-mouthed Murphy.

The constituents were especially upset that the messages appeared to come from the congressman's own office. At least, that's what Caller ID said.

"People thought we were making the calls," Murphy said.

The calls, which the Pennsylvania Republican estimated in the thousands, were apparently placed with fake Caller ID. That has been possible for a long time, but it generally required special hardware and technical savvy.

ARTICLE TOOLS

PRINTER FRIENDLY

SINGLE PAGE

E-MAIL TO A FRIEND

TECHNOLOGY RSS FEED

MOST E-MAILED

MORE:

Business section

Latest business news

GO

In the last few years, Caller ID spoofing has become much easier. Millions of people have Internet telephone equipment that can be set to make any number appear on a Caller ID system. And several Web sites have sprung up to provide Caller ID spoofing services, eliminating the need for any special hardware.

For instance, Spoofcard.com sells a virtual "calling card" for $10 that provides 60 minutes of talk time. The user dials a toll-free number, then keys in the destination number and the Caller ID number to display. The service also provides optional voice scrambling, to make the caller sound like someone of the opposite sex.

Caller ID spoofing appears to be legal, though many of its uses are not. The Federal Communications Commission has never investigated the issue, spokeswoman Rosemary Kimball said.

Lance James, chief scientist at security company Secure Science Corp., said Caller ID spoofing Web sites are used by people who buy stolen credit card numbers. They will call a service such as Western Union, setting Caller ID to appear to originate from the card holder's home, and use the credit card number to order cash transfers that they then pick up.

Exposing a similar vulnerability, Caller ID is used by credit-card companies to authenticate newly issued cards. The recipients are generally asked to call from their home phones to activate their cards. Some card companies maintain, however, that they use additional means to confirm new cards. And caller ID spoofing may not work for calls to 1-800 numbers, where the hardware can identify calls using a separate technology.

Two spoofing services contacted by The Associated Press, Spoofcard.com and Telespoof.com, did not return messages seeking comment about their business. However, some of the five or so Web sites in the business don't appear to be completely unscrupulous: James said he had been hired by a few of them, which he would not name, to help stop the Western Union scam.

Also, both Spoofcard.com and SpoofTel.com say they will surrender call logs to authorities in response to subpoenas. Spoofcard.com's site says the service is "intended for entertainment purposes only."

Telephone companies can trace calls to their origin regardless of the Caller ID information they carry, but the process is laborious, especially since a call may be carried by several companies before reaching its destination. The fragmented nature of the telephone network also makes it technically difficult for the carriers to prevent spoofing.

At Verizon Communications Inc., security manager John Lewandowski said the company often gets complaints about fake Caller ID after a telemarketer has spoofed his number to cover his tracks.

In a typical case, someone will be jarred in the middle of the night by repeated telemarketing calls. He checks Caller ID, calls the number -- which is false -- and starts "cussing out" the person at the other end of the line, Lewandowski said.

"And that poor guy was asleep. It wasn't him at all," Lewandowski said. The company investigates and tracks down the callers, he added.

Apart from fraud and telemarketing, Caller ID spoofing can be used

LATEST TECHNOLOGY NEWS

- EU leaders call for lower roaming charges
- Nintendo urges game makers to innovate
- Cablevision gets Mets back in SportsNet deal
- Extra costs a worry for next-gen DVD adoption
- Toshiba wins flash memory patent suit vs Hynix
- More technology news

BOSTON.COM'S MOST E-MAILED

- A generous Bush always thinking of others
- Bush shuns Patriot Act requirement
- The obligation of unwanted fatherhood
- Hundreds of teachers not qualified, city says
- 'The Simpsons' to show live-action opening
- See full list of most e-mailed

SEARCH THE ARCHIVES

GO

- Advanced search / Historic Archives

ADVERTISEMENT

Start saving on every call with Vonage.
Sign up now and get 1 FREE month of phone service www.vonage.com

for pranks and spying.

In one case, SWAT teams surrounded a building in New Brunswick, N.J., last year after police received a call from a woman who said she was being held hostage in an apartment. Caller ID was spoofed to appear to come from the apartment.

It's also easy to break into a cell phone voice mailbox using spoofing, because many systems are set to automatically grant entry to calls from the owner of the account. Stopping that requires setting a PIN code or password for the mailbox.

In a slightly more complicated fashion, spoofing was part of the technique used by a hacker who broke into Paris Hilton's cell-phone voicemail in 2004, according to security consultant Kevin Mitnick, who said he was citing hacking sources. The hacker apparently called the celebrity socialite posing as a technical-support person from the carrier, and lured the password from her.

That is known as a "pretext" call -- someone poses on the phone as a customer, employee or even a regulator to obtain personal information from companies and individuals. And indeed, while Spoofcard.com contends that its service is for "entertainment purposes," it also notes that "Private Investigators will find Caller ID spoofing valuable for pretext calls."

Robert Douglas, a privacy consultant in Colorado, testified before Congress last month that pretexters trade tips on finding the best spoofing services.

Pretexters generally claim their practices are legal, as long as they don't involve financial information. A bill introduced in the Senate would make it illegal to pose as someone else to obtain phone records, or to buy records from phone company insiders.

Douglas would like legislation against Caller ID spoofing as well, but there appears to be little interest in Washington.

"If I'm paying extra for Caller ID, which I do ... there should be some ability on my part to believe what I'm getting," Douglas said.

In Alaska, State Representative Bob Lynn has introduced a bill to make spoofing a misdemeanor. "False caller identification is more serious than pranks, or the annoyance of intrusive telemarketing," Lynn writes. "It facilitates fraud, and can be potentially deadly."

However, it is unclear what effect the bill would have. As Lynn notes, Caller ID is a federal issue. ■

© Copyright 2006 Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten, or redistributed.

MORE:

Business section | Latest business news | Globe front page | Boston.com

SIGN UP FOR: Globe Headlines e-mail | Breaking News Alerts

PRINTER FRIENDLY SINGLE PAGE E-MAIL TO A FRIEND AVAILABLE RSS FEEDS MOST E-MAILED

Prank Calls Spook 'Other' Clintons

NORTH LITTLE ROCK, Ark. - Prank calls are nothing new for the famously named Bill Clinton of North Little Rock, but never as scary - or as high-tech - as this one.

Clinton, who is not related to the former president and Arkansas governor of the same name, was the victim of a dangerous p month when another person used a computer to hack into a caller-ID system and hijack Clinton's home number.

After hacking into a computer system in a process called "caller-ID spoofing," the as-yet unidentified caller made several calls home Jan. 29, telling Clinton's son he was going to disturb all the neighbors with calls that would appear to come from Clinton

The prankster then called police to make it look like it was Clinton calling, said he had a gun to someone's head and hung up. armed officers to besiege Clinton's home.

Clinton had been sleeping, but his son had received the crank calls, including one saying the police were on the way. Clinton went outside to meet the police, who discovered that several calls were recorded on Clinton's own caller-ID system as having come from his own phone. That's when they realized somebody had hacked into the computer system and impersonated Clinton's telephone identification code.

Computer experts say that few people know about "spoofing" programs, which are available on the Internet and were developed so that telemarketers can bypass caller-ID systems. Coskun Bayrak of the computer science department at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock said wider knowledge of "spoofing" could encourage copycats, but could also pressure the software industry to develop improvements to cover the loopholes.

Clinton said he's received bomb threats and harassing telephone calls before, "presumably because his name is William Clinton and he lives in the Little Rock area," the police report said.

Police haven't found the culprit, but reviewed Clinton's phone records and found one suspicious call from Winterville, N.C., before the series of calls disguised as coming from Clinton's phone. The owner of t North Carolina told Winterville police that she too had been victimized by the crank caller.

The spoofer called again later the night of Jan. 29, after the police left, to see if the police had shown up. When Clinton menti an inkling the caller was from Winterville, the line went dead and the person hasn't called back, Clinton said.

Everything Jersey

'Spoofing' lets pranksters dial M for mayhem

Monday, April 11, 2005

BY KEVIN COUGHLIN
Star-Ledger Staff

When a hoax led sharpshooting SWAT teams to shut down a New Brunswick neighborhood last month, the world learned about a dangerous new game called "bombing."

Prank phone calling, once a summer pastime of slap-happy kids, had morphed into a blood sport.

While details still are unfolding on how the New Brunswick emergency call and others like it were faked, experts on privacy and security warn that Internet technology and legal loopholes are handing hoaxsters a powerful weapon to dupe everyone: caller ID "spoofing."

Over the past few months, companies such as Camophone, CovertCall, Telespoof and SpoofTel have sprouted online with offers to place calls that display any callback number you want, for just pennies a minute.

"Be Anyone, Anywhere, Anytime," proclaims the Web site of PI Phone.

PI Phone and rivals Star38 and U.S.Tracers purport to serve only private investigators or law enforcement personnel, who presumably have good reasons for tricking outlaws to answer the phone. But other services welcome all comers; for an extra fee some even will record the results.

"Wanna have some fun? Appear to be someone else, and set up the Ultimate Prank Call," says the Web site for CovertCall, which sponsors a $250 contest for the best prank.

CovertCall suggests fooling debtors into accepting calls, spoofing your business line to keep your personal number private, and exploiting cellular plans that offer free incoming minutes. "Want to chat with sexy singles? Get endless free trials by calling in with random caller IDs!"

On the Web, CovertCall users even debate methods -- and ethics -- of spoofing a spouse's number to access his or her cellular messages.

The Federal Communications Commission and Federal Trade Commission say they have taken no enforcement actions against these services. But others predict it won't be long before an emergency hoax, identity theft or duped domestic violence victim triggers calls for a crackdown.

"The potential for abuse with this technology is huge," says Jordana Beebe of the nonprofit Privacy Rights Clearinghouse, a San Diego group that advocates for consumer privacy protections.

Adds Kevin Mitnick, co-author of "The Art of Intrusion" and a reformed hacker himself: "You can't trust caller ID. There is no assurance that it is coming from the entity that's displaying on the device."

To prove his point, Mitnick used Vonage, the Edison-based Internet phone company, to call a reporter's cell phone. The call appeared to come from the reporter's office number. The ruse took Mitnick only a few seconds.

Many Internet telephone services let users update their accounts with any callback numbers or emergency addresses they choose. This can be a lifesaver. If you're vacationing and making calls over the Internet, you probably want your service provider to direct police to your vacation spot if you punch 911 in an emergency.

(Spoofing 911 calls over conventional phone networks is much harder. They deploy an embedded billing technology, called SS-7, which automatically links a 911 call with the physical address of the telephone. The New Brunswick hoax appears to have been phoned to a regular police line, not to 911.)

Mitnick, who spent almost five years in jail for hacking into companies such as Motorola and Sun Microsystems, says some financial institutions use caller ID to authenticate telephone requests for personal account information. With a few personal tidbits and your spoofed number, he says, an impostor could access your bank or credit card account.

SPOOF WITH EASEActually, spoofing phone calls is nearly as old as caller ID, a service that debuted in New Jersey -- despite protests from privacy advocates -- in the late 1980s. Back then, spoofing required some technical savvy. Now, anyone with a credit card and a phone or online computer can play.

Typically, after setting up an account with a spoofing service, you call its toll-free line or log onto the Web site. Enter a number to call, and the callback number to display, and the service does the rest.

The mere act of faking someone's phone number is not illegal, says Erin McGee of the CTIA, a wireless industry trade association.

Jim Reynolds of Star38 says his company, launched last fall in Delaware by former law enforcement agents for current agents, was the first commercial spoofing service. Other services are copycats and lawbreakers, he says.

"I guarantee those people will be prosecuted. It's only a matter of time," says Reynolds.

Star38 is meant to help the good guys hunt the bad guys; rivals "give people a license to harass people and break the law," he says.

Because Star38's calls are placed entirely over the Internet, they are exempt from FCC regulations, Reynolds contends. Competitors can't make the same claim, he insists.

But most Internet calls hop onto regular phone networks at some point, says Mark Wigfield of the FCC. "We would have to look at the facts" of any case, he says.

Federal Trade Commission rules bar telemarketers from spoofing caller ID to sidestep the national "Do Not Call" registry established in 2003. Some business uses of spoofing also could violate FTC prohibitions against unfair or deceptive trade practices, says spokesman Brad Winter.

Banning all spoofing would be a mistake, says Vonage chief technical officer Louis Mamakos. That might bar legitimate uses for altering callback numbers -- such as directing customers to general help numbers instead of to specific representatives.

In fact, spoofing services actually may help preserve personal privacy, says Jonathan Bick, a Rutgers University law professor and author of "101 Things You Need to Know About Internet Law." These services restore a right to anonymous speech that caller ID had stripped, Bick says.

"We just have evolving technologies," he says. "And as technologies evolve, so do countermeasures."

THE SPOOFERSThe sudden rise of spoofing services can be tied, variously, to boredom, the National Hockey League, and a struggling college student.

SpoofTel was born in Vancouver two months ago when a computer security specialist named Ryan Purita got bored.

"This is why having no hockey on TV is bad," jokes Purita, referring to the canceled NHL season.

Purita thought the Star38 service sounded cool but was miffed it only served cops. So he cooked up SpoofTel and says it now has about 800 active users who average between 2,000 and 5,000 minutes a day at a dime per minute, Canadian.

He promises to deal swiftly with any reported abuses but defends caller ID spoofing.

"We're offering a service. If someone is using it illegitimately, what can we do? That's the Internet," Purita says.

"They still sell crowbars, don't they? They can be used for many different things. I don't see anybody being stopped from selling guns. I would guess more people are killed by guns than from spoofing caller ID," he says.

Ben Rosenthal also entered the caller ID spoofing business in January, with his PI Phone service for private investigators.

"I saw an opportunity and profit there, and a way to do it honorably and legally, and jumped on it," says Rosenthal, based in Westchester County.

He says it's feasible thanks to free software called Asterisk. It turns a PC with a fast Internet connection into a full-fledged telephone system, with features that once cost thousands of dollars. "The barrier to entry became very low," Rosenthal says.

Asterisk was hatched in 1999 by Mark Spencer, an Auburn University computer engineering student. He also ran a tech support business for people using the free, "open source" Linux computer operating system.

"I needed a phone system. I couldn't afford to buy one, so I decided to make one," recounts Spencer, who now sells Asterisk-based services and hardware at Digium Inc. in Alabama.

Although Spencer's handiwork has spawned outfits that now sell deceptions by the minute, he insists the big phone companies could curb spoofing if they wanted. Not that he's a fan of spoofers, mind you.

"I honestly don't approve of people doing this," says Spencer, 27, who sees the world as divided between those who use technology for good and those who use it for evil. "I would rather be in that first camp, trying to do something to help people."

Kevin Coughlin covers technology. He can be reached at kcoughlin@starledger.com or (973) 392-1763.

Copyright 2005 NJ.com. All Rights Reserved.

REUTERS
KNOW. NOW.

Print this article Close This Window

Scam Artists Dial for Dollars on Internet Phones

Sun Mar 20, 2005 09:40 AM ET

By Andy Sullivan

WASHINGTON (Reuters) - Internet phone services have drawn millions of users looking for rock-bottom rates. Now they're also attracting identity thieves looking to turn stolen credit cards into cash.

Some Internet phone services allow scam artists to make it appear that they are calling from another phone number -- a useful trick that enables them to drain credit accounts and pose as banks or other trusted authorities, online fraud experts say.

"It's like you've handed people an entire phone network," said Lance James, who as chief technology officer of Secure Science Corp. sees such scams on a daily basis.

The emerging scams underline the lower level of security protecting Voice Over Internet Protocol, or VOIP, the Internet-calling standard that has upended the telecommunications industry over the past several years.

Traditional phone networks operate over dedicated equipment that is difficult for outsiders to penetrate. Because VOIP calls travel over the Internet, they cost much less but are vulnerable to the same security problems that plague e-mail and the Web.

Internet worms that snarl online networks can render VOIP lines unusable, and experts at AT&T say VOIP conversations can be monitored or altered by outsiders.

Federal Trade Commission Chairman Deborah Platt Majoras recently warned that unscrupulous telemarketers could use VOIP to blast huge numbers of voice messages to consumers, a technique known as SPIT, for "spam over Internet telephony."

All of these threats remain largely in the realm of theory. Caller ID spoofing, on the other hand, has emerged over the past six months as a useful tool for identity thieves and other scam artists, according to fraud experts.

PRESIDENT BUSH ON THE LINE

Any reporter would scramble for a ringing phone that reads "White House media line" on its caller ID display.

But it's not the Bush administration on the line -- it's security instructor Ralph Echemendia, calling from a mobile phone on a remote Georgia highway.

"You can see how this sort of thing could be used in a very malicious way," said Echemendia, a security instructor at the Intense School, a technology training company.

Caller ID spoofing is not prohibited by law, but the Federal Communications Commission requires telemarketers to identify themselves accurately, a spokeswoman said.

Echemendia built his own system to spoof calls, but several free or low-cost services allow even technical novices to falsify caller ID information as well.

Debt collectors and private investigators use Camophone.com's 5-cents-per-call service to trick people into answering the phone, according to messages posted on a discussion board.

Traveling salesmen say the service comes in handy when they want clients to return calls to the main office, rather than their motel room.

James said criminal uses of caller-ID spoofing have become common over the last six months.

Wire-transfer services like Western Union (FDC.N: Quote, Profile, Research) require customers to call from their home phone when they want to transfer money in an effort to deter fraud -- a barrier easily sidestepped by any identity thief using a caller-ID spoofing service.

Fraud rings can now transfer money directly out of stolen credit-card accounts, rather than buying merchandise and reselling it, he said.

Western Union spokeswoman Danielle Periera said the company has no other way to verify that transfer requests are valid.

"We try hard to stay one step ahead of them and recognize that scam artists are sophisticated and often change their schemes," she said.

Criminals can use caller-ID spoofing to listen to other people's voice mail, James said, especially when those accounts are not protected by passwords.

They also have begun to use the technology to make it appear that they are calling from a bank or other financial institution, said Dave Jevans, who chairs the Anti-Phishing Working Group, a banking-industry task force.

That helps them convince consumers to divulge account numbers, passwords and other sensitive information in a scam that echoes the "phishing" e-mails that have become common, he said.

VOIP industry pioneer Jeff Pulver, whose Free World Dialup service can be used to spoof calls, said he couldn't prevent abuse of his system.

The problem will likely recede as companies like VeriSign Inc. (VRSN.O: Quote, Profile, Research) and NeuStar Inc. develop ways to verify online identities, he said: "We're not there yet, but we're going to get there."

All rights reserved. Users may download and print extracts of content from this website for their own personal and non-commercial use only. Republication or redistribution of Reuters content, including by framing or similar means, is expressly prohibited without the prior written consent of Reuters. Reuters and the Reuters sphere logo are registered trademarks or trademarks of the Reuters group of companies around the world.

© Reuters 2005

Close This Window

Top

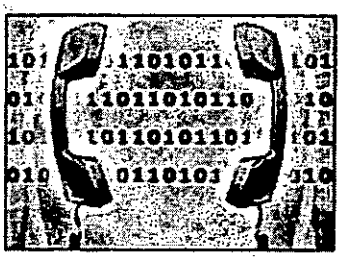
CENTERTODAY

News & Information for Contact Center Professionals

FIND:

WHITE PAPER

Caller-ID Spoofing: 'Appallingly Bad Idea'



By Erika Morphy
September 2, 2004 1:26PM

A new software system that allows users to fool telephone caller-I opens the door to a variety of abuses. "What an appallingly bad id security firm Sophos.

Advertisement

Reports tell you what has happened in the past. Forecasts tell you what might happen in you what is happening right now. Learn how to gain insight into your current operations. and Agility: Event Stream Processing for Event-Driven Business"

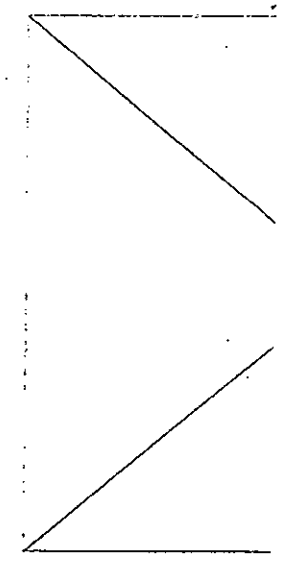
>> A startup company has developed a software system that allows users to spoof a caller-ID number in order to trick the telephone-call recipient into answering the phone.

Developed by Star38, the service will be marketed solely to collection agencies, private investigators and the police, according to statements made by the company.

The system itself is said to be easy to use, with the user typing in the recipient's number and the number he or she would like to appear on the caller ID.

Appallingly Bad

Critics of the system -- and there are many, even outside the usual privacy/consumer-advocacy brigade -- find the technology frightening. "What an appallingly bad idea," says Graham Cluley, managing consultant for security and antivirus firm Sophos. "It reminds me of the hacker-driven spam and phishing scams that have taken over the Internet," he told NewsFactor.



More on this topic.

Newsletters

Top CIO News

Contact Center Industry Alert

your email

sign up

advertisement

In fact, it is a much worse form of deception than Internet fraud, says John Morris, staff counsel for the Center for Democracy & Technology, a Washington-based public-policy organization with a focus on technology.

Reasonable Expectation

"On the Internet, most people understand that the identity of someone who is sending an e-mail may easily be spoofed," Morris told NewsFactor. "But the phone, historically, has had a different set of expectations or assumptions. Most people that have Caller ID assume the number listed is accurate."

In news accounts, Star38 has emphasized its intent to limit the technology to the police, collection agencies and private investigators.

However, "there really isn't anything that will prevent this kind of technology from being used by other firms, such as telemarketers, now that it has been developed," Morris says, adding, "in this age of identity theft, we are skeptical that spoofing other phone numbers on Caller ID is a desirable development."

One scenario, Morris suggests, might be someone purporting to call from a distant relative's house, claiming the person had an accident.

Potential for Abuse

But even assuming that Star38 keeps the technology in the hands of collection agencies, private investigators and the police, there still would be cause for worry.

While the police may well have a legitimate need for the technology in criminal investigations, the potential for abuse by collection agencies and PIs is huge.

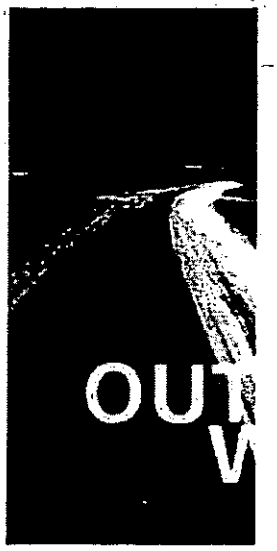
For example, there have been cases of stalkers retaining private investigators to find victims who went into hiding.

As for collection agencies, the potential for abuse is even wider. "We don't understand what purpose a legitimate collections agency would have in hiding its identity," Morris says.

The typical example, of course, is an agency that uses the system to get a phone-shy debtor to answer the call and coax him or her into paying the debt.

Collection agencies, though, have not entirely shed their less-than-upstanding practices since the passage of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act. Recently, one firm was fined for continually contacting and harassing a debtor's neighbors -- a

1. Sony Ericsson Intros Bl
2. I.T. Salaries Up for the
3. Scientists Find Lost Wo
4. Marketers Bristling at C
5. GM Cuts Dividend, Trim



Most Popular Artic
1. CRM and VoIP: The Be
2. Customers Urge Avoida
3. Another Look at Outsou
4. Pac-West, VeriSign Tea
5. Avaya, Juniper Partner

practice clearly illegal under FDCP.

Over the Line

More often, though, when these agencies go over the line, it is a little more discreet.

Recently, a legal journal reported that a court found a collection agency had made false statements as to the time limit of a debt-discount offer; reportedly, the firm told the debtor she had 30 days to make a payment if she wanted to get a percentage taken off her debt. In truth there was no time limit of 30 days -- a deception prohibited by the law.

Which brings us back to Star38's latest contribution to the Internet age. In his first take on the system, Morris says he does not believe the system itself violates the tenets of FDCP. When it gets in the hands of the agencies, though, that may be a different story.

"I do believe we will see some deceptive practices on the part of the agencies that will violate the spirit of FDCP," he says.

Have an informed opinion on this story?
Send a Letter to the Editor.

We want to know what you think.
Send us your Feedback.

Related Topics

- caller-id

Latest News & Special Report

- Convergys Links CRM tc
- Biggest I.T. Outsourcing
- Is On-Demand CRM Rig
- Another Look at Outsour
- VoIP Conversion Gather

Sponsored Links

- See what's possible at Avaya Virtual Technology Summit, March 9.
- The HP ProLiant ML110 G3 server with Intel® Pentium® 4 Processor.
- SAN Connectivity in Virtualized Server Environments from Emulex
- Progress® Apama® lets you gain insight into your current operations.
- DualPath Outdoor Wireless Bridges. Get online price estimates.
- Special 2 for 1 Offer & Free IDC Virtualization White Paper from HP.
- 3Com's TippingPoint™ IPS: Plug it in.
- Windows Server vs. Linux SuSE: Read the Security Innovation study.
- Best in class enterprise IT solutions from 3Com

AMERICAN PUBLIC MEDIA Future Tense is an American Public Media program

FUTURE TENSE® WITH JON GORDON

Search Future Te

Subscribe to RSS feed
(What is this?)

Subscribe to Podcast
(What is this?)

E-mail Newsletter
Get Future Tense in your inbox each weekday by subscribing to our e-mail newsletter. Technology news, information and interviews at your convenience. Sign up today.

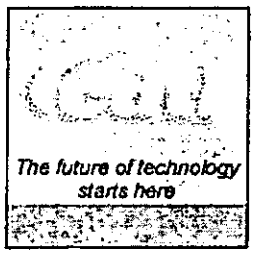
Search Futuretense
go

Future Tense is heard in the United States during broadcasts of the CBC's As It Happens, and in Minnesota on MPR news stations during Morning Edition.

E-mail Future Tense

Broadcast stations

Our Sponsors



March 2005 Archive

March 08, 2005

"Caller ID spoofing" an emerging VoIP-security threat

Real Audio | How to Listen

If you have caller ID, you might want to think twice about trusting the information displayed on your telephone. As more people place phone calls over the Internet instead of the wired telephone network, identifying the person on the other end of the line is getting more difficult.

Starting late last summer, people all over the U.S. and Canada got phone calls from a Twin Cities phone number -- a recorded voice offering a deal on wireless phone services. When they called the number to complain, they were patched through to a small Minneapolis company that definitely was not selling Nokias or Blackberries. It was a company that provides janitorial services to area businesses.

Building Resources Corporation office manager Rhiannon Fisk fielded the complaints.

"Around Christmastime, the call volume started to pick up, and we got dozens and dozens every day," she said. " It got to the point where we just had to start ignoring them because it was affecting how we did business."

Understandably, the callers complained angrily about the unwanted telemarketing calls.

"I'll pick up the phone, they immediately say you called my house and I want you to stop calling, and take me off the list, and they usually just hang up," Fisk said.

Fisk sought answers from the company's telephone provider, Integra, but received none. She then complained to the Minnesota Attorney General. The AG's office told fisk that, while nothing could be done, it knew the likely source of the problem: caller ID spoofing. The shady telemarketers, wanting to avoid detection, made it look like it was someone else. It's a mystery why they chose the Minneapolis company.

Scammers have long known how to fake the source of e-mail. Since Voice over IP, or VOIP, sends voices as packets of data, it was perhaps predictable that telephone customers would start seeing a

March 2005

S	M	T	W	Th
		1	2	3
6	7	8	9	10
13	14	15	16	17
20	21	22	23	24
27	28	29	30	31

February 200

S	M	T	W	Th
		1	2	3
6	7	8	9	10
13	14	15	16	17
20	21	22	23	24
27	28

Archives
March 2005
February 2005
January 2005
December 2004
November 2004
October 2004
September 2004
August 2004
July 2004
June 2004
May 2004
April 2004
March 2004
February 2004
January 2004

Recent Entries
"Caller ID spoofing" emerging VoIP secu threat problem like e-mail spoofing.

"If you pick up you standard phone today, and you have caller ID, you can see which number is actually calling you, and you have a very high level of assurance that it really is that telephone number," said Stuart McIrvine, security researcher at IBM. Now, when you start to get into Voice over IP, it's very easy for someone to fake that number, so you think the call is coming from somewhere else."

Consumer advocacy groups are just beginning to field complaints about the problem. Jordana Beebe with the Privacy Rights Clearinghouse says she's not sure how many people are being burned by caller ID spofing, but calls it a deceptive practice that should be stopped.

"Caller ID is there so that you know who is calling and you can make a determination about whether you want to take that call or not," she said. "And if for instance that technology is being abused so that you are duped into taking a call that otherwise you wouldn't take, we feel that consumers shouldn't be in that type of situation."

You don't have to be a skilled, devious hacker to trick called ID displays. In the past year, about a half dozen services have cropped up that use VoIP technology to sell caller ID spoofing, at five to ten cents a minute, to consumers. They go by names like "Telespoof," and "Camophone." They're marketed to people who want to hide their true identities, like bill collectors and private investigators. Only one caller ID spoofing service, responded to inquiries from MPR, but the owner wouldn't reveal his name, saying only that he believes his service is ethical and lawful.

Beebe of the Privacy Rights Clearinghouse says new regulations and laws are needed to fight caller ID spoofing. But VoIP is largely unregulated. A spokeswoman at the agency that would most likely have jurisdiction, the Federal Communications Commission, did not respond to numerous requests for comment.

In the meantime, caller ID spoofing could get worse as more consumers and businesses switch to Internet telephone calls.

"What we're going to see is more people devote more time and energy into breaking it, because it's going to become more popular," said David Endler of the Voice Over IP Security Alliance.

Back at the janitorial services firm, office manager Rhiannon Fisk says that mercifully, her phone stopped ringing off the hook about a month ago. The calls ended as mysteriously as they appeared.

AMERICAN PUBLIC MEDIA

American Public Media Home | Search | Contact
©2005 American Public Media | Terms of Use | Privacy Policy

LEGISLATIVE RESEARCH REPORT

MARCH 10, 2005

REPORT NUMBER 05.220

LEGISLATION IN OTHER STATES: CALLER ID FALSIFICATION, OR "SPOOFING"

PREPARED FOR REPRESENTATIVE BOB LYNN

BY CHUCK BURNHAM, LEGISLATIVE ANALYST

You asked about caller ID falsification, or "spoofing." Specifically, you asked if any states have considered legislation that would make illegal "spoofing"—that is, using electronic means to cause caller ID systems to display false information. Further, you asked how a law making this practice illegal in Alaska might be crafted.

In mid-2004, a flurry of media interest surrounding caller ID systems was generated when hackers discovered that the systems could be manipulated, through fairly simple means, to display incorrect information on a receiving party's caller ID display. Concern over the systems' vulnerability intensified later in the year when a company announced plans to offer a commercial product that would enable purchasers to spoof caller ID systems at will. Although the vendor eventually opted to offer the product only to law enforcement agencies, which can use the tool as an incognito means to contact and locate wanted individuals, privacy advocates and consumer groups voiced concern that the misuse of such technology could be instrumental in identity theft schemes and other inappropriate or illegal actions.

Our research identified only one state, New York, that has thus far considered legislation specifically related to caller ID spoofing.[1] We include, as Attachment A, copies of two bills currently under consideration in New York.

Although legislation has not yet been widely considered specifically with regard to spoofing Caller ID systems, under certain circumstances such chicanery may be illegal in a number of states under laws intended to address other issues. In 2002-2003, for example, a number of states enacted legislation creating "do not call lists." Generally, these laws require telemarketers to remove from their databases the telephone numbers of people appearing on the list, thereby

[1] Our research included Lexis database searches of the current laws of the fifty states and of all state legislation introduced in the years 2003-2005 using the terms "caller ID" and "caller identification." There may be states with laws of similar practical application, but worded such that our Lexis queries did not identify them.

907-465-3991
907-465-3908 (fax)

Alaska Legislature
Legislative Research Services

State Capitol
Juneau, AK 99801

allowing consumers to "opt out" of receiving soliciting phone calls. Some such laws included other restrictions on the business practices of telemarketers with regard to caller ID systems. Michigan, for instance, passed Act 612 (2002), which included the following section:

> A telephone solicitor shall not intentionally block or otherwise interfere with the caller ID function on the telephone of a residential telephone subscriber to whom a telephone solicitation is made so that the telephone number of the caller is not displayed on the telephone of the residential telephone subscriber.

The Michigan law defines "telephone solicitation" as using "any voice communication over a telephone for the purpose of encouraging the recipient of the call to purchase, rent, or invest in goods or services during that telephone call . . ." It is unclear, therefore, to what degree spoofing caller ID systems for purposes other than solicitation may be covered by this law. We include, as Attachment B, a copy of Michigan Public Act 612 (2002).

We are unable to identify a model law as a basis for drafting such legislation in Alaska perhaps because no direct precedent yet exists for making illegal the falsification of caller ID systems. You may want to contact Legal Services for more information on this matter.

I hope you find this information to be useful. Please do not hesitate to contact us if you have questions or need additional information.

Attachment A

New York Assembly Bill 1603 (2005)

New York Senate Bill 1075 (2005)

2005 NY A.B. 1603

NEW YORK 228TH ANNUAL LEGISLATIVE SESSION

ASSEMBLY BILL 1603
2005-2006 REGULAR SESSIONS
JANUARY 21, 2005
INTRODUCED BY M. OF A. SWEENEY, WEISENBERG, CLARK, A. COHEN, SEDDIO, BRADLEY, HOOPER, AUBERTINE, PHEFFER -- MULTI-SPONSORED BY -- M. OF A. AUBRY, M. COHEN, COLTON, L. DIAZ, GALEF, GORDON, GRANNIS, HIKIND, JOHN, KOON, LAFAYETTE, MAGEE, MAYERSOHN, PEOPLES, PERRY, P. RIVERA, ROBINSON, SCHIMMINGER, STRINGER, TOWNS -- READ ONCE AND REFERRED TO THE COMMITTEE ON CORPORATIONS, AUTHORITIES AND COMMISSIONS

2005 Bill Text NY A.B. 1603

VERSION-DATE: January 21, 2005

SYNOPSIS: AN ACT to amend the public service law, in relation to defining and prohibiting caller ID scamming

NOTICE: [A> UPPERCASE TEXT WITHIN THESE SYMBOLS IS ADDED <A]

TEXT: THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK, REPRESENTED IN SENATE AND ASSEMBLY, DO ENACT AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. The public service law is amended by adding a new section 92-g to read as follows:

[A> SECTION 92-G. CALLER ID SCAMMING. 1. DEFINITIONS. AS USED IN THIS SECTION, THE FOLLOWING TERMS SHALL HAVE THE FOLLOWING MEANINGS: <A]

[A> (A) "CALLER ID EQUIPMENT" SHALL MEAN ANY DEVICE THAT IS PART OF OR ATTACHED TO A TELEPHONE RECEIVER THE PURPOSE OF WHICH IS TO DISPLAY OR OTHERWISE INDICATE THE TELEPHONE NUMBER OR OTHER IDENTIFIER OF THE PERSON OR TELEPHONE INITIATING THE CALL; <A]

[A> (B) "CALLER ID SCAM" SHALL MEAN ANY SCHEME, PLAN, SUBTERFUGE OR DEVICE INTENDED TO CAUSE THE CALLER ID EQUIPMENT USED BY ANY PERSON RECEIVING A TELEPHONE COMMUNICATION TO INDICATE THAT SUCH TELEPHONE COMMUNICATION WAS INITIATED AT A TELEPHONE NUMBER OTHER THAN THE NUMBER OF THE TELEPHONE BEING USED BY THE CALLER; AND <A]

[A> (C) "TELEPHONE COMMUNICATION" SHALL MEAN "TELECOMMUNICATION SERVICES" AS DEFINED IN PARAGRAPH (G) OF SUBDIVISION ONE OF SECTION ONE HUNDRED EIGHTY-SIX-E OF THE TAX LAW. <A]

[A> 2. IT SHALL BE UNLAWFUL FOR A PERSON INITIATING A TELEPHONE COMMUNICATION TO ENGAGE IN OR USE ANY CALLER ID SCAM WITH THE INTENT TO DEFRAUD A PERSON RECEIVING SUCH TELEPHONE COMMUNICATION. <A]

[A> 3. IT SHALL BE UNLAWFUL FOR A TELEPHONE SOLICITOR IN MAKING OR CAUSING TO BE MADE A CONSUMER TELEPHONE CALL TO USE ANY CALLER ID SCAM WITH THE INTENT TO DEFRAUD A CONSUMER RECEIVING SUCH CONSUMER TELEPHONE CALL. FOR THE PURPOSES OF THIS SUBDIVISION THE TERMS "TELEPHONE SOLICITOR" AND "CONSUMER TELEPHONE CALL" SHALL HAVE THE MEANINGS ASSIGNED TO SUCH TERMS IN SUBDIVISION ONE OF SECTION THREE HUNDRED NINETY-NINE-P OF THE GENERAL BUSINESS LAW. <A]

[A> 4. THE COMMISSION UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE CHAIRMAN IS HEREBY EMPOWERED TO ESTABLISH AND ADOPT RULES AND REGULATIONS TO EFFECTUATE THE PROVISIONS OF THIS SECTION. <A]

[A> 5. ANY VIOLATION OF THIS SECTION IS PUNISHABLE BY A CIVIL PENALTY OF NOT MORE THAN ONE THOUSAND FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS. <A]

Section 2. This act shall take effect on the one hundred eightieth day after it shall have become a law; provided, however that effective immediately, the addition, amendment and/or repeal of any rule or regulation necessary for the implementation of this act on its effective date are authorized and directed to be made and completed on or before such effective date.

SPONSOR: Sweeney

SUBJECT: TELEMARKETING (90%); RESIDENTIAL TELEPHONE SERVICE (90%); FRAUD & FINANCIAL CRIME (90%); LEGISLATION (78%); LEGISLATORS (78%); TAX LAW (73%); TAXES & TAXATION (73%); FINES & PENALTIES (73%); TELECOMMUNICATIONS (55%);

LOAD-DATE: January 26, 2005

2005 NY S.B. 1075

JANUARY 24, 2005
INTRODUCED BY SENS. ALESI, LITTLE, MALTESE, TRUNZO -- READ TWICE AND ORDERED PRINTED, AND WHEN PRINTED TO BE COMMITTED TO THE COMMITTEE ON CONSUMER PROTECTION

2005 Bill Text NY S.B. 1075

VERSION: Introduced

VERSION-DATE: January 24, 2005

SYNOPSIS: AN ACT to amend the general business law, in relation to preventing certain persons from fraudulently impersonating others on caller ID

NOTICE: [A> UPPERCASE TEXT WITHIN THESE SYMBOLS IS ADDED <A]

TEXT: THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK, REPRESENTED IN SENATE AND ASSEMBLY, DO ENACT AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. The general business law is amended by adding a new section 399-cc to read as follows:

[A> SECTION 399-CC. FRAUDULENT IMPERSONATION BY CALLER ID. 1. AS USED IN THIS SECTION, THE FOLLOWING TERMS SHALL HAVE THE FOLLOWING MEANINGS: <A]

[A> A. "BOARD" SHALL MEAN THE CONSUMER PROTECTION BOARD; AND <A]

[A> B. "PERSON" MEANS ANY NATURAL PERSON, ASSOCIATION, PARTNERSHIP, FIRM, CORPORATION, LIMITED LIABILITY COMPANY AND ITS AFFILIATES OR SUBSIDIARIES OR OTHER BUSINESS ENTITY. <A]

[A> 2. IT SHALL BE UNLAWFUL FOR ANY PERSON TO FRAUDULENTLY USE STAR #38 OR ANY OTHER SUCH METHOD OR FUNCTION TO CHOOSE THE NAME AND NUMBER, OTHER THAN SUCH PERSON'S ORIGINAL NAME AND NUMBER, WHICH WOULD APPEAR ON THE CALLER ID BOX OF THE PERSON CALLED. <A]

[A> 3. ANY COMPANY THAT PROVIDES LOCAL TELEPHONE DIRECTORIES TO CUSTOMERS IN THIS STATE SHALL INFORM ITS CUSTOMERS OF THE PROVISIONS OF THIS SECTION BY MEANS OF PUBLISHING A NOTICE IN SUCH LOCAL TELEPHONE DIRECTORIES. <A]

[A> 4. THE BOARD SHALL PRESCRIBE RULES AND REGULATIONS TO ADMINISTER THIS SECTION. <A]

Section 2. This act shall take effect on the one hundred eightieth day after it shall have become a law.

SPONSOR: Alesi

SUBJECT: IMPERSONATION (93%); CONSUMER PROTECTION (90%); LEGISLATORS (90%); LEGISLATION (78%);

LOAD-DATE: January 27, 2005

Attachment B

Michigan Public Act 612 of 2003 (introduced as House Bill 4042)

MICHIGAN 91ST LEGISLATURE -- 2002 REGULAR SESSION

HOUSE BILL 4042
(Act 612, Public Acts of 2002)

2002 Mi. ALS 612; 2002 Mi. P.A. 612; 2001 Mi. HB 4042

The People of the State of Michigan enact:

TITLE

An act to prescribe the rights and duties of parties to home solicitation sales; to regulate certain telephone solicitation; to provide for the powers and duties of certain state officers and entities; and to prescribe penalties and remedies.

Sec. 1. As used in this act:

(a) "Home solicitation sale" means a sale of goods or services of more than $ 25.00 in which the seller or a person acting for the seller engages in a personal, telephonic, or written solicitation of the sale, the solicitation is received by the buyer at a residence of the buyer, and the buyer's agreement or offer to purchase is there given to the seller or a person acting for the seller. Home solicitation sale does not include any of the following:

(i) A sale made pursuant to a preexisting revolving charge account.

(ii) A sale made pursuant to prior negotiations between the parties at a business establishment at a fixed location where goods or services are offered or exhibited for sale.

(iii) A sale or solicitation of insurance by an insurance agent licensed by the commissioner of insurance.

(iv) A sale made at a fixed location of a business establishment where goods or services are offered or exhibited for sale.

(v) A sale made pursuant to a printed advertisement in a publication of general circulation.

(vi) A sale of services by a real estate broker or salesperson licensed by the department of consumer and industry services.

(vii) A sale of agricultural or horticultural equipment and machinery that is demonstrated to the consumer by the vendor at the request of either or both of the parties.

(b) "Fixed location" means a place of business where the seller or an agent, servant, employee, or solicitor of that seller primarily engages in the sale of goods or services of the same kind as would be sold at the residence of a buyer.

(c) "Business day" means Monday through Friday and does not include Saturday, Sunday, or the following business holidays: New Year's day, Martin Luther King's birthday, Washington's birthday, Memorial day, Independence day, Labor day, Columbus day, Veterans' day, Thanksgiving day, and Christmas day.

(d) "Federally insured depository institution" means a state or national bank, state or federal savings bank, state or federal savings and loan association, or state or federal credit union that holds deposits insured by an agency of the United States.

(e) As used in only the definition of home solicitation sales, "goods or services" does not include any of the following:

(i) A loan, deposit account, or trust account lawfully offered or provided by a federally insured depository institution or a subsidiary or affiliate of a federally insured depository institution.

(ii) An extension of credit that is subject to any of the following acts:

(A) The mortgage brokers, lenders, and servicers licensing act, 1987 PA 173, MCL 445.1651 to 445.1684.

(B) The secondary mortgage loan act, 1981 PA 125, MCL 493.51 to 493.81.

(C) The regulatory loan act, 1939 PA 21, MCL 493.1 to 493.24.

(D) The consumer financial services act, 1988 PA 161, MCL 487.2051 to 487.2072.

(E) 1984 PA 379, MCL 493.101 to 493.114.

(F) The motor vehicle sales finance act, 1950 (Ex Sess) PA 27, MCL 492.101 to 492.141.

(iii) A sale of a security or interest in a security that is subject to the uniform securities act, 1964 PA 265, MCL 451.501 to 451.818.

(f) "Written solicitation" means a postcard or other written notice delivered to a buyer's residence that requests that the buyer contact the seller or seller's agent by telephone to inquire about a good or service, unless the postcard or other written notice concerns a previous purchase or order or specifies the price of the good or service and accurately describes the good or service.

(g) "ADAD" or "automatic dialing and announcing device" means any device or system of devices that is used, whether alone or in conjunction with other equipment, for the purpose of automatically selecting or dialing telephone numbers.

(h) "Commission" means the public service commission.

(i) "Do-not-call list" means a do-not-call list of consumers and their residential telephone numbers maintained by the commission, by a vendor designated by the commission, or by an agency of the federal government, under section 1a.

(j) "Existing customer" means an individual who has purchased goods or services from a person, who is the recipient of a voice communication from that person, and who either paid for the goods or services within the 12 months preceding the voice communication or has not paid for the goods and services at the time of the voice communication because of a prior agreement between the person and the individual.

(k) "Person" means an individual, partnership, corporation, limited liability company, association, governmental entity, or other legal entity.

(l) "Residential telephone subscriber" or "subscriber" means a person residing in this state who has residential telephone service.

(m) "Telephone solicitation" means any voice communication over a telephone for the purpose of encouraging the recipient of the call to purchase, rent, or invest in goods or services during that telephone call. Telephone solicitation does not include any of the following:

(i) A voice communication to a residential telephone subscriber with that subscriber's express invitation or permission prior to the voice communication.

(ii) A voice communication to an existing customer of the person on whose behalf the voice communication is made, unless the existing customer is a consumer who has requested that he or she not receive calls from or on behalf of that person under section 1c(1)(g).

(iii) A voice communication to a residential telephone subscriber in which the caller requests a face-to-face meeting with the residential telephone subscriber to discuss a purchase, sale, or rental of, or investment in, goods or services but does not urge the residential telephone subscriber to make a decision to purchase, sell, rent, invest, or make a deposit on that good or service during the voice communication.

(n) "Telephone solicitor" means any person doing business in this state who makes or causes to be made a telephone solicitation from within or outside of this state, including, but not limited to, calls made by use of automated dialing and announcing devices or by a live person.

(o) "Vendor" means a person designated by the commission to maintain a do-not-call list under section 1a. The term may include a governmental entity.

Sec. 1a. (1) A home solicitation sale shall not be made by telephonic solicitation using in whole or in part a recorded message. A person shall not make a telephone solicitation that consists in whole or in part of a recorded message.

(2) Within 120 days after the effective date of the amendatory act that added this subsection, the commission shall do 1 of the following:

(a) Establish a state do-not-call list. All of the following apply if the commission establishes a do-not-call list under this subdivision:

(i) The commission shall publish the do-not-call list quarterly for use by telephone solicitors.

(ii) The do-not-call list fund is created in the state treasury. Money received from fees under subparagraph (iii) shall be credited to the fund. The state treasurer shall direct the investment of the fund. The state treasurer shall credit to the fund interest and earnings from fund investments. Money remaining in the fund at the end of a fiscal year shall be carried over in the fund to the next and succeeding fiscal years. Money in the fund may be appropriated to the commission to cover the costs of administering the do-not-call list, but may not be appropriated to compensate or reimburse a vendor designated under subdivision (b) to maintain a do-not-call list under that subdivision.

(iii) The commission shall establish and collect 1 or both of the following fees to cover the costs to the commission for administering the do-not-call list:

(A) Fees charged to telephone solicitors for access to the do-not-call list.

(B) Fees charged to residential telephone subscribers for inclusion on the do-not-call list. The commission shall not charge a residential telephone subscriber a fee of more than $ 5.00 for a 3-year period.

(iv) The commission shall maintain the do-not-call list for at least 1 year. After 1 year, the commission may at any time elect to designate a vendor to maintain a do-not-call list under subdivision (b), in which case subdivision (b) shall apply.

(b) Designate a vendor to maintain a do-not-call list. All of the following apply to a vendor designated to maintain a do-not-call list under this subdivision:

(i) The commission shall establish a procedure or follow existing procedure for the submission of bids by vendors to maintain a do-not-call list under this subdivision.

(ii) The commission shall establish a procedure or follow existing procedure for the selection of the vendor to maintain the do-not-call list. In selecting the vendor, the commission shall consider at least all of the following factors:

(A) The cost of obtaining and the accessibility and frequency of publication of the do-not-call list to telephone solicitors.

(B) The cost and ease of registration on the do-not-call list to consumers who are seeking inclusion on the do-not-call list.

(iii) The commission may review its designation and make a different designation under this subdivision if the commission determines that another person would be better than the designated vendor in meeting the selection factors established under subparagraph (ii) or if the designated vendor engages in activities the commission considers contrary to the public interest.

(iv) If the commission does not establish a state do-not-call list under subdivision (a), the commission shall comply with the designation requirements of this subdivision for at least 1 year. After 1 year, the commission may at any time elect to establish and maintain a do-not-call list under subdivision (a), in which case subdivision (a) shall apply.

(v) Unless the vendor is a governmental entity, a vendor designated by the commission under this subdivision is not a governmental agency and is not an agent of the commission in maintaining a do-not-call list.

(vi) The commission and a vendor designated under this subdivision shall execute a written contract. The contract shall include the vendor's agreement to the requirements of this section and any additional requirements established by the commission.

(vii) The commission shall not use state funds to compensate or reimburse a vendor designated under this subdivision. The vendor may receive compensation or reimbursement for maintaining a designated do-not-call list under this subdivision only from 1 or both of the following:

(A) Fees charged by the vendor to telephone solicitors for access to the do-not-call list.

(B) Fees charged by the vendor to residential telephone subscribers for inclusion on the do-not-call list. A designated vendor shall not charge a residential telephone subscriber a fee of more than $ 5.00 for a 3-year period.

(viii) The designee do-not-call list fund is created in the state treasury. If the vendor is a department or agency of this state, money received from fees under subparagraph (vii) by that vendor shall be credited to the fund. The state treasurer shall direct the investment of the fund. The state treasurer shall credit to the fund interest and earnings from fund investments. Money remaining in the fund at the end of a fiscal year shall be carried over in the fund to the next and succeeding fiscal years. Money in the fund may be appropriated to that vendor to cover the costs of administering the do-not-call list.

(3) In determining whether to establish a state do-not-call list under subsection (2)(a) or designate a vendor under subsection (2)(b), and in designating a vendor under subsection (2)(b), the commission shall consider comments submitted to the commission from consumers, telephone solicitors, or any other person.

(4) Beginning 90 days after the commission establishes a do-not-call list under subsection (2)(a) or designates a vendor to maintain a do-not-call list under subsection (2)(b), a telephone solicitor shall not make a telephone solicitation to a residential telephone subscriber whose name and residential telephone number is on the then-current version of that do-not-call list.

(5) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, if an agency of the federal government establishes a federal do-not-call list, within 120 days after the establishment of the federal do-not-call list, the commission shall designate the federal list as the state do-not-call list. The federal list shall remain the state do-not-call list as long as the federal list is maintained. A telephone solicitor shall not make a telephone solicitation to a residential telephone subscriber whose name and residential telephone number is on the then-current version of the federal list.

(6) A telephone solicitor shall not use a do-not-call list for any purpose other than meeting the requirements of subsection (4) or (5).

(7) The commission or a vendor shall not sell or transfer the do-not-call list to any person for any purpose unrelated to this section.

Sec. 1b. (1) At the beginning of a telephone solicitation, a person making a telephone solicitation to a residential telephone subscriber shall state his or her name and the full name of the organization or other person on whose behalf the call was initiated and provide a telephone number of the organization or other person on request. A natural person must be available to answer the telephone number at any time when telephone solicitations are being made.

(2) The person answering the telephone number required under subsection (1) shall provide a residential telephone subscriber calling the telephone number with information describing the organization or other person on whose behalf the telephone solicitation was made to the residential telephone subscriber and describing the telephone solicitation.

(3) A telephone solicitor shall not intentionally block or otherwise interfere with the caller ID function on the telephone of a residential telephone subscriber to whom a telephone solicitation is made so that the telephone number of the caller is not displayed on the telephone of the residential telephone subscriber.

Sec. 1c. (1) It is an unfair or deceptive act or practice and a violation of this act for a telephone solicitor to do any of the following:

(a) Misrepresent or fail to disclose, in a clear, conspicuous, and intelligible manner and before payment is received from the consumer, all of the following information:

(i) Total purchase price to the consumer of the goods or services to be received.

(ii) Any restrictions, limitations, or conditions to purchase or to use the goods or services that are the subject of an offer to sell goods or services.

(iii) Any material term or condition of the seller's refund, cancellation, or exchange policy, including a consumer's right to cancel a home solicitation sale under section 2 and, if applicable, that the seller does not have a refund, cancellation, or exchange policy.

(iv) Any material costs or conditions related to receiving a prize, including the odds of winning the prize, and if the odds are not calculable in advance, the factors used in calculating the odds, the nature and value of a prize, that no purchase is necessary to win the prize, and the "no purchase required" method of entering the contest.

(v) Any material aspect of an investment opportunity the seller is offering, including, but not limited to, risk, liquidity, earnings potential, market value, and profitability.

(vi) The quantity and any material aspect of the quality or basic characteristics of any goods or services offered.

(vii) The right to cancel a sale under this act, if any.

(b) Misrepresent any material aspect of the quality or basic characteristics of any goods or services offered.

(c) Make a false or misleading statement with the purpose of inducing a consumer to pay for goods or services.

(d) Request or accept payment from a consumer or make or submit any charge to the consumer's credit or bank account before the telephone solicitor or seller receives from the consumer an express verifiable authorization. As used in this subdivision, "verifiable authorization" means a written authorization or confirmation, an oral authorization recorded by the telephone solicitor, or confirmation through an independent third party.

(e) Offer to a consumer in this state a prize promotion in which a purchase or payment is necessary to obtain the prize.

(f) Fail to comply with the requirements of section 1a or 1b.

(g) Make a telephone solicitation to a consumer in this state who has requested that he or she not receive calls from the organization or other person on whose behalf the telephone solicitation is made.

(2) Except as provided in this subsection, beginning 210 days after the effective date of the amendatory act that added this section, a person who knowingly or intentionally violates this section is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by imprisonment for not more than 6 months or a fine of not more than $ 500.00, or both. This subsection does not prohibit a person from being charged with, convicted of, or punished for any other crime including any other violation of law arising out of the same transaction as the violation of this section. This subsection does not apply if the violation of this section is a failure to comply with the requirements of section 1a(1), (4), or (5) or section 1b.

(3) A person who suffers loss as a result of violation of this section may bring an action to recover actual damages or $ 250.00, whichever is greater, together with reasonable attorney fees. This subsection does not prevent the consumer from asserting his or her rights under this act if the telephone solicitation results in a home solicitation sale, or asserting any other rights or claims the consumer may have under applicable state or federal law.

Sec. 1d. (1) Beginning 210 days after the effective date of the amendatory act that added this section, if a telephone directory includes residential telephone numbers, a person that publishes a new telephone directory shall include in the telephone directory a notice describing the do-not-call list and how to enroll on the do-not-call list.

(2) Beginning 210 days after the effective date of the amendatory act that added this section, each telecommunication provider that provides residential telephone service shall include a notice describing the do-not-call list and how to enroll on the do-not-call list with 1 of that telecommunication provider's bills for telecommunication services to a residential telephone subscriber each year. If the federal communication commission or any other federal agency establishes a federal "do not call" list, the notice shall also describe that list and how to enroll on that list. As used in this subsection, "telecommunication provider" means that term as defined in section 102 of the Michigan telecommunications act, 1991 PA 179, MCL 484.2102.

Sec. 1e. Sections 1a, 1b, 1c, and 1d do not apply to a person subject to any of the following:

(a) The charitable organizations and solicitations act, 1975 PA 169, MCL 400.271 to 400.294.

(b) The public safety solicitation act, 1992 PA 298, MCL 14.301 to 14.327.

(c) Section 527 of the internal revenue code of 1986.

Sec. 3. (1) In a home solicitation sale, unless the buyer requests the seller to provide goods or services without delay in an emergency, the seller shall present to the buyer and obtain the buyer's signature to a written agreement or offer to purchase that designates as the date of the transaction the date on which the buyer actually signs. The agreement or offer to purchase shall contain a statement substantially as follows in immediate proximity to the space reserved in the agreement or offer to purchase for the signature of the buyer:

"You, the buyer, may cancel this transaction at any time prior to midnight of the third business day after the date of this transaction. See the attached notice of cancellation form for an explanation of this right. Additionally, the seller is prohibited from having an independent courier service or other third party pick up your payment at your residence before the end of the 3-business-day period in which you can cancel the transaction."

(2) The seller shall attach to the copy or cause to be printed on the reverse side of the written agreement or offer to purchase retained by the buyer a notice of cancellation in duplicate that shall appear as follows: "notice of cancellation (enter date of transaction) (date) You may cancel this transaction, without any penalty or obligation, within 3 business days from the above date. If you cancel, any property traded in, any payments made by you under the contract or sale, and any negotiable instrument executed by you will be returned within 10 business days following receipt by the seller of your cancellation notice, and any security interest arising out of the transaction will be canceled. If you cancel, you must make available to the seller at your residence, in substantially as good condition as when received, any goods delivered to you under this contract or sale; or you may if you wish, comply with the instructions of the seller regarding the return shipment of the goods at the seller's expense and risk. If you do make the goods available to the seller and the seller does not pick them up within 20 days of the date of your notice of cancellation, you may retain or dispose of the goods without any further obligation. If you fail to make the goods available to the seller or if you agree to return the goods to the seller and fail to do so, then you remain liable for performance of all obligations under the contract. To cancel this transaction, mail or deliver a signed and dated copy of this cancellation notice or any other written notice, or send a telegram to (name of seller), at (address of seller's place of business) not later than midnight on _____ (date) I hereby cancel this transaction. _____ (date) _____ (buyer's signature) "

(3) The notices required by this section shall be in not less than 10-point bold type and shall be 2 points larger than the text of the contract. A written agreement or offer to purchase and the notice of cancellation attached to the agreement or offer shall be written in the same language as that used in any oral presentation that was given to facilitate sale of the goods or services. The seller shall enter on the blanks in the notice of cancellation the date of transaction, which is the date the buyer signs the written agreement, and the date for mailing the notice of cancellation. An error in entering this information shall not diminish the buyer's rights under this act.

(4) Until the seller has complied with this section, the buyer may cancel the home solicitation sale by notifying the seller in any manner and by any means of his or her intention to cancel.

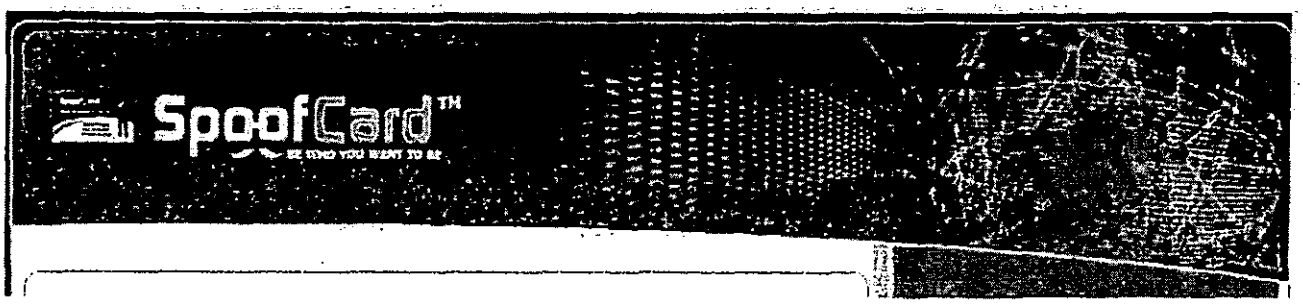
(5) This section does not apply to a home solicitation sale where the seller engaged in a telephone solicitation of the sale if sections 505 to 507 of the Michigan telecommunications act, 1991 PA 179, MCL 484.2505 to 484.2507, apply to the solicitation or sale.

Sec. 6. In connection with a home solicitation sale, refunds or penalties to which the debtor is entitled pursuant to this act may be set off against the debtor's obligation, and may be raised as a defense to an action on the obligation without regard to the time limitations prescribed by this act.

HISTORY:

Approved by the Governor on December 20, 2002

SPONSOR: Faunce



Frequently Asked Questions

How does SpoofCard work?

SpoofCard is a regular calling card. SpoofCard can be accessed through our dedicated toll free number where a user enters their pin number, desired Caller ID and the number they would like to call. The call is then placed instantly without the need to ever be online or at a computer.

Is this service Legal?

The technology underlying Spoofcard.com is legal in the U.S. and throughout the world.

Does SpoofCard offer call recording?

Yes, SpoofCard offers FREE call recording with instant access via your online control panel or by calling the toll free number.

How can I change my voice?

SpoofCard offers the ability to select a Male or Female voice when making a call. The feature works in real-time and allows the caller to speak in a normal tone while the person on the other end will hear the changed voice.

Are there any restrictions with using SpoofCard?

To ensure SpoofCard is used within our User Agreement, we have implemented several security measures which includes the inability to dial toll free numbers or 911. Federal Regulations prohibit the use of our technology by telemarketers or debt collectors to hide or falsify the telephone number from which they are calling. You must agree that you will not use the SpoofCard in violation of this or any other applicable law or regulation.

What are the advantages of Caller ID spoofing?

Caller ID spoofing gives business professionals the ability to manipulate their identity to their choosing and stay anonymous. Caller ID spoofing is also valuable in defeating popular telephone services such as "*57 Call Trace", "*69 Last Call Return", "Anonymous Call Rejection" and "Detailed Billing". Private Investigators will find Caller ID spoofing valuable for pretext calls.

Who may sign up for your service?

Our target market consists of, but is not limited to, businesses such as: Private Investigators, Law Enforcement, Skip Tracers, Insurance Agencies and Lawyers.

Does SpoofCard store my credit card information?

No, SpoofCard never receives your credit card information from our payment processors, keeping your information secure.

Can I call internationally?

Currently we only support calling within the United States and Canada

Can we send any number as the Caller ID and does it have to be 10 digits long?

Control Panel Login

Calling Card Pin:

ENTER Lost/Forgot PIN

- BUY INSTANT CALLING MINUTES
- MESSAGE BOARD
- FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS
- CONTACT US
- CUSTOMER SERVICE
- PRIVACY POLICY

Buy $10 Instant Calling Card
- 60 Minutes talk time
- Caller ID Spoofing
- Voice Changer
- Call Recording
- Customer Service

Buy Now

Buy $20 Instant Calling Card
- 120 Minutes talk time
- Caller ID Spoofing
- Voice Changer
- Call Recording
- Customer Service

Buy Now

Buy $40 Instant Calling Card
- 240 Minutes talk time
- Caller ID Spoofing
- Voice Changer
- Call Recording
- Customer Service

Buy Now

You may send any number as the Caller ID. Within the U.S. the number should be 10 digits long (NXX-XXX-XXXX) to guarantee properly delivery, but you may pass numbers of variable length such as "0", "411" or "12345". Results may vary based on location and the receiving ends telephone provider.

How do I get the name to show up on caller ID as well?

The name will automatically be displayed if the number is listed in the phone directory.

How do we sign up?

To sign up please visit the Buy Now Page.

Copyright (c) 2005. Spoof Card. All rights reserved.

GovTrack.us

Track | Research | Blog | Tools | Help Us | About | Profile/Log Out Bill Search : bill number or keywor

The next meeting of the Senate is today; the House next meets Feb 2, 2009.

Jan. 13, 2008: Track your representative's YouTube videos on GovTrack. This follows the site updates announced last month.

Congress > Legislation

Email Print ShareThis

H.R. 5126: Truth in Caller ID Act of 2006

109th Congress
2005-2006

To amend the Communications Act of 1934 to prohibit manipulation of caller identification information, and for other purposes.

Overview

Sponsor: Rep. Joe Barton [R-TX] show cosponsors (24)

Text: Summary | Full Text

Cost: less than $1 per American in 2006.

Status:

☑ Introduced	Apr 6, 2006
☑ Referred to Committee	View Committee Assignments
☑ Reported by Committee	May 24, 2006
☑ Passed House	Jun 6, 2006
☐ Voted on in Senate	(did not occur)
☐ Signed by President	(did not occur)

This bill never became law. This bill was proposed in a previous session of Congress. Sessions of Congress last two years, and at the end of each session all proposed bills and resolutions that haven't passed are cleared from the books. Members often reintroduce bills that did not come up for debate under a new number in the next session.

Last Action: Jun 7, 2006: Received in the Senate and Read twice and referred to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Related: See the Related Legislation page for other bills related to this one and a list of subject terms that have been applied to this bill. Sometimes the text of one bill or resolution is incorporated into another, and in those cases the original bill or resolution, as it would appear here, would seem to be abandoned.

Question & Answer

Have a question about this bill? Submit a short fact-oriented question and see if it will be answered by other visitors. (If you have a general question about how Congress works, see this page instead.)

Votes on Passage

Jun 6, 2006: This bill passed in the House of Representatives by voice vote. A record of each representative's position was not kept.

To cite this information, click a citation format for a suggestion: Bibliography | Wikipedia.

Because the U.S. Congress posts most legislative information online one legislative day after events occur, GovTrack is usually one legislative day behind.

GovTrack.us is not affiliated with the U.S. government or any other group. It is a pet project of a regular joe. (More About GovTrack) / Feedback (but not political opining) is welcome to operations@govtrack.us, but I can't do your research for you, nor can I pass on messages to Members of Congress.

Developers: GovTrack is open source and supports open knowledge. Get involved in civics!

This site is "copyleft". You are encouraged to reuse any material on this site.

109TH CONGRESS
2D SESSION

H. R. 5126

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

JUNE 7, 2006
Received; read twice and referred to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation

AN ACT

To amend the Communications Act of 1934 to prohibit manipulation of caller identification information, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Truth in Caller ID Act of 2006".

SEC. 2. PROHIBITION REGARDING MANIPULATION OF CALLER IDENTIFICATION INFORMATION.

Section 227 of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 227) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (e), (f), and (g) as subsections (f), (g), and (h), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection:

"(e) PROHIBITION ON PROVISION OF DECEPTIVE CALLER IDENTIFICATION INFORMATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—It shall be unlawful for any person within the United States, in connection with any telecommunications service or VOIP service, to cause any caller identification service to transmit misleading or inaccurate caller identification information, with the intent to defraud or cause harm.

"(2) PROTECTION FOR BLOCKING CALLER IDENTIFICATION INFORMATION.—Nothing in this subsection may be construed to prevent or restrict any person from blocking the capability of any caller identification service to transmit caller identification information.

"(3) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 6 months after the enactment of this subsection, the Commission shall prescribe regulations to implement this subsection.

"(4) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection:

"(A) CALLER IDENTIFICATION INFORMATION.—The term 'caller identification information' means information provided to an end user by a caller identification service regarding the telephone number of, or other information regarding the origination of, a call made using a telecommunications service or VOIP service.

"(B) CALLER IDENTIFICATION SERVICE.—The term 'caller identification service' means any service or device designed to provide the user of the service or device with the telephone number of, or other information regarding the origination of, a call made using a telecommunications service or VOIP service. Such term includes automatic number identification services.

"(C) VOIP SERVICE.—The term 'VOIP service' means a service that—"(i) provides real-time voice communications transmitted through end user equipment using TCP/IP protocol, or a successor protocol, for a fee or without a fee;

"(ii) is offered to the public, or such classes of users as to be effectively available to the public (whether part of a bundle of services or separately); and

"(iii) has the capability to originate traffic to, and terminate traffic from, the public switched telephone network.

"(5) SAVINGS PROVISION.—Nothing in this Act may be construed to affect or alter the application of the Commission's regulations regarding the requirements for transmission of caller identification information for telemarketing calls, issued pursuant to the Telephone Consumer Protection Act of 1991 (Public Law 102–243) and the amendments made by such Act.".

Passed the House of Representatives June 6, 2006.

Attest: KAREN L. HAAS,

Clerk.

HOUSE COMMITTEE REPORT

(7)
Date Referred to Committee: January 20, 2009 FURTHER REFERRALS: Finance

Date of Committee Action: 2/2/09

The JUDICIARY Committee considered: HOUSE BILL NO. 4

"An Act relating to false caller identification."

HB 4 FALSE CALLER IDENTIFICATION

Recommends it be replaced with [ ] HCS or [ ] CS for _____ ( )
For Senate Bills with new title: [ ] Technical Title [ ] New Title: HCR_____ [ ] Same Title [ ] New Title

[ ] attach amendments
[ ] add new referral-to _____ Committee
[ ] Letter of Intent_____ Committee

List of Abbrev for Depts.:
ADM
CED
COR
CRT
EED
DEC
DFG
GOV
DHS
LWF
LAW
LEG
MVA
DNR
DPS
REV
DOT
UA

NEW* FISCAL NOTES
*Assigned by Chief Clerk's Office

List by Dept(s):	*FN#	Fiscal	Indet.	Zero
LAW			✓

PREVIOUS* FISCAL NOTES

List by Dept(s):	FN#	Fiscal	Indet.	Zero

Signing with recommendations	Printed Last Name	DP	DNP	NR	AM
	LYNN	X
	Greenberg	✓
	Coghill			✓
	Holmes			X
	GATTO	X
Chair:	RAMRAS			X
Chair:

FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Fiscal Note Number:
Bill Version: HB 4
() Publish Date:

Identifier (file name): HB4-DPS-DET-02-02-09
Title "An Act relating to false caller identification."
Sponsor Representative Lynn
Requester House Judiciary

Public Safety
RDU Alaska State Troopers
Component AST Detachments
Component Number 2325

Expenditures/Revenues (Thousands of Dollars)

Note: Amounts do not include inflation unless otherwise noted below.

	Appropriation Required	Information
OPERATING EXPENDITURES	FY 2010	FY 2010	FY 2011	FY 2012	FY 2013	FY 2014	FY 2015
Personal Services
Travel	1.0
Contractual	9.0
Supplies
Equipment	15.0
Land & Structures
Grants & Claims
Miscellaneous
TOTAL OPERATING	25.0		**********	**********	**********	**********	**********
CAPITAL EXPENDITURES
CHANGE IN REVENUES ( )

FUND SOURCE (Thousands of Dollars)

1002 Federal Receipts
1003 GF Match
1004 GF	25.0		**********	**********	**********	**********	**********
1005 GF/Program Receipts
1037 GF/Mental Health
Other Interagency Receipts
TOTAL	25.0		**********	**********	**********	**********	**********

Estimate of any current year (FY2009) cost: 0.0

POSITIONS

Full-time
Part-time
Temporary

ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)

This bill creates the crime of False Caller Identification in Title 45, Trade Practices. The bill makes it a class A misdemeanor to knowingly and with intent to defraud, enter false information into a caller identification system.

The Department of Public Safety does not expect many of these cases within its jurisdiction in any given year. However, to investigate even one will require special training, equipment, and software. The department's best estimate at this time is a start up expense of approximately $25,000. Changing technology will likely require future equipment upgrades and additional training costs. The true fiscal impact of this legislation can not be fully determined until the department knows the magnitude of the issue.

Prepared by: Lt. Rodney Dial
Division Alaska State Troopers
Approved by: Joseph Masters, Commissioner
Department of Public Safety

Phone 907-247-4480
Date/Time 2/2/09 12:00 AM
Date 2/2/2009

(Revised 11/19/2007 OMB)

HB

6

Alaska State Legislature

Chairman
State Affairs Committee

Member
Judiciary Committee
Labor & Commerce Committee
Health & Social Services Committee
Military & Veterans Affairs Committee

Finance Subcommittees
Labor and Workforce Development
Military and Veterans' Affairs
Public Safety

A Communication From
REPRESENTATIVE BOB LYNN
District 31 Anchorage

E-Mail: Representative_Bob_Lynn@legis.state.ak.us
"Bob Lynn's Alaska Blog" www.RepLynnBlog.com

Session:
Alaska State Capitol, #104
Juneau, AK 99801-1182

Phone: (907) 465-4931
Fax: (907) 465-4316
Toll Free: (800) 870-4391

Interim:
716 W. 4th Ave., #650
Anchorage, AK 99501-2133

Phone: (907) 269-0205
Fax: (907) 269-0207

Sponsor Statement for HB 6

"An Act relating to proscribing certain sexual conduct or activities as cruelty to animals."

HB 6 expands the current Alaska law on cruelty to animals to include "sexual conduct." The primary purpose of this bill is not just to protect animals from sexual assault but to protect children and other vulnerable humans.

A compelling body of research confirms a link between animal cruelty and human violence. Studies also point to a connection involving sexual abuse and conduct with animals. For example:

> High rates of sexual abuse of animals exist in the backgrounds of serial sexual homicide perpetrators, according to the FBI.
>
> Ninety-six percent of juvenile offenders who engaged in sex with animals also admitted to sex offenses against humans, according to a 2002 study by Fleming, Jory and Burton.
>
> Sexual relations with animals parallel sexual assault against women and children, because in both instances there are issues of coercion, pain, and lack of consent, according to a 1997 study by Piers Beirne, a criminology professor at the University of Southern Maine.

Thirty five other states outlaw acts of bestiality, with many of them classifying it as a felony, according to the Humane Society of the United States. Several states have language almost identical to HB 6.

This proposed "sexual conduct" offense would be a Class A misdemeanor, added to AS 11.61.140, Cruelty to Animals. This statute includes commonsense exemptions for conduct ranging from scientific research governed by accepted standards, to accepted veterinary and animal husbandry practices.

Contact: Mike Sica, 465-4965 Revised: Feb. 26, 2009

CS FOR HOUSE BILL NO. 6(JUD)

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

TWENTY-SIXTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

BY THE HOUSE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

Offered:
Referred:

Sponsor(s): REPRESENTATIVES LYNN, Dahlstrom

A BILL

FOR AN ACT ENTITLED

"An Act relating to proscribing certain sexual conduct or sexual activities as cruelty to animals."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

 Section 1. AS 11.61.140(a) is amended to read:

(a) A person commits cruelty to animals if the person

(1) knowingly inflicts severe and prolonged physical pain or suffering on an animal;

(2) with criminal negligence, fails to care for an animal and, as a result, causes the death of the animal or causes severe physical pain or prolonged suffering to the animal;

(3) kills or injures an animal by the use of a decompression chamber;

(4) intentionally kills or injures a pet or livestock by the use of poison; [OR]

(5) knowingly kills or injures an animal, other than as provided in (1)

or (3) of this subsection, with the intent to intimidate, threaten, or terrorize another person; or

(6) knowingly

(A) engages in sexual conduct with an animal;

(B) under circumstances not proscribed under AS 11.41.455,

(i) photographs or films, for purposes of sexual gratification, a person engaged in sexual conduct with an animal;

(ii) causes, induces, aids, or encourages another person to engage in sexual conduct with an animal; or

(C) permits sexual conduct with an animal to be conducted on any premises under the person's control.

 Sec. 2. AS 11.61.140 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(h) In this section, "sexual conduct" means any

(1) touching or fondling by a person, either directly or through clothing, of the genitals or anus of an animal or any transfer or transmission of semen by the person on any part of the animal for the purpose of sexual gratification or arousal of the person;

(2) contact, however slight, between the mouth, genitals, or anus of a person and the sex organ or anus of an animal, or any intrusion, however slight, of any part of the body of the person into the sex organ or anus of an animal, or any intrusion of the genitals or anus of the person into the mouth of the animal for the purpose of sexual gratification of the person.

ALASKA STATE LEGISLATURE
HOUSE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

Representative Jay Ramras
Chairman
(907) 465-3004
Fax: (907) 465-2070
Representative_Jay_Ramras@legis.state.ak.us
1292 Sadler Way, Suite 324
Fairbanks, AK 99701

Committee Members:
Representative Nancy Dahlstrom,
Vice-Chairman
Representative John Coghill
Representative Bob Lynn
Representative Carl Gatto
Representative Max Gruenberg
Representative Lindsey Holmes

State Capitol, Room 120
Juneau, Alaska 99801

Fax

To: Jerry Luckhaupt
Leg. Legal

Fax #: (907) 465-2029 Number of pages including cover: 1

From: Jane W. Pierson

Date: March 20, 2009

Re: HB6 Passed from HJUD

Please go final on HB6 (26-LS0022\R) with one amendment P.1, L. 1 between the words "or" and "activities" please add the word "sexual".

Thank you

ADOPTED

26-LS0022\R
Luckhaupt
2/24/09

CS FOR HOUSE BILL NO. 6( )

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

TWENTY-SIXTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

BY

Offered:
Referred:

Sponsor(s): REPRESENTATIVE LYNN

A BILL

FOR AN ACT ENTITLED

"An Act relating to proscribing certain sexual conduct or activities as cruelty to animals."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

 Section 1. AS 11.61.140(a) is amended to read:

(a) A person commits cruelty to animals if the person

(1) knowingly inflicts severe and prolonged physical pain or suffering on an animal;

(2) with criminal negligence, fails to care for an animal and, as a result, causes the death of the animal or causes severe physical pain or prolonged suffering to the animal;

(3) kills or injures an animal by the use of a decompression chamber;

(4) intentionally kills or injures a pet or livestock by the use of poison; [OR]

(5) knowingly kills or injures an animal, other than as provided in (1)

or (3) of this subsection, with the intent to intimidate, threaten, or terrorize another person; or

(6) knowingly

(A) engages in sexual conduct with an animal;

(B) under circumstances not proscribed under AS 11.41.455,

(i) photographs or films, for purposes of sexual gratification, a person engaged in sexual conduct with an animal;

(ii) causes, induces, aids, or encourages another person to engage in sexual conduct with an animal; or

(C) permits sexual conduct with an animal to be conducted on any premises under the person's control.

 Sec. 2. AS 11.61.140 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(h) In this section, "sexual conduct" means any

(1) touching or fondling by a person, either directly or through clothing, of the genitals or anus of an animal or any transfer or transmission of semen by the person on any part of the animal for the purpose of sexual gratification or arousal of the person;

(2) contact, however slight, between the mouth, genitals, or anus of a person and the sex organ or anus of an animal, or any intrusion, however slight, of any part of the body of the person into the sex organ or anus of an animal, or any intrusion of the genitals or anus of the person into the mouth of the animal for the purpose of sexual gratification of the person.

Amendment #1

By: Rep. Gatto

Holmes object for purposes of discussion withdrawn.

Conceptual Amendment

Insert on page 2 after line 23.

Animal means a non human mammal, bird, reptile or amphibian, either dead or alive

Alaska State Legislature

Chairman
State Affairs Committee

Member
Judiciary Committee
Labor & Commerce Committee
Health & Social Services Committee
Military & Veterans Affairs Committee

Finance Subcommittees
Labor and Workforce Development
Military and Veterans' Affairs
Public Safety

A Communication From
REPRESENTATIVE BOB LYNN
District 31 Anchorage

E-Mail: Representative_Bob_Lynn@legis.state.ak.us
"Bob Lynn's Alaska Blog" www.RepLynnBlog.com

Session:
Alaska State Capitol, #104
Juneau, AK 99801-1182

Phone: (907) 465-4931
Fax: (907) 465-4316
Toll Free: (800) 870-4391

Interim:
716 W. 4th Ave., #650
Anchorage, AK 99501-2133

Phone: (907) 269-0205
Fax: (907) 269-0207

Changes from HB 6, Version A, to CSHB 6, Version R

"An Act relating to proscribing certain sexual conduct or activities as cruelty to animals."

The CS for HB 6, Version R, simply narrows the title for the bill:

Version A: Delete line 1, "An Act relating to cruelty to animals."

Version R: Add lines 1 and 2, "An Act relating to proscribing certain sexual conduct or activities as cruelty to animals."

Contact: Mike Sica, 465-4965

Revised: March 10. 2009

Alaska State Legislature

Chairman
State Affairs Committee

Member
Judiciary Committee
Labor & Commerce Committee
Health & Social Services Committee
Military & Veterans Affairs Committee

Finance Subcommittees
Labor and Workforce Development
Military and Veterans' Affairs
Public Safety

A Communication From
REPRESENTATIVE BOB LYNN
District 31 Anchorage

E-Mail: Representative_Bob_Lynn@legis.state.ak.us
"Bob Lynn's Alaska Blog" www.RepLynnBlog.com

Session:
Alaska State Capitol, #104
Juneau, AK 99801-1182

Phone: (907) 465-4931
Fax: (907) 465-4316
Toll Free: (800) 870-4391

Interim:
716 W. 4th Ave., #650
Anchorage, AK 99501-2133

Phone: (907) 269-0205
Fax: (907) 269-0207

Sectional Analysis for HB 6

"An Act relating to proscribing certain sexual conduct or activities as cruelty to animals."

Sec. 1. Amends AS 11.61.140, Cruelty to Animals, to add the offense of knowingly engaging in "sexual conduct" with an animal: other related activities ranging from photographing or filming "sexual conduct" with animal to causing or encouraging another person to engage in "sexual conduct" with an animal (not covered under AS 11.41.455, Unlawful exploitation of a minor); and permitting "sexual conduct" with animal to be conducted on any premises under the person's control.

Sec. 2. Amends AS 11.61.140 to add a new subsection to include in this section a definition of "sexual conduct."

###

Contact: Mike Sica, 465-4965 Revised: March 10, 2009

FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Fiscal Note Number:
Bill Version: HB006
() Publish Date:

Identifier (file name): HB006-LAW-CRIM-3-11-09
Dept. Affected: LAW
Title: An Act relating to cruelty to animals
RDU: CRIMINAL
Component: Criminal Justice Litigation
Sponsor: REPRESENTATIVE(s) LYNN
Requester: Judiciary
Component Number: 2202

Expenditures/Revenues (Thousands of Dollars)

Note: Amounts do not include inflation unless otherwise noted below.

	Appropriation Required	Information
OPERATING EXPENDITURES	FY 2010	FY 2010	FY 2011	FY 2012	FY 2013	FY 2014	FY 2015
Personal Services	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
Travel
Contractual
Supplies
Equipment
Land & Structures
Grants & Claims
Miscellaneous
TOTAL OPERATING	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
CAPITAL EXPENDITURES
CHANGE IN REVENUES ( )

FUND SOURCE (Thousands of Dollars)

1002 Federal Receipts
1003 GF Match
1004 GF	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
1005 GF/Program Receipts
1037 GF/Mental Health
Other Interagency Receipts
TOTAL	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0

Estimate of any current year (FY2009) cost:

POSITIONS

Full-time
Part-time
Temporary

ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)

HB 6 amends the crime of cruelty to animals by adding prohibitions on a person from engaging in sexual conduct with an animal; photographing or filming, for sexual gratification, a person engaging in sexual conduct with an animal; and permitting sexual conduct with an animal to be conducted on a person's premises. Sexual conduct is defined to include touching, contact, or penetration. Cruelty to animals is a class A misdemeanor. It is believed that passage of this bill would have a zero fiscal impact on the Department of Law.

Prepared by: Robert Meiners, Deputy Director
Phone 907-465-5427
Division: Administrative Services Division
Date/Time 3/11/09 4:00 PM
Approved by: Richard Svobodny, Acting Attorney General
Date 3/11/2009
Department of Law

(Revised 9/10/2008 OMB)

FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Fiscal Note Number: HB6-DOC-OC-03-17-09
Bill Version:
() Publish Date:

Identifier (file name): HB6-DOC-OC-03-17-09
Title "An Act relating to cruelty to animals"
Sponsor Representative Lynn
Requester Governor

Dept. Affected: DOC
RDU Administration & Support
Component Office of the Commissioner
Component Number 694

Expenditures/Revenues (Thousands of Dollars)

Note: Amounts do not include inflation unless otherwise noted below.

	Appropriation Required	Information
OPERATING EXPENDITURES	FY 2010	FY 2010	FY 2011	FY 2012	FY 2013	FY 2014	FY 2015
Personal Services
Travel
Contractual
Supplies
Equipment
Land & Structures
Grants & Claims
Miscellaneous
TOTAL OPERATING	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
CAPITAL EXPENDITURES
CHANGE IN REVENUES ( )

FUND SOURCE (Thousands of Dollars)

1002 Federal Receipts
1003 GF Match
1004 GF
1005 GF/Program Receipts
1037 GF/Mental Health
Other Interagency Receipts
TOTAL	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0

Estimate of any current year (FY2009) cost:

POSITIONS

Full-time
Part-time
Temporary

ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)

Passage of this legislation should not have a significant fiscal impact on the Department of Corrections.

Prepared by: Leslie Houston, Director — Phone 465-3339
Division Administrative Services — Date/Time 3/17/09 10:30 AM
Approved by: Dwayne Peeples — Date 3/17/2009
Deputy Commissioner

(Revised 9/10/2008 OMB)

FAQ for HB 6

"An Act relating to proscribing certain sexual conduct or activities as cruelty to animals."

What prompted the filing of House Bill 6?

The Anchorage Daily News reported last spring that a child sex offender in Klawock allegedly taped the muzzle of a dog, tied it to a tree, and sexually assaulted it. Alaskans were shocked to learn there was no Alaska law prohibiting sex with animals. Ketchikan District Attorney James Scott was quoted in the news account as saying the state's "very real concern" was that, if a small child had been available and unattended at the time and place where this dog was taken, "that the small child would have been found taped (and) tied in the woods."

Is this really a problem in Alaska and the United States?

Chava Lee, the Executive Director of Gastineau Humane Society in Juneau, receives at least a handful of reports of humans having sex with animals every year. As the agency that enforces Alaska's animal cruelty law locally, Lee must tell complainants that, unless the animal is severely injured or killed, the mistreatment is not a crime. The population of Juneau is only about 30,000. Extrapolate the number of human-animal sex reports in Juneau across Alaska, where the population is more than 650,000, and there may be at least 100 incidents a year. If this mistreatment of animals was recognized as a crime, there would likely be even more reports in Alaska.

Nationally, examples of sexual molestation of animals connected to sexual crimes against humans can be found in news accounts across the country. An Animal Abuse Database found under the internet site, Pet-Abuse.Com, turns up an alarming number of horrific cases of sexual abuse and violence against humans co-occurring with acts of bestiality.

(more)

The evidence of humans engaging in sex with animals is overwhelming. Almost any internet search engine will lead you to page after page of very graphic and disturbing material describing and promoting human sexual abuse of animals. Detailed how-to-do-it guides for the sexual abuse of animals involving a variety of species can be found on the internet, along with information on laws, animal-transmitted diseases, personal advertisements, and "pro-zoophile" resources.

What exactly is animal sexual abuse?

Often referred to as "bestiality" or "zoophilia," animal sexual abuse is the sexual molestation of an animal by a human. This kind of animal abuse includes a wide range of behaviors such as vaginal, anal, or oral penetration; fondling; oral-genital contact; penetration using an object; and killing or injuring an animal for sexual gratification. Animal sexual abuse may or may not include physical violence other than sexual violation; and may or may not result in physical injury to the animal. Animal sexual abuse, like rape, is the eroticization of violence, control and exploitation.

Is it really animal abuse if there is no physical injury?

Yes. Many animals are physically restrained during the abuse. Not all cases of animal sexual abuse will involve physical injury to the animal, but all sexual molestation of an animal by a human should be considered abuse.

In his 1993 article, Dr. Frank Ascione, Professor of Sociology at Utah State University, stated "bestiality may be considered cruel even in cases when physical harm to an animal does not occur (this is similar to the case of adult sexual activity with a child where consent is presumed to be impossible)."

In a 1997 article, Piers Beirne, Professor of Criminology at the University of Southern Maine, points out, "for genuine consent to sexual relations to be present ... both participants must be conscious, fully informed and positive in their desires. Bestiality is by nature sexual coercion because animals are incapable of genuinely saying "yes" or "no" to humans in forms we can readily understand."

(more)

In human-animal relationships, the human has power and control over the animal, often in all aspects of the animal's care and well-being. Thus, a sexual "relationship" between human and animal cannot be considered consensual.

Is all this attention on animal abuse an intrusion on an individual's private sexual choices?

No. Unlike sexual interactions between consenting adult humans, animal sexual abuse is not simply about an individual's private sexual choice. As in the case of child sexual abuse and adult rape, animal sexual abuse is an activity in which one party has no choice and cannot consent or refuse. When he/she initiates a sexual activity in which the other partner has no choices and must participate, the sexual abuser leaves the realm of private action.

Is there a connection between animal sexual abuse and domestic violence, child abuse and other violent crimes?

Yes. The sexual abuse of animals is often linked to the sexual abuse of women and children (Kowal, 1998). According to Lenore Walker's (1984) interviews with battered women, bestiality was mentioned as one of the "unusual sex acts" desired by their partners. Child sexual abusers may also sexually abuse animals to enhance, expand or extend the abuse of the genuinely powerless and unsuspecting victim (Adams, 1994).

Research also indicates a connection between animal sexual abuse and other types of violent crimes. According to a 1986 study, 40 percent of the perpetrators of sexually motivated homicides, who had been sexually abused as children, also reported they have sexually abused animals (Ressler, et al. 1986).

Our interviews with Alaska officials who work in the areas of animal cruelty, law enforcement, corrections, domestic violence and sexual assault, confirm the compelling body of research that shows a connection between animal sexual abuse and human sexual abuse and violence.

(more)

Can animal sexual abuse be prosecuted under the existing Alaska animal cruelty law?

Only if the person knowingly inflicts severe and prolonged physical pain or suffering on an animal, or knowingly injures or kills an animal to intimidate, threaten, or terrorize another person.

Are there other Alaska laws that could be used to prosecute animal sexual abuse?

Only if the sexual abuse of an animal also involves a crime against a person (Unlawful Exploitation of a Minor), or involves the damage or loss of property (Criminal Mischief).

Is animal sexual abuse illegal in most states?

Yes. At least 32 states outlaw acts of bestiality, with several classifying bestiality as a felony, according to a Sept. 1, 2008 report by Alaska Legislative Research Services. Recent news reports indicate other states are also looking at criminalizing sexual abuse of animals.

In many of the states that currently outlaw animal molestation, the language of their sexual abuse laws is almost identical to the wording in HB 6.

Why must the wording of this bill be so graphic?

Language must be precise so everyone understands exactly what constitutes the "sexual conduct" part of the crime being proposed under this bill. Although such language may be embarrassing and uncomfortable to read, words must be clear and concise when specifying a criminal offense.

What would be the penalty in Alaska under this bill?

Like most of the other offenses listed under the existing Cruelty to Animals statute, the crime of "sexual conduct" with an animal would be a Class A misdemeanor. Cruelty to Animals is a class C felony if the person is convicted three times under the statute within 10 years.

(more)

Will there be exemptions for accepted professional practices involving "sexual conduct" with animals?

Absolutely. The same defense to a prosecution under the current Cruelty to Animals law would apply to the offense proposed in HB 6. Such defensible conduct includes legitimate scientific research governed by accepted standards, the humane destruction of an animal, accepted veterinary and animal husbandry practices, and other behaviors listed under AS 11.61.140 (c).

(This FAQ was compiled by the office of Rep. Bob Lynn based on studies, research and interviews involving Alaska Legal Services, Alaska Legislative Research Services, Alaska departments of Corrections, Law, Public Health, Public Safety and Environmental Conservation, municipal police departments and law enforcement agencies involved in animal cruelty and domestic violence/sexual assaults, Alaska Farm Bureau, Gastineau Humane Society veterinary clinic in Juneau, Pet-Abuse.Com, Humane Society of the United States, American Humane, and various news accounts in Alaska and around the country, and other sources.)

HB 6 Cruelty to Animals by Rep. Bob Lynn
Contact: Mike Sica, 465-4965
Revised: March 5, 2009

House Bill 6

"An Act relating to proscribing certain sexual conduct or activities as cruelty to animals."

Research, Studies, Fact Sheets

Alaska Legislative Research Report Summary

HSUS Summary on Animal Sexual Abuse State Laws

HSUS Fact Sheet on Bestiality and Other Violent Crimes

HSUS Fact Sheet on Animal Cruelty and Sexual Abuse

American Humane Supports Recognition of Link Between Animal Abuse and Family Violence

Bestiality and Zoophilia Bibliography of Studies

LEGISLATIVE RESEARCH REPORT

SEPTEMBER 1, 2008

REPORT NUMBER 09.004

STATE LAWS: BESTIALITY CRIMES AND PUNISHMENTS

PREPARED FOR REPRESENTATIVE BOB LYNN

BY CHUCK BURNHAM, LEGISLATIVE ANALYST

You asked about bestiality laws among the states. Specifically, you wanted to know which states have laws against bestiality and the penalties for violating those laws.

Our research located laws in thirty-two states that outlaw acts of bestiality.[1] Table 1 lists those states, their relevant statutory citations, and the criminal classification and maximum punishments for each violation. We include copies of the statutes listed in Table 1 as an attachment.

As you can see, the criminal classifications and punishments for bestiality vary substantially among the states. For instance, "indecency with an animal," a class A misdemeanor in Nebraska, is punishable by a maximum fine of $500 and three months in jail. By contrast, an "abominable and detestable crime against nature" with an animal in Rhode Island—materially similar to the Nebraska offense—is an unclassified felony punishable by seven to twenty years imprisonment. Not surprisingly, a number of states—Arizona, Illinois, Indiana, and Kansas, for example—impose dramatically increased penalties for crimes of bestiality where a minor is forced to take part in or otherwise witness the act. Similarly, some states increase penalties for repeat violators, for filming or photographing acts of bestiality, or for committing the act in public or in the presence of others.

I hope you find this information useful. Please do not hesitate to contact us if you have questions or need additional information.

---

[1] "Bestiality," more technically known as "zoophilia," is variously identified in states' laws as "buggery," "sodomy," "sexual assault of an animal," and as a "crime against nature," among other terms. For the purposes of this report "bestiality" refers to any sexual contact between a human and an animal. Although we believe our research to be thorough, there may be other state laws prohibiting bestiality that were not located by our efforts due to variability in wording and construction.

907-465-3991
907-465-3908 (fax)

Alaska Legislature
Legislative Research Services
w3.legis.state.ak.us/laa/research/research.php

State Capitol
Juneau, AK 99801

State Laws: Bestiality Crimes and Punishments

State	Citation	Crime	Criminal Classification	Punishment
Arizona	ARS 13-1403	Public sexual indecency involving bestiality when others are present	Class 1 Misdemeanor; Class 5 Felony if a child under age 15 is present	Class 1 Misdemeanor--maximum fine of $2,500 and/or 6 months in jail Class 5 Felony--maximum fine of $150,000 and/or 1.5 years in jail for first offense
	ARS 13-1411	Bestiality	Class 6 Felony; Class 3 Felony if the defendant causes a child under age 15 to sexually assault an animal	For first offense: Class 6 Felony--maximum fine of $150,000 and/or one year in jail Class 3 Felony--maximum fine of $150,000 and/or 3.5 years in jail In addition, the court may order psychological assessment and counseling and the costs for care of injured animals
Arkansas	ACA 5-14-122	Bestiality	Class A Misdemeanor	Maximum fine of $1,00 and/or one year in jail
California	Cal Penal Code 286.5	Sexually Assault of an Animal	Misdemeanor	Maximum fine of $1,00 and/or six months in jail
Colorado	CRS 18-9-201 to 202	Cruelty to Animals	Class 1 Misdemeanor; a subsequent offense is a Class 6 Felony; additional offenses are Class 5 Felonies	First offense: psychological evaluation and treatment, $500 to $5,000 fine and/or six months to 18 months in jail Second offense: $1,000 to $100,000 fine and/or 1 year to 1.5 years in jail Subsequent offenses: $1,000 to $100,000 fine and/or 1 year to 3 years in jail Court may assign offender psychological treatment plus costs of incarceration and treatment
Delaware	DCA 11-777	Bestiality	Class D Felony	Maximum eight years in jail
Georgia	OCGA 16-6-6	Bestiality	Unclassified	One to five years in jail
Idaho	IC 18-6605	Crime Against Nature	Unclassified	Minimum five years in jail

State Laws: Bestiality Crimes and Punishments (contd.)

State	Citation	Crime	Criminal Classification	Punishment
Illinois	720 ILCS 5/12-35	Sexual Conduct or Sexual Contact with an Animal	Class 4 Felony; Class 3 Felony if a person under age 18 is present or the animal is seriously injured or killed	Class 4 Felony: maximum $25,000 fine and one to three years in jail Class 3 Felony: maximum $25,000 fine and two to five years in jail In addition to the above penalties, court may impose upon offender prohibition from owning or residing with animals; psychological evaluation; and costs of care for animal(s) involved
Indiana	ISA 35-42-4-5	Vicarious Sexual Gratification; Fondling in the Presence of a Minor [directing, aiding, or inducing a minor under age 16 to engage in sexual contact with an animal]	Class C Felony; Class B Felony if child is under 14; Class A Felony if threat of deadly force is used or the minor victim is threatened or drugged	All felonies carry maximum fines of $10,000 and the following jail terms: Class C Felony: two to eight years with an advisory sentence of four years Class B Felony: six to twenty years with an advisory sentence of ten years. Class A Felony: twenty to fifty years with and advisory sentence of thirty years.
	ISA 35-46-3-14	Bestiality	Class D Felony	Maximum $10,00 fine and six months to three years in jail with an advisory sentence of 1.5 years
Iowa	IC 717C.1	Bestiality	Aggravated Misdemeanor	Aggravated Misdemeanor: fine of $626 to $6,250 and maximum two years in jail In addition, the court may order psychological evaluation and treatment at offender's expense
	IC 728.4	Rental or Sale of Hard-Core Pornography [bestiality on film]	Aggravated Misdemeanor; Class D Felony for second and subsequent violations	Aggravated Misdemeanor: fine of $626 to $6,250 and maximum two years in jail Class D Felony: fine of $725 to $7,500 and maximum five years in jail
Kansas	KSA 21-3505	Criminal Sodomy	Class B Nonperson Misdemeanor; Severity Level 3 Person Felony if a child aged 14-15 is caused to engage in the sex act	Class B Nonperson Misdemeanor: maximum fine of $1,000 and/or six months in jail Level 3 Person Felony: maximum $300,000 fine and/or 89 to 100 months in jail with a presumptive sentence of 94 months for first offense

State Laws: Bestiality Crimes and Punishments (contd.)

State	Citation	Crime	Criminal Classification	Punishment
Louisiana	LSA-RS 14:89	Crime Against Nature	Unclassified	Maximum $2,000 fine and/or five years in jail with or without hard labor
Maine	MRSA 17-1031(I)	Cruelty to Animals-Bestiality	Class D Crime; Class C Crime for the third and subsequent convictions	Class D Crime: maximum fine of $2,000 and/or one year in jail Class C Crime: maximum fine of $5,000 and/or five years in jail
Maryland	ACM Crime Law 3-322	Unnatural or Perverted Sexual Practice	Misdemeanor	Maximum fine of $1,000 and/or ten years in jail
Massachusetts	MGLA 272-34	Crime Against Nature	Unclassified	Maximum twenty years in jail
Michigan	MCLA 750-158	Crime Against Nature or Sodomy	Felony	Maximum 15 years in jail, or life in jail if the offender is a "sexual delinquent" at the time of the crime
Minnesota	MS 609.294	Bestiality	Misdemeanor; Gross Misdemeanor if committed in the presence of another person	Misdemeanor--maximum fine of $1,000 and/or ninety days in jail Gross Misdemeanor--maximum fine of $3,000 and/or one year in jail
Montana	MCA 45-5-505	Deviate Sexual Conduct	Unclassified	Maximum fine of $50,000 and/or 10 years in jail
Nebraska	RSN 28-1010	Indecency with an Animal	Class III Misdemeanor	Maximum fine of $500 and/or three months in jail
New York	NY Penal Law 130.20	Sexual Misconduct	Class A Misdemeanor	Maximum fine of $1,000 and/or one year in jail
North Carolina	GSNC 14-177	Crime Against Nature	Class I Felony	Three to eight months in jail with a presumptive sentence of four to six months
North Dakota	NDCC 12.1-20-02 and 12.1-20-12	Deviate Sexual Act	Class A Misdemeanor	Maximum fine of $2,000 and/or one year in jail
Oklahoma	OSA 21-866	Crime Against Nature	Unclassified	Maximum of ten years in jail
Oregon	ORS 167.333	Sexual Assault of an Animal	Class A Misdemeanor	Maximum fine of $6,250 and/or one year in jail
Pennsylvania	PCSA 3129	Sexual Intercourse with Animal	Misdemeanor of the Second Degree	Maximum fine of $5,000 and/or two years in jail

State Laws: Bestiality Crimes and Punishments (contd.)

State	Citation	Crime	Criminal Classification	Punishment
Rhode Island	GLRI 11-10-1	Abominable and Detestable Crime Against Nature	Unclassified	Seven to twenty years in jail
South Carolina	CLSC 16-15-120	Buggery	Felony	Maximum of five years in jail and/or $500 fine
South Dakota	SDCL 22-22-42	Bestiality	Class 6 Felony; Class 5 Felony if offender has previously been convicted of a sex crime	Class 5 Felony: maximum fine of $10,000 and/or five years in jail Class 6 Felony: maximum fine of $4,000 and/or two years in jail
Utah	UCA 76-9-301.8	Bestiality	Class B Misdemeanor	Maximum fine of $1,000 and/or six months in jail
Virginia	CV 18.2-361	Crimes Against Nature	Class 6 Felony	Maximum fine of $2,500 and/or one to five years in jail
Washington	RCWA 15.52.205	Animal Cruelty in the First Degree	Class C Felony	Maximum fine of $10,000 and/or five years in jail. Offender may not own or reside with animals, court may order counseling and reimbursement for animal's care
Wisconsin	WS 944.17	Sexual Gratification	Class A Misdemeanor	Maximum fine of $10,000 and/or nine months in jail

Notes: Although we believe our research to be thorough, there may be other state laws prohibiting bestiality that were not located by our efforts due to variability in wording and construction.
Sources: Animal Legal Defense Fund, "Animal Protection Laws of the United States of America and Canada," Stephen K. Otto ed., 3rd Edition, 2007; available online at http://www.aldf.org/article.php?id=259; and the Lexus database of state laws.

THE HUMANE SOCIETY OF THE UNITED STATES

ANIMAL SEXUAL ABUSE

35 states have laws prohibiting sexual abuse of animals (AZ, AR, CA, CO, CT, DE, GA, IA, ID, IL, IN, KS, LA, MD, MA, ME, MI, MN, MO, MS, MT, NE, NY, NC, ND, OK, PA, RI, SC, SD, TN, UT, VA, WA and WI).
In many states bestiality may not be illegal, however, it is a crime to have a child perform or simulate bestiality.

ARIZONA	13-1411	A. A person commits bestiality by knowingly doing either of the following: 1. Engaging in oral sexual contact, sexual contact or sexual intercourse with an animal. 2. Causing another person to engage in oral sexual contact, sexual contact or sexual intercourse with an animal. B. In addition to any other penalty imposed for a violation of subsection A of this section, the court may order that the convicted person do any of the following: 1. Undergo a psychological assessment and participate in appropriate counseling at the convicted person's own expense. 2. Reimburse an animal shelter as defined in section 11-1022 for any reasonable costs incurred for the care and maintenance of any animal that was taken to the animal shelter as a result of conduct proscribed by subsection A of this section. C. This section does not apply to: 1. Accepted veterinary medical practices performed by a licensed veterinarian or veterinary technician.

		2. Insemination of animals by the same species, bred for commercial purposes. 3. Accepted animal husbandry practices that provide necessary care for animals bred for commercial purposes. D. Bestiality is a class 6 felony, except that bestiality pursuant to Subsection A, paragraph 2 of this section is a class 3 felony punishable pursuant to section 13-604.01 if the other person is a minor under fifteen years of age. E. For the purposes of this section, "animal" means a nonhuman mammal, bird, reptile or amphibian, either dead or alive
ARKANSAS	5-14-122	(a) A person commits sodomy if such person performs any act of sexual gratification involving: (1) The penetration, however slight, of the anus or mouth of an animal or a person by the penis of a person of the same sex or an animal; or (2) The penetration, however slight, of the vagina or anus of an animal or a person by any body member of a person of the same sex or an animal. (b) Sodomy is a Class A misdemeanor.
CALIFORNIA	§ 286.5.	Any person who sexually assaults any animal protected by Section 597f for the purpose of arousing or gratifying the sexual desire of the person is guilty of a misdemeanor.
COLORADO
CONNECTICUT	§ 53a-73a (2001)	A person is guilty of sexual assault in the fourth degree when: (3) such person engages in sexual contact with an animal or dead body; (b) Sexual assault in the fourth degree is a Class A misdemeanor.
DELAWARE	s 777	A person is guilty of bestiality when the person intentionally engages in any sexual act involving sexual contact, penetration or intercourse with the genitalia of an animal or intentionally causes another person to engage in any such sexual act with an animal for purposes of sexual gratification. Bestiality is a Class D felony.
GEORGIA	16-6-6	A person commits the offense of bestiality when he performs or submits to any sexual act with an animal involving the sex organs of the one and the mouth, anus, penis, or vagina of the other. Penalty: Imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years.
IDAHO	18-6605	Every person who is guilty of the infamous crime against nature, committed with mankind or with any animal, is punishable by imprisonment in the state prison not less than five (5) years.
ILLINOIS	720 ILCS 5/12-35 (new 2002)	A person may not knowingly engage in any sexual contact or cause, aid or another person to engage in any sexual contact with an animal. (c) A person may not knowingly permit any sexual conduct or sexual contact with an animal to be conducted on any premises under his or her charge or control. (d) A person may not knowingly engage in, promote, aid, or abet any activity involving any sexual contact with an animal for a commercial or recreational purpose. (e) A person who violates this Section is guilty of a Class 4 felony. A person who violates this Section in the presence of a person under 18 years of age or causes the animal serious physical injury or death is guilty of a Class 3 felony. (f) The court must order that the defendant not harbor animals or reside in any household where animals are present for a reasonable period of time or permanently, if necessary; and relinquish and permanently forfeit all animals residing in the household to a recognized or duly organized animal shelter or humane society. (3) Undergo a psychological evaluation and counseling at defendant's expense. (4) Reimburse the animal shelter or humane society for any reasonable costs incurred for the care and maintenance of the animal involved in the sexual conduct or sexual contact in addition to any animals relinquished to the animal shelter or humane society.

INDIANA	IC 35-46-3-14	A person who knowingly or intentionally performs an act involving: (1) a sex organ of a person and the mouth or anus of an animal; (2) a sex organ of an animal and the mouth or anus of a person; (3) any penetration of the human female sex organ by an animal's sex organ; or (4) any penetration of an animal's sex organ by the human male sex organ; commits bestiality, a Class D felony.
IOWA	717C.1	A person who performs a sex act with an animal, is guilty of an aggravated misdemeanor. 3. Upon a conviction for a violation of this section, and in addition to any sentence authorized by law, the court shall require the person to submit to a psychological evaluation and treatment at the person's expense. The commission of bestiality in the presence of a minor under section 717C.1 by a person who resides in a home with a child, as a result of the acts or omissions of a person responsible for the care of the child is considered child abuse.
KANSAS	21-3505	Criminal sodomy is: (1) Sodomy between persons who are 16 or more years of age and members of the same sex or between a person and an animal; (3) causing a child 14 or more years of age but less than 16 years of age to engage in sodomy with any person or animal. (c) Criminal sodomy as provided in subsection (a)(1) is a class B nonperson misdemeanor. Criminal sodomy as provided in subsections (a)(2) and (a)(3) is a severity level 3, person felony.
		(1) The unnatural carnal copulation by a human being with another of the same

LOUISIANA	§ 89.	sex or opposite sex or with an animal....Penalty: fined up to two thousand dollars, or imprisoned, with or without hard labor, for not more than five years, or both.
MAINE	1031 (2001)	Commits bestiality on an animal means that a person: 1) Engages in a sexual act with an animal for the purpose of that person's sexual gratification; 2) Coerces anyone to engage in a sexual act with an animal; 3) Engages in a sexual act with an animal in the presence of a minor; 4) Uses any part of the person's body or an object to sexually stimulate an animal; 5) Videotapes a person engaging in a sexual act with an animal; or 6) For the purpose of that person's sexual gratification, kills or physically abuses an animal. Violation of this paragraph is a Class D crime;
MARYLAND	s 554	Every person who is convicted of taking into his or her mouth the sexual organ of any other person or animal, or who shall be convicted of placing his or her sexual organ in the mouth of any other person or animal, or who shall be convicted of committing any other unnatural or perverted sexual practice with any other person or animal, shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars or be imprisoned in jail or in the house of correction or in the penitentiary for a period not exceeding ten years, or shall be both fined and imprisoned within the limits above prescribed in the discretion of the court.
MASSACHUSETTS	Ch.272 Sec. 34	Whoever commits the abominable and detestable crime against nature, either with mankind or with a beast, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than twenty years.
MICHIGAN	750.158	Any person who shall commit the abominable and detestable crime against nature either with mankind or with any animal shall be guilty of a felony, punishable by imprisonment in the state prison not more than 15 years, or if such person was at the time of the said offense a sexually delinquent person, may be punishable by imprisonment in the state prison for an indeterminate term, the minimum of which shall be 1 day and the maximum of which shall be life.
MINNESOTA	609.294	Whoever carnally knows a dead body or an animal or bird is guilty of bestiality, which is a misdemeanor. If knowingly done in the presence of another the person may be sentenced to Imprisonment for not more than one year or to payment of a fine of not more than $3,000 or both.
		No person shall engage in any sexual conduct with an animal, or cause, aid or

MISSOURI	566.111	abet another person to engage in any sexual conduct with an animal. No person shall permit any sexual conduct with an animal on any premises under such person's charge or control. No person shall engage in, promote, aid or abet any activity involving any sexual conduct with an animal for commercial or recreational purposes. 3. Any person who violates this section shall be guilty of a Class D felony. Any person who violates this section in the presence of a minor or causes any animal serious physical injury or death while violating or attempting to violate this section shall be guilty of a Class C felony. 4. In addition to the penalty imposed, the court may: (1) prohibit the defendant permanently or for a reasonable time from harboring animals or residing in any household where animals are present; (2) order the defendant to relinquish and permanently forfeit all animals residing in the defendant's household to a recognized or duly incorporated animal shelter or humane society, and order the defendant to reimburse such shelter or humane society for all reasonable costs incurred for the care and maintenance of the animals involved in the violation of this section; and (3) order psychological evaluation and counseling of the defendant, at the defendant's expense.
MISSISSIPPI	§97-29-59	Every person who shall be convicted of the detestable and abominable crime against nature committed with mankind or with a beast, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term of not more than ten years.
MONTANA	45-5-505	Deviate sexual conduct. (1) A person who knowingly engages in deviate sexual relations or who causes another to engage in deviate sexual relations commits the offense of deviate sexual conduct. (2) A person convicted of the offense of deviate sexual conduct shall be imprisoned in the state prison for any term not to exceed 10 years or be fined an amount not to exceed $50,000, or both. 45-2-101(20) "Deviate sexual relations" means sexual contact or sexual intercourse between two persons of the same sex or any form of sexual intercourse with an animal.
NEBRASKA	§ 28-1010	A person commits indecency with an animal when such person subjects an animal to sexual penetration. Sexual penetration shall not require emission of semen indecency with an animal is a Class III misdemeanor.
NEW YORK	§ 130.20	A person is guilty of sexual misconduct when: He engages in sexual conduct with an animal or a dead human body. Sexual misconduct is a class A misdemeanor
NORTH CAROLINA	§ 14-177	If any person shall commit the crime against nature, with mankind or beast, he shall be punished as a Class I felony.
NORTH DAKOTA	12.1-20-1	A person who performs a deviate sexual act with the intent to arouse or gratify his sexual desire is guilty of a class A misdemeanor.

	2	"Deviate sexual act" means any form of sexual contact with an animal, bird, or dead person.
OKLAHOMA	§ 886 (1999)	Every person who is guilty of the detestable and abominable crime against nature, committed with mankind or with a beast, is punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding ten (10) years.
PENNSYLVANIA	Title 18, Sec. 3129	A person who engages in any form or sexual intercourse with an animal commits a misdemeanor of the second degree.
RHODE ISLAND	11-10-1	Every person who shall be convicted of the abominable and detestable crime against nature, either with mankind or with any beast, shall be imprisoned not exceeding twenty (20) years nor less than seven (7) years.
SOUTH CAROLINA	§16-15-120	Whoever shall commit the abominable crime of buggery, whether with mankind or with beast, shall, on conviction, be guilty of felony and shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary for five years or shall pay a fine of not less than five hundred dollars, or both, at the discretion of the court.
SOUTH DAKOTA	§22-22-42 (2003)	No person, for the purpose of that person's sexual gratification, may: (1) Engage in a sexual act with an animal; or (2) Coerce any other person to engage in a sexual act with an animal; or (3) Use any part of the person's body or an object to sexually stimulate an animal; or (4) Videotape a person engaging in a sexual act with an animal; or (5) Kill or physically abuse an animal. Any person who violates any provision of this section is guilty of the crime of bestiality. Bestiality is a Class 6 felony. However, if any person has been previously convicted of a sex crime pursuant, any subsequent violation of this section is a Class 5 felony.
TENNESSEE
UTAH	76-9-301. 8	A person commits the crime of bestiality if the actor engages in any sexual activity with an animal with the intent of sexual gratification of the actor. A crime of bestiality is a class B misdemeanor.
VIRGINIA	s 18.2-36 1	If any person carnally knows in any manner any brute animal, or carnally knows any male or female person by the anus or by or with the mouth, or voluntarily submits to such carnal knowledge, he or she shall be guilty of a Class 6 felony.
WASHINGTON	RCW 16.52.205	A person is guilty of animal cruelty in the first degree (class c felony) when he or she:(a) Knowingly engages in any sexual conduct or sexual contact with an animal; (b) Knowingly causes, aids, or abets another person to engage in any sexual conduct or sexual contact with an animal;(c) Knowingly permits any sexual conduct or sexual contact with an animal to be conducted on any premises under his or her charge or control; (d) Knowingly engages in, organizes, promotes, conducts, advertises, aids, abets, participates in as an observer, or performs any service in the furtherance of an act involving any sexual conduct or sexual contact with an animal for a commercial or recreational purpose; or (e) Knowingly photographs or films, for purposes of sexual gratification, a person engaged in a sexual act or sexual contact with an animal. In addition to the penalty imposed, the court may order that the convicted person do any of the following: (a) Not harbor or own animals or reside in any household where animals are present; (b) Participate in appropriate counseling at the defendant's expense; (c) Reimburse the animal shelter or humane society for any reasonable costs incurred for the care and maintenance of any animals taken to the animal shelter or humane society as a result of conduct proscribed in this section.

WISCONSIN	944.17	In this section, "in public" means in a place where or in a manner such that the person knows or has reason to know that his or her conduct is observable by or in the presence of persons other than the person with whom he or she is having sexual gratification. (2) Whoever does any of the following is guilty of a Class A misdemeanor: (c) Commits an act of sexual gratification involving his or her sex organ and the sex organ, mouth or anus of an animal. (d) Commits an act of sexual gratification involving his or her sex organ, mouth or anus and the sex organ of an animal.

Fact Sheet

Bestiality and Other Violent Crime

The FBI researched the backgrounds of serial sexual homicide perpetrators and found high rates of sexual assault of animals.
Ressler, R. K. et al Sexual homicide: patterns and motives. Lexington, Mass.: Lexington Books. (1988)

Up to 37% of sexually violent juvenile offenders had a history of animal sexual assault.
Monique R. Frazier, Physically and Sexually Violent Juvenile Offenders: A Comparative Study of Victimization History Variables 99 (unpublished dissertation, Utah St. U. 1998) (on file with Utah St. U.).

96% of juveniles who had engaged in sex with nonhuman animals also admitted to sex offenses against humans and reported more offenses against humans than other sex offenders their same age and race.
Fleming, William M., Jory, Brian and Burton, David L. Characteristics of Juvenile Offenders Admitting to Sexual Activity with Nonhuman Animals. Society and Animals. Vol 10., No.1, pp.31-45 (2002)

In an Australian study, 100% of people who committed sexual homicide had abused animals, and 61.5% of animal abusers had also assaulted a human.
Clarke, J. P. New South Wales police animal cruelty research project. Sydney, Australia: Unpublished report, New South Wales Police Service (2002)

Respondents who had been convicted of committing crimes against people were more likely to have had sex with animals during their childhood or adolescence than other respondents. These findings support the sexually polymorphous theory that among these perpetrators sex and aggression have become mutually inclusive, and bestiality as a form of animal cruelty may be linked with interpersonal human violence.
Hensley, Christopher, Tallichet, Suzanne E., and Singer, Stephen D. Exploring the Possible Link Between Childhood and Adolescent Bestiality and Interpersonal Violence. Journal of Interpersonal Violence, Vol. 21, No. 7, 910-923 (2006)

THE HUMANE SOCIETY
OF THE UNITED STATES

Printed on recycled paper

Celebrating Animals | Confronting Cruelty

2100 L Street, NW Washington, DC 20037
t 202.452.1100 f 202.778.6132 humanesociety.org

Animal Cruelty and Sexual Abuse

©iStockphoto

Sexual abuse of animals often happens concurrently with sexual assaults on people.

○○○

The studies on this page show the connections between animal cruelty, sexual abuse of animals and sex crimes against people, including sexual homicide.

- Sexually-abused children are five times more likely to abuse animals than children who are not sexually abused.[1]
- Twenty percent of children who sexually abuse other children also have histories of sexually abusing animals.[2]
- Up to 37 percent of sexually violent juvenile offenders have a history of animal sexual assault.[3]
- The FBI found high rates of sexual assault of animals in the backgrounds of serial sexual homicide perpetrators.[4]
- In an Australian study, 100 percent of people who committed sexual homicide had abused animals, and 61.5 percent of animal abusers also had assaulted a human.[5]
- Those convicted of committing crimes against people on one or more occasions were more likely to have had sex with animals during their childhood or adolescence than other respondents.[6]
- Of juveniles who engage in sex with animals, 96 percent also admit to sex offenses against humans and reported more offenses against humans than other sex offenders their same age and race.[7]

References

1. Ascione, F. R., Friedrich, W. N., Heath, J., & Hayashi, K. (2003). Cruelty to animals in normative, sexually abused, and outpatient psychiatric samples of 6- to 12-year-old children: Relations to maltreatment and exposure to domestic violence. Anthrozoös, 16(3), 194-212.

2. Duffield, G., Hassiotis, A., & Vizard, E. (1998). Zoophilia in young sexual abusers. Journal of Forensic Psychiatry, 9, 294-304.

3. Monique R. Frazier, Physically and Sexually Violent Juvenile Offenders: A Comparative Study of Victimization History Variables 99 (unpublished dissertation), Utah St. Univ. 1998.

4. Ressler, R. K. et al (1988). Sexual homicide: patterns and motives. Lexington, Mass.: Lexington Books.

5. Clarke, J. P. (2002). New South Wales police animal cruelty research project. Sydney, Australia: Unpublished report, New South Wales Police Service.

6. Hensley, Christopher, Tallichet, Suzanne E., and Singer, Stephen D. 2006. Exploring the Possible Link Between Childhood and Adolescent Bestiality and Interpersonal Violence. Journal of Interpersonal Violence, Vol. 21, No. 7, 910-923.

7. Fleming, William M., Jory, Brian and Burton, David L. (2002). Characteristics of Juvenile Offenders Admitting to Sexual Activity with Nonhuman Animals. Society and Animals. 10 (1), 31-45.

AMERICAN HUMANE

Protecting Children & Animals Since 1877

AMERICAN HUMANE SUPPORTS RECOGNITION OF THE LINK BETWEEN ANIMAL ABUSE AND FAMILY VIOLENCE

Numerous studies in psychology, sociology, and criminology have demonstrated that violent offenders frequently have childhood and adolescent histories of serious and repeated animal cruelty. The FBI has recognized the connection since the 1970s, when its analysis of the lives of serial killers suggested that most had killed or tortured animals as children. Other research has shown consistent patterns of animal cruelty among perpetrators of more common forms of violence, including child abuse, spouse abuse, and elder abuse. In fact, the American Psychiatric Association considers animal cruelty one of the diagnostic criteria of conduct disorder.[1]

The link between animal abuse and human violence is an internationally recognized fact. Each year, defenseless pets face the grim reality that they will be victims of family violence, not only putting themselves in harm's way but as helpless pawns in the power and control mechanisms abusers use to hurt people. The actual killing, torturing and beating of pets -- or the threat of such actions -- is used by abusers as a weapon to ensure submission and silence by women and children. This causes victims -- adults and children alike – to remain in violent households in order to ensure the family pet is not harmed.

In a nationwide study, over 71 percent of battered women reported that their abusers had harmed, killed or threatened animals. More than 75 percent of those incidents occurred in the presence of the women or their children.[2] In a study of battered women in several northeastern states, 48 percent of respondents reported that animal abuse had occurred "often" during the past 12 months, and another 30 percent reported that the abuse occurred "almost always." Types of animal abuse reported included punching, hitting, choking, drowning, shooting, stabbing and throwing the animal against a wall or down the stairs. Respondents reported that animal abuse incidents coincided with violent outbursts against human family members 51 percent of the time.[3]

Tragically, children who grow up in an environment of animal abuse live in constant fear that a beloved family member will be harmed. Children often intervene to protect their mothers and pets from being battered. Some children may even allow themselves to be victimized to save their pet from being harmed or killed.[4] Over time, these children may even become desensitized to the inhumane treatment of animals.

---

1 American Psychiatric Association, American Psychiatric Association Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders - Fourth Edition, 2000.

2 Ascione, F.R., Weber, C.V., & Wood, D.S., The Abuse of Animals and Domestic Violence: A National Survey of Shelters for Women Who are Battered (Society and Animals, 1997, p. 205-218).

3 Carlisle-Frank, P., Frank, J.M. & Nielsen, L. Selective battering of the family pet. (Anthrozoös , 2006, p. 26-42).

4 Edelson, J.L., Mbilinyi, L.F., Beeman, S.K., & Hagemeister, A.K. How Children are Involved in Adult Domestic Violence: Results from a Four-City Telephone Survey. (Journal of Interpersonal Violence, vol. 18, 2003 p.18-32).

Research indicates that children who are exposed to domestic violence are nearly three times more likely to treat animals with cruelty than children who are not exposed to such violence.[5] In one study of battered women with children who sought shelter in a safe house, 32 percent reported that their children had hurt or killed a family pet.[6]

Tragically, this behavior is often symptomatic of future abuse toward other animals or human beings[7]: 36.8 percent of boys and 29.4 percent of girls who were victims of physical and sexual abuse and domestic violence have been reported to abuse the family pet.[8] Significant research documents a relationship between childhood histories of animal cruelty and patterns of chronic interpersonal aggression.[9]

Because of its correlation with family violence and other forms of community violence, animal abuse is a crime that must be taken seriously. Identifying and reporting animal abuse is an effective means toward addressing the domestic violence crisis head-on. In many communities, human services, animal services, and law enforcement agencies are sharing resources and expertise to address violence. Professionals are beginning to engage in cross-training and cross-reporting through interagency partnerships, and humane societies are teaming with domestic violence shelters to provide emergency shelter for pets of domestic violence victims. Cross-reporting animal and child abuse is an efficient approach toward strengthening families and intervening to prevent further family violence. Because animal abuse is often an early indicator of child abuse, elder abuse and domestic violence, caseworkers can gain critical information by asking about the family pet.

As the oldest national non-profit organization dedicated to protecting both children and animals from abuse, neglect, and exploitation, the American Humane Association actively addresses the internationally recognized link between animal abuse and family violence. Through its campaigns against violence, American Humane is a leader in raising public awareness, advocating for stronger legislative initiatives, and providing tools for decision makers, social service providers, animal care and control professionals, veterinarians, parents, and other concerned citizens to recognize problems and take appropriate steps to end abuse and protect its both human and non-human victims.

No child or pet should have to live in fear that they will be harmed. On their behalf, American Humane continues to directly address the link between animal abuse and other forms of societal violence.

---

5 Currie, C.L., Animal Cruelty by Children Exposed to Domestic Violence (The International Journal, vol. 30, 2006, p. 425-435).

6 Ascione, F.R., Battered Women's Reports of Their Partners' and Their Childrens' Cruelty of Animals (Journal of Emotional Abuse, 1998, p. 119-132).

7 Boat, B.W., Abuse of children and abuse of animals: Using the links to inform child assessment and protection. Child Abuse, Domestic Violence, and Animal Abuse: Linking the Circles of Compassion for Prevention and Intervention .(F.R. Ascione & P. Arkow, eds.) (Purdue University Press, 1999, p. 83-100); Arkow, P., The Relationship of Animal Abuse and Other Forms of Family Violence (Family Violence and Sexual Assault Bulletin, vol. 12, 1996, p. 29-34).

8 Ascione, Frank R., The Family: Safe Haven or Landscape of Terror? Children & Animals: Exploring the Roots of Kindness & Cruelty (Purdue University press, 2005, p. 137).

9 Kellert, S.R. & Felthous, A.R. Childhood Cruelty Toward Animals Among Criminals and Noncriminals. (Human Relations, 1985, vol. 38, p. 113-1129); Hensley, C. & Tallichet, S.E., Animal Cruelty Motivations (Journal of Interpersonal Violence, 2005, vol. 20, p. 1429-1443); Merz-Perez, L., Heide, K. M., & Silverman, I. J., Childhood cruelty to animals and subsequent violence against humans (International Journal of Offender Therapy and Comparative Criminology, 2001, p.556-573); Becker, F. & French, L., Making the Links: Child Abuse, Animal Cruelty, and Domestic Violence (Child Abuse Review, vol. 13, 2004, p. 399-414).

BESTIALITY AND ZOOPHILIA

* Adams, J.C., McBride, E.A., Carr, A., & Carnelley, K.B. (2007). H*uman-animal sexual interactions: A predictive model to differentiate between zoophilia, zoosexuality and bestiality.* Presentation at 11th International Conference on Human-Animal Interactions, People & Animals: Partnership in Harmony, IAHAIO, Tokyo, Japan, Oct. 5-8.

Alvarez, A.A., & Freinhar, J.P. (1991). A prevalence study of bestiality (zoophilia) in psychiatric in-patients, medical in-patients, and psychiatric staff. International Journal of Psychosomatics, 38 (1-4): 45-47.

Ascione, F.R. (2005). Bestiality: Petting, 'humane rape,' sexual assault, and the enigma of sexual interactions between humans and non-human animals." In, A.M. Beetz. & A.L. Podberscek, eds.: Bestiality and Zoophilia: Sexual Relations with Animals. West Lafayette, IN: Purdue University Press, 2005, pp. 120-129.

Beetz, A.M. (2008). Bestiality and zoophilia: A discussion of sexual contact with animals. In, F.R. Ascione, ed.: International Handbook of Animal Abuse and Cruelty: Theory, Research, and Application. West Lafayette, IN: Purdue University Press, pp. 201-220.

Beetz, A. (2004).Bestiality/zoophilia: A scarcely investigated phenomenon between crime, paraphilia and love. Journal of Forensic Psychology Practice, 4(2), 1–36.

Beetz, A. (2002). Love, violence, and sexuality in relationships between humans and animals. Aachen, Germany: Shaker Verlag.

* Beetz, A. M. & Podberscek, A. L. (Eds.) (2005). Bestiality and Zoophilia: Sexual Relations with Animals. West Lafayette, IN: Purdue University Press.

Beirne, P. (1997). Rethinking Bestiality: Towards a concept of interspecies sexual assault. Theoretical Criminology 1(3), 317-340.

Bolliger, G. & Goetschel, A.F. (2005). Sexual relations with animals (zoophilia): An unrecognized problem in animal welfare legislation. In, A.M. Beetz & A.L. Podberscek, eds.: Bestiality and Zoophilia: Sexual Relations with Animals. West Lafayette, IN: Purdue University Press, pp. 23-45).

Christiansen, S.B. & Sandoe, P. (2007). Zoophilia: an eye-opener to understandings of animal welfare, animal integrity and human-animal relations. Presentation at 11th International Conference on Human-Animal Interactions, People & Animals: Partnership in Harmony, IAHAIO, Tokyo, Japan, Oct. 5-8.

Duffield, G., Hassiotis, A., & Vizard, E. (1998). Zoophilia in young sexual abusers. Journal of Forensic Psychiatry 9, 294-304.

Fleming, W.M., Jory, B. & Burton, D.L. (2002). Characteristics of juvenile offenders admitting to sexual activity with nonhuman animals. Society & Animals 10, 31-45.

Hensley, C., Tallichat, S.E. & Singer, S.D. (2006). Exploring the possible link between childhood and adolescent bestiality and interpersonal violence. Journal of Interpersonal Violence 21(7), 910-923.

Hvozdik, A., Bugarsky, A., et al. (2006). Ethological, psychological and legan aspects of animal sexual abuse. The Veterinary Journal 172(2), 374-376.

Miletski, H. (2005). A history of bestiality. In, A.M. Beetz. & A.L. Podberscek, eds.: Bestiality and Zoophilia: Sexual Relations with Animals. West Lafayette, IN: Purdue University Press, pp. 1-22.

Miletski, H. (2005).Is zoophilia a sexual orientation? A study. In, A.M. Beetz. & A.L. Podberscek, eds.: Bestiality and Zoophilia: Sexual Relations with Animals. (West Lafayette, IN: Purdue University Press, pp. 82-97).

Miletski, H. (2002). Understanding Bestiality and Zoophilia. Bethesda, MD: Wast-West Publishing.

Munro, H.M.C. (2006). Animal sexual abuse: A veterinary taboo? The Veterinary Journal 172(2), 195-197.

*Munro, H. M.C. & Thrusfield, M. V. (2001c). 'Battered pets': sexual abuse. Journal of Small Animal Practice 42, 333-337 (July).

Peretti, P.O. & Rowan, M. (1983). Zoophilia: Factors related to its sustained practice. Panminerva Medica 25, 127-131.

Sandnabba, N. K., Santtila, P., Beetz, A. M., Nordling, N., & Alison, L. (2002). Characteristics of a sample of sadomasochistically-oriented males with recent experience of sexual contact with animals. Deviant Behavior, 23(6), 511–530

Williams, C.J. & Weinberg, M.S. (2003). Zoophilia in men: A study of sexual interest in animals. Archives of Sexual Behavior 32, 523-535.

House Bill 6

"An Act relating to proscribing certain sexual conduct or activities as cruelty to animals."

Animal Abuse Crime Database from Pet-Abuse.com

Animal Abuse Crime Database Query Page

Bestiality AKA Zoophilia

Abuse Connection: The Link between Animal Cruelty and Interpersonal Violence

Animal Abuse Database: Cases Connecting Sexual Abuse Between Animals and Humans

ANIMAL ABUSE CRIME DATABASE

There are 14,717 cases in the animal abuse database. To select a specific country or state, click on the country name or abbreviation tab below, and then select a local region. Or if you prefer you can browse all cases.

Login or create an account for additional advocacy tools, including e-mail notifications when updates are posted to selected cases.

Show clickable map

- United States
- Canada
- United Kingdom
- New Zealand
- Australia
- Spain

All US States
— Canadian Territories —
— British Countries —
— New Zealand Regions —
— Australian Regions—
— Spanish Regions—

Advanced Search

The additional fields below are optional and will allow you to narrow your search further. Please see the database notes for more information about these fields.

Abuse Type:
Beating
Bestiality
Burning - Caustic Substance
Burning - Fire or Fireworks
Choking / Strangulation / Suffocation
Drowning

Animal: dog (non pit-bull)
dog (pit-bull)
cat
bird (other farmed)
bird (pet)
bird (wildlife)

Status:
– select status –

Approx. Month/Year:
Select Month

Abuser Gender:

☐ Only cases with photos
☐ Abuser is public servant
☐ Abuser works in animal welfare
☑ Only abuse-connection cases
☐ Only cases of loose animals
☐ Only cases of retaliation
☐ Animal was bound or tied
☐ Also child or elder neglect
☐ Drugs or alcohol involved
☐ Breeding suspension
☐ Animal was tethered or chained
☐ Repeat offenders

Keyword:

Clear Form Search

 Please note: These fields were added more recently, and searches using this criteria may not result in the total number of applicable cases, as older cases may not yet have been updated to reflect these new fields.

Use of this database implies that you have read and agree to the terms and conditions our disclaimer.

Contact Pet-Abuse.Com
PO Box 5, Southfields, NY 10975
888-523-PETS
© Copyright 2001-2009 Pet-Abuse.Com. All rights reserved.

BESTIALITY AKA ZOOPHILIA

Bestiality (or zoophilia) is a paraphilia defined as an affinity, attraction or sexual attraction by a human to non-human animals. Because this topic deals openly about about the nature of bestiality, it is intended for mature audiences only.

While moral and clinical descriptions of bestiality differ, Pet-Abuse.Com takes the position that bestiality is sexual assault of an animal and is always a crime.

Amazingly, there are still several states in which bestiality is legal. In those situations where the prosecutors do not have specific bestiality laws to use in their case, we recommend exploring the cruelty to animals statues: if it can be proved that the animal was made to suffer, you can use those laws where the bestiality laws may be lacking (or missing outright).

The following is reprinted from:
The Animals' Agenda
P.O. Box 25881 Baltimore, MD 21224
(410) 675-4566 www.animalsagenda.org

The term bestiality actually tells us much more about cultural attitudes toward animals than it does about sex with animals. Concern about bestiality generally focuses on human beings; thus experts tell us it is usually harmless while debating its frequency. If we call it forced sex with animals, we reclaim the animal's perspective as a central concern. It is more prevalent than we can measure and is not harmless; it is always animal abuse.

The American Heritage Dictionary, to cite just one example, defines bestiality as "the quality or condition of being an animal or like an animal; conduct or an action marked by depravity or brutality; or sexual relations between a human being and an animal." Sex with an animal is the last definition of bestiality, while the first two definitions remind us of our culture's general low regard for animals. The multiple meanings for bestiality are part of the problem, implying that bestiality itself is animal behavior. It keeps the "beast" in bestiality. (See sidebar "Acting Like an Animal.") Animals do not have a distinction between public versus private.

Often, people read animals' sexuality as shameless (and inviting) because animals act sexually in "public." They are then viewed as accessible because they have acted in a public manner.

Acting like an Animal

For many centuries negative attitudes toward sexuality have been registered by viewing sex as something that resulted from one's base instincts, that is, as something that reduced a human being to an animal. During the Middle Ages when capital punishment was prescribed for both the animals and the human involved in bestiality many people thought that the serpent in the Garden of Eden had introduced Eve to sex. This belief led to a debate about whether Eve and the serpent had actually had intercourse, and left the strong impression that sexual intercourse itself was bestial. Acting sexually was thus considered acting like an animal. This attitude is evident today when aggressive sexual behavior is referred to as "bringing out the beast in one" or "wolfish behavior" or "animal passions." Indeed, it appears that one reason the missionary position was upheld as the position for intercourse was because it was accomplished face to face rather than face to back, as most animals did it. C.J.A. In its narrowest sense, bestiality involves intercourse, either vaginal or anal, with an animal; but bestiality can also include oral-genital contact of any kind between humans and animals.

The animals who people have access to are the animals who will be sexually used: cats, dogs, sheep, cows, hens, rabbits, goats, ducks, horses, bulls, fishes. Proximity allows for sexual access. This is the primary reason gorillas, chimpanzees, and others are not prevalent sex objects: they are not animals to whom humans have regular access. Many forms of sexual contact between humans and animals are physically destructive to the animals. Few vaginas, especially those of young animals, are large enough to accommodate the penis of a male Homo sapiens. Furthermore, small animals often experience torn rectums and internal bleeding after being sexually assaulted; chickens and rabbits are often killed by the act itself. Sadistic sexual behavior against animals also occurs. Chickens are frequently decapitated because this intensifies the convulsions of the sphincter, thereby increasing the sexual pleasure of the man. Even when it does not involve sadism, bestiality is animal abuse because it is forced sex.

Silence is a major problem. Unlike most forms of sexual contact, in which either partner can report the experience, only one of the participants in bestiality can talk; and because of the stigma surrounding bestiality, that party usually remains silent. Since bestiality is most often something that occurs in private, no one need ever learn about it. So we do not know how widespread it is. Several attempts have been made to uncover an accurate rate of human attempts to have forced sex with animals: by the German psychiatrist Richard von Krafft-Ebing in the 1880s, in the U.S. by Alfred Kinsey and his colleagues in the late 1940s and, more recently, by sociologists at the University of Chicago in 1994. These studies have variously estimated that the percentage of males who engage in bestiality is between one and 65 percent. This wide range probably reflects less about how often bestiality occurs than it does about how bestiality is defined and measured as well as different levels of confidence in answers given by respondents when interviewed either in person or in anonymous questionnaires. In short, we can say almost nothing about the percentage of the population that engages in bestiality.

There are three kinds of sex that humans impose on animals: Opportunistic or safety-valve sex, fixated sex, and domineering sex.

Types of sex with Animals

1. Opportunistic or Safety-Valve sex: "I need a sexual release... they're available... there are no human partners around... I'll get it with an animal."

2. Fixated Sex: Animals become love objects and are the exclusive sexual "partners" for a human.
3. Domineering sex: When batterers, rapists and pornographers force sex between a human and an animal for purposes of humiliation, sexual exploitation, dominance and control. C.J.A. Safety-valve sex is often seen as a casual act of the curious young, as sexual exploration rather than deviancy.

The notion of bestiality as a safety valve that operates until the (usually young) men are ready for women leads one to ask whether the women to whom these young men graduate are not safety valves, too. Moreover, this form of bestiality is not a harmless aberration. Animals are harmed in safety-valve bestiality, and humans learn that it is okay to treat others as safety valves. In the second kind of bestiality, fixated sex, an animal becomes the exclusive focus of a human's sexual desires. Although many medical terms have been applied to a fixation on sex with animals, those who engage in this kind of sex prefer to be known as "zoophiles," a word borrowed, ironically, from the animal protection community. The zoophile's worldview is similar to the rapist's and child sexual abuser's. They all view the sex they have with their victims as consensual, and they believe it benefits their sexual "partners" as well as themselves.

Just as pedophiles differentiate between those who abuse children and those who love children□placing themselves, of course, in the latter group□zoophiles distinguish between animal sexual abusers (bestialists) and those who love animals (zoophiles). In each of these cases the distinctions are only self-justifications.

Whatever the frequency of bestiality, it has its own newsgroup on the Internet (alt.sex.bestiality), which provides chilling examples of the bestialist's world. One person described having sex with stray dogs and then dropping them off at animal shelters. Another reported episodes of bestiality that occurred while dog sitting for a friend. A third described having sex with his half-Percheron horse.

One cannot talk very long about sex with animals without noticing the gender issues: Men are more likely to do it. Women are more likely to be depicted□or to be forced into□doing it. This type of bestiality, domineering sex, has long been used by batterers to degrade their partners. Battered women's shelters around the country receive reports from women who were forced to have sex with animals. One woman reported that her husband would tie her up and force her to have intercourse with their family dog. Then he would try to have intercourse with the dog while he forced the dog inside his wife. Forced sex with trained dogs was a form of torturing Jewish women in Nazi Germany; it was recently used against female political prisoners in Chile. Bestiality involving women occupies an entire genre in pornography.

Bears, snakes, dogs, and insects□to name just a few species of animals□have been photographed or videotaped in a variety of sexual and sexualized positions with women. sex "clubs" around the globe offer live scenes of sex between women and animals. Some towns along the U.S./Mexican border feature shows "starring" women and donkeys. Women of color are often depicted with animals as a way of enforcing the racist notion that women of color are insatiable. Through pornography, dogs, snakes, and other animals, help a man picture himself in the scene. What the pornography consumer claims to be fantasy, we must regard as documentation of harm: a real woman must have a real snake inside her for a photograph of a snake inside her to exist, a real woman must give oral sex to a real bear in order for a photograph of a woman giving oral sex to a bear to exist.

In addition to being used as a means of degrading women, bestiality figures in racism, homophobia, anti-Semitism, and of course, attitudes toward animals. The imputation of bestiality has been used to portray a specific group of people as "others," to distance them from those making the charges. Sometimes miscegenation (the mixing of races) is referred to as bestiality. One group of American white supremacists believes that Jews are descended from Cain, himself the offspring of Eve's coupling with the snake, while Christians are descended from Abel, the child of Eve and Adam. European colonizers and American slave owners believed that African women enjoyed intercourse with apes. European women charged with being witches were accused of sexual congress with animals, and they□and their animal companions□were killed.

During the Middle Ages, Christians viewed intercourse with Jews as a form of bestiality. Earlier this year, an Israeli judicial official compared homosexuality to bestiality. This comparison occurred, most probably, because homosexuality and bestiality are listed together in Leviticus 18:23 and 20:15-16. Like masturbation, homosexuality and bestiality are forms of non-procreative sex. During a time when childbearing was central to a people's survival, all forms of non-procreative sex would be condemned. Bestiality also violated the order of creation by mixing categories□human and animal□that were meant to be separate and distinct.

Recent views of bestiality as fairly benign have replaced these earlier reactions, but no matter what the prevailing view of bestiality, it does not consider the animals' perspectives at all. It is always animal abuse. Relationships of unequal power cannot be consensual. In human-animal relationships, the human being has control of many□if not all□of the aspects of an animals' well being. Sexual relationships should occur between peers where consent is possible.

Consent is when one can say no, and that no is accepted. Clearly animals cannot do that. Bestiality is the model case of circumventing consent on the one hand, while confusing affection for consent on the other. Despite the omnipresence of animals in pornographic pictures and videos, the animal protection community has yet to identify bestiality as an animal abuse issue.

Bestiality has been studiously avoided by those who should be discussing it□animal rights activists, veterinarians, anti-cruelty law enforcement agents, and feminists.

Carol J. Adams Carol J. Adams, author of The sexual Politics of Meat , is the co-editor with Josephine Donovan of Beyond Animals Rights: A Feminist Caring Ethic for the Treatment of Animals (Continuum 1996) and Animals and Women: Feminist Theoretical Explorations (Duke 1995). Copyright □1995 by Carol J. Adams The Animals' Agenda INVESTIGATIVE Reporting Fund

Related Links (Off-site links open in a new window)

- Pet-Abuse.Com Bestiality Cases

Contact Pet-Abuse.Com
PO Box 5, Southfields, NY 10975
888-523-PETS
© Copyright 2001-2009 Pet-Abuse.Com. All rights reserved.

CRUELTY CONNECTIONS

According to a 1997 study done by the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (SPCA) and Northeastern University, animal abusers are five times more likely to commit violent crimes against people and four times more likely to commit property crimes than are individuals without a history of animal abuse.

Many studies in psychology, sociology, and criminology during the last 25 years have demonstrated that violent offenders frequently have childhood and adolescent histories of serious and repeated animal cruelty. The FBI has recognized the connection since the 1970s, when its analysis of the lives of serial killers suggested that most had killed or tortured animals as children. Other research has shown consistent patterns of animal cruelty among perpetrators of more common forms of violence, including child abuse, spouse abuse, and elder abuse. In fact, the American Psychiatric Association considers animal cruelty one of the diagnostic criteria of conduct disorder.

If you break it down to its bare essentials:
"Abusing an animal is a way for a human to find power/joy/fulfillment through the torture of a victim they know cannot defend itself."

Now break down a human crime, say rape. If we substitute a few pronouns, it's the SAME THING.
"Rape is a way for a human to find power/joy/fulfillment through the torture of a victim they know cannot defend themselves."

Now try it with, say, domestic abuse such as child abuse or spousal abuse:
"Child abuse is a way for a human to find power/joy/fulfillment through the torture of a victim they know cannot defend themselves."

Do you see the pattern here?

The line separating an animal abuser from someone capable of committing human abuse is much finer than most people care to consider. People abuse animals for the same reasons they abuse people. Some of them will stop with animals, but enough have been proven to continue on to commit violent crimes to people that it's worth paying attention to.

Virtually every serious violent offender has a history of animal abuse in their past, and since there's no way to know which animal abuser is going to continue on to commit violent human crimes, they should ALL be taken that seriously. FBI Supervisory Special Agent Allen Brantley was quoted as saying "Animal cruelty... is not a harmless venting of emotion in a healthy individual; this is a warning sign..." It should be looked at as exactly that. Its a clear indicator of psychological issues that can and often DO lead to more violent human crimes.

Dr. Randall Lockwood, who has a doctorate in psychology and is senior vice president for anti-cruelty initiatives and training for the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, states "A kid who is abusive to a pet is quite often acting out violence directly experienced or witnessed in the home," Lockwood said, adding that about one-third of children who are exposed to family violence will act out this violence, often against their own pets.

Others either abuse pets or threaten to abuse them as a way to control an individual.

"So much of animal cruelty... is really about power or control," Lockwood said. Often, aggression starts with a real or perceived injustice. The person feels powerless and develops a warped sense of self-respect. Eventually they feel strong only by being able to dominate a person or animal.

Sometimes, young children and those with developmental disabilities who harm animals don't understand what they're doing, Lockwood said. And animal hoarding - the practice of keeping dozens of animals in deplorable conditions - often is a symptom of a greater mental illness, such as obsessive-compulsive disorder.

Just as in situations of other types of abuse, a victim of abuse often becomes a perpetrator. According to Lockwood, when women abuse animals, they "almost always have a history of victimization themselves. That's where a lot of that rage comes from."

In domestic violence situations, women are often afraid to leave the home out of fear the abuser will harm the family pet, which has lead to the creation of Animal Safehouse programs, which provide foster care for the pets of victims in domestic violence situations, empowering them to leave the abusive situation and get help.

Whether a teenager shoots a cat without provocation or an elderly woman is hoarding 200 cats in her home, "both are exhibiting mental health issues... but need very different kinds of attention," Lockwood said.

Those who abuse animals for no obvious reason, Lockwood said, are "budding psychopaths." They have no empathy and only see the world as what it's going to do for them.

History is full of high-profile examples of this connection:

- Patrick Sherrill, who killed 14 coworkers at a post office and then shot himself, had a history of stealing local pets and allowing his own dog to attack and mutilate them.
- Earl Kenneth Shriner, who raped, stabbed, and mutilated a 7-year-old boy, had been widely known in his neighborhood as the man who put firecrackers in dogs? rectums and strung up cats.
- Brenda Spencer, who opened fire at a San Diego school, killing two children and injuring nine others, had repeatedly abused cats and dogs, often by setting their tails on fire.
- Albert DeSalvo, the "Boston Strangler" who killed 13 women, trapped dogs and cats in orange crates and shot arrows through the boxes in his youth.
- Carroll Edward Cole, executed for five of the 35 murders of which he was accused, said his first act of violence as a child was to strangle a puppy.

- In 1987, three Missouri high school students were charged with the beating death of a classmate. They had histories of repeated acts of animal mutilation starting several years earlier. One confessed that he had killed so many cats he?d lost count. Two brothers who murdered their parents had previously told classmates that they had decapitated a cat.
- Serial killer Jeffrey Dahmer had impaled dogs? heads, frogs, and cats on sticks.

More recently, high school killers such as 15-year-old Kip Kinkel in Springfield, Ore., and Luke Woodham, 16, in Pearl, Miss., tortured animals before embarking on shooting sprees. Columbine High School students Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold, who shot and killed 12 classmates before turning their guns on themselves, bragged about mutilating animals to their friends.

As powerful a statement as the high-profile examples above make, they don't even begin to scratch the surface of the whole truth behind the abuse connection. Learning more about the animal cruelty/interpersonal violence connection is vital for community members and law enforcement alike.

Related Links (Off-site links open in a new window)

- The Whole Picture
- Pet-Abuse.Com Cruelty Connection Cases
- American Humane: The Link
- NCPC: Screening Animal Cruelty Cases for Domestic Violence
- Factors in the Assessment of Dangerousness in Perpetrators of Animal Cruelty
- First Strike: The Connection Between Animal Cruelty and Human Violence
- HSUS: Animal Safe Haven Directory
- Society & Animals Forum: Articles on the Link
- The Abuse of Animals and Domestic Violence
- Battered Women's Reports of Their Partners' and Their Children's Cruelty to Animals
- Animal Welfare and Domestic Violence
- The Latham Foundation for the Promotion of Humane Education
- Animal Abuse and Human Abuse: Partners in Crime
- Bibliography of Materials about Animal Abuse, Child Abuse and Domestic Violence

Contact Pet-Abuse.Com
PO Box 5, Southfields, NY 10975
888-523-PETS
© Copyright 2001-2009 Pet-Abuse.Com. All rights reserved.

ANIMAL ABUSE SEARCH RESULTS

There are 39 cases currently listed in the United States where a person of interest involved have a history of interpersonal violence or the abuse occurred within the context of a domestic dispute or argument with the abuse type(s) Bestiality. Results are displayed 25 per page.

Login or create an account for additional advocacy tools, including e-mail notifications when updates are posted to selected cases.

Pages: 1 2 Next»

Location / Date	Title	Name(s)
CA-Fresno Nov 7, 2008	Dog sexually assaulted, sex offender charged Bestiality	ALLEGED Joe Luis Gloria
IN-Bloomington Sep 6, 2008	Sexual assault on woman, dog, videotaped Bestiality	ALLEGED Thomas L. Meador
WA-Longview Jul 23, 2008	Dog and foster child sexually assaulted Bestiality	NOT CHARGED Donald Joe Zeller
LA-Baton Rouge Jun 18, 2008	Dog sexually assulted by convicted sex offender Bestiality	ALLEGED Alex Chaney
AK-Klawock Apr 9, 2008	Dog tied to tree, sexually assaulted Bestiality	ALLEGED Harold Simpson
CO-Delta Dec 11, 2007	Dogs sexually assaulted, shelter volunteer charged Bestiality	ALLEGED Jay Baker
OH-North Ridgeville Oct 31, 2007	Dogs, sheep sexually assaulted Bestiality	ALLEGED Jonel Berlovan
GA-Warner Robins Feb 2007	Dog sexually assaulted, children molested Bestiality	CONVICTED John Charles Huff
IL-Elwood Dec 7, 2006	Dog repeatedly sexually assaulted Bestiality	DISMISSED Dwayne D. Page
NJ-Moorestown Dec 6, 2006	Cows and children sexually assaulted Bestiality	ALLEGED Robert Melia Jr.
FL-Rockledge Dec 1, 2006	Children, animal sexually assaulted Bestiality	ALLEGED Ivory Dickerson
PA-South Beaver Township Nov 16, 2006	Children sexually abused, bestiality porn Bestiality	NOT CHARGED Robert F. Harn
CO-Glenwood Springs Nov 2006	Possession of bestiality pornography Bestiality	NOT CHARGED Frank Alameno
MI-Freeland Oct 20, 2006	Sex with dead dog, assaulting an ACO Bestiality	CONVICTED Ronald Kuch
WI-Superior Oct 11, 2006	Sex with dead deer Bestiality	CONVICTED Bryan James Hathaway
OR-Lebanon May 18, 2006	Dogs and children sexually abused Bestiality	ALLEGED Denise Ann Roberts Jesse Dale Roberts
PA-Hermitage Apr 2006	Possession of child, animal pornography Bestiality	CONVICTED Roger Ellsworth Henry
AZ-Tucson Mar 28, 2006	Dog found burned, maimed, sexually assaulted Mutilation/Torture, Bestiality, Burning - Fire or Fireworks	CONVICTED Wayne Allen Dean

OR-Sherwood Feb 1, 2006	Dog sexually assaulted by convicted sex offender Bestiality	ALLEGED Jason Dane Tapken
TX-Brownsville Jan 23, 2006	Child and dog sexually assaulted, videotaped Bestiality	NOT CHARGED Jesus De Leon
CA-Ontario Oct 18, 2005	Dog sexually assaulted Bestiality	CONVICTED Ubaldo Vasquez Huizar
OH-Lafferty Sep 24, 2005	Dog sexually assaulted Bestiality	CONVICTED John Paskel
SC-Campobello May 22, 2005	Puppy sexually assaulted Bestiality	CONVICTED Cory Michael Williamson
LA-Hammond May 17, 2005	Church cult cited in child rape and animal sex Bestiality	NOT CHARGED Austin Aaron Bernard III Nicole Bernard Paul Fontenot more...
MI-Harrison Feb 17, 2005	Bestiality and child pornography Bestiality	ALLEGED Rebekah J. Oakley-Pyle Malvin D. Pyle

Pages: 1 2 Next»

Contact Pet-Abuse.Com
PO Box 5, Southfields, NY 10975
888-523-PETS
© Copyright 2001-2009 Pet-Abuse.Com. All rights reserved.

ANIMAL ABUSE SEARCH RESULTS

There are 39 cases currently listed in the United States where a person of interest involved have a history of interpersonal violence or the abuse occurred within the context of a domestic dispute or argument with the abuse type(s) Bestiality. Results are displayed 25 per page.

Login or create an account for additional advocacy tools, including e-mail notifications when updates are posted to selected cases.

Pages: «Prev 1 2

Location / Date	Title	Name(s)
FL-Flagler Feb 2, 2005	Dog, girl sexually assaulted, photos taken Bestiality	NOT CHARGED Carla Maldonado David Maldonado
TX-Kerrville Feb 2005	Possession of bestiality porn, soliciting a minor Bestiality	NOT CHARGED Jonathan Ward Brooke
MI-Battle Creek Jan 26, 2005	Sheep sexually assaulted Bestiality	CONVICTED Jeffrey Scott Haynes
FL-Tampa Dec 22, 2004	Dog stabbed, sodomized with stick Bestiality, Stabbing	ALLEGED Lubuns Paul Dubeus
VT-Lyndonville Oct 16, 2004	Dog sodomized and strangled Bestiality, Choking / Strangulation / Suffocation	CONVICTED Jeffrey Plourde
FL-West Palm Beach Jan 8, 2004	Dog sexually assaulted Bestiality	ALLEGED William McPhillips
IN-Indianapolis Feb 20, 2002	Distribution and display of beastiality pornography Bestiality	ALLEGED Loran Jay Adams
VT-Richford Jan 15, 2002	Dog sexually assaulted, videotaped Bestiality	CONVICTED Paul Corey Tammy Paquin
OK-Oklahoma City Feb 14, 2001	Bestiality Bestiality	CONVICTED Robert Malcomb Jr
FL-East Lake Feb 11, 2001	Llamas beaten, one sodomized Beating, Bestiality	CONVICTED Brandon R. Eldred Robert B. Pettyjohn
CA-Fresno Jul 8, 1997	Puppy beaten and tortured Beating, Bestiality	CONVICTED Reynaldo Chavez
MI-Ypsilanti May 29, 1997	Bestiality/Pedophilia Bestiality	ALLEGED Bernice Santure Carl Santure Harvey Santure more...
WI-Janesville Apr 9, 1997	Sexually abused, tortured and killed cats and dogs Mutilation/Torture, Bestiality	CONVICTED Barry Herbeck
VA-Montgomery County Apr 1951	Killing animals, having sex with their corpses Bestiality	NOT CHARGED Henry Lee Lucas

Pages: «Prev 1 2

Contact Pet-Abuse.Com
PO Box 5, Southfields, NY 10975
888-523-PETS
© Copyright 2001-2009 Pet-Abuse.Com. All rights reserved.

House Bill 6

"An Act relating to proscribing certain sexual conduct or activities as cruelty to animals."

Letters of Support

Joe Schmidt, Alaska Department of Corrections

Bryce Wrigley, Alaska Farm Bureau, Inc.

Angella Long, Alaska Peace Officers Association

Dave Pauli, Humane Society of the United States

Tracy Coppola, American Humane

STATE OF ALASKA

SARAH PALIN,
GOVERNOR

DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS
OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONER

P.O. Box 112000
Juneau, AK 99811-2000
PHONE: (907) 465-4652
FAX: (907) 465-3390

March 3, 2009

The Honorable Bob Lynn
Alaska House of Representatives
State Capitol Room 104
Juneau, Alaska 99811

Dear Representative Lynn:

Thank you for the opportunity to provide input on House Bill 6, "An Act Relating to the Cruelty of Animals." The connection between animal cruelty, including animal sexual abuse, and violence against people is well documented in the research and findings on domestic violence, sexual assault, child molestation and serial homicide. Although the Department of Corrections (DOC) does not yet have quantitative data on the sexual abuse of animals by sex offenders being managed in Alaska communities, there does appear to be information that is consistent with the research in this area.

Since the DOC began using the polygraph with sex offenders on probation and parole in March 2006, approximately 350 individuals have submitted to polygraph examination; however, we are still in the developmental stages of routine polygraph use. The bulk of our examinations to date (80%) have been for purposes of monitoring the offenders' current behaviors. This focus is for good reason, as these offenders are in the community and it is critical that we know everything we can about their current behaviors. Information about prior abuse of animals tends to come out during sex history polygraph examinations (sex history polygraph examinations are used to examine the offenders past sexual behavior). A routine question during these exams is whether the offender has had sexual contact with animals. Passing the sexual history polygraph examinations is directly tied to progress in treatment. As would be expected, comprehensive information about one's lifetime sexual behavior is not something that is provided without some motivation. The motivation to "come clean" on these issues usually comes as a function of making progress in treatment and sanctions applied for not passing the polygraph. Making progress in treatment tends to take a long time, particularly when treatment occurs only in the community and is less intense.

While DOC does not have a large quantity of data on this topic, we do have some information that is pertinent. The treatment providers and the polygraph examiners that currently provide services to sex offenders on supervision were queried. Three treatment providers were able to give percentages of offenders they had seen in their practices who had engaged in sexual behavior with animals. The range was from 4% to 18%. It should be noted that this information was gathered in the course of assessment and treatment sessions and did not include direct examination of the issue with polygraph. It's likely that more offenders would be identified as having animal victims if they were polygraphed on this issue. In a study of 180 sex offenders in community treatment, English, et al (2003) noted that 4.4% admitted to engaging in bestiality during the course of their lifetime pre-treatment and polygraph and 36.1% admitted post-treatment and polygraph. The sexual history polygraph exams resulted in 8.2 times more offenders admitting to bestiality. The authors have concluded that bestiality is far more prevalent than previously thought.

As noted, not very many sex history polygraphs have been completed. To date, there have been three cases in which the offender specifically admitted to sexually abusing animals (about 6% of the total sex history polygraphs done). Most likely, there are more cases that we have not yet identified. What was interesting to note, however, is that in all three cases the offenders not only had crossover behaviors involving animals, they had crossover behaviors into more than one age and/or gender group of humans. Specifically, one had both male and female child victims as well as adult male victims; a second had child and adult male and female victims; and a third had male and female child victims and also attacked incapacitated adult women. We know from the literature that some offender characteristics are associated with higher re-offense rates, including abuse of both genders and abuse of males. (Abel et al, 1988; Quinsey, et al, 1995).

It is important that sexual abuse of animals be given credence as a potential precursor to various forms of violence against humans. Our initial data would tend to suggest that offenders with a broader range of victim types have likely sexually abused animals at some point in their history. Generally speaking, the further away sexual offending behavior is from normative sexual behavior the higher the likelihood of recidivism. Once an offender crosses the line into bestiality there is little he won't do. Animals are vulnerable because they can't defend themselves and can't report an assault. Children and incapacitated or handicapped adults are also vulnerable and are likely targets for these offenders. Identifying men who sexually abuse animals will likely help DOC identify high risk sex offenders who target the most vulnerable in our communities.

If you require additional information or if we can be of further assistance, please feel free to contact my office.

Sincerely,

Joseph D. Schmidt
Commissioner

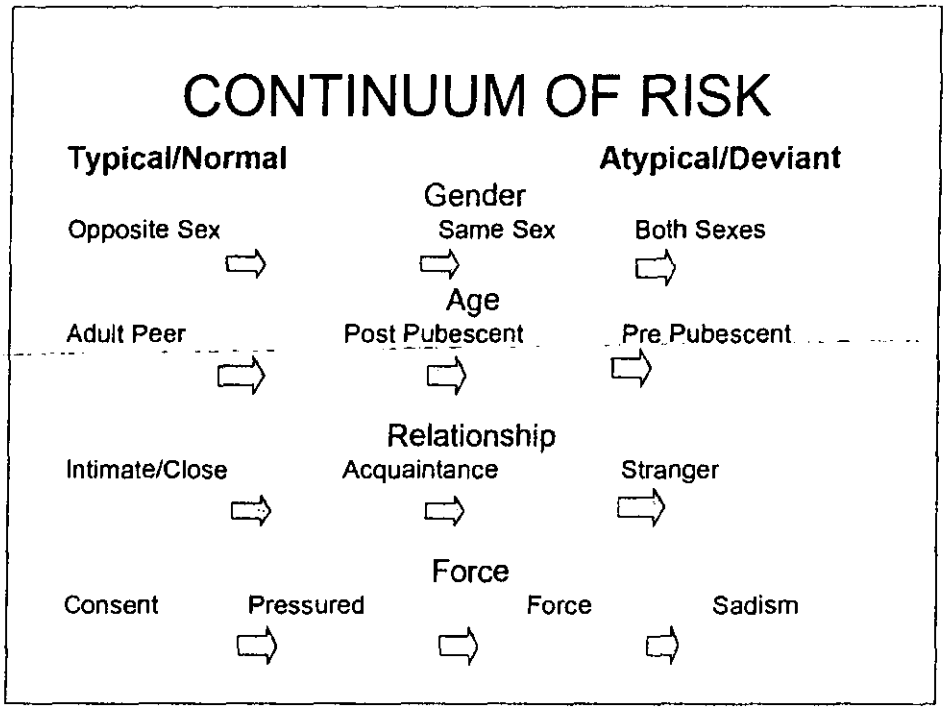
Enclosure: Continuum of Risk

References:

Abel, G., Becker, J., Cunningham-Rathner, J. Mittleman, M. & Rouleau, J. (1988). Multiple paraphilia diagnoses among sex offenders. Bulletin of the American Academy of Psychiatry and the Law, 16, 153-168.

English, K., Jones, L., Patrick, D., & Pasini-Hill, D. (2003). Sexual Offender Containment: Use of the Postconviction Polygraph. Annals of the New York Academy of Sciences, 989, 411-427.

Quinsey, V.L., Lalumiere, M.L., Rice, M.E., & Harris, G.T. (1995). Predicting sexual offenses. In J.C. Campbell (Ed.), Assessing dangerousness: Violence by sexual offenders, batterers, and child abusers (pp. 114-137). Thousand Oaks, CA: Sage.



The further away the offender is from what is typical the higher the risk of recidivism in general. Other non-typical items with higher rates of recidivism include bestiality and sexual acting out in prison.

A.M. Mander, PhD 2007

ALASKA FARM BUREAU, INC.

Bryce Wrigley, President
bjwrigley@wildak.net

Jane Hamilton, Executive Director janehamilton99737@yahoo.com

February 24, 2009

Representative Bob Lynn
Alaska State Legislature
State Capitol (MS 3100)
Juneau, Alaska 99807-1182

Dear Representative Lynn,

The Alaska Farm Bureau is committed to providing a safe and wholesome product to our consumers. Our farmers and ranchers raise their animals using good animal husbandry practices that provide a safe growing environment, free from cruel treatment.

We feel that all animals should be treated humanely and with respect. We, therefore, wholeheartedly support and endorse HB 6, protecting animals from sexual activity by humans.

We appreciate the specific references to accepted veterinary and animal husbandry practices being acknowledged as specific examples of normal treatment/conduct between humans and animals and not to be construed as sexual activity or cruelty to animals.

Thank you for keeping us involved with this legislation and giving our members a chance to speak to you abut this bill.

Please feel free to contact us at any time with questions and concerns regarding farming and ranching in Alaska.

Sincerely,

Bryce Wrigley,
President

PO Box 760 Delta Junction, Alaska 99737 Telephone: (907) 895-4752

STATE OFFICE
ALASKA PEACE OFFICERS ASSOCIATION

P.O. Box 240106 Anchorage, Alaska 99524-0106 Phone (907) 277-0515 Fax (907) 272-5355

Business Manager

Joseph Young
Anchorage

Board of Directors

Angella Long, President
Wasilla

John Lucking, Vice President
Soldotna

Leo Brandlen, Past President
Anchorage

Kim Wannamaker, Member
Kenai
Pres. Kenai Chapter

Dan Frerich, Member
Anchorage
Pres. Anchorage Chapter

John Jansen, Member
Mat-Su
Pres. Mat-Su Chapter

Jim Janke, Member
Fairbanks
Pres. Farthest North Chapter

Dan Boone, Member
Juneau
Pres. Capital City Chapter

A.J. Charlton, Member
Ketchikan
Pres. First City Chapter

Matt Betzen, Member
Unalaska
Pres. Aleutian Islands Chapter

Thecla LaLonde, Member
Wrangell
Pres. Wrangell Chapter

February 17, 2009

Representative Bob Lynn
House of Representatives
State Capitol
Juneau AK 99801-1182

Dear Representative Lynn:

On behalf of the Alaska Peace Officers Association (APOA), I would like to thank you for introducing HB 6, an act relating cruelty to animals.

The APOA State Board's Legislative Committee recently reviewed this proposed legislation and decided to unanimously support this bill.

We thank you for addressing this issue. Please contact the APOA office in Anchorage at 277-0515, if there is anything our organization can do to assist in the passage of this bill.

Sincerely,

Angella Long
State President

THE HUMANE SOCIETY
OF THE UNITED STATES

OFFICERS

STAFF VICE PRESIDENTS

DIRECTORS

February 25, 2009

Dear Legislator:

The Humane Society of the United States, on behalf of our more than 18,000 members and supporters in Alaska, strongly supports passage of HB 6 (Rep. Lynn, R-31), to criminalize the sexual assault of animals. In addition to protecting the animals themselves from cruel treatment, this bill is needed to give law enforcement additional tools to protect human victims from sexually deviant crime.

Several studies have highlighted the link between the sexual abuse of animals and sex crimes against human victims. For example:

- 96% of juveniles who had engaged in sex with nonhuman animals also admitted to sex offenses against humans and reported more offenses against humans than other sex offenders their same age and race. (Fleming, William M., Jory, Brian and Burton, David L. Characteristics of Juvenile Offenders Admitting to Sexual Activity with Nonhuman Animals. Society and Animals. Vol 10., No.1, pp.31-45. 2002)

- The FBI researched the backgrounds of serial sexual homicide perpetrators and found high rates of sexual assault of animals. (Ressler, R. K. et al Sexual homicide: patterns and motives. Lexington, Mass.: Lexington Books. 1988)

- Up to 37% of sexually violent juvenile offenders had a history of animal sexual assault. (Monique R. Frazier, Physically and Sexually Violent Juvenile Offenders: A Comparative Study of Victimization History Variables 99 (unpublished dissertation, Utah St. U. 1998) (on file with Utah St. U.).

Thirty-five states currently have criminal penalties for the sexual abuse of animals – twenty punish the crime as a felony.

HB 6 would make sexual conduct with an animal a Class A misdemeanor. Importantly, the bill would also provide penalties for inducing another person to engage in sexual conduct with an animal. Forcing another person to engage in sexual activity with an animal is one of the most abhorrent sex crimes imaginable, and such conduct fits the pattern of behavior common to sexually deviant criminals.

We strongly urge you to support passage of HB 6.

Sincerely,

Dave Pauli

Dave Pauli
Western Region Director

AMERICAN HUMANE

Protecting Children & Animals Since 1877

February 25, 2009

To the Alaska Legislature:

On behalf of the American Humane Association, the nation's oldest non-profit organization dedicated to protecting animals and children from maltreatment, we thank Representative Bob Lynn for introducing House Bill 6, a critical initiative to make the crime of sexual conduct with an animal a Class A misdemeanor.

The Link® between violence to people and violence to animals, and the concept that children who harm animals can become desensitized to violence and go on to commit antisocial acts against people, formed the very basis of our organization more than 130 years ago. To this day, American Humane continues to directly address the Link® between animal abuse and other forms of societal violence. Our strong support for House Bill 6 reflects our commitment to this issue.

HB 6 was drafted to address the horror many Alaskans experienced upon hearing last April's Anchorage Daily News report of a registered child sex offender who allegedly taped the muzzle of a black Lab, tied it to a tree, and sexually assaulted it in the woods of Ketchikan. Because Alaska lacks a law that prohibits sexual molestation of an animal by a human, the alleged offender was merely charged with the low-level property tampering offense of criminal mischief

For the welfare of both humans and animals, the law must treat all acts of violence against animals seriously. Because HB 6 addresses the dynamic of violence, control, and exploitation prevalent in animal sexual abuse, it would be a grave mistake to view HB 6 as a bill that just protects animals. Deliberate abuse of companion animals rarely occurs in isolated instances. Instead, animal abuse is often part of a vicious cycle of violence that escalates to human abuse.

Studies illustrate a strong connection between sexual abuse and conduct with animals. The studies are so compelling that it hardly comes as a surprise that the American Psychiatric Association has labeled "abuse of animals" among the symptoms of conduct disorder[1] and the FBI has found high rates of animal sex assaults in the backgrounds of serial sex homicide offenders.[2]

---

[1] American Psychiatric Association, Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders (DSM–IV) (Vol, 4, 1994). Among the symptoms listed for conduct disorder are those categorized under "aggression to people and animals" (which includes cruelty to people or to animals, stealing with confrontation of the victim, and forced sexual activity). See also Juvenile Justice Bulletin, Animal Abuse and Youth Violence, September, 2001, at http://www.ncjrs.gov/html/ojjdp/jjbul2001_9_2/page5.html

[2] Ressler, R.K., Burgess, A.W., Hartmen, C.R., Douglas, J.E., & McCormack, A., Murderers Who Rape and Mutilate (Journal of Interpersonal Violence, v. 1, 1986 p. 273-287).

A 2002 study of juvenile offenders reveals that 96% who admitted to engaging in sex with animals also admitted to committing sex offenses against humans.[3] Another study regarding the perpetrators of sexually motivated homicides reveals the perpetrators had not only been sexually abused as children, but also had sexually abused animals in the past.[4]

A 1998 study found that sexual abuse of animals is often linked to sexual abuse of women and children.[5] That same year, another study reported that bestiality was often forced upon several children who were also forced to participate in pornographic activities.[6] Additionally, a study of several interviews with battered women revealed that bestiality was the sex act of preference for 41% of the abusive partners seeking to further dominate and terrorize their victims.[7]

Sexual molestation of an animal by a human is not a matter of personal privacy. Not only is bestiality severely inhumane, it can cause extensive physical harm and even death to the animal. It is important to note that even in cases where such harm does not occur, bestiality is still a cruel activity because animals lack the ability to clearly consent or refuse. Dr. Frank Ascione, Professor of Psychology at the University of Utah, likens this dynamic to adult sexual activity with a child: "consent is presumed to be impossible."[8] Bestiality is no more a personal sexual activity than is sexual abuse of children or rape of adults.

It is time Alaska joined the thirty-three other states that currently prohibit and penalize bestiality as a form of cruelty toward animals.[9] To help ensure a more humane Alaska for future generations, please pass House Bill 6.

Sincerely,

Allie Phillips, J.D.
Director of Public Policy

Tracy Coppola, J.D., M.S.E.L.
Legislative Analyst

Office of Public Policy
206 North Washington Street, Suite 300
Alexandria, Virginia 22314
(703) 836-7387 FAX (703) 549-5437
www.americanhumane.org

[3] Fleming, W.M., Jory, B.; Burton, D.L.., Characteristics of Juvenile Offenders Admitting to Sexual Activity with Nonhuman Animals (Society and Animals. 10 (1), 31-45), (2002).
[4] Ressler, et. al.
[5] Kowal, L.W.., Recognizing Animal Abuse: What Veterinarians Can Learn from the Field of Child Abuse and Neglect, Chapter 6: Recognizing and Reporting Animal Abuse: A Veterinarian's Guide (American Humane Association, p. 40-49) (1998).
[6] Itzin, C. Pornography and the Organization of Intra-and Extra-Familial Child Sexual Abuse, G.K. Kantor and J.L. Jasinski, Ed., Sage Publications,1998, pp. 58-79).
[7] Walker, L.E., The Battered Woman Syndrome (Springer Publishing, 1984).
[8] Ascione, Frank R., Children Who are Cruel to Animal: A Review of Research and Implications for Developmental Psychology (Anthrozoos, vol. 6, p. 226).
[9] The following felony statutes address bestiality: AZ ST 13-1411; DE ST T. 11 § 777; GA ST 16-6-6; ID ST 18-6605; 720 ILCS 5/12-35; IN ST 35-46-3-14; KS ST 21-3505; MASS GEN LAW CH 272 § 34; MCLA 750.158; MS ST 92-29-59; Okla. Stat. Tit. 21 § 886; RI GEN LAWS 11-10-1; SC ST 16-15-120; SD ST 22-22-42; VA ST 18.2-361; WA ST 16.52.205. The following misdemeanor statutes address bestiality: ACA 5-14-122; Cal. Penal Code 286.5; CRS 18-9-201-202 (subsequent offenses are felonies); IA ST 717C.1; LSA-RS 14:89; MD CRIM LAW CODE ANN 3-322; 17 MSRA 1031 (1); MN ST 609.294; MO ST 566.11; NE ST 28-1010; ND ST 12.1-20-12; NY PENAL LAW 130.20; GSNC 14-177; OR ST 167.333; 18 PCSA 3129; UT ST 76-9-301.8; WI ST 944.17.

Gastineau Humane Society

7705 GLACIER HWY. JUNEAU, ALASKA 99801 (907) 789-0260 FAX (907) 789-1795
WEBSITE: www.ghspets.org E-MAIL: customerservice-ghs@gci.net

March 20, 2009

Dear Representative Lynn and members of the Alaska State Legislature

Thank you for this opportunity to publicly extend my support of HB 6 "An act relating to proscribing certain sexual conduct or activities as cruelty to animals". This is a well crafted piece of legislation that speaks specifically to the crime of sexual misconduct and does not inhibit or criminalize veterinary practices or standard animal husbandry practices. I also wish thank Representative Lynn for introducing HB 6.

As the head of an animal control agency I can tell you that sexual deviancy against animals does exist. Alaska is unfortunately not unique in this behavior. In each case that has come to my attention, coercion, abuse, threat of physical harm or terrorizing a human during the practice of a sexual assault on an animal was present. The people who reported the crimes were afraid for their own safety or the safety of their children. The sexual abuse of the animal had been used to intimidate, threaten or terrorize them into submission.

The animal victims in each of these cases as well as those that happen throughout our state, had no choice and there was little that could be done to protect or defend them. Unfortunately because a crime in the legal sense was not committed, the human victims were also left with no voice, no advocate, and no recourse. There was no justice for either the abused animal or the humans who were threatened by the abuser.

Statistics gathered by the FBI, American Humane Association and other agencies who work with offenders show the high correlation between sexual abuse and torture of animals and sexual abuse and violence towards human beings. In fact, the statistics provided by Representative Lynn in the information packet are staggering.

While it is true that I work for an animal organization, and this piece of legislation is one that deals specifically with animals, there is no escaping the fact that this is a human issue as well. First and foremost, humans are the abusers. Further, statistics show that human abusers (who are often victims of abuse themselves), often began their own cycle of violence by abusing animals. Anything we can do to criminalize that act of abuse helps to break the cycle.

This piece of legislation will unfortunately not stop sexual abuse or sexual torture of animals simply by its passage. It will give the victims recourse under the law. Passing this piece of legislation is the right thing to do.

Submitted by Chava Lee
Executive Director
Gastineau Humane Society
7705 Glacier Highway
Juneau, AK 99801

March 20, 2009

To The House Judiciary Committee and Representative Bob Lynn,

I just verbally testified on HB6 but failed to mention a very important point. The person who committed the crime of killing the 22 cats, has not received any punishment. He is in my class at the Wrangell High School and I do not feel safe going to the same school as him or being in the same classroom. I hope that you pass this bill so that there will be laws to punish people like him.

Talea Davis
PO Box 465
Wrangell, Alaska 99929
meionjade@hotmail.com

House Bill 6

"An Act relating to proscribing certain sexual conduct or activities as cruelty to animals."

News Stories

Registered sex offender has sex with tied-up dog, police say (The Associated Press)

Bestiality: Yes, it's a crime (Seattle PI Editorial Board)

Registered sex offender has sex with tied-up dog, police say

KETCHIKAN: Witnesses say Lab was tied to tree and its mouth was taped shut.

The Associated Press

(04/15/08 00:14:03)

KETCHIKAN -- A 26-year-old Klawock man has been charged with two counts of criminal mischief for allegedly having sex with a tied-up dog.

Harold Simpson, a registered sex offender, is being held on a $10,000 bond.

The charges stemmed from an alleged incident last Wednesday in the woods outside the village.

A witness told Klawock Police Officer Chris Paulson that she saw Simpson coax a white dog into the woods by a green rope and later saw the dog come running out without the rope, according to Paulson's affidavit.

The witness then said she saw Simpson coax a black Labrador retriever to come to him, tying the green rope around the dog's neck and leading it into the woods.

Two men told the officer they went looking in the woods for the dog and found a man having sex with it, according to the affidavit.

The dog was tied to the tree by a green rope, and white tape had been placed around its muzzle, Paulson's report says. He says he later recovered a green rope and white tape with black hair on it from the scene.

The Ketchikan District Attorney's office had charged Simpson with two misdemeanor counts of criminal mischief.

At an arraignment hearing Friday, Ketchikan District Attorney James Scott told Craig District Court Magistrate Kay Clark that there isn't a state law to prohibit having sex with a dog.

The state also asked for bail, a rare move for a low-level offense.

"Mr. Simpson, however, poses perhaps the greatest threat to the community of any defendant that we will see in this court, or any other in Southeast, for some time," Scott said.

According to court records, when Simpson was 16, he was convicted of twice raping a young boy. He's also serving probation for assault after lunging at a child last year.

The state's "very real concern," Scott said, is that if a small child had been available and unattended at the time and place where these dogs were taken, "that the small child would have been found taped (and) tied in the woods.

Simpson has been assigned a public defender, who did not immediately return a call Monday to The Associated Press.

Wednesday, August 10, 2005

Bestiality: Yes, it's a crime

SEATTLE POST-INTELLIGENCER EDITORIAL BOARD

It should be a no-brainer that animal cruelty laws ought to cover sex acts. But after a Seattle man's death at an Enumclaw bestiality ranch last month, it became clear that our animal cruelty laws are gutless.

In other words, welcome to Nobrainsville. The legal and regulated hunting of animals in no way grants us a carte blanche on all aspects of animal life. And arguing that animals seem to enjoy the act is a ridiculous and moot point.

If state Sen. Pam Roach, R-Auburn, wants to bring about a law protecting animals from rape, we say: Go for it, Pam. For once, we're with you.

Carol Jensen
10821 Baronik Street
Anchorage, AK 99518-1724
Email: busface1999@yahoo.com
Phone: 907-244-1979

February 10, 2009

Alaska House Judiciary Committee Fax #907-465-2070
Juneau, Alaska

RE: HB 6

I urge you to pass this bill out of committee as soon as possible with the following changes:

1. Make cruelty to domestic animals a felony (first offense) with mandatory 1 year in jail and fine.
2. Mandate protection from inclement weather for all domestic animals including adequate heat, wholesome water, food, veterinary care, and shelter from wind, sun, precipitation, temperatures for all domestic animals to maintain the animal's optimum health, comfort and welfare.
3. Mandatory forfeiture of all animals owned by a person convicted of animal cruelty and mandate of non allowance to own any animals for 10 years following conviction.
4. Mandatory suspected animal abuse reporting by veterinarians and any government agency personnel.

Alaska ranks near the bottom of the list of states with adequate animal protection laws. Our law is archaic, inadequate and ineffective. Animal abuse is rampant in this state.

It is well documented and proven that abuse of animals often leads to abuse of children, spouses and other humans. It's time to nip in the bud this horrendous abuse and neglect of all animals.

Sincerely,

Carol Jensen

House Bill 6

"An Act relating to proscribing certain sexual conduct or activities as cruelty to animals."

Relevant Alaska Statutes

AS 11.61.140 Cruelty to Animals

AS 11.41.455 Unlawful exploitation of a minor

AS 11.46.475-486 Criminal mischief in the first degree to Criminal mischief in the fifth degree

Sec. 11.61.140. Cruelty to animals.

(a) A person commits cruelty to animals if the person

(1) knowingly inflicts severe and prolonged physical pain or suffering on an animal;

(2) with criminal negligence, fails to care for an animal and, as a result, causes the death of the animal or causes severe physical pain or prolonged suffering to the animal;

(3) kills or injures an animal by the use of a decompression chamber;

(4) intentionally kills or injures a pet or livestock by the use of poison; or

(5) knowingly kills or injures an animal, other than as provided in (1) or (3) of this subsection, with the intent to intimidate, threaten, or terrorize another person.

(b) Each animal that is subject to cruelty to animals under (a) of this section shall constitute a separate offense.

(c) It is a defense to a prosecution under this section that the conduct of the defendant

(1) was part of scientific research governed by accepted standards;

(2) constituted the humane destruction of an animal;

(3) conformed to accepted veterinary or animal husbandry practices;

(4) was necessarily incidental to lawful fishing, hunting or trapping activities;

(5) conformed to professionally accepted training and discipline standards.

(d) In (a)(2) of this section, failure to provide the minimum standards of care for an animal under AS 03.55.100 is prima facie evidence of failure to care for an animal.

(e) This section does not apply to generally accepted dog mushing or pulling contests or practices or rodeos or stock contests.

(f) Except as provided in (g) of this section, cruelty to animals is a class A misdemeanor. The court may also

(1) require forfeiture of any animal affected to the state or to a custodian that supplies shelter, care, or medical treatment for the animal;

(2) require the defendant to reimburse the state or a custodian for all reasonable costs incurred in providing necessary shelter, care, veterinary attention, or medical treatment for any animal affected;

(3) prohibit or limit the defendant's ownership, possession, or custody of animals for up to 10 years.

(g) Cruelty to animals is a class C felony if the person has been previously convicted on two or more separate occasions within 10 years of the date of the present offense of a crime under this section, AS 11.61.145 (a)(1) or (2), or a law or ordinance of another jurisdiction having elements similar to those offenses. The court may also

(1) require forfeiture of any animal affected to the state or to a custodian that supplies shelter, care, or medical treatment for the animal;

(2) require the defendant to reimburse the state or a custodian for all reasonable costs incurred in providing necessary shelter, care, veterinary attention, or medical treatment for any animal affected;

(3) prohibit or limit the defendant's ownership, possession, or custody of animals for up to 10 years.

Sec. 11.41.455. Unlawful exploitation of a minor.

(a) A person commits the crime of unlawful exploitation of a minor if, in the state and with the intent of producing a live performance, film, audio, video, electronic, or electromagnetic recording, photograph, negative, slide, book, newspaper, magazine, or other material that visually or aurally depicts the conduct listed in (1) - (7) of this subsection, the person knowingly induces or employs a child under 18 years of age to engage in, or photographs, films, records, or televises a child under 18 years of age engaged in, the following actual or simulated conduct:

(1) sexual penetration;

(2) the lewd touching of another person's genitals, anus, or breast;

(3) the lewd touching by another person of the child's genitals, anus, or breast;

(4) masturbation;

(5) bestiality;

(6) the lewd exhibition of the child's genitals; or

(7) sexual masochism or sadism.

(b) A parent, legal guardian, or person having custody or control of a child under 18 years of age commits the crime of unlawful exploitation of a minor if, in the state, the person permits the child to engage in conduct described in (a) of this section knowing that the conduct is intended to be used in producing a live performance, film, audio, video, electronic, or electromagnetic recording, photograph, negative, slide, book, newspaper, magazine, or other material that visually or aurally depicts the conduct.

(c) Unlawful exploitation of a minor is a

(1) class B felony; or

(2) class A felony if the person has been previously convicted of unlawful exploitation of a minor in this jurisdiction or a similar crime in this or another jurisdiction.

(d) In this section, "audio recording" means a nonbook prerecorded item without a visual component, and includes a record, tape, cassette, and compact disc.

Sec. 11.46.475. Criminal mischief in the first degree.

(a) A person commits the crime of criminal mischief in the first degree if, having no right to do so or any reasonable ground to believe the person has such a right,

(1) the person intentionally damages an oil or gas pipeline or supporting facility;

(2) with intent to cause a substantial interruption or impairment of a service rendered to the public by a utility or by an organization that deals with emergencies involving danger to life or property, the person damages or tampers with property of that utility or organization and causes substantial interruption or impairment of service to the public;

(3) with intent to damage property of another by the use of widely dangerous means, the person damages property of another in an amount exceeding $100,000 by the use of widely dangerous means.

(b) Criminal mischief in the first degree is a class A felony.

Sec. 11.46.480. Criminal mischief in the second degree.

(a) A person commits the crime of criminal mischief in the second degree if, having no right to do so or any reasonable ground to believe the person has such a right,

(1) the person tampers with an oil or gas pipeline or supporting facility or an airplane or helicopter, with reckless disregard for the risk of harm to or loss of the property; or

(2) with intent to cause physical injury to another person, the person

(A) tampers with food, air, water, or an item that is a drug or cosmetic, or a container for food, air, water, or the item; or

(B) delivers, dispenses, or distributes food, air, water, or an item described in (A) of this paragraph knowing that a person has tampered with the food, air, water, or item or a container for the food, air, water, or item.

(b) In (a)(2) of this section,

(1) "deliver" means the actual, constructive, or attempted transfer from one person to another of food, air, water, or an item;

(2) "dispense" means to deliver a drug to an ultimate user or research subject by or under the lawful order of a practitioner, including the prescribing, administering, packaging, labeling, or compounding necessary to prepare the drug for that delivery;

(3) "distribute" means to deliver food, air, water, or an item, whether or not there is any money or other item of value exchanged; it includes sale, gift, or exchange;

(4) "drug" has the meaning given in AS 11.71.900 (9);

(5) [Repealed, Sec. 74 ch 35 SLA 2003].

(c) Criminal mischief in the second degree is a class B felony.

Sec. 11.46.482. Criminal mischief in the third degree.

(a) A person commits the crime of criminal mischief in the third degree if, having no right to do so or any reasonable ground to believe the person has such a right,

(1) with intent to damage property of another, the person damages property of another in an amount of $500 or more;

(2) the person recklessly creates a risk of damage in an amount exceeding $100,000 to property of another by the use of widely dangerous means; or

(3) the person knowingly

(A) defaces, damages, or desecrates a cemetery or the contents of a cemetery or a tomb, grave, or memorial regardless of whether the tomb, grave, or memorial is in a cemetery or whether the cemetery, tomb, grave, or memorial appears to be abandoned, lost, or neglected;

(B) removes human remains or associated burial artifacts from a cemetery, tomb, grave, or memorial regardless of whether the cemetery, tomb, grave, or memorial appears to be abandoned, lost, or neglected.

(b) It is an affirmative defense to a prosecution under (a)(3) of this section that the defendant, at the time of the offense, was

(1) an employee of the cemetery and was engaged in an authorized activity on behalf of the cemetery; or

(2) authorized by law or state permit to engage in the conduct.

(c) In this section,

(1) "contents of a cemetery" includes anything that is designed or used for the protection, security, or ornamentation of a cemetery and that is located within a cemetery;

(2) "memorial" means a headstone, marker, gravestone, monument, or other object designed or intended to mark a gravesite or to memorialize the death of a person;

(3) "tomb" means a mausoleum, columbarium, or crypt, whether that mausoleum, columbarium, or crypt is located above or below ground.

(d) Criminal mischief in the third degree is a class C felony.

Sec. 11.46.484. Criminal mischief in the fourth degree.

(a) A person commits the crime of criminal mischief in the fourth degree if, having no right to do so or any reasonable ground to believe the person has such a right

(1) with intent to damage property of another, the person damages property of another in an amount of $50 or more but less than $500;

(2) the person tampers with a fire protection device in a building that is a public place;

(3) the person knowingly accesses a computer, computer system, computer program, computer network, or part of a computer system or network;

(4) the person uses a device to descramble an electronic signal that has been scrambled to prevent unauthorized receipt or viewing of the signal unless the device is used only to descramble signals received directly from a satellite or unless the person owned the device before September 18, 1984; or

(5) the person knowingly removes, relocates, defaces, alters, obscures, shoots at, destroys, or otherwise tampers with an official traffic control device or damages the work upon a highway under construction.

(b) Criminal mischief in the fourth degree is a class A misdemeanor.

(c) [Repealed, Sec. 11 ch 71 SLA 1996].

Sec. 11.46.486. Criminal mischief in the fifth degree.

(a) A person commits the crime of criminal mischief in the fifth degree if, having no right to do so or any reasonable ground to believe the person has such a right,

(1) with reckless disregard for the risk of harm to or loss of the property or with intent to cause substantial inconvenience to another, the person tampers with property of another;

(2) with intent to damage property of another, the person damages property of another in an amount less than $50; or

(3) the person rides in a propelled vehicle knowing it has been stolen or that it is being used in violation of AS 11.46.360 or 11.46.365(a)(1).

(b) Criminal mischief in the fifth degree is a class B misdemeanor.

shment; punishment for felonies. ing provisions, see AS 12.55.]

o Crime.

, see AS 11.16 and 11.31.110.]

st the Person.

hter. [Repealed, § 21 ch 166 SLA

nses, assaults, robbery, larceny, 21 ch 166 SLA 1978. For current Crime.

ions to legal accountability for conduct of r countability of organizations or conviction of one conspirator as af- osition of case against coconspirators, 19 action against attorney for aiding or her person in unauthorized practice of h 361.

of life supports from comatose patient, sponsibility under 18 USCS 2(b) of one acity to commit an offense but causes so, 52 ALR Fed. 769.

onduct. A person is guilty of r by the conduct of another for .0, or by both. (§ 1 ch 166 SLA notice that he or she may also be a theory of accomplice liability if the that the defendant is responsible for s under AS 11.16.110. Baker v. State, laska Ct. App. 1995).

verdict not required. — The jury l to be unanimous as to the precise ich it returned its guilty verdicts. eyond a reasonable doubt that both defendants participated jointly in the endeavor of shooting deer with the aid of a handheld spotlight. As a matter of law, both men could be held accountable for their own acts or as accomplices. Totemoff v. State, 866 P.2d 125 (Alaska Ct. App. 1993), rev'd on other grounds, 905 P.2d 954 (Alaska 1995), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1244, 116 S. Ct. 2499, 135 L. Ed. 2d 190 (1996).

Applied in Kinegak v. State, 747 P.2d 541 (Alaska Ct. App. 1987).

Cited in Dailey v. State, 675 P.2d 657 (Alaska Ct. App. 1984).

Sec. 11.16.110. Legal accountability based upon the conduct of another. A person is legally accountable for the conduct of another constituting an offense if

(1) the person is made legally accountable by a provision of law defining the offense;

(2) with intent to promote or facilitate the commission of the offense, the person

(A) solicits the other to commit the offense; or

(B) aids or abets the other in planning or committing the offense; or

(3) acting with the culpable mental state that is sufficient for the commission of the offense, the person causes an innocent person or a person who lacks criminal responsibility to engage in the proscribed conduct. (§ 1 ch 166 SLA 1978)

Cross references. — For solicitation, see AS 11.31.110.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Annotator's notes. — Some of the cases cited in the notes below were decided under former 12.15.010.

Distinction between principals and accessories abrogated. — Former AS 12.15.010 abrogated the distinction between principals and accessories. Tarnef v. State, 492 P.2d 109 (Alaska 1971).

By former AS 12.15.010, Alaska abolished the common-law distinction between accessories and principals to a crime. Rice v. State, 589 P.2d 419 (Alaska 1979).

Alaskan law does not distinguish the criminal liability of principals and accomplices. Machado v. State, 797 P.2d 677 (Alaska Ct. App. 1990).

Legal accountability statutes apply to fish and wildlife offenses. Knutson v. State, 736 P.2d 775 (Alaska Ct. App. 1987).

Knowledge of fact of criminality irrelevant. — In order for a defendant to be found liable as an accomplice, the state need only prove that defendant intentionally aided codefendant, knowing of codefendant's criminal purpose. It is not necessary that he know of the criminality of the conduct. Mudge v. State, 760 P.2d 1046 (Alaska Ct. App. 1988).

Evidence sufficient to establish accomplice liability. — Evidence was sufficient for convictions of first-degree assault and kidnapping, where defendant and a cohort bound and repeatedly hit a victim over several hours, based on a theory of accomplice liability under paragraph (2) of this section, since defendant and the cohort both actively participated in the binding of the victim and in repeatedly striking him, which resulted in serious injury to the victim, including broken ribs, a broken ankle, and a punctured lung. Anderson v. State, 163 P.3d 1000 (Alaska Ct. App. 2007).

Abrogation did not apply only to punishment. — The abrogation of the distinction between accessories and principals mandated by former AS 12.15.010 did not apply only to punishment. Scharver v. State, 561 P.2d 300 (Alaska 1977).

To "prosecute" one as a principal includes charging him as a principal. Scharver v. State, 561 P.2d 300 (Alaska 1977).

Notice to defendant of theories of liability. — When an indictment alleges that the defendant is on notice that he or she personally committed the acts constituting the crime, the defendant is on notice that he or she may also be convicted under a theory of accomplice liability if the state establishes that the defendant is responsible for the acts of others under this section. Baker v. State, 905 P.2d 479 (Alaska Ct. App. 1995).

Aiders and abettors as principals. — Former AS 12.15.010 provided that anyone aiding or abetting the commission of a crime should be prosecuted, tried, and punished as a principal. Tarnef v. State, 492 P.2d 109 (Alaska 1971).

An accused who is indicted as a principal is subject to conviction upon evidence which shows that he only aided and abetted. Scharver v. State, 561 P.2d 300 (Alaska 1977).

One indicted as a principal may be convicted of the crime on evidence which shows that he merely aided and abetted. Ransom v. State, 460 P.2d 170 (Alaska 1969).

"Aid and abet" means to help, assist, or facilitate the commission of a crime, promote the accomplishment thereof, help in advancing or bringing it about, or encourage, counsel, or incite as to its commission. Thomas v. State, 391 P.2d 18 (Alaska 1964); Carman v. State, 602 P.2d 1255 (Alaska 1979); Hensel v. State, 604 P.2d 222 (Alaska 1979).

It can be inferred that the words "aid and abet" are used synonymously with various combinations of the words assist, advise, counsel, procure, encourage, incite and instigate. Tarnef v. State, 512 P.2d 923 (Alaska 1973); Carman v. State, 602 P.2d 1255 (Alaska 1979).

Intent. — The plain language of this section indicates that an accomplice must intend the commission of the particular offense committed by the principal in order to be convicted of the offense. Erickson v. State, 824 P.2d 725 (Alaska Ct. App. 1991).

Under the complicity statute, there is no criminal liability if the state can prove only that the defendant recklessly disregarded the possibility that his conduct might promote or facilitate a crime, since all accomplice behavior must be intentional. Ashenfelter v. State, 988 P.2d 120 (Alaska Ct. App. 1999).

Culpable mental state. — When two or more onvicted as an accomplice to the delivery he or she is acting on behalf of the ate v. Burden, 948 P.2d 991 (Alaska Ct.

ition" is an affirmative defense, and s on the defendant to prove it by a e of the evidence. Hale v. State, 764 P.2d
t. App. 1988).
Braun v. State, 911 P.2d 1075 (Alaska
).
Kott v. State, 678 P.2d 386 (Alaska
v. State, 810 P.2d 172 (Alaska Ct. App.

tions. (a) Except as otherwise ole for conduct constituting an behalf of the organization; or adopted by the organization; or ty of affirmative performance employee of an organization or organization. (§ 1 ch 166 SLA contingency plan on file because there that any person in the environmental authority to control the captain or

, and an agent of the group onboard cient knowledge of the violation to
's conduct. State v. Greenpeace, Inc., aska Ct. App. 2008).

Property.

[Repealed, § 21 ch 166 SLA

h 166 SLA 1978. For current

166 SLA 1978. For current

§ 21 ch 166 SLA 1978. For l or held, see AS 11.46.210.]

78. For current law, see AS

166 SLA 1978. For current

Secs. 11.20.360 — 11.20.510. False Pretenses and Frauds. [Repealed, § 21 ch 166 SLA 1978. For theft by deception, see AS 11.46.180; for business and commercial offenses, see AS 11.46.600 — 11.46.740.]

Secs. 11.20.515 — 11.20.650. Malicious Mischief and Trespass. [Repealed, § 21 ch 166 SLA 1978. For criminal trespass, see AS 11.46.320 — 11.46.350; for criminal mischief, see AS 11.46.480 — 11.46.486.]

Sec. 11.20.660. [Renumbered as AS 11.76.120.]

Secs. 11.20.670 — 11.20.690. Misuse, Damage, or Destruction. [Repealed, § 21 ch 166 SLA 1978. For criminal mischief, see AS 11.46.480 — 11.46.486.]

Chapter 22. Alaska Credit Card Crimes Act.

[Repealed, § 21 ch 166 SLA 1978. For current law, see AS 11.46.285 — 11.46.290.]

Chapter 25. Forgery and Counterfeiting.

[Repealed, § 21 ch 166 SLA 1978. For current law, see AS 11.46.500 — 11.46.580.]

Chapter 30. Offenses Against Public Justice.

[Repealed, § 21 ch 166 SLA 1978. For current law, see AS 11.56.]

Chapter 31. Attempt, Solicitation, and Conspiracy.

Section
100. Attempt
110. Solicitation
120. Conspiracy
125. Duration of conspiracy for purposes of limitations of actions
140. Multiple convictions barred
150. Substantive crimes involving attempt or solicitation

Cross references. — For increase in classification of misdemeanors committed in connection with a criminal street gang, see AS 12.55.137.

Collateral references. — 21 Am. Jr. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 174-183, 185.

22 C.J.S., Criminal Law, §§ 115-126.

Entrapment to commit or attempt abortion, 53 ALR2d 1156.

What justifies escape or attempt to escape, or assistance in that regard, 70 ALR2d 1430; 69 ALR3d 678.

Attempt to commit assault as criminal offense, 79 ALR2d 597.

Attempts to receive stolen property, 85 ALR2d 259.

Attempt to escape or commit prison breach as affected by means employed, 96 ALR2d 520.

Attempts to commit offenses of larceny by trick, confidence game, false pretenses, and the like, 6 ALR3d 241.

Impotency as defense to charge of rape, attempt to rape, or assault with intent to commit rape, 23 ALR3d 1351.

Woman upon whom abortion is committed or attempted as accomplice for purposes of rule requiring corroboration of accomplice testimony, 34 ALR3d 858.

Comment note on impossibility of consummation of substantive crime as defense in criminal prosecution for conspiracy or attempt to commit crime, 37 ALR3d 375.

What constitutes attempted murder, 54 ALR3d 612.

Temporary unauthorized absence of prisoner as escape or attempted escape, 76 ALR3d 695.

What conduct amounts to an overt act or acts done toward commission of larceny so as to sustain charge of attempt to commit larceny, 76 ALR3d 842.

Robbery, attempted robbery, or assault to commit robbery, as affected by intent to collect or secure debt or claim, 88 ALR3d 1309.

What constitutes driving, operating, or being in control of motor vehicle for purposes of driving while intoxicated statutes, 93 ALR3d 7.

Use of force or intimidation in retaining property or in attempting to escape, rather than in taking property, as element of robbery, 93 ALR3d 643.

Criminal liability of third persons for death of another as result of accused's attempt to kill self or assist another's suicide, 40 ALR4th 702.

Impossibility of consummation as defense to prosecution for attempt, 41 ALR4th 588.

Fact that gun was unloaded as affecting criminal responsibility, 68 ALR4th 507.

What constitutes attempted bank robbery under 18 USCS §§ 2113(a), making it offense to take or attempt to take, by force, violence, or intimidation, any property, money, or other thing of value from bank, 37 ALR Fed. 255.

Criminal responsibility under 18 USCS § 2(b) of one who lacks capacity to commit an offense but who causes another to do so, 52 ALR Fed. 769.

Sec. 11.31.100. Attempt. (a) A person is guilty of an attempt to commit a crime if, with intent to commit a crime, the person engages in conduct which constitutes a substantial step toward the commission of that crime.

(b) In a prosecution under this section, it is not a defense that it was factually or legally impossible to commit the crime which was the object of the attempt if the conduct engaged in by the defendant would be a crime had the circumstances been as the defendant believed them to be.

(c) In a prosecution under this section, it is an affirmative defense that the defendant, under circumstances manifesting a voluntary and complete renunciation of the defendant's criminal intent, prevented the commission of the attempted crime.

(d) An attempt is

(1) an unclassified felony if the crime attempted is murder in the first degree;

(2) a class A felony if the crime attempted is an unclassified felony other than murder in the first degree;

(3) a class B felony if the crime attempted is a class A felony;

(4) a class C felony if the crime attempted is a class B felony;

(5) a class A misdemeanor if the crime attempted is a class C felony;

(6) a class B misdemeanor if the crime attempted is a class A or class B misdemeanor.

(e) If the crime attempted is an unclassified crime described in a state law which is not part of this title and no provision for punishment of an attempt to commit the crime is specified, the punishment for the attempt is imprisonment for a term of not more than half the maximum period prescribed as punishment for the unclassified crime, or a fine of not more than half the amount of the maximum fine prescribed as punishment for the unclassified crime, or both. If the crime attempted is punishable by an indeterminate or life term, the attempt is a class A felony. (§ 2 ch 166 SLA 1978; am § 1 ch 102 SLA 1980; am § 10 ch 45 SLA 1982; am § 1 ch 59 SLA 1988)

Cross references. — For legislative purpose of ch. 45, SLA 1982, see § 1, ch. 45, SLA 1982 in the Temporary and Special Acts.

Legislative history reports. — For a report on Chapter 102, SLA 1980 (HCS CSSB 511), see 1980 Senate Journal Supplement, No. 44, May 29, 1980, or 1980 House Journal Supplement, No. 79, May 28, 1980.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Annotator's notes. — Many of the cases cited in the notes below were decided under former AS 11.05.020.

The word "attempt" generally means the trial or physical effort to do a particular thing. Wooldridge v. United States, 237 F. 775 (9th Cir. 1916).

When attempt complete under former law. — See Lemke v. United States, 14 Alaska 587, 211 F.2d 73 (9th Cir. 1954); Wooldridge v. United States, 237 F. 775 (9th Cir. 1916).

In the area of attempt, criminal culpability was present under former AS 11.05.020 where there was the formation of criminal attempt, a preparation to commit the crime, and a direct unequivocal act toward its perpetration. Braham v. State, 571 P.2d 631 (Alaska 1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 910, 98 S. Ct. 2246, 56 L. Ed. 2d 410 (1978).

Mere preparation to commit a crime, not followed by an overt act done toward its commission, did not constitute an attempt under former AS 11.05.020. There were borderline cases where it was sometimes difficult to determine whether preparation to commit a crime has come near enough to the accomplishment of the act so that an attempt had been committed. Gargan v. State, 436 P.2d 968 (Alaska 1968).

Mere preparation to commit a crime, not followed by an overt act done toward its commission, did not constitute an attempt. Lemke v. United States, 14 Alaska 587, 211 F.2d 73 (9th Cir. 1954).

When one's acts were of such a preliminary nature so as to constitute mere preparation for the contemplated crime, there was no crime of attempt. Braham v. State, 571 P.2d 631 (Alaska 1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 910, 98 S. Ct. 2246, 56 L. Ed. 2d 410 (1978).

Question of degree. — Whether acts taken or done in contemplation of the commission of a crime were merely preparatory and did not constitute an attempt, or whether they were sufficiently close to the consummation of the crime to amount to attempt, was a question of degree and depended upon the facts and circumstances of a particular ca

571 P.2d 631 (Alaska 1977), ce
910, 98 S. Ct. 2246, 56 L. Ed. 2d

Double jeopardy. — The stat attempted murder, possession o son differ markedly in the conduc and in the specific societal inter to preserve, and multiple sent offenses do not violate double je State, 797 P.2d 677 (Alaska Ct.

Inadequacy of former stat
11.05.020 was apparently inadeq tively as a crime the situation inv of contracting for another to per Braham v. State, 571 P.2d 631 denied, 436 U.S. 910, 98 S. Ct. 22
(1978).

Applicability of this sectio
Alaska law, delivery of cocaine is include an attempted delivery, th ute controls and this section, t statute, is therefore not applic cocaine. Stuart v. State, 698 P.2
App. 1985).

Where defendant contracted kill another, when he instructe the victim, his intention being t fostered a relationship of trust tween the killer and the victim, th in a position where he would be and could more readily kill him, th the victim, at defendant's direction direct, unequivocal act toward the crime of murder, which followed criminal intent and a preparatio crime. Braham v. State, 571 P.2d cert. denied, 436 U.S. 910, 98 S. Ct.
410 (1978).

Factual impossibility not app
A factual impossibility which was n actor at the time should not, as a insulate him from conviction for at mission of the offense. Gargan v. S (Alaska 1968).

"Empty pocket doctrine". —
State, 436 P.2d 968 (Alaska 1968).

Attempt statute applied to a tion of narcotic drug statute. — ing to commit the crime defined by A
Alaska Uniform Narcotic Drug Ac were not exempted or excepted from the attempt statute. Simpson v. U Alaska 635, 195 F.2d 721 (9th Cir.

An attempt was necessarily indictment for statutory rape. S
States, 283 F. 38 (9th Cir. 1922).

Failure to include "substantial in indictment for attempted mur only as to form, where the indict concise description of defendant's ac tuted the offense, including the pro garding his state of mind. Ciervo v.
907 (Alaska Ct. App. 1988), over grounds, Swain v. State, 817 P.2d App. 1991).

Indictment need not specify proved for attempted rape. — Th for the proposition that a specific proved for the crime of attempted rap authority supporting the proposition or other thing of value from bank, 37

nsibility under 18 USCS § 2(b) of pacity to commit an offense but who do so, 52 ALR Fed. 769.

ttempt to commit a crime if, conduct which constitutes a hat it was factually or legally the attempt if the conduct circumstances been as the defense that the defendant, e renunciation of the defen- empted crime.

er in the first degree; ed felony other than murder

lony; lony; ass C felony; s A or class B misdemeanor. d in a state law which is not mpt to commit the crime is for a term of not more than unclassified crime, or a fine ribed as punishment for the able by an indeterminate or '8; am § 1 ch 102 SLA 1980;

1980 (HCS CSSB 511), see 1980 plement, No. 44, May 29, 1980, or al Supplement, No. 79, May 28, ine cases where it was sometimes ne whether preparation to commit ear enough to the accomplishment an attempt had been committed. 6 P.2d 968 (Alaska 1968).

to commit a crime, not followed by toward its commission, did not apt. Lemke v. United States, 14 2d 73 (9th Cir. 1954).
vere of such a preliminary nature mere preparation for the contem- was no crime of attempt. Braham 31 (Alaska 1977), cert. denied, 436 2246, 56 L. Ed. 2d 410 (1978).
gree. — Whether acts taken or ion of the commission of a crime atory and did not constitute at- hey were sufficiently close to the e crime to amount to attempt, was and depended upon the facts and circumstances of a particular case. Braham v. State, 571 P.2d 631 (Alaska 1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 910, 98 S. Ct. 2246, 56 L. Ed. 2d 410 (1978).

Double jeopardy. — The statutes which proscribe attempted murder, possession of explosives, and arson differ markedly in the conduct which they prohibit and in the specific societal interests which they seek to preserve, and multiple sentences for the three offenses do not violate double jeopardy. Machado v. State, 797 P.2d 677 (Alaska Ct. App. 1990).

Inadequacy of former statute. — Former AS 11.05.020 was apparently inadequate to codify effectively as a crime the situation involving the single act of contracting for another to perform a criminal act. Braham v. State, 571 P.2d 631 (Alaska 1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 910, 98 S. Ct. 2246, 56 L. Ed. 2d 410 (1978).

Applicability of this section. — Since under Alaska law, delivery of cocaine is expressly defined to include an attempted delivery, the more specific statute controls and this section, the general attempt statute, is therefore not applicable to delivery of cocaine. Stuart v. State, 698 P.2d 1218 (Alaska Ct. App. 1985).

Where defendant contracted with someone to kill another, when he instructed the killer to visit the victim, his intention being that there would be fostered a relationship of trust and confidence between the killer and the victim, thus placing the killer in a position where he would be closer to the victim and could more readily kill him, the killer's visit with the victim, at defendant's direction, was the doing of a direct, unequivocal act toward the commission of the crime of murder, which followed the formation of a criminal intent and a preparation to commit this crime. Braham v. State, 571 P.2d 631 (Alaska 1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 910, 98 S. Ct. 2246, 56 L. Ed. 2d 410 (1978).

Factual impossibility not apparent to actor. — A factual impossibility which was not apparent to the actor at the time should not, as a matter of policy, insulate him from conviction for attempting the commission of the offense. Gargan v. State, 436 P.2d 968 (Alaska 1968).

"Empty pocket doctrine". — See Gargan v. State, 436 P.2d 968 (Alaska 1968).

Attempt statute applied to attempted violation of narcotic drug statute. — Persons attempting to commit the crime defined by AS 17.10.010 of the Alaska Uniform Narcotic Drug Act (now repealed) were not exempted or excepted from the provisions of the attempt statute. Simpson v. United States, 13 Alaska 635, 195 F.2d 721 (9th Cir. 1952).

An attempt was necessarily included in an indictment for statutory rape. Sekinoff v. United States, 283 F. 38 (9th Cir. 1922).

Failure to include "substantial step" language in indictment for attempted murder was a defect only as to form, where the indictment included a concise description of defendant's actions that constituted the offense, including the proper language regarding his state of mind. Ciervo v. State, 756 P.2d 907 (Alaska Ct. App. 1988), overruled on other grounds, Swain v. State, 817 P.2d 927 (Alaska Ct. App. 1991).

Indictment need not specify intent to be proved for attempted rape. — There is authority for the proposition that a specific intent must be proved for the crime of attempted rape. But there is no authority supporting the proposition that the indictment must specify that intent. State v. Thomas, 525 P.2d 1092 (Alaska 1974).

Even though there is no question that the crime of attempt requires a specific intent, it seems equally beyond dispute that a charge of attempt to commit a specific crime clearly advises the defendant of the offense with which he is charged. State v. Thomas, 525 P.2d 1092 (Alaska 1974).

Indictment charging attempted rape and citing only the rape statute held sufficient. — See State v. Thomas, 525 P.2d 1092 (Alaska 1974).

Attempted kidnapping was class A felony under this section before 1982 amendment. — Under the law as it existed before the 1982 amendment to this section became effective, attempted kidnapping was unquestionably a class A felony. Galbraith v. State, 693 P.2d 880 (Alaska Ct. App. 1985).

Attempted kidnapping and other attempted crimes. — Every attempted sexual assault, attempted physical assault, or attempted armed robbery does not necessarily involve an attempted kidnapping. In order to make these distinctions clear, it is important that the jury be properly instructed that conviction of attempted kidnapping under AS 11.41.300(a)(1)(C) and this section requires a dual intent (1) to physically or sexually assault the victim and (2) to restrain the victim beyond what was necessary to effectuate the assault. Alam v. State, 793 P.2d 1081 (Alaska Ct. App. 1990).

Attempted first-degree sexual assault. — At the very least, a defendant must have formed a specific intent to engage in sexual penetration in order to be convicted of attempted first-degree sexual assault. Baden v. State, 667 P.2d 1275 (Alaska Ct. App. 1983).

Five-year presumptive sentence for attempted sexual assault. — It was not manifestly unjust to impose a five-year presumptive term upon defendant's conviction of attempted sexual assault of a minor, and he was not automatically entitled as a matter of law to have his case referred to a three-judge panel for sentencing. Aveoganna v. State, 757 P.2d 75 (Alaska Ct. App. 1988).

Attempt to commit second-degree sexual assault is a crime under Alaska law and requires that defendant, intending to engage in sexual contact with another person without regard to that person's lack of consent, take a substantial step toward accomplishing this goal. Guertin v. State, 854 P.2d 1130 (Alaska Ct. App. 1993).

Merger of attempted sexual assault convictions. — Where defendant entered the victim's apartment with the intent to sexually assault her, ripped off her clothing, continued to attack her while she struggled to fight him off, and a rescuer entered the apartment to intervene, defendant's convictions for attempted first-degree sexual assault and attempted second-degree sexual assault should have been merged, because the same conduct was basis for both convictions. Moore v. State, 123 P.3d 1081 (Alaska Ct. App. 2005).

Offense of attempted second-degree murder was an impossibility. Huitt v. State, 678 P.2d 415 (Alaska Ct. App. 1984).

Applicability of partial affirmative defenses. — A person charged with attempted kidnapping is not entitled to assert a partial defense when the intended victim of the crime is voluntarily released unharmed; under the plain language of AS 11.41.300(d), the partial affirmative defense applies only in a prosecution for kidnapping. Laraby v. State, 710 P.2d 427 (Alaska Ct. App. 1985).

Defendant may be found guilty though attempt not expressly charged. — Jury could find defendant guilty of the attempt to commit the crime of possessing narcotic drugs despite the fact that the attempt was not expressly charged. Simpson v. United States, 13 Alaska 635, 195 F.2d 721 (9th Cir. 1952).

Intoxication defense to attempt. — Where defendant was charged with attempted first-degree sexual assault, attempted second-degree sexual assault, and burglary, defendant's intoxication at the time of the offense offered a defense to the culpable mental state. Moore v. State, 123 P.3d 1081 (Alaska Ct. App. 2005).

Substantial evidence of attempt. — In a prosecution for possession of narcotic drugs, although there was no substantial evidence that defendant committed the crime charged in the information, there was substantial evidence that she attempted to commit the crime charged. Simpson v. United States, 13 Alaska 635, 195 F.2d 721 (9th Cir. 1952).

Substantial evidence supported defendant's conviction for attempted first-degree sexual assault; the evidence, when viewed in the light most favorable to the verdict, established that defendant attacked wife and removed some of her clothing while the wife vigorously resisted. Sergie v. State, 105 P.3d 1150 (Alaska Ct. App. 2005).

Conviction of attempted first-degree sexual assault affirmed. — Conviction of attempted sexual assault on the first degree under AS 11.41.410 as it read before the 1983 amendment and this section was affirmed. Sexual charges based on non-consensual genital intercourse do not require proof of a specific sexual intent; and plain error was not established though the prosecutor's expressions which might have been construed as a personal opinion of the guilt of the defendant or an argument relating to a defendant's need for treatment were improper and uninvited. Potts v. State, 712 P.2d 385 (Alaska Ct. App. 1985).

Evidence supported defendant's conviction of attempted sexual assault in the first degree, where he brought his eight-year old stepdaughter and some syrup into a bathroom and asked the child if she would lick the syrup from his penis, and the fact that a wet drop of syrup was found on the counter supported the conclusion that he actually opened the syrup and poured some amount of it. Mitchell v. State, 818 P.2d 1163 (Alaska Ct. App. 1991).

Evidence sufficient to support conviction. — See McCarlo v. State, 677 P.2d 1268 (Alaska Ct. App. 1984).

Conviction and sentence upheld. — See Andrejko v. State, 695 P.2d 246 (Alaska Ct. App. 1985).

Conviction reversed because of insufficient evidence. — See Brower v. State, 728 P.2d 645 (Alaska Ct. App. 1986).

Defendant's conviction of attempted sexual abuse of a minor in the second degree was reversed, where evidence showing that he wrote notes to an eight-year-old girl asking her to be his girlfriend and to kiss him established only that he engaged in preparatory conduct and not that he took a substantial step toward sexual contact with the girl. Sullivan v. State, 766 P.2d 51 (Alaska Ct. App. 1988).

Convictions reversed because of erroneous jury instruction. — Convictions for attempted sexual assault in the first degree and kidnapping were reversed because of an erroneous jury instruction on sexual assault in the first degree concerning consent. The correct standard is whether the defendant recklessly disregarded the victim's lack of consent. Laseter v. State, 684 P.2d 139 (Alaska Ct. App. 1984).

Same offense for sentencing purposes. — Assault with intent to rob and attempted robbery constituted the "same offense" for sentencing purposes. Brookins v. State, 600 P.2d 12 (Alaska 1979).

Sentence upheld. — See Bowie v. State, 494 P.2d 800 (Alaska 1972); Spearman v. State, 543 P.2d 202 (Alaska 1975); Braham v. State, 571 P.2d 631 (Alaska 1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 910, 98 S. Ct. 2246, 56 L. Ed. 2d 410 (1978); Johnson v. State, 580 P.2d 700 (Alaska 1978); Ferguson v. State, 590 P.2d 43 (Alaska 1979); Morris v. State, 592 P.2d 1244 (Alaska 1979); Ramil v. State, 619 P.2d 722 (Alaska 1980); Travelstead v. State, 689 P.2d 494 (Alaska Ct. App. 1984); Schnecker v. State, 739 P.2d 1310 (Alaska Ct. App. 1987).

Sentence for attempted first degree murder upheld. — See Staael v. State, 718 P.2d 948 (Alaska 1986).

Maximum sentence upheld. — Severity of victim's injury, and his resulting long-term impairment, supported judge's conclusion that defendant's assault was among the worst attempted murders and that he should receive the maximum term for the crime. Nelson v. State, 874 P.2d 298 (Alaska Ct. App. 1994).

Consecutive sentences unsupported. — Consecutive sentences for first degree murder and attempted murder were remanded because judge had failed to find that a sentence of that length was necessary to protect the public. Nelson v. State, 874 P.2d 298 (Alaska Ct. App. 1994).

Prohibiting suspended sentence. — The prohibition against the granting of a suspended imposition of sentence applies to persons convicted of an attempt to commit one of the sexual offenses defined in the criminal code. Mack v. State, 900 P.2d 1202 (Alaska Ct. App. 1995).

Sentence under former AS 11.41.410(b) and this section held excessive. — See Bolhouse v. State, 687 P.2d 1166 (Alaska Ct. App. 1984).

Sentence held excessive. — See Hansen v. State, 657 P.2d 862 (Alaska Ct. App. 1983).

Applied in Nicholson v. State, 656 P.2d 1209 (Alaska Ct. App. 1982); Patterson v. State, 732 P.2d 1102 (Alaska Ct. App. 1987); Allen v. State, 769 P.2d 457 (Alaska Ct. App. 1989); Dandova v. State, 72 P.3d 325 (Alaska Ct. App. 2003); Parker v. State, 151 P.3d 478 (Alaska Ct. App. 2006).

Stated in State v. Silas, 595 P.2d 651 (Alaska 1979); Ramil v. State, 619 P.2d 722 (Alaska 1980); Coleman v. State, 621 P.2d 869 (Alaska 1980); Clark v. State, 645 P.2d 1236 (Alaska Ct. App. 1982); Tazruk v. State, 655 P.2d 788 (Alaska Ct. App. 1982); Velez v. State, 762 P.2d 1297 (Alaska Ct. App. 1988).

Cited in Handley v. State, 615 P.2d 627 (Alaska 1980); Walker v. State, 662 P.2d 948 (Alaska Ct. App. 1983); Bell v. State, 668 P.2d 829 (Alaska Ct. App. 1983); Brower v. State, 683 P.2d 290 (Alaska Ct. App. 1984); Hart v. State, 702 P.2d 651 (Alaska Ct. App. 1985); Chief v. State, 718 P.2d 475 (Alaska Ct. App. 1986); Hastings v. State, 736 P.2d 1157 (Alaska Ct. App. 1987); James v. State, 739 P.2d 1314 (Alaska Ct. App. 1987); Stevens v. State, 748 P.2d 771 (Alaska Ct. App. 1988); James v. State, 754 P.2d 1336 (Alaska Ct. App. 1988); Ervin v. State, 761 P.2d 124 (Alaska Ct. App. 1988); Robison v. State, 763 P.2d 1357 (Alaska Ct. App. 1988); Konrad v. State, 763 P.2d 1359 (Alaska Ct. App. 1988); Lawrence v. State, 764 P.2d 318 (Alaska Ct. App. 1988); Charles v. State, 780 P.2d

377 (Alaska Ct. App. 1989)
381 (Alaska Ct. App. 1990)
1250 (Alaska Ct. App. 199
596 (Alaska Ct. App. 199
P.2d 1202 (Alaska Ct. Ap
881 P.2d 328 (Alaska Ct. A 934 P.2d 1321 (Alaska Ct.
State, 964 P.2d 1285 (Alask
State, 967 P.2d 98 (Alaska
State, 9 P.3d 301 (Alaska
State, 22 P.3d 890 (Alaske

Collateral references. - sault as criminal offense. 93

Sec. 11.31.110. Sol intent to cause another other to engage in that

(b) In a prosecution

(1) it is not a defens

(A) that the defend incapable in an indivi solicitation; or

(B) that a person wh
the object of the solicit

(2) it is an affirmativ voluntary and complete another person to enga
the crime.

(c) Solicitation is

(1) an unclassified fe

(2) a class A felony if the first degree;

(3) a class B felony if

(4) a class C felony if

(5) a class A misdem

(6) a class B misdem

(d) If the crime solicit part of this title and no specified, the punishmer half the maximum perio of not more than half th crime, or both. If the cri solicitation is a class A f
ch 45 SLA 1982; am § 2

Cross references. — For le
45, SLA 1962, see § 1, ch.
Temporary and Special Acts; f based on the conduct of anoth
AS 11.16.110. For applicability the 1999 amendment of subse
54, SLA 1999 in the 1999 Tem

Former law construed. -
State, 504 P.2d 823 (Alaska 1

t standard is whether the defendant reckgarded the victim's lack of consent. Laseter
84 P.2d 139 (Alaska Ct. App. 1984).

ffense for sentencing purposes. — As-intent to rob and attempted robbery con-ie "same offense" for sentencing purposes.
. State, 600 P.2d 12 (Alaska 1979).

ce upheld. — See Bowie v. State, 494 P.2d a 1972); Spearman v. State, 543 P.2d 202
75); Braham v. State, 571 P.2d 631 (Alaska
. denied, 436 U.S. 910, 98 S. Ct. 2246, 56 L.
0 (1978); Johnson v. State, 580 P.2d 700
78); Ferguson v. State, 590 P.2d 43 (Alaska rris v. State, 592 P.2d 1244 (Alaska 1979);
State, 619 P.2d 722 (Alaska 1980);
d v. State, 689 P.2d 494 (Alaska Ct. App. necker v. State, 739 P.2d 1310 (Alaska Ct.
).

ce for attempted first degree murder
— See Staael v. State, 718 P.2d 948 (Alaska um sentence upheld. — Severity of vic-

y, and his resulting long-term impairment, judge's conclusion that defendant's assault g the worst attempted murders and that he ceive the maximum term for the crime.
State, 874 P.2d 298 (Alaska Ct. App. 1994).

utive sentences unsupported. — Con-sentences for first degree murder and atnurder were remanded because judge had find that a sentence of that length was to protect the public. Nelson v. State, 874
(Alaska Ct. App. 1994).

iting suspended sentence. — The prohiinst the granting of a suspended imposition e applies to persons convicted of an attempt t one of the sexual offenses defined in the code. Mack v. State, 900 P.2d 1202 (Alaska 1995).

ce under former AS 11.41.410(b) and ion held excessive. — See Bolhouse v.
7 P.2d 1166 (Alaska Ct. App. 1984).

ce held excessive. — See Hansen v. State,
862 (Alaska Ct. App. 1983).

d in Nicholson v. State, 656 P.2d 1209
t. App. 1982); Patterson v. State, 732 P.2d ska Ct. App. 1987); Allen v. State, 769 P.2d ka Ct. App. 1989); Dandova v. State, 72 P.3d ka Ct. App. 2003); Parker v. State, 151 P.3d ka Ct. App. 2006).

in State v. Silas, 595 P.2d 651 (Alaska mil v. State, 619 P.2d 722 (Alaska 1980);
v. State, 621 P.2d 869 (Alaska 1980); Clark
645 P.2d 1236 (Alaska Ct. App. 1982);
. State, 655 P.2d 788 (Alaska Ct. App. 1982);
State, 762 P.2d 1297 (Alaska Ct. App. 1988).
in Handley v. State, 615 P.2d 627 (Alaska alker v. State, 662 P.2d 948 (Alaska Ct. App. ell v. State, 668 P.2d 829 (Alaska Ct. App. ower v. State, 683 P.2d 290 (Alaska Ct. App.
art v. State, 702 P.2d 651 (Alaska Ct. App. hief v. State, 718 P.2d 475 (Alaska Ct. App. astings v. State, 736 P.2d 1157 (Alaska Ct.
7); James v. State, 739 P.2d 1314 (Alaska Ct.
7); Stevens v. State, 748 P.2d 771 (Alaska Ct.
8); James v. State, 754 P.2d 1336 (Alaska Ct.
8); Ervin v. State, 761 P.2d 124 (Alaska Ct.
8); Robison v. State, 763 P.2d 1357 (Alaska
. 1988); Konrad v. State, 763 P.2d 136 Ct. App. 1988); Lawrence v. State, 764 P.2
ska Ct. App. 1988); Charles v. State, 780 P.2

377 (Alaska Ct. App. 1989); Gantner v. State, 789 P.2d 381 (Alaska Ct. App. 1990); Capwell v. State, 823 P.2d 1250 (Alaska Ct. App. 1991); Sam v. State, 842 P.2d 596 (Alaska Ct. App. 1992); Kolkman v. State, 857 P.2d 1202 (Alaska Ct. App. 1993); Rudden v. State, 881 P.2d 328 (Alaska Ct. App. 1994); Marino v. State, 934 P.2d 1321 (Alaska Ct. App. 1997); Gwalthney v. State, 964 P.2d 1285 (Alaska Ct. App. 1998); Wilson v. State, 967 P.2d 98 (Alaska Ct. App. 1998); Griffin v. State, 9 P.3d 301 (Alaska Ct. App. 2000); Avila v. State, 22 P.3d 890 (Alaska Ct. App. 2001); State v. Brueggeman, 24 P.3d 583 (Alaska Ct. App. 2001); Ramsey v. State, 56 P.3d 675 (Alaska Ct. App. 2002); Wholecheese v. State, 100 P.3d 14 (Alaska Ct. App. 2004); Kelly v. State, 116 P.3d 602 (Alaska Ct. App. 2005); State v. Parker, 147 P.3d 690 (Alaska 2006); Lambert v. State, 172 P.3d 838 (Alaska Ct. App. 2007); Moore v. State, 174 P.3d 770 (Alaska Ct. App. 2008); Tuttle v. State, 175 P.3d 60 (Alaska Ct. App. 2008); Oviuk v. State, 180 P.3d 388 (Alaska Ct. App. 2008).

Collateral references. — Attempt to commit assault as criminal offense. 93 ALR5th 683.

Sec. 11.31.110. Solicitation. (a) A person commits the crime of solicitation if, with intent to cause another to engage in conduct constituting a crime, the person solicits the other to engage in that conduct.

(b) In a prosecution under this section,

(1) it is not a defense

(A) that the defendant belongs to a class of persons who by definition are legally incapable in an individual capacity of committing the crime that is the object of the solicitation; or

(B) that a person whom the defendant solicits could not be guilty of the crime that is the object of the solicitation;

(2) it is an affirmative defense that the defendant, under circumstances manifesting a voluntary and complete renunciation of the defendant's criminal intent, after soliciting another person to engage in conduct constituting a crime, prevented the commission of the crime.

(c) Solicitation is

(1) an unclassified felony if the crime solicited is murder in the first degree;

(2) a class A felony if the crime solicited is an unclassified felony other than murder in the first degree;

(3) a class B felony if the crime solicited is a class A felony;

(4) a class C felony if the crime solicited is a class B felony;

(5) a class A misdemeanor if the crime solicited is a class C felony;

(6) a class B misdemeanor if the crime solicited is a class A or class B misdemeanor.

(d) If the crime solicited is an unclassified crime described in a state law which is not part of this title and no provision for punishment of a solicitation to commit the crime is specified, the punishment for the solicitation is imprisonment for a term of not more than half the maximum period prescribed as punishment for the unclassified crime, or a fine of not more than half the maximum fine prescribed as punishment for the unclassified crime, or both. If the crime solicited is punishable by an indeterminate or life term, the solicitation is a class A felony. (§ 2 ch 166 SLA 1978; am § 2 ch 102 SLA 1980; am § 11 ch 45 SLA 1982; am § 2 ch 54 SLA 1999)

Cross references. — For legislative purpose of ch. 45, SLA 1982, see § 1, ch. 45, SLA 1982, in the Temporary and Special Acts; for legal accountability based on the conduct of another and complicity, see AS 11.16.110. For applicability provisions relating to the 1999 amendment of subsection (c), see § 16, ch. 54, SLA 1999 in the 1999 Temporary & Special Acts.

Effect of amendments. — The 1999 amendment, effective June 5, 1999, rewrote subsection (c).

Legislative history reports. — For a report on Chapter 102, SLA 1980 (HCS CSSB 511), see 1980 Senate Journal Supplement, No. 44, May 29, 1980, or 1980 House Journal Supplement, No. 79, May 28, 1980.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Former law construed. — See McConkey v. State, 504 P.2d 823 (Alaska 1972); Cassell v. State, 645 P.2d 219 (Alaska Ct. App. 1982) (decided under former AS 11.10.070).

Soliciting unlawful exploitation of minor. — Where defendant was charged with soliciting the crime of unlawful exploitation of a minor based on his asking victims to take off their clothes and let him photograph them, defendant's argument that he did not "solicit" the crime because the victims could not be guilty of the intended crime was foreclosed by the provision of this section that it is no defense that the person solicited could not be guilty of the crime that is the object of the solicitation. Braun v. State, 911 P.2d 1075 (Alaska Ct. App. 1996).

Defendant's convictions for soliciting the crime of unlawful exploitation of a minor which were based on his asking victims to take off their clothes and let him photograph them were erroneous since defendant did not ask anyone else to engage in the prohibited conduct, i.e., inducing a child to engage in one of the sexual activities prohibited by AS 11.41.455, and thus he did not commit the crime of solicitation. Braun v. State, 911 P.2d 1075 (Alaska Ct. App. 1996).

One contracting with another to kill a third person was guilty of attempted first-degree murder, not solicitation. — See Braham v. State, 571 P.2d 631 (Alaska 1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 910, 98 S. Ct. 2246, 56 L. Ed. 2d 410 (1978) (decided under former AS 11.10.070 and 11.15.010).

Sentence upheld. — Composite sentence of 40 years of imprisonment for solicitation of murder in the first degree, attempted murder in the first degree, and assault in the first degree was not clearly mistaken. Marzak v. State, 796 P.2d 1374 (Alaska Ct. App. 1990).

Quoted in Sullivan v. State, 766 P.2d 51 (Alaska Ct. App. 1988); Gargan v. State, 805 P.2d 998 (Alaska Ct. App. 1991).

Cited in Hoover v. State, 641 P.2d 1263 (Alaska Ct. App. 1982); P.S. v. State, 655 P.2d 1319 (Alaska Ct. App. 1982); Monroe v. State, 752 P.2d 1017 (Alaska Ct. App. 1988); Bachler v. State, 941 P.2d 200 (Alaska Ct. App. 1997); Ivanoff v. State, 9 P.3d 294 (Alaska Ct. App. 2000); Zemljich v. Municipality of Anchorage, 151 P.3d 471 (Alaska Ct. App. 2006).

Sec. 11.31.120. Conspiracy. (a) An offender commits the crime of conspiracy if, with the intent to promote or facilitate a serious felony offense, the offender agrees with one or more persons to engage in or cause the performance of that activity and the offender or one of the persons does an overt act in furtherance of the conspiracy.

(b) If an offender commits the crime of conspiracy and knows that a person with whom the offender conspires to commit a serious felony offense has conspired or will conspire with another person or persons to commit the same serious felony offense, the offender is guilty of conspiring with that other person or persons to commit that crime whether or not the offender knows their identities.

(c) In a prosecution under this section, it is a defense that the defendant was merely present at the time that two or more other persons agreed to engage in or cause the performance of a serious felony offense.

(d) In a prosecution under this section, it is not a defense that a person with whom the defendant conspires could not be guilty of the crime that is the object of the conspiracy because of

(1) lack of criminal responsibility or other legal incapacity or exemption;

(2) belonging to a class of persons who by definition are legally incapable in an individual capacity of committing the crime that is the object of the conspiracy;

(3) unawareness of the criminal nature of the conduct in question or of the criminal purpose of the defendant; or

(4) any other factor precluding the culpable mental state required for the commission of the crime.

(e) If the offense that the conspiracy is intended to promote or facilitate is actually committed, a defendant may not be convicted of conspiring to commit that offense with another person for whose conduct the defendant is not legally accountable under AS 11.16.120(b).

(f) In a prosecution under this section, it is an affirmative defense that the defendant, under circumstances manifesting a voluntary and complete renunciation of the defendant's criminal intent, either (1) gave timely warning to law enforcement authorities; or (2) otherwise made proper effort that prevented the commission of the crime that was the object of the conspiracy. Renunciation by one conspirator does not affect the liability of another conspirator who does not join in the renunciation.

(g) Notwithstanding AS 22.10.030, venue in actions in which the crime of conspiracy is alleged to have been committed may not be based solely on the location of overt acts done in furtherance of the conspiracy.

(h) In this section,

(1) "overt act in manifests a purpo completed;
(2) "serious felon
(A) against the p
(B) involving con
class A, or class B f
(C) that is crimin
(D) that is terrori
(i) Conspiracy is
(1) an unclassifie
(2) a class A felo
unclassified felony o
(3) a class B felon
felony;
(4) a class C felon felony. (§ 1 ch 3 SL

Revisor's notes. —
(d) (1) was enacted as the nized in 1994, at which t was designated as (d)(2). S
(i), and subsection (i) was 2002.

Effect of amendment:

Sec. 11.31.125. D
(a) For purposes of a under AS 11.31.120,
(1) when all the
completed;
(2) if all the crime
furtherance of the con
(3) when the defer
conspiracy and of the
(b) In this section, in AS 11.31.120. (§ 1

Sec. 11.31.140. M
tion under AS 11.31.1
solicited to commit,
attempt, solicitation,
(b) A person may r
11.31.120 for conduct
(c) A person may n
a crime defined by AS attempt or solicitation
(d) This section do information charging commission of the cri
ch 166 SLA 1978; am

Conspiracy is separate conspiracy is generally rega

HB 6 Animal Cruelty by Rep. Bob Lynn
House Judiciary Committee, Fri., March 20, 2009

Teleconference requests, including witnesses and sites:

Offnet number from Klawock

Police Chief Cullen Fowler, City of Klawock
755-2777, ext 311 (office)
Email: cfowler@cityofklawock.com

Mayor Donald Marvin, City of Klawock
Office 755-2261

At House Judiciary Committee Room:

Chava Lee, executive director of Gastineau Humane Society
789-0260 (office)
Email: execdir@ghspets.org

Dr. Rachel Dzuiba, GHS veterinarian
463-5022 (office)
Email: bridgevet@acsalaska.net

Offnet number from Anchorage:

Rose Munafo, sex offender programs for Alaska Dept. of Corrections
269-7416 (office)
Email: rose.munafo@alaska.gov

Offnet number from Homer:

Sgt. Larry Kuhns, Homer Police Department
235-3150 (office)
Email: lkuhns@ci.homer.ak.us

Colleen James, nurse and SART Kenai member 398-0544
Email: fritz@xyz.net

Contact: Mike Sica, 465-4965, staff for Rep. Bob Lynn

HOUSE COMMITTEE REPORT

(7)
Date Referred to Committee: January 20, 2009 FURTHER REFERRALS: Finance

Date of Committee Action: 3/20/09

The JUDICIARY Committee considered: HOUSE BILL NO. 6

"An Act relating to cruelty to animals."

HB 6 CRUELTY TO ANIMALS

Recommends it be replaced with [ ] HCS or [✓] CS for HB6 (JUD)
For Senate Bills with new title: [ ] Technical Title [ ] New Title: HCR_____ [ ] Same Title [✓] New Title

[ ] attach amendments
[ ] add new referral to _____ Committee
[ ] Letter of Intent_____ Committee

List of Abbrev for Depts.:
ADM
CED
COR
CRT
EED
DEC
DFG
GOV
DHS
LWF
LAW
LEG
MVA
DNR
DPS
REV
DOT
UA

NEW FISCAL NOTES *Assigned by Chief Clerk's Office
List by Dept(s):	*FN#	Fiscal	Indet.	Zero
LAW				✓
DOC				✓

PREVIOUS FISCAL NOTES
List by Dept(s):	FN#	Fiscal	Indet.	Zero

Signing with recommendations	Printed Last Name	DP	DNP	NR	AM
	LYNN	✓
	Gorenkey	–
	Coghill	✓
	Gatto	✓
	Holmes				X
Chair:	RAMRAS			X
Chair:

Jane Pierson

From: Rep. Nancy Dahlstrom
Sent: Wednesday, March 25, 2009 11:09 AM
To: Jane Pierson
Subject: FW: HB 6 & Misconceptions

Hi Jane, Nancy received this e-mail this last weekend. Thought it was very interesting to say the least... :o)

Laura Pierre
Legislative Aide
Office of Rep. Nancy Dahlstrom
P. 907.465.3783
F. 907.465.2293
Laura_Pierre@legis.state.ak.us

-----Original Message-----
From: housemajority_email@housemajority.org [mailto:housemajority_email@housemajority.org]
Sent: Saturday, March 21, 2009 2:19 PM
To: Rep. Nancy Dahlstrom
Subject: HB 6 & Misconceptions

+----------+
DO NOT REPLY DIRECTLY TO THIS EMAIL: your reply will go to enews@housemajority.org To correspond with the author Hit 'Reply' or 'Forward'.
Then change the TO: address to t.wallace@hotmail.com If suspected Spam please forward to: support@housemajority.org
+----------+

From: t.wallace@hotmail.com

Dear. Rep. Dahlstrom:

First I would like to thank you, as I thanked Rep. Lynn, for your generally outstanding service to the State. As a Libertarian who divides my time between Wasilla and Seattle, I generally support your voting record in the Legislature.

However, it is my Libertarian beliefs in smaller government that are prompting me to write you regarding HB 6 and the component regarding sexual involvement with animals. I am certain you share my view that any new legislation should be considered from all perspectives for present impact and future precedent-setting, and only executed when it is determined that the government must once again intervene in citizens' private lives.

Therefore, as a researcher and clinician in this field, I feel compelled to share some misconceptions upon which you may be basing your co-sponsorship of this bill, but which are not supported by diligent research. This may seem long-winded, but I hope you will give it due consideration as peer-reviewed studies on the paraphilia of zoophilia. Valid sources are cited at the end for your future use.

To say "conduct X is animal cruelty" is valid if, and only if, conduct X is substantially animal cruelty. As a researcher in this field, I assume that such a law is based upon due diligence of research. In which case one must ask why a lawmaker constructs such a law despite some 50 years of research by psychologists, sexologists and ethologists which say its fundamental premise (that conduct X is of necessity cruel) is fatally flawed [1]. Most significant sexual information sources strongly differentiate this activity from animal cruelty activities [2] and make clear that "the quality of the interaction and the relationship - that may be loving, neutral, or violent - and not the fact of a sexual interaction is important." [3].

In light of this, the rationale for building the claim into law as a legislated assumption is of great doubt, and seems to represent a preconception of a non-expert and lack input from experts. This is a poor basis for law, and building this premise into legislation will (as experts at the Kinsey Institute said of human-animal sexuality in 1999) doubtless "destroy the lives of many citizens" [4].

From a logical and Constitutional perspective, it is not appropriate for government to intervene in people's private lives when there is no evidence of harm. Consider the following arguments:

1) Consent: It does not follow that because an animal can't consent to or request sexual contact with a human (and that point is debated), that it is valid to make a law prohibiting it. Most of us would never consider introducing a bill outlawing the use of leather or the eating of meat, uses that impinge on an animal's "consent" far more than does sexual contact. Instead, strong laws with strict penalties are set in place to make sure that the animal does not suffer while these "non-consensual" acts take place.

Not to mention this bill would still allow breeders to have sexual contact with animals. It seems more than a bit illogical to permit sexual stimulation of an animal for profit but impose criminal penalties if the person enjoys doing it (prosecution of thought).

2) Cruelty: As stated above, animal cruelty laws are already on the books. Indeed, sometimes sexual acts involve cruelty, and I have no problem with strengthening those laws. But, as many of the recent cases around the country prove (for example Klamath Falls, OR, and Enumclaw, WA), sexual contact frquently does not involve cruelty to the animal. Cruelty can be proven by the same standards as is used by law enforcement and animal control when assessing non-sexual allegations of mistreatment. If a private sexual act between a human and an animal does not meet these standards, then it should have no basis for prosecution.

3) "Gateway Crime": Supporters of this bill have cited studies by the FBI and other groups that, for example, a percentage of serial killers, child molesters, etc., had an early history of animal abuse. But simply because these studies show a correlation between bestiality and later serious crimes, it does not logically follow that all practitioners of bestiality will follow this path. Indeed, my own research, as well as published, peer-reviewed studies[5] such as those by Kinsey, Miletski[6], and Weinburg all indicate that there is a dramatic difference between the mindset of a person who forcibly rapes an animal and that of a person who has sexual contact which does not involve force. Most psychologists would tell you (and the research supports this) that the former involves serious pathology and sociopathy (the lack of ability to feel empathy), while the latter is merely a harmless paraphilia. And the vast majority of those studied throughout the past fifty years (and there are literally thousands within the U.S. who practice bestiality regularly) are cases of the latter. This is an exceptionally important point that cannot be overemphasized. There MUST be differentiation between force/rape and non-forced acts. Objective research results demand this.

In consideration of these arguments, what are we then left with? A law designed to dictate morality. But I would respectfully remind you that when the U.S. Supreme Court declared state s@# o*y laws unconstitutional, it stated decisively that you can not legislate personal morality. This law, if passed, will not bear up to constitutional scrutiny.

I hope you are still with me. As a fair lawmaker I believe that you are able to see past the emotional aspects of this issue and the outrage regarding the case in Klawock (which by all accounts is a case of true animal cruelty and should be punished as such under existing laws), to the real issue at hand. Simply put, the more government intervenes in the personal lives of citizens, the easier it becomes to intervene. While most people (myself included) cannot relate to the sexual desire of a member of another species, it is a giant leap backward to send someone to jail for practicing a non-harmful sexual behavior simply because it is viewed as "disgusting".

I therefore ask you to reasonably consider: if you must include sexual contact in your bill, please amend it to penalize such contact that is abusive or inhumane, as judged by a competent vet or animal control officer using the same standards as for non-sexual cases.

Thank you for your time,

Thomas A. Wallace, Psy.D

P.S.: I would strongly urge you not to embrace the Humane Society of the United States (HSUS) too strongly simply due to their support of your bill. This group has a deceptive name: they are NOT government affiliated like the American Humane Society or ASPCA. Their agenda is extremely anti-hunting, anti-trapping, etc., and generally considered to be only slightly less incendiary than groups such as PETA or ALF[7].

References: [1] Information indicating how professionals knowledgable in the field, view this activity, is linked from sections 4, 5, 7 & 13 at: en.wikipedia[dot] org/wiki/Zoophilia (permanent link: Mar 2009). Peer reviewed research contradicting this assumption Includes Masters Ph.D. (1962), Miletski Ph.D. (1994), Weinberg/Williams (Kinsey Institute, University of Indiana) (1999-2003), Beetz Ph.D. (2002).

[2] Information linked from: en.wikipedia[dot]org/index.php?title=Zoosadism which states "Sexology information sites (if sufficiently detailed) are usually careful to distinguish zoosadism from zoophilia" and lists several sites exemplifying this.

[3] Cited from Andrea Beetz Ph.D. "Love, Violence, and Sexuality in Relationships between Humans and Animals" (2002), which also states categorically: "Former, as well as the here presented research, suggests that zoophilia itself does not represent a clinically significant problem and is not necessarily combined with other clinically significant problems and disorders, even if it may be difficult for some professionals to accept this."

[4] Professors Martin S. Weinberg, PhD and Colin J. Williams, PhD , of the Kinsey Institute, University of Indiana. They wrote in 1999 on a similar subject: "As sociologists and sex researchers at Indiana University for over 30 years, and as professionals who are researching in [bestiality] ... we believe that given our academic disciplines, we write with the benefit of extensive knowledge regarding the consequences of attempting to legally control unconventional forms of sexual expression and the failure of legislators to distinguish between the objective harm resulting from these sexual acts and the displeasure they may feel with regard to them. "No one can argue about the objective harm resulting from a behavior like rape. Such harm arises from the absence of consent and the trauma that accompanies and follows from the act. Opponents of a human having sex with an animal use a similar standard. While what constitutes an animal's consent is difficult to define, people are well aware when an animal is non-consenting. Our research suggests that forcing sex on an unwilling animal is rare [...] "[Practitioners] appear to be extremely caring and concerned for their animal/s and people who know them would be hard put to claim abuse. Implicit in [creating legislation] is that sex with an animal in itself constitutes abuse. We believe that this merely reflects a negative attitude toward such a non-traditional form of sexuality. Disgust should not be a criterion for legislation; only objective evidence of harm should be, and there are sufficient laws against cruelty to animals to handle such cases [...] "Remember that less than half a century ago, all states but one criminalized homosexual acts because many people were uncomfortable with the idea of sexual behavior with members of the same sex. This destroyed the lives of many citizens."

[5] "'Understanding Zoophilia and Bestiality' - A Review" Vern L. Bullough, Ph.D., R.N., as published in the Journal of Sex Research, May 2003 issue, Volume 40, Number 2. Also viewable online at drmiletski[dot]com/bestiality.html.

[6] Hani Miletski, M.S.W., Ph.D, "Understanding Bestiality and Zoophilia", Bethesda, MD, 2002.

[7] Davenport, Clay, "PETA, HSUS, and ALF: The Real Story", retrieved from arbreptiles[dot]com/extremists.shtml, 21 March 2009.

Note: Please forgive the strange URL formatting but your email service does not allow full URL's to be listed.

~ Thomas Wallace
Zip Code: 99687

+----------+
DO NOT REPLY DIRECTLY TO THIS EMAIL: your reply will go to enews@housemajority.org To correspond with the author Hit 'Reply' or 'Forward'.
Then change the TO: address to t.wallace@hotmail.com If suspected Spam please forward to: support@housemajority.org
+----------+

HB 9

COMMITTEE DOCUMENTS

(FILE 1)

Alaska State Legislature

State Capitol, Room 208
Juneau, Alaska 99801-1182
Phone: 907-465-3779
Fax: 907-465-2833
Toll Free: 800-469-3779

145 Main St. Loop
Second Floor
Kenai, Alaska 99611
Phone: 907-283-7223
Fax: 907-283-7184

REPRESENTATIVE MIKE CHENAULT
SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE

SPONSOR STATEMENT

COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTE for HOUSE BILL 9 (LS0036\E)
An Act relating to murder; authorizing capital punishment, classifying murder in the first degree as a capital felony, and allowing the imposition of the death penalty for certain murders; establishing sentencing procedures for capital felonies; and amending Rules 32, 32.1, and 32.3, Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, and Rules 204, 209, 210, and 212, Alaska Rules of Appellate Procedure."

The impetus for HB 9 really comes from what I view as society's inability to reform or rehabilitate certain criminals. People who commit the most monstrous of crimes will not have the opportunity to reoffend if a death sentence is carried out. 36 states currently have a death penalty on their books, whether they use it or not, and while I don't believe it's a deterrent to crime, I believe it should be an option for the justice system to brandish against the most heinous unremorseful criminals in our society.

Alaska is currently awaiting the trial of a man previously accused of murder who is going on trial for the torture and brutal murder of another woman. Federal prosecutors are deciding whether he should face the death penalty. Many Alaskans believe he should. It is important to note that if this individual had not committed Federal crimes in connection with this case, he would be prosecuted by the state and under current law would not be eligible for the death penalty. But would his torture and murder of a woman be any less offensive?

The most common argument against the death penalty is that you might execute an innocent individual. Let me be perfectly clear in stating I believe that the death penalty should only be used in cases where there is no question of guilt or innocence. No one supports innocent people being put to death for crimes they did not commit. But technology continues to make it more difficult for criminals to hide their offenses and I've included safe guards in the legislation to help ensure that people are not wrongfully convicted and sentenced to death.

It is my hope that we can engage in a healthy dialogue about the death penalty. The Alaska Territorial Legislature abolished the death penalty in 1957. I believe it is time for us to reexamine the issue, discuss advancements made in the judicial system, and once again consider how we as a society can most effectively dispense justice. I want this legislation to give Alaskans the confidence that we have a system of justice they can rely on to handle the most heinous members of our society.

Representative_Mike_Chenault@legis.state.ak.us

ALASKA STATE LEGISLATURE
HOUSE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

Representative Jay Ramras
Chairman
(907) 465-3004
Fax: (907) 465-2070
Representative_Jay_Ramras@legis.state.ak.us
1292 Sadler Way, Suite 324
Fairbanks, AK 99701

Committee Members:
Representative Nancy Dahlstrom,
Vice-Chairman
Representative John Coghill
Representative Bob Lynn
Representative Carl Gatto
Representative Max Gruenberg
Representative Lindsey Holmes

State Capitol, Room 120
Juneau, Alaska 99801

Fax

To: Jerry Luckhaupt
Leg. Legal

Fax #: (907) 465-2029 Number of pages including cover: 7

From: Jane W. Pierson

Date: April 8, 2009

Re: Going Final on HB9

Today, the House Judiciary Committee passed out the CS for HB9 version 26-LS0036\E with the attached three amendments, please note that amendment #3 is as amended. Please make the amendments and go final.

Should you have any questions, please do not hesitate to give me a call.

Rs 1

26-LS0036\E.7
Luckhaupt
3.23.09

AMENDMENT #1

OFFERED IN THE HOUSE

TO: CSHB 9( ), Draft Version "E"

Page 15, line 11, following "fire fighter,":

Insert "emergency medical technician, paramedic, ambulance attendant," 310

Passed
L - V
G - N
H - N 4-2
C - Y
G - Y
R - Y

26-LS0036\E.6
Luckhaupt
3/23/09

Rep. Ramras

AMENDMENT #2

OFFERED IN THE HOUSE

TO: CSHB 9( ), Draft Version "E"

Page 1, line 4, following the first occurrence of "Rules":

Insert "16,"

Page 17, following line 29:

Insert new material to read:

"Sec. 12.58.070. Discovery. (a) Except as provided in (b) of this section, Rule 16, Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, applies to discovery in the penalty phase of a capital felony prosecution if the prosecution is seeking the death penalty.

(b) Thirty days before the guilt phase of a capital felony case is scheduled to begin, the prosecution and the defense shall provide to the opposing party a list of witnesses, other than expert witnesses, that the party is likely to call at the penalty phase if the defendant is found guilty of a charge that is the foundation for the death penalty. In addition to the witness lists, the parties shall include the witnesses' written or recorded statements, a summary of any other statements, and a summary of the testimony the witness will provide the court.

(c) Nothing in this section affects discovery related to expert witnesses under Rule 16, Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure."

Page 23, following line 1:

Insert a new subsection to read:

"(c) AS 12.58.070, added by sec. 21 of this Act, has the effect of modifying Rule 16, Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, by providing for the exchange of the names of witnesses, their written or recorded statements, and summaries of their testimony by the prosecution and defense for the penalty phase of a capital felony death penalty prosecution."

312

26-LS0036\E.3
Luckhaupt
3/18 09

AMENDMENT #3

OFFERED IN THE HOUSE BY REPRESENTATIVE RAMRAS

TO: CSHB 9( ), Draft Version "E"

Page 13, line 21, following "court.":

Insert "The attorney general may not elect to seek the death penalty under this section unless the state is prepared to present to the jury at trial

(1) biological evidence or deoxyribonucleic acid evidence that links the defendant to the act of murder;

(2) a videotaped voluntary confession by the defendant to the murder; or

(3) a video recording that conclusively links the defendant to the murder."

Page 14, line 13:

Delete "and"

Page 14, following line 13:

Insert a new paragraph to read:

"(3) that the state presented

(A) biological evidence or deoxyribonucleic acid evidence that links the defendant to the act of murder;

(B) a videotaped voluntary confession by the defendant to the murder; or

(C) a video recording that conclusively links the defendant to the murder;"

Renumber the following paragraph accordingly.

Page 14, line 29:

Delete "and"

Page 14, following line 29:

Insert a new paragraph to read:

"(3) that the state presented

(A) biological evidence or deoxyribonucleic acid evidence that links the defendant to the act of murder;

(B) a videotaped voluntary confession by the defendant to the murder; or

(C) a video recording that conclusively links the defendant to the murder;"

Renumber the following paragraph accordingly.

Amendment to SB 110
#3

From SB 110

(2) "biological evidence" means

(A) the contents of a sexual assault forensic examination kit;

(B) semen, blood, hair, saliva, skin tissue, fingernail scrapings, bone, bodily fluids, or other identifiable human bodily material, collected as part of a criminal investigation

Page 1

AMENDMENT TO AMEND #3

SECTIONAL ANALYSIS
COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTE for HOUSE BILL 9 (LS0036\E)

"An Act relating to murder; authorizing capital punishment, classifying murder in the first degree as a capital felony, and allowing the imposition of the death penalty for certain murders; establishing procedures for capital felonies; and amending Rules 32, 32.1, and 32.3, Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, and Rules 204, 209, 210, and 212, Alaska Rules of Appellate Procedure."

Section 1: Amends AS 05.15.105(b), Persons prohibited from involvement. Adds capital offense to the section prohibiting persons from becoming involved in games of skill and chance.

Section 2: Amends AS 05.15.140(b), Proof necessary to qualify for a permit. Adds capital offense to the section requiring a municipality or qualified organization to disclose the name and address of each person responsible for the operation of the activity and whether any person named has committed an offense as listed in subsection (b)(1).

Section 3: Amends AS 08.64.326(a), Grounds for imposition of disciplinary sanctions. Adds capital offense to the subsection where the Medical Board may impose a sanction if the board finds after a hearing that a licensee has committed a class A or unclassified felony.

Section 4: Amends AS 09.65.210, Damages resulting from commission of a felony or while under the influence of alcohol or drugs. Adds capital felony to the section prohibiting a person from recovering damages for a personal injury or death if the person was engaged in conduct that would constitute the commission of a capital, unclassified, class A or class B felonies.

Section 5: Amends AS 11.31.100(d), Attempt. Removes "other than murder in the first degree" from the attempt classifications under subsection (d) (2).

Section 6: Amends AS 11.31.110(c), Solicitation. Removes "other than murder in the first degree" from the solicitation classifications under subsection (e) (2).

Section 7: Amends AS 11.31.120(i), Conspiracy. Removes "other than murder in the first degree" from the conspiracy classifications under subsection (i) (2).

Section 8: Amends AS 11.31.120(h) (2), Conspiracy. Adds capital felony to the definition of serious felony offense in the conspiracy statutes as provided within the newly amended statute, AS 12.55.125(a), Sentences of imprisonment of felonies.

Section 9: Amends AS 11.41.100(b), Murder in the first degree. Defines murder in the first degree as a capital offense as it is provided under AS 12.55.125(a).

Section 10: Amends 12.30.020(a), Bail. Adds capital offense to the list of felonies for which bail may not be applicable unless certain conditions are met.

Section 11: Amends AS 12.30.040(b), Release after conviction. Adds capital offense to the provisions under which a person may not be release on bail before sentencing or pending appeal.

Section 12: Amends AS 12.47.110(b), Commitment on finding of incompetency. Adds capital felony to the list of charges for which a defendant may be charged again after a five-year period.

Section 13: Amends AS 12.50.101(i) (1), Immunity of witnesses. Adds capital offense to the list of "higher level" felonies.

Section 14: Amends AS 12.55.025(i), Sentencing procedures. Exempts imposing a sentence of death from the preponderance of evidence standard of proof as it applies to criminal proceedings.

Section 15: Amends AS 12.55.125(a), Sentences of imprisonment for felonies. Adds the death sentence to the sentencing considerations for murder in the first degree. Also removes the murder of an unborn child from the imposition of a death sentence, listing the parameters of sentencing and lists the possible sentence for one convicted of murder in the first degree and the circumstances that are to be considered upon sentencing.

Section 16: Amends AS 12.55.125(f), Sentences of imprisonment for felonies. Adds a sentence of death to the list of those sentences that may not be suspended.

Section 17: Amends AS 12.55.125(l), Sentences of imprisonment for felonies. Defines the length of sentence of 99 years for those convicted of a capital, unclassified or a class A felony offense when the defendant has been convicted of two or more serious felonies.

Section 18: Amends AS 12.55.145(a), Prior convictions. Adds capital offense to the exceptions for which a certain time period has elapsed when considering prior convictions upon sentencing.

Section 19: Amends AS 12.55.155(f), Factors in aggravation and mitigation. Clarifies that the aggravators listed within this section can only be considered under presumptive sentencing and not for capital punishment.

Section 20: Amends AS 12.55.185(10), Definitions. Adds capital felony to the definition of "most serious felony."

Section 21: Adds a new chapter, Chapter 58, to AS 12, Code of Criminal Procedure.

Article 1. Election to Seek Death Penalty.

Sec. 12.58.010. Prosecutor's election to seek death penalty. Outlines the procedure in which the attorney general can seek the death penalty and the district attorney giving notice and the applicable aggravating factor(s) to the court, the defendant and the defendant's attorney within 120 days of arraignment on the capital felony indictment or within 120 days of arraignment if the indictment has been waived.

Article 2. Imposition of Sentence.

Sec. 12.58.020, Sentencing procedure for a capital felony. If a defendant is convicted of a capital felony, the court conduct a separate sentencing proceeding before the jury to consider imposition of the death penalty. Aggravating or mitigating factors may be presented regardless of the admissibility of the evidence under the rules of evidence as long as this introduction of evidence does not violate the United States or State of Alaska constitutions.

After hearing the evidence, the jury will deliberate and recommend a sentence which includes a written finding of whether the jury agrees there is beyond a reasonable doubt at least one aggravating factor exists and that the aggravating factor(s) outweigh any mitigating factors found to exist by preponderance of the evidence and that death is the appropriate sentence for the defendant.

Sec. 12.58.030, Sentence imposition for capital felony. After hearing the evidence, the court may impose a sentence of death or term of imprisonment. A death sentence may be imposed if a jury finds that there is no reasonable doubt that at least one aggravating factor exists nor is the aggravating factor or factors outweighed by any mitigating factors and a death sentence has been recommended by the jury. If the court determines the defendant is mentally retarded under AS 12.58.060, a death sentence may not be imposed. When the court enters a death sentence, it is to state in writing the jury's findings of aggravating factors and mitigating factors considered but found insufficient to outweigh the aggravators. The death sentence is automatically subject to automatic review by the Supreme Court.

Sec. 12.58.040, Aggravating factors. Lists of aggravating factors that a jury may consider when determining whether a death sentence should be imposed.

Sec. 12.58.050, Mitigating factors. Lists of relevant mitigating factors to be considered when determining whether a death sentence should be imposed.

Sec. 12.58.060, Finding of mental retardation. If a death sentence is recommended, the court is to determine if the defendant was mentally retarded at the time the crime was committed. The procedure for a finding of mental retardation is outlined within this section.

Article 3. Sentence Review.

Sec. 12.58.100, Review of judgment of conviction of a capital offense. States that the Supreme Court shall review a death sentence within 60 days after imposition of the sentence. This time limit may be extended by the court for good cause. This review has priority over all other cases. This section outlines the review process that must be undertaken by the Supreme Court.

Sec. 12.58.110, Issuance of death warrant. If the Supreme Court upholds the conviction and sentence of death, it is to issue a death warrant and specific date of execution. The date of execution is to be no less than 30 days nor no more than 60 days after the date of the warrant. The death warrant is to delivered to the commissioner of Corrections.

Article 4. Administration of the Death Penalty.

Sec. 12.58.200, Administration of the death penalty. The procedure for the execution of a sentence of death will be established by the commissioner of Corrections (commissioner).

Sec. 12.58.210, Execution under Supreme Court death warrant. After receiving the death warrant from the Supreme Court, the commissioner will specify the time and place of execution.

Sec. 12.58.220, Manner of execution. The punishment of death is to be inflicted by a lethal dose of a substance or substances until death is pronounced by a licensed physician and is to be carried out within a state correctional facility.

Sec. 12.58.230, Return of death warrant. The commissioner is to return the death warrant to the Supreme Court showing the time and place in which the defendant was executed.

Article 5. Stay of Execution.

Sec. 12.58,300, Incompetency or pregnancy of person sentenced to death. If after the death sentence is imposed and the commissioner has reason to believe the defendant is incompetent to proceed with the execution or the defendant is pregnant, written notice is to be given immediately to the court in which the death sentence was imposed, the prosecuting attorney and the counsel for the defendant. The execution will be stayed pending further order of the court.

Sec. 12.58.310, Examination into competency. Upon receiving receipt of notice, the sentencing court is to examine the mental condition of the defendant in the same manner as prescribed under AS 12.47.070. If the defendant is found to be incompetent, the court is to certify that finding to the Supreme Court and the commissioner and sentence the defendant under AS 12.55.125(a) and enter an order for confinement. If the defendant is found to be competent, that finding will be certified and and sent immediately to the Supreme Court and the commissioner. The Supreme Court is then required to issue another death warrant specifying a date of execution unless the finding is appealed.

Sec. 12.58.320, Disposition pending pregnancy. If the defendant is pregnant, the sentencing court is to certify that finding to the Supreme Court and the commissioner and also issue an order staying the execution during the pregnancy. Upon the completion of the pregnancy, the sentencing court is to immediately certify that finding to the Supreme Court and the commissioner. Another death warrant is issued by the Supreme Court specifying the date of execution.

Article 6. General Provisions.

Sec. 12. 58.900, Definitions. Defines commissioner and department as it applies to Chapter 12.58.

Section 22: Amends AS 22.07.020(a), Jurisdiction. Excludes prosecution for a capital felony for which a death sentence is imposed from the Court of Appeals jurisdiction.

Section 23: Amends AS 22.07.020(a), Jurisdiction. Excludes appeals of a death sentence from the Court of Appeals jurisdiction.

Section 24: Amends AS 47.12.030(a), Provisions inapplicable (Welfare, Social Services and Institutions chapter). Includes capital felony as one of the charges for which a 16-year old may be tried.

Section 25: Amends AS 47.12.100(c), Waiver of jurisdiction. Incorporates capital felony into the provisions that a minor is or is not amendable to treatment.

Section 26: Indirect Court Rule Amendments. AS 12.58 has the effect of modifying the sentencing provisions of Rules 32 (Sentence and Judgment), 32.1 (Presentence Procedure for Felony Sentencing) and 32.3 (Judgments and Orders), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure. AS 12.58 also has the effect of amending Rules 204 (Appeal: Time--Notice—Bonds), 209 (Appeals at Public Expense), 210 (Record on Appeal) and 212 (Briefs), Alaska Rules of Appellate Procedure.

Section 27: EXCESSIVE REVIEW, added by Section 21 of the bill. Provides that the Supreme Court will review whether a sentence of death is excessive compared to penalties imposed in similar cases. A sentence of death may not be found to be excessive when compared to similar cases based on the fact that a sentence of death had not been previously authorized as a penalty for murder in the state.

26-LS0036\E
Luckhaupt
2/18/09

CS FOR HOUSE BILL NO. 9( )

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

TWENTY-SIXTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

BY

Offered:
Referred:

Sponsor(s): REPRESENTATIVES CHENAULT, Ramras

A BILL

FOR AN ACT ENTITLED

"An Act relating to murder; authorizing capital punishment, classifying murder in the first degree as a capital felony, and allowing the imposition of the death penalty for certain murders; establishing sentencing procedures for capital felonies; and amending Rules 32, 32.1, and 32.3, Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, and Rules 204, 209, 210, and 212, Alaska Rules of Appellate Procedure."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

 Section 1. AS 05.15.105(b) is amended to read:

(b) The department shall adopt regulations that provide that a disqualification of a person under (a) of this section based upon a conviction of that person for a violation

(1) of a law of this state that is, or a law or ordinance of another jurisdiction that would be if it was committed in this state, a class B felony other than extortion, a class C felony, or an unclassified felony described outside of AS 11, and that is not a crime of dishonesty or theft or a violation of gambling laws, terminates 10 years after the person's conviction;

(2) of a law or ordinance of this state or another jurisdiction that is a crime involving theft or dishonesty or a violation of gambling laws, and that is not, or would not be if it was committed in this state, a capital or an unclassified felony described in AS 11, a class A felony, or extortion, terminates 10 years after the person's conviction, if the department determines that the

(A) person is of good character, honesty, and integrity; and

(B) person's involvement in charitable gaming is not against the public interest.

 Sec. 2. AS 05.15.140(b) is amended to read:

(b) In an application for a permit, a municipality or qualified organization shall disclose the name and address of each person responsible for the operation of the activity and whether any person named

(1) has been convicted of a violation of a law of this state that is, or a law or ordinance of another state that would be if committed in this state, a capital or [AN] unclassified felony described in AS 11, a class A felony, extortion, or a violation of a law or ordinance of this state or another jurisdiction that is a crime involving theft or dishonesty or a violation of gambling laws; or

(2) has a prohibited financial interest, as defined in regulations adopted by the department, in the operation of the activity.

 Sec. 3. AS 08.64.326(a) is amended to read:

(a) The board may impose a sanction if the board finds after a hearing that a licensee

(1) secured a license through deceit, fraud, or intentional misrepresentation;

(2) engaged in deceit, fraud, or intentional misrepresentation while providing professional services or engaging in professional activities;

(3) advertised professional services in a false or misleading manner;

(4) has been convicted, including conviction based on a guilty plea or plea of nolo contendere, of

(A) a class A, capital, or unclassified felony or a crime in another jurisdiction with elements similar to a class A, capital, or unclassified felony in this jurisdiction;

(B) a class B or class C felony or a crime in another jurisdiction with elements similar to a class B or class C felony in this jurisdiction if the felony or other crime is substantially related to the qualifications, functions, or duties of the licensee; or

(C) a crime involving the unlawful procurement, sale, prescription, or dispensing of drugs;

(5) has procured, sold, prescribed, or dispensed drugs in violation of a law regardless of whether there has been a criminal action;

(6) intentionally or negligently permitted the performance of patient care by persons under the licensee's supervision that does not conform to minimum professional standards even if the patient was not injured;

(7) failed to comply with this chapter, a regulation adopted under this chapter, or an order of the board;

(8) has demonstrated

(A) professional incompetence, gross negligence, or repeated negligent conduct; the board may not base a finding of professional incompetence solely on the basis that a licensee's practice is unconventional or experimental in the absence of demonstrable physical harm to a patient;

(B) addiction to, severe dependency on, or habitual overuse of alcohol or other drugs that impairs the licensee's ability to practice safely;

(C) unfitness because of physical or mental disability;

(9) engaged in unprofessional conduct, in sexual misconduct, or in lewd or immoral conduct in connection with the delivery of professional services to patients; in this paragraph, "sexual misconduct" includes sexual contact, as defined by the board in regulations adopted under this chapter, or attempted sexual contact with a patient outside the scope of generally accepted methods of examination or treatment of the patient, regardless of the patient's consent or lack of consent, during the term of the physician-patient relationship, as defined by the board in regulations adopted under this chapter, unless the patient was the licensee's spouse at the time of the contact or, immediately preceding the physician-patient relationship, was in a dating, courtship, or engagement relationship with the licensee;

(10) has violated AS 18.16.010;

(11) has violated any code of ethics adopted by regulation by the board;

(12) has denied care or treatment to a patient or person seeking assistance from the physician if the only reason for the denial is the failure or refusal of the patient to agree to arbitrate as provided in AS 09.55.535(a); or

(13) has had a license or certificate to practice medicine in another state or territory of the United States, or a province or territory of Canada, denied, suspended, revoked, surrendered while under investigation for an alleged violation, restricted, limited, conditioned, or placed on probation unless the denial, suspension, revocation, or other action was caused by the failure of the licensee to pay fees to that state, territory, or province.

 Sec. 4. AS 09.65.210 is amended to read:

Sec. 09.65.210. Damages resulting from commission of a felony or while under the influence of alcohol or drugs. A person who suffers personal injury or death or the person's personal representative under AS 09.55.570 or 09.55.580 may not recover damages for the personal injury or death if the injury or death occurred while the person was

(1) engaged in the commission of a felony, the person has been convicted of the felony, including conviction based on a guilty plea or plea of nolo contendere, and the party defending against the claim proves by clear and convincing evidence that the felony substantially contributed to the personal injury or death;

(2) engaged in conduct that would constitute the commission of a capital felony, an unclassified felony, a class A felony, or a class B felony for which the person was not convicted and the party defending against the claim proves by clear and convincing evidence

(A) the felonious conduct; and

(B) that the felonious conduct substantially contributed to the personal injury or death;

(3) fleeing after the commission, by that person, of conduct that would constitute a capital felony, an unclassified felony, a class A felony, or a class B felony or being apprehended for conduct that would constitute a capital felony, an unclassified felony, a class A felony, or a class B felony if the party defending against the claim proves by clear and convincing evidence

(A) the felonious conduct; and

(B) that the conduct during the flight or apprehension substantially contributed to the injury or death;

(4) operating a vehicle, aircraft, or watercraft while under the influence of intoxicating liquor or any controlled substance in violation of AS 28.35.030, was convicted, including conviction based on a guilty plea or plea of nolo contendere, and the party defending against the claim proves by clear and convincing evidence that the conduct substantially contributed to the personal injury or death; or

(5) engaged in conduct that would constitute a violation of AS 28.35.030 for which the person was not convicted if the party defending against the claim proves by clear and convincing evidence

(A) the violation of AS 28.35.030; and

(B) that the conduct substantially contributed to the personal injury or death.

 Sec. 5. AS 11.31.100(d) is amended to read:

(d) An attempt is

(1) an unclassified felony if the crime attempted is murder in the first degree;

(2) a class A felony if the crime attempted is an unclassified felony [OTHER THAN MURDER IN THE FIRST DEGREE];

(3) a class B felony if the crime attempted is a class A felony;

(4) a class C felony if the crime attempted is a class B felony;

(5) a class A misdemeanor if the crime attempted is a class C felony;

(6) a class B misdemeanor if the crime attempted is a class A or class B misdemeanor.

 Sec. 6. AS 11.31.110(c) is amended to read:

(c) Solicitation is

(1) an unclassified felony if the crime solicited is murder in the first degree;

(2) a class A felony if the crime solicited is an unclassified felony [OTHER THAN MURDER IN THE FIRST DEGREE];

(3) a class B felony if the crime solicited is a class A felony;

(4) a class C felony if the crime solicited is a class B felony;

(5) a class A misdemeanor if the crime solicited is a class C felony;

(6) a class B misdemeanor if the crime solicited is a class A or class B misdemeanor.

 Sec. 7. AS 11.31.120(i) is amended to read:

(i) Conspiracy is

(1) an unclassified felony if the object of the conspiracy is murder in the first degree;

(2) a class A felony if the object of the conspiracy is a crime punishable as an unclassified felony [OTHER THAN MURDER IN THE FIRST DEGREE];

(3) a class B felony if the object of the conspiracy is a crime punishable as a class A felony;

(4) a class C felony if the object of the conspiracy is a crime punishable as a class B felony.

 Sec. 8. AS 11.31.120(h)(2) is amended to read:

(2) "serious felony offense" means an offense

(A) against the person under AS 11.41, punishable as a capital, an unclassified, or a class A felony;

(B) involving controlled substances under AS 11.71, punishable as an unclassified, a class A, or a class B felony;

(C) that is criminal mischief in the first degree under AS 11.46.475; or

(D) that is terroristic threatening in the first degree under

AS 11.56.807.

 Sec. 9. AS 11.41.100(b) is amended to read:

(b) Murder in the first degree is a capital [AN UNCLASSIFIED] felony and is punishable as provided in AS 12.55.125(a) [AS 12.55].

 Sec. 10. AS 12.30.020(a) is amended to read:

(a) A person charged with an offense shall, at that person's first appearance before a judicial officer, be ordered released pending trial on the person's personal recognizance or upon the execution of an unsecured appearance bond in an amount specified by the judicial officer unless the offense is a capital felony, an unclassified felony, or a class A felony or unless the officer determines that the release of the person will not reasonably assure the appearance of the person as required or will pose a danger to the alleged victim, other persons, or the community. If the offense with which a person is charged is a felony, on motion of the prosecuting attorney, the judicial officer may allow the prosecuting attorney up to 48 hours to demonstrate that release of the person on the person's personal recognizance or upon the execution of an unsecured appearance bond will not reasonably assure the appearance of the person or will pose a danger to the alleged victim, other persons, or the community.

 Sec. 11. AS 12.30.040(b) is amended to read:

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of (a) of this section, a person may not be released on bail either before sentencing or pending appeal if the person has been convicted of an offense that is

(1) a capital felony, an unclassified felony, or a class A felony; or

(2) a class B or class C felony if the person has been previously convicted of an offense in this state that is a capital felony, an unclassified felony, a class A felony, or a violation of AS 11.41.260, 11.41.420 - 11.41.425, or 11.41.436 - 11.41.438 or of an offense in another jurisdiction with elements substantially similar to an offense of this state described in this paragraph.

 Sec. 12. AS 12.47.110(b) is amended to read:

(b) On or before the expiration of the initial 90-day period of commitment, the court shall conduct a hearing to determine whether or not the defendant remains incompetent. If the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant remains incompetent, the court may recommit the defendant for a second period of 90 days. The court shall determine at the expiration of the second 90-day period whether the defendant has become competent. If, at the expiration of the second 90-day period, the court determines that the defendant continues to be incompetent to stand trial, the charges against the defendant shall be dismissed without prejudice, and continued commitment of the defendant shall be governed by the provisions relating to civil commitments under AS 47.30.700 - 47.30.915 unless the defendant is charged with a crime involving force against a person and the court finds that the defendant presents a substantial danger of physical injury to other persons and that there is a substantial probability that the defendant will regain competency within a reasonable period of time, in which case the court may extend the period of commitment for an additional six months. If the defendant remains incompetent at the expiration of the additional six-month period, the charges shall be dismissed without prejudice, and continued commitment proceedings shall be governed by the provisions relating to civil commitment under AS 47.30.700 - 47.30.915. If the defendant remains incompetent for five years after the charges have been dismissed under this subsection, the defendant may not be charged again for an offense arising out of the facts alleged in the original charges, except if the original charge is a class A felony, an [OR] unclassified felony, or a capital felony.

 Sec. 13. AS 12.50.101(i)(1) is amended to read:

(1) "higher-level felony" means an unclassified, capital, or class A felony;

 Sec. 14. AS 12.55.025(i) is amended to read:

(i) Except as provided by AS 12.55.125(a)(3), 12.55.145(d), 12.55.155(f), and 12.55.165, or in determining if a sentence of death should be imposed under AS 12.58, the preponderance of the evidence standard of proof applies to sentencing proceedings.

 Sec. 15. AS 12.55.125(a) is amended to read:

(a) A defendant convicted of murder in the first degree [OR MURDER OF AN UNBORN CHILD UNDER AS 11.41.150(a)(1)] shall be sentenced to a definite term of imprisonment of at least 20 years but not more than 99 years, or shall be sentenced to death. A defendant convicted of murder of an unborn child under AS 11.41.150(a)(1) shall be sentenced to a definite term of imprisonment of at least 20 years but not more than 99 years. A defendant convicted of murder in the first degree, but not sentenced to death, shall be sentenced to a mandatory term of imprisonment of 99 years when

(1) the defendant is convicted of the murder of a uniformed or otherwise clearly identified peace officer, fire fighter, or correctional employee who was engaged in the performance of official duties at the time of the murder;

(2) the defendant has been previously convicted of

(A) murder in the first degree under AS 11.41.100 or former AS 11.15.010 or 11.15.020;

(B) murder in the second degree under AS 11.41.110 or former AS 11.15.030; or

(C) homicide under the laws of another jurisdiction when the offense of which the defendant was convicted contains elements similar to first degree murder under AS 11.41.100 or second degree murder under AS 11.41.110;

(3) the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant subjected the murder victim to substantial physical torture;

(4) the defendant is convicted of the murder of and personally caused the death of a person, other than a participant, during a robbery; or

(5) the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant is a peace officer who used the officer's authority as a peace officer to facilitate the murder.

 Sec. 16. AS 12.55.125(f) is amended to read:

(f) If a defendant is sentenced under (a) or (b) of this section,

(1) imprisonment for the prescribed minimum or mandatory term may not be suspended under AS 12.55.080;

(2) imposition of sentence may not be suspended under AS 12.55.085;

(3) imprisonment for the prescribed minimum or mandatory term may not be reduced, except as provided in (j) of this section;

(4) a sentence of death may not be suspended under AS 12.55.080.

 Sec. 17. AS 12.55.125(l) is amended to read:

(l) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a defendant convicted of a capital, an unclassified, or a class A felony offense, and not sentenced to death or subject to a mandatory 99-year sentence under (a) of this section, shall be sentenced to a definite term of imprisonment of 99 years when the defendant has been previously convicted of two or more most serious felonies. If a defendant is sentenced to a definite term under this subsection,

(1) imprisonment for the prescribed definite term may not be suspended under AS 12.55.080;

(2) imposition of sentence may not be suspended under AS 12.55.085;

(3) imprisonment for the prescribed definite term may not be reduced, except as provided in (j) of this section.

 Sec. 18. AS 12.55.145(a) is amended to read:

(a) For purposes of considering prior convictions in imposing sentence under

(1) AS 12.55.125(c), (d), or (e),

(A) a prior conviction may not be considered if a period of 10 or more years has elapsed between the date of the defendant's unconditional discharge on the immediately preceding offense and commission of the present offense unless the prior conviction was for a capital, an unclassified, or a class A felony;

(B) a conviction in this or another jurisdiction of an offense having elements similar to those of a felony defined as such under Alaska law at the time the offense was committed is considered a prior felony conviction;

(C) two or more convictions arising out of a single, continuous criminal episode during which there was no substantial change in the nature of the criminal objective are considered a single conviction unless the defendant was sentenced to consecutive sentences for the crimes; offenses committed while attempting to escape or avoid detection or apprehension after the commission of another offense are not part of the same criminal episode or objective;

(2) AS 12.55.125(l),

(A) a conviction in this or another jurisdiction of an offense having elements similar to those of a most serious felony is considered a prior most serious felony conviction;

(B) commission of and conviction for offenses relied on as prior most serious felony offenses must occur in the following order: conviction for the first offense must occur before commission of the second offense, and conviction for the second offense must occur before commission of the offense for which the defendant is being sentenced;

(3) AS 12.55.135(g),

(A) a prior conviction may not be considered if a period of five or more years has elapsed between the date of the defendant's unconditional discharge on the immediately preceding offense and commission of the present offense unless the prior conviction was for a capital, an unclassified, or a class A felony;

(B) a conviction in this or another jurisdiction of an offense having elements similar to those of a crime against a person or a crime involving domestic violence is considered a prior conviction;

(C) two or more convictions arising out of a single, continuous criminal episode during which there was no substantial change in the nature of the criminal objective are considered a single conviction unless the defendant was sentenced to consecutive sentences for the crimes; offenses committed while attempting to escape or avoid detection or apprehension after the commission of another offense are not part of the same criminal episode or objective;

(4) AS 12.55.125(i),

(A) a conviction in this or another jurisdiction of an offense having elements similar to those of a sexual felony is a prior conviction for a sexual felony;

(B) a felony conviction in another jurisdiction making it a crime to commit any lewd and lascivious act upon a child under the age of 16 years, with the intent of arousing, appealing to, or gratifying the sexual desires of the defendant or the victim is a prior conviction for a sexual felony;

(C) two or more convictions arising out of a single, continuous criminal episode during which there was no substantial change in the nature of the criminal objective are considered a single conviction unless the defendant was sentenced to consecutive sentences for the crimes; offenses committed while attempting to escape or avoid detection or apprehension after the commission of another offense are not part of the same criminal episode or objective.

 Sec. 19. AS 12.55.155(f) is amended to read:

(f) Under this section, if [IF] the state seeks to establish a factor in aggravation at sentencing

(1) under (c)(7), (8), (12), (15), (18)(B), (19), (20), (21), or (31) of this section, or if the defendant seeks to establish a factor in mitigation at sentencing, written notice must be served on the opposing party and filed with the court not later than 10 days before the date set for imposition of sentence; the factors in aggravation listed in this paragraph and factors in mitigation must be established by clear and convincing evidence before the court sitting without a jury; all findings must be set out with specificity;

(2) other than one listed in (1) of this subsection, the factor shall be presented to a trial jury under procedures set by the court, unless the defendant waives trail by jury, stipulates to the existence of the factor, or consents to have the factor proven under procedures set out in (1) of this subsection; a factor in aggravation presented to a jury is established if proved beyond a reasonable doubt; written notice of the intent to establish a factor in aggravation must be served on the defendant and filed with the court

(A) 20 days before trial, or at another time specified by the court;

(B) within 48 hours, or at a time specified by the court, if the court instructs the jury about the option to return a verdict for a lesser included offense; or

(C) five days before entering a plea that results in a finding of guilt, or at another time specified by the court.

 Sec. 20. AS 12.55.185(10) is amended to read:

(10) "most serious felony" means

(A) arson in the first degree, promoting prostitution in the first degree under AS 11.66.110(a)(2), or any capital, unclassified, or class A felony prescribed under AS 11.41; or

(B) an attempt, or conspiracy to commit, or criminal solicitation under AS 11.31.110 of, a capital or an unclassified felony prescribed under AS 11.41;

 Sec. 21. AS 12 is amended by adding a new chapter to read:

Chapter 58. Capital Punishment.

Article 1. Election to Seek Death Penalty.

Sec. 12.58.010. Attorney General's election to seek death penalty. The attorney general shall determine whether to seek the death penalty against the defendant. If the attorney general elects to seek the death penalty, the district attorney shall give notice of election and the applicable aggravating factor or factors in AS 12.58.040 to the court, the defendant, and the defendant's attorney within 120 days of arraignment of the defendant on the capital felony indictment, or within 120 days of arraignment of the defendant if indictment has been waived. The time period for giving notice of election may be extended by the court.

Article 2. Imposition of Sentence.

Sec. 12.58.020. Sentencing procedure for a capital felony. (a) If a defendant is convicted of a capital felony, the court shall conduct a separate sentencing proceeding before the jury as soon as practicable. If a jury trial has been waived or if the defendant has pled guilty, the sentencing proceeding shall be held before a jury impaneled for the purpose.

(b) During the sentencing proceeding, evidence that the court considers to have probative value may be presented as to any aggravating factor under AS 12.58.040 or any mitigating factor, regardless of the admissibility of the evidence under the rules of evidence. The defendant shall have an opportunity to rebut hearsay evidence that is admitted. The state and the defendant or the defendant's counsel shall be permitted to present oral statements. This subsection does not authorize the introduction of evidence in violation of the Constitution of the State of Alaska or the Constitution of the United States.

(c) After hearing the evidence, the jury shall deliberate and recommend a sentence to the court. The recommended sentence must include written findings of whether the jury unanimously finds

(1) beyond a reasonable doubt that at least one aggravating factor under AS 12.58.040 exists to justify the death sentence and the aggravating factor was noticed by the district attorney under AS 12.58.010; the jury does not have to unanimously agree with regard to a specific aggravating factor;

(2) beyond a reasonable doubt that the aggravating factor or factors outweigh any mitigating factors found to exist by a preponderance of the evidence; and

(3) that death is the appropriate sentence for the defendant.

Sec. 12.58.030. Sentence imposition for capital felony. (a) After considering the evidence and the recommended sentence, the court shall enter a sentence of death or a term of imprisonment in accordance with AS 12.55.125(a). The court may not impose the death sentence unless the jury makes the findings required by AS 12.58.020. If the jury makes the findings required by AS 12.58.020, the court shall sentence the defendant to death unless the court finds the defendant was mentally retarded under AS 12.58.060. If a sentence of death is not recommended by the jury, the court shall sentence the defendant to a term of imprisonment under AS 12.55.125(a).

(b) When the court enters a sentence of death, it shall state in writing the jury's findings

(1) of the aggravating factor or factors that exist to justify the sentence;

(2) of mitigating factors considered but found insufficient to outweigh the aggravating factors; and

(3) that death is the appropriate sentence for the defendant.

(c) A judgment of conviction for which a sentence of death is imposed is subject to automatic review under AS 12.58.100.

Sec. 12.58.040. Aggravating factors. In determining whether to impose a sentence of death, the following aggravating factors may be considered:

(1) the defendant's conduct caused the death of a child under 18 years of age, the defendant, at the time of the offense, was at least two years older than the child, and the defendant

(A) was kidnapping, assaulting, or sexually assaulting, or was attempting to kidnap, assault, or sexually assault, the child; or

(B) had kidnapped, assaulted, or sexually assaulted the child;

(2) the victim was a uniformed or otherwise clearly identified peace officer, fire fighter, or corrections employee who was engaged in the performance of official duties at the time of the murder;

(3) the defendant has been convicted of murdering two or more individuals under AS 11.41.100, or a similar law of this or another jurisdiction, regardless of whether the deaths occurred as the result of the same act or of several related or unrelated acts;

(4) at the time of the act resulting in the death, the defendant was serving a term of imprisonment, had escaped, or was on authorized or unauthorized leave in or from a state facility or program for the incarceration or treatment of persons adjudicated guilty of crimes;

(5) the defendant committed the murder under an agreement to receive money or any other thing of value for committing the murder;

(6) the defendant solicited another person to commit the murder and had paid or had agreed to pay money or any other thing of value for the other person's committing the murder;

(7) the defendant committed the murder to obtain or maintain the defendant's membership or to advance the defendant's position in the hierarchy of an organization, association, or identifiable group;

(8) the victim was a judge, juror or former juror, prospective, current, or former witness in an adjudicative proceeding, prosecuting attorney, deputy prosecuting attorney, defense attorney, member of the board of parole, or probation or parole officer, and the murder was related to the exercise of official duties performed or to be performed by the victim;

(9) the defendant committed the murder to conceal the commission of a crime or to protect or conceal the identity of any person committing a crime;

(10) there was more than one victim and the murders were part of a common scheme or plan or the result of a single act of the defendant;

(11) at the time the defendant committed the murder, there existed a court order, issued in this or any other state, that prohibited the defendant from contacting the victim, molesting the victim, or disturbing the peace of the victim, and the defendant had knowledge of the existence of that order.

Sec. 12.58.050. Mitigating factors. In determining whether to impose the death sentence, all relevant mitigating factors may be considered, including the following:

(1) the defendant committed the offense under a degree of duress, coercion, threat, or compulsion that was insufficient to constitute a defense but that significantly affected the defendant's conduct;

(2) the conduct of a youthful defendant was substantially influenced by a person more mature than the defendant;

(3) the defendant acted with serious provocation from the victim;

(4) the defendant assisted authorities to detect or apprehend other persons who committed the offense with the defendant;

(5) the defendant did not have a significant history, either as a juvenile or an adult, of prior criminal activity;

(6) the murder was committed while the defendant was under the influence of extreme mental disturbance;

(7) the victim consented to the act of murder;

(8) the defendant was an accomplice to a murder committed by another person where the defendant's participation in the murder was relatively minor;

(9) the capacity of the defendant to appreciate the wrongfulness of the defendant's conduct or to conform the defendant's conduct to the requirements of law was substantially impaired as a result of mental disease or defect; however, a person found to be mentally retarded under AS 12.58.060 may not be sentenced to death;

(10) there is not a likelihood that the defendant will pose a danger to others in the future.

Sec. 12.58.060. Finding of mental retardation. If the jury recommends a sentence of death, the court shall determine if the defendant was mentally retarded under the definition of mental retardation in this section at the time the crime was committed. A diagnosis of mental retardation shall be documented by a licensed psychiatrist or licensed psychologist designated by the court who is an expert in the diagnosis and evaluation of mental retardation. The defense shall establish mental retardation by a preponderance of the evidence, and the court shall make a finding as to the existence of mental retardation. If the court makes the finding of mental retardation, the court shall proceed to sentence the defendant to a term of imprisonment under AS 12.55.125(a). In this section,

(1) "adaptive behavior" means the effectiveness or degree with which an individual meets the standards of personal independence and social responsibility expected for the individual's age;

(2) "developmental period" means the period of time between conception and the 18th birthday;

(3) "general intellectual functioning" means the results obtained by assessment with one or more of the individually administered general intelligence tests developed for the purpose of assessing intellectual functioning;

(4) "mentally retarded" means the individual has

(A) significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning that exists concurrently with deficits in adaptive behavior; and

(B) both significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning and deficits in adaptive behavior that were manifested during the developmental period;

(5) "significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning" means an intelligence quotient of 70 or below.

Article 3. Sentence Review.

Sec. 12.58.100. Review of judgment of conviction of a capital felony. (a) A judgment of conviction of a capital felony for which a sentence of death is imposed shall automatically be reviewed by the supreme court within 60 days after imposition of the sentence. This time limit may be extended by the supreme court for good cause.

(b) A review under this section has priority over all other cases, and the case shall be heard in accordance with rules adopted by the supreme court. On review, the court shall determine

(1) whether the sentence was imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or other arbitrary factor;

(2) whether the evidence supports the finding of an aggravating factor under AS 12.58.040 and whether the jury has properly considered mitigating factors under AS 12.58.050;

(3) whether the sentence is excessive compared to the penalty imposed in similar cases, considering both the crime and the defendant; and

(4) any other issue that the defendant may raise as a point on appeal.

(c) In its consideration of an automatic appeal under (a) and (b) of this section, the supreme court

(1) may not require the defendant to file a notice of appeal unless the defendant raises an issue as a point on appeal under (b)(4) of this section;

(2) may not require the defendant to pay a fee;

(3) shall designate the entire record of the proceedings before the sentencing court as the record on appeal;

(4) shall prepare the transcript of the proceedings for the record on appeal at public expense; and

(5) may not require the defendant to submit and file a brief unless the defendant raises an issue as a point on appeal under (b)(4) of this section.

Sec. 12.58.110. Issuance of death warrant. If the supreme court upholds a judgment of conviction and sentence of death, the court shall issue a death warrant that specifies a date of execution. The specified date of execution must be not less than 30 days nor more than 60 days after the date of the warrant. The death warrant shall be delivered to the commissioner of corrections.

Article 4. Administration of the Death Penalty.

Sec. 12.58.200. Administration of the death penalty. The commissioner shall establish a procedure for the execution of a sentence of death ordered by the state supreme court at the time and place legally appointed.

Sec. 12.58.210. Execution under supreme court death warrant. After receiving a supreme court warrant issued under AS 12.58.110, the commissioner shall specify the time and place of execution.

Sec. 12.58.220. Manner of execution. (a) The punishment of death shall be inflicted by continuous, intravenous administration of a lethal dose of a substance or substances until death is pronounced by a licensed physician.

(b) A death sentence shall be carried out within a state correctional facility.

Sec. 12.58.230. Return of death warrant. After the execution, the commissioner shall make a return upon the death warrant showing the time and place in which the defendant was executed.

Article 5. Stay of Execution.

Sec. 12.58.300. Incompetency or pregnancy of person sentenced to death. If, after a sentence of death is imposed, the commissioner has reason to believe that the defendant has become incompetent to proceed with the execution or that the defendant is pregnant, the commissioner shall immediately give written notice to the court in which the sentence of death was imposed, the prosecuting attorney, and counsel for the defendant. The execution of sentence shall be stayed pending further order of the court.

Sec. 12.58.310. Examination into competency. (a) On receipt of notice under AS 12.58.300 that the defendant is believed to be incompetent, the sentencing court shall examine the mental condition of the defendant in the same manner as provided for examining persons for competency to stand trial under AS 12.47.070.

(b) If the sentencing court finds that the defendant is incompetent, the court shall immediately certify that finding to the supreme court and the commissioner, shall sentence the defendant under AS 12.55.125(a), and shall order the defendant confined in the same manner as provided for persons under AS 12.47.050.

(c) If the sentencing court finds that the defendant is competent, the court shall immediately certify the finding to the supreme court and the commissioner. The supreme court shall issue and deliver another warrant to the commissioner under AS 12.58.110, together with a copy of the certified finding. Unless the sentencing court's finding is appealed in accordance with applicable court rule, the warrant shall specify a date of execution that is not less than 30 days nor more than 60 days after the date of the warrant.

Sec. 12.58.320. Disposition pending pregnancy. (a) If the defendant is pregnant, the sentencing court shall immediately certify that finding to the supreme court and the commissioner. The supreme court shall issue an order staying the execution of the sentence of death during the pregnancy.

(b) When the defendant is no longer pregnant, the sentencing court shall immediately certify the finding to the supreme court and the commissioner. The supreme court shall issue and deliver another warrant under AS 12.58.110, together with a copy of the certified finding. Unless the sentencing court's finding is appealed under applicable court rule, the warrant shall specify a date of execution not less than 30 days nor more than 60 days after the date of the warrant.

Article 6. General Provisions.

Sec. 12.58.900. Definitions. In this chapter,

(1) "commissioner" means the commissioner of corrections;

(2) "department" means the Department of Corrections.

 Sec. 22. AS 22.07.020(a) is amended to read:

(a) The court of appeals has appellate jurisdiction in actions and proceedings commenced in the superior court involving

(1) criminal prosecution, except prosecution for a capital felony for which a death sentence is imposed;

(2) post-conviction relief;

(3) matters under AS 47.12, including waiver of jurisdiction over a minor under AS 47.12.100;

(4) extradition;

(5) habeas corpus;

(6) probation and parole; and

(7) bail.

* Sec. 23. AS 22.07.020(b) is amended to read:

(b) Except as limited in AS 12.55.120 and in this subsection, the court of appeals has jurisdiction to hear appeals of unsuspended sentences of imprisonment exceeding two years for a felony offense or 120 days for a misdemeanor offense imposed by the superior court on the grounds that the sentence is excessive, or a sentence of any length on the grounds that it is too lenient. The court of appeals, in the exercise of this jurisdiction, may modify the sentence as provided by law and the state constitution. The court of appeals does not have jurisdiction to hear appeals of death sentences.

* Sec. 24. AS 47.12.030(a) is amended to read:

(a) When a minor who was at least 16 years of age at the time of the offense is charged by complaint, information, or indictment with an offense specified in this subsection, this chapter and the Alaska Delinquency Rules do not apply to the offense for which the minor is charged or to any additional offenses joinable to it under the applicable rules of court governing criminal procedure. The minor shall be charged, held, released on bail, prosecuted, sentenced, and incarcerated in the same manner as an adult. If the minor is convicted of an offense other than an offense specified in this subsection, the minor may attempt to prove, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the minor is amenable to treatment under this chapter. If the court finds that the minor is amenable to treatment under this chapter, the minor shall be treated as though the charges had been heard under this chapter, and the court shall order disposition of the charges of which the minor is convicted under AS 47.12.120(b). The provisions of this subsection apply when the minor is charged by complaint, information, or indictment with an offense

(1) that is a capital felony, an unclassified felony, or a class A felony and the felony is a crime against a person;

(2) of arson in the first degree;

(3) that is a class B felony and the felony is a crime against a person in which the minor is alleged to have used a deadly weapon in the commission of the offense and the minor was previously adjudicated as a delinquent or convicted as an adult, in this or another jurisdiction, as a result of an offense that involved use of a deadly weapon in the commission of a crime against a person or an offense in another jurisdiction having elements substantially identical to those of a crime against a person, and the previous offense was punishable as a felony; in this paragraph, "deadly weapon" has the meaning given in AS 11.81.900(b); or

(4) that is misconduct involving weapons in the first degree under

(A) AS 11.61.190(a)(1); or

(B) AS 11.61.190(a)(2) when the firearm was discharged under circumstances manifesting substantial and unjustifiable risk of physical injury to a person.

 Sec. 25. AS 47.12.100(c) is amended to read:

(c) For purposes of making a determination under this section,

(1) the standard of proof is by a preponderance of the evidence; and

(2) the burden of proof that a minor is not amenable to treatment under this chapter is on the state; however, if the petition filed under AS 47.12.040 seeking to have the court declare a minor a delinquent is based on the minor's alleged commission of an offense that is a capital felony, an unclassified felony, or a class A felony and that is a crime against a person, the minor

(A) is rebuttably presumed not to be amenable to treatment under this chapter; and

(B) has the burden of proof of showing that the minor is amenable to treatment under this chapter.

 Sec. 26. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

INDIRECT COURT RULE AMENDMENTS. (a) AS 12.58, added by sec. 21 of this Act, has the effect of modifying the sentencing provisions of Rules 32, 32.1, and 32.3, Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, by establishing exclusive procedures for imposition of death sentence by a trial court and by authorizing automatic appeal of those sentences to the Alaska Supreme Court.

(b) AS 12.58.100, added by sec. 21 of this Act, has the effect of amending Rules 204, 209, 210, and 212, Alaska Rules of Appellate Procedure, by establishing procedures and limitations on procedures relating to the filing and disposition of appeals of sentences in cases in which the death penalty is imposed.

 Sec. 27. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

EXCESSIVE REVIEW. AS 12.58.100(b)(3), added by sec. 21 of this Act, provides that the Alaska Supreme Court will review whether a sentence of death is excessive compared to the penalty imposed in similar cases. Under that review, a sentence of death may not be found excessive compared to the penalty imposed in similar cases based on the fact that a sentence of death has not been previously authorized as a penalty for murder in this state.

FISCAL HB 9		FY 2010 (Thousands of Dollars)	FY 2011	FY 2012	FY 2013	FY 2014	FY 2015
Operating Expenditures
Public Safety		481.8	334.2	334.2	334.2	334.2	334.2
Health & Social Services		0.0	0.0	0.0	***	***	****
Administration
	OPA	1052.1	1439.7	2032.9	2016.5	2016.5	2016.5
	PDA	2276.9	3217.8	4184.0	4184.0	4184.0	4184.0
Law		1917.2	3783.3	5365.4	5219.4	5219.4	5219.4
AK Court System
	Trial Courts	197.3	1412.2	3100.8	3058.3	3058.3	3058.3
	Appellate	0.0	203.7	193.7	193.7	193.7	193.7
DOC		0.0	0	380	392.5	402.5	412.5
Capital Expenditures
AK Court System
	Trial Courts		1843.1
DOC			5000.0
TOTAL/YEAR		5925.3	17234	15591	15398.6	15408.6	15418.6
CUMMULATIVE TOTAL			23159.3	38750.3	54148.9	69557.5	84976.1

At the end of FY 2015, the State of Alaska will have spent almost $85 Million Dollars implementing HB 9 should the bill pass

FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Fiscal Note Number: HB9-DOC-OC-02-24-09
Bill Version:
() Publish Date:

Identifier (file name): HB9-DOC-OC-02-24-09
Title "An Act Authorizing Capital Punishment"
Sponsor Representatives Chenault, Ramras
Requester Governor

Dept. Affected: DOC
RDU Administration & Support
Component Office of the Commissioner
Component Number 694

Expenditures/Revenues (Thousands of Dollars)

Note: Amounts do not include inflation unless otherwise noted below.

	Appropriation Required	Information
OPERATING EXPENDITURES	FY 2010	FY 2010	FY 2011	FY 2012	FY 2013	FY 2014	FY 2015
Personal Services				367.5	367.5	367.5	367.5
Travel				10.0	20.0	30.0	40.0
Contractual				2.5	5.0	5.0	5.0
Supplies
Equipment
Land & Structures
Grants & Claims
Miscellaneous
TOTAL OPERATING	0.0	0.0	0.0	380.0	392.5	402.5	412.5
CAPITAL EXPENDITURES			5,000.0
CHANGE IN REVENUES ( )

FUND SOURCE (Thousands of Dollars)

1002 Federal Receipts
1003 GF Match
1004 GF				380.0	392.5	402.5	412.5
1005 GF/Program Receipts
1037 GF/Mental Health
Other Interagency Receipts
TOTAL	0.0	0.0	0.0	380.0	392.5	402.5	412.5

Estimate of any current year (FY2009) cost: 0.0

POSITIONS

Full-time				5	5	5	5
Part-time
Temporary

ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)

The Department of Corrections anticipates approximately 2 offenders annually to be sentenced under this legislation. The national average length of time for the appeals process is 13 years. The average annual cost of incarceration of an offender housed at Spring Creek Correctional Center (SCCC) is approximately $51,012. The imposition of a death sentence on an offender who would be given a 99-year sentence under current law would result in a cost avoidance of $51,012 per year once the sentence is carried out and until what would have been the end of the offender's natural life.

Any additional costs associated with execution would be addressed through the annual supplemental process. These costs would primarily be overtime and travel costs associated with the staffing of the death chamber during the fiscal years when an actual execution occurs.

Prepared by: Dwayne Peeples, Deputy Commissioner
Division Office of the Commissioner
Phone 465-4670
Date/Time 2/24/09 7:00 AM

Approved by: Joesph Schmidt, Commissioner
Office of the Commissioner
Date 2/24/2009

(Revised 9/10/2008 OMB)

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

Capital construction costs added in FY2012 are the anticipated costs associated with the building of a death chamber. These costs are based on construction of a 4,590 square foot stand-alone module to include:
Execution Room
Execution Equipment Room
Execution Witness Room
Public Lobby
Meeting and Contact Visitation Rooms
Non-Contact Visitation Video Station
Restrooms Staff / Inmate / Visitors
Medical Equipment
Medical Waste
Visitor Lockers / Screening Metal Detector
Storage
Sally Ports Vehicle / Visitation

Annual Operating cost:

71000 Personal Services (FY10 rates employer rates applied, no overtime included):
Conversion of an existing housing unit at Spring Creek Correctional Center to meet a death row housing unit requires 2 security posts. These posts will consists of 5 existing staff and will require 5 new additional staffing of 1 Correctional Officer III and 4 Correctional Officer I/II positions.

72000 Travel:
Dept of Law has determined an average of 1 court hearings per year per inmate during the appeal process. The appeal process can take up to 13 years. Inmates must be transported back to judicial district for court hearing. It is the Department of Corrections responsibility to transport the offender back to the closest facility for each court appearance. Each round-trip is based on current costs for using the Public Safety King Air transportation or for a charter to each geographic region--Southeast, Interior, and Northwestern AK. Ground transportation within the Anchorage area, Mat-Su Valley, and Kenai Peninsula included. Travel is for the inmate and 2 transport officers, per diem and lodging for officers included.

73000 Contractual Services:
The services line is based on anticipated utility costs only. These are current estimates and are associated with the actual death chamber only.

74000 Commodities:
There is no increases anticipated for the daily costs of incarceration as these offenders would already be committed to the departments custody under existing legislation.

FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Fiscal Note Number:
Bill Version: CS HB 009 (JUD)
() Publish Date:

Identifier (file name): CSHB009-DPS-DET-02-13-09
Title "An Act relating to murder; authorizing capital punishment."
Sponsor Representative Chenault
Requester House Judiciary

Dept. Affected: Public Safety
RDU Alaska State Troopers
Component AST Detachments
Component Number 2325

Expenditures/Revenues (Thousands of Dollars)

Note: Amounts do not include inflation unless otherwise noted below.

	Appropriation Required	Information
OPERATING EXPENDITURES	FY 2010	FY 2010	FY 2011	FY 2012	FY 2013	FY 2014	FY 2015
Personal Services	214.6		214.6	214.6	214.6	214.6	214.6
Travel	47.0		47.0	47.0	47.0	47.0	47.0
Contractual	75.0		57.0	57.0	57.0	57.0	57.0
Supplies	15.6		15.6	15.6	15.6	15.6	15.6
Equipment	129.6		0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
Land & Structures
Grants & Claims
Miscellaneous
TOTAL OPERATING	481.8	0.0	334.2	334.2	334.2	334.2	334.2
CAPITAL EXPENDITURES
CHANGE IN REVENUES ( )

FUND SOURCE (Thousands of Dollars)

1002 Federal Receipts
1003 GF Match
1004 GF	481.8		334.2	334.2	334.2	334.2	334.2
1005 GF/Program Receipts
1037 GF/Mental Health
Other Interagency Receipts
TOTAL	481.8	0.0	334.2	334.2	334.2	334.2	334.2

Estimate of any current year (FY2009) cost: 0.0

POSITIONS

Full-time	2		2	2	2	2	2
Part-time
Temporary

ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)

"An Act relating to murder; authorizing capital punishment, classifying murder in the first degree as a capital felony, and allowing the imposition of the death penalty for certain murders; establishing sentencing procedures for capital felonies; and amending Rules 32, 32.1, and 32.3, Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, and Rules 204, 209, 210, and 212, Alaska Rules of Appellate Procedure."

Due to U.S. Supreme Court case law, passage of this legislation will require the department to conduct additional in-depth investigations on those defendants sentenced to death. Experience in other states has shown that the entire life of the defendant must be investigated for mitigating factors.

Prepared by: Lt. Rodney Dial
Division Alaska State Troopers
Phone 907-247-4480
Date/Time 2/18/09 5:28 PM

Approved by: Joseph Masters, Commissioner
Department of Public Safety
Date

FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

BILL NO. _____

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

In addition to those investigations conducted for the state it is likely that the department will be asked to assist, or conduct the investigations of other municipal police departments.

In order to adequately comply with this legislation the department estimates that it will require two (2) full time investigators.

FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Fiscal Note Number:
Bill Version: CSHB009 (JUD)
() Publish Date:

Identifier (file name): HB009CS(JUD)-DHSS-API-02-19-09
Title: Capital Punishment
Sponsor: Chenault
Requester: House JUD

Dept. Affected: Health & Social Services
RDU: Behavioral Health
Component: Alaska Psychiatric Hospital
Component Number: 23160

Expenditures/Revenues (Thousands of Dollars)

Note: Amounts do not include inflation unless otherwise noted below.

	Appropriation Required	Information
OPERATING EXPENDITURES	FY 2010	FY 2010	FY 2011	FY 2012	FY 2013	FY 2014	FY 2015
Personal Services
Travel
Contractual
Supplies
Equipment
Land & Structures
Grants & Claims
Miscellaneous
TOTAL OPERATING	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	*	*	*
CAPITAL EXPENDITURES
CHANGE IN REVENUES (

FUND SOURCE (Thousands of Dollars)

1002 Federal Receipts
1003 GF Match
1004 GF
1005 GF/Program Receipts
1037 GF/Mental Health
Other Interagency Receipts
TOTAL	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	*	*	*

Estimate of any current year (FY2009) cost:

POSITIONS

Full-time
Part-time
Temporary

ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)

If the proposed legislation is enacted, the fiscal impact to the Department is indeterminate.

If it takes the first cases three to five years to reach sentencing under this legislation, the fiscal impact in the initial three years will be minimal. Beyond that period, the fiscal impact is difficult to estimate since the department cannot estimate the identified population affected. The expectation is that the number of death row inmates meeting the criteria requiring mental health treatment will be negligible. However, should such an individual be identified by the courts and subsequently require transfer to API for treatment, costs are anticipated to be $900.00/day, or $328,500/year based upon current costs.

Prepared by: Melissa Stone
Division: Behavioral Health
Phone: 269-3410
Date/Time: 1/28/09 5:00 PM

Approved by: Alison Elgee, Assistant Commissioner
CHSS Finance & Management Services
Date: 2/19/2009

DRAFT FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Fiscal Note Number:
Bill Version: HB 9
() Publish Date:

Identifier (file name): HB9-DOA-OPA-2-20-09
Dept. Affected: Administration
Title: An Act relating to murder, authorizing capital punishment...
RDU: Legal and Advocacy Services
Component: Office of Public Advocacy
Sponsor: Representative Chenault
Requester: Judiciary
Component Number: 43

Expenditures/Revenues (Thousands of Dollars)

Note: Amounts do not include inflation unless otherwise noted below.

	Appropriation Required	Information
OPERATING EXPENDITURES	FY 2010	FY 2010	FY 2011	FY 2012	FY 2013	FY 2014	FY 2015
Personal Services	512.2		774.6	1,189.9	1,189.9	1,189.9	1,189.9
Travel	157.5		172.5	193.0	193.0	193.0	193.0
Contractual	341.9		455.2	588.0	588.0	588.0	588.0
Supplies	7.0		11.0	17.0	17.0	17.0	17.0
Equipment	33.5		26.4	45.0	28.6	28.6	28.6
Land & Structures
Grants & Claims
Miscellaneous
TOTAL OPERATING	1,052.1	0.0	1,439.7	2,032.9	2,016.5	2,016.5	2,016.5
CAPITAL EXPENDITURES
CHANGE IN REVENUES ( )

FUND SOURCE (Thousands of Dollars)

1002 Federal Receipts
1003 GF Match
1004 GF	1,052.1		1,439.7	2,032.9	2,016.5	2,016.5	2,016.5
1005 GF/Program Receipts
1037 GF/Mental Health
Other Interagency Receipts
TOTAL	1,052.1	0.0	1,439.7	2,032.9	2,016.5	2,016.5	2,016.5

Estimate of any current year (FY2009) cost:

POSITIONS

Full-time	5		7	11	11	11	11
Part-time
Temporary

ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)

See attached pages

Prepared by: Rachel Levitt, Director
Phone 907 269-3504
Division: Office of Public Advocacy
Date/Time 2/20/09, 9:30 a.m.
Approved by: Rachael Petro, Deputy Commissioner
Date 2/20/2009
Department of Administration

[illegible] 6/1/2008 OMB

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

This bill provides for the availability of the death penalty as a punishment for certain murders.
The costs of pursuing the death penalty have been studied by other jurisdictions with experience in this area, and in preparation of this fiscal note, the agency has drawn heavily from studies of the federal system and the state of Washington where the costs have been closely examined. Murder cases tend to be among the most complex and challenging cases for the attorneys and courts to handle, and capital cases have the additional requirements of added procedures and relevant evidence. Because of the penalty applicable in these cases, additional expectations are placed upon the attorneys providing defense both in terms of the training and qualifications and the substantive work to be performed.

Assumptions
The Office of Public Advocacy is the secondary public criminal defense agency in the state. The agency will only be appointed to capital cases where the Public Defender Agency has a legal conflict of interest precluding it from providing a defendant with services. Based upon our experience with the rate of conflict cases, the agency would expect to receive one-third of the capital cases for trial and direct appeal. Based upon the Department of Law's estimate that it will seek the death penalty in six cases per year, OPA anticipates receiving two pre-trial capital cases per year. After the first year of implementation, the agency expects to handle two cases per year for direct appeal as well. However, because post-conviction relief actions nearly universally include a claim of ineffective assistance of trial or appellate counsel, the agency anticipates handling all or nearly all of the capital post-conviction relief applications. The agency would need to be prepared to take these cases after the first two years of the implementation of capital crimes.

The American Bar Association 2003 Revised Guidelines for capital defense provide in part that no fewer than two qualified attorneys, one investigator, and a mitigation specialist should make up the core of the capital defense team. Further, under these same guidelines, at a minimum attorneys should be required to attend and complete at least once every two years, a specialized training program in capital defense. The Guidelines regarding the qualifications of counsel apply to trial, appeallate, and post-conviction relief counsel equally.

The fiscal note contains an estimate of the costs associated with retaining experts for trial and sentencing of $100,000 per case. The estimate is based upon median costs for experts in federal capital cases. Additionally, the agency estimates $66,000 in costs associated with witness travel for each trial case, and $27,000 in transcription and deposition costs for each case.

Implementation
Year One
During the first year of capital litigation, the agency anticipates creating a capital defense unit comprised of one supervising attorney (Attorney V), one staff attorney (Attorney IV), one investigator (Investigator III), one mitigation specialist (Associate Attorney II) and one law office assistant (LOA I). This unit would operate as a separate law firm in order to avoid conflicts from other staff being imputed to the counsel in this firm. This will allow the agency to keep as many cases in-house as possible. During this year the agency would also be required to provide training for this capital unit, and based upon training that is offered by nationally recognized capital defense programs, the agency would anticipate $2500 in training costs per capital defense professional every two years after the initial training.

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

Year Two
During the second year of implementation, the agency anticipates adding an additional two appeallate attorneys (Attorney IV) to handle the direct appeals. These attorneys would join the capital defense unit, and would handle all direct appeals generated from the unit's trial caseload.

Year Three
By the third year, the agency anticipates creating a separate capital defense, post-conviction unit to handle the post-conviction relief applications of the OPA clients and those of the Public Defender Agency clients. As previously indicated, because the focus of post-conviction relief litigation is often on whether trial counsel and appeallate counsel provided effective assitance of counsel, the agency anticipates that it will receive all or nearly all of the captial post-conviction relief applications. This unit will be comprised of one supervising attorney (Attorney V), one staff attorney (Attorney IV), one investigator (Investigator III) and one law office assistant (LOA I).

Once the cases are in the post-conviction stage, the caseload will continue to increase over time, and it is not possible to predict with accuracy what the staffing and resource needs will be beyond the first two to three years of operations.

The agency anticipates relying to some degree upon the private criminal defense bar to provide representation in cases where legal conflicts prevent the agency from handling the cases with in-house staff. With the small number of cases under consideration, it is not possible to predict what percentage of cases will have to be handled by outside conflict counsel; however, there is data available related to the costs associated with providing counsel in death penalty cases through private counsel. In a 2008 report reviewing the costs associated with defense in capital cases the average per case costs for cases going to trial was $620,932.00, and the average number of attorney hours spent defending capital cases in the federal system was 3,557 for those that went to trial. A December 2006 report from Washington state noted that the federal rate of $163/hour for attorneys fees was reasonable, and the report recommended against going below $125/hour for those services. Because we do not have an accurate way to estimate the number of cases that will be handled by private counsel, it is too early to suggest what the costs for contracting with private counsel would actually be for capital cases.

FY 10 Fiscal Note Cost (FY10 Governor's Budget)

		Atty V	Atty IV	Atty III	Atty II	Inv III	AA II	LOA II	LOA I	Total	2nd year	3rd year
100 - Salaries and Benefits	Anchorage, Kelchikan, Juneau	1.0	1.0			1.0	1.0		1.0	5.0	2.0	4.0
	Barrow, Kotz									0.0
	Bethel									0.0
	Kenai									0.0
	Kodiak									0.0
	Fairbanks									0.0
	Palmer, Sitka									0.0
	Dillingham									0.0
	Nome									0.0
	Total	1.0	1.0	0.0	0.00	1.0	1.0	0.0	1.0	5.0	2.0	4.0
	Anchorage, Kelchikan, Juneau	139.4	131.2	0.0	0.0	88.8	96.9	0.0	55.9
	Barrow, Kotz	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Bethel	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Kenai	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Kodiak	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Fairbanks	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Palmer, Sitka	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Dillingham	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Nome	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Other
Secretarial Support (1/3 cost)	Anchorage, Kelchikan, Juneau
	Barrow, Kotz
	Bethel
	Kenai
	Kodiak
	Fairbanks
	Palmer, Sitka
	Dillingham
	Nome
	Other
	Total	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
Secretarial Support (1/3 cost)	Anchorage, Kelchikan, Juneau	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Barrow, Kotz	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Bethel	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Kenai	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Kodiak	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Fairbanks	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Palmer, Sitka	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Dillingham	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Nome	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Other	0.0	16.7	0.0	0.0	0.0
Total S+B by Location	Anchorage	139.4	131.2	0.0	0.0	88.8	96.9	0.0	55.9	512.2	262.4	415.3
	Barrow, Kotz	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Bethel	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Kenai	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Kodiak	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Fairbanks	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Palmer, Sitka	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Dillingham	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Nome	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Other	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Total	139.4	131.2	0.0	0.0	88.8	96.9	0.0	55.9	512.2	774.6	1189.9
200 - Travel
	Base	7.5	7.5	7.5	7.5	5.0	5.0	5.0	0.5
	Total	7.5	7.5	0.0	0.0	5.0	5.0	0.0	0.5	25.5	40.5	61.0
	Witness Travel ($66.0 per case)									132.0	132.0	132.0
200 - Travel										157.5	172.5	193.0
300 - Contractual
	Base	27.0	27.0	17.4	17.4	6.5	6.5	6.5	3.2
	Total	27.0	27.0	0.0	0.0	6.5	6.5	0.0	3.2	70.2	124.2	187.9
300 - Expert Witness										200.0	200.0	200.0
Travel										5.0	5.0	10.0
Deposition transcription charges ($2.5 per case)										54.0	108.0	162.0
Per costs										12.7	18.0	28.1
Total										341.9	355.7	564.0
400 - Supplies	Base	2.0	2.0	2.0	2.0	1.0	1.0	1.0	1.0
	Total	2.0	2.0	0.0	0.0	1.0	1.0	0.0	1.0	7.0	11.0	17.0
500 - Equipment	Total Positions
	PFT's plus PPT	1.0	1.0	0.0	0.0	1.0	1.0	0.0	1.0	5.00	7.0	13.0
	Base	2.6	2.6	2.6	2.6	2.6	2.6	2.6	2.6
	Personal Computer	4.1	4.1	4.1	4.1	4.1	4.1	4.1	4.1
	Total	6.7	6.7	6.7	6.7	6.7	6.7	6.7	6.7
	Total	6.7	6.7	0.0	0.0	6.7	6.7	0.0	6.7	33.5	46.9	80.4
	Grand Total	182.6	174.4	0.0	0.0	108.0	116.1	0.0	67.3	1052.2	1439.7	2032.9

FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Fiscal Note Number:
Bill Version: HB 9
() Publish Date:

Identifier (file name): HB009-DOA-PDA-2-20-09
Title: An Act relating to murder, authorizing capital punishment...
Sponsor: Representative Chenault
Requester: Judiciary

Dept. Affected: Administration
RDU: Legal and Advocacy Services
Component: Public Defender Agency
Component Number: 1631

Expenditures/Revenues (Thousands of Dollars)

Note: Amounts do not include inflation unless otherwise noted below.

	Appropriation Required	Information
OPERATING EXPENDITURES	FY 2010	FY 2010	FY 2011	FY 2012	FY 2013	FY 2014	FY 2015
Personal Services	1,078.9		1,618.4	2,157.8	2,157.8	2,157.8	2,157.8
Travel	326.5		437.0	571.2	571.2	571.2	571.2
Contractual	789.5		1,099.7	1,381.5	1,381.5	1,381.5	1,381.5
Supplies	15.0		22.5	30.0	30.0	30.0	30.0
Equipment	67.0		40.2	43.5	43.5	43.5	43.5
Land & Structures
Grants & Claims
Miscellaneous
TOTAL OPERATING	2,276.9	0.0	3,217.8	4,184.0	4,184.0	4,184.0	4,184.0
CAPITAL EXPENDITURES
CHANGE IN REVENUES ( )

FUND SOURCE (Thousands of Dollars)

1002 Federal Receipts
1003 GF Match
1004 GF	2,276.9		3,217.8	4,184.0	4,184.0	4,184.0	4,184.0
1005 GF/Program Receipts
1037 GF/Mental Health
Other Interagency Receipts
TOTAL	2,276.9	0.0	3,217.8	4,184.0	4,184.0	4,184.0	4,184.0

Estimate of any current year (FY2009) cost:

POSITIONS

Full-time	10		15	20	20	20	20
Part-time
Temporary

ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)

See attached pages

Prepared by: Quinlan Steiner, Director — Phone 907 334-4414
Division: Public Defender Agency — Date/Time 2/20/2009, 11:30 AM
Approved by: Rachael Petro, Deputy Commissioner — Date 2/20/2009
Department of Administration

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

Summary of HB 9

House Bill 9 establishes a capital crime in Alaska and authorizes the use of capital punishment. The following is a summary of material sections of the framework for the death penalty.

This bill establishes that the district attorney for the district in which the prosecution is occurring, with the concurrence of the attorney general, shall decide whether to seek the death penalty against the defendant. If it is elected, the district attorney shall give notice of the election and the applicable aggravating factor justifying the election to the court, the defendant, and the defendant's attorney within 120 days of arraignment on the capital felony indictment.

If a defendant is convicted of a capital felony, the jury must consider whether a sentence of death should be imposed. Evidence with any probative value as to any aggravating or mitigating factor may be presented, without regard to the rules of evidence. The jury then deliberates and must return written findings; these findings must be unanimous and detail whether at least one aggravating factor exists and that the district attorney noticed that factor; whether, beyond a reasonable doubt, the aggravating factor outweighs any mitigating factors found to exist by a preponderance of the evidence; and whether the defendant shall be sentenced to death.

Once the court considers the evidence and the recommended sentence, it shall enter a sentence of death or a term of imprisonment in accordance with AS 12.55.125(a). A court can only impose a death sentence if the jury found no reasonable doubt as to at least one aggravating factor noticed by the district attorney exists, that there is no reasonable doubt that the aggravating factors are not outweighed by any mitigating factors found by a preponderance of the evidence, and that it recommended a sentence of death.

The new section then provides that "If the jury findings include an aggravating factor or factors under AS 12.58.040 that are not outweighed by one or more of the mitigating factors and if the jury recommends a sentence of death, the court shall sentence the defendant to death unless the court finds that the defendant was mentally retarded under AS 12.58.060." If a sentence of death is not recommended, the court shall sentence the defendant to a term of imprisonment.

Following the imposition of a death sentence, the Alaska Supreme court must automatically review the judgment within 60 days, a time period to be extended by the court for good cause. On review, the court shall determine whether the sentence was imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or some other arbitrary factor, whether the evidence supports the finding of the aggravating factor and whether the jury properly considered mitigating factors, whether the sentence is excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases, considering both the crime and the defendant, and any other issue the defendant may raise on appeal. If the court upholds the sentence of death, the Alaska Supreme Court must issue a death warrant specifying a date of execution, not less than 30 days nor more than 60 days after the date of the warrant.

Basis for Higher Cost

A sentence of death is final and irreversible--mistakes can not be undone. According to the United States Supreme Court, therefore, additional procedures and attention must be devoted to capital cases to ensure the constitutional requirements of due process are met. It is the responsibility of defense counsel to review and litigate cases in a manner that minimizes the possibility that the death penalty is imposed arbitrarily, inappropriately, with bias, or on the innocent.

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

Moreover, appropriate resources are necessary to protect against what studies from other jurisdictions have indicated are the primary reasons for appellate reversal of trial court proceedings. The following are a list of the typical grounds for reversal of conviction or sentence in a capital case: (1) false eye-witness identification, (2) false confessions, (3) uncorroborated informant testimony, (4) scientific evidence validity and backlog, (5) prosecutorial misconduct, (6) judicial failure to report misconduct, (7) ineffective assistance of counsel and defense attorney misconduct, (8) failure to disclose exculpatory evidence.

Procedure and Workload

With death penalty cases, the guilt and penalty phases are treated as separate proceedings with the penalty phase often exceeding the guilt phase in both time and expense. Additionally, the post-conviction process involves both the appellate litigation and the collateral litigation that is more extensive than in non-capital cases.

The guilt phase requires the Agency to conduct a fact investigation and a scientific evidence investigation, conduct legal research and engage in motion practice, as well as jury selection, trial, and post-trial litigation. The sentencing phase requires similar, but separate obligations: sentencing mitigation investigation, additional legal research and motion practice, a sentencing hearing, and post-sentence litigation. Sentencing investigations involved investigating the defendant's entire life and can involved extensive invesigation outside the state and the country depending on the defendant's background.

The post-conviction process involves a direct appeal to the Alaska Supreme Court and a petition for certiorari to United States Supreme Court. The collateral litigation requires additional proceedings in the Superior Court. Collateral proceedings involve new and separate investigation, motion practice, and evidentiary presentation. The collateral proceedings also include appeals to the Alaska Court of Appeals and the Alaska Supreme Court.

In addition to the traditional litigation, capital cases also require a petition for clemency to the Governor of Alaska and additional original writs filed with the United States Supreme Court.

Cost Estimates

The Agency typically refers 30% of A and Unclassified cases to the Office of Public Advocacy due to legal conflicts of interest. The cost estimates of this fiscal note are based on an estimate of a total of six capital cases a year, four for the Agency. The average time from the imposition of a death sentence to execution ranges from 13 years to over 20 years. Accordingly, the number of open death penalty cases would rise to approximately 78 to 120 before the cases would begin to close if the estimate of six cases per year remained constant.

It is difficult to predict the resources necessary to process this caseload beyond the first one to three years. The positions and costs contained in this fiscal note are an estimate of the resources necessary to create and train two trial teams and two post conviction teams to substantively process no more than 4 capital cases each year.

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

Based upon the ABA Guidelines, the current standard for death penalty litigation is a trial team consisting of two lawyers, one investigator, and one mitigation specialist; and a post-conviction team consisting of two lawyers, investigator, and a paralegal. A law office assistant has also been included for each team. The fiscal note contains the estimate for salary and related equipment costs for these positions starting with two full teams the first year, increasing to four teams by the third year. In the first year, the emphasis would be on hiring and training trial teams, then in the subsequent two years the emphasis would shift to hiring and training appellate teams. It is expected that the initial death penalty cases will likely take 3 years to complete sentencing.

The fiscal note contains an estimate for the cost of training the attorneys and paraprofessionals. The current standard for defense representation requires that attorneys assigned to death penalty cases be certified to handle a capital case. This will require out-of-state training specific to capital cases. Current standards also require significant continuing legal education and recertification every two years. A training and recertification budget of $40,000 has been added for each year. Each team, accordingly, would receive training and recertification every two years.

The fiscal note contains an estimate for the costs associated with retaining experts for trial and sentencing. The mean and median costs for experts in federal capital cases are $158,895 and $101,592 respectively. This fiscal note contains an estimate of $100,000 per case. The fiscal note also reflects increase costs for staff travel, witness travel, depositions, and transcript costs. Additionally, the costs associated with reviewing potential death penalty (potential death eligible cases in which the Attorney General does not elect to pursue the death penalty) are also included in this fiscal note.

The cost estimates in this fiscal note are based on the assumption that the Attorney General will elect to secure a sentence of death in 6 cases per year. This note further assumes that these cases will proceed in a timely and efficient manner, with only 1 or 2 of the cases assigned to the Agency proceeding to trial. If more cases become death penalty cases, or more cases go to trial, or trials must be conducted in rural locations, or the workload is underestimated, or involve investigations in other states or outside the United States, these estimates are expected to be inadequate for the Agency to meet its constitutional obligations and could be expected to increase substantially.

FY 10 Fiscal Note Cost (FY10 Governor's Budget, 09 rates)

		Atty V	Atty IV	Atty III	Atty II	Ins III	AA II	LOAII	LOAI	Total	2nd year	3rd year
100 Salaries and Benefits
	Anchorage, Ketchikan, Juneau	2.0	3.0			2.0	1.0	2.0		10.0
	Barrow, Kotz									0.0
	Bethel									0.0
	Kenai									0.0
	Kodiak									0.0
	Fairbanks									0.0
	Palmer, Sitka									0.0
	Dillingham									0.0
	Nome									0.0
	Total	2.0	3.0	0.0	0.00	2.0	1.0	2.0	0.0	10.0
	Anchorage, Ketchikan, Juneau	139.4	131.2	0.0	0.0	88.8	96.9	66.0	0.0
	Barrow, Kotz	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Bethel	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Kenai	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Kodiak	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Fairbanks	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Palmer, Sitka	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Dillingham	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Nome	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Other
Secretarial Support (1/3 cost)	Anchorage, Ketchikan, Juneau
	Barrow, Kotz
	Bethel
	Kenai
	Kodiak
	Fairbanks
	Palmer, Sitka
	Dillingham
	Nome
	Other
	Total	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
Secretarial Support (1/3 cost)	Anchorage, Ketchikan, Juneau	21.8	21.8	21.8	21.8	21.8
	Barrow, Kotz	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Bethel	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Kenai	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Kodiak	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Fairbanks	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Palmer, Sitka	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Dillingham	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Nome	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Other	0.0	16.7	0.0	0.0	0.0
Total S+B by Location	Anchorage	278.8	393.6	0.0	0.0	177.6	96.9	132.0	0.0	1078.9
	Barrow, Kotz	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Bethel	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Kenai	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Kodiak	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Fairbanks	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Palmer, Sitka	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Dillingham	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Nome	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Other	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	Total	278.8	393.6	0.0	0.0	177.6	96.9	132.0	0.0	1078.9	1618.4	2157.8
200 - Travel
	Base	7.5	7.5	7.5	7.5	5.0	5.0	5.0	0.5
	Total	15.0	22.5	0.0	0.0	10.0	5.0	10.0	0.0	62.5	93.8	125.0
	Witness Travel ($66.0 per case)									264.0	343.2	446.2
200 - Travel										326.5	437.0	571.2
300 Contractual
	Base	27.0	27.0	17.4	17.4	8.5	6.5	8.5	3.2
	Total	54.0	81.0	0.0	0.0	13.0	6.5	13.0	0.0	167.5	251.3	335.0
300 Expert Witness ($100/ per case)										400.0	520.0	676.0
Training										40.0	40.0	40.0
Depo/Arbitration/Deception charges ($77.0 per case)										185.0	240.4	182.5
Lease cars										24.0	248.0	248.0
	Total									789.5	1099.7	1381.5
400 - Supplies
	Base	4.0	6.0	0.0	0.0	2.0	1.0	2.0	0.0
	Total	4.0	6.0	0.0	0.0	2.0	1.0	2.0	0.0	15.0	22.5	30.0
500 Equipment
	One-time costs
	PC + Lic FEs	2.0	2.0	0.0	0.0	2.0	2.0	2.0	2.0	10.00	15.0	20.0
	Base	2.6	2.6	1.8	0.0	2.6	2.6	2.6	2.6
	Personal Computer	4.1	4.1	4.1	4.1	4.1	4.1	4.1	4.1
	Car	6.7	6.7	6.7	5.0	6.7	6.7	6.7	6.7
	Total	13.4	13.4	0.0	0.0	13.4	13.4	13.4	0.0	67.0	40.2	43.5
	Grand Total	365.2	516.5	0.0	0.0	216.0	122.8	170.4	0.0	2276.9	3217.7	4164.0

FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Fiscal Note Number:
Bill Version: HB009
() Publish Date:

Identifier (file name): HB009-LAW-CRIM-2-20-09
Dept. Affected: LAW
Title: An Act relating to murder; authorizing capital punishment and classifying murder in the first degree as a capital felony.
RDU: CRIMINAL
Component: CRIMINAL JUSTICE LITIGATION
Sponsor: Representative Chenault
Requester: Judiciary
Component Number: 2202

Expenditures/Revenues (Thousands of Dollars)

Note: Amounts do not include inflation unless otherwise noted below.

	Appropriation Required	Information
OPERATING EXPENDITURES	FY 2010	FY 2010	FY 2011	FY 2012	FY 2013	FY 2014	FY 2015
Personal Services	837.0		1,449.0	2,164.0	2,164.0	2,164.0	2,164.0
Travel	321.8		614.4	779.6	779.6	779.6	779.6
Contractual	646.4		1,525.1	2,129.6	1,983.6	1,983.6	1,983.6
Supplies	43.0		74.0	111.0	111.0	111.0	111.0
Equipment	69.0		120.8	181.2	181.2	181.2	181.2
Land & Structures
Grants & Claims
Miscellaneous
TOTAL OPERATING	1,917.2	0.0	3,783.3	5,365.4	5,219.4	5,219.4	5,219.4
CAPITAL EXPENDITURES
CHANGE IN REVENUES ( )

FUND SOURCE (Thousands of Dollars)

1002 Federal Receipts
1003 GF Match
1004 GF	1,917.2		3,793.3	5,365.4	5,219.4	5,219.4	5,219.4
1005 GF/Program Receipts
1037 GF/Mental Health
Other Interagency Receipts
TOTAL	1,917.2	0.0	3,793.3	5,365.4	5,219.4	5,219.4	5,219.4

Estimate of any current year (FY2009) cost:

POSITIONS

Full-time	8.0		14	21	21	21	21
Part-time
Temporary

ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)

See attached pages...

Prepared by: Robert Meiners, Deputy Director — Phone 907.465.5427
Division: Administrative Services Division — Date/Time 2/20/09 8:50 AM
Approved by: Richard Svobodny, Acting Attorney General — Date 2/20/2009
Department of Law

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

HB9 authorizes capital punishment by classifying murder in the first degree as a capital felony, and allowing the imposition of the death penalty for capital felonies. The bill would establish sentencing procedures for capital felonies; and amend Rules 32, 32.1, and 32.3, Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, and Rules 204, 209, 210, and 212, Alaska Rules of Appellate Procedure. If enacted, there will be significant costs for the Department of Law.

In the last 15 years there have been several attempts to adopt capital punishment in Alaska. The Department of Law has submitted fiscal notes over these years. In 1993 for SB 127, the department estimated that in the first years after implementation the department would need eight new employees, in the second year the number would be 14 new employees, and the following years the number would be 21 new employees. In 1994 in support of the same bill, the numbers changed to 10 new employees the first year, and 14 for the second year, and then 20 new employees for the following years.

In the 1995 fiscal note for HB 45 the number of new employees was estimated to be eight in the first year, 17 in the second, and 25 in the following years. In 1996, the number of new employees was six new employees in year one, 16 employees in year two, and 20 employees in year three, and 24 employees in the following years.

In 1997 the fiscal note for HB 131 provided for eight employees in the first year, year two 14 employees, and 21 employees for the following years. These numbers are summarized here:

	Year 1	Year 2	Year 3	Year 4
1993	8	14	21	21
1994	10	14	20	20
1995	8	17	25	25
1996	6	16	20	24
1997	8	14	21	21
		HB 9
2009	8	14	21	21

Although the number of new employees in 2009 is consistent with previous bills, the nature of capital litigation has become more complex and commensurately more costly. The department assumes a methodology based upon a substantially decreased number of capital cases under HB 9 than the number of cases assumed for SB 127 in 1994.

In 1994, the department's criminal division had 17 first degree murder cases in which aggravating factors were present that would justify the death penalty, had a similar provision been the law. The number of murders committed in Alaska varies somewhat from year-to-year and, therefore, the assumptions made in this fiscal note are as conservative as possible. (All murders in Alaska in 2007 totaled 44.)

The Department of Corrections' statistics show the following number of intakes for murder in the first degree in the previous five years:

2004	4
2005	16
2006	10
2007	20
2008	17

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

These numbers show a spread of 4 to 20 murders in the first degree and a yearly average of 13.4. It is unknown the number of these cases which would be death eligible. However, if approximately half the murders in the first degree were eligible the number would be between 6 and 7. Department of Law statistics show for the same time period - 2003 to 2008 - that 170 murder in the first degree cases were submitted for prosecution. 33 or 19.4% of these cases were dismissed by the state. There were 14 of these cases where the defendant pled guilty to murder in the first degree; 18 cases resulted in a guilty verdict at trial and 5 cases where the verdict was not guilty. The prior three groups of cases total 37. The remaining cases were resolved in some other manner. The 37 cases over this five year period average 7.4 per year. Not all of these cases will be death eligible. If the number of pleas to murder are subtracted from the total number, assuming that these would not be death eligible, then the number is 23, or 4.6 per year. The range between 4.6 and 7.4 suggests a number of 6 (six) capital murders a year. This fiscal note uses as its working assumption the conservative number of six capital murder cases each year.

Overview

Capital felony trials would be bifurcated, that is, held in two parts. The first part would determine innocence or guilt; the second part would determine whether aggravating factors exist sufficient to justify the death penalty, whether mitigating factors exist that outweigh the aggravating factors, and whether the defendant should be sentenced to a term of imprisonment or to death. Based on 1994's data, where there were 17 murders having death penalty aggravators, the department would probably seek the death penalty in ten cases, all of which would require trials. In the remaining seven cases, prosecutors would elect to try the cases as non-capital first degree murders for discretionary reasons, primarily due to the difficulty of obtaining a conviction if the death penalty was included. The department expects that six capital offense convictions will occur each year. Of this latter number, we believe that the death penalty will be imposed four to five times each year.

Thus, the department must be prepared to prosecute capital felonies on six occasions each year, and it must also be prepared to handle a multi-year appellate review process that will grow at an accumulating rate of six cases per year. The experience in other states is that capital trials require far more in the way of prosecution and investigative resources than first degree murder cases that do not include the death penalty.

In its several reviews of capital penalty laws, the United States Supreme Court has taken the position that "death is different." Consequently, the Supreme Court has required that states accord capital defendants procedural and substantive protections that go far beyond those required for non-capital defendants. The Court has, in effect, mandated that capital defendants be accorded "super" due process. The federal courts have consistently held that capital cases demand special consideration, both at trial and on appellate review, because of the exceptional and irrevocable nature of the penalty involved.

In order to meet this heightened level of due process, it will be necessary for the state to employ far greater prosecution resources. Many of the states having a death penalty, for instance, provide two defense attorneys to capital defendants to insure that the due process safeguards required by the courts are met. Likewise, the state's prosecution case must also be properly staffed. The trend is that defense council must be "death penalty certified." This means that each attorney has "second-chaired" in a capital case. In the vast majority of states two defense attorneys are assigned to the guilt phase of the trial and two different attorneys to the penalty phase of the trial. In other words, four defense attorneys per case.

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

During and prior to the trial phase, crime scene evidence will have to be examined and presented by highly qualified forensic experts. Psychiatric experts will also be required during the trial phase and during sentencing proceedings, to rebut and overcome competency and psychiatric defenses to both the substantive-charge and the capital sentence. Cost studies of capital trials in other states indicate that expert witness expenses for both the trial and sentencing proceedings cost about $60,000 in 1994 dollars. The state believes that expert costs today can easily exceed $100,000.

The state's district attorneys offices do not have investigators as do most prosecutors in capital punishment states. These investigators are specially trained to investigate facts which pertain to the penalty phase of capital cases. The Department of Public Safety is anticipated to present a fiscal note requesting two additional investigators to fulfill this function. Whether in Law or Public Safety, specially trained investigators will be required.

Given the special rules that apply in capital cases, prosecutors and paralegals will need advanced training to deal with these cases.

A sentencing proceeding, or the penalty phase of a capital trial, is categorically different in character, procedure, and magnitude from any counterpart in a non-capital trial, and it accounts for a large part of the increase in costs. The heightened due process requirements, and the right to effective assistance of counsel, apply equally to the sentencing phase as they do to the trial phase. At this stage of the proceeding, the defense may be expected to use many of the socio-psychiatric witnesses employed during the trial phase. Additionally, the defense may also use the defendant's family, friends, neighbors, co-workers, school personnel, and social workers as witnesses. The defense's sentencing phase investigations will involve a complete retrospective analysis of every positive aspect of the defendant's life from the day of birth to the date of sentence. The prosecution, on the other hand, must interview each of the defendant's witnesses to rebut mitigation evidence, and present its own witnesses to prove its aggravating factors. For example, in one California case, 240 persons were investigated and interviewed as potential witnesses and 120 were eventually called as witnesses in a single sentencing proceeding. In addition, a five-fold increase in pretrial motion practice, often involving a state's Supreme Court, has occurred in other states between capital and non-capital first degree murder cases. In view of the foregoing, it appears likely that the same level of state resources, needed for the state's most expensive criminal trials, will also be needed for capital murder trials.

Post-conviction appellate reviews of death sentences will also require a substantial expenditure of state resources. Initially, challenges to the law itself can be expected to be taken to the Alaska Supreme Court on the basis of both state and federal constitutional due process, equal protection, and cruel and unusual punishment doctrines. Such challenges should be expected during the first four or five years after the provisions of the bill go into effect. Otherwise, the bill provides for a straightforward appeals process to the Alaska Supreme Court, but death sentences will nonetheless result in lengthy and complicated appellate litigation. This is because of the substantial appellate avenues available to capital defendants in the federal court system, primarily on claims of: due process, competency, and newly discovered evidence. Typically, these cases move up and down throughout the state and federal court systems, and involve the state superior and supreme courts, the U.S. Supreme Court, and the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, and the U.S. District Court. As a result, as has been the experience in every other capital punishment state, it should be expected that many years will pass before a death sentence can be carried out. Information indicates that nationally an average of nearly 12.7 years elapses from the time a death penalty sentence is imposed to the time the sentence is carried out.

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

Implementation

The Department of Law anticipates that the time from when an offense is committed until a capital felony trial takes place will be between two and three years after the bill takes effect. (A recent study by the Alaska Judicial Council showed that of the 51 felony jury trials in Anchorage in 2007, the average time to disposition was 669 days. Capital cases can be estimated to take substantially longer.) Likewise, the post-conviction appellate review process will not commence until sometime during the latter years. For these reasons, the department has developed a multi-year implementation plan for this fiscal note.

During the first year, it will be necessary to add three attorneys, three paraprofessionals, and two law office assistants to handle capital felony prosecutions. Although perhaps as few as four bifurcated trials may actually get underway during the first year, substantial time will be required preparing for trial. This includes advising police investigators, examining evidence, interviewing witnesses, consulting with psychiatric and forensic experts, and initiating, responding to, and arguing pretrial motions. Also, preparation work on all 17 potential capital felonies expected to occur during the first year must begin as soon as possible after an offense is committed. This is so even if the cases eventually resolve with a conviction of a lesser offense.

The "super" due process required by the courts in death penalty cases, and the requirement for a separate sentencing proceeding, will more than triple the work of the department's staff who handle these cases, compared with non-capital first degree murder cases. Extraordinary amounts of attorney and paraprofessional time will be needed to satisfy these minimum, mandatory requirements. As a consequence, capital felony prosecutions could not readily be undertaken in any of the department's offices, except for Anchorage and possibly Fairbanks, without providing special prosecution staff on a case-by-case basis. And, even for Anchorage and Fairbanks, the existing staff would have to be substantially augmented each time a capital felony is handled. All of the positions to be added to handle capital trials and post-conviction death sentence appeals would therefore be located in the department's Office of Special Prosecutions and Appeals, in Anchorage.

During the second year, six or more additional capital felonies would need to be processed at the same time the previous years cases are readied for trial. At this point, it will be necessary to add one attorney, one paraprofessional, and one law office assistant to handle the increasing capital felony trial caseload. It will also be necessary to establish a capital felony appeals staff during the second year, when appeals from the first four trials are expected to begin the appellate review process. Initially, one attorney, one paraprofessional, and one law office assistant will be needed to handle capital felony appeals.

During the third year, the number of bifurcated capital murder trials should equal the number of new capital offenses charged, although some compression and overlapping of the caseload will likely occur. Consequently, it will be necessary to increase the trial staff during the third year, in order to handle the total annual workload, and to insure against speedy trial problems. The trial staff would be increased by one attorney, one paraprofessional, and one law office assistant. Post-conviction capital felony appeals will have reached stride by year three, and they will continue to increase at the rate of six new cases each year, thereafter. It will, therefore, be necessary to increase the appeals staff in the third year by adding two attorneys, one paraprofessional, and one law office assistant.

It is not possible to accurately predict the eventual annual costs of a capital felony law beyond its first three or four years. There are simply too many unknowns. However, the costs that have been predicted are conservative. The following factors have been considered in arriving at these costs.

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

(1) Capital felony due process and bifurcated trial requirements will more than triple the cost and time spent in prosecuting first degree murder offenses, at a minimum.

(2) There will need to be two teams of prosecutors: one for the guilt phase at trial and a second team specializing in the penalty phase.

(3) Pretrial motion practice will increase dramatically resulting in additional scheduling problems.

(4) Logistics problems will occur at most locations, except Anchorage and Fairbanks, and these problems will become more severe the smaller and more remote the location.

(5) Witness travel and per diem will be expensive because of the large number of witnesses that will be required for both the trial and the sentencing phases of capital felony prosecutions, and in many cases this includes out-of-state travel.

(6) Staff travel and per diem will likewise be expensive for trials held outside of Anchorage. Extensive staff travel expense will also be necessary, for trials held at all locations, to interview both prosecution and defense witnesses who will appear at sentencing proceedings.

(7) The cost for appeals is calculated only through the sixth year; however, this cost will ultimately grow enormously. The average length of time between a death sentence conviction and an execution in the United States is nearly thirteen years (12.7 in 2007). Consequently, the state will have to provide enough resources to respond to the ongoing appeals of up to 78 (6 capital felony trials per year) or more capital felony defendants annually, within 13 years. The eventual costs for this extended timeframe are not within the scope of this fiscal note analysis.

(8) Therefore, the following per trial expense estimates have been used to calculate the costs of this fiscal note.

Capital Felony Trials
- Witness travel and subsistence, $66,000 per case.
- Staff travel and per diem, $10,000 per attorney, $6,600 per paraprofessional, $4,000 per law office assistant, per annum.
- Expert witness fees, $100,000 per case.
- Standard witness fees paid to others, $2,500 per case.
- Deposition/court reporter charges, $20,000 per case.

Death Sentence Appellate Review
- Staff travel, $4,600 per attorney, $2,500 per paraprofessional, per annum.
- Fees for outside counsel for years two and three only, $50,000, each year.
- Transcription/court reporter costs, $30,000 per case.
- Training first year $10,000, following years $5,000

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

BILL NO. HB009

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

Fiscal Analysis HB9
Cost Summary (First Year, Capital Trials)

Assumption: 6 trials per year including trial preparation

OBJECT	(1) Atty V	(2) Atty IV	(2) Assoc Atty I	(1) P/A II	(2) LOA I	Total
100 - Salaries & Benefits	167.0	290.0	180.0	80.0	120.0	837.0
	167.0	290.0	180.0	80.0	120.0	837.0
200 - Travel
Staff Travel & Per Diem	10.0	19.9	13.3	6.6	8.0	57.8
	10.0	19.9	13.3	6.6	8.0	57.8
300 - Contractual
Communications, Copy	4.8	9.6	6.4	3.2	6.4	30.3
Office Space Leases	7.4	14.9	14.9	7.4	14.9	59.5
PC Network Maintenance	2.0	4.0	4.0	2.0	4.0	15.9
Staff Training	4.0	4.0	2.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
WestLaw	1.6	3.2	3.2	1.6	0.0	9.6
	19.8	35.6	30.4	14.2	25.2	125.2
400 - Supplies
Office Consumables	2.4	4.8	4.8	2.4	3.2	17.5
Law Library	1.6	3.2	3.2	1.6	0.0	9.6
New Position Supplies	2.0	4.0	4.0	2.0	4.0	15.9
	6.0	11.9	11.9	6.0	7.2	43.0
500 - Equipment
New Position Equipment	3.3	6.6	6.6	3.3	6.6	26.6
Personal Computer	5.3	10.6	10.6	5.3	10.6	42.5
	8.6	17.3	17.3	8.6	17.3	69.0
Total	211.4	374.7	252.9	115.4	177.6	1132.0

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

BILL NO. HB009

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

Fiscal Analysis HB9
Cost Summary (Second and Third Year Additions, Capital Trials)

Assumption:
Year 2 - 12 trials
Year 3 - 18 trials, preparation on 10 new charges

Second Year OBJECT	(1) Atty IV	(1) Assoc Atty I	(1) LOA I	Total
100 - Salaries & Benefits	145.0	90.0	60.0	295.0
	145.0	90.0	60.0	295.0
200 - Travel
Staff Travel & Per Diem	10.0	6.6	4.0	20.6
	10.0	6.6	4.0	20.6
300 - Contractual
Communications, Copy	4.8	4.8	3.2	12.7
Office Space Leases	7.4	7.4	7.4	22.3
PC Network Maintenance	2.0	2.0	2.0	6.0
WestLaw	1.6	1.6	0.0	3.2
	15.8	15.8	12.6	44.2
400 - Supplies
Office Consumables	2.4	2.4	1.6	6.4
Law Library	1.6	1.6	0.0	3.2
New Position Supplies	2.0	2.0	2.0	6.0
	6.0	6.0	3.6	15.5
500 - Equipment
New Position Equipment	3.3	3.3	3.3	10.0
Personal Computer	5.3	5.3	5.3	15.9
	8.6	8.6	8.6	25.9
Total	185.4	127.0	88.8	401.2

Third Year OBJECT	(1) Atty IV	(1) P/A II	(1) LOA I	Total
100 - Salaries & Benefits	145.0	80.0	60.0	285.0
	145.0	80.0	60.0	285.0
200 - Travel
Staff Travel & Per Diem	10.0	6.6	4.0	20.6
	10.0	6.6	4.0	20.6
300 - Contractual
Communications, Copy	4.8	4.8	3.2	12.7
Office Space Leases	7.4	7.4	7.4	22.3
PC Network Maintenance	2.0	2.0	2.0	6.0
WestLaw	1.6	1.6	0.0	3.2
	15.8	15.8	12.6	44.2
400 - Supplies
Office Consumables	2.4	2.4	1.6	6.4
Law Library	1.6	1.6	0.0	3.2
New Position Supplies	2.0	2.0	2.0	6.0
	6.0	6.0	3.6	15.5
500 - Equipment
New Position Equipment	3.3	3.3	3.3	10.0
Personal Computer	5.3	5.3	5.3	15.9
	8.6	8.6	8.6	25.9
Total	185.4	117.0	88.8	391.2

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

BILL NO. HB009

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

Fiscal Analysis HB9
Cost Summary (Second and Third Year Additions, Appellate Review Process)

Assumption:
Year 2 - 4 trials begin appellate review process
Year 3 - 8 trials on appeal, with 6 new cases each following year

Second Year OBJECT	(1) Atty V	(1) Assoc Atty I	(1) LOA I	Total
100 - Salaries & Benefits	167.0	90.0	60.0	317.0
	167.0	90.0	60.0	317.0
200 - Travel
Staff Travel & Per Diem	4.6	3.3	0.0	8.0
	4.6	3.3	0.0	8.0
300 - Contractual
Communications, Copy	29.7	29.7	3.2	62.7
Office Space Leases	7.4	7.4	7.4	22.3
PC Network Maintenance	2.0	2.0	2.0	6.0
WestLaw	3.2	3.2	0.0	6.4
	42.4	42.4	12.6	97.3
400 - Supplies
Office Consumables	2.4	2.4	1.6	6.4
Law Library	1.6	1.6	0.0	3.2
New Position Supplies	2.0	2.0	2.0	6.0
	6.0	6.0	3.6	15.5
500 - Equipment
New Position Equipment	3.3	3.3	3.3	10.0
Personal Computer	5.3	5.3	5.3	15.9
	8.6	8.6	8.6	25.9
Total	228.6	150.3	84.8	463.7

Third Year OBJECT	(2) Atty IV	(1) P/A II	(1) LOA I	Total
100 - Salaries & Benefits	290.0	80.0	60.0	430.0
	290.0	80.0	60.0	430.0
200 - Travel
Staff Travel & Per Diem	9.3	3.3	0.0	12.6
	9.3	3.3	0.0	12.6
300 - Contractual
Communications, Copy	59.5	29.7	3.2	92.4
Office Space Leases	14.9	7.4	7.4	29.7
PC Network Maintenance	4.0	2.0	2.0	8.0
WestLaw	6.4	3.2	0.0	9.6
	84.7	42.4	12.6	139.7
400 - Supplies
Office Consumables	4.8	2.4	1.6	8.8
Law Library	3.2	1.6	0.0	4.8
New Position Supplies	4.0	2.0	2.0	8.0
	11.9	6.0	3.6	21.5
500 - Equipment
New Position Equipment	6.6	3.3	3.3	13.3
Personal Computer	10.6	5.3	5.3	21.2
	17.3	8.6	8.6	34.5
Total	413.2	140.3	84.8	638.3

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

Fiscal Analysis HB9
Out-of-Pocket Costs - Capital Felony Trials

Year 1: (4 cases underway)

Witness travel and per diem $66.0 per case x 4 cases	=	264.0
Expert witness fees $100.0 per case x 4 cases	=	400.0
Witness fees (witnesses of fact) $3.3 per case x 4 cases	=	13.2
Deposition/court reporter charges $27.0 per case x 4 cases	=	108.0

Year 2: (8 cases underway)

Witness travel and per diem $66.0 per case x 8 cases	=	528.0
Expert witness fees $100.0 per case x 8 cases	=	800.0
Witness fees (witnesses of fact) $3.3 per case x 8 cases	=	26.4
Deposition/court reporter charges $27.0 per case x 8 cases	=	216.0

Year 3: (10 cases underway)

Witness travel and per diem $66.0 per case x 10 cases	=	660.0
Expert witness fees $100.0 per case x 10 cases	=	1000.0
Witness fees (witnesses of fact) $3.3 per case x 10 cases	=	33.0
Deposition/court reporter charges $27.0 per case x 10 cases	=	270.0

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

Fiscal Analysis HB9
Out-of-Pocket Costs - Capital Felony Appeals

Year 2: (4 cases underway)

Outside counsel to uphold statute $66.0 per case x 1 case	=	66.0
Deposition/court reporter charges $40.0 per case x 4 cases	=	160.0

Year 3: (4 cases underway)

Outside counsel to uphold statute $66.0 per case x 1 case	=	66.0
Deposition/court reporter charges $40.0 per case x 8 cases	=	320.0

Year 4: (14 cases underway)

Deposition/court reporter charges $40.0 per case x 6 cases	=	240.0

FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

BILL NO. HB009

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

Fiscal Analysis HB9
Cumulative Implementation Cost by Year

Criminal Felony Trial

OBJECT	Year 1	Year 2	Year 3	Year 4	Year 5	Year 6
100 - Salaries & Benefits	837.0	1132.0	1417.0	1417.0	1417.0	1417.0
200 - Travel
Staff Travel & Per Diem	57.8	78.4	99.0	99.0	99.0	99.0
Witness Travel	264.0	528.0	660.0	660.0	660.0	660.0
	321.8	606.4	759.0	759.0	759.0	759.0
300 - Contractual
Staff Contractual	125.2	159.4	203.6	203.6	203.6	203.6
Outside Services	521.2	1042.4	1303.0	1303.0	1303.0	1303.0
	646.4	1201.8	1506.6	1506.6	1506.6	1506.6
400 - Supplies	43.0	58.5	74.0	74.0	74.0	74.0
500 - Equipment	69.0	94.9	120.8	120.8	120.8	120.8
Total	1917.2	3093.6	3877.4	3877.4	3877.4	3877.4
PFT	8	11	14	14	14	14

Appellate Review

OBJECT	Year 1	Year 2	Year 3	Year 4	Year 5	Year 6
100 - Salaries & Benefits	0.0	317.0	747.0	747.0	747.0	747.0
200 - Travel
Staff Travel & Per Diem	0.0	8.0	20.6	20.6	20.6	20.6
Witness Travel	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
	0.0	8.0	20.6	20.6	20.6	20.6
300 - Contractual
Staff Contractual	0.0	97.3	237.0	237.0	237.0	237.0
Outside Services	0.0	226.0	386.0	240.0	240.0	240.0
	0.0	323.3	623.0	477.0	477.0	477.0
400 - Supplies	0.0	15.5	37.0	37.0	37.0	37.0
500 - Equipment	0.0	25.9	60.4	60.4	60.4	60.4
Total	0.0	689.7	1488.0	1342.0	1342.0	1342.0
PFT	0	3	7	7	7	7

FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Fiscal Note Number:
Bill Version: HB9-ACS-02-20-09
() Publish Date:

Identifier (file name):
Title: Death Penalty
Sponsor: Representative Chenault
Requester:

Dept. Affected:
RDU: Alaska Court System
Component: Trial Courts
Component Number:

Expenditures/Revenues (Thousands of Dollars)

Note: Amounts do not include inflation unless otherwise noted below.

	Appropriation Required	Information
OPERATING EXPENDITURES	FY 2010	FY 2010	FY 2011	FY 2012	FY 2013	FY 2014	FY 2015
Personal Services	128.8	128.8	618.9	1,163.2	1,163.2	1,163.2	1,163.2
Travel			28.8	52.5	47.5	47.5	47.5
Contractual	62.0	62.0	638.0	1,828.1	1,828.1	1,828.1	1,828.1
Supplies	6.5	6.5	126.5	57.0	19.5	19.5	19.5
Equipment
Land & Structures	1,843.1	1,843.1
Grants & Claims
Miscellaneous
TOTAL OPERATING AND CAPITAL	2,040.4	2,040.4	1,412.2	3,100.8	3,058.3	3,058.3	3,058.3
CAPITAL EXPENDITURES	1,843.1	1,843.1
CHANGE IN REVENUES ( )

FUND SOURCE (Thousands of Dollars)

1002 Federal Receipts
1003 GF Match
1004 GF	2,040.4	2,040.4	1,412.2	3,100.8	3,058.3	3,058.3	3,058.3
1005 GF/Program Receipts
1037 GF/Mental Health
Other Interagency Receipts
TOTAL	2,040.4	2,040.4	1,412.2	3,100.8	3,058.3	3,058.3	3,058.3

Estimate of any current year (FY2009) cost:

POSITIONS

Full-time	1.0	1.0	7.0	13.0	13.0	13.0	13.0
Part-time
Temporary	1.0	1.0

ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)
See attached.

Prepared by: Doug Wooliver, Administrative Attorney — Phone 463-4750
Division: Alaska Court System — Date/Time 2-20-09 @ 11:00 am
Approved by: Doug Wooliver for Stephanie Cole, Administrative Director — Date 2/20/2009
Alaska Court System

Alaska Court System
Fiscal Note Calculations for HB 9
2/20/2009

Personal Services	FY10	FY11	FY12	FY13	FY14	FY15
Superior Court Pro Tem Judge - Anchorage	23,100
Superior Court Judge - Anchorage		238,077	238,077	238,077	238,077	238,077
Staff Attorney (22A), Anchorage, PFT	105,693	105,693	105,693	105,693	105,693	105,693
Law Clerk (13D), Anchorage, PFT		58,440	58,440	58,440	58,440	58,440
Administrative Assistant (12A), Anchorage, PFT		59,376	59,376	59,376	59,376	59,376
In-Court Clerk (12A), Anchorage, PFT		59,376	59,376	59,376	59,376	59,376
Deputy Clerk II (10A), Anchorage, PFT		53,895	53,895	53,895	53,895	53,895
Bailiff (6A), Anchorage, PFT		44,000	44,000	44,000	44,000	44,000
Superior Court Judge - Fairbanks			239,520	239,520	239,520	239,520
Law Clerk (13D), Fairbanks, PFT			65,637	65,637	65,637	65,637
Administrative Assistant (12A), Fairbanks, PFT			65,917	65,917	65,917	65,917
In-Court Clerk (12A), Fairbanks, PFT			65,917	65,917	65,917	65,917
Deputy Clerk II (10A), Fairbanks, PFT			59,376	59,376	59,376	59,376
Bailiff (6A), Fairbanks, PFT			48,000	48,000	48,000	48,000
Subtotal Personal Services	128,793	618,857	1,163,224	1,163,224	1,163,224	1,163,224
Travel
New Judges' Training		5,000	5,000
Jury Sequestration, Travel, Meals, Lodging		23,750	47,500	47,500	47,500	47,500
Subtotal Travel	0	28,750	52,500	47,500	47,500	47,500
Contractual
Jury Costs
500 Jurors 15 Days for Selection		187,500	187,500	187,500	187,500	187,500
18 Jurors for 66 Days of Trial		29,700	29,700	29,700	29,700	29,700
18 Jurors for 5 Days of Deliberation		2,250	2,250	2,250	2,250	2,250
Deliberation Meals $16/18 jurors + bailiff		1,520	1,520	1,520	1,520	1,520
Total per Superior Court Trial		220,970	220,970	220,970	220,970	220,970
Proposed # Superior Court Trials		2	6	6	6	6
Est. Cost of Jury Fees for Capital Punishment Trials		441,900	1,325,800	1,325,800	1,325,800	1,325,800
Offset Jury Costs for Standard Felony Trials		(15,916)	(47,748)	(47,748)	(47,748)	(47,748)
		425,984	1,278,052	1,278,052	1,278,052	1,278,052
Training (Certification to Hear Capital Cases)	60,000	20,000	20,000	20,000	20,000	20,000
Transcription Costs (24,000 pages per trial)		168,000	504,000	504,000	504,000	504,000
Software	2,000	24,000	26,000	26,000	26,000	26,000
Subtotal Contractual	62,000	637,984	1,828,052	1,828,052	1,828,052	1,828,052
Supplies
Workstations, Furniture, Computers, Printers, Recording Equipment, Office Equip/Supplies	6,500	126,500	57,000	19,500	19,500	19,500
Capital Expenses
Remodel Boney & Nesbett Courtrooms	1,696,100
Complete Fairbanks 5th Floor Superior Court	147,000
Subtotal Capital	1,843,100	0	0	0	0	0
Total all Costs	2,040,393	1,412,091	3,100,776	3,058,276	3,058,276	3,058,276
Breakdown by Expense Category:
Personal Services Total	128,800	618,900	1,163,200	1,163,200	1,163,200	1,163,200
Travel Total	0	28,800	52,500	47,500	47,500	47,500
Contractual Total	62,000	638,000	1,828,100	1,828,100	1,828,100	1,828,100
Supplies Total	6,500	126,500	57,000	19,500	19,500	19,500
Capital Total	1,843,100	0	0	0	0	0
Total	2,040,400	1,412,200	3,100,800	3,058,300	3,058,300	3,058,300

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

House Bill 9 adopts a death penalty system for Alaska. The bill establishes a bifurcated jury trial, with a guilt phase and, if the person is convicted of a capital offense, a penalty phase. All death sentences are automatically appealed to the supreme court. The extent to which the court system will be impacted by this bill is largely determined by the number of capital cases charged, the number that go to trial and the number that result in a death sentence. This note is based on the Department of Law's estimate of six death penalty trials a year, with four of those resulting in a sentence of death.

Pretrial

As thoroughly explained in the department's fiscal note analysis, a death penalty case is time consuming and resource intensive through every phase and for every part of the criminal justice system. The court system will begin to feel the impact soon after the department first gives its notice of election to seek the death penalty in a particular case. It is at that point that pretrial motion practice begins. Experience from other states shows that the number of pretrial motions filed in a death penalty case far exceed those filed in a non-capital case.

Pretrial motions are not only much more plentiful in capital cases, but they address constitutional issues that are not generally relevant in non-capital cases. Defense attorneys must raise these challenges in the trial court if they are going to preserve them for future federal court review. The prosecution must respond to and the court must rule on these motions.

In order to help with all motions filed both before and during trial, this note adds one superior court staff attorney. Although based in Anchorage, where the majority of cases will likely be filed, the position will work on motions filed in all locations.

Trial

Once the pretrial work is completed (and data from other states suggests that it takes an average of one and a half to three years to bring a death penalty case to trial), the trial work begins and it starts with jury selection.

Jury selection in a capital trial is different from jury selection in a non-capital trial. One difference is that capital trials last an average of three months, which is roughly four times the length of a non-capital trial for the same offense. Because few people can afford to sit on a jury for three months, many potential jurors are excused. Additionally, jurors in capital cases must be "death qualified," that is they must be willing to impose the death penalty. This further limits the number of people eligible for jury service.

These two limiting factors result in a much longer jury selection process and a need to call far more people as potential jurors. Evidence from other states suggests that it takes many hundreds of potential jurors and from two to four weeks to seat a jury in a death penalty case. This note assumes 500 potential jurors and a selection process that lasts an average of three weeks.

In addition to jury challenges, long trials require tremendous judicial resources. With three weeks to seat each jury and three months for trial, the department's estimate of six capital trials a year means a total of 22.5 months of trial work each year. That is the equivalent of two superior court judges. The court system will need two new judges to handle this increase in workload. However, because this increase in workload is likely to build over the next three years, this note calls for a pro tem (part-time) judge in year one (FY 10) and the services of a staff attorney to help with the initial pretrial motions. In year two (FY 11), this note calls for a superior court judge in Anchorage to begin with the first trials that we anticipate, and in year 3 (FY 12), when the system is up to its six trial a year level, this note calls for the second judge, who will be seated in Fairbanks.

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

Appeals

At the conclusion of the trial process, all death sentences go directly to the supreme court for review. The record on appeal consists of the record before the trial court and the trial court transcript, which is estimated to average 24,000 pages. The court has estimated a $3.50 per page expense for transcription services and this note reflects those costs.

As with the other phases of the process, death penalty appeals are different from other appeals. The court conducts a "proportionality review" to ensure that the penalty is being applied in a uniform and non-discriminatory fashion. This process is long and difficult and involves a detailed look at every stage of the process from charging decision through sentencing. It then compares the case against other cases where the death penalty was not charged.

Additionally, and also unlike most other cases, each death penalty case will come before the court multiple times. The state of Arizona reports that each death penalty defendant brings six or seven cases before the Arizona Supreme Court. Similarly, the Florida Supreme Court states that, although they see an average of 15 new death sentence cases each year, because of the multiple appeals and the back and forth with the state trial courts and the federal courts, they currently have before them 75 different appeals in one form or another.

Judicial Training

Finally, this note includes funding for judicial training. Many states require judges to have special death penalty training prior to presiding over a death penalty case. This training helps reduce the number of cases overturned on appeal due to judicial errors that result from a lack of familiarity with the unique complexities of death penalty law.

FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Fiscal Note Number:
Bill Version: HB9-ACS-02-20-09
() Publish Date:

Identifier (file name):
Title: Death Penalty
Sponsor: Representative Chenault
Requester:

Dept. Affected:
RDU: Alaska Court System
Component: Appellate Courts
Component Number:

Expenditures/Revenues (Thousands of Dollars)

Note: Amounts do not include inflation unless otherwise noted below.

	Appropriation Required	Information
OPERATING EXPENDITURES	FY 2010	FY 2010	FY 2011	FY 2012	FY 2013	FY 2014	FY 2015
Personal Services			178.7	178.7	178.7	178.7	178.7
Travel
Contractual			10.0	10.0	10.0	10.0	10.0
Supplies			15.0	5.0	5.0	5.0	5.0
Equipment
Land & Structures
Grants & Claims
Miscellaneous
TOTAL OPERATING AND CAPITAL	0.0	0.0	203.7	193.7	193.7	193.7	193.7
CAPITAL EXPENDITURES
CHANGE IN REVENUES ( )

FUND SOURCE (Thousands of Dollars)

1002 Federal Receipts
1003 GF Match
1004 GF			203.7	193.7	193.7	193.7	193.7
1005 GF/Program Receipts
1037 GF/Mental Health
Other Interagency Receipts
TOTAL	0.0	0.0	203.7	193.7	193.7	193.7	193.7

Estimate of any current year (FY2009) cost:

POSITIONS

Full-time			2.0	2.0	2.0	2.0	2.0
Part-time
Temporary

ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)
See attached.

Prepared by: Doug Wooliver, Administrative Attorney — Phone 463-4750
Division: Alaska Court System — Date/Time 2-20-09 @ 11:00 am
Approved by: Doug Wooliver for Stephanie Cole, Administrative Director — Date 2/20/2009
Alaska Court System

Revised 9/10/2008 OMB

Alaska Court System
Fiscal Note Calculations for HB 9
2/20/2009

Personal Services	FY10	FY11	FY12	FY13	FY14	FY15
Supreme Court Staff Attorney (24A), Anchorage, PFT		119,306	119,306	119,306	119,306	119,306
Legal Technician (12A), Anchorage, PFT		59,376	59,376	59,376	59,376	59,376
Subtotal Personal Services	0	178,682	178,682	178,682	178,682	178,682
Contractual
Software, Conference Fees, Misc Contractual		10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000
Subtotal Contractual Services	0	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000
Supplies
Office Supplies, Subscriptions		5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000
Office Furniture, Equipment (computers, printers)		10,000
Subtotal Supplies	0	15,000	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000
Total all Costs	0	203,682	193,682	193,682	193,682	193,682
Breakdown by Expense Category:
Personal Services Total	0	178,700	178,700	178,700	178,700	178,700
Contractual Total	0	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000
Supplies Total	0	15,000	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000
Total	0	203,700	193,700	193,700	193,700	193,700

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

House Bill 9 adopts a death penalty system for Alaska. The bill establishes a bifurcated jury trial, with a guilt phase and, if the person is convicted of a capital offense, a penalty phase. All death sentences are automatically appealed to the supreme court. The extent to which the court system will be impacted by this bill is largely determined by the number of capital cases charged, the number that go to trial and the number that result in a death sentence. This note is based on the Department of Law's estimate of six death penalty trials a year, with four of those resulting in a sentence of death.

Pretrial

As thoroughly explained in the department's fiscal note analysis, a death penalty case is time consuming and resource intensive through every phase and for every part of the criminal justice system. The court system will begin to feel the impact soon after the department first gives its notice of election to seek the death penalty in a particular case. It is at that point that pretrial motion practice begins. Experience from other states shows that the number of pretrial motions filed in a death penalty case far exceed those filed in a non-capital case.

Pretrial motions are not only much more plentiful in capital cases, but they address constitutional issues that are not generally relevant in non-capital cases. Defense attorneys must raise these challenges in the trial court if they are going to preserve them for future federal court review. The prosecution must respond to and the court must rule on these motions.

In order to help with all motions filed both before and during trial, this note adds one superior court staff attorney. Although based in Anchorage, where the majority of cases will likely be filed, the position will work on motions filed in all locations.

Trial

Once the pretrial work is completed (and data from other states suggests that it takes an average of one and a half to three years to bring a death penalty case to trial), the trial work begins and it starts with jury selection.

Jury selection in a capital trial is different from jury selection in a non-capital trial. One difference is that capital trials last an average of three months, which is roughly four times the length of a non-capital trial for the same offense. Because few people can afford to sit on a jury for three months, many potential jurors are excused. Additionally, jurors in capital cases must be "death qualified," that is they must be willing to impose the death penalty. This further limits the number of people eligible for jury service.

These two limiting factors result in a much longer jury selection process and a need to call far more people as potential jurors. Evidence from other states suggests that it takes many hundreds of potential jurors and from two to four weeks to seat a jury in a death penalty case. This note assumes 500 potential jurors and a selection process that lasts an average of three weeks.

In addition to jury challenges, long trials require tremendous judicial resources. With three weeks to seat each jury and three months for trial, the department's estimate of six capital trials a year means a total of 22.5 months of trial work each year. That is the equivalent of two superior court judges. The court system will need two new judges to handle this increase in workload. However, because this increase in workload is likely to build over the next three years, this note calls for a pro tem (part-time) judge in year one (FY 10) and the services of a staff attorney to help with the initial pretrial motions. In year two (FY 11), this note calls for a superior court judge in Anchorage to begin with the first trials that we anticipate, and in year 3 (FY 12), when the system is up to its six trial a year level, this note calls for the second judge, who will be seated in Fairbanks.

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

Appeals

At the conclusion of the trial process, all death sentences go directly to the supreme court for review. The record on appeal consists of the record before the trial court and the trial court transcript, which is estimated to average 24,000 pages. The court has estimated a $3.50 per page expense for transcription services and this note reflects those costs.

As with the other phases of the process, death penalty appeals are different from other appeals. The court conducts a "proportionality review" to ensure that the penalty is being applied in a uniform and non-discriminatory fashion. This process is long and difficult and involves a detailed look at every stage of the process from charging decision through sentencing. It then compares the case against other cases where the death penalty was not charged.

Additionally, and also unlike most other cases, each death penalty case will come before the court multiple times. The state of Arizona reports that each death penalty defendant brings six or seven cases before the Arizona Supreme Court. Similarly, the Florida Supreme Court states that, although they see an average of 15 new death sentence cases each year, because of the multiple appeals and the back and forth with the state trial courts and the federal courts, they currently have before them 75 different appeals in one form or another.

Judicial Training

Finally, this note includes funding for judicial training. Many states require judges to have special death penalty training prior to presiding over a death penalty case. This training helps reduce the number of cases overturned on appeal due to judicial errors that result from a lack of familiarity with the unique complexities of death penalty law.

FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA
2009 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Fiscal Note Number: HB9-DOC-OC-03-15-09
Bill Version:
() Publish Date:

Identifier (file name): HB9-DOC-OC-03-15-09
Title "An Act Authorizing Capital Punishment"
Sponsor Representatives Chenault, Ramras
Requester Governor

Dept. Affected: DOC
RDU Administration & Support
Component Office of the Commissioner
Component Number 694

Expenditures/Revenues (Thousands of Dollars)

Note: Amounts do not include inflation unless otherwise noted below.

	Appropriation Required	Information
OPERATING EXPENDITURES	FY 2010	FY 2010	FY 2011	FY 2012	FY 2013	FY 2014	FY 2015
Personal Services				367.5	367.5	367.5	367.5
Travel				20.0	40.0	60.0	80.0
Contractual				2.5	5.0	5.0	5.0
Supplies
Equipment
Land & Structures
Grants & Claims
Miscellaneous
TOTAL OPERATING	0.0	0.0	0.0	390.0	412.5	432.5	452.5
CAPITAL EXPENDITURES			5,000.0
CHANGE IN REVENUES ( )

FUND SOURCE (Thousands of Dollars)

1002 Federal Receipts
1003 GF Match
1004 GF				390.0	412.5	432.5	452.5
1005 GF/Program Receipts
1037 GF/Mental Health
Other Interagency Receipts
TOTAL	0.0	0.0	0.0	390.0	412.5	432.5	452.5

Estimate of any current year (FY2009) cost: 0.0

POSITIONS

Full-time				5	5	5	5
Part-time
Temporary

ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)

The Department of Corrections anticipates up to four offenders will be sentenced each year under this legislation. The national average length of time for the appeals process is 13 years. The average annual cost of incarceration of an offender housed at Spring Creek Correctional Center (SCCC) is approximately $51,012. The imposition of a death sentence on an offender who would be given a 99-year sentence under current law would result in a cost avoidance of $51,012 per year once the sentence is carried out and until what would have been the end of the offender's natural life.

Any additional costs associated with execution would be addressed through the annual supplemental process. These costs would be the result of transport/security officer overtime and travel costs associated with the staffing of the death chamber during the fiscal year when an actual execution occurs.

Prepared by: Dwayne Peeples, Deputy Commissioner
Division Office of the Commissioner
Phone 465-4670
Date/Time 3/15/2009 1243 pm

Approved by: Joesph Schmidt, Commissioner
Office of the Commissioner
Date 3/15/2009

(Revised 9/10/2008 OMB)

ANALYSIS CONTINUATION

Capital Construction costs added in FY2012 are the anticipated costs associated with the building of a death chamber. These costs are based on construction of a 4,590 square foot stand-alone module to include:

- o Metal Detector
- o Public Lobby
- o Visitor Lockers / Screening
- o Meeting and Contact Visitation Rooms
- o Non-Contact Visitation Video Station
- o Separate restrooms for Staff / Inmate / Visitors
- o Sally Ports Vehicle
- o Execution Room
- o Execution Equipment Room
- o Medical Equipment
- o Medical Waste Collection and Disposal Area
- o Storage
- o Execution Witness Room

Annual Operating Cost:

71000 Personal Services (FY10 rates employer rates applied, no overtime included):

A housing unit located at SCCC will be converted to a death row housing unit. Two security posts will be required with each post consisting of five security officers--1 Correctional Officer III, and 4 Correctional Officer I/II positions. The department will utilize five existing positions and add five new positions to staff these posts.

72000 Travel:

The Department of Law has determined an average of one court hearing per year, per inmate during the appeal process. The appeal process can take up to 13 years. Inmates must be transported back to their judicial district for the court hearing. The Department of Corrections is responsible for transporting the offender to the closest secure facility for each court appearance. Each round-trip is based on current costs for the Public Safety King Air transportation or for a charter to each geographic region--Southeast, Interior, and Northwestern AK. Ground transportation within the Anchorage area, Mat-Su Valley, and Kenai Peninsula is included. Travel is for the inmate and two transport officers, per diem and lodging for the officers is included.

73000 Contractual Services:

The services line is based on anticipated utility costs only. These are current estimates and are associated with the actual death chamber only.

74000 Commodities:

There are no increases anticipated for the daily costs of incarceration as these offenders are already committed to the department's custody under existing legislation.

HOUSE COMMITTEE REPORT

(7)
Date Referred to Committee: January 20, 2009 FURTHER REFERRALS: Finance

Date of Committee Action: 4/8/09

The JUDICIARY Committee considered: HOUSE BILL NO. 9

"An Act relating to murder; authorizing capital punishment, classifying murder in the first degree as a capital felony, and allowing the imposition of the death penalty for certain murders; establishing sentencing procedures for capital felonies; and amending Rules 32, 32.1, and 32.3, Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, and Rules 204, 209, 210, and 212, Alaska Rules of Appellate Procedure."

HB 9 CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

Recommends it be replaced with [ ] HCS or [√] CS for HB9 (JUD)
For Senate Bills with new title: [ ] Technical Title [ ] New Title: HCR_____ [ ] Same Title [ ] New Title

[ ] attach amendments
[ ] add new referral to _____Committee
[ ] Letter of Intent_____Committee

List of Abbrev for Depts.:
ADM
CED
COR
CRT
EED
DEC
DFG
GOV
DHS
LWF
LAW
LEG
MVA
DNR
DPS
REV
DOT
UA

NEW FISCAL NOTES *Assigned by Chief Clerk's Office

List by Dept(s):	*FN#	Fiscal	Indet.	Zero
DOC		✓
DPS		✓
DHS			✓
ADM(OPA)		✓
ADM(PDA)		✓
LAW		✓
CRT(TL)		✓
CRT(AP)		✓

PREVIOUS FISCAL NOTES

List by Dept(s):	FN#	Fiscal	Indet.	Zero

Signing with recommendations	Printed Last Name	DP	DNP	NR	AM
	LYNN		X
	Gruenberg		✓
	Coghill	✓		*
	Ostlstrom			X
	Holmes		X
	Gatto	✓
Chair:	LAMMERS	X
Chair:

HB 9

RELEVANT LAW

(FILE 2)

MEMORANDUM

STATE OF ALASKA

Department of Law - Criminal Division

To:	Members, House Judiciary Committee	Date:	March 27, 2009
From:	Susan S. McLean SSME Chief Assistant Attorney General	Tel No: Fax:	(907) 269-6379 (907) 269-6305
		Subject:	Statistics re: HB 9

On March 23, during a House Judiciary Committee meeting regarding HB 9, Representative Coghill requested statistics regarding the racial composition of the group of Alaska offenders who have been convicted of Murder in the First Degree. Although it was not possible within this time frame to compile statistics regarding all offenders who have ever been convicted of that crime, the Department of Corrections was able to gather that data as it applies to offenders who are currently serving sentences for that crime. The attached document contains those statistics and a short narrative summary.

ETHNICITY OF OFFENDERS IMPRISONED FOR FIRST DEGREE MURDER

Table 1, compiled by the Alaska Department of Corrections, contains data pertaining to offenders who are currently incarcerated, having been convicted in Alaska of the Murder in the First Degree. There are currently 248 offenders serving sentences for the crime of Murder in the First Degree.

Table 1: Prisoners Currently Incarcerated For Murder in the First Degree

ETHNICITY	MALE	FEMALE	TOTAL	PERCENTAGE
Alaska Native	49	2	51	20.6%
Asian/Pacific Island	5	1	6	2.4%
Black	30	0	30	12.1%
Caucasian	148	9	157	63.3%
Hispanic	4	0	4	1.6%
TOTAL	236	12	248	100%

Source: Alaska Department of Corrections

Table 2: U.S. Census Bureau - 2007 Population Estimate

	Alaska	USA
Population 2007 Estimate	683,478	301,621,157
American Indian And Alaska Native Persons, Percent, 2007	15.2%	1.0%
Asian/Pacific Islander, Percent, 2007	5.2%	4.6%
Black Persons, Percent, 2007	4.1%	12.8%
White Persons Not Hispanic, Percent, 2007	66.1%	66.0%
Persons Of Hispanic Or Latino Origin, Percent, 2007	5.9%	15.1%
Persons Reporting Two Or More Races, Percent, 2007	4.7%	1.6%

Table 2 reflects population statistics published by the U.S. Census Bureau in 2007. There is not a significant difference between the percentage of Alaska Natives in the general population of Alaska and the percentage incarcerated for first-degree murder. 4.7% of the Alaska population reported two or more races. It is unknown whether this is relevant to the difference in the percentage of Alaska Natives incarcerated (20.6% of the incarcerated offenders as opposed to 15.2% of the Alaska population).

The percentage of white persons incarcerated for first-degree murder is not significantly lower than the percentage of white persons in the general population. Table 3 on the following page reveals that the number of white offenders serving life sentences for murder is actually higher than the percentage of white persons in the Alaska population.

The percentage of black offenders in prison for murder in the first degree is consistent with the percentage of black persons in the population of the United States. It is, however, greater than the percentage of blacks in the Alaska population.

The percentage of other minorities – Hispanics, Asians and Pacific Islanders – currently incarcerated for murder in the first degree is significantly lower than the percentage of those minorities in either the Alaska population or the United States population.

Absent statutory or judicial limitation on parole eligibility, offenders are normally entitled to release on parole after serving two-thirds of the sentence imposed. Therefore, a sentence in which the average offender would spend the remainder of his or her life in prison is a sentence in excess of 90 years. Courts typically reach the 90-year range in sentencing after concluding that an offense is deserving of a maximum sentence and it is therefore likely that most offenders in this range received 99-year sentences.

Table 3 reflects the length of the sentence which is being served by each of the 248 offenders convicted of murder in the first degree. 108 offenders are serving sentences of more than 90 years and 12 are serving sentences in excess of 100 years.

TABLE 3: LENGTH OF SENTENCES IMPOSED FOR MURDER IN THE FIRST DEGREE

ETHNICITY	SENTENCE LENGTH (YEARS)
	5 - 19	20 - 29	30 - 39	40 - 49	50 - 59	60 - 69	70 - 79	80 - 89	90 - 99	100+	UNKN	UNSENT	TOTAL
Alaska Native	1	2	1	2	2	4	5	0	22	6	2	4	51
Asian/Pacific Isl	0	0	0	0	2	1	1	0	2	0	0	0	6
Black	3	1	0	0	3	1	2	3	6	3	2	6	30
Caucasian	3	0	9	6	10	13	11	8	77	3	3	14	157
Hispanic	0	0	0	0	1	0	1	1	1	0	0	0	4
TOTAL	7	3	10	8	18	19	20	12	108	12	7	24	248

Source: Alaska Department of Corrections

Of the 108 inmates serving 90-99 year sentences, the ethnic composition is as follows

Alaska Native – 22	20.3 %
Asian/Pacific Islander – 2	1.8 %
Black – 6	5.5 %
White – 77	71.2 %
Hispanic – 1	0.9 %

Again, the percentage (by ethnic group) of total offenders serving 90-99 year sentences is closely related to the percentage of the population represented by that group.

Disproportion does exist within the group of 12 offenders who are serving sentences in excess of 100 years. In this group, 6 are Alaska native, 3 are white and 3 are black. Given the small number of people comprising the group, it is difficult to draw conclusions without looking at individual cases. Since the maximum sentence for first degree murder is 99 years, it follows that each of the offenders committed some crime in addition to the one murder. However, given time constraints, it was not possible to determine whether these offenders murdered more than one person, or received the sentence as a result of a second count other than first-degree murder. Furthermore, as a practical matter there is little difference between a sentence of 99 years and a sentence in excess of 100 years since, in either case, the offender is not likely to outlive the time until parole eligibility.

STATE OF ALASKA

DEPARTMENT OF LAW
CRIMINAL DIVISION

SARAH PALIN, GOVERNOR

Address: 310 K. St., Suite 403
Anchorage, AK 9950

Phone: (907) 269-6379
Fax: (907) 269-6305

March 25, 2009

The Honorable Jay Ramras
Chair, House Judiciary Committee
Alaska State Legislature, Room 118
Juneau, AK 99801

Re: Response to testimony by Barbara Brink regarding HB 9

Dear Representative Ramras:

Assistant Attorney General John Novak testified regarding HB 9 on March 2, 2009. Mr. Novak began his testimony by stating that he wished to address the "simple point" that lengthy prison terms do not necessarily protect the public. He informed the committee that the purpose of his testimony was to offer examples which demonstrate that innocent people are still killed by offenders who are serving lengthy prison sentences in secure facilities.

On March 23, 2009 former Public Defender Barbara Brink testified in response to Mr. Novak's remarks. Capital punishment is an emotionally charged topic. It may be that as a result of her passionate opposition to the death penalty, Ms. Brink misunderstood the purpose of Mr. Novak's testimony. To the extent that Ms. Brink purported to express the motives of the Department of Law generally and Mr. Novak specifically, we wish to set the record straight.

The recording of Mr. Novak's testimony speaks for itself. Contrary to Ms. Brink's opinion that the Department of Law's motive was to "create a false impression" regarding the applicability of the death penalty in the cases Mr. Novak described, Mr. Novak clearly stated his purpose. He did not say or imply that the offenders he described would have been candidates for the death penalty. He did not claim that Mr. Gustavson, Mr. Cheely or Mr. Abuhl was convicted of murder in the first degree. He clearly stated that Mr. Donnelly was tried and convicted in federal court in Alaska and was then imprisoned in South Carolina. What Mr. Novak said is that the all of these offenders were convicted of murder and that the fact that they were in prison did not stop them from killing again. Those statements are unquestionably accurate and consistent with the stated sole purpose of his testimony.

It is unfortunate that the members of this committee were urged to consider, as fact, one person's opinion of another person's reasons for speaking. I urge the members of this committee to review the recording of Mr. Novak's testimony before arriving at unwarranted and unfair conclusions regarding his professional integrity.

Sincerely,

RICHARD SVOBODNY
ACTING ATTORNEY GENERAL

By: Susan McLean
Susan McLean
Acting Deputy Attorney General

cc: Members of the House Judiciary Committee:
Representative Nancy Dahlstrom, Vice Chair
Representative John Coghill
Representative Carl Gatto
Representative Bob Lynn
Representative Max Gruenburg
Representative Lindsey Holmes

John Novak
Barbara Brink

HB 9

DISPOSITION OF FIRST DEGREE MURDER CHARGES
DEPARTMENT OF LAW STATISTICS

A report run in CRIMES (criminal division case management system) for First Degree Murder charges between January 1, 2003 and December 21, 2008 shows the following statistics:

- The report does not include cases referred and not accepted for prosecution. This way, every case has both a DA file number and a court number.
- 159 Murder in the First Degree charges were referred and accepted for prosecution. (133 attempted murder charges were accepted for prosecution, but these were not analyzed because Attempted Murder is not included in HB 9).
- The average number of Murder 1 cases per year is 32
- On April 1, 2009, the following disposition had been made of these cases

Pending Trial

- 37 are pending trial or retrial -- 23.9%

Dismissed

- 33 were dismissed by the state -- 19.4%

REMAINING CHARGES (159 total minus 37 unresolved) -- 122 cases

Conviction of Lesser Offense or Acquitted

- 29 resolved by plea to a lesser offense -- 23.7 %
- 5 found not guilty at jury trial -- 4.1 %
- 5 no true bill by Grand Jury -- 4.1 %
- 4 convicted of lesser offense at jury trial -- 3.2 %
- 1 convicted of lesser offense at court trial -- .82%
- 1 tried on lesser charge at court trial -- .82%
- 1 judgment of acquittal -- .82%
- 1 dismissed by court -- .82%

Convicted as Charged

- 26 convicted of Murder 1 at jury trial -- 21.3 %
- 15 convicted by plea to Murder 1 -- 12.3 %
- 1 convicted as charged at court trial .82%

42 – Total convicted as charged -- 34.4 %

Sec. 05.15.105. Persons prohibited from involvement.

(a) If a person has been convicted of a violation of a law of this state that is, or a law or ordinance of another jurisdiction that would be if it had been committed in this state, a felony, or a violation of a law or ordinance of this state or another jurisdiction that is a crime involving theft or dishonesty or a violation of gambling laws

(1) the department may not issue a license to the person;

(2) the department may not issue a license to, or register as a vendor, an applicant who employs the person in a managerial or supervisory capacity or uses the person as a fund raiser or consultant;

(3) the department may not issue a permit for an activity if the person is responsible for the operation of the activity;

(4) the person may not be employed in a managerial or supervisory capacity by a licensee or vendor or used as a fund raiser or consultant by a licensee or vendor;

(5) the person may not participate in charitable gaming as a permittee, licensee, or vendor.

(b) The department shall adopt regulations that provide that a disqualification of a person under (a) of this section based upon a conviction of that person for a violation

(1) of a law of this state that is, or a law or ordinance of another jurisdiction that would be if it was committed in this state, a class B felony other than extortion, a class C felony, or an unclassified felony described outside of AS 11, and that is not a crime of dishonesty or theft or a violation of gambling laws, terminates 10 years after the person's conviction;

(2) of a law or ordinance of this state or another jurisdiction that is a crime involving theft or dishonesty or a violation of gambling laws, and that is not, or would not be if it was committed in this state, an unclassified felony described in AS 11, a class A felony, or extortion, terminates 10 years after the person's conviction, if the department determines that the

(A) person is of good character, honesty, and integrity; and

(B) person's involvement in charitable gaming is not against the public interest.

History -
(Sec. 7 ch 70 SLA 1993)

Sec. 05.15.140. Proof necessary to qualify for permit.

(a) The department may not issue or renew a permit except upon satisfactory proof that the applicant is a municipality or qualified organization, the activity may be permitted under this chapter, and the issuance of a permit is not detrimental to the best interests of the public. Upon request of the department, the applicant shall prove conclusively each of these requirements before a permit may be issued or renewed.

(b) In an application for a permit, a municipality or qualified organization shall disclose the name and address of each person responsible for the operation of the activity and whether any person named

(1) has been convicted of a violation of a law of this state that is, or a law or ordinance of another state that would be if committed in this state, an unclassified felony described in AS 11, a Class A felony, extortion, or a violation of a law or ordinance of this state or another jurisdiction that is a crime involving theft or dishonesty or a violation of gambling laws; or

(2) has a prohibited financial interest, as defined in regulations adopted by the department, in the operation of the activity.

(c) [Repealed, Sec. 37 ch 70 SLA 1993].

(d) Application forms for permits must contain a notice that a false statement in the application is punishable by law.

Sec. 08.64.326. Grounds for imposition of disciplinary sanctions.

(a) The board may impose a sanction if the board finds after a hearing that a licensee

(1) secured a license through deceit, fraud, or intentional misrepresentation;

(2) engaged in deceit, fraud, or intentional misrepresentation while providing professional services or engaging in professional activities;

(3) advertised professional services in a false or misleading manner;

(4) has been convicted, including conviction based on a guilty plea or plea of nolo contendere, of

(A) a class A or unclassified felony or a crime in another jurisdiction with elements similar to a class A or unclassified felony in this jurisdiction;

(B) a class B or class C felony or a crime in another jurisdiction with elements similar to a class B or class C felony in this jurisdiction if the felony or other crime is substantially related to the qualifications, functions, or duties of the licensee; or

(C) a crime involving the unlawful procurement, sale, prescription, or dispensing of drugs;

(5) has procured, sold, prescribed, or dispensed drugs in violation of a law regardless of whether there has been a criminal action;

(6) intentionally or negligently permitted the performance of patient care by persons under the licensee's supervision that does not conform to minimum professional standards even if the patient was not injured;

(7) failed to comply with this chapter, a regulation adopted under this chapter, or an order of the board;

(8) has demonstrated

(A) professional incompetence, gross negligence, or repeated negligent conduct; the board may not base a finding of professional incompetence solely on the basis that a licensee's practice is unconventional or experimental in the absence of demonstrable physical harm to a patient;

(B) addiction to, severe dependency on, or habitual overuse of alcohol or other drugs that impairs the licensee's ability to practice safely;

(C) unfitness because of physical or mental disability;

(9) engaged in unprofessional conduct, in sexual misconduct, or in lewd or immoral conduct in connection with the delivery of professional services to patients; in this paragraph, "sexual misconduct" includes sexual contact, as defined by the board in regulations adopted under this chapter, or attempted sexual contact with a patient outside the scope of generally accepted methods of examination or treatment of the patient, regardless of the patient's consent or lack of consent, during the term of the physician-patient relationship, as defined by the board in regulations adopted under this chapter, unless the patient was the licensee's spouse at the time of the contact or, immediately preceding the physician-patient relationship, was in a dating, courtship, or engagement relationship with the licensee;

(10) has violated AS 18.16.010;

(11) has violated any code of ethics adopted by regulation by the board;

(12) has denied care or treatment to a patient or person seeking assistance from the physician if the only reason for the denial is the failure or refusal of the patient to agree to arbitrate as provided in AS 09.55.535(a); or

(13) has had a license or certificate to practice medicine in another state or territory of the United States, or a province or territory of Canada, denied, suspended, revoked, surrendered while under investigation for an alleged violation, restricted, limited, conditioned, or placed on probation unless the denial, suspension, revocation, or other action was caused by the failure of the licensee to pay fees to that state, territory, or province.

(b) In a case involving (a)(13) of this section, the final findings of fact, conclusions of law and order of the authority that suspended or revoked a license or certificate constitutes a prima facie case that the license or certificate was suspended or revoked and the grounds under which the suspension or revocation was granted.

Sec. 09.65.210. Damages resulting from commission of a felony or while under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

A person who suffers personal injury or death or the person's personal representative under AS 09.55.570 or 09.55.580 may not recover damages for the personal injury or death if the injury or death occurred while the person was

(1) engaged in the commission of a felony, the person has been convicted of the felony, including conviction based on a guilty plea or plea of nolo contendere, and the party defending against the claim proves by clear and convincing evidence that the felony substantially contributed to the personal injury or death;

(2) engaged in conduct that would constitute the commission of an unclassified felony, a class A felony, or a class B felony for which the person was not convicted and the party defending against the claim proves by clear and convincing evidence

(A) the felonious conduct; and

(B) that the felonious conduct substantially contributed to the personal injury or death;

(3) fleeing after the commission, by that person, of conduct that would constitute an unclassified felony, a class A felony, or a class B felony or being apprehended for conduct that would constitute an unclassified felony, a class A felony, or a class B felony if the party defending against the claim proves by clear and convincing evidence

(A) the felonious conduct; and

(B) that the conduct during the flight or apprehension substantially contributed to the injury or death;

(4) operating a vehicle, aircraft, or watercraft while under the influence of intoxicating liquor or any controlled substance in violation of AS 28.35.030, was convicted, including conviction based on a guilty plea or plea of nolo contendere, and the party defending against the claim proves by clear and convincing evidence that the conduct substantially contributed to the personal injury or death; or

(5) engaged in conduct that would constitute a violation of AS 28.35.030 for which the person was not convicted if the party defending against the claim proves by clear and convincing evidence

(A) the violation of AS 28.35.030; and

(B) that the conduct substantially contributed to the personal injury or death.

Sec. 11.31.100. Attempt.

(a) A person is guilty of an attempt to commit a crime if, with intent to commit a crime, the person engages in conduct which constitutes a substantial step toward the commission of that crime.

(b) In a prosecution under this section, it is not a defense that it was factually or legally impossible to commit the crime which was the object of the attempt if the conduct engaged in by the defendant would be a crime had the circumstances been as the defendant believed them to be.

(c) In a prosecution under this section, it is an affirmative defense that the defendant, under circumstances manifesting a voluntary and complete renunciation of the defendant's criminal intent, prevented the commission of the attempted crime.

(d) An attempt is

(1) an unclassified felony if the crime attempted is murder in the first degree;

(2) a class A felony if the crime attempted is an unclassified felony other than murder in the first degree;

(3) a class B felony if the crime attempted is a class A felony;

(4) a class C felony if the crime attempted is a class B felony;

(5) a class A misdemeanor if the crime attempted is a class C felony;

(6) a class B misdemeanor if the crime attempted is a class A or class B misdemeanor.

(e) If the crime attempted is an unclassified crime described in a state law which is not part of this title and no provision for punishment of an attempt to commit the crime is specified, the punishment for the attempt is imprisonment for a term of not more than half the maximum period prescribed as punishment for the unclassified crime, or a fine of not more than half the amount of the maximum fine prescribed as punishment for the unclassified crime, or both. If the crime attempted is punishable by an indeterminate or life term, the attempt is a class A felony.

Sec. 11.31.110. Solicitation.

(a) A person commits the crime of solicitation if, with intent to cause another to engage in conduct constituting a crime, the person solicits the other to engage in that conduct.

(b) In a prosecution under this section,

(1) it is not a defense

(A) that the defendant belongs to a class of persons who by definition are legally incapable in an individual capacity of committing the crime that is the object of the solicitation; or

(B) that a person whom the defendant solicits could not be guilty of the crime that is the object of the solicitation;

(2) it is an affirmative defense that the defendant, under circumstances manifesting a voluntary and complete renunciation of the defendant's criminal intent, after soliciting another person to engage in conduct constituting a crime, prevented the commission of the crime.

(c) Solicitation is

(1) an unclassified felony if the crime solicited is murder in the first degree;

(2) a class A felony if the crime solicited is an unclassified felony other than murder in the first degree;

(3) a class B felony if the crime solicited is a class A felony;

(4) a class C felony if the crime solicited is a class B felony;

(5) a class A misdemeanor if the crime solicited is a class C felony;

(6) a class B misdemeanor if the crime solicited is a class A or class B misdemeanor.

(d) If the crime solicited is an unclassified crime described in a state law which is not part of this title and no provision for punishment of a solicitation to commit the crime is specified, the punishment for the solicitation is imprisonment for a term of not more than half the maximum period prescribed as punishment for the unclassified crime, or a fine of not more than half the maximum fine prescribed as punishment for the unclassified crime, or both. If the crime solicited is punishable by an indeterminate or life term, the solicitation is a class A felony.

Sec. 11.31.120. Conspiracy.

(a) An offender commits the crime of conspiracy if, with the intent to promote or facilitate a serious felony offense, the offender agrees with one or more persons to engage in or cause the performance of that activity and the offender or one of the persons does an overt act in furtherance of the conspiracy.

(b) If an offender commits the crime of conspiracy and knows that a person with whom the offender conspires to commit a serious felony offense has conspired or will conspire with another person or persons to commit the same serious felony offense, the offender is guilty of conspiring with that other person or persons to commit that crime whether or not the offender knows their identities.

(c) In a prosecution under this section, it is a defense that the defendant was merely present at the time that two or more other persons agreed to engage in or cause the performance of a serious felony offense.

(d) In a prosecution under this section, it is not a defense that a person with whom the defendant conspires could not be guilty of the crime that is the object of the conspiracy because of

(1) lack of criminal responsibility or other legal incapacity or exemption;

(2) belonging to a class of persons who by definition are legally incapable in an individual capacity of committing the crime that is the object of the conspiracy;

(3) unawareness of the criminal nature of the conduct in question or of the criminal purpose of the defendant; or

(4) any other factor precluding the culpable mental state required for the commission of the crime.

(e) If the offense that the conspiracy is intended to promote or facilitate is actually committed, a defendant may not be convicted of conspiring to commit that offense with another person for whose conduct the defendant is not legally accountable under AS 11.16.120(b).

(f) In a prosecution under this section, it is an affirmative defense that the defendant, under circumstances manifesting a voluntary and complete renunciation of the defendant's criminal intent, either (1) gave timely warning to law enforcement authorities; or (2) otherwise made proper effort that prevented the commission of the crime that was the object of the conspiracy. Renunciation by one conspirator does not affect the liability of another conspirator who does not join in the renunciation.

(g) Notwithstanding AS 22.10.030, venue in actions in which the crime of conspiracy is alleged to have been committed may not be based solely on the location of overt acts done in furtherance of the conspiracy.

(h) In this section,

(1) "overt act in furtherance of the conspiracy" means an act of such character that it manifests a purpose on the part of the actor that the object of the conspiracy be completed;

(2) "serious felony offense" means an offense

(A) against the person under AS 11.41, punishable as an unclassified or class A felony;

(B) involving controlled substances under AS 11.71, punishable as an unclassified, class A, or class B felony;

(C) that is criminal mischief in the first degree under AS 11.46.475; or

(D) that is terroristic threatening in the first degree under AS 11.56.807.

(i) Conspiracy is

(1) an unclassified felony if the object of the conspiracy is murder in the first degree;

(2) a class A felony if the object of the conspiracy is a crime punishable as an unclassified felony other than murder in the first degree;

(3) a class B felony if the object of the conspiracy is a crime punishable as a class A felony;

(4) a class C felony if the object of the conspiracy is a crime punishable as a class B felony.

connection with the enactment of this section, see 1993 Senate Journal at 611 - 612.

Sec. 11.41.100. Murder in the first degree.

(a) A person commits the crime of murder in the first degree if

(1) with intent to cause the death of another person, the person

(A) causes the death of any person; or

(B) compels or induces any person to commit suicide through duress or deception;

(2) the person knowingly engages in conduct directed toward a child under the age of 16 and the person with criminal negligence inflicts serious physical injury on the child by at least two separate acts, and one of the acts results in the death of the child;

(3) acting alone or with one or more persons, the person commits or attempts to commit a sexual offense against or kidnapping of a child under 16 years of age and, in the course of or in furtherance of the offense or in immediate flight from that offense, any person causes the death of the child; in this paragraph, "sexual offense" means an offense defined in AS 11.41.410 - 11.41.470;

(4) acting alone or with one or more persons, the person commits or attempts to commit criminal mischief in the first degree under AS 11.46.475 and, in the course of or in furtherance of the offense or in immediate flight from that offense, any person causes the death of a person other than one of the participants; or

(5) acting alone or with one or more persons, the person commits terroristic threatening in the first degree under AS 11.56.807 and, in the course of or in furtherance of the offense or in immediate flight from that offense, any person causes the death of a person other than one of the participants.

(b) Murder in the first degree is an unclassified felony and is punishable as provided in AS 12.55.

Sec. 12.30.020. Release before trial.

(a) A person charged with an offense shall, at that person's first appearance before a judicial officer, be ordered released pending trial on the person's personal recognizance or upon the execution of an unsecured appearance bond in an amount specified by the judicial officer unless the offense is an unclassified felony or class A felony or unless the officer determines that the release of the person will not reasonably assure the appearance of the person as required or will pose a danger to the alleged victim, other persons, or the community. If the offense with which a person is charged is a felony, on motion of the prosecuting attorney, the judicial officer may allow the prosecuting attorney up to 48 hours to demonstrate that release of the person on the person's personal recognizance or upon the execution of an unsecured appearance bond will not reasonably assure the appearance of the person or will pose a danger to the alleged victim, other persons, or the community.

(b) If a judicial officer determines under (a) of this section that the release of a person will not reasonably assure the appearance of the person, or will pose a danger to the alleged victim, other persons, or the community, the judicial officer may

(1) place the person in the custody of a designated person or organization agreeing as a custodian to supervise the person; the court shall, personally and in writing, inform the custodian about the duties required of a custodian, and that failure to report immediately in accordance with the terms of the order that the person released has violated a condition of release may result in the custodian's being held criminally liable under AS 11.56.758;

(2) place restrictions on the travel, association, or place of abode of the person during the period of release;

(3) [Repealed, Sec. 8 ch 57 SLA 2006].

(4) require the execution of an appearance bond in a specified amount and the deposit in the registry of the court, in cash or other security, a sum not to exceed 10 percent of the amount of the bond; the deposit to be returned upon the performance of the condition of release;

(5) require the execution of a bail bond with sufficient solvent sureties or the deposit of cash;

(6) require the execution of a performance bond in a specified amount and the deposit in the registry of the court, in cash or other security; the performance bond must be imposed and enforced separately from any appearance bond, and the deposit to be returned upon the performance of the condition of release; or

(7) impose any other condition considered reasonably necessary to assure the defendant's appearance as required and the safety of the alleged victim, other persons, or the community.

(c) In determining the conditions of release under (b) of this section, the judicial officer shall take into account

(1) the nature and circumstances of the offense charged, including the effect of the offense upon the alleged victim;

(2) the weight of the evidence against the person;

(3) the person's family ties;

(4) the person's employment;

(5) the person's financial resources;

(6) the person's character and mental condition;

(7) the length of the person's residence in the community;

(8) the person's record of convictions;

(9) the person's record of appearance at court proceedings;

(10) the flight of the accused to avoid prosecution or the person's failure to appear at court proceedings; and

(11) threats the person has made, and the danger the person poses, to the alleged victim.

(d) A judicial officer authorizing the release of a person under this section shall issue an order containing a statement of the conditions imposed.

(e) The judicial officer shall inform the person of the penalties that may be imposed for a violation of the conditions of release and advise the person that a warrant for the person's arrest will be issued immediately upon a violation or that the person may be arrested without a warrant for a violation of conditions of release as set out in AS 12.25.030(b).

(f) A person who remains in custody 48 hours after appearing before a judicial officer because of inability to meet the conditions of release shall, upon application, be entitled to have the conditions reviewed by the judicial officer who imposed them. If the judicial officer who imposed the conditions of release is not available, any other judicial officer in the district may review the conditions. If the conditions are not amended and the person remains in custody, the judicial officer shall set out in writing the reasons for requiring the conditions imposed.

(g) A judicial officer who orders the release of a person on a condition specified in (b) of this section may at any time amend the order to impose additional or different conditions of release, or to release the person under (a) of this section.

(h) Information offered or introduced at a hearing before a judicial officer to determine the conditions of release need not conform to the rules governing the admissibility of evidence in a court of law.

(i) The court shall issue written or oral findings to demonstrate why conditions provided under (b)(1) of this section needed to be imposed.

(j) If a person remains in custody after review of conditions by a judicial officer under (f) of this section, a subsequent review of conditions may be held at the request of the person. Unless the prosecuting authority stipulates otherwise or a defendant has been incarcerated for a period equal to the maximum sentence for the most serious charge for which the defendant is being held, a judicial officer may not schedule a bail review hearing under this subsection unless

(1) the person provides to the court and the prosecuting authority a written statement that new information not considered at the previous review will be presented; the statement must include a description of the information and the reason the information was not presented at a previous hearing; in this paragraph, "new information" does not include the inability to post the required bail;

(2) the prosecuting authority has at least 48 hours' notice before the time set for the review requested under this subsection; and

(3) at least seven days have elapsed between the previous review and the time set for the review requested under this subsection.

Sec. 12.30.040. Release after conviction.

(a) A person who has been convicted of an offense and is awaiting sentence, or who has filed an appeal, shall be treated in accordance with the provisions of AS 12.30.020 unless the court has reason to believe that no one or more conditions of release will reasonably assure the appearance of the person as required or prevent the person from posing a danger to the victim, other persons, or the community. If that determination is made, the person may be remanded to custody. This section does not affect the right of a person appealing from a judgment of conviction from a district court to the superior court to be released on bail pending appeal under Rule 603(b) of the Rules of Appellate Procedure; however, the court shall consider the safety of the victim, other persons, and the community before the person is released under the rule. Before granting bail to a person convicted of an offense that is a crime under AS 11.41.420, 11.41.425, 11.41.436, 11.41.438, or 11.41.450 - 11.41.458, the court shall consider requiring the person to participate in an electronic monitoring program as a condition of release.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of (a) of this section, a person may not be released on bail either before sentencing or pending appeal if the person has been convicted of an offense that is

(1) an unclassified felony or a class A felony; or

(2) a class B or class C felony if the person has been previously convicted of an offense in this state that is an unclassified felony, a class A felony, or a violation of AS 11.41.260, 11.41.420 - 11.41.425, or 11.41.436 - 11.41.438 or of an offense in another jurisdiction with elements substantially similar to an offense of this state described in this paragraph.

(c) A person who has been convicted of an offense and who has filed an application for post-conviction relief may not be released on bail until the trial court or an appellate court enters an order vacating all convictions against the person. A person who has prevailed on an application for post-conviction relief may seek release before trial in accordance with the provisions of AS 12.30.020.

Sec. 12.47.110. Commitment on finding of incompetency.

(a) When the trial court determines by a preponderance of the evidence, in accordance with AS 12.47.100, that a defendant is so incompetent that the defendant is unable to understand the proceedings against the defendant or to assist in the defendant's own defense, the court shall order the proceedings stayed, except as provided in (d) of this section, and may commit the defendant to the custody of the commissioner of health and social services or the commissioner's authorized representative for further evaluation and treatment until the defendant is mentally competent to stand trial, or until the pending charges against the defendant are disposed of according to law, but in no event longer than 90 days.

(b) On or before the expiration of the initial 90-day period of commitment the court shall conduct a hearing to determine whether or not the defendant remains incompetent. If the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant remains incompetent, the court may recommit the defendant for a second period of 90 days. The court shall determine at the expiration of the second 90-day period whether the defendant has become competent. If at the expiration of the second 90-day period the court determines that the defendant continues to be incompetent to stand trial, the charges against the defendant shall be dismissed without prejudice and continued commitment of the defendant shall be governed by the provisions relating to civil commitments under AS 47.30.700 - 47.30.915 unless the defendant is charged with a crime involving force against a person and the court finds that the defendant presents a substantial danger of physical injury to other persons and that there is a substantial probability that the defendant will regain competency within a reasonable period of time, in which case the court may extend the period of commitment for an additional six months. If the defendant remains incompetent at the expiration of the additional six-month period, the charges shall be dismissed without prejudice and either civil commitment proceedings shall be instituted or the court shall order the release of the defendant. If the defendant remains incompetent for five years after the charges have been dismissed under this subsection, the defendant may not be charged again for an offense arising out of the facts alleged in the original charges, except if the original charge is a class A felony or unclassified felony.

(c) The defendant is not responsible for the expenses of hospitalization or transportation incurred as a result of the defendant's commitment under this section. Liability for payment under AS 47.30.910 does not apply to commitments under this section.

(d) A defendant receiving medication for either a physical or a mental condition may not be prohibited from standing trial, if the medication either enables the defendant to understand the proceedings and to properly assist in the defendant's defense or does not disable the defendant from understanding the proceedings and assisting in the defendant's own defense.

Sec. 12.50.101. Immunity of witnesses.

(a) If a witness refuses, on the basis of the privilege against self-incrimination, to testify or provide other information in a criminal proceeding before or ancillary to a court or grand jury of this state, and a judge issues an order under (b) of this section, the witness may not refuse to comply with the order on the basis of the privilege against self-incrimination. If the witness fully complies with the order, the witness may not be prosecuted for an offense about which the witness is compelled to testify, except in a prosecution based on perjury, giving a false statement or otherwise knowingly providing false information, or hindering prosecution.

(b) In the case of an individual who has been or may be called to testify or provide other information in a criminal proceeding before or ancillary to a court or a grand jury of this state, a superior or district court for the judicial district in which the proceeding is or may be held shall issue, upon the application of the attorney general or the attorney general's designee in accordance with (d) of this section, an order requiring the individual to give testimony or provide other information that the individual refuses to give or provide based on the privilege against self-incrimination.

(c) An order issued under (b) of this section is effective when communicated to the individual specified in the order.

(d) The attorney general or the attorney general's designee may apply for an order under (b) of this section when, in the judgment of the attorney general or the attorney general's designee,

(1) the testimony or other information may be necessary to the administration of criminal justice; and

(2) the individual who is the subject of the application has refused or is likely to refuse to testify or to provide other information on the basis of the privilege against self-incrimination.

(e) If a witness refuses, or there is reason to believe the witness will refuse, to testify or provide other information based on the privilege against self-incrimination, and if the attorney general or the attorney general's designee has not applied for an order under (b) of this section, the court shall inform the witness of the right to be represented by an attorney, and that an attorney will be appointed for the witness if the witness qualifies for counsel under AS 18.85. The court shall recess the proceeding to allow the witness to consult with the attorney for the witness.

(f) If the attorney general or the attorney general's designee declines to seek an order under (b) of this section after the witness has had an opportunity to consult with an attorney, and the witness continues to refuse to testify or provide other information, the court shall hold a hearing to determine the validity of the claim of privilege by the witness. The hearing shall be in camera.

(g) At the hearing under (f) of this section, the attorney for the witness, in the form of a proffer, shall describe the testimony or other information that the witness claims is privileged. The proffer must include a description of how the testimony or other information could connect the witness with a crime. The proffer is privileged and inadmissible for any other purpose. If the proffer establishes a factual basis that there is a real or substantial danger that the testimony or other information to be compelled would support a conviction or would furnish a link in the chain of evidence leading to conviction for a crime, the court may find that the witness has a valid claim of privilege.

(h) If the court finds that the witness has a valid claim of privilege, it shall advise an attorney designated by the attorney general of that finding and inform the attorney of the category or categories of offense to which the privilege applies: a higher-level felony, a lower-level felony, or a misdemeanor. If the designated attorney decides that granting immunity to the witness is appropriate, the designated attorney shall inform the prosecution of that decision, and shall deliver or cause to be delivered a letter to the witness, or an attorney for the witness, granting immunity to the witness. The designated attorney may not disclose the category of offense to anyone.

(i) In this section,

(1) "higher-level felony" means an unclassified or class A felony;

(2) "lower-level felony" means a class B or class C felony;

(3) "other information" means books, papers, documents, records, recordings, or other similar material;

(4) "proffer" means a written or oral statement by the attorney for the witness, stating the attorney's good faith belief of the substance of the witness's testimony or other information.

Sec. 12.55.025. Sentencing procedures.

(a) When imposing a sentence for conviction of a felony offense or a sentence of imprisonment exceeding 90 days or upon a conviction of a violation of AS 04, a regulation adopted under AS 04, or an ordinance adopted in conformity with AS 04.21.010, the court shall prepare, as a part of the record, a sentencing report that includes the following:

(1) a verbatim record of the sentencing hearing and any other in-court sentencing procedures;

(2) findings on material issues of fact and on factual questions required to be determined as a prerequisite to the selection of the sentence imposed;

(3) a clear statement of the terms of the sentence imposed; if a term of imprisonment is imposed, the statement must include

(A) the approximate minimum term the defendant is expected to serve before being released or placed on mandatory parole if the defendant is eligible for and does not forfeit good conduct deductions under AS 33.20.010; and

(B) if applicable, the approximate minimum term of imprisonment the defendant must serve before becoming eligible for release on discretionary parole;

(4) any recommendations as to the place of confinement or the manner of treatment; and

(5) in the case of a conviction for a felony offense, information assessing

(A) the financial, emotional, and medical effects of the offense on the victim;

(B) the need of the victim for restitution; and

(C) any other information required by the court.

(b) The sentencing report required under (a) of this section shall be furnished within 30 days after imposition of sentence to the Department of Law, the defendant, the Department of Corrections, the state Board of Parole if the defendant will be eligible for parole, and to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board if the defendant is to be sentenced for a conviction of a violation of AS 04, a regulation adopted under AS 04, or an ordinance adopted under AS 04.21.010.

(c) Except as provided in (d) of this section, when a defendant is sentenced to imprisonment, the term of confinement commences on the date of imposition of sentence unless the court specifically provides that the defendant must report to serve the sentence on another date. If the court provides another date to begin the term of confinement, the court shall provide the defendant with written notice of the date, time, and location of the correctional facility to which the defendant must report. A defendant shall receive credit for time spent in custody pending trial, sentencing, or appeal, if the detention was in connection with the offense for which sentence was imposed. A defendant may not receive credit for more than the actual time spent in custody pending trial, sentencing, or appeal. The time during which a defendant is voluntarily absent from official detention after the defendant has been sentenced may not be credited toward service of the sentence.

(d) A sentence of imprisonment shall be stayed if an appeal is taken and the defendant is admitted to bail. If an appeal is taken and the defendant is not admitted to bail, the Department of Corrections shall designate the facility in which the defendant shall be detained pending appeal or admission to bail.

(e) [Repealed, Sec. 7 ch 125 SLA 2004].

(f) A sentence that the defendant pay money, either as a fine or in restitution or both, constitutes a lien in the same manner as a judgment for money entered in a civil action. Nothing in this section limits the authority of the court to otherwise enforce payment of a fine or restitution.

(g) [Repealed, Sec. 7 ch 125 SLA 2004].

(h) [Repealed, Sec. 7 ch 125 SLA 2004].

(i) Except as provided by AS 12.55.125(a)(3), 12.55.145(d), 12.55.155(f), and 12.55.165, the preponderance of the evidence standard of proof applies to sentencing proceedings.

(j) The approximate minimum terms provided under (a)(3) of this section in the sentencing report are for information purposes only. The approximate minimum terms are not part of the sentence imposed and do not form a basis for review or appeal of the sentence imposed or provide a defendant with a right to any specific term of imprisonment or supervised release on mandatory parole.

Sec. 12.55.125. Sentences of imprisonment for felonies.

(a) A defendant convicted of murder in the first degree or murder of an unborn child under AS 11.41.150(a)(1) shall be sentenced to a definite term of imprisonment of at least 20 years but not more than 99 years. A defendant convicted of murder in the first degree shall be sentenced to a mandatory term of imprisonment of 99 years when

(1) the defendant is convicted of the murder of a uniformed or otherwise clearly identified peace officer, fire fighter, or correctional employee who was engaged in the performance of official duties at the time of the murder;

(2) the defendant has been previously convicted of

(A) murder in the first degree under AS 11.41.100 or former AS 11.15.010 or 11.15.020;

(B) murder in the second degree under AS 11.41.110 or former AS 11.15.030; or

(C) homicide under the laws of another jurisdiction when the offense of which the defendant was convicted contains elements similar to first degree murder under AS 11.41.100 or second degree murder under AS 11.41.110;

(3) the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant subjected the murder victim to substantial physical torture;

(4) the defendant is convicted of the murder of and personally caused the death of a person, other than a participant, during a robbery; or

(5) the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant is a peace officer who used the officer's authority as a peace officer to facilitate the murder.

(b) A defendant convicted of attempted murder in the first degree, solicitation to commit murder in the first degree, conspiracy to commit murder in the first degree, kidnapping, or misconduct involving a controlled substance in the first degree shall be sentenced to a definite term of imprisonment of at least five years but not more than 99 years. A defendant convicted of murder in the second degree or murder of an unborn child under AS 11.41.150(a)(2) - (4) shall be sentenced to a definite term of imprisonment of at least 10 years but not more than 99 years. A defendant convicted of murder in the second degree shall be sentenced to a definite term of imprisonment of at least 20 years but not more than 99 years when the defendant is convicted of the murder of a child under 16 years of age and the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant (1) was a natural parent, a stepparent, an adopted parent, a legal guardian, or a person occupying a position of authority in relation to the child; or (2) caused the death of the child by committing a crime against a person under AS 11.41.200 - 11.41.530. In this subsection, "legal guardian" and "position of authority" have the meanings given in AS 11.41.470.

(c) Except as provided in (i) of this section, a defendant convicted of a class A felony may be sentenced to a definite term of imprisonment of not more than 20 years, and shall be sentenced to a definite term within the following presumptive ranges, subject to adjustment as provided in AS 12.55.155 - 12.55.175:

(1) if the offense is a first felony conviction and does not involve circumstances described in (2) of this subsection, five to eight years;

(2) if the offense is a first felony conviction

(A) and the defendant possessed a firearm, used a dangerous instrument, or caused serious physical injury or death during the commission of the offense, or knowingly directed the conduct constituting the offense at a uniformed or otherwise clearly identified peace officer, fire fighter, correctional employee, emergency medical technician, paramedic, ambulance attendant, or other emergency responder who was engaged in the performance of official duties at the time of the offense, seven to 11 years;

(B) and the conviction is for manufacturing related to methamphetamine under AS 11.71.020(a)(2)(A) or (B), seven to 11 years, if

(i) the manufacturing occurred in a building with reckless disregard that the building was used as a permanent or temporary home or place of lodging for one or more children under 18 years of age or the building was a place frequented by children; or

(ii) in the course of manufacturing or in preparation for manufacturing, the defendant obtained the assistance of one or more children under 18 years of age or one or more children were present;

(3) if the offense is a second felony conviction, 10 to 14 years;

(4) if the offense is a third felony conviction and the defendant is not subject to sentencing under (l) of this section, 15 to 20 years.

(d) Except as provided in (i) of this section, a defendant convicted of a class B felony may be sentenced to a definite term of imprisonment of not more than 10 years, and shall be sentenced to a definite term within the following presumptive ranges, subject to adjustment as provided in AS 12.55.155 - 12.55.175:

(1) if the offense is a first felony conviction and does not involve circumstances described in (2) of this subsection, one to three years; a defendant sentenced under this paragraph may, if the court finds it appropriate, be granted a suspended imposition of sentence under AS 12.55.085 if, as a condition of probation under AS 12.55.086, the defendant is required to serve an active term of imprisonment within the range specified in this paragraph, unless the court finds that a mitigation factor under AS 12.55.155 applies;

(2) if the offense is a first felony conviction,

(A) the defendant violated AS 11.41.130, and the victim was a child under 16 years of age, two to four years;

(B) two to four years if the conviction is for an attempt, solicitation, or conspiracy to manufacture related to methamphetamine under AS 11.31 and AS 11.71.020(a)(2)(A) or (B), and

(i) the attempted manufacturing occurred, or the solicited or conspired offense was to have occurred, in a building with reckless disregard that the building was used as a permanent or temporary home or place of lodging for one or more children under 18 years of age or the building was a place frequented by children; or

(ii) in the course of an attempt to manufacture, the defendant obtained the assistance of one or more children under 18 years of age or one or more children were present;

(3) if the offense is a second felony conviction, four to seven years;

(4) if the offense is a third felony conviction, six to 10 years.

(e) Except as provided in (i) of this section, a defendant convicted of a class C felony may be sentenced to a definite term of imprisonment of not more than five years, and shall be sentenced to a definite term within the following presumptive ranges, subject to adjustment as provided in AS 12.55.155 - 12.55.175:

(1) if the offense is a first felony conviction and does not involve circumstances described in (4) of this subsection, zero to two years; a defendant sentenced under this paragraph may, if the court finds it appropriate, be granted a suspended imposition of sentence under AS 12.55.085, and the court may, as a condition of probation under AS 12.55.086, require the defendant to serve an active term of imprisonment within the range specified in this paragraph;

(2) if the offense is a second felony conviction, two to four years;

(3) if the offense is a third felony conviction, three to five years;

(4) if the offense is a first felony conviction, and the defendant violated AS 08.54.720(a)(15), one to two years.

(f) If a defendant is sentenced under (a) or (b) of this section,

(1) imprisonment for the prescribed minimum or mandatory term may not be suspended under AS 12.55.080;

(2) imposition of sentence may not be suspended under AS 12.55.085;

(3) imprisonment for the prescribed minimum or mandatory term may not be reduced, except as provided in (j) of this section.

(g) If a defendant is sentenced under (c), (d), (e), or (i) of this section, except to the extent permitted under AS 12.55.155 - 12.55.175,

(1) imprisonment may not be suspended under AS 12.55.080 below the low end of the presumptive range;

(2) and except as provided in (d)(1) or (e)(1) of this section, imposition of sentence may not be suspended under AS 12.55.085;

(3) terms of imprisonment may not be otherwise reduced.

(h) Nothing in this section or AS 12.55.135 limits the discretion of the sentencing judge except as specifically provided. Nothing in (a) of this section limits the court's discretion to impose a sentence of 99 years imprisonment, or to limit parole eligibility, for a person convicted of murder in the first or second degree in circumstances other than those enumerated in (a).

(i) A defendant convicted of

(1) sexual assault in the first degree, sexual abuse of a minor in the first degree, or promoting prostitution in the first degree under AS 11.66.110(a)(2) may be sentenced to a definite term of imprisonment of not more than 99 years and shall be sentenced to a definite term within the following presumptive ranges, subject to adjustment as provided in AS 12.55.155 - 12.55.175:

(A) if the offense is a first felony conviction, the offense does not involve circumstances described in (B) of this paragraph, and the victim was

(i) less than 13 years of age, 25 to 35 years;

(ii) 13 years of age or older, 20 to 30 years;

(B) if the offense is a first felony conviction and the defendant possessed a firearm, used a dangerous instrument, or caused serious physical injury during the commission of the offense, 25 to 35 years;

(C) if the offense is a second felony conviction and does not involve circumstances described in (D) of this paragraph, 30 to 40 years;

(D) if the offense is a second felony conviction and the defendant has a prior conviction for a sexual felony, 35 to 45 years;

(E) if the offense is a third felony conviction and the defendant is not subject to sentencing under (F) of this paragraph or (l) of this section, 40 to 60 years;

(F) if the offense is a third felony conviction, the defendant is not subject to sentencing under (l) of this section, and the defendant has two prior convictions for sexual felonies, 99 years;

(2) attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation to commit sexual assault in the first degree, sexual abuse of a minor in the first degree, or promoting prostitution in the first degree under AS 11.66.110(a)(2) may be sentenced to a definite term of imprisonment of not more than 99 years and shall be sentenced to a definite term within the following presumptive ranges, subject to adjustment as provided in AS 12.55.155 - 12.55.175:

(A) if the offense is a first felony conviction, the offense does not involve circumstances described in (B) of this paragraph, and the victim was

(i) under 13 years of age, 20 to 30 years;

(ii) 13 years of age or older, 15 to 30 years;

(B) if the offense is a first felony conviction and the defendant possessed a firearm, used a dangerous instrument, or caused serious physical injury during the commission of the offense, 25 to 35 years;

(C) if the offense is a second felony conviction and does not involve circumstances described in (D) of this paragraph, 25 to 35 years;

(D) if the offense is a second felony conviction and the defendant has a prior conviction for a sexual felony, 30 to 40 years;

(E) if the offense is a third felony conviction, the offense does not involve circumstances described in (F) of this paragraph, and the defendant is not subject to sentencing under (l) of this section, 35 to 50 years;

(F) if the offense is a third felony conviction, the defendant is not subject to sentencing under (l) of this section, and the defendant has two prior convictions for sexual felonies, 99 years;

(3) sexual assault in the second degree, sexual abuse of a minor in the second degree, unlawful exploitation of a minor, or distribution of child pornography may be sentenced to a definite term of imprisonment of not more than 99 years and shall be sentenced to a definite term within the following presumptive ranges, subject to adjustment as provided in AS 12.55.155 - 12.55.175:

(A) if the offense is a first felony conviction, five to 15 years;

(B) if the offense is a second felony conviction and does not involve circumstances described in (C) of this paragraph, 10 to 25 years;

(C) if the offense is a second felony conviction and the defendant has a prior conviction for a sexual felony, 15 to 30 years;

(D) if the offense is a third felony conviction and does not involve circumstances described in (E) of this paragraph, 20 to 35 years;

(E) if the offense is a third felony conviction and the defendant has two prior convictions for sexual felonies, 99 years;

(4) sexual assault in the third degree, incest, indecent exposure in the first degree, possession of child pornography, or attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation to commit sexual assault in the second degree, sexual abuse of a minor in the second degree, unlawful exploitation of a minor, or distribution of child pornography, may be sentenced to a definite term of imprisonment of not more than 99 years and shall be sentenced to a definite term within the following presumptive ranges, subject to adjustment as provided in AS 12.55.155 - 12.55.175:

(A) if the offense is a first felony conviction, two to 12 years;

(B) if the offense is a second felony conviction and does not involve circumstances described in (C) of this paragraph, eight to 15 years;

(C) if the offense is a second felony conviction and the defendant has a prior conviction for a sexual felony, 12 to 20 years;

(D) if the offense is a third felony conviction and does not involve circumstances described in (E) of this paragraph, 15 to 25 years;

(E) if the offense is a third felony conviction and the defendant has two prior convictions for sexual felonies, 99 years.

(j) A defendant sentenced to a (1) mandatory term of imprisonment of 99 years under (a) of this section may apply once for a modification or reduction of sentence under the Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure after serving one-half of the mandatory term without consideration of good time earned under AS 33.20.010, or (2) definite term of imprisonment under (l) of this section may apply once for a modification or reduction of sentence under the Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure after serving one-half of the definite term. A defendant may not file and a court may not entertain more than one motion for modification or reduction of a sentence subject to this subsection, regardless of whether or not the court granted or denied a previous motion.

(k) [Repealed, Sec. 32 ch 2 SLA 2005].

(l) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a defendant convicted of an unclassified or class A felony offense, and not subject to a mandatory 99-year sentence under (a) of this section, shall be sentenced to a definite term of imprisonment of 99 years when the defendant has been previously convicted of two or more most serious felonies. If a defendant is sentenced to a definite term under this subsection,

(1) imprisonment for the prescribed definite term may not be suspended under AS 12.55.080;

(2) imposition of sentence may not be suspended under AS 12.55.085;

(3) imprisonment for the prescribed definite term may not be reduced, except as provided in (j) of this section.

(m) Notwithstanding (a)(4) and (f) of this section, if a court finds that imposition of a mandatory term of imprisonment of 99 years on a defendant subject to sentencing under (a)(4) of this section would be manifestly unjust, the court may sentence the defendant to a definite term of imprisonment otherwise permissible under (a) of this section.

(n) In imposing a sentence within a presumptive range under (c), (d), (e), or (i) of this section, the total term, made up of the active term of imprisonment plus any suspended term of imprisonment, must fall within the presumptive range, and the active term of imprisonment may not fall below the lower end of the presumptive range.

(o) Other than for convictions subject to a mandatory 99-year sentence, the court shall impose, in addition to an active term of imprisonment imposed under (i) of this section, a minimum period of (1) suspended imprisonment of five years and a minimum period of probation supervision of 15 years for conviction of an unclassified felony, (2) suspended imprisonment of three years and a minimum period of probation supervision of 10 years for conviction of a class A or class B felony, or (3) suspended imprisonment of two years and a minimum period of probation supervision of five years for conviction of a class C felony. The period of probation is in addition to any sentence received under

(i) of this section and may not be suspended or reduced. Upon a defendant's release from confinement in a correctional facility, the defendant is subject to this probation requirement and shall submit and comply with the terms and requirements of the probation.

Sec. 12.55.145. Prior convictions.

(a) For purposes of considering prior convictions in imposing sentence under

(1) AS 12.55.125(c), (d), or (e),

(A) a prior conviction may not be considered if a period of 10 or more years has elapsed between the date of the defendant's unconditional discharge on the immediately preceding offense and commission of the present offense unless the prior conviction was for an unclassified or class A felony;

(B) a conviction in this or another jurisdiction of an offense having elements similar to those of a felony defined as such under Alaska law at the time the offense was committed is considered a prior felony conviction;

(C) two or more convictions arising out of a single, continuous criminal episode during which there was no substantial change in the nature of the criminal objective are considered a single conviction unless the defendant was sentenced to consecutive sentences for the crimes; offenses committed while attempting to escape or avoid detection or apprehension after the commission of another offense are not part of the same criminal episode or objective;

(2) AS 12.55.125(l),

(A) a conviction in this or another jurisdiction of an offense having elements similar to those of a most serious felony is considered a prior most serious felony conviction;

(B) commission of and conviction for offenses relied on as prior most serious felony offenses must occur in the following order: conviction for the first offense must occur before commission of the second offense, and conviction for the second offense must occur before commission of the offense for which the defendant is being sentenced;

(3) AS 12.55.135(g),

(A) a prior conviction may not be considered if a period of five or more years has elapsed between the date of the defendant's unconditional discharge on the immediately preceding offense and commission of the present offense unless the prior conviction was for an unclassified or class A felony;

(B) a conviction in this or another jurisdiction of an offense having elements similar to those of a crime against a person or a crime involving domestic violence is considered a prior conviction;

(C) two or more convictions arising out of a single, continuous criminal episode during which there was no substantial change in the nature of the criminal objective are considered a single conviction unless the defendant was sentenced to consecutive sentences for the crimes; offenses committed while attempting to escape or avoid detection or apprehension after the commission of another offense are not part of the same criminal episode or objective;

(4) AS 12.55.125(i),

(A) a conviction in this or another jurisdiction of an offense having elements similar to those of a sexual felony is a prior conviction for a sexual felony;

(B) a felony conviction in another jurisdiction making it a crime to commit any lewd and lascivious act upon a child under the age of 16 years, with the intent of arousing, appealing to, or gratifying the sexual desires of the defendant or the victim is a prior conviction for a sexual felony;

(C) two or more convictions arising out of a single, continuous criminal episode during which there was no substantial change in the nature of the criminal objective are considered a single conviction unless the defendant was sentenced to consecutive sentences for the crimes; offenses committed while attempting to escape or avoid detection or apprehension after the commission of another offense are not part of the same criminal episode or objective.

(b) When sentence is imposed under this chapter, prior convictions not expressly admitted by the defendant must be proved by authenticated copies of court records served on the defendant or the defendant's counsel at least 20 days before the date set for imposition of sentence.

(c) The defendant shall file with the court and serve on the prosecuting attorney notice of denial, consisting of a concise statement of the grounds relied upon and that may be supported by affidavit or other documentary evidence, no later than 10 days before the date set for the imposition of sentence if the defendant

(1) denies

(A) the authenticity of a prior judgment of conviction;

(B) that the defendant is the person named in the judgment;

(C) that the elements of a prior offense committed in this or another jurisdiction are similar to those of a

(i) felony defined as such under Alaska law;

(ii) most serious felony, defined as such under Alaska law;

(iii) crime against a person or a crime involving domestic violence;

(D) that a prior conviction occurred within the period specified in (a)(1)(A) or (3)(A) of this section; or

(E) that a previous conviction occurred in the order required under (a)(2)(B) of this section; or

(2) alleges that two or more purportedly separate prior convictions should be considered a single conviction under (a)(1)(C) or (3)(C) of this section.

(d) Matters alleged in a notice of denial shall be heard by the court sitting without a jury. If the defendant introduces substantial evidence that the defendant is not the person named in a prior judgment of conviction, that the judgment is not authentic, that the conviction did not occur within the period specified in (a)(1)(A) or (3)(A) of this section, that a conviction should not be considered a prior felony conviction under (a)(1)(B) of this section, a prior most serious felony conviction under (a)(2)(A) of this section, or a prior crime against a person or a crime involving domestic violence conviction under (a)(3)(B) of this section, or that a previous conviction did not occur in the order required under (a)(2)(B) of this section, then the burden is on the state to prove the contrary beyond a reasonable doubt. The burden of proof that two or more convictions should be considered a single conviction under (a)(1)(C) or (3)(C) of this section is on the defendant by clear and convincing evidence.

(e) The authenticated judgments of courts of record of the United States, the District of Columbia, or of any state, territory, or political subdivision of the United States are prima facie evidence of conviction.

(f) Under this section, a prior conviction has occurred when a defendant has entered a plea of guilty, guilty but mentally ill, or nolo contendere, or when a verdict of guilty or guilty but mentally ill has been returned by a jury or by the court.

(g) In this section,
(1) "crime against a person" has the meaning given in AS 12.55.135;
(2) "crime involving domestic violence" has the meaning given in AS 18.66.990.

Sec. 12.55.155. Factors in aggravation and mitigation.

(a) Except as provided in (e) of this section, if a defendant is convicted of an offense and is subject to sentencing under AS 12.55.125(c), (d), (e), or (i) and

(1) the low end of the presumptive range is four years or less, the court may impose any sentence below the presumptive range for factors in mitigation or may increase the active term of imprisonment up to the maximum term of imprisonment for factors in aggravation;

(2) the low end of the presumptive range is more than four years, the court may impose a sentence below the presumptive range as long as the active term of imprisonment is not less than 50 percent of the low end of the presumptive range for factors in mitigation or may increase the active term of imprisonment up to the maximum term of imprisonment for factors in aggravation.

(b) Sentences under this section that are outside of the presumptive ranges set out in AS 12.55.125 shall be based on the totality of the aggravating and mitigating factors set out in (c) and (d) of this section.

(c) The following factors shall be considered by the sentencing court if proven in accordance with this section, and may allow imposition of a sentence above the presumptive range set out in AS 12.55.125:

(1) a person, other than an accomplice, sustained physical injury as a direct result of the defendant's conduct;

(2) the defendant's conduct during the commission of the offense manifested deliberate cruelty to another person;

(3) the defendant was the leader of a group of three or more persons who participated in the offense;

(4) the defendant employed a dangerous instrument in furtherance of the offense;

(5) the defendant knew or reasonably should have known that the victim of the offense was particularly vulnerable or incapable of resistance due to advanced age, disability, ill health, or extreme youth or was for any other reason substantially incapable of exercising normal physical or mental powers of resistance;

(6) the defendant's conduct created a risk of imminent physical injury to three or more persons, other than accomplices;

(7) a prior felony conviction considered for the purpose of invoking a presumptive range under this chapter was of a more serious class of offense than the present offense;

(8) the defendant's prior criminal history includes conduct involving aggravated or repeated instances of assaultive behavior;

(9) the defendant knew that the offense involved more than one victim;

(10) the conduct constituting the offense was among the most serious conduct included in the definition of the offense;

(11) the defendant committed the offense under an agreement that the defendant either pay or be paid for the commission of the offense, and the pecuniary incentive was beyond that inherent in the offense itself;

(12) the defendant was on release under AS 12.30.020 or 12.30.040 for another felony charge or conviction or for a misdemeanor charge or conviction having assault as a necessary element;

(13) the defendant knowingly directed the conduct constituting the offense at an active officer of the court or at an active or former judicial officer, prosecuting attorney, law enforcement officer, correctional employee, fire fighter, emergency medical technician, paramedic, ambulance attendant, or other emergency responder during or because of the exercise of official duties;

(14) the defendant was a member of an organized group of five or more persons, and the offense was committed to further the criminal objectives of the group;

(15) the defendant has three or more prior felony convictions;

(16) the defendant's criminal conduct was designed to obtain substantial pecuniary gain and the risk of prosecution and punishment for the conduct is slight;

(17) the offense was one of a continuing series of criminal offenses committed in furtherance of illegal business activities from which the defendant derives a major portion of the defendant's income;

(18) the offense was a felony

(A) specified in AS 11.41 and was committed against a spouse, a former spouse, or a member of the social unit made up of those living together in the same dwelling as the defendant;

(B) specified in AS 11.41.410 - 11.41.458 and the defendant has engaged in the same or other conduct prohibited by a provision of AS 11.41.410 - 11.41.460 involving the same or another victim; or

(C) specified in AS 11.41 that is a crime involving domestic violence and was committed in the physical presence or hearing of a child under 16 years of age who was, at the time of the offense, living within the residence of the victim, the residence of the perpetrator, or the residence where the crime involving domestic violence occurred;

(19) the defendant's prior criminal history includes an adjudication as a delinquent for conduct that would have been a felony if committed by an adult;

(20) the defendant was on furlough under AS 33.30 or on parole or probation for another felony charge or conviction that would be considered a prior felony conviction under AS 12.55.145(a)(1)(B);

(21) the defendant has a criminal history of repeated instances of conduct violative of criminal laws, whether punishable as felonies or misdemeanors, similar in nature to the offense for which the defendant is being sentenced under this section;

(22) the defendant knowingly directed the conduct constituting the offense at a victim because of that person's race, sex, color, creed, physical or mental disability, ancestry, or national origin;

(23) the defendant is convicted of an offense specified in AS 11.71 and

(A) the offense involved the delivery of a controlled substance under circumstances manifesting an intent to distribute the substance as part of a commercial enterprise; or

(B) at the time of the conduct resulting in the conviction, the defendant was caring for or assisting in the care of a child under 10 years of age;

(24) the defendant is convicted of an offense specified in AS 11.71 and the offense involved the transportation of controlled substances into the state;

(25) the defendant is convicted of an offense specified in AS 11.71 and the offense involved large quantities of a controlled substance;

(26) the defendant is convicted of an offense specified in AS 11.71 and the offense involved the distribution of a controlled substance that had been adulterated with a toxic substance;

(27) the defendant, being 18 years of age or older,

(A) is legally accountable under AS 11.16.110(2) for the conduct of a person who, at the time the offense was committed, was under 18 years of age and at least three years younger than the defendant; or

(B) is aided or abetted in planning or committing the offense by a person who, at the time the offense was committed, was under 18 years of age and at least three years younger than the defendant;

(28) the victim of the offense is a person who provided testimony or evidence related to a prior offense committed by the defendant;

(29) the defendant committed the offense for the benefit of, at the direction of, or in association with a criminal street gang;

(30) the defendant is convicted of an offense specified in AS 11.41.410 - 11.41.455, and the defendant knowingly supplied alcohol or a controlled substance to the victim in furtherance of the offense with the intent to make the victim incapacitated; in this paragraph, "incapacitated" has the meaning given in AS 11.41.470;

(31) the defendant's prior criminal history includes convictions for five or more crimes in this or another jurisdiction that are class A misdemeanors under the law of this state, or having elements similar to a class A misdemeanor; two or more convictions arising out of a single continuous episode are considered a single conviction; however, an offense is not a part of a continuous episode if committed while attempting to escape or resist arrest or if it is an assault upon a uniformed or otherwise clearly identified peace officer; notice and denial of convictions are governed by AS 12.55.145(b), (c), and (d);

(32) the offense is a violation of AS 11.41 or AS 11.46.400 and the offense occurred on school grounds, on a school bus, at a school-sponsored event, or in the administrative offices of a school district if students are educated at that office; in this paragraph,

(A) "school bus" has the meaning given in AS 11.71.900;

(B) "school district" has the meaning given in AS 47.07.063;

(C) "school grounds" has the meaning given in AS 11.71.900;

(33) the offense was a felony specified in AS 11.41.410 - 11.41.455, the defendant had been previously diagnosed as having or having tested positive for HIV or AIDS, and the offense either (A) involved penetration, or (B) exposed the victim to a risk or a fear that the offense could result in the transmission of HIV or AIDS; in this paragraph, "HIV" and "AIDS" have the meanings given in AS 18.15.310;

(34) the defendant committed the offense on, or to affect persons or property on, the premises of a recognized shelter or facility providing services to victims of domestic violence or sexual assault.

(d) The following factors shall be considered by the sentencing court if proven in accordance with this section, and may allow imposition of a sentence below the presumptive range set out in AS 12.55.125:

(1) the offense was principally accomplished by another person, and the defendant manifested extreme caution or sincere concern for the safety or well-being of the victim;

(2) the defendant, although an accomplice, played only a minor role in the commission of the offense;

(3) the defendant committed the offense under some degree of duress, coercion, threat, or compulsion insufficient to constitute a complete defense, but that significantly affected the defendant's conduct;

(4) the conduct of a youthful defendant was substantially influenced by another person more mature than the defendant;

(5) the conduct of an aged defendant was substantially a product of physical or mental infirmities resulting from the defendant's age;

(6) in a conviction for assault under AS 11.41.200 - 11.41.220, the defendant acted with serious provocation from the victim;

(7) except in the case of a crime defined by AS 11.41.410 - 11.41.470, the victim provoked the crime to a significant degree;

(8) before the defendant knew that the criminal conduct had been discovered, the defendant fully compensated or made a good faith effort to fully compensate the victim of the defendant's criminal conduct for any damage or injury sustained;

(9) the conduct constituting the offense was among the least serious conduct included in the definition of the offense;

(10) the defendant was motivated to commit the offense solely by an overwhelming compulsion to provide for emergency necessities for the defendant's immediate family;

(11) after commission of the offense for which the defendant is being sentenced, the defendant assisted authorities to detect, apprehend, or prosecute other persons who committed an offense;

(12) the facts surrounding the commission of the offense and any previous offenses by the defendant establish that the harm caused by the defendant's conduct is consistently minor and inconsistent with the imposition of a substantial period of imprisonment;

(13) the defendant is convicted of an offense specified in AS 11.71 and the offense involved small quantities of a controlled substance;

(14) the defendant is convicted of an offense specified in AS 11.71 and the offense involved the distribution of a controlled substance, other than a schedule IA controlled substance, to a personal acquaintance who is 19 years of age or older for no profit;

(15) the defendant is convicted of an offense specified in AS 11.71 and the offense involved the possession of a small amount of a controlled substance for personal use in the defendant's home;

(16) in a conviction for assault or attempted assault or for homicide or attempted homicide, the defendant acted in response to domestic violence perpetrated by the victim against the defendant and the domestic violence consisted of aggravated or repeated instances of assaultive behavior;

(17) except in the case of an offense defined by AS 11.41 or AS 11.46.400, the defendant has been convicted of a class B or C felony, and, at the time of sentencing, has successfully completed a court-ordered treatment program as defined in AS 28.35.028 that was begun after the offense was committed;

(18) except in the case of an offense defined under AS 11.41 or AS 11.46.400 or a defendant who has previously been convicted of a felony, the defendant committed the offense while suffering from a mental disease or defect as defined in AS 12.47.130 that was insufficient to constitute a complete defense but that significantly affected the defendant's conduct.

(e) If a factor in aggravation is a necessary element of the present offense, or requires the imposition of a sentence within the presumptive range under AS 12.55.125(c)(2), that factor may not be used to impose a sentence above the high end of the presumptive range. If a factor in mitigation is raised at trial as a defense reducing the offense charged to a lesser included offense, that factor may not be used to impose a sentence below the low end of the presumptive range.

(f) If the state seeks to establish a factor in aggravation at sentencing

(1) under (c)(7), (8), (12), (15), (19), (20), (21), or (31) of this section, or if the defendant seeks to establish a factor in mitigation at sentencing, written notice must be served on the opposing party and filed with the court not later than 10 days before the date set for imposition of sentence; the factors in aggravation listed in this paragraph and factors in mitigation must be established by clear and convincing evidence before the court sitting without a jury; all findings must be set out with specificity;

(2) other than one listed in (1) of this subsection, the factor shall be presented to a trial jury under procedures set by the court, unless the defendant waives trail by jury, stipulates to the existence of the factor, or consents to have the factor proven under procedures set out in (1) of this subsection; a factor in aggravation presented to a jury is established if proved beyond a reasonable doubt; written notice of the intent to establish a factor in aggravation must be served on the defendant and filed with the court

(A) 20 days before trial, or at another time specified by the court;

(B) within 48 hours, or at a time specified by the court, if the court instructs the jury about the option to return a verdict for a lesser included offense; or

(C) five days before entering a plea that results in a finding of guilt, or at another time specified by the court.

(g) Voluntary alcohol or other drug intoxication or chronic alcoholism or other drug addiction may not be considered an aggravating or mitigating factor.

(h) In this section, "serious provocation" has the meaning given in AS 11.41.115(f).

Sec. 12.55.185. Definitions.

In this chapter, unless the context requires otherwise,

(1) "active term of imprisonment" has the meaning given in AS 12.55.127;

(2) "building" has the meaning given in AS 11.81.900;

(3) "crime against a person" has the meaning given in AS 33.30.901;

(4) "criminal street gang" has the meaning given in AS 11.81.900(b);

(5) "dangerous instrument" has the meaning given in AS 11.81.900;

(6) "domestic violence" has the meaning given in AS 18.66.990;

(7) "firearm" has the meaning given in AS 11.81.900;

(8) "first felony conviction" means that the defendant has not been previously convicted of a felony;

(9) "judicial officer" has the meaning given in AS 11.56.900;

(10) "most serious felony" means

(A) arson in the first degree, promoting prostitution in the first degree under AS 11.66.110(a)(2), or any unclassified or class A felony prescribed under AS 11.41; or

(B) an attempt, or conspiracy to commit, or criminal solicitation under AS 11.31.110 of, an unclassified felony prescribed under AS 11.41;

(11) "paramedic" means a mobile intensive care paramedic licensed under AS 08.64;

(12) "peace officer" has the meaning given in AS 11.81.900;

(13) "pecuniary gain" means the amount of money or value of property at the time of commission of the offense derived by the defendant from the commission of the offense, less the amount of money or value of property returned to the victim of the offense or seized by or surrendered to lawful authority before sentence is imposed;

(14) "second felony conviction" means that the defendant previously has been convicted of a felony;

(15) "serious physical injury" has the meaning given in AS 11.81.900;

(16) "sexual felony" means sexual assault in the first degree, sexual abuse of a minor in the first degree, sexual assault in the second degree, sexual abuse of a minor in the second degree, unlawful exploitation of a minor, distribution of child pornography, sexual assault in the third degree, incest, indecent exposure in the first degree, possession of child pornography, and felony attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation to commit those crimes;

(17) "third felony conviction" means that the defendant has been at least twice previously convicted of a felony;

(18) "unconditional discharge" means that a defendant is released from all disability arising under a sentence, including probation and parole;

(19) "victim" means

(A) a person against whom an offense has been perpetrated;

(B) one of the following, not the perpetrator, if the person specified in (A) of this paragraph is a minor, incompetent, or incapacitated:

(i) an individual living in a spousal relationship with the person specified in (A) of this paragraph; or

(ii) a parent, adult child, guardian, or custodian of the person;

(C) one of the following, not the perpetrator, if the person specified in (A) of this paragraph is dead:

(i) a person living in a spousal relationship with the deceased before the deceased died;

(ii) an adult child, parent, brother, sister, grandparent, or grandchild of the deceased; or

(iii) any other interested person, as may be designated by a person having authority in law to do so.

Sec. 22.07.020. Jurisdiction.

(a) The court of appeals has appellate jurisdiction in actions and proceedings commenced in the superior court involving

(1) criminal prosecution;

(2) post-conviction relief;

(3) matters under AS 47.12, including waiver of jurisdiction over a minor under AS 47.12.100;

(4) extradition;

(5) habeas corpus;

(6) probation and parole; and

(7) bail.

(b) Except as limited in AS 12.55.120, the court of appeals has jurisdiction to hear appeals of unsuspended sentences of imprisonment exceeding two years for a felony offense or 120 days for a misdemeanor offense imposed by the superior court on the grounds that the sentence is excessive, or a sentence of any length on the grounds that it is too lenient. The court of appeals, in the exercise of this jurisdiction, may modify the sentence as provided by law and the state constitution.

(c) The court of appeals has jurisdiction to review (1) a final decision of the district court in an action or proceeding involving criminal prosecution, post-conviction relief, extradition, probation and parole, habeas corpus, or bail; and (2) the final decision of the district court on a sentence imposed by it if the sentence exceeds 120 days of unsuspended incarceration for a misdemeanor offense. In this subsection, "final decision" means a decision or order, other than dismissal by consent of all parties, that closes a matter in the district court.

(d) An appeal to the court of appeals is a matter of right in all actions and proceedings within its jurisdiction except that

(1) the right of appeal to the court of appeals is waived if an appellant chooses to appeal the final decision of the district court to the superior court; and

(2) the state's right of appeal in criminal cases is limited by the prohibitions against double jeopardy contained in the United States Constitution and the Alaska Constitution.

(e) The court of appeals may in its discretion (1) review a final decision of the superior court on an appeal from a district court in an action or proceeding involving criminal prosecution, post-conviction relief, extradition, probation and parole, habeas corpus or bail; (2) review the final decision of the superior court on appeal of a sentence imposed by the district court. In this subsection, "final decision" means a decision or order, other than a dismissal by consent of all parties, that closes a matter in the superior court.

(f) The court of appeals may issue injunctions, writs, and all other process necessary for the complete exercise of its jurisdiction.

(g) A final decision of the court of appeals is binding on the superior court and on the district court unless superseded by a decision of the supreme court.

Sec. 47.12.030. Provisions inapplicable.

(a) When a minor who was at least 16 years of age at the time of the offense is charged by complaint, information, or indictment with an offense specified in this subsection, this chapter and the Alaska Delinquency Rules do not apply to the offense for which the minor is charged or to any additional offenses joinable to it under the applicable rules of court governing criminal procedure. The minor shall be charged, held, released on bail, prosecuted, sentenced, and incarcerated in the same manner as an adult. If the minor is convicted of an offense other than an offense specified in this subsection, the minor may attempt to prove, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the minor is amenable to treatment under this chapter. If the court finds that the minor is amenable to treatment under this chapter, the minor shall be treated as though the charges had been heard under this chapter, and the court shall order disposition of the charges of which the minor is convicted under AS 47.12.120(b). The provisions of this subsection apply when the minor is charged by complaint, information, or indictment with an offense

(1) that is an unclassified felony or a class A felony and the felony is a crime against a person;

(2) of arson in the first degree;

(3) that is a class B felony and the felony is a crime against a person in which the minor is alleged to have used a deadly weapon in the commission of the offense and the minor was previously adjudicated as a delinquent or convicted as an adult, in this or another jurisdiction, as a result of an offense that involved use of a deadly weapon in the commission of a crime against a person or an offense in another jurisdiction having elements substantially identical to those of a crime against a person, and the previous offense was punishable as a felony; in this paragraph, "deadly weapon" has the meaning given in AS 11.81.900(b); or

(4) that is misconduct involving weapons in the first degree under

(A) AS 11.61.190(a)(1); or

(B) AS 11.61.190(a)(2) when the firearm was discharged under circumstances manifesting substantial and unjustifiable risk of physical injury to a person.

(b) When a minor is accused of violating a statute specified in this subsection, other than a statute the violation of which is a felony, this chapter and the Alaska Delinquency Rules do not apply and the minor accused of the offense shall be charged, prosecuted, and sentenced in the district court in the same manner as an adult; if a minor is charged, prosecuted, and sentenced for an offense under this subsection, the minor's parent, guardian, or legal custodian shall be present at all proceedings; the provisions of this subsection apply when a minor is accused of violating

(1) a traffic statute or regulation, or a traffic ordinance or regulation of a municipality;

(2) AS 11.76.105, relating to the possession of tobacco by a person under 19 years of age;

(3) a fish and game statute or regulation under AS 16;

(4) a parks and recreational facilities statute or regulation under AS 41.21;

(5) AS 04.16.050, relating to possession, control, or consumption of alcohol, except for conduct constituting habitual minor consuming or in possession or control under AS 04.16.050(d); and

(6) a municipal curfew ordinance, whether adopted under AS 29.35.085 or otherwise, unless the municipality provides for enforcement of its ordinance under AS 29.25.070(b) by the municipality; in place of any fine imposed for the violation of a municipal curfew ordinance, the court shall allow a defendant the option of performing community work; the value of the community work, which may not be lower than the amount of the fine, shall be determined under AS 12.55.055(c); in this paragraph, "community work" includes the work described in AS 12.55.055(b) or work that, on the recommendation of the municipal or borough assembly, city council, or traditional village council of the defendant's place of residence, would benefit persons within the municipality or village who are elderly or disabled.

(c) The provisions of AS 47.12.010 - 47.12.260 and the Alaska Delinquency Rules do not apply to driver's license proceedings under AS 28.15.185; the court shall impose a driver's license revocation under AS 28.15.185 in the same manner as adult driver's license revocations, except that a parent or legal guardian shall be present at all proceedings.

Sec. 47.12.100. Waiver of jurisdiction.

(a) If the court finds at a hearing on a petition that there is probable cause for believing that a minor is delinquent and finds that the minor is not amenable to treatment under this chapter, it shall order the case closed. After a case is closed under this subsection, the minor may be prosecuted as an adult.

(b) A minor is unamenable to treatment under this chapter if the minor probably cannot be rehabilitated by treatment under this chapter before reaching 20 years of age. In determining whether a minor is unamenable to treatment, the court may consider the seriousness of the offense the minor is alleged to have committed, the minor's history of delinquency, the probable cause of the minor's delinquent behavior, and the facilities available to the department for treating the minor.

(c) For purposes of making a determination under this section,

(1) the standard of proof is by a preponderance of the evidence; and

(2) the burden of proof that a minor is not amenable to treatment under this chapter is on the state; however, if the petition filed under AS 47.12.040 seeking to have the court declare a minor a delinquent is based on the minor's alleged commission of an offense that is an unclassified felony or class A felony and that is a crime against a person, the minor

(A) is rebuttably presumed not to be amenable to treatment under this chapter; and

(B) has the burden of proof of showing that the minor is amenable to treatment under this chapter.

Rule 32. Sentence and Judgment.

(a) Sentence. Sentence shall be imposed without unreasonable delay. Sentencing in felony cases shall follow the procedures established in this rule and Rules 32.1 through 32.6. Sentencing in misdemeanor cases shall follow the procedures established in this rule and Rules 32.2, 32.3, 32.5, and 32.6. When imposing sentence, the judge or magistrate shall explain on the record the reasons for the sentence.

(b) Other Counts. At sentencing, the prosecuting attorney must announce the disposition of all counts brought under the same case number that are not addressed in the judgment or in a written notice of dismissal or deferred prosecution. The court will notify the Department of Public Safety of any counts dismissed on the record.

(c) Judgment

(1) Conviction. A judgment of conviction must, for each count, set forth the offense, including the statute or regulation violated, the defendant's plea, the verdicts or findings, and the sentence imposed. The judge or magistrate must sign the judgment.

(A) Incarceration. When the sentence includes a term of incarceration, the clerk promptly shall deliver a copy of the judgment to a peace officer or correctional facility. If the defendant does not appear at the correctional facility at the time specified, the peace officer or a representative of the correctional facility promptly shall notify the court by sworn statement on the record or by affidavit.

(B) Restitution. When the sentence includes a requirement that the defendant pay restitution, the judge shall order restitution as described in Rule 32.6. The judgment for restitution is enforceable in the same manner as a judgment in a civil action. If the defendant is placed on probation, the judgment of conviction shall include the payment of restitution as a condition of probation.

(C) Conviction of a Corporation. If a corporation is convicted of any criminal offense, the judge shall enter judgment against the corporation and the judgment shall be enforced in the same manner as a judgment in a civil action, or as otherwise provided by law.

(2) Discharge. If the defendant is found not guilty or for any other reason is entitled to be discharged, judgment shall be entered accordingly.

(d) Judgment for Sex Offenses or Child Kidnapping. When a defendant is convicted of a sex offense defined in AS 12.63.100 or child kidnapping as defined in AS 12.63.100, the written judgment must state the requirements of AS 12.63.010 and the period of registration required under AS 12.63 if the required period can be determined by the court.

(e) Judgment for Crimes Involving Domestic Violence. In a case in which the defendant is convicted of an offense listed in AS 18.66.990(3) and the prosecution claims at sentencing that the offense is a crime involving domestic violence, the written judgment must set forth whether the offense is a crime involving domestic violence as defined in AS 18.66.990(3) and (5). A factual and legal determination supporting this finding must be made on the record.

(f) Judgment for Crime Against a Person. In a case in which the defendant is convicted of a crime against a person as defined in AS 44.41.035(j), the written judgment must set out the requirements of AS 12.55.015(h).

(g) Information To Be Included in Judgment. If provided by the prosecuting authority in the charging document, the judgment must include the following information:

(1) the defendant's full name, including middle name or initial;

(2) the defendant's date of birth;

(3) the defendant's Alaska Public Safety Information Network (APSIN) identification number;

(4) the defendant's driver's license number or state identification number, including the issuing state and whether the license is a commercial driver's license;

(5) the arrest tracking number (ATN) on the Criminal Case Intake and Disposition (CCID) form for each offense being addressed in the judgment;

(6) the three-digit charge tracking number assigned on the CCID form for each offense being addressed in the judgment; and

(7) the statute, regulation, or ordinance, as identified in the Uniform Offense Citation Table, corresponding to each offense being addressed in the judgment. Regulations not listed in the Uniform Offense Citation Table must be cited by the regulation number.

 The Uniform Offense Citation table was developed by the Department of Public Safety. Changes to the table must be approved by the Department of Law or the appropriate municipal prosecuting authority. It is available at http://www.dps.state.ak.us/statewide/uoct/.

(Adopted by SCO 4 October 4, 1959; amended by SCO 157 effective February 15, 1973; by Amendment No. 5 to SCO 157 effective July 1, 1974; by SCO 330 effective January 1, 1979; by SCO 418 effective August 1, 1980; by SCO 436 effective October 21, 1980; by SCO 437 effective October 21, 1980; by SCO 550 effective February 1, 1983; by SCO 554 effective April 4, 1983; by SCO 603 effective September 14, 1984; by SCO 976 effective January 15, 1990; by SCO 979 effective August 28, 1989; by SCO 1028 effective July 15, 1990; by SCO 1049 effective January 15, 1991; by SCO 1092 effective July 15, 1992; repealed and reenacted by SCO 1136 effective July 15, 1993; amended by SCO 1204 effective July 15, 1995; by SCO 1289 effective January 15, 1998; by SCO 1341 effective September 10, 1998; by SCO 1343 effective January 1, 1999; by SCO 1464 effective March 5, 2002; and by SCO 1614 effective October 15, 2006)

Note to SCO 1204: The requirement that a judgment for conviction of a sex offense must set out the requirements of AS 12.63.010 was added by ch. 41 3 SLA 1994. Section 7 of this order is adopted for the sole reason that the legislature has mandated the amendments.

Note to SCO 1341: Paragraph (e) of Criminal Rule 32 was added by 11 ch. 95 SLA 1998. Section 3 of this order is adopted for the sole reason that the legislature has mandated the amendment.

Rule 32.1. Presentence Procedure for Felony Sentencings.

(a) Scheduling & Preliminary Filings.

(1) At the time guilt in a felony case is established by verdict or plea, the judge shall establish the date for a sentencing hearing and a presentencing hearing, if appropriate, and, except as provided in paragraph (g) of this rule, shall order a presentence investigation by the Department of Corrections. The judge may order a presentence investigation in a case in which an investigation is not required under paragraph (g). If the judge elects to schedule a single hearing, all of the procedures for the presentencing and sentencing hearings shall be applicable at the single hearing.

(2) At the time guilt is established as described in (a)(1) above, the parties shall be directed to make the following preliminary filings within ten days, unless otherwise ordered by the court:

(A) Presumptive Sentencing. The state shall file a notice indicating whether the defendant's sentence is governed by presumptive sentencing and, if so, listing the defendant's prior convictions that qualify as prior felony convictions under AS 12.45.145, as well as any other factor that triggers a specific presumptive term; and

(B) Financial Statement. In cases where restitution may be ordered, the defendant shall submit a financial statement on a form designated by the Administrative Director to the probation office.

(b) Presentence Investigation and Report.

(1) Contents and Filing. The Department of Corrections shall prepare a presentence report. The report shall be filed with the court and served on counsel at least 30 days before the sentencing hearing, or 30 days before the presentencing hearing, if one is scheduled. The report shall contain all of the defendant's prior criminal convictions and findings of delinquency and any other information about the defendant's characteristics, financial condition, and the circumstances affecting the defendant's behavior that may be helpful in fashioning the defendant's sentence, a victim impact statement, and any other information required by the judge. The presentence report shall comply with the Victims' Rights Act, AS 12.61.100 - .12.61.150 and AS 12.55.022.

(2) Restitution Information. In cases where the court may order the defendant to pay restitution, the presentence report must include:

(A) defendant's financial statement completed under subparagraph (a)(2)(B) of this rule; and

(B) information concerning the identity of any victims or other persons seeking restitution and, if known, whether any victim or other person expressly declines restitution, the nature and amount of any damages together with any supporting documentation, a restitution amount recommendation, and the names of any co-defendants and their case numbers.

(3) Disclosure. Unless the judge finds that providing specific portions of the report to the defendant would prove detrimental to the rehabilitation of the defendant or the safety of the public, the defense attorney may give a full copy of the report to the defendant. Unless otherwise ordered, or except as specifically allowed by other provisions of law, further disclosure of the report shall be limited to agents of the state's attorney or the defendant's attorney, any reviewing courts, and the agencies having charge of the defendant's rehabilitation.

(4) Plea Agreements.

(A) If the parties request preparation of a presentence report to aid them in reaching a plea agreement, the judge may order the department to prepare such a report prior to the time stated in this rule. If a report is prepared prior to entry of a verdict or plea of guilty or no contest, the report shall be submitted only to the parties and not to the judge.

(B) Notwithstanding subparagraph (b)(4)(A), the judge may use the presentence report to determine whether to accept a plea agreement under Criminal Rule 11.

(5) Service. The parties must serve the Department of Corrections with all filings relating to sentencing, and the court must distribute all orders related to sentencing to the department.

(c) Notice of Aggravating Factors, Extraordinary Circumstances, and Restitution. Within seven days after service of the presentence report on the parties:

(1) The state shall list the aggravating factors and describe the nature of any extraordinary circumstances on which the state intends to rely at sentencing. This notice shall include a written summary of the evidence that the state will rely on to establish each aggravating factor or extraordinary circumstance.

(2) The state shall give notice if it will seek restitution from the defendant in an amount different from the recommendation in the presentence report. The notice shall specify the amount of restitution sought and shall set forth the facts establishing the basis for this amount, and shall include information concerning the identity of any victims or other persons seeking restitution and, if known, whether any victim or other person expressly declines restitution, the nature and amount of any damages together with any supporting documentation, and the names of any co-defendants and their case numbers.

(3) The state shall give notice of any evidence on which it intends to rely at sentencing that is not contained in the presentence report. If the state intends to present any witness, the notice shall contain a brief summary of the witness's anticipated testimony. The notice need not include any information to be presented by a victim's oral or written statement.

(4) Notices under this rule shall be served by delivery to parties in the same community as the party making service, and by facsimile transmission ("fax") to parties in outlying communities. When service is made by fax, a paper copy of the notices shall also be mailed to the intended recipient.

(d) Notice of Mitigating Factors, Extraordinary Circumstances, and Responses to State's Notices. Within seven days after service of the notices required by paragraph (c):

(1) The defendant shall file a notice responding to each notice filed by the state under paragraphs (a)(2)(A) and (c)(1). The notice shall indicate whether the defendant concedes or disputes each felony conviction, aggravating factor and extraordinary circumstance and, if so, shall include a description of the basis for the opposition.

(2) The defendant shall list the mitigating factors and describe the nature of any extraordinary circumstances on which the defense intends to rely at sentencing. This notice shall include a written summary of the evidence that the defendant will rely on to establish each mitigating factor or extraordinary circumstance.

(3) If the defendant objects to any recommendation for restitution included in the presentence report or in a notice filed by the state under paragraph (c)(2), the defendant shall file a notice disputing the legal basis for restitution, the factual basis for restitution, or the amount sought. The notice shall set out the specific grounds for contesting the restitution or provide information that the victim or other person entitled to the restitution expressly declines restitution.

(4) The defendant shall give notice of any evidence on which the defendant intends to rely at sentencing that is not contained in the presentence report. If the defendant intends to present any witness, the notice shall contain a brief summary of the witness's anticipated testimony. The notice need not include any information to be presented in the defendant's allocution.

(5) The defendant shall give notice of any objection to any information contained in the presentence report or to any other material the judge or the state has identified as a source of information to be relied upon at sentencing. The notice shall state the basis for the defendant's objection. If the defendant objects to information as inaccurate, the notice shall include any information upon which the defendant intends to rely to refute the objected-to information.

(6) Notices under this rule shall be served by delivery to parties in the same community as the party making service, and by fax to parties in outlying communities. When service is made by fax, a paper copy of the notices shall also be mailed to the intended recipient.

(e) Disputing Mitigating Factors, Extraordinary Circumstances, and Objections to Restitution. Within seven days after service of the notices required by paragraph (d):

(1) The state shall file a notice responding to each notice filed by the defendant under paragraph (d)(2). The notice shall indicate whether the state concedes or disputes each mitigating factor and extraordinary circumstance, and shall include a description of the basis for the opposition.

(2) The state shall file a notice responding to each notice filed by the defendant under paragraph (d)(3). The notice shall indicate whether the state disagrees with the contention of the defendant concerning restitution and shall include a brief summary of the basis for its position.

(3) Notices under this rule shall be served by delivery to parties in the same community as the party making service, and by fax to parties in outlying communities. When service is made by fax, a paper copy of the notices shall also be mailed to the intended recipient.

(f) Adjudicating Disputed Factual and Legal Issues. The court shall give the parties the opportunity to present evidence and argument on the disputed factual and legal issues related to sentencing at the sentencing hearing or at any presentencing hearing or other supplemental evidentiary hearings that the court may order.

(1) The court shall enter findings regarding whether the defendant's sentence is governed by presumptive sentencing, the number of the defendant's prior felonies as defined in AS 12.55.145, and the existence of any other factor that triggers a specific presumptive term.

(2) The court shall enter findings regarding the aggravating factors, mitigating factors, and extraordinary circumstances raised by the parties. However, no finding is necessary if the court affirmatively determines that resolution of a disputed factor or extraordinary circumstance is immaterial to the imposition of a just sentence.

(3) If the sentencing judge believes that the parties have overlooked a prior felony conviction or any other factor triggering a specific presumptive term, or have overlooked an applicable aggravating or mitigating factor or extraordinary circumstance, the judge shall notify the parties of the court's belief. The judge shall inform the parties of the specific facts which the judge believes establish the prior felony or presumptive sentencing factor, and the judge must allow the parties an opportunity to respond to the judge's information.

(4) The court shall resolve any factual disputes related to restitution.

(5) The court shall enter findings regarding any disputed assertion in the presentence report. Any assertion that has not been proved shall be deleted from the report; any assertion that has been proved only in part shall be modified in the report. Alternatively, if the court determines that the disputed assertion is not relevant to its sentencing decision so that resolution of the dispute is not warranted, the court shall delete the assertion from the report without making any finding. After the court has made the necessary deletions and modifications, the court's corrected copy shall be labeled the "approved version" of the presentence report. A copy of the approved version must be delivered to the Department of Corrections within seven days after sentencing.

(g) When Presentence Investigation Not Required. Unless the defendant may be sentenced to a presumptive term of imprisonment under AS 12.55.125(e)(1) or (2), or the court otherwise orders, a presentence investigation by the Department of Corrections is not required if the defendant is convicted of the following offenses:

(1) vehicle theft in the first degree in violation of AS 11.46.360;

(2) driving while intoxicated under AS 28.35.030(n); or

(3) refusal to submit to a chemical test under AS 28.35.032(p).

(h) Restitution Procedures When No Presentence Investigation.

(1) In cases where the court may order the defendant to pay restitution but no presentence investigation report is submitted, the prosecuting authority must file a notice concerning restitution at least ten days before the sentencing hearing, unless otherwise ordered by the court. The notice shall include information concerning the identity of any victims or other persons seeking restitution and, if known, whether any victim or other person expressly declines restitution, the nature and amount of any damages together with any supporting documentation, a restitution amount recommendation, and the names of any co-defendants and their case numbers.

(2) Unless otherwise ordered by the court, the defendant shall file any objections to the information submitted under paragraph (h)(1), or provide information that the victim or other person expressly declines restitution, at least five days before the sentencing hearing, together with defendant's financial statement on a form designated by the Administrative Director.

Rule 32.3 Judgments and Orders.

(a) Effective Dates of Orders and Judgments. Orders and judgments become effective the date they are entered.

(1) Oral Orders. The date of entry of an oral order is the date the order is put on the official electronic record by the judge unless otherwise specified by the judge. At the time the judge announces an oral order, the judge also shall announce on the record whether the order shall be reduced to writing. If the oral order is reduced to writing, the effective date shall be included in the written order.

(2) Written Orders Not Preceded by Oral Orders. The date of entry of a written order not preceded by an oral order is the date the written order is signed unless otherwise specified in the order.

(3) Judgments. The date of entry of a criminal judgment is the date the judgment is put on the official electronic record by the judge unless otherwise specified by the judge. All judgments shall be reduced to writing and the effective date shall be included in the written judgment.

(b) Commencement of Time for Appeal, Review and Reconsideration. The time within which a notice of appeal may be filed and reconsideration or review of orders and judgments may be requested begins running on the date of notice as defined below.

(c) Date of Notice.

(1) Oral Orders.

(i) As to the parties present when an oral order is announced, the date of notice is the date the judge announces the order on the official electronic record, unless at that time the judge announces that the order will be reduced to writing in which case the date of notice is the date shown in the clerk's certificate of distribution on the written order.

(ii) As to parties not present at the announcement of an oral order the date of notice is the date shown in the clerk's certificate of distribution of notice of the order. If, however, at the time the judge announces the oral order the judge announces that the order will be reduced to writing, the date of notice is the date shown in the clerk's certificate of distribution on the written order.

(2) Written Orders. The date of notice of a written order is the date shown in the clerk's certificate of distribution on the written order.

(3) Judgments. All judgments must be reduced to writing. The date of notice of a judgment is the date shown in the clerk's certificate of distribution on the written judgment.

(4) Other Service Requirements. These notice provisions apply to the notice of orders and judgments under Rule 44(c) and do not affect the service requirements of any other rule of criminal procedure.

(d) Clerk's Certificate of Distribution. Every written notice of an oral order and every written order and judgment shall include a clerk's certificate of distribution showing the date copies of the notice, order or judgment were distributed, to whom they were distributed, and the name or initials of the court employee who distributed them.

Rule 204. Appeal: Time--Notice--Bonds.

(a) When Taken - Appeals and Cross-Appeals.

(1) Appeals. The notice of appeal shall be filed within 30 days from the date shown in the clerk's certificate of distribution on the judgment appealed from, unless a shorter time for filing a notice of appeal applies as provided by Rules 216-220, or unless a different time applies as provided in AS 23.30.128(g).

(2) Subsequent Appeals. If a timely notice of appeal is filed by a party, any other party may file a notice of appeal within 14 days of the filing of any timely notice of appeal by any other party, or within 30 days from the date shown in the clerk's certificate of distribution on the judgment, whichever period expires last.

(3) Motions That Terminate Time for Filing Appeals in Civil Cases. In a civil case, the running of the time for filing an appeal is terminated by a timely motion filed in the trial court pursuant to those rules of civil procedure enumerated in this section or by AS 23.30.128. The full time for an appeal by any party begins to run again on the date of notice, as defined in Civil Rule 58.1(c), of any of the following orders made on timely motion:

(A) Granting or denying a motion for judgment under Civil Rule 50(b);

(B) Granting or denying a motion to amend or make additional findings of fact under Civil Rule 52 (b) whether or not an alteration of the judgment would be required if the motion is granted;

(C) Granting or denying a motion to alter or amend a judgment under Civil Rule 59;

(D) Denying a new trial under Civil Rule 59; or

(E) Granting or denying a motion for reconsideration filed in the trial court under Civil Rule 77(k) on the date of notice as defined by Civil Rule 58.1(c) or on the date of denial of the motion pursuant to Civil Rule 77(k)(4), whichever is earlier;

(F) Granting or denying a request for reconsideration filed in the Alaska Workers' Compensation Appeals Commission under AS 23.30.128(f) or on the date the request is deemed denied pursuant to that section, whichever is earlier; or

(G) Granting or denying a petition for rehearing under Appellate Rule 506 in an appeal from an administrative agency other than the Alaska Workers' Compensation Appeals Commission.

(4) Motions That Terminate Time for Filing Appeals in Criminal Cases. In a criminal case, if a timely motion for a new trial or in arrest of judgment, or a timely motion for reconsideration has been filed in the superior court, or if a motion for reduction, correction, or suspension of sentence under Criminal Rule 35 has been made within the 30-day period following the date shown in the clerk's certificate of distribution on the judgment, an appeal from a judgment may be filed within 30 days after the date of notice of the order deciding the motion. Date of notice is defined in Criminal Rule 32.3(c).

(5) Effect of Taxing of Costs and Prejudgment Interest and Awarding of Attorney's Fees.

(A) The running of the time for filing an appeal is not terminated by proceedings related to the taxing of costs pursuant to Civil Rule 79 or while awaiting calculation of prejudgment interest or proceedings related to the award of attorney's fees. However, the statement of points on appeal filed pursuant to Appellate Rule 204(e) and the designation of transcript filed pursuant to Appellate Rule 210(b)(1) may be amended by motion by an appellant or cross appellant to include the award or denial of costs and attorney's fees or prejudgment interest and pertinent portions of the electronic record. These subjects will thereafter be considered part of the appeal if covered in the brief of appellant or cross-appellant. If no appeal or cross-appeal is pending, the allowance of costs and attorney's fees or the award of prejudgment interest shall be considered a final judgment subject to separate appeal limited to the subject of costs, attorney's fees or prejudgment interest.

(B) Notwithstanding Rule 203, the pendency of an appeal shall not divest the trial court of jurisdiction to consider the matters of costs and attorney's fees pursuant to Civil Rules 79 and 82 or AS 23.30.008(d).

(6) Premature Appeals. If a notice of appeal is filed after the announcement of a decision but before the date shown in the clerk's certificate of distribution on the judgment, the notice of appeal shall be treated as filed on the date shown in the clerk's certificate of distribution on the judgment.

(b) Appeal - How Taken. A party may appeal from a final order or judgment by filing a notice of appeal with the clerk of the appellate courts. The notice of appeal must identify the party taking the appeal, the final order or judgment appealed from, and the court to which the appeal is taken. The party must file the original and one copy of the notice of appeal accompanied by the original and one copy of the documents listed below:

(1) a completed docketing statement in the form prescribed by these rules, which includes a list of the parties to the appeal;

(2) a copy of the final order or judgment from which the appeal is taken;

(3) a statement of points on appeal as required by Rule 204(e);

(4) unless the party is represented by court-appointed counsel, the party is the state or an agency thereof, or the party is a prisoner found by the court to be eligible to pay less than full fees under AS 09.19.010,

(A) the filing fee required by Administrative Rule 9(a);

(B) a motion for waiver of filing fee pursuant to Administrative Rule 9(f)(1); or

(C) a motion to appeal at public expense pursuant to Rule 209;

(5) unless the party is represented by court-appointed counsel, the party is the state, municipality, or officer or agency thereof, or the party is an employee appealing denial of compensation by the Alaska Workers' Compensation Appeals Commission or denial of benefits under AS 23.20 (Employment Security Act),

(A) the cost bond or deposit re-qui red by Rule 204(c)(1);

(B) a copy of a superior court order approving the party's supersedeas bond or other security in lieu of bond or a copy of the party's motion to the superior court for approval of a supersede-as bond or other security;

(C) a motion for waiver of cost bond; or

(D) a motion to appeal at public expense pursuant to Rule 209;

(6) a designation of transcript if the party intends to have portions of the electronic record transcribed pursuant to Rule 210(b); and

(7) proof of service of the notice of appeal and all required accompanying documents, except the filing fee, on all other parties to the appeal.

A party may move for an extension of time to file the statement of points on appeal and the designation of transcript. The clerk of the appellate courts shall refuse to accept for filing any notice of appeal not conforming to this paragraph and accompanied by the items specified in [1]-[7] or a motion to extend the time for filing item [3] or [6].

(c) Bond on Appeal.

(1) Unless a party is exempted by law, a bond for costs on appeal shall be filed with the notice of appeal in a civil case. The bond shall be in the sum of seven hundred fifty dollars ($750.00), unless the superior court fixes a different amount or unless a supersedeas bond is filed, in which event no separate bond on appeal is required. The bond on appeal shall have sufficient surety and shall be conditioned to secure the payment of costs if the appeal is dismissed or the judgment affirmed, or such costs as the supreme court may award if the judgment is modified. If a bond on appeal in the sum of seven hundred fifty dollars ($750.00) is given, no approval thereof is necessary. After a bond on appeal is filed, an appellee may by motion raise objection to the form or amount of the bond or to the sufficiency of the surety which shall be determined by the superior court. In lieu of filing such cost bond, the appellant may deposit in the office of the clerk of the court from which the appeal is taken a sum of money reasonably sufficient to cover such costs, the amount thereof to be fixed by the superior court.

(2) Notwithstanding subparagraph (1), a bond for costs on appeal shall not be required in an appeal from a decision of the trial court in any criminal case or any civil case where an indigent party is entitled to court-appointed counsel, and a bond shall not be required from an employee appealing from a denial of compensation by the Alaska Workers' Compensation Appeals Commission or from a denial of a claim for benefits under AS 23.20 (Employment Security Act).

(d) Supersedeas Bond. Whenever in a civil case an appellant entitled thereto desires a stay on appeal, the appellant may present to the superior court for its approval a supersedeas bond which shall have such surety or sureties as the court requires. The bond shall be conditioned for the satisfaction of the judgment in full, together with costs and interest, if for any reason the appeal is dismissed or if the judgment is affirmed, and to satisfy in full such modification of the judgment and such costs and interest as the supreme court may adjudge and award. When the judgment is for the recovery of money not otherwise secured, the amount of the bond shall be fixed at such sum as will cover the whole amount of the judgment remaining unsatisfied, costs on the appeal, and interest, unless the superior court, after notice and hearing and for good cause shown, fixes a different amount or orders security other than the bond. When the judgment determines the disposition of the property in controversy as in real actions, replevin, and actions to foreclose mortgages or when such property is in the custody of the court or the state troopers or when the proceeds of such property of a bond for its value is in the custody or control of the court, the amount of the supersedeas bond shall be fixed at such sum only as will secure the amount recovered for the use and detention of the property, the cost of the action, costs on appeal, and interest, unless the superior court, after notice and hearing and for good cause shown, fixes a different amount or orders security other than the bond. A municipality or an officer or agent thereof desiring a stay on appeal is exempted from the requirement of posting supersedeas bond imposed by this subsection.

(e) Statement of Points. At the time of filing the notice of appeal, the appellant shall serve and file a concise statement of the points on which appellant intends to rely in the appeal. The appellate court will consider only points included in the statement, and points that the court can address effectively without reviewing untranscribed portions of the electronic record. On motion in the appellate court, and for cause, the statement of points may be supplemented.

(f) Judgment Against Surety. By entering into an appeal or supersedeas bond given pursuant to subdivisions (c) and (d) of this rule, the surety submits to the jurisdiction of the superior court and irrevocably appoints the clerk of that court as the surety's agent upon whom any papers affecting the surety's liability on the bond may be served. The surety's liability may be enforced on motion without the necessity of an independent action. The motion and such notice of the motion as the superior court prescribed may be served on the clerk of the superior court who shall forthwith mail copies to the surety if the surety's address is known.

(g) Parties to the Appeal. All parties to the trial court proceeding when the final order or judgment was entered are parties to the appeal. A party who files a notice of appeal, whether separately or jointly, is an appellant under these rules. All other parties are deemed to be appellees, regardless of their status in the trial court. An appellee may elect at any time not to participate in the appeal by filing and serving a notice of non-participation. The filing of a notice of non-participation shall not affect whether the party is bound by the decision on appeal.

(h) Service of Documents. Papers filed or served in the appeal must be served on all parties, except appellees who have elected not to participate in the action.

(i) Joint or Consolidated Appeals. If two or more parties are entitled to appeal from a judgment or order of a court and their interests are such as to make joinder practical, they may file a joint notice of appeal. Appeals may be consolidated by order of the appellate court upon its own motion or upon motion of a party.

Rule 209. Appeals at Public Expense.

(a) Civil Matters.

(1) A party to a civil action may file in the supreme court a motion to appeal or to petition for review at public expense. The motion shall be accompanied by a sworn financial statement on a form provided by the clerk of the appellate courts.

(2) In considering the motion to appeal or petition for review at public expense, the court shall determine the indigence or nonindigence of the party.

(3) If the motion is granted:

[a] The court shall specify in the order granting the motion which of the following costs or partial costs are to be covered at public expense:

[1] Filing fees,

[2] Transcript fees,

[3] Costs of printing briefs,

[4] Other costs;

[b] Any costs and attorney fees awarded to the appellant or petitioner as a prevailing party in the supreme court shall accrue to the state to reimburse it for costs relating to the appeal or petition for review.

(4) Leave to file at public expense may be conditioned on repayment of costs to the state. The conditions may include the imposition of liens in favor of the state on costs, attorney fees and other recoveries awarded to the indigent appellant or petitioner.

(5) An appeal or petition for review at public expense will be allowed without additional motion in cases where the appellant is represented by court-appointed counsel.

(6) The provisions of this paragraph do not apply to the filing fees in a prisoner's appeal against the state or an officer, agent, employee, or former officer, agent, or employee of the state that is governed by the provisions of AS 09.19. A prisoner may request a filing fee reduction in an appeal governed by AS 09.19 by submitting an application which satisfies the requirements of AS 09.19.010 with the prisoner's notice of appeal and the items specified in Appellate Rule 204(b).

(b) Criminal Matters.

(1) In criminal matters the appellate court shall authorize appeals and petitions for review at public expense on behalf of defendants who are "indigent," as defined by statute, in accordance with the rules and decisions of the appellate courts of Alaska, and where such proceedings are required to be provided by state courts by decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States. Where an appeal or petition for review at public expense is authorized by the court, the costs which shall be borne at public expense include those of providing counsel and of preparing a transcript and briefs.

(2) If a defendant is allowed to proceed at public expense, the clerk of the appellate courts shall send the defendant a written notice and order, to the address provided under Appellate Rule 204(b), that

(A) advises defendant that, if the defendant's conviction is not reversed, the defendant will be ordered to repay the prosecuting authority for the cost of appointed appellate counsel, in accordance with the schedule of costs set out in subparagraph 209(b)(6); and

(B) orders the defendant to apply for permanent fund dividends every year in which the defendant qualifies for a dividend until the cost is paid in full.

(3) A defendant authorized to proceed at public expense in the trial court is presumed to be entitled to appeal or petition for review at public expense.

(4) Counsel appointed to represent a defendant in the trial court pursuant to Criminal Rule 39 shall remain as appointed counsel throughout an appeal or petition for review at public expense authorized under this paragraph and shall not be permitted to withdraw except upon the grounds authorized in Administrative Rule 12. An attorney appointed by the court under Administrative Rule 12(b)(1)(B) will be permitted to withdraw upon a showing that either the public defender agency or the office of public advocacy is able to represent the defendant in the appellate proceeding. If an appeal is to be taken, trial counsel will not be permitted to withdraw until the notice of appeal and the documents required to be filed with the appeal by Rule 204 have been accepted for filing by the clerk of the appellate courts.

(5) At the conclusion of the appellate proceeding, the clerk of the appellate courts shall enter judgment against the defendant for the cost of appointed appellate counsel unless the defendant's conviction was reversed by the appellate court. The amount of the judgment shall be determined by reference to the schedule in subparagraph 209(b)(6). Before entering judgment, the clerk shall mail, to the defendant's address of record, a notice that sets out the amount of the proposed judgment. The defendant may oppose entry of the judgment by filing a written opposition within 45 days after the date shown in the clerk's certificate of distribution on the notice. The opposition shall specifically set out the grounds for opposing entry of judgment. The prosecuting authority may oppose the amount of the judgment by filing a written opposition within the same deadline. Criminal Rule 39(c)(1)(C) and (c)(2) shall apply to judgments entered under this subparagraph.

(6) The following schedule governs the cost of appointed appellate counsel:

Type of Appellate Proceeding	Misdemeanor	Felony
Sentence Appeal or Petition for Sentence Review	$ 250	$ 500
Merit Appeal or Appeal from Post-Conviction Relief Proceedings	$ 750	$ 1,500
Combined Merit Appeal and Sentence Appeal or Petition for Sentence Review	$ 1,000	$ 2,000
Other Appellate Actions (Petition for Review, Petition for Hearing, etc.)	$ 500	$ 1,000

(c) Costs. Costs, attorney's fees, damages, and interest may be allowed as in other cases, but the state shall not be liable for any of them.

Rule 210. Record on Appeal.

(a) Composition of Record. The record on appeal consists of the entire trial court file, including the original papers and exhibits filed in the trial court, the electronic record of proceedings before the trial court, and transcripts, if any, of the trial court proceedings. Except as otherwise ordered by the appellate court, the record does not include documents or exhibits filed after, or electronic records or transcripts of proceedings occurring after, the filing date of the notice of appeal, and does not include transcripts not designated under subsection (b)(1) of this rule unless those transcripts were filed with the trial court prior to the filing date of the notice of appeal. Filings, exhibits, electronic recordings, or transcripts presented to the trial court after the filing date of the notice of appeal may be added to the record on appeal only upon motion pursuant to subsection (i). Material never presented to the trial court may not be added to the record on appeal.

(b) Preparation of Transcript.

(1) Designation of Parts of Record to be Transcribed.

(A) At the time the notice of appeal is filed, the appellant shall file and serve on the other parties to the appeal a designation of the parts of the electronic record which appellant intends to transcribe. The appellant shall designate all parts which are essential to a determination of the issues on appeal. If appellant claims that the written findings of fact or conclusions of law are insufficient or erroneous, the designation shall include any oral findings of fact and conclusions of law. Within 10 days after service of appellant's designation, any other party to the appeal may file and serve a designation of additional parts of the electronic record to be transcribed.

(B) If a party designates an entire trial or hearing, the partys designation shall include only the nature and dates of the proceeding. If a party designates parts of a trial or hearing, the partys designation shall include the nature and dates of the proceeding, the CD or tape number and log numbers or time where these parts appear [CD (#), at Time 00:00:00 or Tape (#), at Log 00:00:00], and a narrative description of the portions requested. If a party designates a portion of a witness testimony, it must appear from the partys narrative description that part of the witness testimony has been omitted.

(2) Preparation at Public Expense. The clerk of the appellate courts shall arrange for preparation of the transcript in cases in which the transcript is prepared at public expense. The transcript shall include all parts of the electronic record designated by the parties to the appeal; however, the voir dire examination of jurors and jury instructions shall not be transcribed unless a party has specifically requested these portions of the trial.

(3) Preparation Not at Public Expense. In cases in which the transcript is not prepared at public expense, the appellant shall arrange for preparation of a transcript of all parts of the electronic record designated by the parties to the appeal. Upon request, the clerk of the trial courts shall provide to the transcriber a copy of the designations, a copy of the electronic record or parts thereof, a copy of the log notes and other information necessary for preparation of the transcript. Unless the parties agree otherwise by stipulation, or unless otherwise ordered by the appellate court, the person designated to prepare the transcript shall not be a relative, employee, or attorney of any of the parties, or a relative or employee of that attorney, or be financially interested in the action. Apart from contracting for the preparation of the transcript within a given period of time and at a given price, neither the party nor the party's attorney may exercise control over the preparation of the transcript.

(4) Time for Completion. Preparation of the transcript shall be completed within 40 days after filing of the notice of appeal. If the transcript is not being prepared at public expense and the transcriber is unable to complete the transcript within this time, the appellant shall move the appellate court for an extension of time. The motion shall comply with Appellate Rule 503, shall also be served on the clerk of the trial courts, and shall be considered a routine motion within the meaning of Rule 503(b).

(5) Filing and Distribution. Upon completion of the transcript, the transcriber shall promptly notify the parties that the transcript has been completed and shall file with the clerk of the appellate courts (i) the original and one copy of the transcript; and (ii) an electronic version of the transcript in the form and format prescribed by administrative bulletin.

(6) Costs. If the transcript is not being prepared at public expense, the cost of preparing the original transcript, the copy filed with the court and the computer diskette shall be paid by the appellant. This cost may be taxed as a cost in the case, but if any party causes parts of the electronic record to be transcribed unnecessarily, the court may impose the cost of transcribing such parts on that party.

(7) Form of Transcript. Transcripts shall be in the form and format prescribed by administrative bulletin.

(8) Statement in Lieu of Transcript. If there is no electronic recording from which a transcript can be prepared, the appellant may prepare a statement of the evidence of proceedings from the best available means, including the appellants recollection, for use instead of a stenographic or electronically recorded transcript. This statement shall be served on the appellee, who may serve objections or proposed amendments, and shall be submitted to the court from which the appeal is being taken for settlement and approval. As settled and approved, the statement shall be filed with the clerk of that court and transmitted to the appellate court in lieu of a transcript.

(c) Excerpts of Record.

(1) Duty to Prepare.

(A) Each party shall file and serve an excerpt of record with the party's brief.

(B) In cases involving multiple appellants or appellees, each side shall prepare a single excerpt of record. In a case involving multiple appellants who are filing separate briefs, the appellant who filed the first notice of appeal shall prepare and file the excerpt for the appellants, unless the appellants otherwise agree. In a case involving multiple appellees who are filing separate briefs, the appellees shall decide among themselves which appellee shall prepare and file the excerpt for the appellees. Ten days prior to the date on which a side's briefs are due, the parties who are not responsible for preparation of the excerpt shall transmit to the responsible party a list of documents to be included in the excerpt. The responsible party shall include in the excerpt all documents which are specified by the other parties, provided such documents are in the record. A party who fails to transmit a list of documents to the responsible party by the 10 day deadline waives the right to designate documents for inclusion in the excerpt. The responsible party shall mail a copy of the excerpt to each of the other parties on that side six days before the date the briefs are due, or deliver a copy of the excerpt three days before the date the briefs are due, so that the other parties may include the appropriate citations in their briefs. The cost of copying and mailing the excerpt shall be borne equally by all parties on the side.

(C) A cross-appellant or cross-appellee who elects to file a single brief shall file a single excerpt with that brief. A cross-appellant who makes this election shall include in the excerpt those documents that are properly included in an appellee's excerpt under Rule 210(c)(2). A cross-appellant who elects to file separate briefs shall file and serve notice of this election within 10 days after service of the notice of the due date for appellant's brief. If a cross-appellant makes this election, the cross-appellant and the appellant shall be treated as co-appellants filing separate briefs and shall prepare and submit a combined excerpt as required by Rule 210(c)(1)(B). The cross-appellee and the appellee shall be treated as co-appellees filing separate briefs for purposes of that rule.

(2) Contents.

(A) Appellant's Excerpt. The appellant's excerpt of record must contain the following parts of the record:

(i) all charging documents, or the petition or complaint, counterclaim, crossclaim, and answer setting out the issues to be tried;

(ii) the judgment or interlocutory order from which the appeal is taken;

(iii) other orders or rulings sought to be reviewed;

(iv) supporting opinions, findings of fact, conclusions of law, or other statements showing the reasoning of the trial court and, if appellant claims that the written findings of fact or conclusions of law are insufficient or erroneous, a copy of the pages of the transcript at which any relevant oral findings of fact and conclusions of law are recorded;

(v) if the appeal is from the grant or denial of a motion, relevant portions of briefs, memoranda, and documents filed in support of and in opposition to the motion;

(vi) if the appellant is challenging the admission or exclusion of evidence, the giving or failure to give a jury instruction, or another oral ruling or order, a copy of the pages of the transcript at which the evidence, offer of proof, ruling, or order and relevant discussion by the court, and any necessary objection are recorded;

(vii) if the appeal is from a final decision in a child-in-need-of-aid proceeding under AS 47.10.080(c) or a case involving the termination of parental rights under AS 25.23.180, the predisposition report prepared in the case; and

(viii) specific portions of other documents in the record, including documentary exhibits, that are referred to in appellant's brief and essential to the resolution of an issue on appeal.

(B) Appellee's Excerpt. The appellee's excerpt of record must contain those parts of the record required under (c)(2)(A) and relied on by appellee that were not included in the appellant's excerpt.

(C) Portions of the Transcript. Parties may also include in the excerpt selected pages of the transcript that are critical to the appeal.

(D) Items Not to Be Included in the Excerpts. Pages of the transcript and briefs and memoranda filed in the trial court may only be included in the excerpts if required under (c)(2)(A) or permitted under (c)(2)(C).

The fact that parts of the record are not included in the excerpts does not prevent the parties or the appellate court from relying on those parts.

(3) Supplemental Excerpts. Appellant may file and serve a supplemental excerpt of record with appellant's reply brief or within the time specified for filing a reply brief. No other supplemental excerpt may be filed except by leave of the appellate court granted on motion, or at the request of the appellate court. A supplemental excerpt may not include parts of the record that appear in another excerpt filed in the appeal.

(4) Form, Filing and Service. Each party's excerpt of record must be arranged in chronological order, must be bound separately from the party's brief, and must contain a table of contents at the beginning of the first volume. The excerpt and the table of contents must be in the form specified in the Clerk's Instructions for Preparation of Excerpts published in these rules. One copy of the excerpt must be filed and served with the party's original brief. Six copies of the excerpt must be filed with the bound copies of the brief, and one copy must be served on counsel for each party separately represented. The appellate court may specify the filing or service of a different number of copies than required by this rule.

(5) Excerpts to be Abbreviated. The parties shall include in the excerpts only those parts of the record which are essential to a determination of the questions presented on appeal. For any infraction of this rule, the appellate court may impose sanctions and withhold or impose costs as the circumstances of the case and discouragement of like conduct in the future may require.

(6) Costs. Subject to (c)(5), the prevailing party shall be entitled to recover the cost of copying its excerpt of record under Appellate Rule 508(d).

(d) RESERVED.

(e) Preparation of the Trial Court File.

(1) Page Numbering. Upon receiving the notice of appeal, the regional appeals clerk shall number the pages of the record, assembled in accordance with subsection (a) of this rule, in a single consecutive sequence throughout all volumes. Page numbering must be completed within 40 days after filing of the notice of appeal. In an appeal from the Alaska Workers' Compensation Appeals Commission, the commission's record should be numbered beginning with the number immediately following the number of the last page in the record prepared by the Workers' Compensation Board.

(2) Confidential Materials. Papers filed under seal in the trial court and exhibits submitted or introduced at closed hearings in the trial court shall be maintained under seal while they constitute part of a record on appeal, and access to them shall be governed by Rule 512.5(c).

(f) Briefing Schedule. Upon filing of the transcript and completion of the page numbering, the clerk of the trial courts shall notify the clerk of the appellate courts that the case is ready for briefing. Upon receiving this notice, the clerk of the appellate courts shall give notice of the due date for the appellant's brief.

(g) Transmission of the Record.

(1) Transmission to Appellate Court. Upon notification that briefing is complete, the clerk of the trial courts shall transmit the record, excluding physical exhibits, to the clerk of the appellate courts. Physical exhibits shall be retained by the trial court unless specifically requested by the appellate court. As used in this paragraph, "physical exhibits" includes exhibits other than documents or photographs, and also includes documents or photographs of unusually large size or unusual bulk or weight.

(2) Transfer to Other Court Locations. The clerk of the appellate courts may direct that the record be temporarily transferred to another court location within the state for the accommodation of counsel in the preparation of briefs.

(h) Several Appeals. When more than one appeal is taken to the appellate court from the same judgment, there shall be a single record on appeal. In preparing the record, deadlines which run from filing of the notice of appeal shall run from filing of the last notice of appeal.

(i) Power of Court to Correct, Modify, or Supplement. It is not necessary for the record on appeal to be approved by the trial court or a judge thereof except as provided in paragraph (b)(8) and in Rule 211, but if any difference arises whether the record truly discloses what occurred in the trial court, the difference shall be submitted to and settled by that court and the record made to conform to that courts decision. If anything material to either party is omitted from the record on appeal by error or accident by court personnel, or is misstated therein, the parties by stipulation, the trial court, or the appellate court, on a proper suggestion or of its own initiative, may direct that the omission or misstatement shall be corrected. All other questions as to the content and form of the record shall be presented to the appellate court. Materials (including filings, exhibits, electronic recordings, or transcripts) filed with the trial court after the filing date of the notice of appeal may be added to the record on appeal only upon motion designating by title, description, and filing date the materials sought to be added, and are limited to the following:

(1) materials pertaining to attorneys fees, costs, or prejudgment interest;

(2) amended judgments, and all materials pertaining to those judgments;

(3) oppositions or replies responding to, or orders determining, motions that were filed on or before the filing date of the notice of appeal, and materials pertaining to those documents;

(4) any orders listed in Rule 204(a)(3), together with any motions, oppositions, and replies leading to such orders, and any materials pertaining to those documents;

(5) materials to be added to the record upon entry of an order amending or supplementing the points on appeal; and

(6) materials to be added to the record for other good cause found by the appellate court.

On motion in the appellate court, and for cause, an excerpt of record may also be modified or supplemented to correct omissions by counsel.

Rule 212. Briefs.

(a) Filing and Serving Briefs.

(1) Initial Submission.

(A) Time for Serving and Filing Briefs. The appellant shall serve and file the appellant's brief within 30 days after the court gives notice under Rule 210(f) of the due date for appellant's brief. The appellee shall serve and file the appellee's brief within 30 days after service of the appellant's brief. Within 20 days after service of the appellee's brief, appellant shall serve and file either a reply brief or a notice that no reply brief will be filed. In cases involving multiple appellants or appellees who are filing separate briefs, including parties who are deemed to be co-parties under Rule 210(c)(1)(C), the time for filing these briefs shall be extended by 10 days if the parties are preparing excerpts of record in order to allow compliance with Rule 210(c)(1)(B).

(B) Number of Copies. On or before the date the party's brief is due, the party shall file with the clerk the original plus one copy of the brief, printed or written on only one side of each page, together with proof of service on all parties.

(C) Compliance Check. The court will review the brief for compliance with (b) and (c) of this rule and return the original to the party, with a notice of rejection, conditional acceptance, or acceptance, for correction or for duplication and binding.

(D) Changes Not Permitted. After a brief is returned for correction or binding, the party shall make no changes to the brief other than those required by the binding process or required by the court in any notice of rejection or conditional acceptance. The party may also correct spelling and typographical errors and correct and update citations for cases already cited in the originally submitted brief.

(2) Bound Copies of Briefs.

(A) Time for Service; Number of Copies. Within ten days after the clerk returns the brief, the party shall serve two bound copies on each party and shall file with the clerk eight bound copies in an appeal before the supreme court or seven bound copies in an appeal before the court of appeals. The clerk may specify a different number of copies or a different time period than required by this rule.

(B) Form of Bound Copies. Bound copies must be printed or written on both sides of the paper and securely bound along the left margin in a manner that does not obscure the text, and that permits the brief to lie reasonably flat when open. Unless otherwise permitted by the clerk, the copies must be bound using comb or spiral binding, but not staples or metal fasteners. The copies must have a suitable cover consisting of heavy paper in the color indicated:

- brief of appellant - ivory or light tan;
- brief of appellee - blue;
- reply brief - green; and
- brief of intervenor or amicus curiae - red.

(b) Form. The form of a brief is governed by Rule 513.5(b)(1)-(5) and (c) and by this rule. The left and right margins of a brief must each be one inch. The front cover of a brief must contain: (1) the name of the court and the number of the case; (2) the title of the case; (3) the nature of the proceeding (e.g., appeal, petition for review); (4) the name of the court or agency below, the name of the individual who rendered the decision below, and the case number below; (5) the title of the document (e.g., brief of appellant); and (6) the names, addresses, telephone numbers, and bar numbers of counsel for the party concerned and the name of the law firm or organization with whom counsel is affiliated. In criminal cases, the front cover must also include a certificate indicating whether the brief contains information that is confidential under AS 12.61.100 through 12.61.150. The administrative director shall specify the form and content of the certificate.

(c) Substantive Requirements.

(1) Brief of Appellant. The brief of the appellant shall contain the following items under appropriate headings and in the order here indicated:

(A) A table of contents, including the titles and subtitles of all arguments, with page references.

(B) A table of cases alphabetically arranged, statutes, and other authorities cited, with references to the pages of the brief where they are cited.

(C) The constitutional provisions, statutes, court rules, ordinances, and regulations principally relied upon, set out verbatim or their pertinent provisions appropriately summarized.

(D) A jurisdictional statement of the date on which judgment was entered and of the legal authority of the appellate court to consider the appeal.

(E) A list of all parties to the case, without using "et al.," or any similar indication, unless the caption of the case on the cover of the brief contains the names of all parties. This list may be contained in a footnote.

(F) A statement of the issues presented for review. In cases of cross-appeal, the cross-appellant may present a statement of the issues presented for review which would require determination if the case is to be reversed and remanded for further proceedings in the trial court. In the event that the decision is affirmed on the appeal, such issues on the cross-appeal may be deemed waived by the appellate court.

(G) A statement of the case, which shall provide a brief description of the case and a concise statement of the course of proceedings in, and the decision of, the trial court. Appellant shall state the facts relevant to each issue, with references to the record as required by paragraph (c)(8), in this section or in the appropriate argument sections.

(H) A discussion of the applicable standard of review. (If the brief concerns several issues with different standards of review, the discussion of each issue should be preceded by a discussion of the standard of review applicable to that issue).

(I) An argument section, which shall contain the contentions of the appellant with respect to the issues presented, and the reasons therefor, with citations to the authorities, statutes, and parts of the record relied on. The section may be preceded by a summary. Each major contention shall be preceded by a heading indicating the subject matter. References to the record shall conform to the requirements of paragraph (c)(8).

(J) A short conclusion stating the precise relief sought.

(K) If the appeal concerns a property division in a divorce case, an appendix consisting of a table listing all assets and liabilities of the parties as reflected in the record, including the trial court's findings as to the nature (marital or individual), value, and disposition of each asset or liability.

(2) Brief of Appellee. The brief of the appellee shall conform to the requirements of subdivisions (1)(A) through (1)(J) except that a statement of jurisdiction, of the issues, or of the case need not be made unless the appellee is dissatisfied with the statement of the appellant, and a list of all parties need not be included.

(3) Reply Brief. The appellant may file a brief in reply to the brief of the appellee. The reply brief shall conform to the requirements of subdivisions (1)(A), (1)(B), (1)(C), (1)(I), and (1)(J). This brief may raise no contentions not previously raised in either the appellant's or appellee's briefs. If the appellee has cross-appealed and has not filed a single brief under (c)(6) of this rule, the appellee may file a brief in reply to the response of the appellant to the issues presented by the cross-appeal. No further briefs may be filed except with leave of the court.

(4) Length. Exclusive of appendices, the appellant's and appellee's briefs may not exceed 50 numbered pages each. Numbered pages for purposes of this paragraph begin with the jurisdictional statement required by (c)(1)(D) of this rule. The appellant's reply brief may not exceed 20 pages. A motion for leave to file a brief longer than permitted by this paragraph must be accompanied by a copy of the over-length brief proposed to be filed.

(5) Brief in Cases of Multiple Parties. In cases involving more than one appellant or appellee, including cases consolidated for purposes of the appeal, any number of either may join in a single brief, and any appellant or appellee may adopt by reference any part of the brief of another.

(6) Briefs in Cases Involving Cross-Appeals.

(A) Cross-Appellant. An appellee who is also a cross-appellant may elect to file a single brief that both discusses the appellee's claims of error and answers the original appellant. Such a single brief shall be filed on the date the appellee's brief is due. It shall be divided into two sections: the first section shall contain the issues and arguments involved in the cross-appeal and shall be prepared in accordance with (c)(1) of this rule; the second section shall contain the answer to the brief of the appellant and shall be prepared in accordance with (c)(2) of this rule. The single brief may not exceed 50 numbered pages. If the cross-appellant elects to file a single brief, the right to file a reply brief to the answer to the cross-appeal is waived. If the cross-appellant does not elect to file a single brief, the schedule and form for filing briefs in the cross-appeal shall be in accordance with the procedures for an original appeal.

(B) Cross-Appellee. If the appellee/ cross-appellant elects to file a single brief under [a], the appellant/cross-appellee may file a single brief containing its reply on the appeal and its response to the cross-appeal This combined brief may not exceed 50 numbered pages. The portions of the combined brief that comprise the reply may not exceed 20 numbered pages. The combined brief must be filed within 30 days of the appellee/cross-appellant's single brief.

(7) References in Briefs and in Oral Arguments to Parties. In briefs and oral arguments, counsel are expected to minimize references to parties by such designations as "appellant" and "appellee." It promotes clarity to use the designations used in the trial court or in the agency proceedings, or the actual names of parties, or descriptive terms such as"the employee," the "injured person," "the taxpayer," and so forth.

(8) References in Briefs to the Record.

(A) References in Cases in Which Excerpts are Prepared. References in the briefs to parts of the record reproduced in an excerpt shall be to the pages of the excerpt at which those parts appear. The form for references to pages of the excerpt is [Exc. _____]. Briefs may reference parts of the record not reproduced in an excerpt. The form for references to pages of the transcript is [Tr. ___] and to pages of the trial court file is [R.___]. The form for references to untranscribed portions of the electronic record is [CD (#), at Time 00:00:00 or Tape (#), at Log 00:00:00].

(B) References to be Included. If reference is made to evidence of which the admissibility is in controversy, reference shall be made to the pages of the transcript at which the evidence was identified, offered, and received or rejected. Appellant's brief shall indicate the pages of the record where each point on appeal was raised in the trial court. If the point on appeal was not raised in the trial court, the brief shall explain why the point is raised for the first time on appeal. Failure to comply with the requirements of this paragraph may result in return of the brief as provided in paragraph 11 of this subdivision.

(9) Brief of an Amicus Curiae. A brief of an amicus curiae may be filed only if accompanied by written consent of all the parties, or by leave of the appellate court granted on motion, or at the request of the appellate court. The brief may be conditionally filed with the motion for leave. A motion for leave shall identify the interest of the applicant and shall state the reasons why a brief of an amicus curiae is desirable. Unless all parties otherwise consent, any amicus curiae shall file its brief within the time allowed to the party whose position as to affirmance or reversal the amicus brief will support, unless the court for cause shown shall grant leave for later filing, in which event it shall specify within what period an opposing party may answer. The brief shall be in the form prescribed by this rule and shall be duplicated and served pursuant to the requirements of Rule 212(a)(2). A motion of an amicus curiae to participate in the oral argument will be granted only for extraordinary reasons.

(10) Failure to File Brief. When the appellant's opening brief is not filed as required, Rule 511.5 shall apply. When the appellee's brief is not filed as required, appellee will not be heard at oral argument except on consent of the appellant, or by request of the court.

(11) Defective Briefs. When a brief fails to comply with the requirements of these rules, the appellate court, on application of any party or on its own motion, and with or without notice as it may determine appropriate, may:

(A) Order the brief to be returned to counsel for correction by interlineation, cancellation, revisions or replacement in whole or in part, and to be refiled with the clerk within a time specified in the order; or

(B) Order the brief stricken from the files, with leave to file a new brief within a specified time; or

(C) Disregard defects and consider the brief as if it were properly prepared.

The authority to return briefs under this section may be exercised by the clerk of court pursuant to Rule 102 (f).

(12) Citation of Supplemental Authorities. When pertinent authorities come to the attention of a party after the party's brief has been filed, or after oral argument but before decision, the party may promptly advise the clerk of the court, by letter, with a copy to adversary counsel, setting forth the citations.

There shall be a reference either to the page of the brief or to a point argued orally to which the citations pertain, but the letter shall contain no argument or explanations. Any response shall be made promptly and shall be similarly limited.

1 of 22 DOCUMENTS

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.010 (2008)

§ 10.95.010. Court rules

No rule promulgated by the supreme court of Washington pursuant to RCW 2.04.190 and 2.04.200, now or in the future, shall be construed to supersede or alter any of the provisions of this chapter.

HISTORY: 1981 c 138 § 1.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

CONSTRUCTION WITH OTHER LAW.

Since RCW 10.95.040 and CR 5 both deal with the service of a notice after an attorney has appeared in a case, CR 5 is instructive as to the meaning of service in RCW 10.95.040. This section, which provides that the death penalty statute may not be varied by court rule, is not violated by this interpretation as the court rule does not vary the requirements of chapter 10.95 RCW but gives some guidance as to the meaning of the statute. State v. Clark, 129 Wn.2d 805, 920 P.2d 187 (1996).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

WASHINGTON LAW REVIEW.

Capital Punishment, Proportionality Review, and Claims of Fairness (With Lessons from Washington State)., 79 Wash. L. Rev. 775 (2004).

NOTES APPLICABLE TO ENTIRE TITLE

CROSS REFERENCES.

Criminal justice training commission -- Education and training boards: Chapter 43.101 RCW.
Criminal rules for superior court: Rules of court: Superior Court Criminal Rules (CrR).
Justice without unnecessary delay: State Constitution Art. 1 § 10.
Mental illness -- Financial responsibility: Chapter 71.02 RCW.
Oaths and mode of administering: State Constitution Art. 1 § 6.
Traffic violations: Chapters 46.63, 46.64 RCW.
Victims of crimes, compensation: Chapter 7.68 RCW.

TEXTBOOKS AND TREATISES.
The Law of Evidence in Washington; Robert H. Aronson (Michie).
Washington Criminal Practice in Courts of Limited Jurisdiction; Linda S. Portnoy, Eileen P. Farley (Michie).

NOTES APPLICABLE TO ENTIRE CHAPTER

CROSS REFERENCES.
Homicide: Chapter 9A.32 RCW.

CONSTITUTIONALITY.
Defendant's argument that this chapter creates a mandatory death penalty formula held without merit; the Supreme Court of the United States has repeatedly held that the requirement of individualized sentencing in capital cases is satisfied by allowing the jury to consider all relevant mitigating evidence. Campbell v. Wood, 18 F.3d 662 (9th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1119, 114 S. Ct. 2125, 128 L. Ed. 2d 682 (1994).

CONSTRUCTION.
The Sentencing Reform Act (SRA, chapter 9.94A RCW) and this chapter serve two separate functions and are consistent. The SRA does not purport to govern or guide penalty phase juries in their sentencing decisions. This function is served by this chapter, which guides and channels the jury's discretion in reaching an individualized sentencing decision for each defendant convicted of a capital offense. State v. Brett, 126 Wn.2d 136, 892 P.2d 29 (1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1121, 116 S. Ct. 931, 133 L. Ed. 2d 858 (1996).

PROPORTIONALITY.
The legislative guidelines contained in this chapter ensure the proportionality in the first instance by focusing the jury on the crime and the defendant. On review, RCW 10.95.130 requires the court to determine whether the death sentence is "disproportionate" based on the broad range of "similar cases," as defined by the legislature. State v. Brett, 126 Wn.2d 136, 892 P.2d 29 (1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1121, 116 S. Ct. 931, 133 L. Ed. 2d 858 (1996).

GONZAGA LAW REVIEW.
Campbell v. Wood: the death penalty in Washington state: "hanging" on to a method of execution. 30 Gonz. L. Rev. 163.

SEATTLE UNIV. LAW REVIEW.
Mitigation evidence and capital cases in Washington: Proposals for change. 26 Seattle U.L. Rev. 241 (2002).

TEXTBOOKS AND TREATISES.
The Law of Evidence in Washington; Robert H. Aronson (Michie).
Washington Criminal Practice in Courts of Limited Jurisdiction; Linda S. Portnoy, Eileen P. Farley (Michie).

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.020 (2008)

§ 10.95.020. Definition

A person is guilty of aggravated first degree murder, a class A felony, if he or she commits first degree murder as defined by RCW 9A.32.030(1)(a), as now or hereafter amended, and one or more of the following aggravating circumstances exist:

(1) The victim was a law enforcement officer, corrections officer, or firefighter who was performing his or her official duties at the time of the act resulting in death and the victim was known or reasonably should have been known by the person to be such at the time of the killing;

(2) At the time of the act resulting in the death, the person was serving a term of imprisonment, had escaped, or was on authorized or unauthorized leave in or from a state facility or program for the incarceration or treatment of persons adjudicated guilty of crimes;

(3) At the time of the act resulting in death, the person was in custody in a county or county-city jail as a consequence of having been adjudicated guilty of a felony;

(4) The person committed the murder pursuant to an agreement that he or she would receive money or any other thing of value for committing the murder;

(5) The person solicited another person to commit the murder and had paid or had agreed to pay money or any other thing of value for committing the murder;

(6) The person committed the murder to obtain or maintain his or her membership or to advance his or her position in the hierarchy of an organization, association, or identifiable group;

(7) The murder was committed during the course of or as a result of a shooting where the discharge of the firearm, as defined in RCW 9.41.010, is either from a motor vehicle or from the immediate area of a motor vehicle that was used to transport the shooter or the firearm, or both, to the scene of the discharge;

(8) The victim was:

(a) A judge; juror or former juror; prospective, current, or former witness in an adjudicative proceeding; prosecuting attorney; deputy prosecuting attorney; defense attorney; a member of the indeterminate sentence review board; or a probation or parole officer; and

(b) The murder was related to the exercise of official duties performed or to be performed by the victim;

(9) The person committed the murder to conceal the commission of a crime or to protect or conceal the identity of any person committing a crime, including, but specifically not limited to, any attempt to avoid prosecution as a persistent offender as defined in RCW 9.94A.030;

(10) There was more than one victim and the murders were part of a common scheme or plan or the result of a single act of the person;

(11) The murder was committed in the course of, in furtherance of, or in immediate flight from one of the following crimes:

(a) Robbery in the first or second degree;

(b) Rape in the first or second degree;

(c) Burglary in the first or second degree or residential burglary;

(d) Kidnapping in the first degree; or

(e) Arson in the first degree;

(12) The victim was regularly employed or self-employed as a newsreporter and the murder was committed to obstruct or hinder the investigative, research, or reporting activities of the victim;

(13) At the time the person committed the murder, there existed a court order, issued in this or any other state, which prohibited the person from either contacting the victim, molesting the victim, or disturbing the peace of the victim, and the person had knowledge of the existence of that order;

(14) At the time the person committed the murder, the person and the victim were "family or household members" as that term is defined in *RCW 10.99.020(1), and the person had previously engaged in a pattern or practice of three or more of the following crimes committed upon the victim within a five-year period, regardless of whether a conviction resulted:

(a) Harassment as defined in RCW 9A.46.020; or

(b) Any criminal assault.

HISTORY: 2003 c 53 § 96; 1998 c 305 § 1. Prior: 1995 c 129 § 17 (Initiative Measure No. 159); 1994 c 121 § 3; 1981 c 138 § 2.

NOTES:
*REVISER'S NOTE: RCW 10.99.020 was amended by 2004 c 18 § 2, changing subsection (1) to subsection (3).

INTENT -- EFFECTIVE DATE -- 2003 C 53: See notes following RCW 2.48.180.

FINDINGS AND INTENT -- SHORT TITLE -- SEVERABILITY -- CAPTIONS NOT LAW -- 1995 C 129: See notes following RCW 9.94A.510.

EFFECT OF AMENDMENTS.
2003 c 53 § 96, effective July 1, 2004, inserted "a class A felony" in the undesignated introductory paragraph.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS
Constitutionality
--In general
--Class of persons
--Equal protection
--Overbreadth
--Vagueness
Accomplices.
Closing argument
Common scheme
Concealment
Construction
Contracting for murder
Duties of officer
Enhancement of penalty
Error harmless
Evidence insufficient
Evidence sufficient
Guidelines
"In the course of."
Included offenses
Information
Instructions
Intent
Jury

--Death-opposed
--Findings
--Instructions
--Requirements
--Response
--Verdicts
Multiple victims
"Murders."
Presumption
Prior conviction
Punishment
Relation to official duty
Sentencing -
"Single act."

CONSTITUTIONALITY.

-- IN GENERAL.

Death penalty statute was not unconstitutional. State v. Jeffries, 105 Wn.2d 398, 717 P.2d 722, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 922, 107 S. Ct. 328, 93 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1986).

-- CLASS OF PERSONS.

RCW 10.95.020, the aggravated murder statute, genuinely narrows the class of persons subject to the death penalty as constitutionally required. State v. Bushey, 46 Wn. App. 579, 731 P.2d 553, review denied, 108 Wn.2d 1014 (1987).

-- EQUAL PROTECTION.

State's decision to charge defendant with first degree murder with the aggravating circumstance of second degree burglary rather than charging him separately with the less serious felonies of first degree murder and second degree burglary did not violate equal protection. State v. Howland, 66 Wn. App. 586, 832 P.2d 1339 (1992), review denied, 121 Wn.2d 1006, 848 P.2d 1263 (1993).

The elements of solicitation to commit murder are not the same as the elements of premeditated murder committed with the aggravated circumstance of solicitation, and thus defendant was not denied equal protection when charged with the latter crime rather than the former. State v. Kron, 63 Wn. App. 688, 821 P.2d 1248, review denied, 119 Wn.2d 1004, 832 P.2d 487 (1992).

There is no equal protection problem with the aggravated first degree murder statute. Varying punishments for the same crime classification may rest upon rational distinctions between motives and methods. State v. Bushey, 46 Wn. App. 579, 731 P.2d 553, review denied, 108 Wn.2d 1014 (1987).

Fact that prosecutor could have charged defendant with murder in the first degree or felony murder, but instead charged him with aggravated first degree murder, did not violate equal protection. State v. Carey, 42 Wn. App. 840, 714 P.2d 708, review denied, 106 Wn.2d 1003 (1986).

-- OVERBREADTH.

RCW 10.95.020 is not overbroad under the First Amendment because it is content neutral and does not intrude on constitutionally protected rights; section 10.95.020(6) merely requires an enhanced punishment for committing murder if the murder was committed to obtain, maintain, or advance one's position in the hierarchy of an organization, association, or identifiable group. That a political or other viewpoint was expressed through the particular murder or that the murder furthered the exercise of the murderer's association rights does not alter or shield the criminal act: the First Amendment does not protect violence; violence or other types of potentially expressive activities that produce special harms distinct from their communicative impact are entitled to no constitutional protection. State v. Monschke, 133 Wn. App. 313, 135 P.3d 966 (2006).

-- VAGUENESS.

Term "group" in RCW 10.95.020(6) is not too vague to satisfy due process notice requirements because the term is not ambiguous and its plain dictionary meaning includes white supremacy. A person of ordinary intelligence would understand that committing murder to advance one's position as a white supremacist is prohibited by RCW 9A.32.030, 10.95.020(6). State v. Monschke, 133 Wn. App. 313, 135 P.3d 966 (2006).

The "committing a murder to conceal a crime" or the "common scheme or plan" aggravating circumstances of this statute are not unconstitutionally vague. Jeffries v. Blodgett, 771 F. Supp. 1520 (W.D. Wash. 1991), aff'd, 974 F.2d 1179 (9th Cir. 1992), rev'd on other grounds, 988 F.2d 923 (9th Cir. 1993).

ACCOMPLICES..

Major participation by a defendant in the acts giving rise to the homicide is required in order to execute a defendant convicted solely as an accomplice to premeditated first degree murder. Merely satisfying the minimal requirements of RCW 9A.08.020, the accomplice liability statute, is insufficient to impose the death penalty under this section, the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments, and the cruel punishment clause of the Washington State Constitution. State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471, 14 P.3d 713 (2000).

CLOSING ARGUMENT.

Prosecuting attorney did not commit prejudicial misconduct when, in closing argument of penalty phase of murder trial, he referred to the defendant's right to appeal. In re Jeffries, 110 Wn.2d 326, 752 P.2d 1338, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 948, 109 S. Ct. 379, 102 L. Ed. 2d 368 (1988).

COMMON SCHEME.

Although defendant, who murdered two prostitutes, argued that the trial court substantially lowered the State's burden of proof by improperly defining in a jury instruction the aggravating circumstance of RCW 10.95.020(10), commission of the murders as part of a common scheme or plan, the trial court's instruction properly defined the phrase "common scheme or plan"; any rational trier of fact could have found that defendant's murders of the prostitutes were part of a common scheme or plan. State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 168 P.3d 359 (2007).

Defendant claimed that there was insufficient evidence to convict him of conspiracy to commit murder in the first degree. He asserted that there was not enough evidence of an agreement between himself and his co-conspirators, and that his conspiracy conviction was invalid because the substantive offense could not be committed without cooperative action; however, a formal agreement was not required for a conviction, and first-degree murder did not require cooperative action. State v. Anderson, -- Wn. App. --, -- P.3d -- (Aug. 29, 2005).

Where the jury could have reasonably found that defendant was prepared to kill anyone who interfered with his plan to kill a particular victim and himself, the murders of other victims were sufficiently connected to his overall plan to apply the common scheme aggravator. State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 975 P.2d 967 (1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 922, 120 S. Ct. 285, 145 L. Ed. 2d 239 (1999).

Jury's special finding that victims died as the result of a common scheme or plan, an aggravating factor for premeditated murder in the first degree, was reconciled with defendant's acquittal on the second count of first degree murder since aggravated first degree murder requires that the jury find the defendant committed first degree premeditated murder and the existence of an aggravating circumstance. State v. Baruso, 72 Wn. App. 603, 865 P.2d 512 (1993), review denied, 124 Wn.2d 1008, 879 P.2d 292 (1994).

The phrase "common scheme or plan" does not need to be defined in jury instructions. State v. Peerson, 62 Wn. App. 755, 816 P.2d 43 (1991), review denied, 118 Wn.2d 1012, 824 P.2d 491 (1992).

Substantial evidence existed for trier of fact to find that a common scheme or plan existed to kill both victims. State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412, 705 P.2d 1182 (1985), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1020, 106 S. Ct. 1208, 89 L. Ed. 2d 321 (1986).

The phrase "common scheme or plan" are words of common understanding, thus instruction as to the meaning of the phrase was unnecessary. State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412, 705 P.2d 1182 (1985), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1020, 106 S. Ct. 1208, 89 L. Ed. 2d 321 (1986).

Where the state charged defendant with aggravated first degree murder, specifically relying on the aggravating factor of the killing of more than one victim as part of a scheme to promote gambling, failure of the state to charge a criminal conspiracy did not deny defendant notice of the charges against him. State v. Dictado, 102 Wn.2d 277, 687 P.2d 172 (1984).

CONCEALMENT.

Evidence was sufficient for jury to find defendant committed kidnapping and murder to conceal his identity; if robbery had been the only goal there would have been no reason to kidnap and murder victim. State v. Boot, 89 Wn. App. 780, 950 P.2d 964, review denied, 135 Wn.2d 1015, 960 P.2d 939 (1998).

Even though RCW 9.94A.390(2) does not list efforts to conceal a crime as grounds for imposition of an exceptional sentence, in contrast to subsection (9) of this section, the list of factors in 9.94A.390 is not exhaustive; thus, where the crime could have constituted aggravated first degree murder had the victim not survived despite the injuries, the trial court's reliance on defendant's efforts to conceal the crime as a reason to impose an exceptional sentence upward was not an abuse of discretion. State v. Smith, 82 Wn. App. 153, 916 P.2d 960 (1996).

The correct standard in applying the aggravating factor of concealment is to require the jury to follow the statutory language and find that the murder was committed for the purpose of concealing the identity of a person who committed a crime and that the underlying crime was not the murder. State v. Gentry, 125 Wn.2d 570, 888 P.2d 1105, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 843, 116 S. Ct. 131, 133 L. Ed. 2d 79 (1995).

There is no requirement that the prosecution prove that a defendant charged with aggravated first degree murder intended to conceal a particular crime. Jeffries v. Blodgett, 771 F. Supp. 1520 (W.D. Wash. 1991), aff'd, 974 F.2d 1179 (9th Cir. 1992), rev'd on other grounds, 988 F.2d 923 (9th Cir. 1993).

In murder trial, sufficient circumstantial evidence existed of first-degree kidnapping and first or second degree robbery to support a finding beyond a reasonable doubt of the aggravating circumstance that the murder was committed to conceal a crime or the identity of a person committing a crime. State v. Longworth, 52 Wn. App. 453, 761 P.2d 67 (1988), review denied, 112 Wn.2d 1006 (1989).

In aggravated first-degree murder trial, trial court did not err in failing to specify in the jury instructions or in special interrogatories to the jury the crime that the murder allegedly was committed to conceal. State v. Longworth, 52 Wn. App. 453, 761 P.2d 67 (1988), review denied, 112 Wn.2d 1006 (1989).

Trial court was not required to instruct jury as to what crime the defendant was attempting to conceal under the first aggravating circumstance of this statute or what the common scheme or plan was under the second aggravating circumstance. State v. Jeffries, 105 Wn.2d 398, 717 P.2d 722, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 922, 107 S. Ct. 328, 93 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1986).

CONSTRUCTION.

This section does not amend or revise RCW 9A.32.030(1)(a). In re Lord, 123 Wn.2d 296, 868 P.2d 835, modified on other grounds, 123 Wn.2d 737, 870 P.2d 964 (1994).

White supremacy falls within the meaning of RCW 10.95.020(6) because under the statute's plain language, white supremacy is an "identifiable group" with a "hierarchy." State v. Monschke, 133 Wn. App. 313, 135 P.3d 966 (2006).

CONTRACTING FOR MURDER.

Where murder defendant's alleged aggravating act was contracting for murder with his codefendant, the codefendant's subsequent acquittal of the same aggravating act did not require dismissal of defendant's aggravated murder charge. State v. Harris, 106 Wn.2d 784, 725 P.2d 975 (1986), cert. denied, 480 U.S. 940, 107 S. Ct. 1592, 94 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1987).

State, by charging defendant with both aggravated first degree murder and first degree felony murder, and by instructing on both offenses, did not deny defendant a fair trial and violate double jeopardy principles; the two offenses had different statutory elements and were not different means for committing the same offense or greater or lesser offenses, such that the state did not have to charge the two offenses as alternatives. State v. Meas, 118 Wn. App. 297, 75 P.3d 998 (2003), review denied, 151 Wn.2d 1020, 91 P.3d 95 (2004).

DUTIES OF OFFICER.

Whether officer may have made an incorrect judgment regarding one or more of a suspect's constitutional rights in no way determines whether that officer was killed while performing his official duties. State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51, 804 P.2d 577 (1991).

In prosecution for the aggravated first degree murder of a policeman, failure of trial court to instruct the jury that to convict defendant it must find that defendant knew the victim was performing his official duties at the time of the murder was not error. State v. Hughes, 106 Wn.2d 176, 721 P.2d 902 (1986).

ENHANCEMENT OF PENALTY.

The statutory aggravating circumstances which, when present, raise premeditated first degree murder to aggravated first degree murder punishable by death or mandatory life imprisonment are "aggravation of penalty" factors which enhance the penalty for the offense, and are not elements of a crime as such; accordingly, it is unnecessary that the aggravating circumstances alleged to exist be set forth as elements of the offense in the "to convict" instruction on the underlying murder charge. State v. Kincaid, 103 Wn.2d 304, 692 P.2d 823 (1985).

ERROR HARMLESS.

There is no such crime as conspiracy to commit aggravated murder, but defendant's conviction on that charge was tantamount to conviction of conspiracy to commit first degree murder with aggravating circumstances, thus any error was harmless. State v. Kron, 63 Wn. App. 688, 821 P.2d 1248, review denied, 119 Wn.2d 1004, 832 P.2d 487 (1992).

EVIDENCE INSUFFICIENT.

In a capital murder case, the evidence was insufficient to establish to establish the aggravating factor that defendant committed the murders of two prostitutes to conceal the crime of patronizing a prostitute; if defendant had killed every prostitute he patronized, one could rationally infer that defendant intended to eliminate any evidence that he had committed the misdemeanor of patronizing prostitutes, but as the defense showed, defendant patronized other prostitutes without killing them. State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 168 P.3d 359 (2007).

EVIDENCE SUFFICIENT.

In a capital murder case, the evidence was sufficient to establish that defendant murdered two prostitutes in furtherance of robbery; the jury could have reasonably believed that defendant negotiated the price of a sexual act, paid up front, murdered the women, and then took their money, disturbing or taking articles of clothing in which the women were likely to have concealed their money. State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 168 P.3d 359 (2007).

Although petitioner challenged the sufficiency of the evidence that he premeditated the killing of his mother or committed it in the course or furtherance of a robbery, there was considerable circumstantial evidence petitioner used force, at least in part, to obtain his mother's cashbox; petitioner had financial difficulties shortly before the murder, and the mother's husband testified that on the day of the murder the cashbox held approximately $ 1,500. State v. Allen, 159 Wn.2d 1, 147 P.3d 581 (2006).

Since the evidence supported a rational inference that defendant was voluntarily intoxicated, that defendant intentionally shot and killed a deputy, knowing the nature and quality of that act, and that defendant knew the shooting was wrong, a rational trier of fact could have found that defendant failed to prove, by a preponderance of the evidence, that he was insane as a defense to the charge of first degree aggravated murder. State v. Matthews, 132 Wn. App. 936, 135 P.3d 495 (2006).

Evidence was sufficient such that a rational trier of fact could find that defendant murdered the victim to advance his position as a white supremacist because (1) defendant was the member of a white supremacist subgroup; (2) defendant wanted to advance his position in the subgroup and open his own local chapter; (3) acts of violence elevated a member's status in many white supremacist subgroups; (4) defendant sought to elevate a co-defendant's status by helping her obtain "red shoelaces," which defendant believed were earned by violent acts against "inferior" people; (5) defendant had previously advanced his own position in the subgroup through violent acts and wore red shoelaces and white suspenders as an indication of his advancement; (6) defendant and his co-defendants were underneath an interstate looking to "do" someone inferior; (7) the victim was viewed as inferior by defendant and his co-defendants; (8) the victim's murder elevated a co-defendant's status; and (9) defendant wondered aloud whether the victim's murder would elevate his status with God. State v. Monschke, 133 Wn. App. 313, 135 P.3d 966 (2006).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's conviction for first-degree aggravated murder in violation of RCW 10.95.020 based on the trial court's finding that defendant committed first-degree murder in the course of a burglary and in violation of a no-contact order as provided in RCW 10.95.020(11)(c) and RCW 10.95.020(13). Based on the evidence, a rational trier of fact could have found beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant unlawfully entered the victim's apartment through a broken window or through an unlocked front door, and at the very least, a rational trier of fact could have found that even if the victim permitted defendant to enter the apartment, defendant remained unlawfully because a no-contact order had previously barred him from entering those premises. State v. Mason, 127 Wn. App. 554, 110 P.3d 245 (2005).

In trial of defendant for aggravated first-degree murder in which he was sentenced to death, evidence supported finding of aggravated circumstances, jury instructions concerning unanimity were proper, and jury instructions concerning aggravating and mitigating circumstances were proper. Jeffries v. Blodgett, 988 F.2d 923 (9th Cir. 1993), modified on other grounds, 5 F.3d 1180 (9th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1191, 114 S. Ct. 1294, 127 L. Ed. 2d 647 (1994).

Evidence was sufficient to establish premeditation: killing was committed with a knife and multiple wounds were inflicted, victim was struck in the face with something other than the knife, defensive wounds on victim indicated a prolonged struggle, and defendant's act of obtaining the knife from victim's kitchen could reasonably indicate deliberation. State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294, 831 P.2d 1060 (1992).

There was substantial evidence from which the jury could have found that defendants knew or reasonably should have known that the homicide victim was a law enforcement officer engaged in official duties at the time of the homicide. State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51, 804 P.2d 577 (1991).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain jury's finding of aggravating circumstances in two counts of aggravated first degree murder. State v. Jeffries, 105 Wn.2d 398, 717 P.2d 722, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 922, 107 S. Ct. 328, 93 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1986).

GUIDELINES.

A county prosecutor is not required to publish guidelines regarding when aggravated murder will be charged. State v. Martin, 41 Wn. App. 133, 703 P.2d 309, review denied, 104 Wn.2d 1016 (1985).

'IN THE COURSE OF.".

Evidence did not support a charge that defendant killed his wife in the course of the arson, and therefore defendant's sentence of life in prison under RCW 10.95.020(11)(e) was reversed, because the murder was complete before the arson and the murder did not further the arson; rather defendant used the arson to cover up the murder. State v. Hacheney, 160 Wn.2d 503, 158 P.3d 1152 (2007).

Where defendant was charged with first degree aggravated murder, proof that a burglary was committed in the course of the murder was only an element of the charge, and defendant's statement that he was not invited to enter the trailer could be used to prove the existence of this aggravator. State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 975 P.2d 967 (1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 922, 120 S. Ct. 285, 145 L. Ed. 2d 239 (1999).

Evidence held sufficient to find that the murder committed by the defendant was committed in furtherance of, in the course of, or in immediate flight from rape, robbery, and kidnapping as prescribed in (11). State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 940 P.2d 546 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1007, 118 S. Ct. 1192, 140 L. Ed. 2d 322 (1998).

INCLUDED OFFENSES.

Counsel was not ineffective for failing to dismiss the aggravating factor of rape under RCW 10.95.020(11)(b) because the process to dismiss prosecution is not applicable to aggravating factors alleged in murder prosecutions. In re Pers. Restraint of Woods, 154 Wn.2d 400, 114 P.3d 607 (2005).

First degree felony murder is not a lesser included offense of aggravated first degree murder. State v. Pirtle, 127 Wn.2d 628, 904 P.2d 245 (1995), cert. denied, 518 U.S. 1026, 116 S. Ct. 2568, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1084 (1996).

The definition of first degree felony murder includes attempted crimes (RCW 9A.32.030(1)(c)), whereas the aggravating factor defined in subsection (9) does not. In re Lord, 123 Wn.2d 296, 868 P.2d 835, modified on other grounds, 123 Wn.2d 737, 870 P.2d 964 (1994).

Where defendant was charged in the alternative with felony murder and aggravated first degree murder, and admitted being an accomplice to the first degree burglary upon which the felony murder charge was predicated, trial court did not err in refusing to grant instructions on the lesser included offenses of second degree murder and first and second degree manslaughter. State v. Bowerman, 115 Wn.2d 794, 802 P.2d 116 (1990), review denied, State v. Hutcheson, 118 Wn.2d 1020, 827 P.2d 1012 (1992).

INFORMATION.

An information charging first-degree murder that clearly stated "the defendant committed the murder to conceal ... the identity of the person committing a crime" set forth the required elements of the crime. State v. Elmore, 139 Wn.2d 250, 985 P.2d 289 (1999), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 837, 121 S. Ct. 98, 148 L. Ed. 2d 57 (2000).

Information alleging murder was committed in the "course of or furtherance of robbery," rather than the crime of robbery, was sufficient; the information cited to subsection (9)(a), which lists the crime of robbery in the first or second degree as an aggravating factor. State v. Brett, 126 Wn.2d 136, 892 P.2d 29 (1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1121, 116 S. Ct. 931, 133 L. Ed. 2d 858 (1996).

Aggravated first degree murder and first degree felony murder are not different means of committing the same offense, nor are they greater and lesser offenses of each other; thus, for the jury to be instructed on both offenses, the state must include both charges in the information. In re Lord, 123 Wn.2d 296, 868 P.2d 835, modified on other grounds, 123 Wn.2d 737, 870 P.2d 964 (1994).

INSTRUCTIONS.

General unanimity instruction in aggravated first degree murder trial was sufficient to protect defendant's right to a unanimous verdict. Jeffries v. Blodgett, 771 F. Supp. 1520 (W.D. Wash. 1991), aff'd, 974 F.2d 1179 (9th Cir. 1992), rev'd on other grounds, 988 F.2d 923 (9th Cir. 1993).

INTENT.

Conviction of defendant for first degree murder with the aggravated circumstance of second degree burglary was proper regardless of whether defendant had a separate intent to commit the burglary. State v. Howland, 66 Wn. App. 586, 832 P.2d 1339 (1992), review denied, 121 Wn.2d 1006, 848 P.2d 1263 (1993).

It is not necessary to show that an accomplice had the intent that the victim would be killed in order to convict the accomplice of aggravated murder. State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412, 705 P.2d 1182 (1985), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1020, 106 S. Ct. 1208, 89 L. Ed. 2d 321 (1986).

JURY.

-- DEATH-OPPOSED.

In capital cases, exclusion of all jurors opposed to capital punishment is permitted under the United States Constitution and the Washington Constitution. State v. Kron, 63 Wn. App. 688, 821 P.2d 1248, review denied, 119 Wn.2d 1004, 832 P.2d 487 (1992).

Exclusion of "death-opposed" juror from the guilt phase of trial for aggravated first degree murder did not deny defendant due process of law. State v. Jeffries, 105 Wn.2d 398, 717 P.2d 722, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 922, 107 S. Ct. 328, 93 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1986).

-- FINDINGS.

Jury must find the defendant guilty of first degree murder before finding the defendant guilty of aggravated first degree murder. Jeffries v. Wood, 114 F.3d 1484 (9th Cir. 1997).

-- INSTRUCTIONS.

In aggravated first degree murder trial, jury instruction regarding aggravating circumstances did not allow conviction for murder based solely upon statutory aggravating factors or violate the defendants' rights by creating a mandatory presumption. State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51, 804 P.2d 577 (1991).

In aggravated first degree murder trial, trial court's justifiable homicide and self-defense instructions correctly stated the law and allowed defendants to argue their defense theories to the jury. State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51, 804 P.2d 577 (1991).

Trial court properly instructed the jury that it could consider alternative means of committing aggravated first degree murder; the verdict forms that were used adequately established jury unanimity. In re Jeffries, 110 Wn.2d 326, 752 P.2d 1338, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 948, 109 S. Ct. 379, 102 L. Ed. 2d 368 (1988).

Trial court did not err in instructing the jury that if it did not unanimously find sufficient mitigating circumstances to merit leniency, then the sentence would be life imprisonment without the possibility of parole. State v. Jeffries, 105 Wn.2d 398, 717 P.2d 722, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 922, 107 S. Ct. 328, 93 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1986).

Instruction adequately informed jury that state had burden of proof in showing that there were not sufficient mitigating circumstances to merit leniency. State v. Jeffries, 105 Wn.2d 398, 717 P.2d 722, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 922, 107 S. Ct. 328, 93 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1986).

-- REQUIREMENTS.

In aggravated murder trial, trial court did not err in refusing to either require the jury to describe in a special jury form the common scheme or plan it did find, or to find, as a prerequisite to finding the aggravating circumstance, that the state proved the specific scheme or plan alleged in its bill of particulars. State v. Peerson, 62 Wn. App. 755, 816 P.2d 43 (1991), review denied, 118 Wn.2d 1012, 824 P.2d 491 (1992).

-- RESPONSE.

In aggravated first-degree murder trial, the jury's special interrogatory response that they did not unanimously find that the victim was murdered in the course of first-degree kidnapping or first- or second-degree robbery was not inconsistent with the response that the jurors unanimously found that the victim had been murdered with the intent to conceal the commission of a crime or to protect or conceal the identity of a person committing a crime. State v. Longworth, 52 Wn. App. 453, 761 P.2d 67 (1988), review denied, 112 Wn.2d 1006 (1989).

-- VERDICTS.

Before a penalty for aggravated murder can be imposed, there must first be jury unanimity as to the premeditation means of committing first degree murder; under Washington law, therefore, it is not possible for a defendant to receive a sentence for aggravated first degree murder without jury unanimity as to the underlying premeditated murder. State v. Fortune, 77 Wn. App. 628, 893 P.2d 670 (1995), aff'd, 128 Wn.2d 464, 909 P.2d 930 (1996).

Because the general verdict and special verdict were consistent with a jury finding of second degree murder and the jury had an instruction to support that finding, the verdicts were reconcilable. State v. Baruso, 72 Wn. App. 603, 865 P.2d 512 (1993), review denied, 124 Wn.2d 1008, 879 P.2d 292 (1994).

Although jury returned general verdicts finding defendant guilty of first degree aggravated murder on both counts and special verdicts indicating that only one victim was murdered as part of a common scheme or plan, the general and special verdicts were not so irreconcilably inconsistent as to require reversal of the general verdicts. State v. Peerson, 62 Wn. App. 755, 816 P.2d 43 (1991), review denied, 118 Wn.2d 1012, 824 P.2d 491 (1992).

MULTIPLE VICTIMS.

In order to find aggravated murder for multiple victims, a jury must necessarily find that at least one murder was first degree, and the other was murder in the first or second degree. State v. Baruso, 72 Wn. App. 603, 865 P.2d 512 (1993), review denied, 124 Wn.2d 1008, 879 P.2d 292 (1994).

'MURDERS.".

In statutory aggravating circumstance number 8 which reads "more than one victim and the murders were part of a common scheme or plan or the result of a single act", the reference to "murders" is a reference to either murder in the first degree or murder in the second degree. State v. Kincaid, 103 Wn.2d 304, 692 P.2d 823 (1985).

PRESUMPTION.

Argument that Washington's capital punishment statute creates a mandatory presumption in favor of the death penalty and places the burden on the defendant to prove there are sufficient mitigating circumstances to merit leniency was rejected. Campbell v. Kincheloe, 829 F.2d 1453 (9th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 948, 109 S. Ct. 380, 102 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1988).

PRIOR CONVICTION.

Where petitioner's prior manslaughter conviction, entered upon a plea of guilty, was admitted in the penalty phase of his aggravated murder trial, the petitioner could not rely solely on the state's asserted failure to prove the validity of the prior conviction, but instead had to show some infirmity in fact existed in that conviction. In re Harris, 111 Wn.2d 691, 763 P.2d 823 (1988), cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1075, 109 S. Ct. 2088, 104 L. Ed. 2d 651 (1989).

PUNISHMENT.

In a capital case, the jury is to consider not each count separately but all crimes the defendant has been convicted of in deciding whether death is the appropriate punishment. State v. Jeffries, 105 Wn.2d 398, 717 P.2d 722, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 922, 107 S. Ct. 328, 93 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1986).

RELATION TO OFFICIAL DUTY.

Plain language of subsection (8) supports the conclusion that a defendant is not required to be a party in the proceeding in which the victim was, or was going to be, a prospective witness. State v. Goldberg, 149 Wn.2d 888, 72 P.3d 1083 (2003).

SENTENCING.

United States Supreme Court was not persuaded to depart from the state supreme court's determination that a juror misstated Washington's sentencing law because the sole reason the juror expressed for imposing the death penalty, in a case where defendant opposed it, was whether defendant could have been released and would reviolate, and the juror's reason was equivalent to treating the risk of recidivism as the sole aggravating factor, rather than treating lack of future dangerousness as a possible mitigating consideration, under RCW 10.95.020, 10.95.070. Uttecht v. Brown, -- U.S. --, 127 S. Ct. 2218, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1014 (June 4, 2007).

Aggravating factors are not elements of aggravated first-degree murder. The crime is premeditated murder in the first-degree accompanied by one or more of the aggravating factors. The elements of premeditated first-degree murder do not include the elements of first-degree kidnapping. State v. Anderson, -- Wn. App. --, -- P.3d -- (Aug. 29, 2005).

Life without parole is a proper sentence for aggravated first degree murder. State v. Kron, 63 Wn. App. 688, 821 P.2d 1248, review denied, 119 Wn.2d 1004, 832 P.2d 487 (1992).

'SINGLE ACT.".

Multiple murders caused by consecutive gun shots can be the result of a "single act" within the meaning of this statute. State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412, 705 P.2d 1182 (1985), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1020, 106 S. Ct. 1208, 89 L. Ed. 2d 321 (1986).

Defendant's contention that an allegation under the "single act" portion of this statute deprived him of notice of what act the state would rely on to satisfy the statute was rejected since the state's theory was not concealed from the defendant. State v. Dictado, 102 Wn.2d 277, 687 P.2d 172 (1984).

SEATTLE UNIV. LAW REVIEW.

Comparative proportionality review: will the ends, will the means. 18 Seattle U. L. Rev. 593.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR.

Sufficiency of evidence, for purposes of death penalty, to establish statutory aggravating circumstance that defendant committed murder while under sentence of imprisonment, in confinement at correctional custody, and the like -- post-Gregg cases. 67 ALR4th 917.

Sufficiency of evidence, for death penalty purposes, to establish statutory aggravating circumstance that murder was committed in course of committing, attempting, or fleeing from other offense, and the like -- post-Gregg cases. 67 ALR4th 887.

Sufficiency of evidence, for purposes of death penalty, to establish statutory aggravating circumstance that in committing murder, defendant created risk of death or injury to more than one person, to many persons, and the like -- post-Gregg cases. 64 ALR4th 837.

Sufficiency of evidence, for purposes of death penalty, to establish statutory aggravating circumstance that murder was committed to avoid arrest or prosecution to effect escape from custody, to hinder governmental function or enforcement of law, and the like -- post-Gregg cases. 64 ALR4th 755.

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

3 of 22 DOCUMENTS

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.030 (2008)

§ 10.95.030. Sentences for aggravated first degree murder

(1) Except as provided in subsection (2) of this section, any person convicted of the crime of aggravated first degree murder shall be sentenced to life imprisonment without possibility of release or parole. A person sentenced to life imprisonment under this section shall not have that sentence suspended, deferred, or commuted by any judicial officer and the indeterminate sentence review board or its successor may not parole such prisoner nor reduce the period of confinement in any manner whatsoever including but not limited to any sort of good-time calculation. The department of social and health services or its successor or any executive official may not permit such prisoner to participate in any sort of release or furlough program.

(2) If, pursuant to a special sentencing proceeding held under RCW 10.95.050, the trier of fact finds that there are not sufficient mitigating circumstances to merit leniency, the sentence shall be death. In no case, however, shall a person be sentenced to death if the person was mentally retarded at the time the crime was committed, under the definition of mental retardation set forth in (a) of this subsection. A diagnosis of mental retardation shall be documented by a licensed psychiatrist or licensed psychologist designated by the court, who is an expert in the diagnosis and evaluation of mental retardation. The defense must establish mental retardation by a preponderance of the evidence and the court must make a finding as to the existence of mental retardation.

(a) "Mentally retarded" means the individual has: (i) Significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning; (ii) existing concurrently with deficits in adaptive behavior; and (iii) both significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning and deficits in adaptive behavior were manifested during the developmental period.

(b) "General intellectual functioning" means the results obtained by assessment with one or more of the individually administered general intelligence tests developed for the purpose of assessing intellectual functioning.

(c) "Significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning" means intelligence quotient seventy or below.

(d) "Adaptive behavior" means the effectiveness or degree with which individuals meet the standards of personal independence and social responsibility expected for his or her age.

(e) "Developmental period" means the period of time between conception and the eighteenth birthday.

HISTORY: 1993 c 479 § 1; 1981 c 138 § 3.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS
Aggravating circumstances
Construction
Death penalty
Evidence
Life imprisonment without parole
--Constitutionality
--Commutation
--Proper
--Resentencing

AGGRAVATING CIRCUMSTANCES.

Evidence did not support a charge that defendant killed his wife in the course of the arson, and therefore defendant's sentence of life in prison under RCW 10.95.020(11)(e) was reversed, because the murder was complete before the arson and the murder did not further the arson; rather defendant used the arson to cover up the murder. State v. Hacheney, 160 Wn.2d 503, 158 P.3d 1152 (2007).

From the face of the information, defendant was charged with aggravated first-degree murder, for which the maximum penalty was life imprisonment with no possibility of parole, or death if there are no mitigating circumstances to merit leniency. The underlying elements or details of the aggravating factors would not have changed his maximum penalty and same were not required to be included in the information. State v. Anderson, -- Wn. App. --, -- P.3d -- (Aug. 29, 2005).

The statutory aggravating circumstances which, when present, raise premeditated first degree murder to aggravated first degree murder punishable by death or mandatory life imprisonment are "aggravation of penalty" factors which enhance the penalty for the offense, and are not elements of a crime as such; accordingly, it is unnecessary that the aggravating circumstances alleged to exist be set forth as elements of the offense in the "to convict" instruction on the underlying murder charge. State v. Kincaid, 103 Wn.2d 304, 692 P.2d 823 (1985).

CONSTRUCTION.

Aggravating factors are not elements of aggravated first-degree murder. The crime is premeditated murder in the first-degree accompanied by one or more of the aggravating factors. The elements of premeditated first-degree murder do not include the elements of first-degree kidnapping. State v. Anderson, -- Wn. App. --, -- P.3d -- (Aug. 29, 2005).

Defendant's claim that the trial court had the option to sentence him on either of his two convictions failed, as this section did not give trial courts an option in sentencing defendants convicted of aggravated first degree murder. State v. Meas, 118 Wn. App. 297, 75 P.3d 998 (2003), review denied, 151 Wn.2d 1020, 91 P.3d 95 (2004).

DEATH PENALTY.

Evidence was sufficient to support the imposition of the death penalty based on defendant's conviction on three counts of aggravated first-degree murder of his wife and two of his daughters, because defendant had a history of domestic violence and brutally killed three family members and held another daughter against her will for many hours, although defendant offered four mitigating factors: his near-lack of criminal history, the "extreme mental disturbance" he was under at the time, the fact he was unlikely to be a danger to others in the future, and his underlying mental disease or defect. State v. Cross, 156 Wn.2d 580, 132 P.3d 80 (2006).

In prosecution for four counts of aggravated first-degree murder, while it was the judge who pronounced death sentence, he had no discretion under Washington law; once the jury found insufficient mitigating circumstances to recommend leniency, the death sentence was mandatory. Rice v. Wood, 77 F.3d 1138 (9th Cir. 1996).

Prosecutor's closing argument for the death sentence at penalty phase of murder trial in which he referred to (1) the potential harm to other persons in prison; (2) the potential harm to trial witnesses; and (3) the theory of societal self-defense, did not render the jury's verdict, that there were not sufficient mitigating circumstances to merit leniency, unconstitutional. Campbell v. Kincheloe, 829 F.2d 1453 (9th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 948, 109 S. Ct. 380, 102 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1988).

Argument that Washington's capital punishment statute creates a mandatory presumption in favor of the death penalty and places the burden on the defendant to prove there are sufficient mitigating circumstances to merit leniency was rejected. Campbell v. Kincheloe, 829 F.2d 1453 (9th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 948, 109 S. Ct. 380, 102 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1988).

Death penalty statute adequately guards against arbitrary infliction of the death penalty. State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664, 683 P.2d 571 (1984).

The death penalty is not per se unconstitutional under the state constitution. State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664, 683 P.2d 571 (1984).

Giving defendant a choice between two methods of execution is not unconstitutional. State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664, 683 P.2d 571 (1984).

EVIDENCE.

Admission of evidence of murder defendant's gun collection in sentencing phase of trial was irrelevant, prejudicial, and violative of his due process rights, requiring remand for new sentencing proceeding. State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664, 683 P.2d 571 (1984).

LIFE IMPRISONMENT WITHOUT PAROLE.

-- CONSTITUTIONALITY.

Under a former version of this section (in former chapter 10.94 RCW), defendants who went to trial could receive a sentence of death or life imprisonment without possibility of parole, while defendants who pled guilty could receive no more than life with the possibility of parole; the former statute unconstitutionally penalized a defendant who chose to go to trial. Grisby v. Blodgett, 130 F.3d 365 (9th Cir. 1997).

As a matter of law, a sentence of life without the possibility of parole is significantly different from a sentence of life with the possibility of parole. Grisby v. Blodgett, 130 F.3d 365 (9th Cir. 1997).

Where defendant's death sentence imposed under the 1975 version of the penalty statute was vacated after the death penalty portion of the statute was held unconstitutional, and life imprisonment without parole was imposed instead, the life without parole sentence was valid under the 1975 savings clause; the 1975 statute did not suffer from the same constitutional infirmities which rendered the entire 1977 version unconstitutional. Snook v. Wood, 89 F.3d 605 (9th Cir. 1996).

Defendant's conviction by a jury of aggravated first degree murder under the 1975 murder statute and his sentence of life without possibility of parole pursuant to the alternative sentencing provision of that statute were constitutional. In re Snook, 67 Wn. App. 714, 840 P.2d 207 (1992).

A sentence of life imprisonment without possibility of parole is unconstitutional when pursuant to statute it cannot be imposed following a guilty plea. Such a sentence is unconstitutional because it penalizes a defendant's assertion of the right to a trial by jury. Robtoy v. Kincheloe, 871 F.2d 1478 (9th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1031, 110 S. Ct. 1483, 108 L. Ed. 2d 619, 494 U.S. 1061, 110 S. Ct. 1538, 108 L. Ed. 2d 777 (1990).

Mandatory statutory sentence of life imprisonment without possibility of parole, entered on a charge of aggravated murder in the first degree, did not amount to an unconstitutional restriction of the judiciary's sentencing power. State v. Hughes, 106 Wn.2d 176, 721 P.2d 902 (1986).

Sentence of life imprisonment without the possibility of parole did not violate equal protection or public policy. State v. Cummings, 44 Wn. App. 146, 721 P.2d 545, review denied, 106 Wn.2d 1017 (1986).

The penalty of life imprisonment without the possibility of parole is constitutional. State v. Anderson, 41 Wn. App. 85, 702 P.2d 481 (1985), review denied, 106 Wn.2d 1001, 720 P.2d 782 (1986), rev'd on other grounds, 107 Wn.2d 745, 733 P.2d 517 (1987).

Imposition of a sentence of life imprisonment without the possibility of release or parole for defendants who plead guilty to or are convicted of aggravated murder in the first degree is constitutionally valid. Tripp v. Scott, 29 Wn. App. 869, 631 P.2d 973 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Baker v. Leonard, 120 Wn.2d 538, 843 P.2d 1050 (1993).

A sentence of life without possibility of parole reserved solely for those who chose to go to trial and not imposable on those pleading guilty is unconstitutional under United States v. Jackson, 390 U.S. 570, 88 S. Ct. 1209, 20, L. Ed. 2d 138 (1968). Norman v. Ducharme, 871 F.2d 1483 (9th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1031, 110 S. Ct. 1483, 108 L. Ed. 2d 619, 494 U.S. 1061, 110 S. Ct. 1538, 108 L. Ed. 2d 777 (1990).

-- COMMUTATION.

The Governor has the power to commute a sentence of life imprisonment without the possibility of parole. State v. Rupe, 108 Wn.2d 734, 743 P.2d 210 (1987), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1061, 108 S. Ct. 2834, 100 L. Ed. 2d 934 (1988).

-- PROPER.

Life without parole is a proper sentence for aggravated first degree murder. State v. Kron, 63 Wn. App. 688, 821 P.2d 1248, review denied, 119 Wn.2d 1004, 832 P.2d 487 (1992).

-- RESENTENCING.

The maximum sentence on a plea of guilty to first degree murder of any kind under the first degree murder sentencing scheme in effect in 1980 was life with the possibility of parole; thus petitioner's 1980 sentence, on plea of guilty, to life without possibility of parole, necessitated remand for resentencing to life with the possibility of parole. In re Moore, 116 Wn.2d 30, 803 P.2d 300 (1991).

A defendant has standing to challenge his sentence of life imprisonment without possibility of parole under United States v. Jackson, 390 U.S. 570, 88 S. Ct. 1209, 20, L. Ed. 2d 138 (1968), even though the defendant actually did exercise his right to a jury trial. Jackson applies to statutes that penalize the right to a jury trial as well as those that chill that right. Robtoy v. Kincheloe, 871 F.2d 1478 (9th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1031, 110 S. Ct. 1483, 108 L. Ed. 2d 619, 494 U.S. 1061, 110 S. Ct. 1538, 108 L. Ed. 2d 777 (1990).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

PLEA OF GUILTY.

Sentencing upon plea of guilty to first degree murder under aggravating circumstances. AGO 1979 No. 10; 1979 Op. Atty Gen. Wash. No. 10.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

UNIVERSITY OF PUGET SOUND LAW REVIEW.
Unbridled prosecutorial discretion and standard less death penalty policies: the unconstitutionality of the Washington capital punishment statutory scheme. 7 U. Puget Sound L. Rev. 299.

WASHINGTON LAW REVIEW.
The death penalty in Washington: an historical perspective. 57 Wash. L. Rev. 525.

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.040 (2008)

§ 10.95.040. Special sentencing proceeding -- Notice -- Filing -- Service

(1) If a person is charged with aggravated first degree murder as defined by RCW 10.95.020, the prosecuting attorney shall file written notice of a special sentencing proceeding to determine whether or not the death penalty should be imposed when there is reason to believe that there are not sufficient mitigating circumstances to merit leniency.

(2) The notice of special sentencing proceeding shall be filed and served on the defendant or the defendant's attorney within thirty days after the defendant's arraignment upon the charge of aggravated first degree murder unless the court, for good cause shown, extends or reopens the period for filing and service of the notice. Except with the consent of the prosecuting attorney, during the period in which the prosecuting attorney may file the notice of special sentencing proceeding, the defendant may not tender a plea of guilty to the charge of aggravated first degree murder nor may the court accept a plea of guilty to the charge of aggravated first degree murder or any lesser included offense.

(3) If a notice of special sentencing proceeding is not filed and served as provided in this section, the prosecuting attorney may not request the death penalty.

HISTORY: 1981 c 138 § 4.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS
Constitutionality

Bifurcate
Construction with other law
Discretion of prosecutor
Disqualification
Good cause
Included offenses
Legislative intent
Notice
Purpose
Sentence not disproportionate

CONSTITUTIONALITY.

Argument that Washington's capital punishment statute is unconstitutional because it vests unbridled discretion in the prosecution to decide when to seek the death penalty was rejected. Campbell v. Kincheloe, 829 F.2d 1453 (9th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 948, 109 S. Ct. 380, 102 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1988).

BIFURCATE.

It was not an abuse of discretion for the trial court to refuse to bifurcate defendant's trial because evidence of defendant's white supremacist beliefs was relevant to show that he had a motive for the victim's murder and that he premeditated and intended to cause an "inferior" person's death. State v. Monschke, 133 Wn. App. 313, 135 P.3d 966 (2006).

CONSTRUCTION WITH OTHER LAW.

Since this section and CR 5 both deal with the service of a notice after an attorney has appeared in a case, CR 5 is instructive as to the meaning of service in this section. RCW 10.95.010, which provides that the death penalty statute may not be varied by court rule, is not violated by this interpretation as the court rule does not vary the requirements of chapter 10.95 RCW but gives some guidance as to the meaning of the statute. State v. Clark, 129 Wn.2d 805, 920 P.2d 187 (1996).

The manner of serving a notice of special sentencing proceeding is governed by CR 5. While service of the notice on the defendant's attorney in the manner prescribed in CR 5 is a substantial deviation from the rigid service requirements set forth in RCW 4.28.080, it is calculated to give notice to a defendant over whom the trial court already has jurisdiction and who is represented by an attorney. State v. Cronin, 130 Wn.2d 392, 923 P.2d 694 (1996).

DISCRETION OF PROSECUTOR.

Prosecutor's discretion to seek either the death penalty or life imprisonment does not usurp the trial court's sentencing function and therefore does not violate the separation of powers doctrine. State v. Carey, 42 Wn. App. 840, 714 P.2d 708, review denied, 106 Wn.2d 1003 (1986).

Special sentencing proceeding which gives the prosecutor discretion to request the death penalty does not violate equal protection, does not violate separation of powers, and is not unconstitutionally vague. State v. Campbell, 103 Wn.2d 1, 691 P.2d 929 (1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1094, 105 S. Ct. 2169, 85 L. Ed. 2d 526 (1985).

DISQUALIFICATION.

Where prosecuting attorney represented the defendant in a prior criminal case before becoming a prosecutor, the prosecuting attorney and his staff were disqualified from handling the prosecution of the defendant for the crime of aggravated murder in the first degree where the death penalty was sought. State v. Stenger, 111 Wn.2d 516, 760 P.2d 357 (1988).

GOOD CAUSE.

Mere inadvertence in filing notice on the part of the prosecutor does not constitute good cause. State v. Luvene, 127 Wn.2d 690, 903 P.2d 960 (1995).

To show good cause, the state must first provide an external factor for its default. State v. Dearbone, 125 Wn.2d 173, 883 P.2d 303 (1994).

The two-step standard for proving good cause is: first, the state must show an external impediment which prevented it from complying with the requirements of this section, second, the state must establish that the delay in filing or serving notice did not prejudice the preparation of defendant's case. State v. Dearbone, 125 Wn.2d 173, 883 P.2d 303 (1994).

Good cause requires a reason external to the prosecutor for his failure to serve notice. State v. Dearbone, 125 Wn.2d 173, 883 P.2d 303 (1994).

Substantial compliance with this section is insufficient proof of good cause. State v. Dearbone, 125 Wn.2d 173, 883 P.2d 303 (1994).

INCLUDED OFFENSES.

Since felony murder is not a lesser included offense of aggravated first degree murder, a defendant charged with both felony murder and aggravated first degree murder may plead guilty to felony murder when arraigned for the first time; however, such a plea would not preclude the prosecutor from pursuing the companion charge of premeditated first degree murder and from seeking the death penalty upon proof of aggravating circumstances. State v. Thompson, 60 Wn. App. 662, 806 P.2d 1251 (1991).

LEGISLATIVE INTENT.

The legislature could have required that notice under this section be served only on a defendant and that such service be personal, but it did not do so. State v. Cronin, 130 Wn.2d 392, 923 P.2d 694 (1996).

NOTICE.

Where the state timely filed the statutorily mandated notice after defendant's first arraignment, it was not required to file another notice after his rearraignment on an amended information. State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 23 P.3d 1046, cert. denied, 534 U.S. 964, 122 S. Ct. 374, 151 L. Ed. 2d 285 (2001).

The time limitation for the notice of special sentencing in this section is a procedural right which may be waived by defense counsel for tactical reasons. State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 975 P.2d 967 (1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 922, 120 S. Ct. 285, 145 L. Ed. 2d 239 (1999).

This section requires the state to serve a defendant with the notice of special sentencing proceedings, but does not require proof of service. State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 940 P.2d 546 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1007, 118 S. Ct. 1192, 140 L. Ed. 2d 322 (1998).

The statutory death notice requirement under this section is not an element of the crime of aggravated murder. Instead, the notice simply informs the accused of the penalty that may be imposed upon conviction of the crime. While formal notice is required to the accused by information of the criminal charges to satisfy the federal sixth amendment and Wa. Const., Art. I, § 22, such constitutional notice is not extended to the penalty exacted for conviction of the crime. Due process in sentencing requires only adequate notice of the possibility of the death penalty. State v. Clark, 129 Wn.2d 805, 920 P.2d 187 (1996).

Notice of special sentencing proceeding was timely served and filed for purposes of this section because the statutory service on defense counsel was in accordance with CR 5. State v. Clark, 129 Wn.2d 805, 920 P.2d 187 (1996).

Sentence of death was overturned based upon the state's failure to file notice of intent to seek the death penalty within the thirty-day period required by subsection (2). State v. Luvene, 127 Wn.2d 690, 903 P.2d 960 (1995).

Where, on the day notice was due, a deputy prosecutor notified defense counsel by voice mail, and later in person, of the state's intent to seek the death penalty, but the deputy prosecutor did not serve a copy of the notice on defense counsel until after the time limit had expired, good cause did not exist to reopen the period for service. State v. Dearbone, 125 Wn.2d 173, 883 P.2d 303 (1994).

There is no statutory requirement that the prosecutor file a second notice of a special sentencing proceeding when a defendant's conviction is upheld on appeal but the case is remanded for a new sentencing proceeding. State v. Rupe, 108 Wn.2d 734, 743 P.2d 210 (1987), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1061, 108 S. Ct. 2834, 100 L. Ed. 2d 934 (1988).

PURPOSE.

The purpose of proportionality review is not to second-guess evidentiary determinations or value judgments inherent in prosecutors' charging decisions or juries' verdicts in other cases; the purpose is instead to ensure that a death sentence is not affirmed where death sentences have not generally been imposed in similar cases, or where it has been wantonly and freakishly imposed. In re Jeffries, 114 Wn.2d 485, 789 P.2d 731 (1990).

SENTENCE NOT DISPROPORTIONATE.

Defendant's death sentence was neither excessive nor disproportionate. In re Jeffries, 114 Wn.2d 485, 789 P.2d 731 (1990).

Murder defendant's contention that his death sentence was disproportionate to the prison terms imposed in numerous aggravated first degree murder cases in which the state did not seek the death penalty was rejected. In re Jeffries, 114 Wn.2d 485, 789 P.2d 731 (1990).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

WASHINGTON LAW REVIEW.

Capital Punishment, Proportionality Review, and Claims of Fairness (With Lessons from Washington State)., 79 Wash. L. Rev. 775 (2004).

ALR.

Sufficiency of evidence, for purposes of death penalty, to establish statutory aggravating circumstance that murder was committed for pecuniary gain, as consideration in expectation of receiving something of monetary value, and the like -- post-Gregg cases. 66 ALR4th 417.

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

5 of 22 DOCUMENTS

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.050 (2008)

§ 10.95.050. Special sentencing proceeding -- When held -- Jury to decide matters presented -- Waiver -- Reconvening same jury -- Impanelling new jury -- Peremptory challenges

(1) If a defendant is adjudicated guilty of aggravated first degree murder, whether by acceptance of a plea of guilty, by verdict of a jury, or by decision of the trial court sitting without a jury, a special sentencing proceeding shall be held if a notice of special sentencing proceeding was filed and served as provided by RCW 10.95.040. No sort of plea, admission, or agreement may abrogate the requirement that a special sentencing proceeding be held.

(2) A jury shall decide the matters presented in the special sentencing proceeding unless a jury is waived in the discretion of the court and with the consent of the defendant and the prosecuting attorney.

(3) If the defendant's guilt was determined by a jury verdict, the trial court shall reconvene the same jury to hear the special sentencing proceeding. The proceeding shall commence as soon as practicable after completion of the trial at which the defendant's guilt was determined. If, however, unforeseen circumstances make it impracticable to reconvene the same jury to hear the special sentencing proceeding, the trial court may dismiss that jury and convene a jury pursuant to subsection (4) of this section.

(4) If the defendant's guilt was determined by plea of guilty or by decision of the trial court sitting without a jury, or if a retrial of the special sentencing proceeding is necessary for any reason including but not limited to a mistrial in a previous special sentencing proceeding or as a consequence of a remand from an appellate court, the trial court shall impanel a jury of twelve persons plus whatever alternate jurors the trial court deems necessary. The defense and prosecution shall each be allowed to peremptorily challenge twelve jurors. If there is more than one defendant, each defendant shall be allowed an additional peremptory challenge and the prosecution shall be allowed a like number of additional challenges. If alternate jurors are selected, the defense and prosecution shall each be allowed one peremptory challenge for each alternate juror to be selected and if there is more than one defendant each defendant shall be allowed an additional peremptory challenge for each alternate juror to be selected and the prosecution shall be allowed a like number of additional challenges.

HISTORY: 1981 c 138 § 5.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS
Challenges
Closing argument
Commutation of sentence
Invalid sentence
Jury

CHALLENGES.

In light of two additional peremptory challenges granted, defendant was not denied a fair and impartial jury even if the court erred by denying two challenges for cause. State v. Rupe, 108 Wn.2d 734, 743 P.2d 210 (1987), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1061, 108 S. Ct. 2834, 100 L. Ed. 2d 934 (1988) (see however, State v. Fire, 145 Wn.3d 152, 34 P.3d 1218 (2001)).

CLOSING ARGUMENT.

Prosecutor's closing argument for the death sentence at penalty phase of murder trial in which he referred to (1) the potential harm to other persons in prison; (2) the potential harm to trial witnesses; and (3) the theory of societal self defense did not render the jury's verdict, that there were not sufficient mitigating circumstances to merit leniency, unconstitutional. Campbell v. Kincheloe, 829 F.2d 1453 (9th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 948, 109 S. Ct. 380, 102 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1988).

COMMUTATION OF SENTENCE.

After the penalty phase of an aggravated murder has been remanded to the trial court for a new jury deliberation solely on the death penalty issue, the prosecuting attorney does not have the authority to commute defendant's sentence to life without the possibility of parole and bypass the jury and penalty phase of the trial, but he does have the right to appear before the jury and ask for mitigation and the sparing of defendant's life. State v. Bartholomew, 104 Wn.2d 844, 710 P.2d 196 (1985).

INVALID SENTENCE.

Invalidation of a sentence due to the statutory review process does not automatically result in imposition of a sentence of life imprisonment without parole. Rupe v. Wood, 863 F. Supp. 1315 (W.D. Wash. 1994), aff'd, 93 F.3d 1434 (9th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1142, 117 S. Ct. 1017, 136 L. Ed. 2d 894 (1997).

JURY.

Absent a showing that a trial court's withholding of assent to waiver of a jury in a special sentencing proceeding in a capital case was an abuse of discretion, i.e. that it was clearly untenable or manifestly unreasonable or that the defendant was prejudiced by having his cause heard by a jury, there was no reversible error. State v. Rupe, 108 Wn.2d 734, 743 P.2d 210 (1987), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1061, 108 S. Ct. 2834, 100 L. Ed. 2d 934 (1988).

Trial court did not err in refusing to impanel a new jury for the penalty phase of a murder trial where, at the guilt phase of the trial, the jury heard evidence of the defendant's involvement in a committed but uncharged crime as well as about the planning of other crimes which were never committed. State v. Kwan Fai Mak, 105 Wn.2d 692, 718 P.2d 407, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 995, 107 S. Ct. 599, 93 L. Ed. 2d 599 (1986).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

GONZAGA LAW REVIEW.
Refinement of Washington's death penalty act. 17 Gonz. L. Rev. 715.

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

6 of 22 DOCUMENTS

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.060 (2008)

§ 10.95.060. Special sentencing proceeding -- Jury instructions -- Opening statements -- Evidence -- Arguments -- Question for jury

(1) At the commencement of the special sentencing proceeding, the trial court shall instruct the jury as to the nature and purpose of the proceeding and as to the consequences of its decision, as provided in RCW 10.95.030.

(2) At the special sentencing proceeding both the prosecution and defense shall be allowed to make an opening statement. The prosecution shall first present evidence and then the defense may present evidence. Rebuttal evidence may be presented by each side. Upon conclusion of the evidence, the court shall instruct the jury and then the prosecution and defense shall be permitted to present argument. The prosecution shall open and conclude the argument.

(3) The court shall admit any relevant evidence which it deems to have probative value regardless of its admissibility under the rules of evidence, including hearsay evidence and evidence of the defendant's previous criminal activity regardless of whether the defendant has been charged or convicted as a result of such activity. The defendant shall be accorded a fair opportunity to rebut or offer any hearsay evidence.

In addition to evidence of whether or not there are sufficient mitigating circumstances to merit leniency, if the jury sitting in the special sentencing proceeding has not heard evidence of the aggravated first degree murder of which the defendant stands convicted, both the defense and prosecution may introduce evidence concerning the facts and circumstances of the murder.

(4) Upon conclusion of the evidence and argument at the special sentencing proceeding, the jury shall retire to deliberate upon the following question: "Having in mind the crime of which the defendant has been found guilty, are you convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that there are not sufficient mitigating circumstances to merit leniency?"

In order to return an affirmative answer to the question posed by this subsection, the jury must so find unanimously.

HISTORY: 1981 c 138 § 6.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS
Constitutionality
Circumstances of crime
Commutation of sentence
Competency hearing
Evidence
--Constitutionality
--Aggravating
--Circumstantial
--Competency of counsel
--Execution impact
--Mitigating
--No denial of right
--Previous crimes
--Relevant
--Resentencing trial
--Review
--Victim impact statements
Factors
--In general
--Mitigating
Jury
--Consideration of evidence
--Instructions
--Unanimity
Opening statement
Polygraph examination
Presumption

CONSTITUTIONALITY.

Habeas petitioner failed in any way to show that the Washington Supreme Court's decision concerning the constitutionality of RCW 10.95.060(4) was contrary to, or an unreasonable application of, clearly established federal law. Gentry v. Sinclair, -- F. Supp. 2d -- (W.D. Wash. Sept. 15, 2008).

This section is not unconstitutionally vague, nor does it improperly place the burden of proving mitigating circumstances on the defendant. In re Gentry, 137 Wn.2d 379, 972 P.2d 1250 (1999).

Subsection (4) is constitutional. State v. Gentry, 125 Wn.2d 570, 888 P.2d 1105, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 843, 116 S. Ct. 131, 133 L. Ed. 2d 79 (1995).

This statute, providing a mandatory sentence of life imprisonment without the possibility of parole in noncapital aggravated murder cases does not violate due process of equal protection. State v. Dictado, 102 Wn.2d 277, 687 P.2d 172 (1984).

CIRCUMSTANCES OF CRIME.

In death penalty cases, the jury must focus on the circumstances of the crime itself. As a general matter, then, these circumstances are properly included in the prosecutor's argument to the jury subject to the following caveats: argument must be restricted to the evidence presented in the case and even argument that is conducted on proper subjects may still be improper if it is presented in an inflammatory manner. State v. Rice, 110 Wn.2d 577, 757 P.2d 889 (1988), cert. denied, 491 U.S. 910, 109 S. Ct. 3200, 105 L. Ed. 2d 707 (1989).

COMMUTATION OF SENTENCE.

Trial court did not err in permitting the prosecution to ask defendant during cross examination at sentencing phase of capital sentencing jury about the possibility that his sentence might be commuted, since the question was in response to a misleading impression left by the defense that the defendant could never be released into society. State v. Rupe, 108 Wn.2d 734, 743 P.2d 210 (1987), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1061, 108 S. Ct. 2834, 100 L. Ed. 2d 934 (1988).

COMPETENCY HEARING.

At beginning of sentencing phase of capital murder trial, defense counsel's request for a hearing to determine if defendant was competent to proceed was properly denied because defense counsel did not meet threshold burden of establishing doubt as to defendant's competency. State v. Lord, 117 Wn.2d 829, 822 P.2d 177 (1991), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 856, 113 S. Ct. 164, 121 L. Ed. 2d 112 (1992).

EVIDENCE.

-- CONSTITUTIONALITY.

Provisions of the capital punishment statute allowing the jury to consider evidence regardless of its admissibility under the Rules of Evidence, including hearsay evidence, and evidence of defendant's prior criminal activity regardless of whether defendant was charged or convicted as a result of such activity, were unconstitutional. State v. Bartholomew, 101 Wn.2d 631, 683 P.2d 1079 (1984).

-- AGGRAVATING.

The prosecution may present at the sentencing phase any evidence relating to the aggravating factors set forth in the capital punishment statute if it would have been admissible at the guilt phase of the trial. State v. Bartholomew, 101 Wn.2d 631, 683 P.2d 1079 (1984).

-- CIRCUMSTANTIAL.

In aggravated first-degree murder trial, refusal of the court to admit at the penalty phase circumstantial evidence from which it could be inferred that a codefendant and a third party, rather than defendant, planned the murders was constitutional error. Kwan Fai Mak v. Blodgett, 970 F.2d 614 (9th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 951, 113 S. Ct. 1363, 122 L. Ed. 2d 742 (1993).

-- COMPETENCY OF COUNSEL.

Counsel's failure to submit jury instructions limiting the definition of "relevant factors" was professionally reasonable, where defendant had not shown that failure to submit such instructions fell below reasonable standards of competence. Rupe v. Wood, 863 F. Supp. 1315 (W.D. Wash. 1994), aff'd, 93 F.3d 1434 (9th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1142, 117 S. Ct. 1017, 136 L. Ed. 2d 894 (1997).

The court must determine whether, in light of all the circumstances, trial counsel's failure to consult an expert and present expert testimony on the reliability of co-conspirator's polygraph results at the second penalty trial was not outside professionally competent assistance. Rupe v. Wood, 863 F. Supp. 1315 (W.D. Wash. 1994), aff'd, 93 F.3d 1434 (9th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1142, 117 S. Ct. 1017, 136 L. Ed. 2d 894 (1997).

When a lawyer fails to present evidence in the penalty phase of a capital case, the conclusion that his performance is deficient does not always follow. Harris ex rel. Ramseyer v. Blodgett, 853 F. Supp. 1239 (W.D. Wash. 1994), aff'd, 64 F.3d 1432 (9th Cir. 1995).

-- EXECUTION IMPACT.

Evidence of the impact of the defendant's execution on third parties, including his family members, is not relevant evidence on the issue of mitigation, and it was not error for the trial court to exclude it. State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 940 P.2d 1239 (1997).

-- MITIGATING.

The defendant in a capital case had a constitutional right to present all relevant mitigating evidence related to his character or the circumstances of the offense at the sentencing phase of his trial. Rupe v. Wood, 863 F. Supp. 1315

(W.D. Wash. 1994), aff'd, 93 F.3d 1434 (9th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1142, 117 S. Ct. 1017, 136 L. Ed. 2d 894 (1997).

The authority provided by the section to consider "any relevant evidence" must be limited to mitigating evidence only. State v. Bartholomew, 101 Wn.2d 631, 683 P.2d 1079 (1984).

The prosecution is entitled to rebut mitigating evidence produced by defendant, but only if the rebuttal value of the evidence outweighs its prejudicial effect. State v. Bartholomew, 101 Wn.2d 631, 683 P.2d 1079 (1984).

-- NO DENIAL OF RIGHT.

Refusal of trial court to allow aggravated murder defendant, at the end of the penalty phase of the trial, to present evidence before the jury which would be uncrossexamined, unsworn, unrebuttable and unanswerable by argument did not deny defendant his right to allocution. State v. Kwan Fai Mak, 105 Wn.2d 692, 718 P.2d 407, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 995, 107 S. Ct. 599, 93 L. Ed. 2d 599 (1986).

-- PREVIOUS CRIMES.

Defense counsel's decision not to object to admission of certified copies of a judgment and sentence indicating an exceptional sentence, verdict forms, and municipal court docket entries to prove defendant's prior criminal activity did not fall below an objective standard of reasonableness under prevailing professional norms because defendant could not show that any objection would have been granted by the trial court. Admission of these documents at the penalty phase of defendant's trial was proper, because the certified copies of the prior adjudication were sufficiently reliable to warrant admission. In re Pers. Restraint of Davis, 152 Wn.2d 647, 101 P.3d 1 (2004).

Neither the washout provisions of RCW 9.94A.360(2) nor the ER 403 balancing requirement apply in death penalty cases. State v. Elmore, 139 Wn.2d 250, 985 P.2d 289 (1999), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 837, 121 S. Ct. 98, 148 L. Ed. 2d 57 (2000).

Where defendant's prior molestation of the victim played a significant role in the circumstances of the murder, its consideration by the jury was proper and necessary. State v. Elmore, 139 Wn.2d 250, 985 P.2d 289 (1999), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 837, 121 S. Ct. 98, 148 L. Ed. 2d 57 (2000).

ER 609 does not apply when prior convictions are admissible as substantive evidence; the rule relates only to impeachment by evidence of a conviction. State v. Gentry, 125 Wn.2d 570, 888 P.2d 1105, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 843, 116 S. Ct. 131, 133 L. Ed. 2d 79 (1995).

-- RELEVANT.

Where there was no question that the co-conspirator's polygraph evidence was "relevant" was because it related to the "circumstances of the offense," and specifically, it was relevant to defendant's relative culpability, a factor specifically recognized as relevant under Washington law, RCW 10.95.070(4), polygraph evidence was admitted. Rupe v. Wood, 863 F. Supp. 1315 (W.D. Wash. 1994), aff'd, 93 F.3d 1434 (9th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1142, 117 S. Ct. 1017, 136 L. Ed. 2d 894 (1997).

Evidence which is not probative or not relevant is excluded at the sentencing phase. State v. Kwan Fai Mak, 105 Wn.2d 692, 718 P.2d 407, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 995, 107 S. Ct. 599, 93 L. Ed. 2d 599 (1986).

-- RESENTENCING TRIAL.

Trial court did not err in admitting evidence at a resentencing trial of the facts and circumstances of the crime. State v. Rupe, 108 Wn.2d 734, 743 P.2d 210 (1987), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1061, 108 S. Ct. 2834, 100 L. Ed. 2d 934 (1988).

-- REVIEW.

In reviewing an evidentiary ruling by trial court in penalty phase of capital murder trial, supreme court employs the abuse of discretion standard, although it more carefully reviews the factual basis for the ruling than it would in a noncapital case. State v. Lord, 117 Wn.2d 829, 822 P.2d 177 (1991), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 856, 113 S. Ct. 164, 121 L. Ed. 2d 112 (1992).

-- VICTIM IMPACT STATEMENTS.

In light of the addition of the victims' rights amendment to the Washington constitution, the classes of relevant evidence which may constitutionally be admitted are expanded to also include victim impact evidence. State v. Gentry, 125 Wn.2d 570, 888 P.2d 1105, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 843, 116 S. Ct. 131, 133 L. Ed. 2d 79 (1995).

FACTORS.

-- IN GENERAL.

In a capital murder case in which defendant had killed two prostitutes, there was sufficient evidence to justify the affirmative finding to the question posed by RCW 10.95.060(4); a rational jury could have been convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that the circumstances of defendant's crimes outweighed the mitigating factors. State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 168 P.3d 359 (2007).

In penalty phase of capital murder trial, defense witnesses may be cross-examined concerning anything relevant raised in mitigation by the defendant; defendant's character witnesses may be cross-examined about personal knowledge of specific incidents of misconduct. State v. Lord, 117 Wn.2d 829, 822 P.2d 177 (1991), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 856, 113 S. Ct. 164, 121 L. Ed. 2d 112 (1992).

-- MITIGATING.

The mere presence of mitigating factors does not require a jury to grant leniency, so long as it is convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that any mitigating factors are outweighed by the circumstances of the crime. State v. Rice, 110 Wn.2d 577, 757 P.2d 889 (1988), cert. denied, 491 U.S. 910, 109 S. Ct. 3200, 105 L. Ed. 2d 707 (1989).

Failure of court to define "mitigating circumstance" for jury at sentencing phase of murder trial was not a constitutional error. State v. Bartholomew, 101 Wn.2d 631, 683 P.2d 1079 (1984).

The burden of proving the absence of mitigating circumstances is on the State. State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664, 683 P.2d 571 (1984).

JURY.

-- CONSIDERATION OF EVIDENCE.

Washington prisoner who was sentenced to death under RCW 10.95.060(4) upon conviction for aggravated first-degree murder was entitled to 28 U.S.C.S. § 2254 habeas relief based on a violation of due process rights under U.S. Const. amend. XIV; structural error resulted from the trial court's exclusion for cause of a juror in the absence of evidence that the juror would not follow the law with regard to the death penalty. Brown v. Lambert, 451 F.3d 946 (2006).

Washington's death penalty statute is a "non-weighing" statute; the statute does not require the jury to weigh specified aggravating factors against mitigating factors, but allows it to consider all evidence presented during both the guilt and penalty phases, including non-statutory aggravating factors. State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 940 P.2d 546 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1007, 118 S. Ct. 1192, 140 L. Ed. 2d 322 (1998).

-- INSTRUCTIONS.

The giving of leniency instructions is consistent with Washington's statutory scheme. State v. Brett, 126 Wn.2d 136, 892 P.2d 29 (1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1121, 116 S. Ct. 931, 133 L. Ed. 2d 858 (1996).

Trial court did not err by instructing the jury that the defendant could be convicted of aggravated murder in the first degree based on an accomplice theory. State v. Kwan Fai Mak, 105 Wn.2d 692, 718 P.2d 407, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 995, 107 S. Ct. 599, 93 L. Ed. 2d 599 (1986).

Penalty phase instructions in aggravated murder trial did not amount to reversible error, either individually or collectively. State v. Kwan Fai Mak, 105 Wn.2d 692, 718 P.2d 407, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 995, 107 S. Ct. 599, 93 L. Ed. 2d 599 (1986).

-- UNANIMITY.

Where nothing in the court's instruction said or implied that the defendant could only avoid the death penalty if the jury unanimously answered "no" to the statutory question in subsection (4), there was no reasonable likelihood this defendant's jury would have been confused either as to the consequence of a non-unanimous verdict or as to its ability to report such a verdict; the challenged instruction was not, therefore, constitutionally infirm. In re Benn, 134 Wn.2d 868, 952 P.2d 116 (1998).

In penalty phase of aggravated first-degree murder trial, jury instructions and verdict form combined to improperly emphasize to the jury that unanimous agreement was required not to impose that death penalty. Kwan Fai Mak v. Blodgett, 970 F.2d 614 (9th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 951, 113 S. Ct. 1363, 122 L. Ed. 2d 742 (1993).

OPENING STATEMENT.

Trial court did not err in allowing a deputy prosecuting attorney to make an opening statement to the jury at the penalty phase of the trial. State v. Kwan Fai Mak, 105 Wn.2d 692, 718 P.2d 407, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 995, 107 S. Ct. 599, 93 L. Ed. 2d 599 (1986).

In most cases, the opening statement by the prosecution in the sentencing phase of the trial may only consist of defendant's criminal record and evidence which would have been admissible at the guilt phase of the trial, except that if the jury at the sentencing phase is different from the jury at the guilt phase, evidence of the facts and circumstances of the murder may also be presented. State v. Bartholomew, 101 Wn.2d 631, 683 P.2d 1079 (1984).

POLYGRAPH EXAMINATION.

Subject to certain restrictions, polygraph examination results are admissible by the defense at the sentencing phase of capital cases. State v. Bartholomew, 101 Wn.2d 631, 683 P.2d 1079 (1984).

PRESUMPTION.

Argument that Washington's capital punishment statute creates a mandatory presumption in favor of the death penalty and places the burden on the defendant to prove there are sufficient mitigating circumstances to merit leniency was rejected. Campbell v. Kincheloe, 829 F.2d 1453 (9th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 948, 109 S. Ct. 380, 102 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1988).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

WASHINGTON LAW REVIEW.

Capital Punishment, Proportionality Review, and Claims of Fairness (With Lessons from Washington State)., 79 Wash. L. Rev. 775 (2004).

ALR.

Victim impact evidence in capital sentencing hearings -- post- Payne v. Tennessee. 79 ALR5th 33.

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

7 of 22 DOCUMENTS

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.070 (2008)

§ 10.95.070. Special sentencing proceeding -- Factors which jury may consider in deciding whether leniency merited

In deciding the question posed by RCW 10.95.060(4), the jury, or the court if a jury is waived, may consider any relevant factors, including but not limited to the following:

(1) Whether the defendant has or does not have a significant history, either as a juvenile or an adult, of prior criminal activity;

(2) Whether the murder was committed while the defendant was under the influence of extreme mental disturbance;

(3) Whether the victim consented to the act of murder;

(4) Whether the defendant was an accomplice to a murder committed by another person where the defendant's participation in the murder was relatively minor;

(5) Whether the defendant acted under duress or domination of another person;

(6) Whether, at the time of the murder, the capacity of the defendant to appreciate the wrongfulness of his or her conduct or to conform his or her conduct to the requirements of law was substantially impaired as a result of mental disease or defect. However, a person found to be mentally retarded under RCW 10.95.030(2) may in no case be sentenced to death;

(7) Whether the age of the defendant at the time of the crime calls for leniency; and

(8) Whether there is a likelihood that the defendant will pose a danger to others in the future.

HISTORY: 1993 c 479 § 2; 1981 c 138 § 7.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS
Constitutionality
In general
Closing arguments
Criminal history
Factors
--Aggravating
--Mitigating

CONSTITUTIONALITY.

This section does not violate the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution on the basis that the word "relevant" in the statute is vague when interpreted in the context of defendant's "prior criminal activity". In re Brown, 143 Wn.2d 431, 21 P.3d 687 (2001).

It is not unconstitutional for the jury to consider the circumstances of the crime for which the defendant was convicted. State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 940 P.2d 546 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1007, 118 S. Ct. 1192, 140 L. Ed. 2d 322 (1998).

IN GENERAL.

The Sentencing Reform Act does not govern the sentencing of capital defendants. State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 940 P.2d 1239 (1997).

CLOSING ARGUMENTS.

Prosecutor's closing argument for the death sentence at penalty phase of murder trial in which he referred to (1) the potential harm to other persons in prison, (2) the potential harm to trial witnesses, and (3) the theory of societal self-defense did not render the jury's verdict, that there were not sufficient mitigating circumstances to merit leniency, unconstitutional. Campbell v. Kincheloe, 829 F.2d 1453 (9th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 948, 109 S. Ct. 380, 102 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1988).

CRIMINAL HISTORY.

Defense counsel's decision not to object to admission of certified copies of a judgment and sentence indicating an exceptional sentence, verdict forms, and municipal court docket entries to prove defendant's prior criminal activity did not fall below an objective standard of reasonableness under prevailing professional norms because defendant could not show that any objection would have been granted by the trial court. Admission of these documents at the penalty phase of defendant's trial was proper, because the certified copies of the prior adjudication were sufficiently reliable to warrant admission. In re Pers. Restraint of Davis, 152 Wn.2d 647, 101 P.3d 1 (2004).

Following the conviction of defendant for aggravated first degree murder, first degree kidnapping, and first degree rape, admission during the sentencing phase of a police statement concerning his previous false imprisonment conviction, over and above the mere judgment and sentence for that crime, was unfairly prejudicial. State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 731, 24 P.3d 1006, cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1000, 122 S. Ct. 475, 151 L. Ed. 2d 389 (2001).

A sentencing jury is not limited to considering only those convictions which existed prior to the date of the crime for which a defendant is being tried. It is sufficient if the prior conviction occurred before the sentencing procedure has been completed. In re Brown, 143 Wn.2d 431, 21 P.3d 687 (2001).

Because the defendant offered no specific reasons why his Canadian convictions were constitutionally defective or unreliable, the convictions were properly admitted under this section. State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471, 14 P.3d 713 (2000).

The defendant's prior criminal convictions, both felony and misdemeanor, are admissible in the penalty phase. State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 940 P.2d 1239 (1997).

Juvenile convictions for both misdemeanors and felonies may be admitted as nonstatutory aggravating evidence in the sentencing phase of a capital trial. State v. Pirtle, 127 Wn.2d 628, 904 P.2d 245 (1995), cert. denied, 518 U.S. 1026, 116 S. Ct. 2568, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1084 (1996).

Additional facts contained in information about a prior conviction did not cause undue prejudice to the defendant. The information informed the jury that assault resulted in substantial bodily harm and involved the use of a deadly weapon. State v. Pirtle, 127 Wn.2d 628, 904 P.2d 245 (1995), cert. denied, 518 U.S. 1026, 116 S. Ct. 2568, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1084 (1996).

Admission of prior convictions does not necessitate a balancing test because such evidence is reasonably objective and reliable. State v. Brett, 126 Wn.2d 136, 892 P.2d 29 (1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1121, 116 S. Ct. 931, 133 L. Ed. 2d 858 (1996).

ER 609 does not apply when prior convictions are admissible as substantive evidence; the rule relates only to impeachment by evidence of a conviction. State v. Gentry, 125 Wn.2d 570, 888 P.2d 1105, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 843, 116 S. Ct. 131, 133 L. Ed. 2d 79 (1995).

Juvenile court adjudications of guilt are treated as "convictions" for several purposes, including criminal history. In re Lord, 123 Wn.2d 296, 868 P.2d 835, modified on other grounds, 123 Wn.2d 737, 870 P.2d 964 (1994).

FACTORS.

-- AGGRAVATING.

Defendant's argument that because defendant's future dangerousness is an aggravating factor rather than a mitigating factor, any argument regarding that issue at special sentencing proceeding was improper was rejected. Campbell v. Kincheloe, 829 F.2d 1453 (9th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 948, 109 S. Ct. 380, 102 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1988).

The prosecution may present at the sentencing phase any evidence relating to the aggravating factors set forth in the capital punishment statute if it would have been admissible at the guilt phase of the trial. State v. Bartholomew, 101 Wn.2d 631, 683 P.2d 1079 (1984).

-- MITIGATING.

Counsel was not ineffective for failing to present evidence of the inmate's mental deficiencies during sentencing because he made a strategic decision not to do so based on the potential for damaging rebuttal evidence, which was almost certain after the inmate admitted his deviant sexual feelings toward young girls. In addition, the expert witnesses did not agree on whether, or to what extent, the inmate's mental deficiencies affected his ability to conform to lawful behavior. In re Pers. Restraint of Elmore, 162 Wn.2d 236, 172 P.3d 335 (2007).

Evidence of the impact of the defendant's execution on third parties, including his family members, is not relevant evidence on the issue of mitigation, and it was not error for the trial court to exclude it. State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 940 P.2d 1239 (1997).

Regarding mitigating circumstances in capital cases, only those factors asserted by the defendant to be relevant should be included in the instruction to the jury. State v. Gentry, 125 Wn.2d 570, 888 P.2d 1105, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 843, 116 S. Ct. 131, 133 L. Ed. 2d 79 (1995).

Jury instruction adequately guided the jury as to the nature and function of "mitigating circumstances" even though the term itself was not specifically defined. State v. Harris, 106 Wn.2d 784, 725 P.2d 975 (1986), cert. denied, 480 U.S. 940, 107 S. Ct. 1592, 94 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1987).

Where defendant requested that the trial court not give the eight illustrative examples of mitigating circumstances provided in the statute, it was not error not to give them. State v. Jeffries, 105 Wn.2d 398, 717 P.2d 722, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 922, 107 S. Ct. 328, 93 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1986).

This statute, incorporated in jury instruction as a standard for mitigation, gave proper guidance to the jury, did not impose additional aggravating factors, and did not represent an unconstitutional evidentiary comment by the judge. State v. Campbell, 103 Wn.2d 1, 691 P.2d 929 (1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1094, 105 S. Ct. 2169, 85 L. Ed. 2d 526 (1985).

Failure of court to define "mitigating circumstance" for jury at sentencing phase of murder trial was not a constitutional error. State v. Bartholomew, 101 Wn.2d 631, 683 P.2d 1079 (1984).

The prosecution is entitled to rebut mitigating evidence produced by defendant, but only if the rebuttable value of the evidence outweighs its prejudicial effect. State v. Bartholomew, 101 Wn.2d 631, 683 P.2d 1079 (1984).

The authority under this section to consider "any relevant factors" is limited to mitigating factors only. State v. Bartholomew, 101 Wn.2d 631, 683 P.2d 1079 (1984).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

WASHINGTON LAW REVIEW.

Capital Punishment, Proportionality Review, and Claims of Fairness (With Lessons from Washington State)., 79 Wash. L. Rev. 775 (2004).

ALR.

Vulnerability of victim as aggravating factor under state sentencing guidelines. 73 ALR5th 383.

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.080 (2008)

§ 10.95.080. When sentence to death or sentence to life imprisonment shall be imposed

(1) If a jury answers affirmatively the question posed by RCW 10.95.060(4), or when a jury is waived as allowed by RCW 10.95.050(2) and the trial court answers affirmatively the question posed by RCW 10.95.060(4), the defendant shall be sentenced to death. The trial court may not suspend or defer the execution or imposition of the sentence.

(2) If the jury does not return an affirmative answer to the question posed in RCW 10.95.060(4), the defendant shall be sentenced to life imprisonment as provided in RCW 10.95.030(1).

HISTORY: 1981 c 138 § 8.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS
Constitutionality
Juveniles

CONSTITUTIONALITY.

Washington's death penalty statutes are constitutional, do not violate equal protection guarantees and are not void for vagueness. State v. Rice, 110 Wn.2d 577, 757 P.2d 889 (1988), cert. denied, 491 U.S. 910, 109 S. Ct. 3200, 105 L. Ed. 2d 707 (1989).

Mandatory statutory sentence of life imprisonment without possibility of parole, entered on a charge of aggravated murder in the first degree, did not amount to an unconstitutional restriction of the judiciary's sentencing power. State v. Hughes, 106 Wn.2d 176, 721 P.2d 902 (1986).

JUVENILES.

Neither the declination statute nor the death penalty statute authorizes imposition of the death penalty for crimes committed by juveniles. Without such authorization, a death sentence following conviction of aggravated first degree murder of a juvenile must be overturned. State v. Furman, 122 Wn.2d 440, 858 P.2d 1092 (1993).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR.

Application of death penalty to nonhomicide cases. 62 ALR5th 121.

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.090 (2008)

§ 10.95.090. Sentence if death sentence commuted, held invalid, or if death sentence established by chapter held invalid

If any sentence of death imposed pursuant to this chapter is commuted by the governor, or held to be invalid by a final judgment of a court after all avenues of appeal have been exhausted by the parties to the action, or if the death penalty established by this chapter is held to be invalid by a final judgment of a court which is binding on all courts in the state, the sentence for aggravated first degree murder if there was an affirmative response to the question posed by RCW 10.95.060(4) shall be life imprisonment as provided in RCW 10.95.030(1).

HISTORY: 1981 c 138 § 9.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

EVIDENTIARY ERROR.

A sentence that is found to be the product of "passion or prejudice" because of a garden variety evidentiary error should not be commuted to life imprisonment if a further proceeding could cure that error. Rupe v. Wood, 93 F.3d 1434 (9th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1142, 117 S. Ct. 1017, 136 L. Ed. 2d 894 (1997).

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

10 of 22 DOCUMENTS

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.100 (2008)

§ 10.95.100. Mandatory review of death sentence by supreme court -- Notice -- Transmittal -- Contents of notice -- Jurisdiction

Whenever a defendant is sentenced to death, upon entry of the judgment and sentence in the trial court the sentence shall be reviewed on the record by the supreme court of Washington.

Within ten days of the entry of a judgment and sentence imposing the death penalty, the clerk of the trial court shall transmit notice thereof to the clerk of the supreme court of Washington and to the parties. The notice shall include the caption of the case, its cause number, the defendant's name, the crime or crimes of which the defendant was convicted, the sentence imposed, the date of entry of judgment and sentence, and the names and addresses of the attorneys for the parties. The notice shall vest with the supreme court of Washington the jurisdiction to review the sentence of death as provided by this chapter. The failure of the clerk of the trial court to transmit the notice as required shall not prevent the supreme court of Washington from conducting the sentence review as provided by chapter 138, Laws of 1981.

HISTORY: 1981 c 138 § 10.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS
Constitutionality
Waiver

CONSTITUTIONALITY.
Statutory procedure set forth in RCW 10.95, which requires appellate review of a death sentence but does not require a general appeal, meets constitutional standards. State v. Dodd, 120 Wn.2d 1, 838 P.2d 86 (1992).

WAIVER.
A defendant may, consistent with RCW 10.95, waive his right of general review but may not waive statutory sentence review. State v. Dodd, 120 Wn.2d 1, 838 P.2d 86 (1992).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

WASHINGTON LAW REVIEW.
Capital Punishment, Proportionality Review, and Claims of Fairness (With Lessons from Washington State)., 79 Wash. L. Rev. 775 (2004).
Washington's comparative proportionality review: toward effective appellate review of death penalty cases under the Washington State Constitution. 64 Wash. L. Rev. 111.

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

11 of 22 DOCUMENTS

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.110 (2008)

§ 10.95.110. Verbatim report of trial proceedings -- Preparation -- Transmittal to supreme court -- Clerk's papers -- Receipt

(1) Within ten days after the entry of a judgment and sentence imposing the death penalty, the clerk of the trial court shall cause the preparation of a verbatim report of the trial proceedings to be commenced.

(2) Within five days of the filing and approval of the verbatim report of proceedings, the clerk of the trial court shall transmit such verbatim report of proceedings together with copies of all of the clerk's papers to the clerk of the supreme court of Washington. The clerk of the supreme court of Washington shall forthwith acknowledge receipt of these documents by providing notice of receipt to the clerk of the trial court, the defendant or his or her attorney, and the prosecuting attorney.

HISTORY: 1981 c 138 § 11.

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

12 of 22 DOCUMENTS

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.120 (2008)

§ 10.95.120. Information report -- Form -- Contents -- Submission to supreme court, defendant, prosecuting attorney

In all cases in which a person is convicted of aggravated first degree murder, the trial court shall, within thirty days after the entry of the judgment and sentence, submit a report to the clerk of the supreme court of Washington, to the defendant or his or her attorney, and to the prosecuting attorney which provides the information specified under subsections (1) through (8) of this section. The report shall be in the form of a standard questionnaire prepared and supplied by the supreme court of Washington and shall include the following:

(1) Information about the defendant, including the following:

(a) Name, date of birth, gender, marital status, and race and/or ethnic origin;

(b) Number and ages of children;

(c) Whether his or her parents are living, and date of death where applicable;

(d) Number of children born to his or her parents;

(e) The defendant's educational background, intelligence level, and intelligence quotient;

(f) Whether a psychiatric evaluation was performed, and if so, whether it indicated that the defendant was:

(i) Able to distinguish right from wrong;

(ii) Able to perceive the nature and quality of his or her act; and

(iii) Able to cooperate intelligently with his or her defense;

(g) Any character or behavior disorders found or other pertinent psychiatric or psychological information;

(h) The work record of the defendant;

(i) A list of the defendant's prior convictions including the offense, date, and sentence imposed; and

(j) The length of time the defendant has resided in Washington and the county in which he or she was convicted.

(2) Information about the trial, including:

(a) The defendant's plea;

(b) Whether defendant was represented by counsel;

(c) Whether there was evidence introduced or instructions given as to defenses to aggravated first degree murder, including excusable homicide, justifiable homicide, insanity, duress, entrapment, alibi, intoxication, or other specific defense;

(d) Any other offenses charged against the defendant and tried at the same trial and whether they resulted in conviction;

(e) What aggravating circumstances were alleged against the defendant and which of these circumstances was found to have been applicable; and

(f) Names and charges filed against other defendant(s) if tried jointly and disposition of the charges.

(3) Information concerning the special sentencing proceeding, including:

(a) The date the defendant was convicted and date the special sentencing proceeding commenced;

(b) Whether the jury for the special sentencing proceeding was the same jury that returned the guilty verdict, providing an explanation if it was not;

(c) Whether there was evidence of mitigating circumstances;

(d) Whether there was, in the court's opinion, credible evidence of the mitigating circumstances as provided in RCW 10.95.070;

(e) The jury's answer to the question posed in RCW 10.95.060(4);

(f) The sentence imposed.

(4) Information about the victim, including:

(a) Whether he or she was related to the defendant by blood or marriage;

(b) The victim's occupation and whether he or she was an employer or employee of the defendant;

(c) Whether the victim was acquainted with the defendant, and if so, how well;

(d) The length of time the victim resided in Washington and the county;

(e) Whether the victim was the same race and/or ethnic origin as the defendant;

(f) Whether the victim was the same sex as the defendant;

(g) Whether the victim was held hostage during the crime and if so, how long;

(h) The nature and extent of any physical harm or torture inflicted upon the victim prior to death;

(i) The victim's age; and

(j) The type of weapon used in the crime, if any.

(5) Information about the representation of the defendant, including:

(a) Date counsel secured;

(b) Whether counsel was retained or appointed, including the reason for appointment;

(c) The length of time counsel has practiced law and nature of his or her practice; and

(d) Whether the same counsel served at both the trial and special sentencing proceeding, and if not, why not.

(6) General considerations, including:

(a) Whether the race and/or ethnic origin of the defendant, victim, or any witness was an apparent factor at trial;

(b) What percentage of the county population is the same race and/or ethnic origin of the defendant;

(c) Whether members of the defendant's or victim's race and/or ethnic origin were represented on the jury;

(d) Whether there was evidence that such members were systematically excluded from the jury;

(e) Whether the sexual orientation of the defendant, victim, or any witness was a factor in the trial;

(f) Whether any specific instruction was given to the jury to exclude race, ethnic origin, or sexual orientation as an issue;

(g) Whether there was extensive publicity concerning the case in the community;

(h) Whether the jury was instructed to disregard such publicity;

(i) Whether the jury was instructed to avoid any influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor when considering its verdict or its findings in the special sentencing proceeding;

(j) The nature of the evidence resulting in such instruction; and

(k) General comments of the trial judge concerning the appropriateness of the sentence considering the crime, defendant, and other relevant factors.

(7) Information about the chronology of the case, including the date that:

(a) The defendant was arrested;

(b) Trial began;

(c) The verdict was returned;

(d) Post-trial motions were ruled on;

(e) Special sentencing proceeding began;

(f) Sentence was imposed;

(g) Trial judge's report was completed; and

(h) Trial judge's report was filed.

(8) The trial judge shall sign and date the questionnaire when it is completed.

HISTORY: 1981 c 138 § 12.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS
Abuse of writ
Contesting report
Errors
Review

ABUSE OF WRIT.

Inmate's third personal restraint petition (PRP) was dismissed under the abuse of writ doctrine because the inmate's prior attorneys had the requisite amount of experience, despite never having done a PRP case, and there was no newly discovered evidence, since all of the reports filed with the Washington supreme court under RCW 10.95.120 were considered. In re Pers. Restraint of Stenson, 153 Wn.2d 137, 102 P.3d 151 (2004).

CONTESTING REPORT.

When a trial court imposes the death penalty but that penalty is overturned, or the case is remanded for resentencing by an appellate court, the report of the trial judge is not required to be updated to reflect the change in the sentencing status of that defendant. State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 23 P.3d 1046, cert. denied, 534 U.S. 964, 122 S. Ct. 374, 151 L. Ed. 2d 285 (2001).

Defendant's rights were not violated by not giving him the opportunity to contest the report required by this section. State v. Jeffries, 105 Wn.2d 398, 717 P.2d 722, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 922, 107 S. Ct. 328, 93 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1986).

ERRORS.

Even assuming trial judge's report required by this section contained errors or omissions, it did not prejudice defendant. Jeffries v. Blodgett, 771 F. Supp. 1520 (W.D. Wash. 1991), aff'd, 974 F.2d 1179 (9th Cir. 1992), rev'd on other grounds, 988 F.2d 923 (9th Cir. 1993).

REVIEW.

In conducting a proportionality review, RCW 10.95.130(2) indicates that the Washington Supreme Court is obligated to compare a case only to cases in which reports have been filed with the supreme court under RCW 10.95.120. In re Pers. Restraint of Stenson, 153 Wn.2d 137, 102 P.3d 151 (2004).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

WASHINGTON LAW REVIEW.

Capital Punishment, Proportionality Review, and Claims of Fairness (With Lessons from Washington State)., 79 Wash. L. Rev. 775 (2004).

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.130 (2008)

§ 10.95.130. Questions posed for determination by Supreme Court in death sentence review -- Review in addition to appeal -- Consolidation of review and appeal

(1) The sentence review required by RCW 10.95.100 shall be in addition to any appeal. The sentence review and an appeal shall be consolidated for consideration. The defendant and the prosecuting attorney may submit briefs within the time prescribed by the court and present oral argument to the court.

(2) With regard to the sentence review required by chapter 138, Laws of 1981, the supreme court of Washington shall determine:

(a) Whether there was sufficient evidence to justify the affirmative finding to the question posed by RCW 10.95.060(4); and

(b) Whether the sentence of death is excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases, considering both the crime and the defendant. For the purposes of this subsection, "similar cases" means cases reported in the Washington Reports or Washington Appellate Reports since January 1, 1965, in which the judge or jury considered the imposition of capital punishment regardless of whether it was imposed or executed, and cases in which reports have been filed with the supreme court under RCW 10.95.120;

(c) Whether the sentence of death was brought about through passion or prejudice; and

(d) Whether the defendant was mentally retarded within the meaning of RCW 10.95.030(2).

HISTORY: 1993 c 479 § 3; 1981 c 138 § 13.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS
Constitutionality
Applicability
Arbitrariness
Criminal history
Evidence
Evidentiary error
Proportionality
Review
--Questions
--Waiver
Sentence
--Illustrative cases
--Not arbitrary
--Not excessive
--Proportionality
--Victim impact statement

CONSTITUTIONALITY.

The proportionality review mandated by subsection (2)(b) of this section is not void for vagueness under either the Eighth or Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution, nor under Wa. Const., Art. I, §§ 3 and 14. State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 940 P.2d 546 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1007, 118 S. Ct. 1192, 140 L. Ed. 2d 322 (1998).

In aggravated first degree murder trial, failure to require the jury to articulate what mitigating circumstances it found and how they were weighed against the aggravating factors did not violate defendant's constitutional rights. Jeffries v. Blodgett, 771 F. Supp. 1520 (W.D. Wash. 1991), aff'd, 974 F.2d 1179 (9th Cir. 1992), rev'd on other grounds, 988 F.2d 923 (9th Cir. 1993).

Statutory procedure set forth in RCW 10.95, which requires appellate review of a death sentence but does not require a general appeal, meets constitutional standards. State v. Dodd, 120 Wn.2d 1, 838 P.2d 86 (1992).

APPLICABILITY.

Proportionality is a special statutory proceeding that is conducted by the supreme court and there is no authority for a trial court to engage in a proportionality review in lieu of a special sentencing proceeding. State v. Elmore, 139 Wn.2d 250, 985 P.2d 289 (1999), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 837, 121 S. Ct. 98, 148 L. Ed. 2d 57 (2000).

ARBITRARINESS.

Death penalty statute adequately guards against arbitrary infliction of the death penalty. State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664, 683 P.2d 571 (1984).

CRIMINAL HISTORY.

A lack of criminal history does not by itself render a death sentence disproportionate. State v. Rice, 110 Wn.2d 577, 757 P.2d 889 (1988), cert. denied, 491 U.S. 910, 109 S. Ct. 3200, 105 L. Ed. 2d 707 (1989).

EVIDENCE.

The test to be applied in determining the sufficiency of the evidence to support the jury's verdict is whether after viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the prosecution, any rational trier of fact could have found sufficient evidence to justify the affirmative finding beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Rice, 110 Wn.2d 577, 757 P.2d 889 (1988), cert. denied, 491 U.S. 910, 109 S. Ct. 3200, 105 L. Ed. 2d 707 (1989).

Sufficient evidence justified jury's affirmative answer to the question whether the members of the jury were convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that there were not sufficient mitigating circumstances to merit leniency. State v. Rupe, 108 Wn.2d 734, 743 P.2d 210 (1987), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1061, 108 S. Ct. 2834, 100 L. Ed. 2d 934 (1988).

EVIDENTIARY ERROR.

A sentence that is found to be the product of "passion or prejudice" because of a garden variety evidentiary error should not be commuted to life imprisonment if a further proceeding could cure that error. Rupe v. Wood, 93 F.3d 1434 (9th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1142, 117 S. Ct. 1017, 136 L. Ed. 2d 894 (1997).

PROPORTIONALITY.

In conducting a proportionality review, RCW 10.95.130(2) indicates that the Washington supreme court is obligated to compare a case only to cases in which reports have been filed with the supreme court under RCW 10.95.120. In re Pers. Restraint of Stenson, 153 Wn.2d 137, 102 P.3d 151 (2004).

Defendant's death sentence was not disproportionate where the nature of the crime was as brutal and heinous as any considered by the court, his criminal history was extensive and demonstrated a pattern of violence, the jury found numerous aggravating factors, and his mitigating evidence did not convince the jury that he merited leniency. State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 940 P.2d 546 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1007, 118 S. Ct. 1192, 140 L. Ed. 2d 322 (1998).

The legislative guidelines contained in this chapter ensure proportionality in the first instance by focusing the jury on the crime and the defendant. On review, this section requires the court to determine whether the death sentence is "disproportionate" based on the broad range of "similar cases," as defined by the legislature. State v. Brett, 126 Wn.2d 136, 892 P.2d 29 (1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1121, 116 S. Ct. 931, 133 L. Ed. 2d 858 (1996).

Because there are no guidelines or procedures for carrying out the proportionality of sentence review, the defendant's due process rights were violated because he could not fully participate in this review; defendant's review failed to meet the due process requirements of U.S. Const., Amend. 14. Harris ex rel. Ramseyer v. Blodgett, 853 F. Supp. 1239 (W.D. Wash. 1994), aff'd, 64 F.3d 1432 (9th Cir. 1995).

Proportionality requires that a death sentence must not be affirmed where death sentences have not generally been imposed in similar cases, nor where the sentence has been wantonly and freakishly imposed. Occasional aberrational outcomes do not require a reversal, however, so long as the death sentence has been imposed generally in similar cases. State v. Rice, 110 Wn.2d 577, 757 P.2d 889 (1988), cert. denied, 491 U.S. 910, 109 S. Ct. 3200, 105 L. Ed. 2d 707 (1989).

REVIEW.

-- QUESTIONS.

Defendant's death sentence withstood the three appellate review questions mandated by this statute. State v. Campbell, 103 Wn.2d 1, 691 P.2d 929 (1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1094, 105 S. Ct. 2169, 85 L. Ed. 2d 526 (1985).

-- WAIVER.

The absence of a record fully developed through the adversarial process, as the result of defendant's guilty plea and waiver of the right to a general appeal, did not preclude the Supreme Court from making a reasoned decision on the statutory review questions. State v. Sagastegui, 135 Wn.2d 67, 954 P.2d 1311 (1998).

A defendant may, consistent with RCW 10.95, waive his right of general review but may not waive statutory sentence review. State v. Dodd, 120 Wn.2d 1, 838 P.2d 86 (1992).

SENTENCE.

-- ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

Statutory review performed in the inmate's direct appeal satisfied RCW 10.95.130 where the inmate failed to show that the court's review was so flawed that a complete miscarriage of justice occurred; the inmate had contended that the review was flawed because neither he nor the court had been provided accurate information about the pool of other similar cases and that at least 18 cases were missing; the court held that because precision was not required, the large number of cases that were available provided the court with a sufficient number to enable it to complete a valid and meaningful review. In re Pers. Restraint of Elmore, 162 Wn.2d 236, 172 P.3d 335 (2007).

In a capital murder case in which defendant had killed two prostitutes, the jury could have rationally found the mitigating circumstances insufficient to justify a grant of leniency; the jurors may well have shared the State's viewpoint that defendant's postarrest religious conversion was self-serving and his allocution offensively self-indulgent. State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 168 P.3d 359 (2007).

In light of the circumstances of the defendant's brutal murder of his stepdaughter, the jury's death sentence was affirmed. State v. Elmore, 139 Wn.2d 250, 985 P.2d 289 (1999), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 837, 121 S. Ct. 98, 148 L. Ed. 2d 57 (2000).

Evidence showing that defendant premeditatively and viciously assaulted, raped, and murdered a three-year-old boy and then shot and killed the child's mother and her friend justified the imposition of the death penalty. State v. Sagastegui, 135 Wn.2d 67, 954 P.2d 1311 (1998).

Death sentence sustained where the evidence showed that the defendant had a normal childhood, had high average intelligence, did not suffer from a brain dysfunction, and that the murders were committed in a brutal, calculated manner and the sole motive appeared to be financial gain. State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 940 P.2d 1239 (1997).

Considering the heinous nature of the crime, a rational trier of fact could have concluded that a difficult childhood and troubled family life did not constitute sufficient mitigation to deserve leniency. State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 940 P.2d 546 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1007, 118 S. Ct. 1192, 140 L. Ed. 2d 322 (1998).

In a brutal murder of a 12-year old child, there was sufficient evidence for a rational trier of fact to have found that leniency was not merited. State v. Gentry, 125 Wn.2d 570, 888 P.2d 1105, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 843, 116 S. Ct. 131, 133 L. Ed. 2d 79 (1995).

-- NOT ARBITRARY.

From record of defendant's case and proportionality evaluation of that record, court concluded that death penalty imposed upon defendant for double murder was not arbitrary nor imposed in wanton or freakish manner. State v. Benn, 120 Wn.2d 631, 845 P.2d 289, cert. denied, 510 U.S. 944 , 114 S. Ct. 382, 126 L. Ed. 2d 331 (1993).

-- NOT EXCESSIVE.

Death sentence was not excessive or disproportionate. State v. Lord, 117 Wn.2d 829, 822 P.2d 177 (1991), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 856, 113 S. Ct. 164, 121 L. Ed. 2d 112 (1992).

Death sentence was not excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases for defendant who murdered two bank tellers for the purpose of protecting or concealing his identity as part of a common scheme or plan during the course of a robbery. State v. Rupe, 108 Wn.2d 734, 743 P.2d 210 (1987), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1061, 108 S. Ct. 2834, 100 L. Ed. 2d 934 (1988).

Death penalty for contract killing was not excessive or disproportionate. State v. Harris, 106 Wn.2d 784, 725 P.2d 975 (1986), cert. denied, 480 U.S. 940, 107 S. Ct. 1592, 94 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1987).

Defendant's death sentence was not excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases or to the penalty of life imprisonment imposed upon his codefendant. State v. Kwan Fai Mak, 105 Wn.2d 692, 718 P.2d 407, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 995, 107 S. Ct. 599, 93 L. Ed. 2d 599 (1986).

-- PROPORTIONALITY.

In a capital murder case in which defendant had killed two prostitutes, consideration of defendant's prior crimes and his personal history did not suggest that his death sentence was excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases. State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 168 P.3d 359 (2007).

The existence of an analytically flawed federal district court decision holding that application of the statutorily required proportionality review procedure violates due process, was not a compelling reason to vacate defendant's death sentence, or to reconsider the proportionality review in his case. In re Benn, 134 Wn.2d 868, 952 P.2d 116 (1998); State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 23 P.3d 1046, cert. denied, 534 U.S. 964, 122 S. Ct. 374, 151 L. Ed. 2d 285 (2001).

-- VICTIM IMPACT STATEMENT.

Victim impact evidence is not irrelevant to the jury's decision in the penalty phase of a capital case and such evidence is subject to an ER 403 balancing test by the trial court. State v. Gentry, 125 Wn.2d 570, 888 P.2d 1105, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 843, 116 S. Ct. 131, 133 L. Ed. 2d 79 (1995).

SEATTLE UNIV. LAW REVIEW.

Comparative proportionality review: will the ends, will the means. 18 Seattle U. L. Rev. 593.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

WASHINGTON LAW REVIEW.

Capital Punishment, Proportionality Review, and Claims of Fairness (With Lessons from Washington State)., 79 Wash. L. Rev. 775 (2004).

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

14 of 22 DOCUMENTS

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.140 (2008)

§ 10.95.140. Invalidation of sentence, remand for resentencing -- Affirmation of sentence, remand for execution

Upon completion of a sentence review:

(1) The supreme court of Washington shall invalidate the sentence of death and remand the case to the trial court for resentencing in accordance with RCW 10.95.090 if:

(a) The court makes a negative determination as to the question posed by RCW 10.95.130(2)(a); or

(b) The court makes an affirmative determination as to any of the questions posed by RCW 10.95.130(2) (b), (c), or (d).

(2) The court shall affirm the sentence of death and remand the case to the trial court for execution in accordance with RCW 10.95.160 if:

(a) The court makes an affirmative determination as to the question posed by RCW 10.95.130(2)(a); and

(b) The court makes a negative determination as to the questions posed by RCW 10.95.130(2) (b), (c), and (d).

HISTORY: 1993 c 479 § 4; 1981 c 138 § 14.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

EVIDENTIARY ERROR.

A sentence that is found to be the product of "passion or prejudice" because of a garden variety evidentiary error should not be commuted to life imprisonment if a further proceeding could cure that error. Rupe v. Wood, 93 F.3d 1434 (9th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1142, 117 S. Ct. 1017, 136 L. Ed. 2d 894 (1997).

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.150 (2008)

§ 10.95.150. Time limit for appellate review of death sentence and filing opinion

In all cases in which a sentence of death has been imposed, the appellate review, if any, and sentence review to or by the supreme court of Washington shall be decided and an opinion on the merits shall be filed within one year of receipt by the clerk of the supreme court of Washington of the verbatim report of proceedings and clerk's papers filed under RCW 10.95.110. If this time requirement is not met, the chief justice of the supreme court of Washington shall state on the record the extraordinary and compelling circumstances causing the delay and the facts supporting such circumstances. A failure to comply with the time requirements of this subsection shall in no way preclude the ultimate execution of a sentence of death.

HISTORY: 1988 c 202 § 17; 1981 c 138 § 15.

NOTES:
SEVERABILITY -- 1988 C 202: See note following RCW 2.24.050.

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

16 of 22 DOCUMENTS

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.160 (2008)

---

§ 10.95.160. Death warrant -- Issuance -- Form -- Time for execution of judgment and sentence

(1) If a death sentence is affirmed and the case remanded to the trial court as provided in RCW 10.95.140(2), a death warrant shall forthwith be issued by the clerk of the trial court, which shall be signed by a judge of the trial court and attested by the clerk thereof under the seal of the court. The warrant shall be directed to the superintendent of the state penitentiary and shall state the conviction of the person named therein and the judgment and sentence of the court, and shall appoint a day on which the judgment and sentence of the court shall be executed by the superintendent, which day shall not be less than thirty nor more than ninety days from the date the trial court receives the remand from the supreme court of Washington.

(2) If the date set for execution under subsection (1) of this section is stayed by a court of competent jurisdiction for any reason, the new execution date is automatically set at thirty judicial days after the entry of an order of termination or vacation of the stay by such court unless the court invalidates the conviction, sentence, or remands for further judicial proceedings. The presence of the inmate under sentence of death shall not be required for the court to vacate or terminate the stay according to this section.

HISTORY: 1990 c 263 § 1; 1981 c 138 § 16.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS
Appeal
Date of execution
Stay of execution
Validity

APPEAL.

Trial court's order issuing death warrant did not affect substantial rights other than those adjudicated by the judgment imposing the death sentence, and thus appeal of the order was dismissed. State v. Campbell, 112 Wn.2d 186, 770 P.2d 620 (1989).

Appeal from death sentence suspends issuance of death warrant until the judgment is affirmed. State ex rel. Bird v. Superior Court, 30 Wn.2d 110, 190 P.2d 762 (1948).

Appeal from order of lower court setting day of execution affords no ground for stay of execution of the death sentence. State v. Seaton, 27 Wash. 120, 67 P. 572 (1902).

DATE OF EXECUTION.

Once a death warrant has issued and an initial date for execution is set, no further action need be taken by the trial court in order to reset this date. The date of execution will be reset automatically once the stay is lifted. In re Lord, 123 Wn.2d 737, 870 P.2d 964, cert. denied, 513 U.S. 849, 115 S. Ct. 146, 130 L. Ed. 2d 86 (1994).

The department of corrections will set a new execution date once a stay is lifted. No further judicial action is necessary for this date to be set. In re Lord, 123 Wn.2d 737, 870 P.2d 964, cert. denied, 513 U.S. 849, 115 S. Ct. 146, 130 L. Ed. 2d 86 (1994).

STAY OF EXECUTION.

The supreme court has broad discretion as to when an order lifting a stay should be entered. In re Lord, 123 Wn.2d 737, 870 P.2d 964, cert. denied, 513 U.S. 849, 115 S. Ct. 146, 130 L. Ed. 2d 86 (1994).

VALIDITY.

Warrant valid if issued on date authorizing act becomes effective. In re Boyce, 25 Wash. 612, 66 P. 54 (1901).

Death warrant is valid although issued under a law which be invalidated before execution. State ex rel. Campbell v. Superior Court, 25 Wash. 271, 65 P. 183 (1901).

Presence of date of execution in the death sentence will not affect the validity of the judgment. Timmerman v. Territory, 3 Wn. Terr. 445, 17 P. 624 (1888).

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

17 of 22 DOCUMENTS

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.170 (2008)

§ 10.95.170. Imprisonment of defendant

The defendant shall be imprisoned in the state penitentiary within ten days after the trial court enters a judgment and sentence imposing the death penalty and shall be imprisoned both prior to and subsequent to the issuance of the death warrant as provided in RCW 10.95.160. During such period of imprisonment, the defendant shall be confined in the segregation unit, where the defendant may be confined with other prisoners not under sentence of death, but prisoners under sentence of death shall be assigned to single-person cells.

HISTORY: 1983 c 255 § 1; 1981 c 138 § 17.

NOTES:
SEVERABILITY -- 1983 C 255: See RCW 72.74.900.

CROSS REFERENCES.
Convicted female persons, commitment and procedure as to death sentences: RCW 72.02.250.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

LOCATION OF CONFINEMENT.
Washington law does not provide a protected liberty interest regarding the location of a death row inmate's confinement. Jeffries v. Reed, 631 F. Supp. 1212 (E.D. Wash. 1986).

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

18.of.22.DOCUMENTS

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.180 (2008)

§ 10.95.180. Death penalty -- How executed

(1) The punishment of death shall be supervised by the superintendent of the penitentiary and shall be inflicted by intravenous injection of a substance or substances in a lethal quantity sufficient to cause death and until the defendant is dead, or, at the election of the defendant, by hanging by the neck until the defendant is dead. In any case, death shall be pronounced by a licensed physician.

(2) All executions, for both men and women, shall be carried out within the walls of the state penitentiary.

HISTORY: 1996 c 251 § 1; 1986 c 194 § 1; 1981 c 138 § 18.

NOTES:

SEVERABILITY -- 1996 C 251: "If any provision of this act or its application to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the remainder of the act or the application of the provision to other persons or circumstances is not affected." [1996 c 251 § 2.]

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS
Constitutionality
Options
Presumption of validity
Religious principles

CONSTITUTIONALITY.

Hanging is not cruel and unusual simply because it causes death, or because there may be some pain associated with death. Campbell v. Wood, 18 F.3d 662 (9th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1119, 114 S. Ct. 2125, 128 L. Ed. 2d 682 (1994).

Execution by hanging does not involve the unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain. Campbell v. Wood, 18 F.3d 662 (9th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1119, 114 S. Ct. 2125, 128 L. Ed. 2d 682 (1994).

Argument that Washington death penalty violates the Eighth Amendment prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment because it forces the defendant to choose the method of his own death, either by hanging or lethal injection, was rejected. Campbell v. Blodgett, 978 F.2d 1502 (9th Cir. 1994).

Giving defendant a choice between two methods of execution is not unconstitutional. State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664, 683 P.2d 571 (1984).

OPTIONS.

Defendant's refusal to exercise the option of lethal injection insures that death warrant will be fulfilled by judicial hanging. Campbell v. Wood, 18 F.3d 662 (9th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1119, 114 S. Ct. 2125, 128 L. Ed. 2d 682 (1994).

Defendant is not required to make any choice or to participate in the selection of the method to be employed in his execution. Campbell v. Wood, 18 F.3d 662 (9th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1119, 114 S. Ct. 2125, 128 L. Ed. 2d 682 (1994).

Death by hanging is not an unconstitutional punishment; moreover, the defendant would not be hanged if he selected the lethal injection alternative which is constitutional. In re Lord, 123 Wn.2d 296, 868 P.2d 835, modified on other grounds, 123 Wn.2d 737, 870 P.2d 964 (1994).

PRESUMPTION OF VALIDITY.

Traditional methods of execution selected by a state's legislature are presumed to be valid. Rupe v. Wood, 863 F. Supp. 1307 (W.D. Wash. 1994), aff'd in part and vacated in part, 93 F.3d 1434 (9th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1142, 117 S. Ct. 1017, 136 L. Ed. 2d 894 (1997).

RELIGIOUS PRINCIPLES.

Argument by defendant that this statute, permitting him to choose lethal injection instead of hanging as the method of execution, violated his religious principles by requiring him to participate in the decision on how he would die was rejected. State v. Campbell, 112 Wn.2d 186, 770 P.2d 620 (1989).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

GONZAGA LAW REVIEW.

Campbell v. Wood: the death penalty in Washington state: "hanging" on to a method of execution. 30 Gonz. L. Rev. 163.

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

19 of 22 DOCUMENTS

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.185 (2008)

§ 10.95.185. Witnesses

(1) Not less than twenty days prior to a scheduled execution, judicial officers, law enforcement representatives, media representatives, representatives of the families of the victims, and representatives from the family of the defendant who wish to attend and witness the execution, must submit an application to the superintendent. Such application must designate the relationship and reason for wishing to attend.

(2) Not less than fifteen days prior to the scheduled execution, the superintendent shall designate the total number of individuals who will be allowed to attend and witness the planned execution. The superintendent shall determine the number of witnesses that will be allowed in each of the following categories:

(a) No less than five media representatives with consideration to be given to news organizations serving communities affected by the crimes or by the commission of the execution of the defendant.

(b) Judicial officers.

(c) Representatives of the families of the victims.

(d) Representatives from the family of the defendant.

(e) Up to two law enforcement representatives. The chief executive officer of the agency that investigated the crime shall designate the law enforcement representatives.

After the list is composed, the superintendent shall serve this list on all parties who have submitted an application pursuant to this section. The superintendent shall develop and implement procedures to determine the persons within each of the categories listed in this subsection who will be allowed to attend and witness the execution.

(3) Not less than ten days prior to the scheduled execution, the superintendent shall file the witness list with the superior court from which the conviction and death warrant was issued with a petition asking that the court enter an order certifying this list as a final order identifying the witnesses to attend the execution. The final order of the court certifying the witness list shall not be entered less than five days after the filing of the petition.

(4) Unless a show cause petition is filed with the superior court from which the conviction and death warrant was issued within five days of the filing of the superintendent's petition, the superintendent's list, by order of the superior court, becomes final, and no other party has standing to challenge its appropriateness.

(5) In no case may the superintendent or the superior court order or allow more than seventeen individuals other than required staff to witness a planned execution.

(6) All witnesses must adhere to the search and security provisions of the department of corrections' policy regarding the witnessing of an execution.

(7) The superior court from which the conviction and death warrant was issued is the exclusive court for seeking judicial process for the privilege of attending and witnessing an execution.

(8) For purposes of this section:

(a) "Judicial officer" means: (i) The superior court judge who signed the death warrant issued pursuant to RCW 10.95.160 for the execution of the individual, (ii) the current prosecuting attorney or a deputy prosecuting attorney of the county from which the final judgment and sentence and death warrant were issued, and (iii) the most recent attorney of record representing the individual sentenced to death.

(b) "Law enforcement representatives" means those law enforcement officers responsible for investigating the crime for which the defendant was sentenced to death.

(c) "Media representatives" means representatives from news organizations of all forms of media serving the state.

(d) "Representatives of the families of the victims" means representatives from the immediate families of the victim(s) of the individual sentenced to death, including victim advocates of the immediate family members. Victim advocates shall include any person working or volunteering for a recognized victim advocacy group or a prosecutor-based or law enforcement-based agency on behalf of victims or witnesses.

(e) "Representative from the family of the defendant" means a representative from the immediate family of the individual sentenced to death.

(f) "Superintendent" means the superintendent of the Washington state penitentiary.

HISTORY: 1999 c 332 § 1; 1993 c 463 § 2.

NOTES:

POLICY -- 1993 C 463: "The legislature declares that, to the extent that the attendance of witnesses can be accommodated without compromising the security or the orderly operation of the Washington state penitentiary, it is the policy of the state of Washington to provide authorized individuals the opportunity to attend and witness the execution of an individual sentenced to death pursuant to chapter 10.95 RCW. Further, it is the policy of the state of Washington to provide for access to the execution to credentialed members of the media." [1993 c 463 § 1.]

SEVERABILITY -- 1993 C 463: "If any provision of this act or its application to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the remainder of the act or the application of the provision to other persons or circumstances is not affected." [1993 c 463 § 3.]

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR.

Validity of rules and regulations concerning viewing of execution of death penalty. 107 ALR5th 291.

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.190 (2008)

§ 10.95.190. Death warrant -- Record -- Return to trial court

(1) The superintendent of the state penitentiary shall keep in his or her office as part of the public records a book in which shall be kept a copy of each death warrant together with a complete statement of the superintendent's acts pursuant to such warrants.

(2) Within twenty days after each execution of a sentence of death, the superintendent of the state penitentiary shall return the death warrant to the clerk of the trial court from which it was issued with the superintendent's return thereon showing all acts and proceedings done by him or her thereunder.

HISTORY: 1981 c 138 § 19.

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

21 of 22 DOCUMENTS

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.200 (2008)

§ 10.95.200. Proceedings for failure to execute on day named

Whenever the day appointed for the execution of a defendant shall have passed, from any cause, other than the issuance of a stay by a court of competent jurisdiction, without the execution of such defendant having occurred, the trial court which issued the original death warrant shall issue a new death warrant in accordance with RCW 10.95.160. The defendant's presence before the court is not required. However, nothing in this section shall be construed as restricting the defendant's right to be represented by counsel in connection with issuance of a new death warrant.

HISTORY: 1990 c 263 § 2; 1987 c 286 § 1; 1981 c 138 § 20.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS
Appeal
Fixing new day

APPEAL.

Trial court's order issuing death warrant did not affect substantial rights other than those adjudicated by the judgment imposing the death sentence, thus appeal of the order was dismissed. State v. Campbell, 112 Wn.2d 186, 770 P.2d 620 (1989).

Orders concerning restraining execution are not appealable after passage of date set for execution. Grossi v. Long, 136 Wash. 133, 238 P. 983 (1925), overruled on other grounds, State v. Harris, 114 Wn.2d 419, 789 P.2d 60 (1990); State ex rel. Bird v. Superior Court, 30 Wn.2d 110, 190 P.2d 762 (1948).

FIXING NEW DAY.

Superior court judge may fix a new day when time of execution is passed. Craemer v. Washington State, 168 U.S. 124, 18 S. Ct. 1, 42 L. Ed. 407 (1897); State ex rel. Campbell v. Superior Court, 25 Wash. 271, 65 P. 183 (1901).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

ANALYSIS
Resentencing

RESENTENCING.

Resentencing following death sentence reprieve. AGO 1933-34, p. 296 (1934), AGO 1945-46, p. 428 (1945).

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

22 of 22 DOCUMENTS

ANNOTATED REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON
2008 by Matthew Bender & Company, Inc.,
a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All rights reserved.

 STATUTES CURRENT THROUGH 2008 REGULAR SESSION AND 2008 GENERAL ELECTION **
 ANNOTATIONS CURRENT THROUGH OCTOBER 2, 2008 ***

TITLE 10. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE
CHAPTER 10.95. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT -- AGGRAVATED FIRST DEGREE MURDER

GO TO REVISED CODE OF WASHINGTON ARCHIVE DIRECTORY

Rev. Code Wash. (ARCW) § 10.95.900 (2008)

§ 10.95.900. Severability -- 1981 c 138

If any provision of this act or its application to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the remainder of the act or the application of the provision to other persons or circumstances is not affected.

HISTORY: 1981 c 138 § 22.

USER NOTE: For more generally applicable notes, see notes under the first section of this heading, part, article, chapter or title.

LEGISLATIVE RESEARCH REPORT

FEBRUARY 23, 2009 REPORT NUMBER 09.135

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT IN THE U.S. AND IN ALASKA

PREPARED FOR REPRESENTATIVE MIKE CHENAULT

BY PATRICIA YOUNG, MANAGER

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT IN THE U.S. 2

Death Penalty States 2

Capital Crimes—Punishable by Death 2

Methods of Execution 3

Table 1: Authorized Methods of Execution 3

Conviction and Appeals 4

Recent State Action 4

HISTORY OF CAPITAL PUNISHMENT IN ALASKA 5

Summary 5

Capital Punishment in Alaska 5

Table 2: Executions in Alaska 7

Efforts to Reinstitute the Death Penalty in Alaska 7

Table 3: Bills to Reinstate the Death Penalty, 1959-2008 8

Table 4: Alaska Bills Pertaining to Capital Punishment, Details (1959-2008) 10

You asked for information on capital punishment in the United States and in Alaska. Specifically, you wished to know which states authorize capital punishment and by what methods, what crimes are capital offenses, and under what circumstances convictions may be appealed. You also asked for a history of the death penalty in both the Territory and State of Alaska, including information on when capital punishment was abolished and what attempts have been made to restore it in this state.

(907) 465-3991
(907) 465-3908 (fax)

Alaska Legislature
Legislative Research Services
w3.legis.state.ak.us/laa/research/research.php

State Capitol
Juneau, AK 99801

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT IN THE U.S.

DEATH PENALTY STATES

Thirty-six states, the U.S. military, and the U.S. government allow for capital punishment. States that authorize capital punishment are Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Washington, and Wyoming.

CAPITAL CRIMES—PUNISHABLE BY DEATH

As documented by the Death Penalty Information Center (DPIC), the death penalty in this country is almost exclusively reserved for the crime of first-degree murder—most often accompanied by aggravating circumstances, which vary by state.[1] Although a number of states list various other crimes as punishable by death, no one has been executed for a non-murder offense since the death penalty was reinstated in 1976.[2]

In addition to first-degree murder, laws in seven states authorize the death penalty for the rape of a child. In 2008, however, the U.S. Supreme Court held that the Eighth Amendment's cruel and unusual punishment clause prohibits the death penalty for the rape of a child where the crime did not result, and was not intended to result, in death.[3]

The DPIC identifies the following other non-murder offenses listed in state law as capital crimes:

- Treason (Arkansas, California, Colorado, Georgia, Illinois, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Washington)
- Aggravated kidnapping (Colorado, Idaho, Illinois, Missouri, Montana)
- Rape of a child (Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Montana, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Texas)
- Drug trafficking (Florida, Missouri)
- Aircraft hijacking (Georgia, Missouri)
- Placing a bomb near a bus terminal (Missouri)
- Espionage (New Mexico)

---

[1] The Death Penalty Information Center is a non-profit organization tracking all aspects of the capital punishment issue. The organization website, www.deathpenaltyinfo.org, contains extensive information.

[2] Alison M. Smith, "Capital Punishment: Constitutionality for Non-Homicide Crimes Such as Child Rape," Congressional Research Service Report, March 21, 2008.

[3] The decision in Kennedy v. Louisiana, 128 S.Ct. 2641 (2008), was a five-four split: Justice Kennedy delivered the majority opinion which was joined by Justices Stevens, Souter, Ginsburg, and Breyer; Justices Alito, Roberts, Scalia, and Thomas joined in a dissenting opinion.

- Aggravated assault by incarcerated, persistent felons or murderers (Montana).

METHODS OF EXECUTION

Thirty-five of the capital punishment states, the U.S. military and U.S. government authorize lethal injection as the method of execution; only one capital punishment state does not authorize the use of lethal injection.[4] A few states also authorize the use of other methods—electrocution, gas chamber, hanging, and firing squad. Nevertheless, lethal injection is by far the method most commonly used: in 2008, for example, of the 37 executions, 36 were carried out by lethal injection; only one was carried out by electrocution.[5]

Table 1: Authorized Methods of Execution

Method	Executions Since 1976	Authorization	Jurisdiction
Lethal Injection	974	35 states + U.S. Military and U.S. Government	Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado,Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Washington, Wyoming, U.S. Military, U.S. Government
Electrocution	155	9 states	Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, [Illinois], Kentucky, [Oklahoma], South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia
Gas Chamber	11	5 states (all have lethal injection as an alternative method)	Arizona, California, Maryland, Missouri, [Wyoming]
Hanging	3	2 states (all have lethal injection as an alternative method)	New Hampshire, Washington
Firing Squad	2	2 states (all have lethal injection as an alternative method)	Idaho, [Oklahoma], Utah  Utah offers the firing squad only for inmates who chose this method prior to its elimination as an option.

[1]Notes: States in [brackets] authorize the listed method only if a current method is found to be unconstitutional.

In Nebraska, electrocution was the sole method until the Nebraska Supreme Court ruled the method to be unconstitutional in February 2008. Currently, no other method is authorized.

Source: Bureau of Justice Statistice, Capital Punishment 2006; updated by Death Penalty Information Center.

In 2007, the U.S. Supreme Court agreed to hear a case from Kentucky on whether lethal injection violates the Eighth Amendment ban on cruel and unusual treatment. Because lethal injection is so commonly the method of choice, many capital punishment states unofficially instituted a moratorium on imposing the death penalty pending a decision in that case.[6] On April 16, 2008, the Court affirmed the constitutionality of Kentucky's three-drug protocol for carrying out lethal injections, finding that the procedure does not amount to cruel and unusual punishment under the Eighth Amendment. Although the Court's seven member majority decision is likely to lift the moratorium, the issue appears not fully resolved. As Justice Paul Stevens, noted in his concurring opinion,

[4] Electrocution is the only method authorized in Nebraska, and its use has been declared unconstitutional. Last year, the state supreme court ruled that electrocution violates the prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment. State v. Mata, 745 N.W.2d 229 (Nebraska, 2008).

[5] The Bureau of Justice Statistics reports that in 2008, nine states executed 37 prisoners (Texas—18; Virginia—4; Georgia and South Carolina each executed 3; Ohio, Florida, Mississippi, and Oklahoma each executed 2; and Kentucky executed 1 prisoner.) Of these executions, 36 were carried out by lethal injection; only one, in South Carolina, was carried out by electrocution. Bureau of Justice Statistics, "Advance Count of Executions: January 1, 2008 – November 30, 2008," www.ojp.usdoj.gov/bjs/pub/html/cp/2007/tables/cp07sta.htm.

> I assumed that our decision would bring the debate about lethal injection as a method of execution to a close. It now seems clear that it will not. The question whether a similar three-drug protocol may be used in other States remains open, and may well be answered differently in a future case on the basis of a more complete record. Instead of ending the controversy, I am now convinced that this case will generate debate not only about the constitutionality of the three-drug protocol, and specifically about the justification for the use of the paralytic agent, pancuronium bromide, but also about the justification for the death penalty itself.[7]

The decision in Baze, which upholds this aspect of states' abilities to carry out capital punishment, is a noted departure from recent decisions that have tended to narrow application of the death penalty. For example, in 2002, the Court found that executions of mentally retarded criminals constitute cruel and unusual punishment prohibited by the Eighth Amendment.[8] In 2005, the Court ruled that the death penalty for persons having committed capital crimes while under the age of 18 constitutes cruel and unusual punishment and is, likewise, constitutionally prohibited.[9] And, as mentioned earlier, in 2008, the Court held that the death penalty for the rape of a child where the crime did not result, and was not intended to result, in death is constitutionally prohibited.

CONVICTION AND APPEALS

The U.S. Supreme Court has long held the death penalty should be reserved for only the worst criminals, and because of the seriousness and irreversibility of the penalty, capital cases require special consideration and handling, with procedural and substantive protections that go far beyond those required for non-capital defendants. Capital cases involve separate proceedings for establishing guilt and for determining punishment with exhaustive review of both aggravating and mitigating factors. Following a decision in the trial court, direct appeal, post-conviction appellate review, and habeas corpus review at the federal level are all part of death penalty process. Appellate reviews based on due process rights, the right to effective assistance of counsel, and newly discovered evidence are the most common, and individual cases typically take several years to resolve.

RECENT STATE ACTION

As you know, the death penalty is a perennially hot topic, with fervid debate and passionately argued rationale and counter argument. It is not, therefore, surprising that state legislatures regularly consider measures on the issue, including contradictory measures. According to the Death Penalty Information Center, lawmakers in at least five states—Alaska, Georgia, New Hampshire, Virginia, and Utah—are in the process of considering bills to adopt or expand capital

---

[6] Baze v. Rees, 128 S.Ct. 1520 (U.S. 2008).

[7] Justice Stevens, concurring in the judgment, but writing separately, Baze v. Rees, 128 S.Ct. 1520, at 1542-43.

[8] Atkins v. Virginia, 122 S.Ct. 2242 (U.S. 2002).

[9] Roper v. Simmons, 125 S.Ct. 1183 (U.S. 2005).

punishment provisions. Lawmakers in at least 15 states are considering bills to limit or abolish capital punishment. Among those states, bills in Colorado, Kansas, Maryland, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Mexico, and Washington would abolish the death penalty. The Death Penalty Information Center notes that the extreme cost of the death penalty is a factor for many of these states.

HISTORY OF CAPITAL PUNISHMENT IN ALASKA

SUMMARY

Although records are incomplete, it appears that capital punishment was condoned, if not legal, in Alaska from the time of its purchase from Russia in 1867. The available historical records suggest that seven persons were hanged by the army or miners' courts between 1869 and 1899. After 1900, when criminal and civil codes had been established for the Territory, another eight persons were hanged for crimes deemed to warrant death. In 1957, the Territorial Legislature abolished capital punishment, citing concern that innocent persons could be executed.

Since that time, Alaska lawmakers in 11 Legislatures have considered 23 bills pertaining to the issue. Nineteen bills died without reaching a floor vote. Four passed to the other chamber where all died in committee. The bill advancing the furthest was SB 60 (1997), calling for a statewide advisory vote. After passing the Senate, the House Judiciary Committee offered a substitute that would provide the voters with a comparison of the estimated total costs of a capital trial through execution with those of a similar case resulting in life imprisonment without parole. The bill died with a failed attempt to discharge it from the House Finance Committee. Outside of the legislature, a ballot initiative was certified by the Division of Elections in 1985, but it failed to make the ballot because of insufficient public support.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT IN ALASKA

After its purchase from Russia in 1867, Alaska was administered by the U.S. Army and later by the U.S. Navy until passage of the Organic Act of 1884, by which Congress extended the mining laws of the United States and the Oregon Code of Laws, "so far as they may be applicable" to the district of Alaska.[10] According to Carter's Annotated Alaska Codes published in 1907, the laws regarding death warrants and designating the procedures for execution came from the laws of Oregon—presumably by virtue of the Organic Act. The Organic Act also provided for a governor and a court system. The more pertinent death penalty laws, however—those providing that an individual found guilty of murder in the first degree, or murder occasioned by obstruction of, or damage to, a railroad would be put to death unless the jury returned a verdict specifically qualifying that the sentence should be "without capital punishment"—appear to have been derived from laws in Ohio, and the exact date of their incorporation is uncertain.[11] We know, however, that Congress made provisions for the rights-of-way for railroads in Alaska in 1898; in 1899, a criminal code was established; and in 1900, a civil code.

[10] Information from Robert DeArmond's, "Alaska: 1867-1959," in Alaska: Blue Book 1973, first edition, 141-154.

[11] See Attachment A, which includes pertinent sections from the following sources: Compilation of the Acts of Congress and Treaties Relating to Alaska from March 30, 1867 to March 3, 1905 (known as the Charlton Code), published in 1906; Carter's Annotated Alaska Codes (known as the Carter Code), published in 1907; Compiled Laws of Alaska (CLA) 1913; Compiled Laws of Alaska, 1933; the Alaska Compiled Laws Annotated (ACLA), 1949; and Chapter 132 Session Laws of Alaska, 1957.

Regardless of the exact source or date of inception, the death penalty was used early in Alaska's history. Although records are sketchy and informal, it appears that capital punishment was condoned, if not legal, in Alaska from the time of its purchase from Russia in 1867. The available historical records suggest that seven persons were hanged by the army or miners' courts between 1869 and 1899.[12] Another eight persons were hanged for crimes deemed to warrant death between the advent of criminal and civil codes in Alaska and the abolition of capital punishment in 1957.[13]

The Legislative Library has no record of the debate on the elimination of the death penalty. An Associated Press article published following the bill's passage in the House in 1957, however, suggests that Warren Taylor, the bill's primary sponsor, was concerned about the possibility of individuals being unjustly executed. According to a more recent news article, a "significant basis" for the bill was the uneven application of the penalty—"three-fourths of the people hanged in Alaska this century were members of racial minorities, even though minorities accounted for only about one-fourth of the murders."[14]

Table 2, on the following page, represents a compilation of the historical information available on executions in Alaska. The information has been derived from documents provided by the Historical Collections within the Alaska State Library and from information found in William R. Hunt's Golden Places: The History of Alaska-Yukon Mining, published by the National Park Service.

[12] Attachment B contains three items. Items compiled by the Historical Collections of the Alaska State Library include a letter from Alaska Superior Court Judge Gerald Williams dated May 23, 1977, regarding hangings prior to 1900, and a list of hangings in Alaska by date, source unknown. The third document—and excerpt from William R. Hunt's Golden Places: The History of Alaska-Yukon Mining, With Particular Reference to Alaska's National Parks (Anchorage: National Park Service, 1990), chapter 16—describes the hanging of Martin Severts by miners isolated in Lituya Bay during the winter of 1899. The incident became the basis for Jack London's "The Unexpected," first published in 1906.

[13] Attachment C contains two items compiled by the Historical Collections of the Alaska State Library: a letter from Charles J. Zibulka to the curator of the Alaska State Museum and Historical Library, dated August 10, 1965, and a table listing executed persons from 1902 forward, source unknown.

[14] Attachment D contains an Associated Press news article, "House Votes to Abolish Alaska Death Penalty," published February 22, 1957; a transcript of that article; and Averil Lerman's," Death's Double Standard: Territorial Alaska's Experience with Capital Punishment Showed Race and Money Mattered," published May 1, 1994, in the Anchorage Daily News.

Table 2: Executions in Alaska

Date	Name	Race	Sex	Location
1869	Scutdoo	Indian	male	Wrangell
1869	unknown	Indian	male	Wrangell
1877	Boyd	Caucasian	male	Wrangell
1882	Sad Kajun	Indian	male	Juneau
1882	Kakusakuch Kajun	Indian	male	Juneau
1898	unknown	unknown	male	Valdez
1899	Martin Severts	Caucasian	male	Lituya Bay
1902	Fred Hardy	Caucasian	male	Nome
1903	Homer Bird	Caucasian	male	Sitka
1921	Mailo P. Segura	Immigrated from Montenegro; presumed Caucasian	male	Fairbanks
1921	Hamilton	Indian	male	Fairbanks
1929	Constantine Beaver	Indian	male	Fairbanks
1939	Nelson Charles	Indian	male	Juneau
1948	Austin A. Nelson	African-American	male	Juneau
1950	Eugene LaMoore	African-American	male	Juneau

Sources: Holdings of the Alaska State Library, Historical Collections; and information in William R. Hunt's Golden Places: The History of Alaska-Yukon Mining, With Particular Reference to Alaska's National Parks (Anchorage: National Park Service, 1990), chapter 16.

EFFORTS TO REINSTITUTE THE DEATH PENALTY IN ALASKA

Since 1957, lawmakers in 11 Alaska Legislatures have considered 23 bills pertaining to the issue. The first attempt to reinstate capital punishment came in 1974; the most recent was in 1999. Seven bills proposed placing an advisory vote before the public asking whether the legislature should enact a death penalty law.[15] All 16 of the bills to authorize the death penalty specified murder in the first degree as a capital felony; three of those would also have authorized the death penalty for the murder of a child under certain aggravating circumstances.

Of the 23 bills introduced, 18 died in committee without a floor vote of the originating body (13 died without a hearing or in the first committee; six died in the second committee). Of the five bills that reached a floor vote, one failed (HB 675 in 1974) and four passed the originating body but failed to reach the floor of the other body.[16] Three of the bills that passed one chamber proposed only that advisory votes be placed before the public. The following table provides a brief overview of these bills.

[15] Several of the other bills contained provisions for advisory votes, but in those, the advisory vote concerned the effective date of the reinstitution of capital punishment.

[16] House Bill 675 failed to pass the House in 1974. Bills that passed out of their originating bodies were HB 235 in 1983; CSSB 17 (Jud)(ct rules & efds fld) in 1990; CSSSSB 52 (Jud) in 1996; and HB 60 in 1997. In both 1990 and 1997, attempts to discharge the bills from committees failed.

Table 3: Bills to Reinstate the Death Penalty, 1959 - 2008

Legislature	Bill	Sponsors	Provisions	Final Status
8th Legislature 1973 - 1974	HB 675	SAYLORS	Authorizing death penalty for certain murders	failed House
12th Legislature 1981-1982	SB 73	BRADLEY	Classifying 1st degree murder as a capital felony and establishing sentencing procedures	(S) STA
	HB 458	HURLBERT	Authorizing capital punishment, classifying murder in the 1st degree as a capital felony, and establishing sentencing procedures	(H) JUD
13th Legislature 1983-1984	SB 121	PETTYJOHN, Kelly, Fischer P, Faiks	Authorizing capital punishment, classifying murder in the 1st degree as a capital felony, and establishing sentencing procedures	(S) JUD
	HB 140	PESTINGER, Ward, Flood, Liska, Shultz	Authorizing capital punishment, classifying murder in the 1st degree as a capital felony, and establishing sentencing procedures	(H) FIN
	HB 235	BUSSELL, Uehling, Liska, Shultz	Authorizing an advisory vote on the death penalty for 1st degree murder	(S) STA
14th Legislature 1985-1986	SB 119	FISCHER, P, Kelly, DeVries, Coghill, Faiks, Abood	Authorizing capital punishment, classifying murder in the 1st degree as a capital felony, and establishing sentencing procedures	(S) HESS
	HB 163	PETTYJOHN, Jenkins, Shultz, Taylor, Marrou, Gruenberg	Authorizing capital punishment, classifying murder in the 1st degree as a capital felony, and establishing sentencing procedures	(H) HESS
15th Legislature 1987-1988	SB 7	ABOOD, Kelly, Faiks, Fischer, P	Authorizing capital punishment, classifying murder in the 1st degree as a capital felony, and establishing sentencing procedures	(S) JUD
	SB 31	FISCHER, P, Kelly, Faiks	Authorizing capital punishment, classifying murder in the 1st degree as a capital felony, and establishing sentencing procedures	(S) HESS
16th Legislature 1989-1990	SB 17	FISCHER, P, Kelly, Pearce, Halford, Faiks	Authorizing capital punishment, classifying murder in the 1st degree as a capital felony, and establishing sentencing procedures; directing an advisory vote on whether the capital punishment law should take effect	(H) JUD
17th Legislature 1991-1992	SB 13	FISCHER, P, Frank, Pearce, Halford	Providing for an advisory vote on capital punishment	(S) FIN
18th Legislature 1993-1994	SB 127	(S) Judiciary	Authorizing capital punishment, classifying 1st degree murder as a capital felony; establishing sentencing procedures; authorizing an advisory vote on instituting capital punishment	(S) JUD
	HB 162	SANDERS, Olberg, Bunde, Kott, Vezey, James	Authorizing capital punishment, classifying 1st degree murder as a capital felony; establishing sentencing procedures; authorizing an advisory vote on instituting capital punishment	(H) FIN
19th Legislature 1995-1996	SB 52	TAYLOR, Pearce, Rokeberg, Kohring	Providing for an advisory vote on capital punishment	(H) FIN
	HB 45	SANDERS, Kohring	Authorizing capital punishment, classifying 1st degree murder as a capital felony, and establishing sentencing procedures; authorizing an advisory vote on instituting capital punishment	(H) STA
	HB 481	MASEK, Kohring, Ogan	Authorizing capital punishment, classifying 1st degree murder as a capital felony, and allowing the imposition of the death penalty when certain of those murders are committed against children; establishing sentencing procedures; and amending certain Rules of Criminal and Appellate Procedure	(H) JUD
20th Legislature 1997-1998	SB 60	TAYLOR, Pearce	Providing for an advisory vote on capital punishment	(H) FIN
	HB 131	SANDERS, Rokeberg, Kohring	Providing for an advisory vote on capital punishment	(H) JUD
	HB 166	MASEK, Kohring	Authorizing capital punishment, classifying 1st degree murder as a capital felony, and allowing the imposition of the death penalty when certain of those murders are committed against children; establishing sentencing procedures; and amending certain Rules of Criminal and Appellate Procedure	(H) JUD
21st Legislature 1999-2000	HB 20	KOHRING	Providing for an advisory vote on capital punishment	(H) STA
	HB 48	SANDERS	Providing for an advisory vote on capital punishment	(H) STA
	HB 75	MASEK, Kohring	Relating to murder; authorizing capital punishment, classifying 1st degree murder as a capital felony, and allowing the imposition of the death penalty when certain of those murders are committed against children; establishing sentencing procedures; and amending certain Rules of Criminal and Appellate Procedure	(H) JUD

Source: House and Senate Journals and Final Status of Bills and Resolutions, various years.

Table 4, on the following page, is a more detailed description of bills that have been before the Alaska legislature. It shows the measures introduced and provides a brief synopsis and the major provisions of each bill. Identical bills introduced in 1981 (HB 458 and SB 73) served as the basis for most of the subsequent proposals.

One additional attempt to bring the issue before the voters began on September 16, 1985, when the Division of Elections certified a ballot initiative proposed by Representative Fritz Pettyjohn, former Representative Sam Pestinger, and William Moffatt. In order to have the initiative appear on the 1988 primary ballot, supporters needed 21,317 signatures on file by October 9, 1986. By that date, supporters had collected only 14,245 signatures, and so the initiative did not appear on the ballot.

We hope you find this information to be useful. If you have questions, need additional information, or would like copies of the various measures, please let us know.

Table 4: ALASKA BILLS PERTAINING TO CAPITAL PUNISHMENT, Details (1959-2008)

Eighth Legislature, 1973 - 1974

House Bill 675

Prime Sponsor: A.M. Saylors

Referred to House Judiciary; committee substitute passed Judiciary; failed to pass House.

(CS made minor text changes).

- Mandated the death penalty for first degree murder if the murder was 1) intentional and carried out under an agreement; 2) the victim was a peace officer intentionally killed in the course of duty; 3) the murder was committed during the commission or attempted commission of robbery under AS 11.15.240, kidnapping under AS 11.15.260, rape, or burglary under 11.20.080-130; 4) the convicted person was, at the time of the murder, confined in prison or had escaped from prison; or 5) the victim was a witness to a crime who was murdered for the purpose of preventing his or her testimony in a criminal proceeding.
- Changed Rule 35, Rules of Criminal Procedure, to eliminate the power of the court to reduce sentences in the case of certain murder convictions.

Twelfth Legislature, 1981 - 1982

Senate Bill 73

Prime Sponsor: Brad Bradley

Referred to Senate State Affairs and Judiciary; did not pass out of State Affairs.

- Classifed murder in the first degree as a capital felony punishable by a prison term of 20-99 yrs or death.
- Set procedure for automatic review by the supreme court for capital punishment sentences and listed determinations to be made by the court, including whether sentence was imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice or other arbitrary factor; the evidence supported the finding of an aggravating factor; and the sentence was excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases. If the judgment of conviction and death sentence was upheld, the court would specify the time, place, and manner of execution.
- Set out the sentencing procedure for a capital felony, which included a separate proceeding before a jury including any evidence presented to the jury as to mitigating or aggravating factors the court considered to have probative value, followed by an advisory sentence by a jury which would include findings as to whether aggravating factors existed to justify the death sentence, mitigating factors existed which outweighed the aggravating factors and whether the sentence should be imprisonment or death. The court, after considering evidence and the advisory sentence would impose sentence. If it was death, the court would make written findings of aggravating and/or mitigating factors considered.
- Defined the following as aggravating factors: defendant's conduct manifested deliberate cruelty in that it involved torture or aggravated battery; the conduct created a risk of imminent physical injury to three or more persons, other than accomplices; defendant had a prior felony conviction involving the use of violence; defendant committed the offense pursuant to an agreement for gain; defendant was on release for another felony charge or conviction having assault as an element; defendant knowingly directed the offense at an active or former officer of the court, judicial officer, prosecuting attorney, law enforcement officer, correctional employee, or fireman because of or during official duty; or defendant was a member of an organized group and the offense was committed to further the group's criminal objectives.
- Defined the following as mitigating factors: defendant committed the offense under some degree of duress, coercion, threat or complusion insufficient to constitute a defense, but which affected his conduct; the conduct of a youthful defendant was influenced by a more mature person; defendant had provocation from the victim; or defendant assisted authorities detect or apprehend other persons who committed the offense.

House Bill 458 Text was the same as Senate Bill 73.

Prime Sponsor: Vern Hurlbert

Referred to House Judiciary; did not pass out of committee.

Table 4: ALASKA BILLS PERTAINING TO CAPITAL PUNISHMENT, Details (1959-2008)

Thirteenth Legislature, 1983 - 1984

Senate Bill 121 Text was the same as Senate Bill 73, 1981, with the exception listed below.

Prime Sponsor: Fritz Pettyjohn

Co-Sponsors: Tim Kelly, Paul Fischer, and Jan Faiks

Referred to Senate Judiciary and Finance; did not pass out of Judiciary.

The jury imposed sentence rather than issuing an advisory sentence for the court's imposition of sentence.

House Bill 140 Text was the same as SB 73, 1981.

Prime Sponsor: Sam Pestinger

Co-Sponsors: Jerry Ward, Joe Flood, John Liska, Dick Shultz

Referred to House Judiciary and Finance; committee substitute passed Judiciary; did not pass out of Finance.

CSHB 140(Jud) Added the following provisions:

- A person convicted of a capital offense may not be released on bail before sentencing or pending appeal.
- Transferred responsibility for issuing the time, place and manner of execution from the supreme court to the commissioner of corrections.
- Gave defendant a choice of execution by lethal injection or by firing squad.
- Stated an execution by firing squad would be carried out at a state prison by a firing squad of six peace officers.
- Stated that the commissioner of corrections in consultation with a physician would select a method of injection and a drug or combination of drugs for use in an execution by lethal injection.
- Stated that the commissioner could invite up to 9 citizens 19 years of age or older to attend the execution, including the prosecuting and defense attorney, relatives, friends or religious representatives designated by the defendant. No more than 6 media members could attend and were to serve as a pool for other members of the media; and that photographic or recording equipment would not be allowed until the site was restored to an orderly condition.
- Stated that if, after sentence was imposed, the defendant was found to be incompetent or pregnant, the court and attorneys would be notified and the execution of sentence would be stayed pending further order of the court. If pregnant, the death sentence would be stayed until the defendant was no longer pregnant. At that time the court would issue another warrant specifying a date of execution not less than 30 days nor more than 60 days after the date of the warrant. If found to be incompetent, an order for commitment as provided under AS 12.47.110 would be issued. If competent, the supreme court would issue another warrant specifying the date of execution not less than 30 days nor more than 60 days after the date of the warrant.

House Bill 235

Prime Sponsor: Charlie Bussell

Co-Sponsors: Rick Uehling, John Liska, Dick Shultz

Passed the House; referred to Senate State Affiars and Judiciary; did not pass out of Senate State Affairs.

Provided for an advisory vote at the next election on whether the legislature should enact a law providing for capital punishment for murder in the first degree.

Table 4: ALASKA BILLS PERTAINING TO CAPITAL PUNISHMENT, Details (1959-2008)

Fourteenth Legislature, 1985 - 1986

Senate Bill 119 Text was the same as CS HB 140 (Jud), 1983, with the provision below added.

Prime Sponsor: Paul Fischer

Co-Sponsors: Tim Kelly, Ann DeVries, Jack Coghill, Jan Faiks, and Mitch Abood

Referred to Health, Education, and Social Services, Judiciary and Finance; did not pass out of Health, Education, and Social Services.

Added a provision for an advisory vote at the next election on whether or not capital punishment for murder in the first degree should go into effect 08/15/87.

House Bill 163 Text was the same as Senate Bill 73, 1981, with the three exceptions listed below.

Prime Sponsor: Fritz Pettyjohn

Co-Sponsors: Roger Jenkins, Dick Shultz, Robin Taylor, Andre Marrou, Max Gruenberg

Referred to House Health, Education, and Social Services, Judiciary and Finance; did not pass out of Health Education, and Social Services.

- The jury imposed sentence rather than issuing an advisory sentence for the court's imposition of sentence.
- If the death penalty was imposed, the defendant was considered to have applied for modification of the verdict or findings under Criminal Rule 35.
- The execution would be carried out at a state correctional facility by either hanging or by continuous, intravenous administration of a lethal dose of sodium thiopental.

Fifteenth Legislature, 1987 - 1988

Senate Bill 7 Text was practically the same as CS HB 140(Jud), 1983, with the exceptions listed below.

Prime Sponsor: Mitch Abood

Co-Sponsors: Tim Kelly, Jan Faiks, Paul Fischer

Referred to Senate Health, Education, and Social Services, Judiciary, and Finance; did not pass out of Judiciary.

- Stated that death warrant was to specify date of execution which was to be no less than 30 nor more than 60 days after the date of the warrant.
- Omitted the guidelines by which the firing squad would be selected and the form of lethal injection would be determined. Simply stated that regulations were to be adopted.
- Omitted the guidelines concerning attendance at executions. Simply stated that regulations were to be adopted.
- Changed the aggravating factors to be considered to the following: defendant's conduct manifested deliberate cruelty in that it involved sexual assault in the first degree, kidnapping or assault in the first degree; defendant's conduct caused the death of two or more persons, other than accomplices; defendant had a prior conviction for murder; defendant knowingly directed the conduct at the President of the U.S. or governor of the state; defendant knowingly directed the conduct at a law enforcement, judicial officer, or correctional officer during or because of official duties; defendant killed a child 9 years of age or younger during the commission of the offense; defendant committed the offense under an agreement for gain; defendant committed the offense while avoiding lawful arrest or escaping from lawful confinement; or defendant committed the offense after escaping from the lawful custody of a peace officer or place of lawful confinement.

Table 4: ALASKA BILLS PERTAINING TO CAPITAL PUNISHMENT, Details (1959-2008)

Fifteenth Legislature (continued)

CSSB 7(HESS) Added the following provisions.

- Amended AS 11.31.100(d) and AS 11.31.110(c) to include capital felonies in the definition of class A felonies
- Inserted the guidelines from CSHB 140 (Jud) by which the firing squad would be selected and the form of lethal injection would be determined.
- Inserted the guidelines from CSHB 140(Jud) concerning attendance at executions.
- Made the following revisions to the list of aggravating factors: 1) added torture and aggravated battery to the list of actions manifesting deliberate cruelty; 2) added a prior conviction for a felony involving the use of violence to the factor citing prior murder convictions; 3) added prosecuting attorneys and firemen to the list of people the defendant may have knowingly directed the offense at; 4) added defendant's conduct created a risk of imminent physical injury to 3 or more persons other than accomplices; 5) deleted the factor citing the killing of a child of 9 years of age or younger; and 6) revised the factors concerning the committing the offense while avoiding arrest or escaping from confinement to say that the defendant was on release for another felony charge or conviction having assault as a necessary element. All these revisions made the list of aggravating factors practically the same as those in CS HB 140 (Jud).
- Added a provision for an advisory vote at the next election on whether or not capital punishment for murder in the first degree should go into effect 08/15/89

Senate Bill 31 Text was the same as CSHB 140(Jud), 1983, with the following addition.

Prime Sponsor: Paul Fischer

Co-Sponsors: Tim Kelly and Jan Faiks

Referred to Senate Health, Education, and Social Services, Judiciary and Finance; did not pass out of Health, Education, and Social Services.

Added a provision for an advisory vote at the next election on whether or not capital punishment for murder in the first degree should go into effect 08/15/89

Sixteenth Legislature, 1989 - 1990

Senate Bill 17 Although arranged differently, text of the original version was practically the same as CSSB 7 (HESS) 1987, with the following additions.

Prime Sponsor: Paul Fischer

Co-Sponsors: Tim Kelly, Drue Pearce, Rick Halford and Jan Faiks

CSSB 17 (Jud) (ct rules & efds fld) passed the Senate; referred to House Judiciary and Finance; failed to pass Judiciary.

- Amended AS 12.30.020(a) to exclude a capital felony from the requirement of bail and release.
- Amended AS 12.30.020(a) to exclude persons charged with a capital felony from the provision prohibiting new charges against a defendant who remains incompetent for five years after the charges have been dismissed under the subsection.
- In the section regarding the review of judgment of conviction, added to the issues the court shall determine "any other issue the defendant may raise as a point on appeal."
- Added sections regarding the applicability of various sections of the bill to criminal and appellate rules.

CSSB 17 (Jud)

- Added a section of Legislative Findings
- Added a section stating that it was up to the prosecuting attorney to determine whether or not to seek the death penalty. If the death penalty was to be sought, the court, defendant and defendant's counsel were to be notified within 10 days of arraignment.
- Deleted the section providing for execution by firing squad.

CSSB 17 (Jud)(ct rules & efds fld)

- Deleted the sections regarding the applicability of the bill to criminal and appellate rules.
- Deleted the sections regarding the effective dates.

Table 4: ALASKA BILLS PERTAINING TO CAPITAL PUNISHMENT, Details (1959-2008)

Seventeenth Legislature, 1991 - 1992

Senate Bill 13

Prime Sponsor: Paul Fischer

Co-Sponsors: Steve Frank, Drue Pearce and Rick Halford

Referred to Senate Judiciary and Finance; did not pass out of Finance.

Provided for an advisory vote at the next general election on whether the legislature should enact a law providing for capital punishment for murder in the first degree.

Eighteenth Legislature, 1993 - 1994

House Bill 162 Text was practically the same as CSSB 17 (JUD) (ct rules & efds fld), 1989, with the following changes.

Prime Sponsor: Jerry Sanders

Co-Sponsor: Harley Olberg

Referred to House Judiciary and Finance; did not pass out of Finance.

- Omitted sections amending AS 11.31.100(d) to replace "murder in the first degree" with "capital felony" and omitted amending AS 11.31.110(c).
- Added amendment to AS 12.55.025(i) to "include determining if a sentence of death should be imposed under AS 12.58."
- Required a 99-year sentence for defendants convicted of murder in the 1st degree but not sentenced to death if 1) the conviction was for the murder of a peace officer, firefighter or correctional official engaged in the performance of official duties; 2) the defendant had previous convictions for 1st or 2nd degree murder or homocide with elements of 1st or 2nd degree murder; or 3) the court finds the defendant subjected the victim to substantial physical torture.
- Prohibited a sentence of death from being suspended.
- Required that aggravating factors be found "unanimously beyond a reasonable doubt" and that aggravating factors outweigh mitigating factors unanimously by a preponderance of evidence."
- Removed sexual assault in the first degree, kidnapping, and assault in the 1st degree from the list of aggravating factors. Added being a member of an organized group of 5 or more and committing the offense to further the criminal objectives of the group to the list of aggravating factors.
- Added hanging as a method of execution and specified sodium thiopental as the substance to be used in lethal injection.
- Omitted sections pertaining to witnesses and invitees to and news media coverage of an execution.
- Reinserted sections regarding the applicability of sections of the bill to criminal and appellate rules.
- Reinserted the sections regarding the effective dates.

Table 4: ALASKA BILLS PERTAINING TO CAPITAL PUNISHMENT, Details (1959-2008)

Eighteenth Legislature (continued)

Senate Bill 127 Text was similar to HB 162 with the following exceptions.

Prime Sponsor: Senate Judiciary Committee

Referred to Senate Judiciary and Finance; did not pass out of Judiciary.

- Eliminated section on Legislative Findings.
- Eliminated the provision that the prosecuting attorney determines whether to seek the death penalty.
- Eliminated sections on applicibility of the bill to criminal and appellate court rules.

Nineteenth Legislature, 1995 - 1996

House Bill 45 Text was similar to SB 127 with the following exceptions.

Prime Sponsor: Jerry Sanders

Co-Sponsor: Vic Kohring

Referred to House State Affairs, Judiciary, and Finance; did not pass out of State Affairs.

- Added a section including capital felonies among violations required to be reported in applications for permits under AS 05.15.140(b).
- Amended AS 11.31 to incorporate capital offenses into attempt, solicitation, and conspiracy to commit a crime.
- Eliminated hanging as the preferred manner of execution.
- Amended AS 47.10 to include capital felony among the charges for which minors of 16 or more must be charged, prosecuted, and sentenced as adults unless they prove themselves amenable to treatment

Senate Bill 52 Text was the same as HB 45 with the following exceptions.

Prime Sponsor: Robin Taylor

Co-Sponsor: Drew Pearce

Referred to Judiciary and Finance; committee subsitute for sponsor substitute passed Senate; referred to House Judiciary and Finance; did not pass out of Finance.

- Eliminated sections amending AS 11.31 (attempt, solicitation, and conspiracy to commit a crime).
- Reinserted the provision that death would be inflicted by hanging unless the defendant elected a lethal dose of sodium thiopental.
- Eliminated provision that minors 16 and over committing capital offenses would be charged, prosecuted and sentenced as adults.

SSSB 52 Text became identical to HB 45.

CSSSSB 52 (Jud) Eliminated all previous provisions; provided for an advisory vote at the next election on whether the legislature should enact a law providing for capital puishment for murder in the first degree.

House Bill 481 Text was similar to HB 45 with the following exceptions.

Prime Sponsor: Beverly Masek

Co-Sponsors: Vic Kohring and Scott Ogan

Referred to House State Affairs and Judiciary; did not pass out of Judiciary.

- Aggravating factors were limited to the defendant's having caused the death of a child under the age of 18, the defendant's being at least two years older than the child, and the defendant had or was attempting to kidnap, assault, or sexually assault the child.
- Eliminated the advisory vote provision regarding whether the law as passed should go into effect on a certain date.
- Reinserted sections regarding the applicability of the bill to criminal and appellate rules of court.

Table 4: ALASKA BILLS PERTAINING TO CAPITAL PUNISHMENT, Details (1959-2008)

Twentieth Legislature, 1997 - 1998

House Bill 131 Called for an advisory vote on capital punishment for 1st degree murder with impostition procedures consistent with the US Constitution as interepreted by the US Supreme Court.

Prime Sponsor: Jerry Sanders

Co-Sponsors: Norm Rokeberg and Vic Kohring

Referred to Judiciary and Finance; died in Judiciary.

House Bill 166 Classified 1st degree murder as a capital felony and allowed death penalty for murder of a child under certain circumstances. Made changes to rules of criminal and appellate procedure, and established sentencing procedures for capital felonies.

Prime Sponsor: Beverly Masek

Co-Sponsors: Vic Kohring

Referred to Judiciary and Finance; died without a hearing.

Senate Bill 60 Originally identical to HB 131. The House Judiciary Committee substitute inserted information comparing the costs of implementing the death penalty to those for 99 years of incarceration, and required the Lt. Governor to calculate the ratio between those costs to be published on the ballot for the advisory vote.

Prime Sponsor: Robin Taylor

Co-Sponsors: Drue Pearce

The original version passed the Senate on a vote of 13 to 6; the House Judiciary Committee offered a CS and moved the bill to the Finance Committee where it died after a vote to discharge it from the committee failed 30 to 1.

Twenty-first Legislature, 1999 - 2000

House Bill 20 Called for a statewide addvisory vote on the death penalty. It adopted the requirement for the fiscal comparison of capital punishment and life imprisonment (99 years) without parole contained in HCS SB 60 (1997).

Prime Sponsor: Vic Kohring

Co-Sponsors:

The bill died without a hearing.

House Bill 48 Called for an advisory vote with language identical to HB 131 (1997).

Prime Sponsor: Jerry Sanders

Co-Sponsors:

The bill died without a hearing.

House Bill 75 Identical to HB 166 (1997).

Prime Sponsor: Beverly Masek

Co-Sponsors: Vic Kohring

The bill died in the first committee of referral after two hearings.

Notes: No bills regarding capital punishment were introduced in the 22nd through the 25th Legislatures (2001 - 2008).
Sources: Bill texts, bill histories, Final Status of Bills and Resolutions, 1975 - 1992; and Bill Action and Status Inquiry System (B

The distinguishing features of a criminal trial are what are known in the language of the law as the presumption of innocence and the burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt. The law presumes a defendant to be innocent of crime. Thus, a defendant, although accused, begins the trial with a clean slate -- with no evidence favoring conviction. The presumption of innocence alone is sufficient to acquit a defendant, unless you are satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt, after careful and impartial consideration of all the evidence in the case.

This last-mentioned requirement, that you be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt, is what is called the burden of proof. It is not required that the prosecution prove guilt beyond all possible doubt, for it is rarely possible to prove anything to an absolute certainty. Rather, the test is one of reasonable doubt. A reasonable doubt is a doubt based upon reason and common sense. Proof beyond a reasonable doubt must be proof of such a convincing character that, after consideration, you would be willing to rely and act upon it without hesitation in your important affairs. A defendant is never to be convicted on mere suspicion or conjecture.

The burden of proving the defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt always rests upon the prosecution. This burden never shifts throughout the trial, for the law never imposes upon a defendant in a criminal case the burden or duty of calling any witnesses or producing any evidence. A defendant has the absolute right not to testify, and you must not draw any inference against the defendant for not testifying. Thus a reasonable doubt may arise not only from the evidence produced, but also from a lack of evidence. Since the burden is upon the prosecution to prove every essential element of the crime charged, beyond a reasonable doubt, a defendant has the right to rely upon the failure of the prosecution to establish such proof. A defendant may also rely upon evidence brought out on cross-examination of witnesses for the prosecution.

USE NOTE

Comment [sf1]: insert at approximately 6
"

McCurry v. State, 538 P.2d 100 (Alaska 1975); Davenport v. State, 519 P.2d 452 (Alaska 1974).

This instruction is usually given twice, once at the beginning of trial and once with the closing instructions.

MEMORANDUM

STATE OF ALASKA

Department of Law - Criminal Division

To: Members, House Judiciary Committee

Date: February 24, 2009

From: Susan S. McLean
Acting Deputy Attorney General

Tel No: (907) 269-6379
Fax: (907) 269-6305

Subject: Statistics and Constitutional Law – HB 9

The attached documents are provided in response to questions raised yesterday during the initial hearing regarding HB 9. Attached are:

1. DOC statistics pertaining to the length of sentences being served by those convicted of Murder in the First Degree, which reflects those serving more than 90 years.

2. Copies of the following U.S. Supreme Court cases pertaining to capital punishment:

    a. Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551 (2004) (juvenile offenders)
    b. Kennedy v. Louisiana, 128 S.Ct. 2641 (2008) and 129 S.Ct. 1 (modifying original opinion) (offenders convicted of raping a child)
    c. Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584 (1977) (offenders convicted of raping an adult)
    d. Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. 304 (2002) (offender who is diagnosed as "mentally retarded")

STATISTICS ON MURDER 1 INMATES 12/31/2008

INTAKE YEAR	COUNT
1972	1
1973	1
1976	1
1977	2
1978	1
1980	2
1981	4
1982	2
1983	6
1984	7
1985	2
1986	14
1987	13
1988	7
1989	4
1990	10
1991	4
1992	7
1993	8
1994	6
1995	13
1996	6
1997	16
1998	12
1999	2
2000	5
2001	9
2002	7
2003	9
2004	4
2005	16
2006	10
2007	20
2008	17
TOTAL	248

AGE GROUP	F	M	TOTAL
19 AND UNDER	0	2	2
20 - 24	1	11	12
25 - 29	0	28	28
30 - 34	0	32	32
35 - 39	3	25	28
40 - 44	2	26	28
45 - 49	6	36	42
50 - 54	0	23	23
55 - 59	0	26	26
60 - 64	0	15	15
65 AND OVER	0	12	12
TOTAL	12	236	248

SENT/UNSENT	COUNT
SENTENCED	224
UNSENTENCED	24
TOTAL	248

SENTENCE LENGTH	F	M	TOTAL
LESS THAN 20 YRS	0	8	8
20 - 29 YRS	0	3	3
30 - 39 YRS	0	10	10
40 - 49 YRS	0	8	8
50 - 59 YRS	1	16	17
60 - 69 YRS	0	19	19
70 - 79 YRS	1	19	20
80 - 89 YRS	2	9	11
90 - 99 YRS	4	101	105
100 YRS AND OVER	0	12	12
UNKNOWN	4	31	35
TOTAL	12	236	248

AVERAGE SENTENCE LENGTH
86 YEARS

COURT LOCATION	COUNT
JUNEAU	3
KETCHIKAN	6
BARROW	2
KOTZEBUE	1
NOME	2
ANCHORAGE	85
DILLINGHAM	3
KENAI	10
KODIAK	3
NAKNEK	1
PALMER	5
VALDEZ	1
BETHEL	6
FAIRBANKS	36
UNKNOWN	84
TOTAL	248

Supreme Court of the United States
Donald P. ROPER, Superintendent, Potosi Correctional Center, Petitioner, v.
Christopher SIMMONS.
No. 03-633.

Argued Oct. 13, 2004.
Decided March 1, 2005.

Background: Defendant convicted after he turned 18 of committing first-degree murder when he was 17, and sentenced to death, 944 S.W.2d 165, petitioned for writ of habeas corpus. The Missouri Supreme Court, Laura Denvir Stith, J., 112 S.W.3d 397, granted relief. Certiorari was granted.

Holding: The Supreme Court, Justice Kennedy, held that execution of individuals who were under 18 years of age at time of their capital crimes is prohibited by Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments; abrogating Stanford v. Kentucky, 492 U.S. 361, 109 S.Ct. 2969, 106 L.Ed.2d 306.

Affirmed.

Justice Stevens concurred and filed opinion in which Justice Ginsburg joined.

Justice O'Connor dissented and filed opinion.

Justice Scalia dissented and filed opinion in which Chief Justice Rehnquist and Justice Thomas joined.

West Headnotes

[1] Sentencing and Punishment 350H ⚿1482

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HVII Cruel and Unusual Punishment in General
350HVII(E) Excessiveness and Proportionality of Sentence
350Hk1482 k. Proportionality. Most Cited Cases
Court must refer to evolving standards of decency that mark progress of maturing society when determining which punishments are so disproportionate as to be "cruel and unusual," within meaning of Eighth Amendment prohibition. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 8.

[2] Sentencing and Punishment 350H ⚿1618

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HVIII The Death Penalty
350HVIII(A) In General
350Hk1613 Requirements for Imposition
350Hk1618 k. Narrowing Class of Eligible Offenders. Most Cited Cases

Sentencing and Punishment 350H ⚿1667

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HVIII The Death Penalty
350HVIII(D) Factors Related to Offense
350Hk1666 Nature or Degree of Offense
350Hk1667 k. In General. Most Cited Cases
Capital punishment must be limited to those offenders who commit narrow category of most serious crimes and whose extreme culpability makes them most deserving of execution.

[3] Sentencing and Punishment 350H ⚿1625

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HVIII The Death Penalty
350HVIII(A) In General
350Hk1622 Validity of Statute or Regulatory Provision
350Hk1625 k. Aggravating or Mitigating Circumstances. Most Cited Cases

Sentencing and Punishment 350H ⚿1652

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HVIII The Death Penalty
350HVIII(C) Factors Affecting Imposition in General
350Hk1652 k. Aggravating Circumstances in General. Most Cited Cases
State must give narrow and precise definition to aggravating factors that can result in capital sentence.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

[4] Sentencing and Punishment 350H 1665

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HVIII The Death Penalty
350HVIII(D) Factors Related to Offense
350Hk1665 k. In General. Most Cited Cases

Sentencing and Punishment 350H 1702

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HVIII The Death Penalty
350HVIII(E) Factors Related to Offender
350Hk1702 k. Offender's Character in General. Most Cited Cases
In any capital case, defendant has wide latitude to raise as mitigating factor any aspect of his or her character or record and any circumstances of offense that defendant proffers as basis for sentence less than death.

[5] Constitutional Law 92 4743

92 Constitutional Law
92XXVII Due Process
92XXVII(H) Criminal Law
92XXVII(H)6 Judgment and Sentence
92k4741 Capital Punishment; Death Penalty
92k4743 k. Persons Eligible. Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 92k270(1))

Sentencing and Punishment 350H 1643

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HVIII The Death Penalty
350HVIII(B) Persons Eligible
350Hk1643 k. Juveniles. Most Cited Cases
Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments forbid imposition of death penalty on offenders who were under age of 18 when their crimes were committed; abrogating Stanford v. Kentucky, 492 U.S. 361, 109 S.Ct. 2969, 106 L.Ed.2d 306. U.S.C.A. Const.Amends. 8, 14.

1184 551 Syllabus [FN]

FN* The syllabus constitutes no part of the opinion of the Court but has been prepared by the Reporter of Decisions for the convenience of the reader. See United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co., 200 U.S. 321, 337, 26 S.Ct. 282, 50 L.Ed. 499.

At age 17, respondent Simmons planned and committed a capital murder. After he had turned 18, he was sentenced to death. His direct appeal and subsequent petitions for state and federal postconviction relief were rejected. This Court then held, in Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. 304, 122 S.Ct. 2242, 153 L.Ed.2d 335, that the Eighth Amendment, applicable to the States through the Fourteenth Amendment, prohibits the execution of a mentally retarded person. Simmons filed a new petition for state postconviction relief, arguing that Atkins' reasoning established that the Constitution prohibits the execution of a juvenile who was under 18 when he committed his crime. The Missouri Supreme Court agreed and set aside Simmons' death sentence in favor of life imprisonment without eligibility for release. It held that, although Stanford v. Kentucky, 492 U.S. 361, 109 S.Ct. 2969, 106 L.Ed.2d 306, rejected the proposition that the Constitution bars capital punishment for juvenile offenders younger than 18, a national consensus has developed against the execution of those offenders since Stanford.

Held: The Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments forbid imposition of the death penalty on offenders who were under the age of 18 when their crimes were committed. Pp. 1190-1200.

(a) The Eighth Amendment's prohibition against "cruel and unusual punishments" must be interpreted according to its text, by considering history, tradition, and precedent, and with due regard for its purpose and function in the constitutional design. To implement this framework this Court has established the propriety and affirmed the necessity of referring to "the evolving standards of decency that mark the progress of a maturing society" to determine which punishments are so disproportionate as to be "cruel and unusual." Trop v. Dulles, 356 U.S. 86, 100-101, 78 S.Ct. 590, 2 L.Ed.2d 630. In 1988, in Thompson v. Oklahoma, 487 U.S. 815, 818-838, 108 S.Ct. 2687, 101 L.Ed.2d 702, a plurality determined that national standards of decency did not permit the execution of any offender under age 16 at the *1185 time of the crime. The next year, in Stanford, a 5-to-4 Court referred to contemporary standards of decency, but concluded the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments did not proscribe the execution of offenders over 15 but under 18 because 22 of 37 death penalty States permitted that penalty for 16-year-old offenders, and 25 permitted it for 17-year-olds, thereby indicating there was no national consensus. 492 U.S., at 370-371, 109 S.Ct. 2969. A plurality552 also "emphatically reject[ed]" the suggestion that the Court should bring its own judgment to bear on the acceptability of the juvenile death penalty. Id., at 377-378, 109 S.Ct. 2969. That same day the Court held, in Penry v. Lynaugh, 492 U.S. 302, 334, 109 S.Ct. 2934, 106 L.Ed.2d 256, that the Eighth Amendment did not mandate a categorical exemption from the death penalty for mentally retarded persons because only two States had enacted laws banning such executions. Three Terms ago in Atkins, however, the Court held that standards of decency had evolved since Penry and now demonstrated that the execution of the mentally retarded is cruel and unusual punishment. The Atkins Court noted that objective indicia of society's standards, as expressed in pertinent legislative enactments and state practice, demonstrated that such executions had become so truly unusual that it was fair to say that a national consensus has developed against them. 536 U.S., at 314-315, 122 S.Ct. 2242. The Court also returned to the rule, established in decisions predating Stanford, that the Constitution contemplates that the Court's own judgment be brought to bear on the question of the acceptability of the death penalty. 536 U.S., at 312, 122 S.Ct. 2242. After observing that mental retardation diminishes personal culpability even if the offender can distinguish right from wrong, id., at 318, 122 S.Ct. 2242, and that mentally retarded offenders' impairments make it less defensible to impose the death penalty as retribution for past crimes or as a real deterrent to future crimes, id., at 319-320, 122 S.Ct. 2242, the Court ruled that the death penalty constitutes an excessive sanction for the entire category of mentally retarded offenders, and that the Eighth Amendment places a substantive restriction on the State's power to take such an offender's life, id., at 321, 122 S.Ct. 2242. Just as the Atkins Court reconsidered the issue decided in Penry, the Court now reconsiders the issue decided in Stanford. Pp. 1190-1192.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

(b) Both objective indicia of consensus, as expressed in particular by the enactments of legislatures that have addressed the question, and the Court's own determination in the exercise of its independent judgment, demonstrate that the death penalty is a disproportionate punishment for juveniles. Pp. 1192-1198.

(1) As in Atkins, the objective indicia of national consensus here-the rejection of the juvenile death penalty in the majority of States; the infrequency of its use even where it remains on the books; and the consistency in the trend toward abolition of the practice-provide sufficient evidence that today society views juveniles, in the words Atkins used respecting the mentally retarded, as "categorically less culpable than the average criminal," 536 U.S., at 316, 122 S.Ct. 2242. The evidence of such consensus is similar, and in some respects parallel, to the evidence in Atkins: 30 States prohibit the juvenile death penalty, including 12 that have rejected it altogether and 18 that maintain it but, by express provision*553 or judicial interpretation, exclude juveniles from its reach. Moreover, even in the 20 States without a formal prohibition, the execution of juveniles is infrequent. Although, by contrast to Atkins, the rate of change in reducing the incidence of the juvenile death penalty, or 1186 in taking specific steps to abolish it, has been less dramatic, the difference between this case and Atkins in that respect is counterbalanced by the consistent direction of the change toward abolition. Indeed, the slower pace here may be explained by the simple fact that the impropriety of executing juveniles between 16 and 18 years old gained wide recognition earlier than the impropriety of executing the mentally retarded. Pp. 1192-1194.

(2) Rejection of the imposition of the death penalty on juvenile offenders under 18 is required by the Eighth Amendment. Capital punishment must be limited to those offenders who commit "a narrow category of the most serious crimes" and whose extreme culpability makes them "the most deserving of execution." Atkins, supra, at 319, 122 S.Ct. 2242. Three general differences between juveniles under 18 and adults demonstrate that juvenile offenders cannot with reliability be classified among the worst offenders. Juveniles' susceptibility to immature and irresponsible behavior means "their irresponsible conduct is not as morally reprehensible as that of an adult." Thompson v. Oklahoma, 487 U.S. 815, 835, 108 S.Ct. 2687, 101 L.Ed.2d 702. Their own vulnerability and comparative lack of control over their immediate surroundings mean juveniles have a greater claim than adults to be forgiven for failing to escape negative influences in their whole environment. See Stanford, supra, at 395, 109 S.Ct. 2969. The reality that juveniles still struggle to define their identity means it is less supportable to conclude that even a heinous crime committed by a juvenile is evidence of irretrievably depraved character. The Thompson plurality recognized the import of these characteristics with respect to juveniles under 16. 487 U.S., at 833-838, 108 S.Ct. 2687. The same reasoning applies to all juvenile offenders under 18. Once juveniles' diminished culpability is recognized, it is evident that neither of the two penological justifications for the death penalty-retribution and deterrence of capital crimes by prospective offenders, e.g., Atkins, supra, at 319, 122 S.Ct. 2242-provides adequate justification for imposing that penalty on juveniles. Although the Court cannot deny or overlook the brutal crimes too many juvenile offenders have committed, it disagrees with petitioner's contention that, given the Court's own insistence on individualized consideration in capital sentencing, it is arbitrary and unnecessary to adopt a categorical rule barring imposition of the death penalty on an offender under 18. An unacceptable likelihood exists that the brutality or cold-blooded nature of any particular crime would overpower mitigating arguments based on youth as a matter of course, even where the juvenile offender's 554 objective immaturity, vulnerability, and lack of true depravity should require a sentence less severe than death. When a juvenile commits a heinous crime, the State can exact forfeiture of some of the most basic liberties, but the State cannot extinguish his life and his potential to attain a mature understanding of his own humanity. While drawing the line at 18 is subject to the objections always raised against categorical rules, that is the point where society draws the line for many purposes between childhood and adulthood and the age at which the line for death eligibility ought to rest. Stanford should be deemed no longer controlling on this issue. Pp. 1194-1198.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

(c) The overwhelming weight of international opinion against the juvenile death penalty is not controlling here, but provides respected and significant confirmation for the Court's determination that the penalty is disproportionate punishment for offenders under 18. See, e.g., 1187Thompson, supra, at 830-831, and n. 31, 108 S.Ct. 2687. The United States is the only country in the world that continues to give official sanction to the juvenile penalty. It does not lessen fidelity to the Constitution or pride in its origins to acknowledge that the express affirmation of certain fundamental rights by other nations and peoples underscores the centrality of those same rights within our own heritage of freedom. Pp. 1198-1200.

112 S.W.3d 397, affirmed.

KENNEDY, J., delivered the opinion of the Court, in which STEVENS, SOUTER, GINSBURG, and BREYER, JJ., joined. STEVENS, J., filed a concurring opinion, in which GINSBURG, J., joined, post, p. 1205. O'CONNOR, J., filed a dissenting opinion, post, p. 1206. SCALIA, J., filed a dissenting opinion, in which REHNQUIST, C.J., and THOMAS, J., joined, post, p. 1217.
James R. Layton, Jefferson City, MO, for petitioner.

Seth P. Waxman, Washington, DC, for respondent.

Jennifer Herndon, Counsel of Record, St. Louis, MO, Seth P. Waxman, David W. Ogden, Danielle Spinelli, Wilmer, Cutler, Pickering, Hale and Dorr, LLP, Washington, DC, for Respondent.

Jeremiah W. (Jay) Nixon, Attorney General of Missouri, James R. Layton, State Solicitor, Stephen D. Hawke, Counsel of Record, Evan J. Buchheim, Assistant Attorneys General, Jefferson City, MO, for Petitioner.

For U.S. Supreme Court briefs, see:2004 WL 903158 (Pet.Brief)2004 WL 1947812 (Resp.Brief)

Justice KENNEDY delivered the opinion of the Court.

555 This case requires us to address, for the second time in a decade and a half, whether it is permissible under the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States to execute a juvenile offender who was older 556 than 15 but younger than 18 when he committed a capital crime. In Stanford v. Kentucky, 492 U.S. 361, 109 S.Ct. 2969, 106 L.Ed.2d 306 (1989), a divided Court rejected the proposition that the Constitution bars capital punishment for juvenile offenders in this age group. We reconsider the question.

I

At the age of 17, when he was still a junior in high school, Christopher Simmons, the respondent here, committed murder. About nine months later, after he had turned 18, he was tried and sentenced to death. There is little doubt that Simmons was the instigator of the crime. Before its commission Simmons said he wanted to murder someone. In chilling, callous terms he talked about his plan, discussing it for the most part with two friends, Charles Benjamin and John Tessmer, then aged 15 and 16 respectively. Simmons proposed to commit burglary and murder by breaking and entering, tying up a victim, and throwing the victim off a bridge. Simmons assured his friends they could "get away with it" because they were minors.

The three met at about 2 a.m. on the night of the murder, but Tessmer left before the other two set out. (The State later charged Tessmer with conspiracy, but dropped the charge in exchange for his testimony against Simmons.) Simmons and Benjamin entered the home of the victim, Shirley Crook, after reaching through an open window and unlocking the *1188 back door. Simmons turned on a hallway light. Awakened, Mrs. Crook called out, "Who's there?" In response Simmons entered Mrs.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Crook's bedroom, where he recognized her from a previous car accident involving them both. Simmons later admitted this confirmed his resolve to murder her.

Using duct tape to cover her eyes and mouth and bind her hands, the two perpetrators put Mrs. Crook in her minivan and drove to a state park. They reinforced the bindings, covered her head with a towel, and walked her to a railroad*557 trestle spanning the Meramec River. There they tied her hands and feet together with electrical wire, wrapped her whole face in duct tape and threw her from the bridge, drowning her in the waters below.

By the afternoon of September 9, Steven Crook had returned home from an overnight trip, found his bedroom in disarray, and reported his wife missing. On the same afternoon fishermen recovered the victim's body from the river. Simmons, meanwhile, was bragging about the killing, telling friends he had killed a woman "because the bitch seen my face."

The next day, after receiving information of Simmons' involvement, police arrested him at his high school and took him to the police station in Fenton, Missouri. They read him his Miranda rights. Simmons waived his right to an attorney and agreed to answer questions. After less than two hours of interrogation, Simmons confessed to the murder and agreed to perform a videotaped reenactment at the crime scene.

The State charged Simmons with burglary, kidnaping, stealing, and murder in the first degree. As Simmons was 17 at the time of the crime, he was outside the criminal jurisdiction of Missouri's juvenile court system. See Mo.Rev.Stat. §§ 211.021 (2000) and 211.031 (Supp.2003). He was tried as an adult. At trial the State introduced Simmons' confession and the videotaped reenactment of the crime, along with testimony that Simmons discussed the crime in advance and bragged about it later. The defense called no witnesses in the guilt phase. The jury having returned a verdict of murder, the trial proceeded to the penalty phase.

The State sought the death penalty. As aggravating factors, the State submitted that the murder was committed for the purpose of receiving money; was committed for the purpose of avoiding, interfering with, or preventing lawful arrest of the defendant; and involved depravity of mind and was outrageously and wantonly vile, horrible, and inhuman. *558 The State called Shirley Crook's husband, daughter, and two sisters, who presented moving evidence of the devastation her death had brought to their lives.

In mitigation Simmons' attorneys first called an officer of the Missouri juvenile justice system, who testified that Simmons had no prior convictions and that no previous charges had been filed against him. Simmons' mother, father, two younger half brothers, a neighbor, and a friend took the stand to tell the jurors of the close relationships they had formed with Simmons and to plead for mercy on his behalf. Simmons' mother, in particular, testified to the responsibility Simmons demonstrated in taking care of his two younger half brothers and of his grandmother and to his capacity to show love for them.

During closing arguments, both the prosecutor and defense counsel addressed Simmons' age, which the trial judge had instructed the jurors they could consider as a mitigating factor. Defense counsel reminded the jurors that juveniles of Simmons' age cannot drink, serve on juries, or even see certain movies, because "the legislatures1189 have wisely decided that individuals of a certain age aren't responsible enough." Defense counsel argued that Simmons' age should make "a huge difference to [the jurors] in deciding just exactly what sort of punishment to make." In rebuttal, the prosecutor gave the following response: "Age, he says. Think about age. Seventeen years old. Isn't that scary? Doesn't that scare you? Mitigating? Quite the contrary I submit. Quite the contrary."

The jury recommended the death penalty after finding the State had proved each of the three aggravating factors submitted to it. Accepting the jury's recommendation, the trial judge imposed the death penalty.

Simmons obtained new counsel, who moved in the trial court to set aside the conviction and sentence. One argument was that Simmons had received ineffective assistance at trial. To support this contention, the new counsel called *559 as witnesses Simmons' trial attorney, Simmons' friends and neighbors, and clinical psychologists who had evaluated him.

Part of the submission was that Simmons was "very immature," "very impulsive," and "very susceptible to being manipulated or influenced." The experts testified about Simmons' background including a difficult home environment and dramatic changes in behavior, accompanied by poor school performance in adolescence. Simmons was absent from home for long periods, spending time using alcohol and drugs with other teenagers or young adults. The contention by Simmons' postconviction counsel was that these matters should have been established in the sentencing proceeding.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

The trial court found no constitutional violation by reason of ineffective assistance of counsel and denied the motion for postconviction relief. In a consolidated appeal from Simmons' conviction and sentence, and from the denial of postconviction relief, the Missouri Supreme Court affirmed. State v. Simmons, 944 S.W.2d 165, 169 (en banc), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 953, 118 S.Ct. 376, 139 L.Ed.2d 293 (1997). The federal courts denied Simmons' petition for a writ of habeas corpus. Simmons v. Bowersox, 235 F.3d 1124, 1127(CA8),cert. denied, 534 U.S. 924, 122 S.Ct. 280, 151 L.Ed.2d 206 (2001).

After these proceedings in Simmons' case had run their course, this Court held that the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments prohibit the execution of a mentally retarded person. Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. 304, 122 S.Ct. 2242, 153 L.Ed.2d 335 (2002). Simmons filed a new petition for state postconviction relief, arguing that the reasoning of Atkins established that the Constitution prohibits the execution of a juvenile who was under 18 when the crime was committed.

The Missouri Supreme Court agreed. State ex rel. Simmons v. Roper, 112 S.W.3d 397 (2003) (en banc). It held that since Stanford,

> "a national consensus has developed against the execution of juvenile offenders, as demonstrated by the fact that eighteen states now bar such executions for juveniles,560 that twelve other states bar executions altogether, that no state has lowered its age of execution below 18 since Stanford, that five states have legislatively or by case law raised or established the minimum age at 18, and that the imposition of the juvenile death penalty has become truly unusual over the last decade." 112 S.W.3d, at 399.

On this reasoning it set aside Simmons' death sentence and resentenced him to "life imprisonment without eligibility for probation, parole, or release except by act of the Governor." Id., at 413.

*1190 We granted certiorari, 540 U.S. 1160, 124 S.Ct. 1171, 157 L.Ed.2d 1204 (2004), and now affirm.

II

The Eighth Amendment provides: "Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted." The provision is applicable to the States through the Fourteenth Amendment. Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 239, 92 S.Ct. 2726, 33 L.Ed.2d 346 (1972)(per curiam); Robinson v. California, 370 U.S. 660, 666-667, 82 S.Ct. 1417, 8 L.Ed.2d 758 (1962); Louisiana ex rel. Francis v. Resweber, 329 U.S. 459, 463, 67 S.Ct. 374, 91 L.Ed. 422 (1947) (plurality opinion). As the Court explained in Atkins, the Eighth Amendment guarantees individuals the right not to be subjected to excessive sanctions. The right flows from the basic " 'precept of justice that punishment for crime should be graduated and proportioned to [the] offense.' " 536 U.S., at 311, 122 S.Ct. 2242 (quoting Weems v. United States, 217 U.S. 349, 367, 30 S.Ct. 544, 54 L.Ed. 793 (1910)). By protecting even those convicted of heinous crimes, the Eighth Amendment reaffirms the duty of the government to respect the dignity of all persons.

[1] The prohibition against "cruel and unusual punishments," like other expansive language in the Constitution, must be interpreted according to its text, by considering history, tradition, and precedent, and with due regard for its purpose and function in the constitutional design. To implement this 561 framework we have established the propriety and affirmed the necessity of referring to "the evolving standards of decency that mark the progress of a maturing society" to determine which punishments are so disproportionate as to be cruel and unusual. Trop v. Dulles, 356 U.S. 86, 100-101, 78 S.Ct. 590, 2 L.Ed.2d 630 (1958) (plurality opinion).

In Thompson v. Oklahoma, 487 U.S. 815, 108 S.Ct. 2687, 101 L.Ed.2d 702 (1988), a plurality of the Court determined that our standards of decency do not permit the execution of any offender under the age of 16 at the time of the crime. Id., at 818-838, 108 S.Ct. 2687 (opinion of STEVENS, J., joined by Brennan, Marshall, and Blackmun, JJ.). The plurality opinion explained that no death penalty State that had given express consideration to a minimum age for the death penalty had set the age lower than 16. Id., at 826-829, 108 S.Ct. 2687. The plurality also observed that "[t]he conclusion that it would offend civilized standards of decency to execute a person who was less than 16 years old at the time of his or her offense is consistent with the views that have been expressed by respected professional organizations, by other nations that share our Anglo-American heritage, and by the leading members of the Western European community." Id., at 830, 108 S.Ct. 2687. The opinion further noted that juries imposed the death penalty on offenders under 16 with exceeding rarity; the last execution of an offender for a crime committed under the age of 16 had been carried out in 1948, 40 years prior. Id., at 832-833, 108 S.Ct. 2687.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Bringing its independent judgment to bear on the permissibility of the death penalty for a 15-year-old offender, the Thompson plurality stressed that "[t]he reasons why juveniles are not trusted with the privileges and responsibilities of an adult also explain why their irresponsible conduct is not as morally reprehensible as that of an adult." Id., at 835, 108 S.Ct. 2687. According to the plurality, the lesser culpability of offenders under 16 made the death penalty inappropriate as a form of retribution, while the low likelihood that 1191 offenders under 16 engaged in "the kind of cost-benefit analysis that *562 attaches any weight to the possibility of execution" made the death penalty ineffective as a means of deterrence. Id., at 836-838, 108 S.Ct. 2687. With Justice O'CONNOR concurring in the judgment on narrower grounds, id., at 848-859, 108 S.Ct. 2687, the Court set aside the death sentence that had been imposed on the 15-year-old offender.

The next year, in Stanford v. Kentucky, 492 U.S. 361, 109 S.Ct. 2969, 106 L.Ed.2d 306 (1989), the Court, over a dissenting opinion joined by four Justices, referred to contemporary standards of decency in this country and concluded the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments did not proscribe the execution of juvenile offenders over 15 but under 18. The Court noted that 22 of the 37 death penalty States permitted the death penalty for 16-year-old offenders, and, among these 37 States, 25 permitted it for 17-year-old offenders. These numbers, in the Court's view, indicated there was no national consensus "sufficient to label a particular punishment cruel and unusual." Id., at 370-371, 109 S.Ct. 2969. A plurality of the Court also "emphatically reject [ed]" the suggestion that the Court should bring its own judgment to bear on the acceptability of the juvenile death penalty. Id., at 377-378, 109 S.Ct. 2969 (opinion of SCALIA, J., joined by REHNQUIST, C.J., and White and KENNEDY, JJ.); see also id., at 382, 109 S.Ct. 2969 (O'CONNOR, J., concurring in part and concurring in judgment) (criticizing the plurality's refusal "to judge whether the ' "nexus between the punishment imposed and the defendant's blameworthiness" ' is proportional").

The same day the Court decided Stanford, it held that the Eighth Amendment did not mandate a categorical exemption from the death penalty for the mentally retarded. Penry v. Lynaugh, 492 U.S. 302, 109 S.Ct. 2934, 106 L.Ed.2d 256 (1989). In reaching this conclusion it stressed that only two States had enacted laws banning the imposition of the death penalty on a mentally retarded person convicted of a capital offense. Id., at 334, 109 S.Ct. 2934. According to the Court, "the two state statutes prohibiting execution of the mentally retarded, even when added to the 14 States that have rejected capital punishment completely, *563 [did] not provide sufficient evidence at present of a national consensus." Ibid.

Three Terms ago the subject was reconsidered in Atkins. We held that standards of decency have evolved since Penry and now demonstrate that the execution of the mentally retarded is cruel and unusual punishment. The Court noted objective indicia of society's standards, as expressed in legislative enactments and state practice with respect to executions of the mentally retarded. When Atkins was decided only a minority of States permitted the practice, and even in those States it was rare. 536 U.S., at 314-315, 122 S.Ct. 2242. On the basis of these indicia the Court determined that executing mentally retarded offenders "has become truly unusual, and it is fair to say that a national consensus has developed against it." Id., at 316, 122 S.Ct. 2242.

The inquiry into our society's evolving standards of decency did not end there. The Atkins Court neither repeated nor relied upon the statement in Stanford that the Court's independent judgment has no bearing on the acceptability of a particular punishment under the Eighth Amendment. Instead we returned to the rule, established in decisions predating Stanford, that " 'the Constitution contemplates that in the end our own judgment will be brought to bear on the question of the acceptability of the death penalty under the Eighth 1192 Amendment.' " 536 U.S., at 312, 122 S.Ct. 2242 (quoting Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584, 597, 97 S.Ct. 2861, 53 L.Ed.2d 982 (1977) (plurality opinion)). Mental retardation, the Court said, diminishes personal culpability even if the offender can distinguish right from wrong. 536 U.S., at 318, 122 S.Ct. 2242. The impairments of mentally retarded offenders make it less defensible to impose the death penalty as retribution for past crimes and less likely that the death penalty will have a real deterrent effect. Id., at 319-320, 122 S.Ct. 2242. Based on these considerations and on the finding of national consensus against executing the mentally retarded, the Court ruled that the death penalty constitutes an excessive sanction for the entire category of mentally retarded offenders,*564 and that the Eighth Amendment "

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

'places a substantive restriction on the State's power to take the life' of a mentally retarded offender." Id., at 321, 122 S.Ct. 2242 (quoting Ford v. Wainwright, 477 U.S. 399, 405, 106 S.Ct. 2595, 91 L.Ed.2d 335 (1986)).

Just as the Atkins Court reconsidered the issue decided in Penry, we now reconsider the issue decided in Stanford. The beginning point is a review of objective indicia of consensus, as expressed in particular by the enactments of legislatures that have addressed the question. These data give us essential instruction. We then must determine, in the exercise of our own independent judgment, whether the death penalty is a disproportionate punishment for juveniles.

III

A

The evidence of national consensus against the death penalty for juveniles is similar, and in some respects parallel, to the evidence Atkins held sufficient to demonstrate a national consensus against the death penalty for the mentally retarded. When Atkins was decided, 30 States prohibited the death penalty for the mentally retarded. This number comprised 12 that had abandoned the death penalty altogether, and 18 that maintained it but excluded the mentally retarded from its reach. 536 U.S., at 313-315, 122 S.Ct. 2242. By a similar calculation in this case, 30 States prohibit the juvenile death penalty, comprising 12 that have rejected the death penalty altogether and 18 that maintain it but, by express provision or judicial interpretation, exclude juveniles from its reach. See Appendix A, infra. Atkins emphasized that even in the 20 States without formal prohibition, the practice of executing the mentally retarded was infrequent. Since Penry, only five States had executed offenders known to have an IQ under 70. 536 U.S., at 316, 122 S.Ct. 2242. In the present case, too, even in the 20 States without a formal prohibition on executing juveniles, the practice is infrequent. Since Stanford, six States have executed prisoners for crimes committed as juveniles.565 In the past 10 years, only three have done so: Oklahoma, Texas, and Virginia. See V. Streib, The Juvenile Death Penalty Today: Death Sentences and Executions for Juvenile Crimes, January 1, 1973-December 31, 2004, No. 76, p. 4 (2005), available at http:// www. law. onu.edu/faculty/streib/documents/JuvDeathDec2004.pdf (last updated Jan. 31, 2005) (as visited Feb. 25, 2005, and available in Clerk of Court's case file). In December 2003 the Governor of Kentucky decided to spare the life of Kevin Stanford, and commuted his sentence to one of life imprisonment without parole, with the declaration that " '[w]e ought not be executing people who, legally, were children.' " Lexington Herald Leader, Dec. 9, 2003, p. B3, 2003 WL 65043346. By this act the Governor ensured Kentucky would not add itself to the list of *1193 States that have executed juveniles within the last 10 years even by the execution of the very defendant whose death sentence the Court had upheld in Stanford v. Kentucky.

There is, to be sure, at least one difference between the evidence of consensus in Atkins and in this case. Impressive in Atkins was the rate of abolition of the death penalty for the mentally retarded. Sixteen States that permitted the execution of the mentally retarded at the time of Penry had prohibited the practice by the time we heard Atkins. By contrast, the rate of change in reducing the incidence of the juvenile death penalty, or in taking specific steps to abolish it, has been slower. Five States that allowed the juvenile death penalty at the time of Stanford have abandoned it in the intervening 15 years-four through legislative enactments and one through judicial decision. Streib, supra, at 5, 7; State v. Furman, 122 Wash.2d 440, 858 P.2d 1092 (1993) (en banc).

Though less dramatic than the change from Penry to Atkins ("telling," to borrow the word Atkins used to describe this difference, 536 U.S., at 315, n. 18, 122 S.Ct. 2242), we still consider the change from Stanford to this case to be significant. As noted in Atkins, with respect to the States that had abandoned566 the death penalty for the mentally retarded since Penry, "[i]t is not so much the number of these States that is significant, but the consistency of the direction of change." 536 U.S., at 315, 122 S.Ct. 2242. In particular we found it significant that, in the wake of Penry, no State that had already prohibited the execution of the mentally retarded had passed legislation to reinstate the penalty. 536 U.S., at 315-316, 122 S.Ct. 2242. The number of States that have abandoned capital punishment for juvenile offenders since Stanford is smaller than the number of States that abandoned capital punishment for the mentally retarded after Penry; yet we think the same consistency of direction of change has been demonstrated. Since Stanford, no State that previously prohibited capital punishment for juveniles has reinstated it. This fact, coupled with the trend toward abolition of the juvenile death penalty, carries special force in light of the general popularity of anticrime legislation, Atkins, supra, at 315, 122 S.Ct. 2242, and in light of the particular trend in recent years toward cracking down on juvenile crime in other respects, see H. Snyder & M. Sickmund, National Center for Juvenile Justice, Juvenile Offenders and Victims: 1999 National Report 89, 133 (Sept.1999); Scott & Grisso, The Evolution of Adolescence: A Developmental Perspective on Juvenile Justice Reform, 88 J.Crim. L. & C. 137, 148 (1997). Any difference between this case and Atkins with respect to the pace of abolition is thus counterbalanced by the consistent direction of the change.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

The slower pace of abolition of the juvenile death penalty over the past 15 years, moreover, may have a simple explanation. When we heard Penry, only two death penalty States had already prohibited the execution of the mentally retarded. When we heard Stanford, by contrast, 12 death penalty States had already prohibited the execution of any juvenile under 18, and 15 had prohibited the execution of any juvenile under 17. If anything, this shows that the impropriety of executing juveniles between 16 and 18 years of age 567 gained wide recognition earlier than the impropriety of executing the mentally retarded. In the words of the Missouri Supreme Court: "It would be the ultimate in irony if the very fact that the inappropriateness of the death penalty for juveniles was broadly recognized sooner than it was recognized for the mentally retarded were to become a reason to continue the execution *1194 of juveniles now that the execution of the mentally retarded has been barred." 112 S.W.3d, at 408, n. 10.

Petitioner cannot show national consensus in favor of capital punishment for juveniles but still resists the conclusion that any consensus exists against it. Petitioner supports this position with, in particular, the observation that when the Senate ratified the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR), Dec. 19, 1966, 999 U.N.T.S. 171 (entered into force Mar. 23, 1976), it did so subject to the President's proposed reservation regarding Article 6(5) of that treaty, which prohibits capital punishment for juveniles. Brief for Petitioner 27. This reservation at best provides only faint support for petitioner's argument. First, the reservation was passed in 1992; since then, five States have abandoned capital punishment for juveniles. Second, Congress considered the issue when enacting the Federal Death Penalty Act in 1994, and determined that the death penalty should not extend to juveniles. See 18 U.S.C. § 3591. The reservation to Article 6(5) of the ICCPR provides minimal evidence that there is not now a national consensus against juvenile executions.

As in Atkins, the objective indicia of consensus in this case-the rejection of the juvenile death penalty in the majority of States; the infrequency of its use even where it remains on the books; and the consistency in the trend toward abolition of the practice-provide sufficient evidence that today our society views juveniles, in the words Atkins used respecting the mentally retarded, as "categorically less culpable than the average criminal." 536 U.S., at 316, 122 S.Ct. 2242.

568 B

A majority of States have rejected the imposition of the death penalty on juvenile offenders under 18, and we now hold this is required by the Eighth Amendment.

[2][3][4] Because the death penalty is the most severe punishment, the Eighth Amendment applies to it with special force. Thompson, 487 U.S., at 856, 108 S.Ct. 2687 (O'CONNOR, J., concurring in judgment). Capital punishment must be limited to those offenders who commit "a narrow category of the most serious crimes" and whose extreme culpability makes them "the most deserving of execution." Atkins, supra, at 319, 122 S.Ct. 2242. This principle is implemented throughout the capital sentencing process. States must give narrow and precise definition to the aggravating factors that can result in a capital sentence. Godfrey v. Georgia, 446 U.S. 420, 428-429, 100 S.Ct. 1759, 64 L.Ed.2d 398 (1980) (plurality opinion). In any capital case a defendant has wide latitude to raise as a mitigating factor "any aspect of [his or her] character or record and any of the circumstances of the offense that the defendant proffers as a basis for a sentence less than death." Lockett v. Ohio, 438 U.S. 586, 604, 98 S.Ct. 2954, 57 L.Ed.2d 973 (1978) (plurality opinion); Eddings v. Oklahoma, 455 U.S. 104, 110-112, 102 S.Ct. 869, 71 L.Ed.2d 1 (1982); see also Johnson v. Texas, 509 U.S. 350, 359-362, 113 S.Ct. 2658, 125 L.Ed.2d 290 (1993) (summarizing the Court's jurisprudence after Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 92 S.Ct. 2726, 33 L.Ed.2d 346 (1972)(per curiam), with respect to a sentencer's consideration of aggravating and mitigating factors). There are a number of crimes that beyond question are severe in absolute terms, yet the death penalty may not be imposed for their commission. Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584, 97 S.Ct. 2861, 53 L.Ed.2d 982 (1977) (rape of an adult woman); Enmund v. Florida, 458 U.S. 782, 102 S.Ct. 3368, 73 L.Ed.2d 1140 (1982) (felony murder where *1195 defendant did not kill, attempt to kill, or intend to kill). The death penalty may not be imposed on certain classes of offenders, such as juveniles under 16, the insane, and the mentally retarded, no matter how heinous the crime. Thompson v. Oklahoma, supra; Ford v. Wainwright, 477 U.S. 399, 106 S.Ct. 2595, 91 L.Ed.2d 335 (1986); Atkins, supra. These rules vindicate the underlying principle*569 that the death penalty is reserved for a narrow category of crimes and offenders.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

[5] Three general differences between juveniles under 18 and adults demonstrate that juvenile offenders cannot with reliability be classified among the worst offenders. First, as any parent knows and as the scientific and sociological studies respondent and his amici cite tend to confirm, "[a] lack of maturity and an underdeveloped sense of responsibility are found in youth more often than in adults and are more understandable among the young. These qualities often result in impetuous and ill-considered actions and decisions." Johnson, supra, at 367, 113 S.Ct. 2658; see also Eddings, supra, at 115-116, 102 S.Ct. 869 ("Even the normal 16-year-old customarily lacks the maturity of an adult"). It has been noted that "adolescents are overrepresented statistically in virtually every category of reckless behavior." Arnett, Reckless Behavior in Adolescence: A Developmental Perspective, 12 Developmental Rev. 339 (1992). In recognition of the comparative immaturity and irresponsibility of juveniles, almost every State prohibits those under 18 years of age from voting, serving on juries, or marrying without parental consent. See Appendixes B-D, infra.

The second area of difference is that juveniles are more vulnerable or susceptible to negative influences and outside pressures, including peer pressure. Eddings, supra, at 115, 102 S.Ct. 869 ("[Y]outh is more than a chronological fact. It is a time and condition of life when a person may be most susceptible to influence and to psychological damage"). This is explained in part by the prevailing circumstance that juveniles have less control, or less experience with control, over their own environment. See Steinberg & Scott, Less Guilty by Reason of Adolescence: Developmental Immaturity, Diminished Responsibility, and the Juvenile Death Penalty, 58 Am. Psychologist 1009, 1014 (2003) (hereinafter Steinberg & Scott) ("[A]s legal minors, [juveniles] lack the freedom that adults have to extricate themselves from a criminogenic setting").

*570 The third broad difference is that the character of a juvenile is not as well formed as that of an adult. The personality traits of juveniles are more transitory, less fixed. See generally E. Erikson, Identity: Youth and Crisis (1968).

These differences render suspect any conclusion that a juvenile falls among the worst offenders. The susceptibility of juveniles to immature and irresponsible behavior means "their irresponsible conduct is not as morally reprehensible as that of an adult." Thompson, supra, at 835, 108 S.Ct. 2687 (plurality opinion). Their own vulnerability and comparative lack of control over their immediate surroundings mean juveniles have a greater claim than adults to be forgiven for failing to escape negative influences in their whole environment. See Stanford, 492 U.S., at 395, 109 S.Ct. 2969 (Brennan, J., dissenting). The reality that juveniles still struggle to define their identity means it is less supportable to conclude that even a heinous crime committed by a juvenile is evidence of irretrievably depraved character. From a moral standpoint it would be misguided to equate the failings of a minor with those of an adult, for a greater possibility exists that a minor's character deficiencies will 1196 be reformed. Indeed, "[t]he relevance of youth as a mitigating factor derives from the fact that the signature qualities of youth are transient; as individuals mature, the impetuousness and recklessness that may dominate in younger years can subside." Johnson, supra, at 368, 113 S.Ct. 2658; see also Steinberg & Scott 1014 ("For most teens, [risky or antisocial] behaviors are fleeting; they cease with maturity as individual identity becomes settled. Only a relatively small proportion of adolescents who experiment in risky or illegal activities develop entrenched patterns of problem behavior that persist into adulthood").

In Thompson, a plurality of the Court recognized the import of these characteristics with respect to juveniles under 16, and relied on them to hold that the Eighth Amendment prohibited the imposition of the death penalty on juveniles *571 below that age. 487 U.S., at 833-838, 108 S.Ct. 2687. We conclude the same reasoning applies to all juvenile offenders under 18.

Once the diminished culpability of juveniles is recognized, it is evident that the penological justifications for the death penalty apply to them with lesser force than to adults. We have held there are two distinct social purposes served by the death penalty: " 'retribution and deterrence of capital crimes by prospective offenders.' " Atkins, 536 U.S., at 319, 122 S.Ct. 2242 (quoting Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 183, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 49 L.Ed.2d 859 (1976) (joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and STEVENS, JJ.)). As for retribution, we remarked in Atkins that "[i]f the culpability of the average murderer is insufficient to justify the most extreme sanction available to the State, the lesser culpability of the mentally retarded offender surely does not merit that form of retribution." 536 U.S., at 319, 122 S.Ct. 2242. The same conclusions follow from the lesser culpability of the juvenile offender. Whether viewed as an attempt to express the community's moral outrage or as an attempt to right the balance for the wrong to the victim, the case for retribution is not as strong with a minor as with an adult. Retribution is not proportional if the law's most severe penalty is imposed on one whose culpability or blameworthiness is diminished, to a substantial degree, by reason of youth and immaturity.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

As for deterrence, it is unclear whether the death penalty has a significant or even measurable deterrent effect on juveniles, as counsel for petitioner acknowledged at oral argument. Tr. of Oral Arg. 48. In general we leave to legislatures the assessment of the efficacy of various criminal penalty schemes, see Harmelin v. Michigan, 501 U.S. 957, 998-999, 111 S.Ct. 2680, 115 L.Ed.2d 836 (1991) (KENNEDY, J., concurring in part and concurring in judgment). Here, however, the absence of evidence of deterrent effect is of special concern because the same characteristics that render juveniles less culpable than adults suggest as well that juveniles will be less susceptible to deterrence. In particular, as the plurality observed in 572 Thompson, "[t]he likelihood that the teenage offender has made the kind of cost-benefit analysis that attaches any weight to the possibility of execution is so remote as to be virtually nonexistent." 487 U.S., at 837, 108 S.Ct. 2687. To the extent the juvenile death penalty might have residual deterrent effect, it is worth noting that the punishment of life imprisonment without the possibility of parole is itself a severe sanction, in particular for a young person.

In concluding that neither retribution nor deterrence provides adequate justification for imposing the death penalty on juvenile offenders, we cannot deny or overlook the brutal crimes too many juvenile offenders have committed. See Brief for *1197 Alabama et al. as Amici Curiae. Certainly it can be argued, although we by no means concede the point, that a rare case might arise in which a juvenile offender has sufficient psychological maturity, and at the same time demonstrates sufficient depravity, to merit a sentence of death. Indeed, this possibility is the linchpin of one contention pressed by petitioner and his amici. They assert that even assuming the truth of the observations we have made about juveniles' diminished culpability in general, jurors nonetheless should be allowed to consider mitigating arguments related to youth on a case-by-case basis, and in some cases to impose the death penalty if justified. A central feature of death penalty sentencing is a particular assessment of the circumstances of the crime and the characteristics of the offender. The system is designed to consider both aggravating and mitigating circumstances, including youth, in every case. Given this Court's own insistence on individualized consideration, petitioner maintains that it is both arbitrary and unnecessary to adopt a categorical rule barring imposition of the death penalty on any offender under 18 years of age.

We disagree. The differences between juvenile and adult offenders are too marked and well understood to risk allowing573 a youthful person to receive the death penalty despite insufficient culpability. An unacceptable likelihood exists that the brutality or cold-blooded nature of any particular crime would overpower mitigating arguments based on youth as a matter of course, even where the juvenile offender's objective immaturity, vulnerability, and lack of true depravity should require a sentence less severe than death. In some cases a defendant's youth may even be counted against him. In this very case, as we noted above, the prosecutor argued Simmons' youth was aggravating rather than mitigating. Supra, at 1188-1189. While this sort of overreaching could be corrected by a particular rule to ensure that the mitigating force of youth is not overlooked, that would not address our larger concerns.

It is difficult even for expert psychologists to differentiate between the juvenile offender whose crime reflects unfortunate yet transient immaturity, and the rare juvenile offender whose crime reflects irreparable corruption. See Steinberg & Scott 1014-1016. As we understand it, this difficulty underlies the rule forbidding psychiatrists from diagnosing any patient under 18 as having antisocial personality disorder, a disorder also referred to as psychopathy or sociopathy, and which is characterized by callousness, cynicism, and contempt for the feelings, rights, and suffering of others. American Psychiatric Association, Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders 701-706 (4th ed. text rev.2000); see also Steinberg & Scott 1015. If trained psychiatrists with the advantage of clinical testing and observation refrain, despite diagnostic expertise, from assessing any juvenile under 18 as having antisocial personality disorder, we conclude that States should refrain from asking jurors to issue a far graver condemnation-that a juvenile offender merits the death penalty. When a juvenile offender commits a heinous crime, the State can exact forfeiture of some 574 of the most basic liberties, but the State cannot extinguish his life and his potential to attain a mature understanding of his own humanity.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Drawing the line at 18 years of age is subject, of course, to the objections always raised against categorical rules. The qualities that distinguish juveniles from adults do not disappear when an individual turns 18. By the same token, some under 18 have already attained a level of maturity some adults will never reach. For the *1198 reasons we have discussed, however, a line must be drawn. The plurality opinion in Thompson drew the line at 16. In the intervening years the Thompson plurality's conclusion that offenders under 16 may not be executed has not been challenged. The logic of Thompson extends to those who are under 18. The age of 18 is the point where society draws the line for many purposes between childhood and adulthood. It is, we conclude, the age at which the line for death eligibility ought to rest.

These considerations mean Stanford v. Kentucky should be deemed no longer controlling on this issue. To the extent Stanford was based on review of the objective indicia of consensus that obtained in 1989, 492 U.S., at 370-371, 109 S.Ct. 2969, it suffices to note that those indicia have changed. Supra, at 1192-1194. It should be observed, furthermore, that the Stanford Court should have considered those States that had abandoned the death penalty altogether as part of the consensus against the juvenile death penalty, 492 U.S., at 370, n. 2, 109 S.Ct. 2969; a State's decision to bar the death penalty altogether of necessity demonstrates a judgment that the death penalty is inappropriate for all offenders, including juveniles. Last, to the extent Stanford was based on a rejection of the idea that this Court is required to bring its independent judgment to bear on the proportionality of the death penalty for a particular class of crimes or offenders, id., at 377-378, 109 S.Ct. 2969 (plurality opinion), it suffices to note that this rejection was inconsistent with prior Eighth Amendment decisions, 575Thompson,* 487 U.S., at 833-838, 108 S.Ct. 2687 (plurality opinion); Enmund, 458 U.S., at 797, 102 S.Ct. 3368; Coker, 433 U.S., at 597, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion). It is also inconsistent with the premises of our recent decision in Atkins. 536 U.S., at 312-313, 317-321, 122 S.Ct. 2242.

In holding that the death penalty cannot be imposed upon juvenile offenders, we take into account the circumstance that some States have relied on Stanford in seeking the death penalty against juvenile offenders. This consideration, however, does not outweigh our conclusion that Stanford should no longer control in those few pending cases or in those yet to arise.

IV

Our determination that the death penalty is disproportionate punishment for offenders under 18 finds confirmation in the stark reality that the United States is the only country in the world that continues to give official sanction to the juvenile death penalty. This reality does not become controlling, for the task of interpreting the Eighth Amendment remains our responsibility. Yet at least from the time of the Court's decision in Trop, the Court has referred to the laws of other countries and to international authorities as instructive for its interpretation of the Eighth Amendment's prohibition of "cruel and unusual punishments." 356 U.S., at 102-103, 78 S.Ct. 590 (plurality opinion) ("The civilized nations of the world are in virtual unanimity that statelessness is not to be imposed as punishment for crime"); see also Atkins, supra, at 317, n. 21, 122 S.Ct. 2242 (recognizing that "within the world community, the imposition of the death penalty for crimes committed by mentally retarded offenders is overwhelmingly disapproved"); Thompson, supra, at 830-831, and n. 31, 108 S.Ct. 2687 (plurality opinion) (noting the abolition of the juvenile death penalty "by other nations that share our Anglo-American heritage, and by the leading members of the Western European community," and observing that "[w]e have previously recognized the relevance of the views of the international community576 in determining whether a punishment is cruel *1199 and unusual"); Enmund, supra, at 796-797, n. 22, 102 S.Ct. 3368 (observing that "the doctrine of felony murder has been abolished in England and India, severely restricted in Canada and a number of other Commonwealth countries, and is unknown in continental Europe"); Coker, supra, at 596, n. 10, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion) ("It is ... not irrelevant here that out of 60 major nations in the world surveyed in 1965, only 3 retained the death penalty for rape where death did not ensue").

As respondent and a number of amici emphasize, Article 37 of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child, which every country in the world has ratified save for the United States and Somalia, contains an express prohibition on capital punishment for crimes committed by juveniles under 18. United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child, Art. 37, Nov. 20, 1989, 1577 U.N.T.S. 3, 28 I.L.M. 1448, 1468-1470 (entered into force Sept. 2, 1990); Brief for Respondent 48; Brief for European Union et al. as Amici Curiae 12-13; Brief for President James Earl Carter, Jr., et al. as Amici Curiae 9;

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Brief for Former U.S. Diplomats Morton Abramowitz et al. as Amici Curiae 7; Brief for Human Rights Committee of the Bar of England and Wales et al. as Amici Curiae 13-14. No ratifying country has entered a reservation to the provision prohibiting the execution of juvenile offenders. Parallel prohibitions are contained in other significant international covenants. See ICCPR, Art. 6(5), 999 U.N.T.S., at 175 (prohibiting capital punishment for anyone under 18 at the time of offense) (signed and ratified by the United States subject to a reservation regarding Article 6(5), as noted; supra, at 1194); American Convention on Human Rights: Pact of San Jose, Costa Rica, Art. 4(5), Nov. 22, 1969, 1144 U.N.T.S. 146 (entered into force July 19, 1978) (same); African Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child, Art. 5(3), OAU Doc. CAB/LEG/ 24.9/49 (1990) (entered into force Nov. 29, 1999) (same).

577 Respondent and his amici have submitted, and petitioner does not contest, that only seven countries other than the United States have executed juvenile offenders since 1990: Iran, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, Yemen, Nigeria, the Democratic Republic of Congo, and China. Since then each of these countries has either abolished capital punishment for juveniles or made public disavowal of the practice. Brief for Respondent 49-50. In sum, it is fair to say that the United States now stands alone in a world that has turned its face against the juvenile death penalty.

Though the international covenants prohibiting the juvenile death penalty are of more recent date, it is instructive to note that the United Kingdom abolished the juvenile death penalty before these covenants came into being. The United Kingdom's experience bears particular relevance here in light of the historic ties between our countries and in light of the Eighth Amendment's own origins. The Amendment was modeled on a parallel provision in the English Declaration of Rights of 1689, which provided: "[E]xcessive Bail ought not to be required nor excessive Fines imposed; nor cruel and unusual Punishments inflicted." 1 W. & M., ch. 2, § 10, in 3 Eng. Stat. at Large 441 (1770); see also Trop, supra, at 100, 78 S.Ct. 590 (plurality opinion). As of now, the United Kingdom has abolished the death penalty in its entirety; but, decades before it took this step, it recognized the disproportionate nature of the juvenile death penalty; and it abolished that penalty as a separate matter. In 1930 an official committee recommended that the minimum age for execution be raised to 21. House of Commons Report from the Select Committee on Capital Punishment (1930), *1200 193, p. 44. Parliament then enacted the Children and Young Person's Act of 1933, 23 Geo. 5, ch. 12, which prevented execution of those aged 18 at the date of the sentence. And in 1948, Parliament enacted the Criminal Justice Act, 11 & 12 Geo. 6, ch. 58, prohibiting the execution of any person under 18 at the time of the offense. In the 56 years that have passed 578 since the United Kingdom abolished the juvenile death penalty, the weight of authority against it there, and in the international community, has become well established.

It is proper that we acknowledge the overwhelming weight of international opinion against the juvenile death penalty, resting in large part on the understanding that the instability and emotional imbalance of young people may often be a factor in the crime. See Brief for Human Rights Committee of the Bar of England and Wales et al. as Amici Curiae 10-11. The opinion of the world community, while not controlling our outcome, does provide respected and significant confirmation for our own conclusions.

Over time, from one generation to the next, the Constitution has come to earn the high respect and even, as Madison dared to hope, the veneration of the American people. See The Federalist No. 49, p. 314 (C. Rossiter ed.1961). The document sets forth, and rests upon, innovative principles original to the American experience, such as federalism; a proven balance in political mechanisms through separation of powers; specific guarantees for the accused in criminal cases; and broad provisions to secure individual freedom and preserve human dignity. These doctrines and guarantees are central to the American experience and remain essential to our present-day self-definition and national identity. Not the least of the reasons we honor the Constitution, then, is because we know it to be our own. It does not lessen our fidelity to the Constitution or our pride in its origins to acknowledge that the express affirmation of certain fundamental rights by other nations and peoples simply underscores the centrality of those same rights within our own heritage of freedom.

* * *

The Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments forbid imposition of the death penalty on offenders who were under the age of 18 when their crimes were committed. The judgment 579 of the Missouri Supreme Court setting aside the sentence of death imposed upon Christopher Simmons is affirmed.

It is so ordered.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

APPENDIX A TO OPINION OF THE COURT

STATES THAT PERMIT THE IMPOSITION OF THE DEATH PENALTY ON JUVENILES

Alabama	Ala.Code § 13A-6-2(c) (West 2004) (no express minimum age)
Arizona	Ariz.Rev.Stat.Ann. § 13-703(A) (West Supp.2004) (same)
Arkansas	Ark.Code Ann. § 5-4-615 (Michie 1997) (same)
Delaware	Del.Code Ann., Tit. 11 (Lexis 1995) (same)
Florida	Fla. Stat. § 985.225(1) (2003) (same)
Georgia	Ga.Code Ann. § 17-9-3 (Lexis 2004) (same)
Idaho	Idaho Code § 18-4004 (Michie 2004) (same)
Kentucky	Ky.Rev.Stat.Ann. § 640.040(1) (Lexis 1999) (minimum age of 16)
Louisiana	La. Stat. Ann. § 14:30(C) (West Supp.2005) (no express minimum age)
Mississippi	Miss.Code Ann. § 97-3-21 (Lexis 2000) (same)
Missouri	Mo.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 565.020 (2000) (minimum age of 16)
Nevada	Nev.Rev.Stat. § 176.025 (2003) (minimum age of 16)
New Hampshire	N.H.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 630:1(V) (West 1996) (minimum age of 17)
North Carolina	N.C.Gen.Stat. § 14-17 (Lexis 2003) (minimum age of 17, except that those under 17 who commit murder while serving a prison sentence for a previous murder may receive the death penalty)
Oklahoma	Okla. Stat. Ann., Tit. 21, § 701.10 (West 2002) (no express minimum age)
Pennsylvania	18 Pa.Cons.Stat. § 1102 (2002) (same)
South Carolina	S.C.Code Ann. § 16-3-20 (West Supp.2004 and main ed.) (same)
Texas	Tex.Penal Code Ann. § 8.07(c) (West Supp.2004-2005) (minimum age of 17)
Utah	Utah Code Ann. § 76-3-206(1) (Lexis 2003) (no express minimum age)
Virginia	Va.Code Ann. § 18.2-10(a) (Lexis 2004) (minimum age of 16)

1201

STATES THAT RETAIN THE DEATH PENALTY BUT SET THE MINIMUM AGE AT 18

California	Cal.Penal Code Ann. § 190.5 (West 1999)
Colorado	Colo.Rev.Stat. § 18-1.4-102(1)(a) (Lexis 2004)
Connecticut	Conn. Gen.Stat. § 53a-46a(h) (2005)
Illinois	Ill.Comp.Stat. ch. 720, § 5/9-1(b) (West Supp.2003)
Indiana	Ind.Code Ann. § 35-50-2-3 (2004)
Kansas	Kan.Stat.Ann. § 21-4622 (1995)
Maryland	Md.Crim. Law Code Ann. § 2-202(b)(2)(i) (Lexis 2002)
Montana	Mont.Code Ann. § 45-5-102 (2003)
Nebraska	Neb.Rev.Stat. § 28-105.01(1) (Supp.2004)

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

New Jersey	N.J. Stat. Ann. § 2C:11-3(g) (West Supp. 2003)
New Mexico	N.M. Stat. Ann. § 31-18-14(A) (2000)
New York	N.Y. Penal Law Ann. § 125.27 (West 2004)
Ohio	Ohio Rev.Code Ann. § 2929.02(A) (Lexis 2003)
Oregon	Ore. Rev. Stat. §§ 161.620, 137.707(2) (2003)
South Dakota	S.D. Codified Laws § 23A-27A-42 (West 2004)
Tennessee	Tenn. Code Ann. § 37-1-134(a)(1) (1996)
Washington	Minimum age of 18 established by judicial decision. State v. Furman, 122 Wash.2d 440, 858 P.2d 1092 (1993)
Wyoming	Wyo. Stat. § 6-2-101(b) (Lexis Supp. 2004)

* * *

During the past year, decisions by the highest courts of Kansas and New York invalidated provisions in those States' death penalty statutes. State v. Marsh, 278 Kan. 520, 102 P.3d 445 (2004) (invalidating provision that required imposition of the death penalty if aggravating and mitigating circumstances were found to be in equal balance); People v. LaValle, 3 N.Y.3d 88, 783 N.Y.S.2d 485, 817 N.E.2d 341 (2004) (invalidating mandatory requirement to instruct the jury that, in the case of jury deadlock as to the appropriate sentence in a capital case, the defendant would receive a sentence of life imprisonment with parole eligibility after serving a minimum of 20 to 25 years). Due to these decisions, it would appear that in these States the death penalty remains on the books, but that as a practical matter it might not be imposed on anyone until there is a change of course in these decisions, or until the respective state legislatures remedy the problems the courts have identified. Marsh, supra, at 524-526, 544-546, 102 P.3d, at 452, 464; LaValle, supra, at 99, 783 N.Y.S.2d 485, 817 N.E.2d, at 344.

581 IE STATES WITHOUT THE DEATH PENALTY

Alaska
Hawaii
Iowa
Maine
Massachusetts
Michigan
Minnesota
North Dakota
Rhode Island
Vermont
West Virginia
Wisconsin

*1202 APPENDIX B TO OPINION OF THE COURT

STATE STATUTES ESTABLISHING A MINIMUM AGE TO VOTE

STATE	AGE	STATUTE
Alabama	18	Ala. Const., Amdt. No. 579

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Alaska	18	Alaska Const. Art. V, § 1; Alaska Stat. §15.05.010 (Lexis 2004)
Arizona	18	Ariz. Const., Art. VII, § 2; Ariz.Rev.Stat. § 16-101 (West 2001)
Arkansas	18	Ark. Code Ann. § 9-25-101 (Lexis 2002)
California	18	Cal. Const., Art. 2, § 2
Colorado	18	Colo.Rev.Stat. § 1-2-101 (Lexis 2004)
Connecticut	18	Conn. Const., Art. 6, § 1; Conn. Gen.Stat. § 9-12 (2005)
Delaware	18	Del. Code Ann., Tit. 15, § 1701 (Michie Supp. 2004)
District of Columbia	18	D.C.Code § 1-1001.02(2)(B) (West Supp.2004)
Florida	18	Fla. Stat. ch. 97.041 (2005)
Georgia	18	Ga. Const., Art. 2, § 1, ¶ 2; Ga.Code Ann. § 21-2-216 (Lexis 2003)
Hawaii	18	Haw. Const. Art. II, § 1; Haw.Rev.Stat. § 11-12 (1995)
Idaho	18	Idaho Code § 34-402 (Michie 2001)
Illinois	18	Ill. Const. Art. III, § 1; Ill. Comp.Stat., ch. 10, § 5/3-1 (West 2002)
Indiana	18	Ind.Code Ann. § 3-7-13-1 (2004)
Iowa	18	Iowa Code § 48A.5 (2003)
*582 Kansas	18	Kan. Const., Art. 5, § 1
Kentucky	18	Ky. Const. § 145
Louisiana	18	La. Const., Art. I, § 10; La.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 18:101 (West 2004)
Maine	18	Me. Const. Art. II, § 1 (West Supp. 2004); Me.Rev.Stat. Ann., Tit. 21-A, §§ 111, 111-A (West 1993 and Supp. 2004)
Maryland	18	Md. Elec. Law Code Ann. § 3-102 (Lexis 2002)
Massachusetts	18	Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 51, § 1 (West Supp. 2005)
Michigan	18	Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 168.492 (West 1989)
Minnesota	18	Minn.Stat. § 201.014(1)(a) (2004)
Mississippi	18	Miss. Const., Art. 12, § 241
Missouri	18	Mo. Const. Art. VIII, § 2
Montana	18	Mont. Const., Art. IV, § 2; Mont.Code Ann. § 13-1-111 (2003)
Nebraska	18	Neb. Const. Art. VI, § 1; Neb.Rev.Stat. § 32-110 (2004)
Nevada	18	Nev.Rev.Stat. § 293.485 (2003)
New Hampshire	18	N.H. Const. Pt. I, Art. 11
New Jersey	18	N.J. Const., Art. II, § 1, ¶ 3
New Mexico	18	no provision other than U.S. Const. Amdt. XXVI
New York	18	N.Y. Elec. Law Ann. § 5-102 (West 1998)
North Carolina	18	N.C. Gen.Stat.Ann. § 163-55 (Lexis 2003)
North Dakota	18	N.D. Const., Art. II, § 1
Ohio	18	Ohio Const. Art. V, § 1; Ohio Rev.Code Ann. § 3503.01 (Anderson 1996)
Oklahoma	18	Okla. Const., Art. III, § 1
Oregon	18	Or. Const. Art. II, § 2
Pennsylvania	18	25 Pa. Cons.Stat. Ann. § 2811 (1994)
Rhode Island	18	R.I. Gen. Laws, § 17-1-3 (Lexis 2003)
South Carolina	18	S.C.Code Ann. § 7-5-610 (West Supp.2004)
South Dakota	18	S.D. Const. Art. VII, § 2; S.D. Codified Laws Ann. § 12-3-1 (West 2004)

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Tennessee	18	Tenn.Code Ann. § 2-2-102 (2003)
Texas	18	Tex.Elec.Code Ann. § 11.002 (West 2003)
Utah	18	Utah Const., Art. IV, § 2; Utah Code Ann. § 20A-2-101 (Lexis 2003)
Vermont	18	Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 17, § 2121 (Lexis 2002)
*583 Virginia	18	Va. Const., Art. II, § 1
Washington	18	Wash. Const., Art. VI, § 1
West Virginia	18	W. Va.Code § 3-1-3 (Lexis 2002)
Wisconsin	18	Wis. Const., Art. III, § 1; Wis.Stat. § 6.02 (West 2004)
Wyoming	18	Wyo. Stat. Ann. §§ 22-1-102, 22-3-102 (Lexis Supp.2004)

* * *

The Twenty-Sixth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States provides that "[t]he right of citizens of the United States, who are eighteen years of age or older, to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of age."

APPENDIX C TO OPINION OF THE COURT

1203

STATE STATUTES ESTABLISHING A MINIMUM AGE FOR JURY SERVICE

STATE	AGE	STATUTE
Alabama	19	Ala.Code § 12-16-60(a)(1) (West 1995)
Alaska	18	Alaska Stat. § 09.20.010(a)(3) (Lexis 2004)
Arizona	18	Ariz.Rev.Stat. § 21-301(D) (West 2002)
Arkansas	18	Ark.Code Ann. §§ 16-31-101, 16-32-302 (Lexis Supp.2003)
California	18	Cal. Civ. Proc. § 203(a)(2) (West Supp.2005)
Colorado	18	Colo.Rev.Stat. § 13-71-105(2)(a) (Lexis 2004)
Connecticut	18	Conn. Gen.Stat. § 51-217(a) (2005)
Delaware	18	Del.Code Ann., Tit. 10, § 4509(b)(2) (Michie 1999)
District of Columbia	18	D.C.Code § 11-1906(b)(1)(C) (West 2001)
Florida	18	Fla. Stat. § 40.01 (2005)
Georgia	18	Ga.Code Ann. §§ 15-12-60, 15-12-163 (Lexis 2001)
Hawaii	18	Haw.Rev.Stat. § 612-4(a)(1) (Supp.2004)
Idaho	18	Idaho Code § 2-209(2)(a) (Michie 2004)
Illinois	18	Ill.Comp.Stat. ch. 705, § 305/2 (West 2002)
Indiana	18	Ind.Code § 33-28-4-8 (2004)
Iowa	18	Iowa Code § 607A.4(1)(a) (2003)
Kansas	18	Kan. Stat. Ann. § 43-156 (2000) (jurors must be qualified to be electors); Kan. Const., Art. 5, § 1 (person must be 18 to be qualified elector)
*584 Kentucky	18	Ky.Rev.Stat.Ann. § 29A.080(2)(a) (Lexis Supp.2004)
Louisiana	18	La.Code Crim. Proc. Ann., Art. 401(A)(2) (West 2003)
Maine	18	Me.Rev.Stat.Ann., tit. 14, § 1211 (West 1980)

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Maryland	18	Md. Cts. & Jud. Proc.Code Ann. § 8-104 (Lexis 2002)
Massachusetts	18	Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 234, § 1 (West 2000) (jurors must be qualified to vote); ch. 51, § 1 (West Supp. 2005) (person must be 18 to vote)
Michigan	18	Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 600.1307a(1)(a) (West Supp.2004)
Minnesota	18	Minn. Dist. Ct. Rule 808(b)(2) (2004)
Mississippi	21	Miss.Code Ann. § 13-5-1 (Lexis 2002)
Missouri	21	Mo. Rev. Stat. § 494.425(1) (2000)
Montana	18	Mont.Code Ann. § 3-15-301 (2003)
Nebraska	19	Neb. Rev. Stat. § 25-1601 (Supp. 2004)
Nevada	18	Nev.Rev.Stat. § 6.010 (2003) (juror must be qualified elector); § 293.485 (person must be 18 to vote)
New Hampshire	18	N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 500-A:7-a(I) (Lexis Supp. 2004)
New Jersey	18	N.J. Stat. Ann. § 2B:20-1(a) (West 2004 Pamphlet)
New Mexico	18	N.M. Stat. Ann. § 38-5-1 (1998)
New York	18	N.Y. Jud. Law Ann. § 510(2) (West 2003)
North Carolina	18	N.C. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 9-3 (Lexis 2005)
North Dakota	18	N.D. Cent.Code § 27-09.1-08(2)(b) (Lexis Supp.2003)
Ohio	18	Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 2313.42 (Anderson 2001)
Oklahoma	18	Okla. Stat. Ann., Tit. 38, § 28 (West Supp.2005)
Rhode Island	18	R.I. Gen. Laws § 9-9-1.1(a)(2) (Lexis Supp. 2005)
South Carolina	18	S.C.Code Ann. § 14-7-130 (West Supp.2004)
South Dakota	18	S.D. Codified Laws § 16-13-10 (2004)
Tennessee	18	Tenn.Code Ann. § 22-1-101 (1994)
Texas	18	Tex. Gov't Code Ann. § 62.102(1) (West 1998)
Utah	18	Utah Code Ann. § 78-46-7(1)(b) (Lexis 2002)
Vermont	18	Vt. Stat. Ann., Tit. 4, § 962(a)(1) (Lexis 1999) (jurors must have attained age of majority); Tit. 1, § 173 (Lexis 2005) (age of majority is 18)
585 Virginia	18	Va.Code Ann. § 8.01-337 (Lexis 2000)
Washington	18	Wash. Rev. Code Ann. § 2.36.070 (West 2004)
West Virginia	18	W. Va.Code § 52-1-8(b)(1) (Lexis 2000)
Wisconsin	18	Wis. Stat. § 756.02 (West 2001)
Wyoming	18	Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 1-11-101 (Lexis 2003) (jurors must be adults); § 14-1-101 (person becomes an adult at 18)

APPENDIX D TO OPINION OF THE COURT

*1204 .

STATE STATUTES ESTABLISHING A MINIMUM AGE FOR MARRIAGE WITHOUT PARENTAL OR JUDICIAL CONSENT

STATE	AGE STATUTE
Alabama	18 Ala. Code § 30-1-5 (West Supp. 2004)

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Alaska	18	Alaska Stat. §§ 25.05.011, 25.05.171 (Lexis 2004)
Arizona	18	Ariz.Rev.Stat.Ann. § 25-102 (West Supp.2004)
Arkansas	18	Ark.Code Ann. §§ 9-11-102, 9-11-208 (Lexis 2002)
California	18	Cal.Fam.Code Ann. § 301 (West 2004)
Colorado	18	Colo.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 14-2-106 (Lexis 2004)
Connecticut	18	Conn.Gen.Stat. § 46b-30 (2005)
Delaware	18	Del.Code Ann., Tit. 13, § 123 (Lexis 1999)
District of Columbia	18	D.C.Code § 46-411 (West 2001)
Florida	18	Fla. Stat. §§ 741.04, 741.0405 (2003)
Georgia	16	Ga.Code Ann. §§ 19-3-2, 19-3-37 (Lexis 2004) (those under 18 must obtain parental consent unless female applicant is pregnant or both applicants are parents of a living child, in which case minimum age to marry without consent is 16)
Hawaii	18	Haw.Rev.Stat. § 572-2 (1993)
Idaho	18	Idaho Code § 32-202 (Michie 1996)
Illinois	18	Ill. Comp. Stat., ch. 750, § 5/203 (West 2002)
Indiana	18	Ind.Code Ann. §§ 31-11-1-4, 31-11-1-5, 31-11-2-1, 31-11-2-3 (2004)
Iowa	18	Iowa Code § 595.2 (2003)
Kansas	18	Kan.Stat.Ann. § 23-106 (Supp.2006)
Kentucky	18	Ky.Rev.Stat. Ann. §§ 402.020, 402.210 (Lexis 1999)
Louisiana	18	La.Children's Code Ann., Arts. 1545, 1547 (West 2004) (minors may not marry without parental consent); La.Civ.Code Ann., Art. 29 (West 1999) (age of majority is 18)
Maine	18	Me.Rev.Stat. Ann., Tit. 19-A, § 652 (West 1998 and Supp.2004)
Maryland	16	Md.Fam.Law Code Ann. § 2-301 (Lexis 2004) (those under 18 must obtain parental consent unless female applicant can present proof of pregnancy or a child, in which case minimum age to marry without consent is 16)
Massachusetts	18	Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 207, §§ 7, 24, 25 (West 1998)
Michigan	18	Mich.Comp.Laws Ann. § 551.103 (West 2005)
Minnesota	18	Minn.Stat. § 517.02 (2004)
Mississippi	15 or 17	Miss.Code Ann. § 93-1-5 (Lexis 2004) (female applicants must be 15; male applicants must be 17)
Missouri	18	Mo.Rev.Stat. § 451.090 (2000)
Montana	18	Mont.Code Ann. §§ 40-1-202, 40-1-213 (2003)
Nebraska	19	Neb.Rev.Stat. § 42-105 (2004) (minors must have parental consent to marry); § 43-2101 (defining "minor" as a person under 19)
Nevada	18	Nev.Rev.Stat. § 122.020 (2003)
New Hampshire	18	N.H.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 457:5 (West 1992)
New Jersey	18	N.J.Stat.Ann. § 37:1-6 (West 2002)
New Mexico	18	N.M. Stat. Ann. § 40-1-6 (1999)
New York	18	N.Y.Dom.Rel.Law Ann. § 15 (West Supp.2005)
North Carolina	18	N.C. Gen.Stat. Ann. § 51-2 (Lexis 2003)
North Dakota	18	N.D.Cent.Code § 14-03-02 (Lexis 2004)

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Ohio	18	Ohio Rev.Code Ann. § 3101.01 (2003)
Oklahoma	18	Okla. Stat. Ann., Tit. 43, § 3 (West Supp. 2005)
Oregon	18	Ore.Rev.Stat. § 106.060 (2003)
Pennsylvania	18	23 Pa. Cons. Stat. § 1304 (1997)
Rhode Island	18	R.I. Gen. Laws § 15-2-11 (Supp.2004)
South Carolina	18	S.C. Code Ann. § 20-1-260 (West Supp. 2004)
South Dakota	18	S.D. Codified Laws § 25-1-9 (West 2004)
Tennessee	18	Tenn. Code Ann. § 36-3-106 (1996)
Texas	18	Tex. Fam. Code Ann. §§ 2.101-2.103 (West 1998)
Utah	18	Utah Code Ann. § 30-1-9 (Lexis Supp. 2004)
Vermont	18	Vt. Stat. Ann., Tit. 18, § 5142 (Lexis 2000)
Virginia	18	Va. Code Ann. §§ 20-45.1, 20-48, 20-49 (Lexis 2004)
Washington	18	Wash. Rev. Code Ann. § 26.04.210 (West 2005)
West Virginia	18	W. Va. Code § 48-2-601 (Lexis 2004)
Wisconsin	18	Wis. Stat. § 765.02 (2001)
Wyoming	18	Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 20-1-102 (Lexis 2003)

Justice STEVENS, with whom Justice GINSBURG joins, concurring.

Perhaps even more important than our specific holding today is our reaffirmation of the basic principle that informs the Court's interpretation of the Eighth Amendment. If the meaning of that Amendment had been frozen when it was originally drafted, it would impose no impediment to the execution of 7-year-old children today. See Stanford v. Kentucky, 492 U.S. 361, 368, 109 S.Ct. 2969, 106 L.Ed.2d 306 (1989) (describing the common law at the time of the Amendment's adoption). The evolving standards of decency that have driven our construction of this critically important part of the Bill of Rights foreclose any such reading of the Amendment. In the best tradition of the common law, the pace of that evolution is a matter for continuing debate; but that our understanding of the Constitution does change from time to time has been settled since John Marshall breathed life into its text. If great lawyers of his day-Alexander Hamilton, for example-were sitting with us today, I would expect them to join Justice KENNEDY's opinion for the Court. In all events, I do so without hesitation.

*1206 Justice O'CONNOR, dissenting.

The Court's decision today establishes a categorical rule forbidding the execution of any offender for any crime committed before his 18th birthday, no matter how deliberate, wanton, or cruel the offense. Neither the objective evidence of contemporary societal values, nor the Court's moral proportionality analysis, nor the two in tandem suffice to justify this ruling.

588 Although the Court finds support for its decision in the fact that a majority of the States now disallow capital punishment of 17-year-old offenders, it refrains from asserting that its holding is compelled by a genuine national consensus. Indeed, the evidence before us fails to demonstrate conclusively that any such consensus has emerged in the brief period since we upheld the constitutionality of this practice in Stanford v. Kentucky, 492 U.S. 361, 109 S.Ct. 2969, 106 L.Ed.2d 306 (1989).

Instead, the rule decreed by the Court rests, ultimately, on its independent moral judgment that death is a disproportionately severe punishment for any 17-year-old offender. I do not subscribe to this judgment. Adolescents as a class are undoubtedly less mature, and therefore less culpable for their misconduct, than adults. But the Court has adduced no evidence impeaching the seemingly reasonable conclusion reached by many state legislatures: that at least some 17-year-old murderers are sufficiently mature to deserve the death penalty in an appropriate case. Nor has it been shown that capital sentencing juries are incapable of accurately assessing a youthful defendant's maturity or of giving due weight to the mitigating characteristics associated with youth.

On this record-and especially in light of the fact that so little has changed since our recent decision in Stanford-I would not substitute our judgment about the moral propriety of capital punishment for 17-year-old murderers for the judgments of the Nation's legislatures. Rather, I would demand a clearer showing that our society truly has set its face against this practice before reading the Eighth Amendment categorically to forbid it.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

I

A

Let me begin by making clear that I agree with much of the Court's description of the general principles that guide our Eighth Amendment jurisprudence. The Amendment 589 bars not only punishments that are inherently " 'barbaric,' " but also those that are " 'excessive' in relation to the crime committed." Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584, 592, 97 S.Ct. 2861, 53 L.Ed.2d 982 (1977) (plurality opinion). A sanction is therefore beyond the State's authority to inflict if it makes "no measurable contribution" to acceptable penal goals or is "grossly out of proportion to the severity of the crime." Ibid. The basic "precept of justice that punishment for crime should be ... proportioned to [the] offense," Weems v. United States, 217 U.S. 349, 367, 30 S.Ct. 544, 54 L.Ed. 793 (1910), applies with special force to the death penalty. In capital cases, the Constitution demands that the punishment be tailored both to the nature of the crime itself and to the defendant's "personal responsibility and moral guilt." Enmund v. Florida, 458 U.S. 782, 801, 102 S.Ct. 3368, 73 L.Ed.2d 1140 (1982); see also id., at 825, 102 S.Ct. 3368 (O'CONNOR, J., dissenting); Tison v. Arizona, 481 U.S. 137, 149, 107 S.Ct. 1676, 95 L.Ed.2d 127 (1987); Eddings v. Oklahoma, 455 U.S. 104, 111-112, 102 S.Ct. 869, 71 L.Ed.2d 1 (1982).

It is by now beyond serious dispute that the Eighth Amendment's prohibition of "cruel and unusual punishments" is not a static command. Its mandate would be *1207 little more than a dead letter today if it barred only those sanctions-like the execution of children under the age of seven-that civilized society had already repudiated in 1791. See ante, at 1205 (STEVENS, J., concurring); cf. Stanford, supra, at 368, 109 S.Ct. 2969 (discussing the common law rule at the time the Bill of Rights was adopted). Rather, because "[t]he basic concept underlying the Eighth Amendment is nothing less than the dignity of man," the Amendment "must draw its meaning from the evolving standards of decency that mark the progress of a maturing society." Trop v. Dulles, 356 U.S. 86, 100-101, 78 S.Ct. 590, 2 L.Ed.2d 630 (1958) (plurality opinion). In discerning those standards, we look to "objective factors to the maximum possible extent." Coker, supra, at 592, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion). Laws enacted by the Nation's legislatures provide the "clearest and most reliable objective evidence of contemporary values." Penry v. Lynaugh, 492 U.S. 302, 331, 109 S.Ct. 2934, 106 L.Ed.2d 256 (1989). 590 And data reflecting the actions of sentencing juries, where available, can also afford " 'a significant and reliable objective index' " of societal mores. Coker, supra, at 596, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion) (quoting Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 181, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 49 L.Ed.2d 859 (1976) (joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and STEVENS, JJ.)).

Although objective evidence of this nature is entitled to great weight, it does not end our inquiry. Rather, as the Court today reaffirms, see ante, at 1191-1192, 1197-1198,"the Constitution contemplates that in the end our own judgment will be brought to bear on the question of the acceptability of the death penalty under the Eighth Amendment," Coker, supra, at 597, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion). "[P]roportionality-at least as regards capital punishment-not only requires an inquiry into contemporary standards as expressed by legislators and jurors, but also involves the notion that the magnitude of the punishment imposed must be related to the degree of the harm inflicted on the victim, as well as to the degree of the defendant's blameworthiness." Enmund, supra, at 815, 102 S.Ct. 3368 (O'CONNOR, J., dissenting). We therefore have a "constitutional obligation" to judge for ourselves whether the death penalty is excessive punishment for a particular offense or class of offenders. See Stanford, 492 U.S., at 382, 109 S.Ct. 2969 (O'CONNOR, J., concurring in part and concurring in judgment); see also Enmund, supra, at 797, 102 S.Ct. 3368 ("[I]t is for us ultimately to judge whether the Eighth Amendment permits imposition of the death penalty").

B

Twice in the last two decades, the Court has applied these principles in deciding whether the Eighth Amendment permits capital punishment of adolescent offenders. In Thompson v. Oklahoma, 487 U.S. 815, 108 S.Ct. 2687, 101 L.Ed.2d 702 (1988), a plurality of four Justices concluded that the Eighth Amendment barred capital punishment of an offender for a crime committed before the age of 16. I concurred in that judgment on narrower grounds. At the time, 32 state legislatures had "definitely concluded that no 15-year-old should be exposed to the threat 591 of execution," and no legislature had affirmatively endorsed such a practice. Id., at 849, 108 S.Ct. 2687

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

(O'CONNOR, J., concurring in judgment). While acknowledging that a national consensus forbidding the execution of 15-year-old offenders "very likely" did exist, I declined to adopt that conclusion as a matter of constitutional law without clearer evidentiary support. Ibid. Nor, in my view, could the issue be decided based on moral proportionality arguments of the type advanced *1208 by the Court today. Granting the premise "that adolescents are generally less blameworthy than adults who commit similar crimes," I wrote, "it does not necessarily follow that all 15-year-olds are incapable of the moral culpability that would justify the imposition of capital punishment." Id., at 853, 108 S.Ct. 2687. Similarly, we had before us no evidence "that 15-year-olds as a class are inherently incapable of being deterred from major crimes by the prospect of the death penalty." Ibid. I determined instead that, in light of the strong but inconclusive evidence of a national consensus against capital punishment of under-16 offenders, concerns rooted in the Eighth Amendment required that we apply a clear statement rule. Because the capital punishment statute in Thompson did not specify the minimum age at which commission of a capital crime would be punishable by death, I concluded that the statute could not be read to authorize the death penalty for a 15-year-old offender. Id., at 857-858, 108 S.Ct. 2687.

The next year, in Stanford v. Kentucky, supra, the Court held that the execution of 16- or 17-year-old capital murderers did not violate the Eighth Amendment. I again wrote separately, concurring in part and concurring in the judgment. At that time, 25 States did not permit the execution of under-18 offenders, including 13 that lacked the death penalty altogether. See id., at 370, 109 S.Ct. 2969. While noting that "[t]he day may come when there is such general legislative rejection of the execution of 16- or 17-year-old capital murderers that a clear national consensus can be said to have developed," I concluded that that day had not yet arrived. 592Id.*, at 381-382, 109 S.Ct. 2969. I reaffirmed my view that, beyond assessing the actions of legislatures and juries, the Court has a constitutional obligation to judge for itself whether capital punishment is a proportionate response to the defendant's blameworthiness. Id., at 382, 109 S.Ct. 2969. Nevertheless, I concluded that proportionality arguments similar to those endorsed by the Court today did not justify a categorical Eighth Amendment rule against capital punishment of 16- and 17-year-old offenders. See ibid. (citing Thompson, supra, at 853-854, 108 S.Ct. 2687 (O'CONNOR, J., concurring in judgment)).

The Court has also twice addressed the constitutionality of capital punishment of mentally retarded offenders. In Penry v. Lynaugh, 492 U.S. 302, 109 S.Ct. 2934, 106 L.Ed.2d 256 (1989), decided the same year as Stanford, we rejected the claim that the Eighth Amendment barred the execution of the mentally retarded. At that time, only two States specifically prohibited the practice, while 14 others did not have capital punishment at all. 492 U.S., at 334, 109 S.Ct. 2934. Much had changed when we revisited the question three Terms ago in Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. 304, 122 S.Ct. 2242, 153 L.Ed.2d 335 (2002). In Atkins, the Court reversed Penry and held that the Eighth Amendment forbids capital punishment of mentally retarded offenders. 536 U.S., at 321, 122 S.Ct. 2242. In the 13 years between Penry and Atkins, there had been a wave of legislation prohibiting the execution of such offenders. By the time we heard Atkins, 30 States barred the death penalty for the mentally retarded, and even among those States theoretically permitting such punishment, very few had executed a mentally retarded offender in recent history. 536 U.S., at 314-316, 122 S.Ct. 2242. On the basis of this evidence, the Court determined that it was "fair to say that a national consensus ha[d] developed against" the practice. Id., at 316, 122 S.Ct. 2242.

*1209 But our decision in Atkins did not rest solely on this tentative conclusion. Rather, the Court's independent moral judgment was dispositive. The Court observed that mentally retarded persons suffer from major cognitive and behavioral 593 deficits, i.e., "subaverage intellectual functioning" and "significant limitations in adaptive skills such as communication, self-care, and self-direction that became manifest before age 18." Id., at 318, 122 S.Ct. 2242. "Because of their impairments, [such persons] by definition ... have diminished capacities to understand and process information, to communicate, to abstract from mistakes and learn from experience, to engage in logical reasoning, to control impulses, and to understand the reactions of others." Ibid. We concluded that these deficits called into serious doubt whether the execution of mentally retarded offenders would measurably contribute to the principal penological goals that capital punishment is intended to serve-retribution and deterrence. Id., at 319-321, 122 S.Ct. 2242. Mentally retarded offenders' impairments so diminish their personal moral culpability that it is highly unlikely that such offenders could ever deserve the ultimate punishment, even in cases of capital murder. Id., at 319, 122 S.Ct. 2242. And these same impairments made it very improbable that the threat of the death penalty would deter mentally retarded persons from committing capital crimes. Id., at 319-320, 122 S.Ct. 2242. Having concluded that capital punishment of the mentally retarded is inconsistent with the Eighth Amendment, the Court " 'le[ft] to the State[s] the task of developing appropriate ways to enforce the constitutional restriction upon [their] execution of sentences.' " Id., at 317, 122 S.Ct. 2242 (quoting Ford v. Wainwright, 477 U.S. 399, 416-417, 106 S.Ct. 2595, 91 L.Ed.2d 335 (1986)).

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

II

A

Although the general principles that guide our Eighth Amendment jurisprudence afford some common ground, I part ways with the Court in applying them to the case before us. As a preliminary matter, I take issue with the Court's failure to reprove, or even to acknowledge, the Supreme Court of Missouri's unabashed refusal to follow our *594 controlling decision in Stanford. The lower court concluded that, despite Stanford's clear holding and historical recency, our decision was no longer binding authority because it was premised on what the court deemed an obsolete assessment of contemporary values. Quite apart from the merits of the constitutional question, this was clear error.

Because the Eighth Amendment "draw[s] its meaning from ... evolving standards of decency," Trop, 356 U.S., at 101, 78 S.Ct. 590 (plurality opinion), significant changes in societal mores over time may require us to reevaluate a prior decision. Nevertheless, it remains "this Court's prerogative alone to overrule one of its precedents." State Oil Co. v. Khan, 522 U.S. 3, 20, 118 S.Ct. 275, 139 L.Ed.2d 199 (1997) (emphasis added). That is so even where subsequent decisions or factual developments may appear to have "significantly undermined" the rationale for our earlier holding. United States v. Hatter, 532 U.S. 557, 567, 121 S.Ct. 1782, 149 L.Ed.2d 820 (2001); see also State Oil Co., supra, at 20, 118 S.Ct. 275; Rodriguez de Quijas v. Shearson/American Express, Inc., 490 U.S. 477, 484, 109 S.Ct. 1917, 104 L.Ed.2d 526 (1989). The Eighth Amendment provides no exception to this rule. On the contrary, clear, predictable, and uniform constitutional standards are especially desirable in this sphere. By affirming the lower court's judgment without so 1210 much as a slap on the hand, today's decision threatens to invite frequent and disruptive reassessments of our Eighth Amendment precedents.

B

In determining whether the juvenile death penalty comports with contemporary standards of decency, our inquiry begins with the "clearest and most reliable objective evidence of contemporary values"-the actions of the Nation's legislatures. Penry, supra, at 331, 109 S.Ct. 2934. As the Court emphasizes, the overall number of jurisdictions that currently disallow the execution of under-18 offenders is the same as the number that forbade the execution of mentally retarded offenders when Atkins was decided. *595 Ante, at 1192. At present, 12 States and the District of Columbia do not have the death penalty, while an additional 18 States and the Federal Government authorize capital punishment but prohibit the execution of under-18 offenders. See ante, at 1201-1202 (Appendix A). And here, as in Atkins, only a very small fraction of the States that permit capital punishment of offenders within the relevant class has actually carried out such an execution in recent history: Six States have executed under-18 offenders in the 16 years since Stanford, while five States had executed mentally retarded offenders in the 13 years prior to Atkins. See Atkins, 536 U.S., at 316, 122 S.Ct. 2242; V. Streib, The Juvenile Death Penalty Today: Death Sentences and Executions for Juvenile Crimes, January 1, 1973-December 31, 2004, No. 76, pp. 15-23 (2005), available at http:// www. law. onu. edu/ faculty/ streib/ documents/ Juv DeathDec2004.pdf (last updated Jan. 31, 2005) (as visited Feb. 25, 2005, and available in Clerk of Court's case file) (hereinafter Streib). In these respects, the objective evidence in this case is, indeed, "similar, and in some respects parallel to," the evidence upon which we relied in Atkins. Ante, at 1192.

While the similarities between the two cases are undeniable, the objective evidence of national consensus is marginally weaker here. Most importantly, in Atkins there was significant evidence of opposition to the execution of the mentally retarded, but there was virtually no countervailing evidence of affirmative legislative support for this practice. Cf. Thompson, 487 U.S., at 849, 108 S.Ct. 2687 (O'CONNOR, J., concurring in judgment) (attributing significance to the fact that "no legislature in this country has affirmatively and unequivocally endorsed" capital punishment of 15-year-old offenders). The States that permitted such executions did so only because they had not enacted any prohibitory legislation. Here, by contrast, at least seven States have current statutes that specifically set 16 or 17 as the minimum age at which *596 commission of a capital crime can expose the offender to the death penalty. See ante, at 1200-1201 (Appendix A).[FN*] Five of these seven States presently have one or more juvenile offenders1211 on death row (six if respondent is included in the count), see Streib 24-31, and four of them have executed at least one under-18 offender in the past 15 years, see id., at 15-23. In all, there are currently over 70 juvenile offenders on death row in 12 different States (13 including respondent). See id., at 11, 24-31. This evidence suggests some measure of continuing public support for the availability of the death penalty for 17-year-old capital murderers.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

> FN* In 12 other States that have capital punishment, under-18 offenders can be subject to the death penalty as a result of transfer statutes that permit such offenders to be tried as adults for certain serious crimes. See ante, at 1200-1201 (Appendix A). As I observed in Thompson v. Oklahoma, 487 U.S. 815, 850-852, 108 S.Ct. 2687, 101 L.Ed.2d 702 (1988) (opinion concurring in judgment): "There are many reasons, having nothing whatsoever to do with capital punishment, that might motivate a legislature to provide as a general matter for some [minors] to be channeled into the adult criminal justice process." Accordingly, while these 12 States clearly cannot be counted as opposing capital punishment of under-18 offenders, the fact that they permit such punishment through this indirect mechanism does not necessarily show affirmative and unequivocal legislative support for the practice. See ibid.

Moreover, the Court in Atkins made clear that it was "not so much the number of [States forbidding execution of the mentally retarded] that [was] significant, but the consistency of the direction of change." 536 U.S., at 315, 122 S.Ct. 2242. In contrast to the trend in Atkins, the States have not moved uniformly toward abolishing the juvenile death penalty. Instead, since our decision in Stanford, two States have expressly reaffirmed their support for this practice by enacting statutes setting 16 as the minimum age for capital punishment. See Mo.Rev.Stat. § 565.020.2 (2000); Va.Code Ann. § 18.2-10(a) (Lexis 2004). Furthermore, as the Court emphasized in Atkins itself, 536 U.S., at 315, n. 18, 122 S.Ct. 2242, the pace of legislative action in this context has been considerably slower than it was with regard to capital punishment of the mentally retarded.597 In the 13 years between our decisions in Penry and Atkins, no fewer than 16 States banned the execution of mentally retarded offenders. See Atkins, supra, at 314-315, 122 S.Ct. 2242. By comparison, since our decision 16 years ago in Stanford, only four States that previously permitted the execution of under-18 offenders, plus the Federal Government, have legislatively reversed course, and one additional State's high court has construed the State's death penalty statute not to apply to under-18 offenders, see State v. Furman, 122 Wash.2d 440, 458, 858 P.2d 1092, 1103 (1993) (en banc). The slower pace of change is no doubt partially attributable, as the Court says, to the fact that 12 States had already imposed a minimum age of 18 when Stanford was decided. See ante, at 1193-1194. Nevertheless, the extraordinary wave of legislative action leading up to our decision in Atkins provided strong evidence that the country truly had set itself against capital punishment of the mentally retarded. Here, by contrast, the halting pace of change gives reason for pause.

To the extent that the objective evidence supporting today's decision is similar to that in Atkins, this merely highlights the fact that such evidence is not dispositive in either of the two cases. After all, as the Court today confirms, ante, at 1191, 1197-1198, the Constitution requires that " 'in the end our own judgment ... be brought to bear' " in deciding whether the Eighth Amendment forbids a particular punishment, Atkins, supra, at 312, 122 S.Ct. 2242 (quoting Coker, 433 U.S., at 597, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion)). This judgment is not merely a rubber stamp on the tally of legislative and jury actions. Rather, it is an integral part of the Eighth Amendment inquiry-and one that is entitled to independent weight in reaching our ultimate decision.

Here, as in Atkins, the objective evidence of a national consensus is weaker than in most prior cases in which the Court has struck down a particular punishment under the Eighth Amendment. See Coker, supra, at 595-596, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion) (striking down death penalty for rape of an adult 598 woman, where only one jurisdiction authorized such punishment); Enmund, 458 U.S., at 792, 102 S.Ct. 3368 (striking down death penalty for certain crimes of aiding and abetting felony-murder, where only eight jurisdictions authorized such punishment); 1212Ford v. Wainwright, 477 U.S., at 408, 106 S.Ct. 2595 (striking down capital punishment of the insane, where no jurisdiction permitted this practice). In my view, the objective evidence of national consensus, standing alone, was insufficient to dictate the Court's holding in Atkins. Rather, the compelling moral proportionality argument against capital punishment of mentally retarded offenders played a decisive role in persuading the Court that the practice was inconsistent with the Eighth Amendment. Indeed, the force of the proportionality argument in Atkins significantly bolstered the Court's confidence that the objective evidence in that case did, in fact, herald the emergence of a genuine national consensus. Here, by contrast, the proportionality argument against the juvenile death penalty is so flawed that it can be given little, if any, analytical weight-it proves too weak to resolve the lingering ambiguities in the objective evidence of legislative consensus or to justify the Court's categorical rule.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

C

Seventeen-year-old murderers must be categorically exempted from capital punishment, the Court says, because they "cannot with reliability be classified among the worst offenders." Ante, at 1195. That conclusion is premised on three perceived differences between "adults," who have already reached their 18th birthdays, and "juveniles," who have not. See ante, at 1195-1196. First, juveniles lack maturity and responsibility and are more reckless than adults. Second, juveniles are more vulnerable to outside influences because they have less control over their surroundings. And third, a juvenile's character is not as fully formed as that of an adult. Based on these characteristics, the Court determines that 17-year-old capital murderers are not as 599 blameworthy as adults guilty of similar crimes; that 17-year-olds are less likely than adults to be deterred by the prospect of a death sentence; and that it is difficult to conclude that a 17-year-old who commits even the most heinous of crimes is "irretrievably depraved." Ante, at 1195-1197. The Court suggests that "a rare case might arise in which a juvenile offender has sufficient psychological maturity, and at the same time demonstrates sufficient depravity, to merit a sentence of death." Ante, at 1197. However, the Court argues that a categorical age-based prohibition is justified as a prophylactic rule because "[t]he differences between juvenile and adult offenders are too marked and well understood to risk allowing a youthful person to receive the death penalty despite insufficient culpability." Ante, at 1197.

It is beyond cavil that juveniles as a class are generally less mature, less responsible, and less fully formed than adults, and that these differences bear on juveniles' comparative moral culpability. See, e.g., Johnson v. Texas, 509 U.S. 350, 367, 113 S.Ct. 2658, 125 L.Ed.2d 290 (1993) ("There is no dispute that a defendant's youth is a relevant mitigating circumstance"); id., at 376, 113 S.Ct. 2658 (O'CONNOR, J., dissenting) ("[T]he vicissitudes of youth bear directly on the young offender's culpability and responsibility for the crime"); Eddings, 455 U.S., at 115-116, 102 S.Ct. 869 ("Our history is replete with laws and judicial recognition that minors, especially in their earlier years, generally are less mature and responsible than adults"). But even accepting this premise, the Court's proportionality argument fails to support its categorical rule.

First, the Court adduces no evidence whatsoever in support of its sweeping conclusion, see ante, at 1196-1197, that it is only in "rare" cases, if ever, that 17-year-old murderers are sufficiently mature and act with sufficient depravity to warrant the death penalty. The fact that juveniles are *1213 generally less culpable for their misconduct than adults does not necessarily mean that a 17-year-old murderer cannot be sufficiently culpable to merit the death penalty. At most, the 600 Court's argument suggests that the average 17-year-old murderer is not as culpable as the average adult murderer. But an especially depraved juvenile offender may nevertheless be just as culpable as many adult offenders considered bad enough to deserve the death penalty. Similarly, the fact that the availability of the death penalty may be less likely to deter a juvenile from committing a capital crime does not imply that this threat cannot effectively deter some 17-year-olds from such an act. Surely there is an age below which no offender, no matter what his crime, can be deemed to have the cognitive or emotional maturity necessary to warrant the death penalty. But at least at the margins between adolescence and adulthood-and especially for 17-year-olds such as respondent-the relevant differences between "adults" and "juveniles" appear to be a matter of degree, rather than of kind. It follows that a legislature may reasonably conclude that at least some 17-year-olds can act with sufficient moral culpability, and can be sufficiently deterred by the threat of execution, that capital punishment may be warranted in an appropriate case.

Indeed, this appears to be just such a case. Christopher Simmons' murder of Shirley Crook was premeditated, wanton, and cruel in the extreme. Well before he committed this crime, Simmons declared that he wanted to kill someone. On several occasions, he discussed with two friends (ages 15 and 16) his plan to burglarize a house and to murder the victim by tying the victim up and pushing him from a bridge. Simmons said they could " 'get away with it' " because they were minors. Brief for Petitioner 3. In accord with this plan, Simmons and his 15-year-old accomplice broke into Mrs. Crook's home in the middle of the night, forced her from her bed, bound her, and drove her to a state park. There, they walked her to a railroad trestle spanning a river, "hog-tied" her with electrical cable, bound her face completely with duct tape, and pushed her, still alive, from the trestle. She drowned in the water below. Id., at 4. One can 601 scarcely imagine the terror that this woman must have suffered throughout the ordeal leading to her death. Whatever can be said about the comparative moral culpability of 17-year-olds as a general matter, Simmons' actions unquestionably reflect " 'a consciousness materially more "depraved" than that of'... the average murderer." Atkins, 536 U.S., at 319, 122 S.Ct. 2242 (quoting Godfrey v. Georgia, 446 U.S. 420, 433, 100 S.Ct. 1759, 64 L.Ed.2d 398 (1980)). And Simmons' prediction that he could murder with impunity because he had not yet turned 18 though inaccurate suggests that he did take into account the perceived risk of punishment in deciding whether to commit the crime. Based on this evidence, the sentencing jury certainly had reasonable grounds for concluding that, despite Simmons' youth, he "ha[d] sufficient psychological maturity" when he committed this horrific murder, and "at the same time demonstrate[d] sufficient depravity, to merit a sentence of death." Ante, at 1197.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

The Court's proportionality argument suffers from a second and closely related defect: It fails to establish that the differences in maturity between 17-year-olds and young "adults" are both universal enough and significant enough to justify a bright-line prophylactic rule against capital punishment of the former. The Court's analysis is premised on differences in the aggregate between juveniles and adults, which frequently do not hold true when comparing individuals. Although it may *1214 be that many 17-year-old murderers lack sufficient maturity to deserve the death penalty, some juvenile murderers may be quite mature. Chronological age is not an unfailing measure of psychological development, and common experience suggests that many 17-year-olds are more mature than the average young "adult." In short, the class of offenders exempted from capital punishment by today's decision is too broad and too diverse to warrant a categorical prohibition. Indeed, the age-based line drawn by the Court is indefensibly arbitrary-it quite likely will protect a number of offenders who are mature enough to 602 deserve the death penalty and may well leave vulnerable many who are not.

For purposes of proportionality analysis, 17-year-olds as a class are qualitatively and materially different from the mentally retarded. "Mentally retarded" offenders, as we understood that category in Atkins, are defined by precisely the characteristics which render death an excessive punishment. A mentally retarded person is, "by definition," one whose cognitive and behavioral capacities have been proved to fall below a certain minimum. See Atkins, 536 U.S., at 318, 122 S.Ct. 2242; see also id., at 308, n. 3, 122 S.Ct. 2242 (discussing characteristics of mental retardation); id., at 317, and n. 22, 122 S.Ct. 2242 (leaving to the States the development of mechanisms to determine which offenders fall within the class exempt from capital punishment). Accordingly, for purposes of our decision in Atkins, the mentally retarded are not merely less blameworthy for their misconduct or less likely to be deterred by the death penalty than others. Rather, a mentally retarded offender is one whose demonstrated impairments make it so highly unlikely that he is culpable enough to deserve the death penalty or that he could have been deterred by the threat of death, that execution is not a defensible punishment. There is no such inherent or accurate fit between an offender's chronological age and the personal limitations which the Court believes make capital punishment excessive for 17-year-old murderers. Moreover, it defies common sense to suggest that 17-year-olds as a class are somehow equivalent to mentally retarded persons with regard to culpability or susceptibility to deterrence. Seventeen-year-olds may, on average, be less mature than adults, but that lesser maturity simply cannot be equated with the major, lifelong impairments suffered by the mentally retarded.

The proportionality issues raised by the Court clearly implicate Eighth Amendment concerns. But these concerns may properly be addressed not by means of an arbitrary, categorical age-based rule, but rather through individualized 603 sentencing in which juries are required to give appropriate mitigating weight to the defendant's immaturity, his susceptibility to outside pressures, his cognizance of the consequences of his actions, and so forth. In that way the constitutional response can be tailored to the specific problem it is meant to remedy. The Eighth Amendment guards against the execution of those who are "insufficient[ly] culpab[le]," see ante, at 1197, in significant part, by requiring sentencing that "reflect[s] a reasoned moral response to the defendant's background, character, and crime." California v. Brown, 479 U.S. 538, 545, 107 S.Ct. 837, 93 L.Ed.2d 934 (1987) (O'CONNOR, J., concurring). Accordingly, the sentencer in a capital case must be permitted to give full effect to all constitutionally relevant mitigating evidence. See Tennard v. Dretke, 542 U.S. 274, 283-285, 124 S.Ct. 2562, 2569-2570, 159 L.Ed.2d 384 (2004); Lockett v. Ohio, 438 U.S. 586, 604, 98 S.Ct. 2954, 57 L.Ed.2d 973 (1978) (plurality opinion). A *1215 defendant's youth or immaturity is, of course, a paradigmatic example of such evidence. See Eddings, 455 U.S., at 115-116, 102 S.Ct. 869.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Although the prosecutor's apparent attempt to use respondent's youth as an aggravating circumstance in this case is troubling, that conduct was never challenged with specificity in the lower courts and is not directly at issue here. As the Court itself suggests, such "overreaching" would best be addressed, if at all, through a more narrowly tailored remedy. See ante, at 1197. The Court argues that sentencing juries cannot accurately evaluate a youthful offender's maturity or give appropriate weight to the mitigating characteristics related to youth. But, again, the Court presents no real evidence-and the record appears to contain none-supporting this claim. Perhaps more importantly, the Court fails to explain why this duty should be so different from, or so much more difficult than, that of assessing and giving proper effect to any other qualitative capital sentencing factor. I would not be so quick to conclude that the constitutional safeguards, the sentencing juries, and the trial judges upon 604 which we place so much reliance in all capital cases are inadequate in this narrow context.

D

I turn, finally, to the Court's discussion of foreign and international law. Without question, there has been a global trend in recent years toward abolishing capital punishment for under-18 offenders. Very few, if any, countries other than the United States now permit this practice in law or in fact. See ante, at 1199. While acknowledging that the actions and views of other countries do not dictate the outcome of our Eighth Amendment inquiry, the Court asserts that "the overwhelming weight of international opinion against the juvenile death penalty ... does provide respected and significant confirmation for [its] own conclusions." Ante, at 1200. Because I do not believe that a genuine national consensus against the juvenile death penalty has yet developed, and because I do not believe the Court's moral proportionality argument justifies a categorical, age-based constitutional rule, I can assign no such confirmatory role to the international consensus described by the Court. In short, the evidence of an international consensus does not alter my determination that the Eighth Amendment does not, at this time, forbid capital punishment of 17-year-old murderers in all cases.

Nevertheless, I disagree with Justice SCALIA's contention, post, at 1225-1229 (dissenting opinion), that foreign and international law have no place in our Eighth Amendment jurisprudence. Over the course of nearly half a century, the Court has consistently referred to foreign and international law as relevant to its assessment of evolving standards of decency. See Atkins, supra, at 317, n. 21, 122 S.Ct. 2242; Thompson, 487 U.S., at 830-831, and n. 31, 108 S.Ct. 2687 (plurality opinion); Enmund, 458 U.S., at 796-797, n. 22, 102 S.Ct. 3368; Coker, 433 U.S., at 596, n. 10, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion); Trop, 356 U.S., at 102-103, 78 S.Ct. 590 (plurality opinion). This inquiry reflects the special character of the Eighth 605 Amendment, which, as the Court has long held, draws its meaning directly from the maturing values of civilized society. Obviously, American law is distinctive in many respects, not least where the specific provisions of our Constitution and the history of its exposition so dictate. Cf. post, at 1226-1227 (SCALIA, J., dissenting) (discussing distinctively American rules of law related to the Fourth Amendment and the Establishment Clause). But this Nation's evolving understanding of human dignity certainly*1216 is neither wholly isolated from, nor inherently at odds with, the values prevailing in other countries. On the contrary, we should not be surprised to find congruence between domestic and international values, especially where the international community has reached clear agreement-expressed in international law or in the domestic laws of individual countries-that a particular form of punishment is inconsistent with fundamental human rights. At least, the existence of an international consensus of this nature can serve to confirm the reasonableness of a consonant and genuine American consensus. The instant case presents no such domestic consensus, however, and the recent emergence of an otherwise global consensus does not alter that basic fact.

* * *

In determining whether the Eighth Amendment permits capital punishment of a particular offense or class of offenders, we must look to whether such punishment is consistent with contemporary standards of decency. We are obligated to weigh both the objective evidence of societal values and our own judgment as to whether death is an excessive sanction in the context at hand. In the instant case, the objective evidence is inconclusive; standing alone, it does not demonstrate that our society has repudiated capital punishment of 17-year-old offenders in all cases. Rather, the actions of the Nation's legislatures suggest that, although a clear and durable national consensus against this practice may in time 606 emerge, that day has yet to arrive. By acting so soon after our decision in Stanford, the Court both pre-empts the democratic debate through which genuine consensus might develop and simultaneously runs a considerable risk of inviting lower court reassessments of our Eighth Amendment precedents.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

To be sure, the objective evidence supporting today's decision is similar to (though marginally weaker than) the evidence before the Court in Atkins. But Atkins could not have been decided as it was based solely on such evidence. Rather, the compelling proportionality argument against capital punishment of the mentally retarded played a decisive role in the Court's Eighth Amendment ruling. Moreover, the constitutional rule adopted in Atkins was tailored to this proportionality argument: It exempted from capital punishment a defined group of offenders whose proven impairments rendered it highly unlikely, and perhaps impossible, that they could act with the degree of culpability necessary to deserve death. And Atkins left to the States the development of mechanisms to determine which individual offenders fell within this class.

In the instant case, by contrast, the moral proportionality arguments against the juvenile death penalty fail to support the rule the Court adopts today. There is no question that "the chronological age of a minor is itself a relevant mitigating factor of great weight," Eddings, 455 U.S., at 116, 102 S.Ct. 869, and that sentencing juries must be given an opportunity carefully to consider a defendant's age and maturity in deciding whether to assess the death penalty. But the mitigating characteristics associated with youth do not justify an absolute age limit. A legislature can reasonably conclude, as many have, that some 17-year-old murderers are mature enough to deserve the death penalty in an appropriate case. And nothing in the record before us suggests that sentencing juries are so unable accurately to assess a 17-year-old defendant's*607 maturity, or so incapable of giving proper weight to youth as a mitigating factor, that the Eighth Amendment requires the bright-line rule imposed today. In the end, the Court's flawed proportionality argument simply 1217 cannot bear the weight the Court would place upon it.

Reasonable minds can differ as to the minimum age at which commission of a serious crime should expose the defendant to the death penalty, if at all. Many jurisdictions have abolished capital punishment altogether, while many others have determined that even the most heinous crime, if committed before the age of 18, should not be punishable by death. Indeed, were my office that of a legislator, rather than a judge, then I, too, would be inclined to support legislation setting a minimum age of 18 in this context. But a significant number of States, including Missouri, have decided to make the death penalty potentially available for 17-year-old capital murderers such as respondent. Without a clearer showing that a genuine national consensus forbids the execution of such offenders, this Court should not substitute its own "inevitably subjective judgment" on how best to resolve this difficult moral question for the judgments of the Nation's democratically elected legislatures. See Thompson, 487 U.S., at 854, 108 S.Ct. 2687 (O'CONNOR, J., concurring in judgment). I respectfully dissent.

Justice SCALIA, with whom THE CHIEF JUSTICE and Justice THOMAS join, dissenting.

In urging approval of a constitution that gave life-tenured judges the power to nullify laws enacted by the people's representatives, Alexander Hamilton assured the citizens of New York that there was little risk in this, since "[t]he judiciary ... ha[s] neither FORCE nor WILL but merely judgment." The Federalist No. 78, p. 465 (C. Rossiter ed.1961). But Hamilton had in mind a traditional judiciary, "bound down by strict rules and precedents which serve to define *608 and point out their duty in every particular case that comes before them." Id., at 471. Bound down, indeed. What a mockery today's opinion makes of Hamilton's expectation, announcing the Court's conclusion that the meaning of our Constitution has changed over the past 15 years-not, mind you, that this Court's decision 15 years ago was wrong, but that the Constitution has changed. The Court reaches this implausible result by purporting to advert, not to the original meaning of the Eighth Amendment, but to "the evolving standards of decency," ante, at 1190 (internal quotation marks omitted), of our national society. It then finds, on the flimsiest of grounds, that a national consensus which could not be perceived in our people's laws barely 15 years ago now solidly exists. Worse still, the Court says in so many words that what our people's laws say about the issue does not, in the last analysis, matter: "[I]n the end our own judgment will be brought to bear on the question of the acceptability of the death penalty under the Eighth Amendment." Ante, at 1191-1192 (internal quotation marks omitted). The Court thus proclaims itself sole arbiter of our Nation's moral standards-and in the course of discharging that awesome responsibility purports to take guidance from the views of foreign courts and legislatures. Because I do not believe that the meaning of our Eighth Amendment, any more than the meaning of other provisions of our Constitution, should be determined by the subjective views of five Members of this Court and like-minded foreigners, I dissent.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

I

In determining that capital punishment of offenders who committed murder before age 18 is "cruel and unusual" under the Eighth Amendment, the Court first considers, in accordance with our modern (though in my view mistaken) jurisprudence, whether there is a "national consensus," ibid. (internal quotation marks omitted),1218 that laws allowing such *609 executions contravene our modern "standards of decency," [FN1] Trop v. Dulles, 356 U.S. 86, 101, 78 S.Ct. 590, 2 L.Ed.2d 630 (1958). We have held that this determination should be based on "objective indicia that reflect the public attitude toward a given sanction"-namely, "statutes passed by society's elected representatives." Stanford v. Kentucky, 492 U.S. 361, 370, 109 S.Ct. 2969, 106 L.Ed.2d 306 (1989) (internal quotation marks omitted). As in Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. 304, 312, 122 S.Ct. 2242, 153 L.Ed.2d 335 (2002), the Court dutifully recites this test and claims halfheartedly that a national consensus has emerged since our decision in Stanford, because 18 States-or 47% of States that permit capital punishment-now have legislation prohibiting the execution of offenders under 18, and because all of 4 States have adopted such legislation since Stanford. See ante, at 1192-1193.

> FN1. The Court ignores entirely the threshold inquiry in determining whether a particular punishment complies with the Eighth Amendment: whether it is one of the "modes or acts of punishment that had been considered cruel and unusual at the time that the Bill of Rights was adopted." Ford v. Wainwright, 477 U.S. 399, 405, 106 S.Ct. 2595, 91 L.Ed.2d 335 (1986). As we have noted in prior cases, the evidence is unusually clear that the Eighth Amendment was not originally understood to prohibit capital punishment for 16- and 17-year-old offenders. See Stanford v. Kentucky, 492 U.S. 361, 368, 109 S.Ct. 2969, 106 L.Ed.2d 306 (1989). At the time the Eighth Amendment was adopted, the death penalty could theoretically be imposed for the crime of a 7-year-old, though there was a rebuttable presumption of incapacity to commit a capital (or other) felony until the age of 14. See ibid. (citing 4 W. Blackstone, Commentaries *23-*24; 1 M. Hale, Pleas of the Crown 24-29 (1800)).

Words have no meaning if the views of less than 50% of death penalty States can constitute a national consensus. See Atkins, supra, at 342-345, 122 S.Ct. 2242 (SCALIA, J., dissenting). Our previous cases have required overwhelming opposition to a challenged practice, generally over a long period of time. In Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584, 595-596, 97 S.Ct. 2861, 53 L.Ed.2d 982 (1977), a plurality concluded the Eighth Amendment prohibited capital punishment for rape of an adult woman where only one jurisdiction authorized such punishment. The plurality also observed that "[a]t no time in the last 50 years ha[d] a majority of *610 States authorized death as a punishment for rape." Id., at 593, 97 S.Ct. 2861. In Ford v. Wainwright, 477 U.S. 399, 408, 106 S.Ct. 2595, 91 L.Ed.2d 335 (1986), we held execution of the insane unconstitutional, tracing the roots of this prohibition to the common law and noting that "no State in the union permits the execution of the insane." In Enmund v. Florida, 458 U.S. 782, 792, 102 S.Ct. 3368, 73 L.Ed.2d 1140 (1982), we invalidated capital punishment imposed for participation in a robbery in which an accomplice committed murder, because 78% of all death penalty States prohibited this punishment. Even there we expressed some hesitation, because the legislative judgment was "neither 'wholly unanimous among state legislatures,' ... nor as compelling as the legislative judgments considered in Coker." Id., at 793, 102 S.Ct. 3368. By contrast, agreement among 42% of death penalty States in Stanford, which the Court appears to believe was correctly decided at the time, ante, at 1197-1198, was insufficient to show a national consensus. See Stanford, supra, at 372, 109 S.Ct. 2969.

In an attempt to keep afloat its implausible assertion of national consensus, the Court throws overboard a proposition well established in our Eighth Amendment jurisprudence. "It should be observed," the Court says, "that the Stanford Court 1219 should have considered those States that had abandoned the death penalty altogether as part of the consensus against the juvenile death penalty ... ; a State's decision to bar the death penalty altogether of necessity demonstrates a judgment that the death penalty is inappropriate for all offenders, including juveniles." Ante, at 1198. The insinuation that the Court's new method of counting contradicts only "the Stanford Court" is misleading. None of our cases dealing with an alleged constitutional limitation upon the death penalty has counted, as States supporting a consensus in favor of that limitation, States that have eliminated the death penalty entirely. See Ford, supra, at 408, n. 2, 106 S.Ct. 2595; Enmund, supra, at 789, 102 S.Ct. 3368; Coker, supra, at 594, 97 S.Ct. 2861. And with good reason. Consulting States that bar the death penalty concerning the necessity of making an exception to the penalty*611 for offenders under 18 is rather like including old-order Amishmen in a consumer-preference poll on the electric car. Of course they don't like it, but that sheds no light whatever on the point at issue. That 12 States favor no executions says something about consensus against the death penalty, but nothing-absolutely nothing-about consensus that offenders under 18 deserve special immunity from such a penalty. In repealing the death penalty, those 12 States considered none of the factors that the Court puts forth as determinative of the issue before us today-lower culpability of the young, inherent recklessness, lack of capacity for considered judgment, etc. What might be relevant, perhaps, is how many of those States permit 16- and 17-year-old offenders to be treated as adults with respect to noncapital offenses. (They all do; [FN2] indeed, some even require that juveniles as young as 14 be tried as adults if they are charged with murder.[FN3]) The attempt by the Court to turn its remarkable minority consensus into a faux majority by counting Amishmen is an act of nomological desperation.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

FN2. See Alaska Stat. § 47.12.030 (Lexis 2002); Haw.Rev.Stat. § 571-22 (1999); Iowa Code § 232.45 (2003); Me.Rev.Stat. Ann., Tit. 15, § 3101(4) (West 2003); Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 119, § 74 (West 2003); Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 764.27 (West 2000); Minn.Stat. § 260B.125 (2004); N.D. Cent.Code § 27-20-34 (Lexis Supp.2003); R.I. Gen. Laws § 14-1-7 (Lexis 2002); Vt. Stat. Ann., Tit. 33, § 5516 (Lexis 2001); W. Va.Code § 49-5-10 (Lexis 2004); Wis. Stat. § 938.18 (2003-2004); see also National Center for Juvenile Justice, Trying and Sentencing Juveniles as Adults: An Analysis of State Transfer and Blended Sentencing Laws 1 (Oct.2003). The District of Columbia is the only jurisdiction without a death penalty that specifically exempts under-18 offenders from its harshest sanction-life imprisonment without parole. See D.C.Code § 22-2104 (West 2001).

FN3. See Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 119, § 74 (West 2003); N.D. Cent.Code § 27-20-34 (Lexis Supp.2003); W. Va.Code § 49-5-10 (Lexis 2004).

Recognizing that its national-consensus argument was weak compared with our earlier cases, the Atkins Court found additional support in the fact that 16 States had prohibited execution of mentally retarded individuals since 612 Penry v. Lynaugh, 492 U.S. 302, 109 S.Ct. 2934, 106 L.Ed.2d 256 (1989). Atkins, 536 U.S., at 314-316, 122 S.Ct. 2242. Indeed, the Atkins Court distinguished Stanford on that very ground, explaining that "[a]lthough we decided Stanford on the same day as Penry, apparently only two state legislatures have raised the threshold age for imposition of the death penalty." 536 U.S., at 315, n. 18, 122 S.Ct. 2242 (emphasis added). Now, the Court says a legislative change in four States is "significant" enough to trigger a constitutional prohibition.[FN4] Ante, at 1193. It is amazing to *1220 think that this subtle shift in numbers can take the issue entirely off the table for legislative debate.

FN4. As the Court notes, Washington State's decision to prohibit executions of offenders under 18 was made by a judicial, not legislative, decision. State v. Furman, 122 Wash.2d 440, 459, 858 P.2d 1092, 1103 (1993), construed the State's death penalty statute-which did not set any age limit-to apply only to persons over 18. The opinion found that construction necessary to avoid what it considered constitutional difficulties, and did not purport to reflect popular sentiment. It is irrelevant to the question of changed national consensus.

I also doubt whether many of the legislators who voted to change the laws in those four States would have done so if they had known their decision would (by the pronouncement of this Court) be rendered irreversible. After all, legislative support for capital punishment, in any form, has surged and ebbed throughout our Nation's history. As Justice O'CONNOR has explained:

"The history of the death penalty instructs that there is danger in inferring a settled societal consensus from statistics like those relied on in this case. In 1846, Michigan became the first State to abolish the death penalty .... In succeeding decades, other American States continued the trend towards abolition .... Later, and particularly after World War II, there ensued a steady and dramatic decline in executions .... In the 1950's and 1960's, more States abolished or radically restricted capital punishment, and executions ceased completely for several years beginning in 1968....

613 "In 1972, when this Court heard arguments on the constitutionality of the death penalty, such statistics might have suggested that the practice had become a relic, implicitly rejected by a new societal consensus.... We now know that any inference of a societal consen> sus rejecting the death penalty would have been mistaken. But had this Court then declared the existence of such a consensus, and outlawed capital punishment, legislatures would very likely not have been able to revive it. The mistaken premise of the decision would have been frozen into constitutional law, making it difficult to refute and even more difficult to reject." Thompson v. Oklahoma, 487 U.S. 815, 854-855, 108 S.Ct. 2687, 101 L.Ed.2d 702 (1988) (opinion concurring in judgment).

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Relying on such narrow margins is especially inappropriate in light of the fact that a number of legislatures and voters have expressly affirmed their support for capital punishment of 16- and 17-year-old offenders since Stanford. Though the Court is correct that no State has lowered its death penalty age, both the Missouri and Virginia Legislatures-which, at the time of Stanford, had no minimum age requirement-expressly established 16 as the minimum. Mo.Rev.Stat. § 565.020.2 (2000); Va.Code Ann. § 18.2-10(a) (Lexis 2004). The people of Arizona [FN5] and Florida [FN6] have 614 done the same by ballot initiative.*1221 Thus, even States that have not executed an under-18 offender in recent years unquestionably favor the possibility of capital punishment in some circumstances.

> FN5. In 1996, Arizona's Ballot Proposition 102 exposed under-18 murderers to the death penalty by automatically transferring them out of juvenile courts. The statute implementing the proposition required the county attorney to "bring a criminal prosecution against a juvenile in the same manner as an adult if the juvenile is fifteen, sixteen or seventeen years of age and is accused of ... first degree murder." Ariz.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 13-501 (West 2001). The Arizona Supreme Court has added to this scheme a constitutional requirement that there be an individualized assessment of the juvenile's maturity at the time of the offense. See State v. Davolt, 207 Ariz. 191, 214-216, 84 P.3d 456, 479-481 (2004).

> FN6. Florida voters approved an amendment to the State Constitution, which changed the wording from "cruel or unusual" to "cruel and unusual," Fla. Const., Art. I, § 17 (2003). See Commentary to 1998 Amendment, 25B Fla. Stat. Ann., p. 180 (West 2004). This was a response to a Florida Supreme Court ruling that "cruel or unusual" excluded the death penalty for a defendant who committed murder when he was younger than 17. See Brennan v. State, 754 So.2d 1, 5 (1999). By adopting the federal constitutional language, Florida voters effectively adopted our decision in Stanford v. Kentucky, 492 U.S. 361, 109 S.Ct. 2969, 106 L.Ed.2d 306 (1989). See Weaver, Word May Allow Execution of 16-Year-Olds, Miami Herald, Nov. 7, 2002, p. 7B.

The Court's reliance on the infrequency of executions for under-18 murderers, ante, at 1192-1193, 1194, credits an argument that this Court considered and explicitly rejected in Stanford. That infrequency is explained, we accurately said, both by "the undisputed fact that a far smaller percentage of capital crimes are committed by persons under 18 than over 18," 492 U.S., at 374, 109 S.Ct. 2969, and by the fact that juries are required at sentencing to consider the offender's youth as a mitigating factor, see Eddings v. Oklahoma, 455 U.S. 104, 115-116, 102 S.Ct. 869, 71 L.Ed.2d 1 (1982). Thus, "it is not only possible, but overwhelmingly probable, that the very considerations which induce [respondent] and [his] supporters to believe that death should never be imposed on offenders under 18 cause prosecutors and juries to believe that it should rarely be imposed." Stanford, supra, at 374, 109 S.Ct. 2969.

It is, furthermore, unclear that executions of the relevant age group have decreased since we decided Stanford. Between 1990 and 2003, 123 of 3,599 death sentences, or 3.4%, were given to individuals who committed crimes before reaching age 18. V. Streib, The Juvenile Death Penalty Today: Death Sentences and Executions for Juvenile Crimes, January 1, 1973-September 30, 2004, No. 75, p. 9 (Table 3) (last updated Oct. 5, 2004), http:// www. law. onu. edu/ faculty/ streib/ documents/ Juv Death Sept 302004. pdf (all Internet materials as visited Jan. 12, 2005, and available in Clerk of Court's case file) (hereinafter Juvenile Death Penalty Today). 615 By contrast, only 2.1% of those sentenced to death between 1982 and 1988 committed the crimes when they were under 18. See Stanford, supra, at 373, 109 S.Ct. 2969 (citing V. Streib, Imposition of Death Sentences for Juvenile Offenses, January 1, 1982, Through April 1, 1989, p. 2 (paper for Cleveland-Marshall College of Law, April 5, 1989)). As for actual executions of under-18 offenders, they constituted 2.4% of the total executions since 1973. Juvenile Death Penalty Today 4. In Stanford, we noted that only 2% of the executions between 1642 and 1986 were of under-18 offenders and found that that lower number did not demonstrate a national consensus against the penalty. 492 U.S., at 373-374, 109 S.Ct. 2969 (citing V. Streib, Death Penalty for Juveniles 55, 57 (1987)). Thus, the numbers of under-18 offenders subjected to the death penalty, though low compared with adults, have either held steady or slightly increased since Stanford. These statistics in no way support the action the Court takes today.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

II

Of course, the real force driving today's decision is not the actions of four state legislatures, but the Court's " ' "own judgment" ' " that murderers younger than 18 can never be as morally culpable as older counterparts. Ante, at 1191-1192 (quoting Atkins, 536 U.S., at 312, 122 S.Ct. 2242 (in turn quoting Coker, 433 U.S., at 597, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion))). The Court claims that this usurpation of the role of moral arbiter is simply a "retur[n] to the rul[e] established in decisions predating Stanford," ante, at 1191. That supposed 1222 rule-which is reflected solely in dicta and never once in a holding that purports to supplant the consensus of the American people with the Justices' views [FN7]-was repudiated in Stanford for the very good reason*616 that it has no foundation in law or logic. If the Eighth Amendment set forth an ordinary rule of law, it would indeed be the role of this Court to say what the law is. But the Court having pronounced that the Eighth Amendment is an ever-changing reflection of "the evolving standards of decency" of our society, it makes no sense for the Justices then to prescribe those standards rather than discern them from the practices of our people. On the evolving-standards hypothesis, the only legitimate function of this Court is to identify a moral consensus of the American people. By what conceivable warrant can nine lawyers presume to be the authoritative conscience of the Nation? [FN8]

FN7. See, e.g., Enmund v. Florida, 458 U.S. 782, 801, 102 S.Ct. 3368, 73 L.Ed.2d 1140 (1982) ("[W]e have no reason to disagree with th[e] judgment [of the state legislatures] for purposes of construing and applying the Eighth Amendment"); Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584, 597, 97 S.Ct. 2861, 53 L.Ed.2d 982 (1977) (plurality opinion) ("[T]he legislative rejection of capital punishment for rape strongly confirms our own judgment").

FN8. Justice O'CONNOR agrees with our analysis that no national consensus exists here, ante, at 1210-1212 (dissenting opinion). She is nonetheless prepared (like the majority) to override the judgment of America's legislatures if it contradicts her own assessment of "moral proportionality," ante, at 1212. She dissents here only because it does not. The votes in today's case demonstrate that the offending of selected lawyers' moral sentiments is not a predictable basis for law-much less a democratic one.

The reason for insistence on legislative primacy is obvious and fundamental: " '[I]n a democratic society legislatures, not courts, are constituted to respond to the will and consequently the moral values of the people.' " Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 175-176, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 49 L.Ed.2d 859 (1976) (joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and STEVENS, JJ.) (quoting Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 383, 92 S.Ct. 2726, 33 L.Ed.2d 346 (1972) (Burger, C. J., dissenting)). For a similar reason we have, in our determination of society's moral standards, consulted the practices of sentencing juries: Juries " 'maintain a link between contemporary community values and the penal system' " that this Court cannot claim for itself. Gregg, supra, at 181, 96 S.Ct. 2909 (quoting Witherspoon v. Illinois, 391 U.S. 510, 519, n. 15, 88 S.Ct. 1770, 20 L.Ed.2d 776 (1968)).

Today's opinion provides a perfect example of why judges are ill equipped to make the type of legislative judgments the Court insists on making here. To support its opinion that States should be prohibited from imposing the death *617 penalty on anyone who committed murder before age 18, the Court looks to scientific and sociological studies, picking and choosing those that support its position. It never explains why those particular studies are methodologically sound; none was ever entered into evidence or tested in an adversarial proceeding. As THE CHIEF JUSTICE has explained:

"[M]ethodological and other errors can affect the reliability and validity of estimates about the opinions and attitudes of a population derived from various sampling techniques. Everything from variations in the survey methodology, such as the choice of the target population, the sampling design used, the questions asked, and the statistical analyses used to interpret the data can skew the results." Atkins, supra, at 326-327, 122 S.Ct. 2242 (dissenting opinion) (citing R. Groves, Survey Errors and Survey 1223 Costs (1989); 1 C. Turner & E. Martin, Surveying Subjective Phenomena (1984)).

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

In other words, all the Court has done today, to borrow from another context, is to look over the heads of the crowd and pick out its friends. Cf. Conroy v. Aniskoff, 507 U.S. 511, 519, 113 S.Ct. 1562, 123 L.Ed.2d 229 (1993) (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment).

We need not look far to find studies contradicting the Court's conclusions. As petitioner points out, the American Psychological Association (APA), which claims in this case that scientific evidence shows persons under 18 lack the ability to take moral responsibility for their decisions, has previously taken precisely the opposite position before this very Court. In its brief in Hodgson v. Minnesota, 497 U.S. 417, 110 S.Ct. 2926, 111 L.Ed.2d 344 (1990), the APA found a "rich body of research" showing that juveniles are mature enough to decide whether to obtain an abortion without parental involvement. Brief for APA as Amicus Curiae, O.T.1989, No. 88-805 etc., p. 18. The APA brief, citing psychology treatises and studies too numerous to list here, asserted: "[B]y middle adolescence (age 14-15) young people develop abilities similar to adults in reasoning 618 about moral dilemmas, understanding social rules and laws, [and] reasoning about interpersonal relationships and interpersonal problems." Id., at 19-20 (citations omitted). Given the nuances of scientific methodology and conflicting views, courts-which can only consider the limited evidence on the record before them-are ill equipped to determine which view of science is the right one. Legislatures "are better qualified to weigh and 'evaluate the results of statistical studies in terms of their own local conditions and with a flexibility of approach that is not available to the courts.' " McCleskey v. Kemp, 481 U.S. 279, 319, 107 S.Ct. 1756, 95 L.Ed.2d 262 (1987) (quoting Gregg, supra, at 186, 96 S.Ct. 2909).

Even putting aside questions of methodology, the studies cited by the Court offer scant support for a categorical prohibition of the death penalty for murderers under 18. At most, these studies conclude that, on average, or in most cases, persons under 18 are unable to take moral responsibility for their actions. Not one of the cited studies opines that all individuals under 18 are unable to appreciate the nature of their crimes.

Moreover, the cited studies describe only adolescents who engage in risky or antisocial behavior, as many young people do. Murder, however, is more than just risky or antisocial behavior. It is entirely consistent to believe that young people often act impetuously and lack judgment, but, at the same time, to believe that those who commit premeditated murder are-at least sometimes-just as culpable as adults. Christopher Simmons, who was only seven months shy of his 18th birthday when he murdered Shirley Crook, described to his friends beforehand-"[i]n chilling, callous terms," as the Court puts it, ante, at 1187-the murder he planned to commit. He then broke into the home of an innocent woman, bound her with duct tape and electrical wire, and threw her off a bridge alive and conscious. Ante, at 1188. In their amici brief, the States of Alabama, Delaware, Oklahoma, Texas, Utah, and Virginia offer additional examples619 of murders committed by individuals under 18 that involve truly monstrous acts. In Alabama, two 17-year-olds, one 16-year-old, and one 19-year-old picked up a female hitchhiker, threw bottles at her, and kicked and stomped her for approximately 30 minutes until she died. They then sexually assaulted her lifeless body and, when they were finished, *1224 threw her body off a cliff. They later returned to the crime scene to mutilate her corpse. See Brief for Alabama et al. as Amici Curiae 9-10; see also Loggins v. State, 771 So.2d 1070, 1074-1075 (Ala.Crim.App.1999); Duncan v. State, 827 So.2d 838, 840-841 (Ala.Crim.App.1999). Other examples in the brief are equally shocking. Though these cases are assuredly the exception rather than the rule, the studies the Court cites in no way justify a constitutional imperative that prevents legislatures and juries from treating exceptional cases in an exceptional way-by determining that some murders are not just the acts of happy-go-lucky teenagers, but heinous crimes deserving of death.

That "almost every State prohibits those under 18 years of age from voting, serving on juries, or marrying without parental consent,"ante, at 1195, is patently irrelevant-and is yet another resurrection of an argument that this Court gave a decent burial in Stanford. (What kind of Equal Justice under Law is it that-without so much as a "Sorry about that"-gives as the basis for sparing one person from execution arguments explicitly rejected in refusing to spare another?) As we explained in Stanford, 492 U.S., at 374, 109 S.Ct. 2969, it is "absurd to think that one must be mature enough to drive carefully, to drink responsibly, or to vote intelligently, in order to be mature enough to understand that murdering another human being is profoundly wrong, and to conform one's conduct to that most minimal of all civilized standards." Serving on a jury or entering into marriage also involve decisions far more sophisticated than the simple decision not to take another's life.

620 Moreover, the age statutes the Court lists "set the appropriate ages for the operation of a system that makes its determinations in gross, and that does not conduct individualized maturity tests." Ibid. The criminal justice system, by contrast, provides for individualized consideration of each defendant. In capital cases, this Court requires the sentencer to make an individualized determination, which includes weighing aggravating factors and mitigating factors, such as youth. See Eddings, 455 U.S., at 115-117, 102 S.Ct. 869. In other contexts where individualized consideration is provided, we have recognized that at least some minors will be mature enough to make difficult decisions that involve moral considerations. For instance, we have struck down abortion statutes that do not allow minors deemed mature by courts to bypass parental notification provisions. See, e.g., Bellotti v. Baird, 443 U.S. 622, 643-644, 99 S.Ct. 3035, 61 L.Ed.2d 797 (1979) (opinion of Powell, J.); Planned Parenthood of Central Mo. v. Danforth, 428 U.S. 52, 74-75, 96 S.Ct. 2831, 49 L.Ed.2d 788 (1976). It is hard to see why this context should be any different. Whether to obtain an abortion is surely a much more complex decision for a young person than whether to kill an innocent person in cold blood.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

The Court concludes, however, ante, at 1196-1197, that juries cannot be trusted with the delicate task of weighing a defendant's youth along with the other mitigating and aggravating factors of his crime. This startling conclusion undermines the very foundations of our capital sentencing system, which entrusts juries with "mak[ing] the difficult and uniquely human judgments that defy codification and that 'buil[d] discretion, equity, and flexibility into a legal system.' " McCleskey, supra, at 311, 107 S.Ct. 1756 (quoting H. Kalven & H. Zeisel, The American Jury 498 (1966)). The Court says, ante, at 1197, that juries will be unable to appreciate the significance of a defendant's youth when faced with details of a brutal crime. This assertion is based on no evidence; to the contrary, the Court itself acknowledges *1225 that the execution of under-18 offenders is "infrequent" even in the States "without621 a formal prohibition on executing juveniles,"ante, at 1192, suggesting that juries take seriously their responsibility to weigh youth as a mitigating factor.

Nor does the Court suggest a stopping point for its reasoning. If juries cannot make appropriate determinations in cases involving murderers under 18, in what other kinds of cases will the Court find jurors deficient? We have already held that no jury may consider whether a mentally deficient defendant can receive the death penalty, irrespective of his crime. See Atkins, 536 U.S., at 321, 122 S.Ct. 2242. Why not take other mitigating factors, such as considerations of childhood abuse or poverty, away from juries as well? Surely jurors "overpower[ed]" by "the brutality or cold-blooded nature" of a crime, ante, at 1197, could not adequately weigh these mitigating factors either.

The Court's contention that the goals of retribution and deterrence are not served by executing murderers under 18 is also transparently false. The argument that "[r]etribution is not proportional if the law's most severe penalty is imposed on one whose culpability or blameworthiness is diminished,"ante, at 1196, is simply an extension of the earlier, false generalization that youth always defeats culpability. The Court claims that "juveniles will be less susceptible to deterrence,"ibid., because " '[t]he likelihood that the teenage offender has made the kind of cost-benefit analysis that attaches any weight to the possibility of execution is so remote as to be virtually nonexistent,' " ibid.(quoting Thompson, 487 U.S., at 837, 108 S.Ct. 2687). The Court unsurprisingly finds no support for this astounding proposition, save its own case law. The facts of this very case show the proposition to be false. Before committing the crime, Simmons encouraged his friends to join him by assuring them that they could "get away with it" because they were minors. State ex rel. Simmons v. Roper, 112 S.W.3d 397, 419 (Mo.2003) (Price, J., dissenting). This fact may have influenced the jury's decision to impose capital punishment despite Simmons' age. 622 Because the Court refuses to entertain the possibility that its own unsubstantiated generalization about juveniles could be wrong, it ignores this evidence entirely.

III

Though the views of our own citizens are essentially irrelevant to the Court's decision today, the views of other countries and the so-called international community take center stage.

The Court begins by noting that "Article 37 of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child, [1577 U.N.T.S. 3, 28 I.L.M. 1448, 1468-1470, entered into force Sept. 2, 1990,] which every country in the world has ratified save for the United States and Somalia, contains an express prohibition on capital punishment for crimes committed by juveniles under 18." Ante, at 1199 (emphasis added). The Court also discusses the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR), December 19, 1966, 999 U.N.T.S. 175,ante, at 1194, 1199, which the Senate ratified only subject to a reservation that reads:

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

"The United States reserves the right, subject to its Constitutional constraints, to impose capital punishment on any person (other than a pregnant woman) duly convicted under existing or future laws permitting the imposition of capital punishment, including such punishment for crimes committed by persons below eighteen years of age." Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, International 1226 Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, S. Exec. Rep. No. 102-23, p. 11 (1992).

Unless the Court has added to its arsenal the power to join and ratify treaties on behalf of the United States, I cannot see how this evidence favors, rather than refutes, its position. That the Senate and the President-those actors our Constitution empowers to enter into treaties, see Art. II, § 2-have declined to join and ratify treaties prohibiting *623 execution of under-18 offenders can only suggest that our country has either not reached a national consensus on the question, or has reached a consensus contrary to what the Court announces. That the reservation to the ICCPR was made in 1992 does not suggest otherwise, since the reservation still remains in place today. It is also worth noting that, in addition to barring the execution of under-18 offenders, the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child prohibits punishing them with life in prison without the possibility of release. If we are truly going to get in line with the international community, then the Court's reassurance that the death penalty is really not needed, since "the punishment of life imprisonment without the possibility of parole is itself a severe sanction,"ante, at 1196, gives little comfort.

It is interesting that whereas the Court is not content to accept what the States of our Federal Union say, but insists on inquiring into what they do (specifically, whether they in fact apply the juvenile death penalty that their laws allow), the Court is quite willing to believe that every foreign nation-of whatever tyrannical political makeup and with however subservient or incompetent a court system-in fact adheres to a rule of no death penalty for offenders under 18. Nor does the Court inquire into how many of the countries that have the death penalty, but have forsworn (on paper at least) imposing that penalty on offenders under 18, have what no State of this country can constitutionally have: a mandatory death penalty for certain crimes, with no possibility of mitigation by the sentencing authority, for youth or any other reason. I suspect it is most of them. See, e.g., R. Simon & D. Blaskovich, A Comparative Analysis of Capital Punishment: Statutes, Policies, Frequencies, and Public Attitudes the World Over 25, 26, 29 (2002). To forbid the death penalty for juveniles under such a system may be a good idea, but it says nothing about our system, in which the sentencing authority, typically a jury, always can, and almost *624 always does, withhold the death penalty from an under-18 offender except, after considering all the circumstances, in the rare cases where it is warranted. The foreign authorities, in other words, do not even speak to the issue before us here.

More fundamentally, however, the basic premise of the Court's argument-that American law should conform to the laws of the rest of the world-ought to be rejected out of hand. In fact the Court itself does not believe it. In many significant respects the laws of most other countries differ from our law-including not only such explicit provisions of our Constitution as the right to jury trial and grand jury indictment, but even many interpretations of the Constitution prescribed by this Court itself. The Court-pronounced exclusionary rule, for example, is distinctively American. When we adopted that rule in Mapp v. Ohio, 367 U.S. 643, 655, 81 S.Ct. 1684, 6 L.Ed.2d 1081 (1961), it was "unique to American jurisprudence." Bivens v. Six Unknown Fed. Narcotics Agents, 403 U.S. 388, 415, 91 S.Ct. 1999, 29 L.Ed.2d 619 (1971) (Burger, C. J., dissenting). Since then a categorical exclusionary rule has been "universally rejected" by other countries, including those with rules prohibiting illegal searches and police misconduct,1227 despite the fact that none of these countries "appears to have any alternative form of discipline for police that is effective in preventing search violations." Bradley, Mapp Goes Abroad, 52 Case W. Res. L.Rev. 375, 399-400 (2001). England, for example, rarely excludes evidence found during an illegal search or seizure and has only recently begun excluding evidence from illegally obtained confessions. See C. Slobogin, Criminal Procedure: Regulation of Police Investigation 550 (3d ed.2002). Canada rarely excludes evidence and will only do so if admission will "bring the administration of justice into disrepute." Id., at 550-551 (internal quotation marks omitted). The European Court of Human Rights has held that introduction of illegally seized evidence does not violate the "fair trial" requirement in Article 6, § 1, of the European Convention on *625 Human Rights. See Slobogin, supra, at 551; Bradley, supra, at 377-378.

The Court has been oblivious to the views of other countries when deciding how to interpret our Constitution's requirement that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion...." Amdt. 1. Most other countries-including those committed to religious neutrality-do not insist on the degree of separation between church and state that this Court requires. For example, whereas "we have recognized special Establishment Clause dangers where the government makes direct money payments to sectarian institutions," Rosenberger v. Rector and Visitors of Univ. of Va., 515 U.S. 819, 842, 115 S.Ct. 2510, 132 L.Ed.2d 700 (1995) (citing cases), countries such as the Netherlands, Germany, and Australia allow direct government funding of religious schools on the ground that "the state can only be truly neutral between secular and religious perspectives if it does not dominate the provision of so key a service as education, and makes it possible for people to exercise their right of religious expression within the context of public funding." S. Monsma & J. Soper, The Challenge of Pluralism: Church and State in Five Democracies 207 (1997); see also id., at 67, 103, 176. England permits the teaching of religion in state schools. Id., at 142. Even in France, which is considered "America's only rival in strictness of church-state separation,""[t]he practice of contracting for educational services provided by Catholic schools is very widespread." C. Glenn, The Ambiguous Embrace: Government and Faith-Based Schools and Social Agencies 110 (2000).

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

And let us not forget the Court's abortion jurisprudence, which makes us one of only six countries that allow abortion on demand until the point of viability. See Larsen, Importing Constitutional Norms from a "Wider Civilization": Lawrence and the Rehnquist Court's Use of Foreign and International Law in Domestic Constitutional Interpretation, 65 Ohio St. L.J. 1283, 1320 (2004); Center for Reproductive626 Rights, The World's Abortion Laws (June 2004), http: // www. reproductive rights. org/ pub_ fac_ abortion_ laws. html. Though the Government and amici in cases following Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, 93 S.Ct. 705, 35 L.Ed.2d 147 (1973), urged the Court to follow the international community's lead, these arguments fell on deaf ears. See McCrudden, A Part of the Main? The Physician-Assisted Suicide Cases and Comparative Law Methodology in the United States Supreme Court, in Law at the End of Life: The Supreme Court and Assisted Suicide 125, 129-130 (C. Schneider ed.2000).

The Court's special reliance on the laws of the United Kingdom is perhaps the most indefensible part of its opinion. It is of course true that we share a common history with the United Kingdom, and that we often consult English sources when *1228 asked to discern the meaning of a constitutional text written against the backdrop of 18th-century English law and legal thought. If we applied that approach today, our task would be an easy one. As we explained in Harmelin v. Michigan, 501 U.S. 957, 973-974, 111 S.Ct. 2680, 115 L.Ed.2d 836 (1991), the "Cruell and Unusuall Punishments" provision of the English Declaration of Rights was originally meant to describe those punishments " 'out of [the Judges'] Power' "-that is, those punishments that were not authorized by common law or statute, but that were nonetheless administered by the Crown or the Crown's judges. Under that reasoning, the death penalty for under-18 offenders would easily survive this challenge. The Court has, however-I think wrongly-long rejected a purely originalist approach to our Eighth Amendment, and that is certainly not the approach the Court takes today. Instead, the Court undertakes the majestic task of determining (and thereby prescribing) our Nation's current standards of decency. It is beyond comprehension why we should look, for that purpose, to a country that has developed, in the centuries since the Revolutionary War-and with increasing speed since the United Kingdom's recent submission to the jurisprudence of European courts dominated by continental 627 jurists-a legal, political, and social culture quite different from our own. If we took the Court's directive seriously, we would also consider relaxing our double jeopardy prohibition, since the British Law Commission recently published a report that would significantly extend the rights of the prosecution to appeal cases where an acquittal was the result of a judge's ruling that was legally incorrect. See Law Commission, Double Jeopardy and Prosecution Appeals, LAW COM No. 267, Cm 5048, p. 6, ¶ 1.19 (Mar.2001); J. Spencer, The English System in European Criminal Procedures 142, 204, and n. 239 (M. Delmas-Marty & J. Spencer eds.2002). We would also curtail our right to jury trial in criminal cases since, despite the jury system's deep roots in our shared common law, England now permits all but the most serious offenders to be tried by magistrates without a jury. See D. Feldman, England and Wales, in Criminal Procedure: A Worldwide Study 91, 114-115 (C. Bradley ed.1999).

The Court should either profess its willingness to reconsider all these matters in light of the views of foreigners, or else it should cease putting forth foreigners' views as part of the reasoned basis of its decisions. To invoke alien law when it agrees with one's own thinking, and ignore it otherwise, is not reasoned decisionmaking, but sophistry.[FN2]

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

FN9. Justice O'CONNOR asserts that the Eighth Amendment has a "special character," in that it "draws its meaning directly from the maturing values of civilized society." Ante, at 1215. Nothing in the text reflects such a distinctive character-and we have certainly applied the "maturing values" rationale to give brave new meaning to other provisions of the Constitution, such as the Due Process Clause and the Equal Protection Clause. See, e.g., Lawrence v. Texas, 539 U.S. 558, 571-573, 123 S.Ct. 2472, 156 L.Ed.2d 508 (2003); United States v. Virginia, 518 U.S. 515, 532-534, 116 S.Ct. 2264, 135 L.Ed.2d 735 (1996); Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pa. v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 847-850, 112 S.Ct. 2791, 120 L.Ed.2d 674 (1992). Justice O'CONNOR asserts that an international consensus can at least "serve to confirm the reasonableness of a consonant and genuine American consensus." Ante, at 1216. Surely not unless it can also demonstrate the *un*reasonableness of such a consensus. Either America's principles are its own, or they follow the world; one cannot have it both ways. Finally, Justice O'CONNOR finds it unnecessary to consult foreign law in the present case because there is "no ... domestic consensus" to be confirmed. Ibid. But since she believes that the Justices can announce their own requirements of "moral proportionality" despite the absence of consensus, why would foreign law not be relevant to that judgment? If foreign law is powerful enough to supplant the judgment of the American people, surely it is powerful enough to change a personal assessment of moral proportionality.

1229 *628 The Court responds that "[i]t does not lessen our fidelity to the Constitution or our pride in its origins to acknowledge that the express affirmation of certain fundamental rights by other nations and peoples simply underscores the centrality of those same rights within our own heritage of freedom." Ante, at 1200. To begin with, I do not believe that approval by "other nations and peoples" should buttress our commitment to American principles any more than (what should logically follow) disapproval by "other nations and peoples" should weaken that commitment. More importantly, however, the Court's statement flatly misdescribes what is going on here. Foreign sources are cited today, not to underscore our "fidelity" to the Constitution, our "pride in its origins," and "our own [American] heritage." To the contrary, they are cited to set aside the centuries-old American practice-a practice still engaged in by a large majority of the relevant States-of letting a jury of 12 citizens decide whether, in the particular case, youth should be the basis for withholding the death penalty. What these foreign sources "affirm," rather than repudiate, is the Justices' own notion of how the world ought to be, and their diktat that it shall be so henceforth in America. The Court's parting attempt to downplay the significance of its extensive discussion of foreign law is unconvincing. "Acknowledgment" of foreign approval has no place in the legal opinion of this Court unless it is part of the basis for the Court's judgment-which is surely what it parades as today.

IV

To add insult to injury, the Court affirms the Missouri Supreme Court without even admonishing that court for its *629 flagrant disregard of our precedent in Stanford. Until today, we have always held that "it is this Court's prerogative alone to overrule one of its precedents." State Oil Co. v. Khan, 522 U.S. 3, 20, 118 S.Ct. 275, 139 L.Ed.2d 199 (1997). That has been true even where " 'changes in judicial doctrine' ha[ve] significantly undermined" our prior holding, United States v. Hatter, 532 U.S. 557, 567, 121 S.Ct. 1782, 149 L.Ed.2d 820 (2001) (quoting Hatter v. United States, 64 F.3d 647, 650 (C.A.Fed.1995)), and even where our prior holding "appears to rest on reasons rejected in some other line of decisions," Rodriguez de Quijas v. Shearson/American Express, Inc., 490 U.S. 477, 484, 109 S.Ct. 1917, 104 L.Ed.2d 526 (1989). Today, however, the Court silently approves a state-court decision that blatantly rejected controlling precedent.

One must admit that the Missouri Supreme Court's action, and this Court's indulgent reaction, are, in a way, understandable. In a system based upon constitutional and statutory text democratically adopted, the concept of "law" ordinarily signifies that particular words have a fixed meaning. Such law does not change, and this Court's pronouncement of it therefore remains authoritative until (confessing our prior error) we overrule. The Court has purported to make of the Eighth Amendment, however, a mirror of the passing and changing sentiment of American society regarding penology. The lower courts can look into that mirror as well as we can; and what we saw 15 years ago bears no necessary relationship to what they see today. Since they are not looking at the same text, but at a different1230 scene, why should our earlier decision control their judgment?

However sound philosophically, this is no way to run a legal system. We must disregard the new reality that, to the extent our Eighth Amendment decisions constitute something more than a show of hands on the current Justices' current personal views about penology, they purport to be nothing more than a snapshot of American public opinion at a particular point in time (with the timeframes now shortened to a mere 15 years). We must treat these decisions*630 just as though they represented real law, real prescriptions democratically adopted by the American people, as conclusively (rather than sequentially) construed by this Court. Allowing lower courts to reinterpret the Eighth Amendment whenever they decide enough time has passed for a new snapshot leaves this Court's decisions without any force-especially since the "evolution" of our Eighth Amendment is no longer determined by objective criteria. To allow lower courts to behave as we do, "updating" the Eighth Amendment as needed, destroys stability and makes our case law an unreliable basis for the designing of laws by citizens and their representatives, and for action by public officials. The result will be to crown arbitrariness with chaos.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

U.S.Mo.,2005.
Roper v. Simmons
543 U.S. 551, 125 S.Ct. 1183, 161 L.Ed.2d 1, 73 USLW 4153, 05 Cal. Daily Op. Serv. 1735, 18 Fla. L. Weekly Fed. S 131

END OF DOCUMENT

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Westlaw.

128 S.Ct. 2641 Page 1
128 S.Ct. 2641, 171 L.Ed.2d 525, 76 USLW 4584, 08 Cal. Daily Op. Serv. 7920, 2008 Daily Journal D.A.R. 9470, 21 Fla. L. Weekly Fed. S 472
(Cite as: 128 S.Ct. 2641)

Supreme Court of the United States
Patrick KENNEDY, Petitioner,
v.
LOUISIANA.
No. 07-343.

Argued April 16, 2008.
Decided June 25, 2008.
As Modified Oct. 1, 2008.

Background: Defendant was convicted of aggravated rape of his eight-year-old stepdaughter, and was sentenced to death. On his appeal, the Supreme Court of Louisiana, 957 So.2d 757, affirmed. Defendant petitioned for certiorari which was granted.

Holding: The Supreme Court, Kennedy, J., held that the Eighth Amendment prohibits the death penalty for the rape of a child where the crime did not result, and was not intended to result, in death of the victim.

Reversed and remanded.

Justice Alito filed dissenting opinion in which Chief Justice Roberts and Justices Scalia and Thomas joined.

West Headnotes

[1] Sentencing and Punishment 350H ⇐1667

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HVIII The Death Penalty
350HVIII(D) Factors Related to Offense
350Hk1666 Nature or Degree of Offense
350Hk1667 k. In General. Most Cited Cases
The Eighth Amendment prohibits the death penalty for the rape of a child where the crime did not result, and was not intended to result, in death of the victim. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 8.

[2] Sentencing and Punishment 350H ⇐1624

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HVIII The Death Penalty
350HVIII(A) In General
350Hk1622 Validity of Statute or Regulatory Provision
350Hk1624 k. Provision Authorizing Death Penalty. Most Cited Cases
Louisiana statute authorizing death penalty for rape of child under 12 years of age violated Eighth Amendment proscription against cruel and unusual punishment when applied to defendant convicted of aggravated rape of his then-eight-year-old stepdaughter, where crime did not result, and was not intended to result, in death of victim, considering national consensus against capital punishment for crime of child rape and evolving standards of decency. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 8; LSA. R.S. 14:42.

[3] Sentencing and Punishment 350H ⇐1482

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HVII Cruel and Unusual Punishment in General
350HVII(E) Excessiveness and Proportionality of Sentence
350Hk1482 k. Proportionality. Most Cited Cases
The Eighth Amendment's protection against excessive or cruel and unusual punishments flows from the basic precept of justice that punishment for a crime should be graduated and proportioned to the offense; whether that requirement has been fulfilled is determined not by the standards that prevailed when the Eighth Amendment was adopted in 1791 but by the norms that currently prevail. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 8.

[4] Sentencing and Punishment 350H ⇐41

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HI Punishment in General
350HI(C) Factors or Purposes in General

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

350Hk41 k. Deterrence. Most Cited Cases

Sentencing and Punishment 350H ⇐44

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HI Punishment in General
350HI(C) Factors or Purposes in General
350Hk44 k. Retribution. Most Cited Cases

Sentencing and Punishment 350H ⇐45

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HI Punishment in General
350HI(C) Factors or Purposes in General
350Hk45 k. Rehabilitation and Reform. Most Cited Cases
Punishment is justified under one or more of three principal rationales: rehabilitation, deterrence, and retribution.

West Codenotes
Held UnconstitutionalLSA-R.S. 14:42
Validity Called into DoubtWest's Ga.Code Ann. § 16-6-1; MCA 45-5-503; 10 Okl.St.Ann. § 7115(K); S.C.Code 1976, § 16-3-655(C)(1); V.T.C.A., Penal Code § 12.42(c)(3).

2641 Syllabus [FN*]

FN* The syllabus constitutes no part of the opinion of the Court but has been prepared by the Reporter of Decisions for the convenience of the reader. See United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co., 200 U.S. 321, 337, 26 S.Ct. 282, 50 L.Ed. 499.

Louisiana charged petitioner with the aggravated rape of his then-8-year-old stepdaughter. He was convicted and sentenced to death under a state statute authorizing capital punishment for the rape of a child under 12. The State Supreme Court affirmed, rejecting petitioner's reliance on Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584, 97 S.Ct. 2861, 53 L.Ed.2d 982, which barred the use of the death penalty as punishment for the rape of an adult woman but left 2642 open the question which, if any, other nonhomicide crimes can be punished by death consistent with the Eighth Amendment. Reasoning that children are a class in need of special protection, the state court held child rape to be unique in terms of the harm it inflicts upon the victim and society and concluded that, short of first-degree murder, there is no crime more deserving of death. The court acknowledged that petitioner would be the first person executed since the state law was amended to authorize the death penalty for child rape in 1995, and that Louisiana is in the minority of jurisdictions authorizing death for that crime. However, emphasizing that four more States had capitalized child rape since 1995 and at least eight others had authorized death for other nonhomicide crimes, as well as that, under Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551, 125 S.Ct. 1183, 161 L.Ed.2d 1, and Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. 304, 122 S.Ct. 2242, 153 L.Ed.2d 335, it is the direction of change rather than the numerical count that is significant, the court held petitioner's death sentence to be constitutional.

Held: The Eighth Amendment bars Louisiana from imposing the death penalty for the rape of a child where the crime did not result, and was not intended to result, in the victim's death. Pp. 2649 - 2665.

1. The Amendment's Cruel and Unusual Punishment Clause "draw[s] its meaning from the evolving standards of decency that mark the progress of a maturing society." Trop v. Dulles, 356 U.S. 86, 101, 78 S.Ct. 590, 2 L.Ed.2d 630. The standard for extreme cruelty "itself remains the same, but its applicability must change as the basic mores of society change." Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 382, 92 S.Ct. 2726, 33 L.Ed.2d 346. Under the precept of justice that punishment is to be graduated and proportioned to the crime, informed by evolving standards, capital punishment must "be limited to those offenders who commit 'a narrow category of the most serious crimes' and whose extreme culpability makes them 'the most deserving of execution.' " Roper,supra, at 568, 125 S.Ct. 1183. Applying this principle, the Court held in Roper and Atkins that the execution of juveniles and mentally retarded persons violates the Eighth Amendment because the offender has a diminished personal responsibility for the crime. The Court also has found the death penalty disproportionate to the crime itself where the crime did not result, or was not intended to result, in the victim's death. See, e.g., Coker, supra; Enmund v. Florida, 458 U.S. 782, 102 S.Ct. 3368, 73 L.Ed.2d 1140. In making its determination, the Court is guided by "objective indicia of society's standards, as expressed in legislative enactments and state practice with respect to executions." Roper, supra, at 563, 125 S.Ct. 1183. Consensus is not dispositive, however. Whether the death penalty is disproportionate to the crime also depends on the standards elaborated by controlling precedents and on the Court's own understanding and interpretation of the Eighth Amendment's text, history, meaning, and purpose. Pp. 2649 - 2651.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

2. A review of the authorities informed by contemporary norms, including the history of the death penalty for this and other nonhomicide crimes, current state statutes and new enactments, and the number of executions since 1964, demonstrates a national consensus against capital punishment for the crime of child rape. Pp. 2651 - 2658.

(a) The Court follows the approach of cases in which objective indicia of consensus demonstrated an opinion against the death penalty for juveniles, see Roper, supra, mentally retarded offenders, see Atkins, supra, and vicarious felony murderers, see Enmund, supra. Thirty-seven 2643 jurisdictions-36 States plus the Federal Government-currently impose capital punishment, but only six States authorize it for child rape. In 45 jurisdictions, by contrast, petitioner could not be executed for child rape of any kind. That number surpasses the 30 States in Atkins and Roper and the 42 in Enmund that prohibited the death penalty under the circumstances those cases considered. Pp. 2651 - 2653.

(b) Respondent's argument that Coker's general discussion contrasting murder and rape, 433 U.S., at 598, 97 S.Ct. 2861, has been interpreted too expansively, leading some States to conclude that Coker applies to child rape when in fact it does not, is unsound. Coker's holding was narrower than some of its language read in isolation indicates. The Coker plurality framed the question as whether, "with respect to rape of an adult woman," the death penalty is disproportionate punishment, id., at 592, 97 S.Ct. 2861, and it repeated the phrase "adult woman" or "adult female" eight times in discussing the crime or the victim. The distinction between adult and child rape was not merely rhetorical; it was central to Coker's reasoning, including its analysis of legislative consensus. See, e.g., id., at 595-596, 97 S.Ct. 2861. There is little evidence to support respondent's contention that state legislatures have understood Coker to state a broad rule that covers minor victims, and state courts have uniformly concluded that Coker did not address that crime. Accordingly, the small number of States that have enacted the death penalty for child rape is relevant to determining whether there is a consensus against capital punishment for the rape of a child. Pp. 2653-2656.

(c) A consistent direction of change in support of the death penalty for child rape might counterbalance an otherwise weak demonstration of consensus, see, e.g., Atkins, 536 U.S., at 315, 122 S.Ct. 2242, but no showing of consistent change has been made here. That five States may have had pending legislation authorizing death for child rape is not dispositive because it is not this Court's practice, nor is it sound, to find contemporary norms based on legislation proposed but not yet enacted. Indeed, since the parties submitted their briefs, the legislation in at least two of the five States has failed. Further, evidence that, in the last 13 years, six new death penalty statutes have been enacted, three in the last two years, is not as significant as the data in Atkins, where 18 States between 1986 and 2001 had enacted legislation prohibiting the execution of mentally retarded persons. See id., at 314-315, 122 S.Ct. 2242. Respondent argues that this case is like Roper because, there, only five States had shifted their positions between 1989 and 2005, one less

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

State than here. See 543 U.S., at 565, 125 S.Ct. 1183. But the Roper Court emphasized that the slow pace of abolition was counterbalanced by the total number of States that had recognized the impropriety of executing juvenile offenders. See id., at 566-567, 125 S.Ct. 1183. Here, the fact that only six States have made child rape a capital offense is not an indication of a trend or change in direction comparable to the one in Roper. The evidence bears a closer resemblance to that in Enmund, where the Court found a national consensus against death for vicarious felony murder despite eight jurisdictions having authorized it. See 458 U.S., at 789, 792, 102 S.Ct. 3368. Pp. 2656 - 2657.

(d) Execution statistics also confirm that there is a social consensus against the death penalty for child rape. Nine States have permitted capital punishment for adult or child rape for some length of time between the Court's 1972 Furman decision and today; yet no individual has been executed *2644 for the rape of an adult or child since 1964, and no execution for any other nonhomicide offense has been conducted since 1963. Louisiana is the only State since 1964 that has sentenced an individual to death for child rape, and petitioner and another man so sentenced are the only individuals now on death row in the United States for nonhomicide offenses. Pp. 2657 - 2658.

3. Informed by its own precedents and its understanding of the Constitution and the rights it secures, the Court concludes, in its independent judgment, that the death penalty is not a proportional punishment for the crime of child rape. Pp. 2658 - 2664.

(a) The Court's own judgment should be brought to bear on the death penalty's acceptability under the Eighth Amendment. See, e.g., Coker, supra, at 597, 97 S.Ct. 2861. Rape's permanent and devastating impact on a child suggests moral grounds for questioning a rule barring capital punishment simply because the crime did not result in the victim's death, but it does not follow that death is a proportionate penalty for child rape. The constitutional prohibition against excessive or cruel and unusual punishments mandates that punishment "be exercised within the limits of civilized standards." Trop, 356 U.S., at 99-100, 78 S.Ct. 590. Evolving standards of decency counsel the Court to be most hesitant before allowing extension of the death penalty, especially where no life was taken in the commission of the crime. See, e.g., Coker, 433 U.S., at 597-598, 97 S.Ct. 2861; Enmund, 458 U.S., at 797, 102 S.Ct. 3368. Consistent with those evolving standards and the teachings of its precedents, the Court concludes that there is a distinction between intentional first-degree murder on the one hand and nonhomicide crimes against individuals, even including child rape, on the other. The latter crimes may be devastating in their harm, as here, but "in terms of moral depravity and of the injury to the person and to the public," they cannot compare to murder in their "severity and irrevocability," id, at 598, 97 S.Ct. 2861. The Court finds significant the substantial number of executions that would be allowed for child rape under respondent's approach. Although narrowing aggravators might be used to ensure the death penalty's restrained application in this context, as they are in the context of capital murder, all such standards have the potential to result in some inconsistency of application. The Court, for example, has acknowledged that the requirement of general rules to ensure consistency of treatment, see, e.g., Godfrey v. Georgia, 446 U.S. 420, 100 S.Ct. 1759, 64 L.Ed.2d 398, and the insistence that capital sentencing be individualized, see, e.g., Woodson v. North Carolina, 428 U.S. 280, 96 S.Ct. 2978, 49 L.Ed.2d 944, have resulted in tension and imprecision. This approach might be sound with respect to capital murder but it should not be introduced into the justice system where death has not occurred. The Court has spent more than 32 years developing a foundational jurisprudence for capital murder to guide the States and juries in imposing the death penalty. Beginning the same process for crimes for which no one has been executed in more than 40 years would require experimentation in an area where a failed experiment would result in the execution of individuals undeserving of death. Pp.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

2658 - 2661.

(b) The Court's decision is consistent with the justifications offered for the death penalty, retribution and deterrence, see, e.g., Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 183, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 49 L.Ed.2d 859. Among the factors for determining whether retribution is served, the Court must look to whether the death penalty balances the wrong to the victim in nonhomicide cases. 2645 Cf. Roper, supra, at 571, 125 S.Ct. 1183. It is not at all evident that the child rape victim's hurt is lessened when the law permits the perpetrator's death, given that capital cases require a long-term commitment by those testifying for the prosecution. Society's desire to inflict death for child rape by enlisting the child victim to assist it over the course of years in asking for capital punishment forces a moral choice on the child, who is not of mature age to make that choice. There are also relevant systemic concerns in prosecuting child rape, including the documented problem of unreliable, induced, and even imagined child testimony, which creates a "special risk of wrongful execution" in some cases. Cf. Atkins, supra, at 321, 122 S.Ct. 2242. As to deterrence, the evidence suggests that the death penalty may not result in more effective enforcement, but may add to the risk of nonreporting of child rape out of fear of negative consequences for the perpetrator, especially if he is a family member. And, by in effect making the punishment for child rape and murder equivalent, a State may remove a strong incentive for the rapist not to kill his victim. Pp. 2661 - 2664.

4. The concern that the Court's holding will effectively block further development of a consensus favoring the death penalty for child rape overlooks the principle that the Eighth Amendment is defined by "the evolving standards of decency that mark the progress of a maturing society," Trop, 356 U.S., at 101, 78 S.Ct. 590. Confirmed by the Court's repeated, consistent rulings, this principle requires that resort to capital punishment be restrained, limited in its instances of application, and reserved for the worst of crimes, those that, in the case of crimes against individuals, take the victim's life. Pp. 2664 - 2665.

957 So.2d 757, reversed and remanded.

KENNEDY, J., delivered the opinion of the Court, in which STEVENS, SOUTER, GINSBURG, and BREYER, JJ., joined. ALITO, J., filed a dissenting opinion, in which ROBERTS, C.J., and SCALIA and THOMAS, JJ., joined.

Jeffrey L. Fisher, for petitioner.

Juliet L. Clark, for respondent.

R. Ted Cruz, et al. as amici curiae, by special leave of Court, in support of respondent.

Jelpi P. Picou, G. Ben Cohen, New Orleans, LA, Martin A. Stern, Ravi Sinha, Adams and Reese LLP, New Orleans, LA, Jeffrey L. Fisher, Counsel of Record, Pamela S. Karlan, Stanford Law School, Stanford, CA, for petitioner.

Paul D. Connick, Jr., District Attorney, Jefferson Parish, State of Louisiana, Juliet L. Clark, Counsel of Record, Assistant District Attorney, Terry M. Boudreaux, Assistant District Attorney, Office of the District Attorney, Gretna, Louisiana, for respondent.

For U.S. Supreme Court briefs, see:2008 WL 466093 (Pet.Brief)2008 WL 727814 (Resp.Brief)2008 WL 954280 (Reply.Brief)

Justice KENNEDY delivered the opinion of the Court.

[1][2] The National Government and, beyond it, the separate States are bound by the proscriptive mandates of the Eighth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and all persons within those respective jurisdictions may invoke its protection. See Amdts. 8 and 14, § 1; Robinson v. California, 370 U.S. 660, 82 S.Ct. 1417, 8 L.Ed.2d 758 (1962). Patrick Kennedy, the petitioner here, seeks to set aside his death sentence under the Eighth Amendment. He was charged by the respondent, 2646 the

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

State of Louisiana, with the aggravated rape of his then-8-year-old stepdaughter. After a jury trial petitioner was convicted and sentenced to death under a state statute authorizing capital punishment for the rape of a child under 12 years of age. See La. Stat. Ann. § 14:42 (West 1997 and Supp.1998). This case presents the question whether the Constitution bars respondent from imposing the death penalty for the rape of a child where the crime did not result, and was not intended to result, in death of the victim. We hold the Eighth Amendment prohibits the death penalty for this offense. The Louisiana statute is unconstitutional.

I

Petitioner's crime was one that cannot be recounted in these pages in a way sufficient to capture in full the hurt and horror inflicted on his victim or to convey the revulsion society, and the jury that represents it, sought to express by sentencing petitioner to death. At 9:18 a.m. on March 2, 1998, petitioner called 911 to report that his stepdaughter, referred to here as L. H., had been raped. He told the 911 operator that L.H. had been in the garage while he readied his son for school. Upon hearing loud screaming, petitioner said, he ran outside and found L.H. in the side yard. Two neighborhood boys, petitioner told the operator, had dragged L.H. from the garage to the yard, pushed her down, and raped her. Petitioner claimed he saw one of the boys riding away on a blue 10-speed bicycle.

When police arrived at petitioner's home between 9:20 and 9:30 a.m., they found L.H. on her bed, wearing a T-shirt and wrapped in a bloody blanket. She was bleeding profusely from the vaginal area. Petitioner told police he had carried her from the yard to the bathtub and then to the bed. Consistent with this explanation, police found a thin line of blood drops in the garage on the way to the house and then up the stairs. Once in the bedroom, petitioner had used a basin of water and a cloth to wipe blood from the victim. This later prevented medical personnel from collecting a reliable DNA sample.

L.H. was transported to the Children's Hospital. An expert in pediatric forensic medicine testified that L. H.'s injuries were the most severe he had seen from a sexual assault in his four years of practice. A laceration to the left wall of the vagina had separated her cervix from the back of her vagina, causing her rectum to protrude into the vaginal structure. Her entire perineum was torn from the posterior fourchette to the anus. The injuries required emergency surgery.

At the scene of the crime, at the hospital, and in the first weeks that followed, both L.H. and petitioner maintained in their accounts to investigators that L.H. had been raped by two neighborhood boys. One of L. H.'s doctors testified at trial that L.H. told all hospital personnel the same version of the rape, although she reportedly told one family member that petitioner raped her. L.H. was interviewed several days after the rape by a psychologist. The interview was videotaped, lasted three hours over two days, and was introduced into evidence at trial. On the tape one can see that L.H. had difficulty discussing the subject of the rape. She spoke haltingly and with long pauses and frequent movement. Early in the interview, L.H. expressed reservations about the questions being asked:

> "I'm going to tell the same story. They just want me to change it .... They want me to say my Dad did it .... I don't want to say it .... I tell them the same, same story." Def. Exh. D-7, 01:29:07-:36.

2647 She told the psychologist that she had been playing in the garage when a boy came over and asked her about Girl Scout cookies she was selling; and that the boy "pulled [her by the legs to] the backyard,"id., at 01:47:41-:52, where he placed his hand over her mouth, "pulled down [her] shorts," Def. Exh. D-8, 00:03:11-:12, and raped her, id., at 00:14:39-:40.

Eight days after the crime, and despite L. H.'s insistence that petitioner was not the offender, petitioner was arrested for the rape. The State's investigation had drawn the accuracy of petitioner and L.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

H.'s story into question. Though the defense at trial proffered alternative explanations, the case for the prosecution, credited by the jury, was based upon the following evidence: An inspection of the side yard immediately after the assault was inconsistent with a rape having occurred there, the grass having been found mostly undisturbed but for a small patch of coagulated blood. Petitioner said that one of the perpetrators fled the crime scene on a blue 10-speed bicycle but gave inconsistent descriptions of the bicycle's features, such as its handlebars. Investigators found a bicycle matching petitioner and L. H.'s description in tall grass behind a nearby apartment, and petitioner identified it as the bicycle one of the perpetrators was riding. Yet its tires were flat, it did not have gears, and it was covered in spider webs. In addition police found blood on the underside of L. H.'s mattress. This convinced them the rape took place in her bedroom, not outside the house.

Police also found that petitioner made two telephone calls on the morning of the rape. Sometime before 6:15 a.m., petitioner called his employer and left a message that he was unavailable to work that day. Petitioner called back between 6:30 and 7:30 a.m. to ask a colleague how to get blood out of a white carpet because his daughter had " 'just become a young lady.' " Brief for Respondent 12. At 7:37 a.m., petitioner called B & B Carpet Cleaning and requested urgent assistance in removing bloodstains from a carpet. Petitioner did not call 911 until about an hour and a half later.

About a month after petitioner's arrest L.H. was removed from the custody of her mother, who had maintained until that point that petitioner was not involved in the rape. On June 22, 1998, L.H. was returned home and told her mother for the first time that petitioner had raped her. And on December 16, 1999, about 21 months after the rape, L.H. recorded her accusation in a videotaped interview with the Child Advocacy Center.

The State charged petitioner with aggravated rape of a child under La. Stat. Ann. § 14:42 (West 1997 and Supp.1998) and sought the death penalty. At all times relevant to petitioner's case, the statute provided:

> "A. Aggravated rape is a rape committed ... where the anal or vaginal sexual intercourse is deemed to be without lawful consent of the victim because it is committed under any one or more of the following circumstances:
>
> .....
>
> "(4) When the victim is under the age of twelve years. Lack of knowledge of the victim's age shall not be a defense.
>
> .....
>
> "D. Whoever commits the crime of aggravated rape shall be punished by life imprisonment at hard labor without benefit of parole, probation, or suspension of sentence.
>
> "(1) However, if the victim was under the age of twelve years, as provided by Paragraph A(4) of this Section:
>
> "(a) And if the district attorney seeks a capital verdict, the offender shall be 2648 punished by death or life imprisonment at hard labor without benefit of parole, probation, or suspension of sentence, in accordance with the determination of the jury."

(Since petitioner was convicted and sentenced, the statute has been amended to include oral intercourse within the definition of aggravated rape and to increase the age of the victim from 12 to 13. See La. Stat. Ann. § 14:42 (West Supp.2007).)

Aggravating circumstances are set forth in La.Code Crim. Proc. Ann., Art. 905.4 (West 1997 Supp.). In pertinent part and at all times relevant to petitioner's case, the provision stated:

> "A. The following shall be considered aggravating circumstances:

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

"(1) The offender was engaged in the perpetration or attempted perpetration of aggravated rape, forcible rape, aggravated kidnapping, second degree kidnapping, aggravated burglary, aggravated arson, aggravated escape, assault by drive-by shooting, armed robbery, first degree robbery, or simple robbery.

.....

"(10) The victim was under the age of twelve years or sixty-five years of age or older."

The trial began in August 2003. L.H. was then 13 years old. She testified that she " 'woke up one morning and Patrick was on top of [her].' " She remembered petitioner bringing her "[a] cup of orange juice and pills chopped up in it" after the rape and overhearing him on the telephone saying she had become a "young lady." 2005-1981, pp. 12, 15, 16 (La.5/22/07), 957 So.2d 757, 767, 769, 770. L.H. acknowledged that she had accused two neighborhood boys but testified petitioner told her to say this and that it was untrue. Id., at 769.

The jury having found petitioner guilty of aggravated rape, the penalty phase ensued. The State presented the testimony of S.L., who is the cousin and goddaughter of petitioner's ex-wife. S.L. testified that petitioner sexually abused her three times when she was eight years old and that the last time involved sexual intercourse. Id., at 772. She did not tell anyone until two years later and did not pursue legal action.

The jury unanimously determined that petitioner should be sentenced to death. The Supreme Court of Louisiana affirmed. See id., at 779-789, 793; see also State v. Wilson, 96-1392, 96-2076 (La.12/13/96), 685 So.2d 1063 (upholding the constitutionality of the death penalty for child rape). The court rejected petitioner's reliance on Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584, 97 S.Ct. 2861, 53 L.Ed.2d 982 (1977), noting that, while Coker bars the use of the death penalty as punishment for the rape of an adult woman, it left open the question which, if any, other nonhomicide crimes can be punished by death consistent with the Eighth Amendment. Because " 'children are a class that need special protection,' " the state court reasoned, the rape of a child is unique in terms of the harm it inflicts upon the victim and our society. 957 So.2d, at 781.

The court acknowledged that petitioner would be the first person executed for committing child rape since La. Stat. Ann. § 14:42 was amended in 1995 and that Louisiana is in the minority of jurisdictions that authorize the death penalty for the crime of child rape. But following the approach of Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551, 125 S.Ct. 1183, 161 L.Ed.2d 1 (2005), and Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. 304, 122 S.Ct. 2242, 153 L.Ed.2d 335 (2002), it found significant not the "numerical counting of which [S]tates ... stand for or against a particular capital prosecution," but "the direction of change." *2649957 So.2d, at 783 (emphasis deleted). Since 1993, the court explained, four more States-Oklahoma, South Carolina, Montana, and Georgia-had capitalized the crime of child rape and at least eight States had authorized capital punishment for other nonhomicide crimes. By its count, 14 of the then-38 States permitting capital punishment, plus the Federal Government, allowed the death penalty for nonhomicide crimes and 5 allowed the death penalty for the crime of child rape. See id., at 785-786.

The state court next asked whether "child rapists rank among the worst offenders." Id., at 788. It noted the severity of the crime; that the execution of child rapists would serve the goals of deterrence and retribution; and that, unlike in Atkins and Roper, there were no characteristics of petitioner that tended to mitigate his moral culpability. Id., at 788-789. It concluded: "[S]hort of first-degree murder, we can think of no other non-homicide crime more deserving [of capital punishment]." Id., at 789.

On this reasoning the Supreme Court of Louisiana rejected petitioner's argument that the death penalty for the rape of a child under 12 years is disproportionate and upheld the constitutionality of the statute. Chief Justice Calogero dissented. Coker, supra, and Eberheart v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 917, 97 S.Ct. 2994, 53 L.Ed.2d 1104 (1977), in his view, "set out a bright-line and easily administered rule" that the Eighth Amendment precludes capital punishment for any offense that does not involve the death of the victim. 957 So.2d, at 794.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

We granted certiorari. See 552 U.S. ----, 128 S.Ct. 829, 169 L.Ed.2d 625 (2008).

II

[3] The Eighth Amendment, applicable to the States through the Fourteenth Amendment, provides that "[e]xcessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted." The Amendment proscribes "all excessive punishments, as well as cruel and unusual punishments that may or may not be excessive." Atkins, 536 U.S., at 311, n. 7, 122 S.Ct. 2242.The Court explained in Atkins, id., at 311, 122 S.Ct. 2242, and Roper, supra, at 560, 125 S.Ct. 1183, that the Eighth Amendment's protection against excessive or cruel and unusual punishments flows from the basic "precept of justice that punishment for [a] crime should be graduated and proportioned to [the] offense." Weems v. United States, 217 U.S. 349, 367, 30 S.Ct. 544, 54 L.Ed. 793 (1910). Whether this requirement has been fulfilled is determined not by the standards that prevailed when the Eighth Amendment was adopted in 1791 but by the norms that "currently prevail." Atkins,supra, at 311, 122 S.Ct. 2242. The Amendment "draw[s] its meaning from the evolving standards of decency that mark the progress of a maturing society." Trop v. Dulles, 356 U.S. 86, 101, 78 S.Ct. 590, 2 L.Ed.2d 630 (1958) (plurality opinion). This is because "[t]he standard of extreme cruelty is not merely descriptive, but necessarily embodies a moral judgment. The standard itself remains the same, but its applicability must change as the basic mores of society change." Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 382, 92 S.Ct. 2726, 33 L.Ed.2d 346 (1972) (Burger, C. J., dissenting).

[4] Evolving standards of decency must embrace and express respect for the dignity of the person, and the punishment of criminals must conform to that rule. See Trop, supra, at 100, 78 S.Ct. 590 (plurality opinion). As we shall discuss, punishment is justified under one or more of three principal rationales: rehabilitation, deterrence, and retribution. See 2650Harmelin v. Michigan,* 501 U.S. 957, 999, 111 S.Ct. 2680, 115 L.Ed.2d 836 (1991) (KENNEDY, J., concurring in part and concurring in judgment); see also Part IV-B, infra. It is the last of these, retribution, that most often can contradict the law's own ends. This is of particular concern when the Court interprets the meaning of the Eighth Amendment in capital cases. When the law punishes by death, it risks its own sudden descent into brutality, transgressing the constitutional commitment to decency and restraint.

For these reasons we have explained that capital punishment must "be limited to those offenders who commit 'a narrow category of the most serious crimes' and whose extreme culpability makes them 'the most deserving of execution.' " Roper,supra, at 568, 125 S.Ct. 1183 (quoting Atkins, supra, at 319, 122 S.Ct. 2242). Though the death penalty is not invariably unconstitutional, see Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 49 L.Ed.2d 859 (1976), the Court insists upon confining the instances in which the punishment can be imposed.

Applying this principle, we held in Roper and Atkins that the execution of juveniles and mentally retarded persons are punishments violative of the Eighth Amendment because the offender had a diminished personal responsibility for the crime. See Roper, supra, at 571-573, 125 S.Ct. 1183; Atkins, supra, at 318, 320, 122 S.Ct. 2242. The Court further has held that the death penalty can be disproportionate to the crime itself where the crime did not result, or was not intended to result, in death of the victim. In Coker, 433 U.S. 584, 97 S.Ct. 2861, 53 L.Ed.2d 982, for instance, the Court held it would be unconstitutional to execute an offender who had raped an adult woman. See also Eberheart, supra (holding unconstitutional in light of Coker a sentence of death for the kidnaping and rape of an adult woman). And in Enmund v. Florida, 458 U.S. 782, 102 S.Ct. 3368, 73 L.Ed.2d 1140 (1982), the Court overturned the capital sentence of a defendant who aided and abetted a robbery during which a murder was committed but did not himself kill, attempt to kill, or intend that a killing would take place. On the other hand, in Tison v. Arizona, 481 U.S. 137, 107 S.Ct. 1676, 95 L.Ed.2d 127 (1987), the Court allowed the defendants' death sentences to stand where they did not themselves kill the victims but their involvement in the events leading up to the murders was active, recklessly indifferent, and substantial.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

In these cases the Court has been guided by "objective indicia of society's standards, as expressed in legislative enactments and state practice with respect to executions." Roper, 543 U.S., at 563, 125 S.Ct. 1183; see also Coker, supra, at 593-597, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion) (finding that both legislatures and juries had firmly rejected the penalty of death for the rape of an adult woman); Enmund, supra, at 788, 102 S.Ct. 3368 (looking to "historical development of the punishment at issue, legislative judgments, international opinion, and the sentencing decisions juries have made"). The inquiry does not end there, however. Consensus is not dispositive. Whether the death penalty is disproportionate to the crime committed depends as well upon the standards elaborated by controlling precedents and by the Court's own understanding and interpretation of the Eighth Amendment's text, history, meaning, and purpose. See id., at 797-801, 102 S.Ct. 3368; Gregg, supra, at 182-183, 96 S.Ct. 2909 (joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and STEVENS, JJ.); Coker, supra, at 597-600, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion).

Based both on consensus and our own independent judgment, our holding is that a death sentence for one who raped but 2651 did not kill a child, and who did not intend to assist another in killing the child, is unconstitutional under the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments.

III

A

The existence of objective indicia of consensus against making a crime punishable by death was a relevant concern in Roper, Atkins, Coker, and Enmund, and we follow the approach of those cases here. The history of the death penalty for the crime of rape is an instructive beginning point.

In 1925, 18 States, the District of Columbia, and the Federal Government had statutes that authorized the death penalty for the rape of a child or an adult. See Coker, supra, at 593, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion). Between 1930 and 1964, 455 people were executed for those crimes. See 5 Historical Statistics of the United States: Earliest Times to the Present, pp. 5-262 to 5-263 (S. Carter et al. eds. 2006) (Table Ec343-357). To our knowledge the last individual executed for the rape of a child was Ronald Wolfe in 1964. See H. Frazier, Death Sentences in Missouri, 1803-2005: A History and Comprehensive Registry of Legal Executions, Pardons, and Commutations 143 (2006).

In 1972, Furman invalidated most of the state statutes authorizing the death penalty for the crime of rape; and in Furman's aftermath only six States reenacted their capital rape provisions. Three States-Georgia, North Carolina, and Louisiana-did so with respect to all rape offenses. Three States-Florida, Mississippi, and Tennessee-did so with respect only to child rape. See Coker, supra, at 594-595, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion). All six statutes were later invalidated under state or federal law. See Coker, supra (striking down Georgia's capital rape statute); Woodson v. North Carolina, 428 U.S. 280, 287, n. 6, 301-305, 96 S.Ct. 2978, 49 L.Ed.2d 944 (1976) (plurality opinion) (striking down North Carolina's mandatory death penalty statute); Roberts v. Louisiana, 428 U.S. 325, 96 S.Ct. 3001, 49 L.Ed.2d 974 (1976) (striking down Louisiana's mandatory death penalty statute); Collins v. State, 550 S.W.2d 643, 646 (Tenn.1977) (striking down Tennessee's mandatory death penalty statute); Buford v. State, 403 So.2d 943, 951 (Fla.1981) (holding unconstitutional the imposition of death for child rape); Leatherwood v. State, 548 So.2d 389, 402-403 (Miss.1989) (striking down the death penalty for child rape on state-law grounds).

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Louisiana reintroduced the death penalty for rape of a child in 1995. See La. Stat. Ann. § 14:42 (West Supp.1996). Under the current statute, any anal, vaginal, or oral intercourse with a child under the age of 13 constitutes aggravated rape and is punishable by death. See La. Stat. Ann. § 14:42 (West Supp.2007). Mistake of age is not a defense, so the statute imposes strict liability in this regard. Five States have since followed Louisiana's lead: Georgia, see Ga.Code Ann. § 16-6-1 (2007) (enacted 1999); Montana, see Mont.Code Ann. § 45-5-503 (2007) (enacted 1997); Oklahoma, see Okla. Stat., Tit. 10, § 7115(K) (West 2007 Supp.) (enacted 2006); South Carolina, see S.C.Code Ann. § 16-3-655(C)(1) (Supp.2007) (enacted 2006); and Texas, see Tex. Penal Code Ann. § 12.42(c)(3) (West Supp.2007) (enacted 2007); see also Tex. Penal Code Ann. § 22.021(a) (West Supp.2007). Four of these States' statutes are more narrow than Louisiana's in that only offenders with a previous rape conviction are death eligible. See Mont.Code Ann. § 45-5-503(3)(c); Okla. Stat., Tit. 10, § 7115(K); S.C.Code Ann. § 16-3-655(C)(1); Tex. Penal Code Ann. § 12.42(c)(3). Georgia's statute makes child rape a capital offense 2652 only when aggravating circumstances are present, including but not limited to a prior conviction. See Ga.Code Ann. § 17-10-30 (Supp.2007).

By contrast, 44 States have not made child rape a capital offense. As for federal law, Congress in the Federal Death Penalty Act of 1994 expanded the number of federal crimes for which the death penalty is a permissible sentence, including certain nonhomicide offenses; but it did not do the same for child rape or abuse. See 108 Stat.1972 (codified as amended in scattered sections of 18 U.S.C.). Under 18 U.S.C. § 2245, an offender is death eligible only when the sexual abuse or exploitation results in the victim's death.

Petitioner claims the death penalty for child rape is not authorized in Georgia, pointing to a 1979 decision in which the Supreme Court of Georgia stated that "[s]tatutory rape is not a capital crime in Georgia." Presnell v. State, 243 Ga. 131, 132-133, 252 S.E.2d 625, 626 (1979). But it appears Presnell was referring to the separate crime of statutory rape, which is not a capital offense in Georgia, see Ga.Code Ann. § 26-2018 (1969); cf. Ga.Code. Ann. § 16-6-3 (2007). The State's current capital rape statute, by contrast, is explicit that the rape of "[a] female who is less than ten years of age" is punishable "by death." Ga.Code Ann. §§ 16-6-1(a)(2), (b) (2007). Based on a recent statement by the Supreme Court of Georgia it must be assumed that this law is still in force: "Neither the United States Supreme Court, nor this Court, has yet addressed whether the death penalty is unconstitutionally disproportionate for the crime of raping a child." State v. Velazquez, 283 Ga. 206, 208, 657 S.E.2d 838, 840 (2008).

Respondent would include Florida among those States that permit the death penalty for child rape. The state statute does authorize, by its terms, the death penalty for "sexual battery upon ... a person less than 12 years of age." Fla. Stat. § 794.011(2) (2007); see also § 921.141(5) (2007). In 1981, however, the Supreme Court of Florida held the death penalty for child sexual assault to be unconstitutional. See Buford, supra. It acknowledged that Coker addressed only the constitutionality of the death penalty for rape of an adult woman, 403 So.2d, at 950, but held that "[t]he reasoning of the justices in Coker... compels [the conclusion] that a sentence of death is grossly disproportionate and excessive punishment for the crime of sexual assault and is therefore forbidden by the Eighth Amendment as cruel and unusual punishment," id., at 951. Respondent points out that the state statute has not since been amended. Pursuant to Fla. Stat. § 775.082(2) (2007), however, Florida state courts have understood Buford to bind their sentencing discretion in child rape cases. See, e.g., Gibson v. State, 721 So.2d 363, 367, and n. 2 (Fla.App.1998) (deeming it irrelevant that "the Florida Legislature never changed the wording of the sexual battery statute"); Cooper v. State, 453 So.2d 67 (Fla.App.1984) ("After Buford, death was no longer a possible penalty in Florida for sexual battery"); see also Fla. Stat. § 775.082(2) ("In the event the death penalty in a capital felony is held to be unconstitutional by the Florida Supreme Court ... the court having jurisdiction over a person previously sentenced to death for a capital felony ... shall sentence such person to life imprisonment").

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Definitive resolution of state-law issues is for the States' own courts, and there may be disagreement over the statistics. It is further true that some States, including States that have addressed the issue in just the last few years, have made child rape a capital offense. The summary recited here, however, does allow us to make 2653 certain comparisons with the data cited in the Atkins, Roper, and Enmund cases.

When Atkins was decided in 2002, 30 States, including 12 noncapital jurisdictions, prohibited the death penalty for mentally retarded offenders; 20 permitted it. See 536 U.S., at 313-315, 122 S.Ct. 2242. When Roper was decided in 2005, the numbers disclosed a similar division among the States: 30 States prohibited the death penalty for juveniles, 18 of which permitted the death penalty for other offenders; and 20 States authorized it. See 543 U.S., at 564, 125 S.Ct. 1183. Both in Atkins and in Roper, we noted that the practice of executing mentally retarded and juvenile offenders was infrequent. Only five States had executed an offender known to have an IQ below 70 between 1989 and 2002, see Atkins, supra, at 316, 122 S.Ct. 2242; and only three States had executed a juvenile offender between 1995 and 2005, see Roper, supra, at 564-565, 125 S.Ct. 1183.

The statistics in Enmund bear an even greater similarity to the instant case. There eight jurisdictions had authorized imposition of the death penalty solely for participation in a robbery during which an accomplice committed murder, see 458 U.S., at 789, 102 S.Ct. 3368, and six defendants between 1954 and 1982 had been sentenced to death for felony murder where the defendant did not personally commit the homicidal assault, id., at 794, 102 S.Ct. 3368. These facts, the Court concluded, "weigh[ed] on the side of rejecting capital punishment for the crime." Id., at 793, 102 S.Ct. 3368.

The evidence of a national consensus with respect to the death penalty for child rapists, as with respect to juveniles, mentally retarded offenders, and vicarious felony murderers, shows divided opinion but, on balance, an opinion against it. Thirty-seven jurisdictions-36 States plus the Federal Government-have the death penalty. As mentioned above, only six of those jurisdictions authorize the death penalty for rape of a child. Though our review of national consensus is not confined to tallying the number of States with applicable death penalty legislation, it is of significance that, in 45 jurisdictions, petitioner could not be executed for child rape of any kind. That number surpasses the 30 States in Atkins and Roper and the 42 States in Enmund that prohibited the death penalty under the circumstances those cases considered.[FN*]

FN* When issued and announced on June 25, 2008, the Court's decision neither noted nor discussed the military penalty for rape under the Uniform Code of Military Justice. See 10 U.S.C. §§ 856, 920; Manual for Courts-Martial, United States, Part IV, ¶ 45.f(1) (2008). In a petition for rehearing respondent argues that the military penalty bears on our consideration of the question in this case. For the reasons set forth in the statement respecting the denial of rehearing, post p. ----, we find that the military penalty does not affect our reasoning or conclusion.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

B

At least one difference between this case and our Eighth Amendment proportionality precedents must be addressed. Respondent and its amici suggest that some States have an "erroneous understanding of this Court's Eighth Amendment jurisprudence." Brief for Missouri Governor Matt Blunt et al. as Amici Curiae 10. They submit that the general propositions set out in Coker, contrasting murder and rape, have been interpreted in too expansive a way, leading some state legislatures to conclude that Coker applies to child rape when in fact its reasoning does not, or ought not, apply to that specific crime.

This argument seems logical at first, but in the end it is unsound. In Coker, a four-Member plurality of the Court, plus Justice Brennan and Justice Marshall in concurrence, held that a sentence of death for the rape of a 16-year-old woman, who was a minor under Georgia law, see Ga.Code Ann. § 74-104 (1973), yet was characterized by the Court as an adult, was disproportionate and excessive under the Eighth Amendment. See 433 U.S., at 593-600, 97 S.Ct. 2861; see also id., at 600, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (Brennan, J., concurring in judgment); ibid. (Marshall, J., concurring in judgment). (The Court did not explain 2654 why the 16-year-old victim qualified as an adult, but it may be of some significance that she was married, had a home of her own, and had given birth to a son three weeks prior to the rape. See Brief for Petitioner in Coker v. Georgia, O.T.1976, No. 75-5444, pp. 14-15.)

The plurality noted that only one State had a valid statute authorizing the death penalty for adult rape and that "in the vast majority of cases, at least 9 out of 10, juries ha[d] not imposed the death sentence." Coker, 433 U.S., at 597, 97 S.Ct. 2861; see also id., at 594, 97 S.Ct. 2861 ("Of the 16 States in which rape had been a capital offense, only three provided the death penalty for rape of an adult woman in their revised statutes-Georgia, North Carolina, and Louisiana. In the latter two States, the death penalty was mandatory for those found guilty, and those laws were invalidated by Woodson and Roberts "). This "history and ... objective evidence of the country's present judgment concerning the acceptability of death as a penalty for rape of an adult woman," id., at 593, 97 S.Ct. 2861, confirmed the Court's independent judgment that punishing adult rape by death was not proportional:

> "Rape is without doubt deserving of serious punishment; but in terms of moral depravity and of the injury to the person and to the public, it does not compare with murder, which does involve the unjustified taking of human life. Although it may be accompanied by another crime, rape by definition does not include the death of ... another person. The murderer kills; the rapist, if no more than that, does not .... We have the abiding conviction that the death penalty, which 'is unique in its severity and irrevocability,' Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S., at 187, 96 S.Ct. 2909, is an excessive penalty for the rapist who, as such, does not take human life." Id., at 598, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (footnote omitted).

Confined to this passage, Coker's analysis of the Eighth Amendment is susceptible of a reading that would prohibit making child rape a capital offense. In context, however, Coker's holding was narrower than some of its language read in isolation. The Coker plurality framed the question as whether, "with respect to rape of an adult woman," the death penalty is disproportionate punishment. Id., at 592, 97 S.Ct. 2861. And it repeated the phrase "an adult woman" or "an adult female" in discussing the act of rape or the victim of rape eight times in its opinion. See Coker, supra. The distinction between adult and child rape was not merely rhetorical; it was central to the Court's reasoning. The opinion does not speak to the constitutionality of the death penalty for child rape, an issue not then before the

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Court. In discussing the legislative background, for example, the Court noted:

"Florida, Mississippi, and Tennessee also authorized the death penalty in some rape cases, but only where the victim was a child and the rapist an adult. The Tennessee statute has since been invalidated because the death sentence was mandatory. The upshot is that Georgia is the sole jurisdiction in the United States at the present time that authorizes a sentence of death when the rape victim is an adult woman, and only two other jurisdictions provide capital punishment when the victim is a child .... [This] obviously weighs very heavily on the side of rejecting capital punishment as a suitable penalty for raping an adult woman." Id., at 595-596, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (citation and footnote omitted).

Still, respondent contends, it is possible that state legislatures have understood Coker to state a broad rule that covers the 2655 situation of the minor victim as well. We see little evidence of this. Respondent cites no reliable data to indicate that state legislatures have read Coker to bar capital punishment for child rape and, for this reason, have been deterred from passing applicable death penalty legislation. In the absence of evidence from those States where legislation has been proposed but not enacted we refuse to speculate about the motivations and concerns of particular state legislators.

The position of the state courts, furthermore, to which state legislators look for guidance on these matters, indicates that Coker has not blocked the emergence of legislative consensus. The state courts that have confronted the precise question before us have been uniform in concluding that Coker did not address the constitutionality of the death penalty for the crime of child rape. See, e.g., Wilson, 685 So.2d, at 1066 (upholding the constitutionality of the death penalty for rape of a child and noting that "[t]he plurality [in Coker] took great pains in referring only to the rape of adult women throughout their opinion" (emphasis deleted)); Upshaw v. State, 350 So.2d 1358, 1360 (Miss.1977) ("In Coker the Court took great pains to limit its decision to the applicability of the death penalty for the rape of an adult woman .... As we view Coker the Court carefully refrained from deciding whether the death penalty for the rape of a female child under the age of twelve years is grossly disproportionate to the crime"). See also Simpson v. Owens, 207 Ariz. 261, 268, n. 8, 85 P.3d 478, 485, n. 8 (App.2004) (addressing the denial of bail for sexual offenses against children and noting that "[a]lthough the death penalty was declared in a plurality opinion of the United States Supreme Court to be a disproportionate punishment for the rape of an adult woman ... the rape of a child remains a capital offense in some states"); People v. Hernandez, 30 Cal.4th 835, 869, 134 Cal.Rptr.2d 602, 69 P.3d 446, 466 (2003) (addressing the death penalty for conspiracy to commit murder and noting that "the constitutionality of laws imposing the death penalty for crimes not necessarily resulting in death is unresolved").

There is, to be sure, some contrary authority contained in various state-court opinions. But it is either dicta, see State v. Barnum, 921 So.2d 513, 526 (Fla.2005) (addressing the retroactivity of Thompson v. State, 695 So.2d 691 (Fla.1997)); State v. Coleman, 185 Mont. 299, 327, 605 P.2d 1000, 1017 (1979) (upholding the defendant's death sentence for aggravated kidnaping); State v. Gardner, 947 P.2d 630, 653 (Utah 1997) (addressing the constitutionality of the death penalty for prison assaults); equivocal in its conclusion, see People v. Huddleston, 212 Ill.2d 107, 141, 287 Ill.Dec. 560, 816 N.E.2d 322, 341-342 (2004) (citing law review articles for the proposition that the constitutionality of the death penalty for nonhomicide crimes "is the subject of debate"); or from a decision of a state intermediate court that has been superseded by a more specific statement of the law by the State's supreme court, compare, e.g., Parker v. State, 216 Ga.App. 649, 650, n. 1, 455 S.E.2d 360, 361, n. 1 (1995) (characterizing Coker as holding that the death penalty "is no longer permitted for rape where the victim is not killed"), with Velazquez,

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

283 Ga., at 208, 657 S.E.2d, at 840 ("[T]he United States Supreme Court ... has yet [to] addres[s] whether the death penalty is unconstitutionally disproportionate for the crime of raping a child").

The Supreme Court of Florida's opinion in Buford could be read to support respondent's argument. But even there the state court recognized that "[t]he [Supreme] Court has yet to decide whether [Coker's rationale] holds true for the rape of a 2656 child" and made explicit that it was extending the reasoning but not the holding of Coker in striking down the death penalty for child rape. 403 So.2d, at 950, 951. The same is true of the Supreme Court of California's opinion in Hernandez, supra, at 867, 134 Cal.Rptr.2d 602, 69 P.3d, at 464.

We conclude on the basis of this review that there is no clear indication that state legislatures have misinterpreted Coker to hold that the death penalty for child rape is unconstitutional. The small number of States that have enacted this penalty, then, is relevant to determining whether there is a consensus against capital punishment for this crime.

C

Respondent insists that the six States where child rape is a capital offense, along with the States that have proposed but not yet enacted applicable death penalty legislation, reflect a consistent direction of change in support of the death penalty for child rape. Consistent change might counterbalance an otherwise weak demonstration of consensus. See Atkins, 536 U.S., at 315, 122 S.Ct. 2242 ("It is not so much the number of these States that is significant, but the consistency of the direction of change"); Roper, 543 U.S., at 565, 125 S.Ct. 1183 ("Impressive in Atkins was the rate of abolition of the death penalty for the mentally retarded"). But whatever the significance of consistent change where it is cited to show emerging support for expanding the scope of the death penalty, no showing of consistent change has been made in this case.

Respondent and its amici identify five States where, in their view, legislation authorizing capital punishment for child rape is pending. See Brief for Missouri Governor Matt Blunt et al. as Amici Curiae 2, 14. It is not our practice, nor is it sound, to find contemporary norms based upon state legislation that has been proposed but not yet enacted. There are compelling reasons not to do so here. Since the briefs were submitted by the parties, legislation in two of the five States has failed. See, e.g., S. 195, 66th Gen. Assembly, 2d Reg. Sess. (Colo.2008) (rejected by Senate Appropriations Committee on Apr. 11, 2008); S. 2596, 2008 Leg., Reg. Sess. (Miss.2008) (rejected by House Committee on Mar. 18, 2008). In Tennessee, the house bills were rejected almost a year ago, and the senate bills appear to have died in committee. See H.R. 601, 105th Gen. Assembly, 1st Reg. Sess. (2007) (taken off Subcommittee Calendar on Apr. 4, 2007); H.R. 662, ibid. (failed for lack of second on Mar. 21, 2007); H.R. 1099, ibid. (taken off notice for Judiciary Committee calendar on May 16, 2007); S. 22, ibid. (referred to General Subcommittee of Senate Finance, Ways, and Means Committee on June 11, 2007); S. 157, ibid.(referred to Senate Judiciary Committee on Feb. 7, 2007; action deferred until Jan. 2008); S. 841, ibid.(referred to General Subcommittee of Senate Judiciary Committee on Mar. 27, 2007). In Alabama, the recent legislation is similar to a bill that failed in 2007. Compare H.R. 456, 2008 Leg., Reg. Sess. (2008), with H.R. 335, 2007 Leg., Reg. Sess. (2007). And in Missouri, the 2008 legislative session has ended, tabling the pending legislation. See Mo. Const., Art. III, § 20(a).

Aside from pending legislation, it is true that in the last 13 years there has been change towards making child rape a capital offense. This is evidenced by six new death penalty statutes, three enacted in the last two years. But this showing is not as significant as the data in Atkins, where 18 States between 1986 and 2001 had enacted legislation prohibiting the execution of mentally retarded persons. See 2657Atkins, supra,* at 313-315, 122 S.Ct. 2242. Respondent argues the instant case is like Roper because, there, only five States had shifted their positions between 1989 and 2005, one less State than here. See Roper, supra, at 565, 125 S.Ct. 1183. But in Roper, we emphasized that, though the pace of abolition was not as great as in Atkins, it was counterbalanced by the total number of States that had recognized the impropriety of executing juvenile offenders. See 543 U.S., at 566-567, 125 S.Ct. 1183. When we decided Stanford v. Kentucky, 492 U.S. 361, 109 S.Ct. 2969, 106 L.Ed.2d 306 (1989), 12 death penalty States already prohibited the execution of any juvenile under 18, and 15 prohibited the execution of any juvenile under 17. See Roper, supra, at 566-567, 125 S.Ct. 1183 ("If anything, this shows that the impropriety of executing juveniles between 16 and 18 years of age gained wide recognition earlier"). Here, the total number of States to have made child rape a capital offense after Furman is six. This is not an indication of a trend or change in direction comparable to the one supported by data in Roper. The evidence here bears a closer resemblance to the evidence of state activity in Enmund, where we found a national consensus against the death penalty for vicarious felony murder despite eight jurisdictions having authorized the practice. See 458 U.S., at 789, 792, 102 S.Ct. 3368.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

D

There are measures of consensus other than legislation. Statistics about the number of executions may inform the consideration whether capital punishment for the crime of child rape is regarded as unacceptable in our society. See, e.g., id., at 794-795, 102 S.Ct. 3368; Roper, supra, at 564-565, 125 S.Ct. 1183; Atkins, supra, at 316, 122 S.Ct. 2242; Cf. Coker, 433 U.S., at 596-597, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion). These statistics confirm our determination from our review of state statutes that there is a social consensus against the death penalty for the crime of child rape.

Nine States-Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Montana, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Texas-have permitted capital punishment for adult or child rape for some length of time between the Court's 1972 decision in Furman and today. See supra, at 2651; Coker, supra, at 595, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion). Yet no individual has been executed for the rape of an adult or child since 1964, and no execution for any other nonhomicide offense has been conducted since 1963. See Historical Statistics of the United States, at 5-262 to 5-263 (Table Ec343-357). Cf. Thompson v. Oklahoma, 487 U.S. 815, 852-853, 108 S.Ct. 2687, 101 L.Ed.2d 702 (1988) (O'Connor, J., concurring in judgment) (that "four decades have gone by since the last execution of a defendant who was younger than 16 at the time of the offense ... support[s] the inference of a national consensus opposing the death penalty for 15-year-olds").

Louisiana is the only State since 1964 that has sentenced an individual to death for the crime of child rape; and petitioner and Richard Davis, who was convicted and sentenced to death for the aggravated rape of a 5-year-old child by a Louisiana jury in December 2007, see State v. Davis, Case No. 262,971 (1st Jud. Dist., Caddo Parish, La.) (cited in Brief for Respondent 42, and n. 38), are the only two individuals now on death row in the United States for a nonhomicide offense.

After reviewing the authorities informed by contemporary norms, including the history of the death penalty for this and other nonhomicide crimes, current state statutes and new enactments, and the number of executions since 1964, we conclude there is 2658 a national consensus against capital punishment for the crime of child rape.

IV

A

As we have said in other Eighth Amendment cases, objective evidence of contemporary values as it relates to punishment for child rape is entitled to great weight, but it does not end our inquiry. "[T]he Constitution contemplates that in the end our own judgment will be brought to bear on the question of the acceptability of the death penalty under the Eighth Amendment." Coker, supra, at 597, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion); see also Roper, supra, at 563, 125 S.Ct. 1183; Enmund, supra, at 797, 102 S.Ct. 3368 ("[I]t is for us ultimately to judge whether the Eighth Amendment permits imposition of the death penalty"). We turn, then, to the resolution of the question before us, which is informed by our precedents and our own understanding of the Constitution and the rights it secures.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

It must be acknowledged that there are moral grounds to question a rule barring capital punishment for a crime against an individual that did not result in death. These facts illustrate the point. Here the victim's fright, the sense of betrayal, and the nature of her injuries caused more prolonged physical and mental suffering than, say, a sudden killing by an unseen assassin. The attack was not just on her but on her childhood. For this reason, we should be most reluctant to rely upon the language of the plurality in Coker, which posited that, for the victim of rape, "life may not be nearly so happy as it was" but it is not beyond repair. 433 U.S., at 598, 97 S.Ct. 2861. Rape has a permanent psychological, emotional, and sometimes physical impact on the child. See C. Bagley & K. King, Child Sexual Abuse: The Search for Healing 2-24, 111-112 (1990); Finkelhor & Browne, Assessing the Long-Term Impact of Child Sexual Abuse: A Review and Conceptualization in Handbook on Sexual Abuse of Children 55-60 (L. Walker ed.1988). We cannot dismiss the years of long anguish that must be endured by the victim of child rape.

It does not follow, though, that capital punishment is a proportionate penalty for the crime. The constitutional prohibition against excessive or cruel and unusual punishments mandates that the State's power to punish "be exercised within the limits of civilized standards." Trop, 356 U.S., at 99, 100, 78 S.Ct. 590 (plurality opinion). Evolving standards of decency that mark the progress of a maturing society counsel us to be most hesitant before interpreting the Eighth Amendment to allow the extension of the death penalty, a hesitation that has special force where no life was taken in the commission of the crime. It is an established principle that decency, in its essence, presumes respect for the individual and thus moderation or restraint in the application of capital punishment. See id., at 100, 78 S.Ct. 590.

To date the Court has sought to define and implement this principle, for the most part, in cases involving capital murder. One approach has been to insist upon general rules that ensure consistency in determining who receives a death sentence. See California v. Brown, 479 U.S. 538, 541, 107 S.Ct. 837, 93 L.Ed.2d 934 (1987) ("[D]eath penalty statutes [must] be structured so as to prevent the penalty from being administered in an arbitrary and unpredictable fashion" (citing Gregg, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 49 L.Ed.2d 859; Furman, 408 U.S. 238, 92 S.Ct. 2726, 33 L.Ed.2d 346)); Godfrey v. Georgia, 446 U.S. 420, 428, 100 S.Ct. 1759, 64 L.Ed.2d 398 (1980) (plurality opinion) (requiring a State to give narrow and precise definition to the aggravating factors that warrant its 2659 imposition). At the same time the Court has insisted, to ensure restraint and moderation in use of capital punishment, on judging the "character and record of the individual offender and the circumstances of the particular offense as a constitutionally indispensable part of the process of inflicting the penalty of death." Woodson, 428 U.S., at 304, 96 S.Ct. 2978 (plurality opinion); Lockett v. Ohio, 438 U.S. 586, 604-605, 98 S.Ct. 2954, 57 L.Ed.2d 973 (1978) (plurality opinion).

The tension between general rules and case-specific circumstances has produced results not all together satisfactory. See Tuilaepa v. California, 512 U.S. 967, 973, 114 S.Ct. 2630, 129 L.Ed.2d 750 (1994) ("The objectives of these two inquiries can be in some tension, at least when the inquiries occur at the same time"); Walton v. Arizona, 497 U.S. 639,

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

664-665, 110 S.Ct. 3047, 111 L.Ed.2d 511 (1990) (SCALIA, J., concurring in part and concurring in judgment) ("The latter requirement quite obviously destroys whatever rationality and predictability the former requirement was designed to achieve"). This has led some Members of the Court to say we should cease efforts to resolve the tension and simply allow legislatures, prosecutors, courts, and juries greater latitude. See id., at 667-673, 110 S.Ct. 3047 (advocating that the Court adhere to the Furman line of cases and abandon the Woodson- Lockett line of cases). For others the failure to limit these same imprecisions by stricter enforcement of narrowing rules has raised doubts concerning the constitutionality of capital punishment itself. See Baze v. Rees, 553 U.S. ----, ---- - ----, 128 S.Ct. 1520, 1532-1534, 170 L.Ed.2d 420 (2008) (STEVENS, J., concurring in judgment); Furman, supra, at 310-314, 92 S.Ct. 2726 (White, J., concurring); Callins v. Collins, 510 U.S. 1141, 1144-1145, 114 S.Ct. 1127, 127 L.Ed.2d 435 (1994) (Blackmun, J., dissenting from denial of certiorari).

Our response to this case law, which is still in search of a unifying principle, has been to insist upon confining the instances in which capital punishment may be imposed. See Gregg, supra, at 187, 184, 96 S.Ct. 2909 (joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and STEVENS, JJ.) (because "death as a punishment is unique in its severity and irrevocability," capital punishment must be reserved for those crimes that are "so grievous an affront to humanity that the only adequate response may be the penalty of death" (citing in part Furman, 408 U.S., at 286-291, 92 S.Ct. 2726 (Brennan, J., concurring); id., at 306, 92 S.Ct. 2726 (Stewart, J., concurring))); see also Roper, 543 U.S., at 569, 125 S.Ct. 1183 (the Eighth Amendment requires that "the death penalty is reserved for a narrow category of crimes and offenders").

Our concern here is limited to crimes against individual persons. We do not address, for example, crimes defining and punishing treason, espionage, terrorism, and drug kingpin activity, which are offenses against the State. As it relates to crimes against individuals, though, the death penalty should not be expanded to instances where the victim's life was not taken. We said in Coker of adult rape:

> "We do not discount the seriousness of rape as a crime. It is highly reprehensible, both in a moral sense and in its almost total contempt for the personal integrity and autonomy of the female victim .... Short of homicide, it is the 'ultimate violation of self.' ...[But] [t]he murderer kills; the rapist, if no more than that, does not.... We have the abiding conviction that the death penalty, which 'is unique in its severity and irrevocability,' is an excessive penalty for the rapist who, as such, does not take human life." 2660433 U.S., at 597-598, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion) (citation omitted).

The same distinction between homicide and other serious violent offenses against the individual informed the Court's analysis in Enmund, 458 U.S. 782, 102 S.Ct. 3368, 73 L.Ed.2d 1140, where the Court held that the death penalty for the crime of vicarious felony murder is disproportionate to the offense. The Court repeated there the fundamental, moral distinction between a "murderer" and a "robber," noting that while "robbery is a serious crime deserving serious punishment," it is not like death in its "severity and irrevocability." Id., at 797, 102 S.Ct. 3368 (internal quotation marks omitted).

Consistent with evolving standards of decency and the teachings of our precedents we conclude that, in determining whether the death penalty is excessive, there is a distinction between intentional first-degree murder on the one hand and nonhomicide crimes against individual persons, even including child rape, on the other. The latter crimes may be devastating in their harm, as here, but "in terms of moral depravity and of the injury to the person and to the public," Coker, 433 U.S., at 598, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion), they cannot be compared to murder in their "severity and irrevocability."

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Ibid.

In reaching our conclusion we find significant the number of executions that would be allowed under respondent's approach. The crime of child rape, considering its reported incidents, occurs more often than first-degree murder. Approximately 5,702 incidents of vaginal, anal, or oral rape of a child under the age of 12 were reported nationwide in 2005; this is almost twice the total incidents of intentional murder for victims of all ages (3,405) reported during the same period. See Inter-University Consortium for Political and Social Research, National Incident-Based Reporting System, 2005, Study No. 4720, http:// www. icpsr. umich. edu (as visited June 12, 2008, and available in Clerk of Court's case file). Although we have no reliable statistics on convictions for child rape, we can surmise that, each year, there are hundreds, or more, of these convictions just in jurisdictions that permit capital punishment. Cf. Brief for Louisiana Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers et al. as Amici Curiae 1-2, and n. 2 (noting that there are now at least 70 capital rape indictments pending in Louisiana and estimating the actual number to be over 100). As a result of existing rules, see generally Godfrey, 446 U.S., at 428-433, 100 S.Ct. 1759 (plurality opinion), only 2.2% of convicted first-degree murderers are sentenced to death, see Blume, Eisenberg, & Wells, Explaining Death Row's Population and Racial Composition, 1 J. of Empirical Legal Studies 165, 171 (2004). But under respondent's approach, the 36 States that permit the death penalty could sentence to death all persons convicted of raping a child less than 12 years of age. This could not be reconciled with our evolving standards of decency and the necessity to constrain the use of the death penalty.

It might be said that narrowing aggravators could be used in this context, as with murder offenses, to ensure the death penalty's restrained application. We find it difficult to identify standards that would guide the decisionmaker so the penalty is reserved for the most severe cases of child rape and yet not imposed in an arbitrary way. Even were we to forbid, say, the execution of first-time child rapists, see supra at 2651, or require as an aggravating factor a finding that the perpetrator's instant rape offense involved multiple victims, the jury still must balance, in its discretion, those aggravating factors against mitigating circumstances. In this 2661 context, which involves a crime that in many cases will overwhelm a decent person's judgment, we have no confidence that the imposition of the death penalty would not be so arbitrary as to be "freakis[h]," Furman, 408 U.S., at 310, 92 S.Ct. 2726 (Stewart, J., concurring). We cannot sanction this result when the harm to the victim, though grave, cannot be quantified in the same way as death of the victim.

It is not a solution simply to apply to this context the aggravating factors developed for capital murder. The Court has said that a State may carry out its obligation to ensure individualized sentencing in capital murder cases by adopting sentencing processes that rely upon the jury to exercise wide discretion so long as there are narrowing factors that have some " 'common-sense core of meaning ... that criminal juries should be capable of understanding.' " Tuilaepa, 512 U.S., at 975, 114 S.Ct. 2630 (quoting Jurek v. Texas, 428 U.S. 262, 279, 96 S.Ct. 2950, 49 L.Ed.2d 929 (1976) (White, J., concurring in judgment)). The Court, accordingly, has upheld the constitutionality of aggravating factors ranging from whether the defendant was a " 'cold-blooded, pitiless slayer,' " Arave v. Creech, 507 U.S. 463, 471-474, 113 S.Ct. 1534, 123 L.Ed.2d 188 (1993), to whether the "perpetrator inflict[ed] mental anguish or physical abuse before the victim's death," Walton, 497 U.S., at 654, 110 S.Ct. 3047, to whether the defendant " 'would commit criminal acts of violence that would constitute a continuing threat to society,' " Jurek, supra, at 269-270, 274-276, 96 S.Ct. 2950 (joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and STEVENS, JJ.). All of these standards have the potential to result in some inconsistency of application.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

As noted above, the resulting imprecision and the tension between evaluating the individual circumstances and consistency of treatment have been tolerated where the victim dies. It should not be introduced into our justice system, though, where death has not occurred.

Our concerns are all the more pronounced where, as here, the death penalty for this crime has been most infrequent. See Part III-D, supra. We have developed a foundational jurisprudence in the case of capital murder to guide the States and juries in imposing the death penalty. Starting with Gregg, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 49 L.Ed.2d 859, we have spent more than 32 years articulating limiting factors that channel the jury's discretion to avoid the death penalty's arbitrary imposition in the case of capital murder. Though that practice remains sound, beginning the same process for crimes for which no one has been executed in more than 40 years would require experimentation in an area where a failed experiment would result in the execution of individuals undeserving of the death penalty. Evolving standards of decency are difficult to reconcile with a regime that seeks to expand the death penalty to an area where standards to confine its use are indefinite and obscure.

B

Our decision is consistent with the justifications offered for the death penalty. Gregg instructs that capital punishment is excessive when it is grossly out of proportion to the crime or it does not fulfill the two distinct social purposes served by the death penalty: retribution and deterrence of capital crimes. See id., at 173, 183, 187, 96 S.Ct. 2909 (joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and STEVENS, JJ.); see also Coker, 433 U.S., at 592, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion) ("A punishment might fail the test on either ground").

As in Coker, here it cannot be said with any certainty that the death penalty for child rape serves no deterrent or retributive function. See 2662id.,* at 593, n. 4, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (concluding that the death penalty for rape might serve "legitimate ends of punishment" but nevertheless is disproportionate to the crime). Cf. Gregg, supra, at 185-186, 96 S.Ct. 2909 (joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and STEVENS, JJ.) ("[T]here is no convincing empirical evidence either supporting or refuting th[e] view [that the death penalty serves as a significantly greater deterrent than lesser penalties]. We may nevertheless assume safely that there are murderers ... for whom ... the death penalty undoubtedly is a significant deterrent"); id., at 186, 96 S.Ct. 2909 (the value of capital punishment, and its contribution to acceptable penological goals, typically is a "complex factual issue the resolution of which properly rests with the legislatures"). This argument does not overcome other objections, however. The incongruity between the crime of child rape and the harshness of the death penalty poses risks of overpunishment and counsels against a constitutional ruling that the death penalty can be expanded to include this offense.

The goal of retribution, which reflects society's and the victim's interests in seeing that the offender is repaid for the hurt he caused, see Atkins, 536 U.S., at 319, 122 S.Ct. 2242; Furman, supra, at 308, 92 S.Ct. 2726 (Stewart, J., concurring), does not justify the harshness of the death penalty here. In measuring retribution, as well as other objectives of criminal law, it is appropriate to distinguish between a particularly depraved murder that merits death as a form of retribution and the crime of child rape. See Part IV-A, supra ; Coker, supra, at 597-598, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion).

There is an additional reason for our conclusion that imposing the death penalty for child rape would not further retributive purposes. In considering whether retribution is served, among other factors we have looked to whether capital punishment "has the potential ... to allow the community as a whole, including the surviving family and friends of the victim, to affirm its own judgment that the culpability of the prisoner is so serious that the ultimate penalty must be sought and imposed." Panetti v. Quarterman, 551 U.S. ----, ----, 127 S.Ct. 2842, 2847, 168 L.Ed.2d 662 (2007). In considering the death penalty for nonhomicide offenses this inquiry necessarily also must include the question whether the death penalty balances the wrong to the victim. Cf. Roper, 543 U.S., at 571, 125 S.Ct. 1183.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

It is not at all evident that the child rape victim's hurt is lessened when the law permits the death of the perpetrator. Capital cases require a long-term commitment by those who testify for the prosecution, especially when guilt and sentencing determinations are in multiple proceedings. In cases like this the key testimony is not just from the family but from the victim herself. During formative years of her adolescence, made all the more daunting for having to come to terms with the brutality of her experience, L.H. was required to discuss the case at length with law enforcement personnel. In a public trial she was required to recount once more all the details of the crime to a jury as the State pursued the death of her stepfather. Cf. G. Goodman et al., Testifying in Criminal Court: Emotional Effects on Child Sexual Assault Victims 50, 62, 72 (1992); Brief for National Association of Social Workers et al. as Amici Curiae 17-21. And in the end the State made L.H. a central figure in its decision to seek the death penalty, telling the jury in closing statements: "[L. H.] is asking you, asking you to set up a time and place when he dies." Tr. 121 (Aug. 26, 2003).

Society's desire to inflict the death penalty for child rape by enlisting the child 2663 victim to assist it over the course of years in asking for capital punishment forces a moral choice on the child, who is not of mature age to make that choice. The way the death penalty here involves the child victim in its enforcement can compromise a decent legal system; and this is but a subset of fundamental difficulties capital punishment can cause in the administration and enforcement of laws proscribing child rape.

There are, moreover, serious systemic concerns in prosecuting the crime of child rape that are relevant to the constitutionality of making it a capital offense. The problem of unreliable, induced, and even imagined child testimony means there is a "special risk of wrongful execution" in some child rape cases. Atkins, supra, at 321, 122 S.Ct. 2242. See also Brief for National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers et al. as Amici Curiae 5-17. This undermines, at least to some degree, the meaningful contribution of the death penalty to legitimate goals of punishment. Studies conclude that children are highly susceptible to suggestive questioning techniques like repetition, guided imagery, and selective reinforcement. See Ceci & Friedman, The Suggestibility of Children: Scientific Research and Legal Implications, 86 Cornell L.Rev. 33, 47 (2000) (there is "strong evidence that children, especially young children, are suggestible to a significant degree-even on abuse-related questions"); Gross, Jacoby, Matheson, Montgomery, & Patil, Exonerations in the United States 1989 Through 2003, 95 J.Crim. L. & C. 523, 539 (2005) (discussing allegations of abuse at the Little Rascals Day Care Center); see also Quas, Davis, Goodman, & Myers, Repeated Questions, Deception, and Children's True and False Reports of Body Touch, 12 Child Maltreatment 60, 61-66 (2007) (finding that 4- to 7-year-olds "were able to maintain [a] lie about body touch fairly effectively when asked repeated, direct questions during a mock forensic interview").

Similar criticisms pertain to other cases involving child witnesses; but child rape cases present heightened concerns because the central narrative and account of the crime often comes from the child herself. She and the accused are, in most instances, the only ones present when the crime was committed. See Pennsylvania v. Ritchie, 480 U.S. 39, 60, 107 S.Ct. 989, 94 L.Ed.2d 40 (1987). Cf. Goodman, Testifying in Criminal Court, at 118. And the question in a capital case is not just the fact of the crime, including, say, proof of rape as distinct from abuse short of rape, but details bearing upon brutality in its commission. These matters are subject to fabrication or exaggeration, or both. See Ceci and Friedman, supra; Quas, supra. Although capital punishment does bring retribution, and the legislature here has chosen to use it for this end, its judgment must be weighed, in deciding the constitutional question, against the special risks of unreliable testimony with respect to this crime.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

With respect to deterrence, if the death penalty adds to the risk of non-reporting, that, too, diminishes the penalty's objectives. Underreporting is a common problem with respect to child sexual abuse. See Hanson, Resnick, Saunders, Kilpatrick, & Best, Factors Related to the Reporting of Childhood Rape, 23 Child Abuse & Neglect 559, 564 (1999) (finding that about 88% of female rape victims under the age of 18 did not disclose their abuse to authorities); Smith et al., Delay in Disclosure of Childhood Rape: Results From A National Survey, 24 Child Abuse & Neglect 273, 278-279 (2000) (finding that 72% of women raped as children disclosed their abuse to someone, but that only 12% of the victims reported the rape to authorities). Although we know little about what differentiates2664 those who report from those who do not report, see Hanson, supra, at 561, one of the most commonly cited reasons for nondisclosure is fear of negative consequences for the perpetrator, a concern that has special force where the abuser is a family member, see Goodman-Brown, Edelstein, Goodman, Jones, & Gordon, Why Children Tell: A Model of Children's Disclosure of Sexual Abuse, 27 Child Abuse & Neglect 525, 527-528 (2003); Smith, supra, at 283-284 (finding that, where there was a relationship between perpetrator and victim, the victim was likely to keep the abuse a secret for a longer period of time, perhaps because of a "greater sense of loyalty or emotional bond"); Hanson, supra, at 565-566, and Table 3 (finding that a "significantly greater proportion of reported than nonreported cases involved a stranger"); see also Ritchie, supra, at 60. The experience of the amici who work with child victims indicates that, when the punishment is death, both the victim and the victim's family members may be more likely to shield the perpetrator from discovery, thus increasing underreporting. See Brief for National Association of Social Workers et al. as Amici Curiae 11-13. As a result, punishment by death may not result in more deterrence or more effective enforcement.

In addition, by in effect making the punishment for child rape and murder equivalent, a State that punishes child rape by death may remove a strong incentive for the rapist not to kill the victim. Assuming the offender behaves in a rational way, as one must to justify the penalty on grounds of deterrence, the penalty in some respects gives less protection, not more, to the victim, who is often the sole witness to the crime. See Rayburn, Better Dead Than R(ap)ed?: The Patriarchal Rhetoric Driving Capital Rape Statutes, 78 St. John's L.Rev. 1119, 1159-1160 (2004). It might be argued that, even if the death penalty results in a marginal increase in the incentive to kill, this is counterbalanced by a marginally increased deterrent to commit the crime at all. Whatever balance the legislature strikes, however, uncertainty on the point makes the argument for the penalty less compelling than for homicide crimes.

Each of these propositions, standing alone, might not establish the unconstitutionality of the death penalty for the crime of child rape. Taken in sum, however, they demonstrate the serious negative consequences of making child rape a capital offense. These considerations lead us to conclude, in our independent judgment, that the death penalty is not a proportional punishment for the rape of a child.

V

Our determination that there is a consensus against the death penalty for child rape raises the question whether the Court's own institutional position and its holding will have the effect of blocking further or later consensus in favor of the penalty from developing. The Court, it will be argued, by the act of addressing the constitutionality of the death penalty, intrudes upon the consensus-making process. By imposing a negative restraint, the argument runs, the Court makes it more difficult for consensus to change or emerge. The Court, according to the criticism, itself becomes enmeshed in the process, part judge and part the maker of that which it judges.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

These concerns overlook the meaning and full substance of the established proposition that the Eighth Amendment is defined by "the evolving standards of decency that mark the progress of a maturing society." Trop, 356 U.S., at 101, 78 S.Ct. 590 (plurality opinion). Confirmed by repeated,2665 consistent rulings of this Court, this principle requires that use of the death penalty be restrained. The rule of evolving standards of decency with specific marks on the way to full progress and mature judgment means that resort to the penalty must be reserved for the worst of crimes and limited in its instances of application. In most cases justice is not better served by terminating the life of the perpetrator rather than confining him and preserving the possibility that he and the system will find ways to allow him to understand the enormity of his offense. Difficulties in administering the penalty to ensure against its arbitrary and capricious application require adherence to a rule reserving its use, at this stage of evolving standards and in cases of crimes against individuals, for crimes that take the life of the victim.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Louisiana upholding the capital sentence is reversed. This case is remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

It is so ordered.

Justice ALITO, with whom THE CHIEF JUSTICE, Justice SCALIA, and Justice THOMAS join, dissenting.

The Court today holds that the Eighth Amendment categorically prohibits the imposition of the death penalty for the crime of raping a child. This is so, according to the Court, no matter how young the child, no matter how many times the child is raped, no matter how many children the perpetrator rapes, no matter how sadistic the crime, no matter how much physical or psychological trauma is inflicted, and no matter how heinous the perpetrator's prior criminal record may be. The Court provides two reasons for this sweeping conclusion: First, the Court claims to have identified "a national consensus" that the death penalty is never acceptable for the rape of a child; second, the Court concludes, based on its "independent judgment," that imposing the death penalty for child rape is inconsistent with " 'the evolving standards of decency that mark the progress of a maturing society.' " Ante, at 2649, 2653, 2654 (citation omitted). Because neither of these justifications is sound, I respectfully dissent.

I

A.

I turn first to the Court's claim that there is "a national consensus" that it is never acceptable to impose the death penalty for the rape of a child. The Eighth Amendment's requirements, the Court writes, are "determined not by the standards that prevailed" when the Amendment was adopted but "by the norms that 'currently prevail.' " Ante, at 2649 (quoting Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. 304, 311, 122 S.Ct. 2242, 153 L.Ed.2d 335 (2002)). In assessing current norms, the Court relies primarily on the fact that only 6 of the 50 States now have statutes that permit the death penalty for this offense. But this statistic is a highly unreliable indicator of the views of state lawmakers and their constituents. As I will explain, dicta in this Court's decision in Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584, 97 S.Ct. 2861, 53 L.Ed.2d 982 (1977), has stunted legislative consideration of the question whether the death penalty for the targeted offense of raping a young child is consistent with prevailing standards of decency. The Coker dicta gave state legislators and others good reason to fear that any law permitting the imposition of the death penalty for this crime would meet precisely the fate that has now befallen the Louisiana statute that is currently before us, and this threat strongly discouraged state legislators-regardless of their own values and those of 2666 their constituents-from supporting the enactment of such legislation.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

As the Court correctly concludes, the holding in Coker was that the Eighth Amendment prohibits the death penalty for the rape of an " 'adult woman,' " and thus Coker does not control our decision here. See ante, at 2654. But the reasoning of the Justices in the majority had broader implications.

Two Members of the Coker majority, Justices Brennan and Marshall, took the position that the death penalty is always unconstitutional. 433 U.S., at 600, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (Brennan, J., concurring in judgment) and (Marshall, J., concurring in judgment). Four other Justices, who joined the controlling plurality opinion, suggested that the Georgia capital rape statute was unconstitutional for the simple reason that the impact of a rape, no matter how heinous, is not grievous enough to justify capital punishment. In the words of the plurality: "Life is over for the victim of the murderer; for the rape victim, life may not be nearly so happy as it was, but it is not over and normally is not beyond repair." Id., at 598, 97 S.Ct. 2861. The plurality summarized its position as follows: "We have the abiding conviction that the death penalty... is an excessive penalty for the rapist who, as such, does not take human life." Ibid.

The implications of the Coker plurality opinion were plain. Justice Powell, who concurred in the judgment overturning the death sentence in the case at hand, did not join the plurality opinion because he understood it to draw "a bright line between murder and all rapes-regardless of the degree of brutality of the rape or the effect upon the victim." Id., at 603, 97 S.Ct. 2861. If Justice Powell read Coker that way, it was reasonable for state legislatures to do the same.

Understandably, state courts have frequently read Coker in precisely this way. The Court is correct that state courts have generally understood the limited scope of the holding in Coker,ante, at 2654 - 2655, but lower courts and legislators also take into account-and I presume that this Court wishes them to continue to take into account-the Court's dicta. And that is just what happened in the wake of Coker. Four years after Coker, when Florida's capital child rape statute was challenged, the Florida Supreme Court, while correctly noting that this Court had not held that the Eighth Amendment bars the death penalty for child rape, concluded that "[t]he reasoning of the justices in Coker v. Georgia compels us to hold that a sentence of death is grossly disproportionate and excessive punishment for the crime of sexual assault and is therefore forbidden by the Eighth Amendment as cruel and unusual punishment." Buford v. State, 403 So.2d 943, 951 (1981).

Numerous other state courts have interpreted the Coker dicta similarly. See State v. Barnum, 921 So.2d 513, 526 (Fla.2005) (citing Coker as holding that " 'a sentence of death is grossly disproportionate and excessive punishment for the crime of rape,' " not merely the rape of an adult woman); People v. Huddleston, 212 Ill.2d 107, 141, 287 Ill.Dec. 560, 816 N.E.2d 322, 341 (2004) (recognizing that "the constitutionality of state statutes that impose the death penalty for nonhomicide crimes is the subject of debate" after Coker); People v. Hernandez, 30 Cal.4th 835, 867, 134 Cal.Rptr.2d 602, 69 P.3d 446, 464-467 (2003) (Coker"rais[ed] serious doubts that the federal Constitution permitted the death penalty for any offense not requiring the actual taking of human life" because "[a]lthough the high court did not expressly hold [in Coker] that the Eighth Amendment prohibits capital punishment for all crimes not resulting in death, the plurality 2667 stressed that the crucial difference between rape and murder is that a rapist 'does not take human life' "); State v. Gardner, 947 P.2d 630, 653 (Utah 1997) ("The Coker holding leaves no room for the conclusion that any rape, even an 'inhuman' one involving torture and aggravated battery but not resulting in death, would constitutionally sustain imposition of the death penalty"); Parker v. State, 216 Ga.App. 649, n. 1, 455 S.E.2d 360, 361, n. 1 (1995) (citing Coker for the proposition that the death penalty"is no longer permitted for rape where the victim is not killed"); Leatherwood v. State, 548 So.2d 389, 406 (Miss.1989) (Robertson, J., concurring) ("There is as much chance of the Supreme Court sanctioning death as a penalty for any non-fatal rape as the proverbial snowball enjoys in the nether regions"); State v. Coleman, 185 Mont. 299, 327-328, 605 P.2d 1000, 1017 (1979) (stating that "[t]he decision of the Court in Coker v. Georgia is relevant only to crimes for which the penalty has been imposed which did not result in the loss of a life" (citations omitted)); Boyer v. State, 240 Ga. 170, 240 S.E.2d 68 (1977)(per curiam) (stating that "[s]ince death to the victim did not result ... the death penalty for rape must be set aside"); see also 2005-1981 (La.Sup.Ct.5/22/07), 957 So.2d 757, 794 (case below) (Calogero, C.J., dissenting) (citing the comments of the Coker plurality and concluding that the Louisiana child rape law cannot pass constitutional muster).[FN1]

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

FN1. Commentators have expressed similar views. See Fleming, Louisiana's Newest Capital Crime: The Death Penalty for Child Rape, 89 J.Crim. L. & C. 717, 727 (1999) (the Coker Court drew a line between "crimes which result in loss of life, and crimes which do not"); Baily, Death is Different, Even on the Bayou: The Disproportionality of Crime, 55 Wash. & Lee L.Rev. 1335, 1357 (1998) (noting that "[m]any post-Coker cases interpreting the breadth of Coker's holding suggest that the Mississippi Supreme Court's narrow reading of Coker in Upshaw is a minority position"); Matura, When Will It Stop? The Use of the Death Penalty for Nonhomicide Crimes, 24 J. Legis. 249, 255 (1998) (stating that the Coker Court did not "draw a distinction between the rape of an adult woman and the rape of a minor"); Garvey, "As the Gentle Rain from Heaven": Mercy in Capital Sentencing, 81 Cornell L.Rev. 989, 1009, n. 74 (1996) (stating that courts generally understand Coker to prohibit death sentences for crimes other than murder); Nanda, Recent Developments in the United States and Internationally Regarding Capital Punishment-An Appraisal, 67 St. John's L.Rev. 523, 532 (1993) (finding that Coker stands for the proposition that a death sentence is excessive when the victim is not killed); Ellis, Guilty but Mentally Ill and the Death Penalty: Punishment Full of Sound and Fury, Signifying Nothing, 43 Duke L.J. 87, 94 (1994) (referencing Coker to require capital offenses to be defined by unjustified human death); Dingerson, Reclaiming the Gavel: Making Sense out of the Death Penalty Debate in State Legislatures, 18 N.Y.U. Rev. L. & Soc. Change 873, 878 (1991) (stating that Coker"ruled that the imposition of the death penalty for crimes from which no death results violates the cruel and unusual punishment provision of the eighth amendment" and that "[n]o subsequent Supreme Court decision has challenged this precedent").

For the past three decades, these interpretations have posed a very high hurdle for state legislatures considering the passage of new laws permitting the death penalty for the rape of a child. The enactment and implementation of any new state death penalty statute-and particularly a new type of statute such as one that specifically targets the rape of young children-imposes many costs. There is the burden of drafting an innovative law that must take into account this Court's exceedingly complex Eighth Amendment jurisprudence. Securing passage of controversial legislation may interfere in a variety of ways with the enactment of other bills on the legislative agenda. *2668 Once the statute is enacted, there is the burden of training and coordinating the efforts of those who must implement the new law. Capital prosecutions are qualitatively more difficult than noncapital prosecutions and impose special emotional burdens on all involved. When a capital sentence is imposed under the new law, there is the burden of keeping the prisoner on death row and the lengthy and costly project of defending the constitutionality of the statute on appeal and in collateral proceedings. And if the law is eventually overturned, there is the burden of new proceedings on remand. Moreover, conscientious state lawmakers, whatever their personal views about the morality of imposing the death penalty for child rape, may defer to this Court's dicta, either because they respect our authority and expertise in interpreting the Constitution or merely because they do not relish the prospect of being held to have violated the Constitution and contravened prevailing "standards of decency." Accordingly, the Coker dicta gave state legislators a strong incentive not to push for the enactment of new capital child-rape laws even though these legislators and their constituents may have believed that the laws would be appropriate and desirable.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

B

The Court expresses doubt that the Coker dicta had this effect, but the skepticism is unwarranted. It would be quite remarkable if state legislators were not influenced by the considerations noted above. And although state legislatures typically do not create legislative materials like those produced by Congress, there is evidence that proposals to permit the imposition of the death penalty for child rape were opposed on the ground that enactment would be futile and costly.

In Oklahoma, the opposition to the State's capital child-rape statute argued that Coker had already ruled the death penalty unconstitutional as applied to cases of rape. See Oklahoma Senate News Release, Senator Nichols Targets Child Predators with Death Penalty, Child Abuse Response Team, May 26, 2006, on line at http:// www. oksenate. gov/ news/ press_ releases/ press_ releases_ 2006/pr20060526d.htm (all Internet materials as visited June 23, 2008, and available in Clerk of Court's case file). Likewise, opponents of South Carolina's capital child-rape law contended that the statute would waste state resources because it would undoubtedly be held unconstitutional. See The State, Death Penalty Plan in Spotlight: Attorney General to Advise Senate Panel on Proposal for Repeat Child Rapists, Mar. 28, 2006 (quoting Laura Hudson, spokeswoman for the S. C. Victim Assistance Network, as stating that " '[w]e don't need to be wasting state money to have an appeal to the [United States] Supreme Court, knowing we are going to lose it' "). Representative Fletcher Smith of the South Carolina House of Representatives forecast that the bill would not meet constitutional standards because "death isn't involved." See Davenport, Emotion Drives Child Rape Death Penalty Debate in South Carolina, Associated Press, Apr. 4, 2006.

In Texas, opponents of that State's capital child-rape law argued that Coker's reasoning doomed the proposal. House Research Organization Bill Analysis, Mar. 5, 2007 (stating that "the law would impose an excessive punishment and fail to pass the proportionality test established by the U.S. Supreme Court" and arguing that "Texas should not enact a law of questionable constitutionality simply because it is politically popular, especially given clues by the U.S. Supreme Court that death penalty laws that would be rarely imposed *2669 or that are not supported by a broad national consensus would be ruled unconstitutional").

C

Because of the effect of the Coker dicta, the Court is plainly wrong in comparing the situation here to that in Atkins or Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551,

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

125 S.Ct. 1183, 161 L.Ed.2d 1 (2005). See ante, at 2652 - 2653. Atkins concerned the constitutionality of imposing the death penalty on a mentally retarded defendant. Thirteen years earlier, in Penry v. Lynaugh, 492 U.S. 302, 109 S.Ct. 2934, 106 L.Ed.2d 256 (1989), the Court had held that this was permitted by the Eighth Amendment, and therefore, during the time between Penry and Atkins, state legislators had reason to believe that this Court would follow its prior precedent and uphold statutes allowing such punishment.

The situation in Roper was similar. Roper concerned a challenge to the constitutionality of imposing the death penalty on a defendant who had not reached the age of 18 at the time of the crime. Sixteen years earlier in Stanford v. Kentucky, 492 U.S. 361, 109 S.Ct. 2969, 106 L.Ed.2d 306 (1989), the Court had rejected a similar challenge, and therefore state lawmakers had cause to believe that laws allowing such punishment would be sustained.

When state lawmakers believe that their decision will prevail on the question whether to permit the death penalty for a particular crime or class of offender, the legislators' resolution of the issue can be interpreted as an expression of their own judgment, informed by whatever weight they attach to the values of their constituents. But when state legislators think that the enactment of a new death penalty law is likely to be futile, inaction cannot reasonably be interpreted as an expression of their understanding of prevailing societal values. In that atmosphere, legislative inaction is more likely to evidence acquiescence.

D

If anything can be inferred from state legislative developments, the message is very different from the one that the Court perceives. In just the past few years, despite the shadow cast by the Coker dicta, five States have enacted targeted capital child-rape laws. See Ga.Code Ann. § 16-6-1 (1999); Mont.Code Ann. § 45-5-503 (1997); Okla. Stat., Tit. 10, § 7115(K) (West Supp.2008); S.C.Code Ann. § 16-3-655(C)(1) (Supp.2007); Tex. Penal Code Ann. §§ 22.021(a), 12.42(c)(3) (West Supp.2007). If, as the Court seems to think, our society is "[e]volving" toward ever higher "standards of decency," ante, at 2664 - 2665, these enactments might represent the beginning of a new evolutionary line.

Such a development would not be out of step with changes in our society's thinking since Coker was decided. During that time, reported instances of child abuse have increased dramatically; [FN2] and there 2670 are many indications of growing alarm about the sexual abuse of children. In 1994, Congress enacted the Jacob Wetterling Crimes Against Children and Sexually Violent Offender Registration Program, 42 U.S.C. § 14071 (2000 ed. and Supp. V), which requires States receiving certain federal funds to establish registration systems for convicted sex offenders and to notify the public about persons convicted of the sexual abuse of minors. All 50 States have now enacted such statutes.[FN3] In addition, at least 21 States and the District of Columbia now have statutes permitting the involuntary commitment of sexual predators,[FN4] and at least 12 States 2671 have enacted residency restrictions for sex offenders.[FN5]

> FN2. From 1976 to 1986, the number of reported cases of child sexual abuse grew from 6,000 to 132,000, an increase of 2,100%. A. Lurigio, M. Jones, & B. Smith, Child Sexual Abuse: Its Causes, Consequences, and Implications for Probation Practice, 59 Sep Fed. Probation 69 (1995). By 1991, the number of cases totaled 432,000, an increase of another 227%. Ibid. In 1995, local child protection services agencies identified 126,000 children who were victims of either substantiated or indicated sexual abuse. Nearly 30% of those child victims were between the age of four and seven. Rape, Abuse & Incest National Network Statistics, online at http:// www. rainn. org/ get- information/ statistics/sexual-assault-victims. There were an estimated 90,000 substantiated cases of child sexual abuse in 2003. Crimes Against Children Research Center, Reports from the States to the National Child Abuse and Neglect Data System, available at www. unh. edu/ ccrc/ sexual-abuse/ChildS exualÄbuse.pdf.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

FN3. Ala.Code §§ 13A-11-200 to 13A-11-203, 1181 (1994); Alaska Stat §§ 1.56.840, 12.63.010-100, 18.65.087, 28.05.048, 33.30.035 (1994, 1995, and 1995 Cum.Supp.); Ariz.Rev.Stat. Ann. §§ 13-3821 to -3825 (1989 and Supp.1995); Ark.Code Ann. §§ 12-12-901 to -909 (1995); Cal.Penal Code Ann. §§ 290 to 290.4 (West Supp.1996); Colo.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 18-3-412.5 (Supp.1996); Conn. Gen.Stat. Ann. §§ 54-102a to 54-102r (Supp.1995); Del.Code Ann. Tit. 11, § 4120 (1995); Fla. Stat. Ann. §§ 775.13, 775.22 (1992 and Supp.1994); Ga.Code Ann. § 42-9-44.1 (1994); 1995 Haw. Sess. Laws No. 160 (enacted June 14, 1995); Idaho Code §§ 9-340(11)(f), 18-8301 to 18-8311 (Supp.1995); Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann., ch. 730, §§ 150/1 to 150/10 (2002); Ind.Code §§ 5-2-12-1 to 5-2-12-13 (West Supp.1995); 1995 Iowa Legis. Serv. 146 (enacted May 3, 1995); Kan. Stat. Ann. §§ 22-4901 to 22-4910 (1995); Ky.Rev.Stat. Ann. §§ 17.500 to 17.540 (West Supp.1994); La. Stat. Ann. §§ 15:540 to 15:549 (West Supp.1995); Me.Rev.Stat. Ann., Tit. 34-A, §§ 11001 to 11004 (West Supp.1995); 1995 Md. Laws p. 142 (enacted May 9, 1995); Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 6, § 178D; 1994 Mich. Pub. Acts p. 295 (enacted July 13, 1994); Minn.Stat. § 243.166 (1992 and Supp.1995); Miss.Code Ann. §§ 45-33-1 to 45-33-19 (Supp.1995); Mo.Rev.Stat. §§ 566.600 to 566.625 (Supp.1996); Mont.Code Ann. §§ 46-23-501 to 46-23-507 (1994); Neb.Rev.Stat. §§ 4001 to 4014; Nev.Rev.Stat. §§ 207.080, 207.151 to 207.157 (1992 and Supp.1995); N.H.Rev.Stat. Ann. §§ 632-A:11 to 632-A:19 (Supp.1995); N.J. Stat. Ann. §§ 2c:7-1 to 2c:7-11 (1995); N.M. Stat. Ann. §§ 29-11A-1 to 29-11A-8 (Supp.1995); N.Y. Correct. Law Ann. §§ 168 to 168-V (West Supp.1996); N.C. Gen.Stat. Ann. §§ 14-208.5-10 (Lexis Supp.1995); N.D. Cent.Code § 12.1-32-15 (Lexis Supp.1995); Ohio Rev.Code Ann. §§ 2950.01-.08 (Baldwin 1997); Okla. Stat., Tit. 57, §§ 582-584 (2003 Supp.); Ore.Rev.Stat. §§ 181.507 to 181.519 (1993); 1995 Pa. Laws p. 24 (enacted Oct. 24, 1995); R.I. Gen. Laws § 11-37-16 (1994); S.C.Code Ann. § 23-3-430; S.D. Codified Laws §§ 22-22-30 to 22-22-41 (Supp.1995)Tenn.Code Ann. §§ 40-39-101 to 40-39-108 (2003); Tex.Rev.Civ. Stat. Ann., Art. 6252-13c.1 (Vernon Supp.1996); Utah Code Ann. §§ 53-5-212.5, 77-27-21.5 (Lexis Supp.1995); Vt. Stat. Ann., Tit. 13, § 5402; Va.Code Ann. §§ 19.2-298.1 to 19.2-390.1 (Lexis 1995); Wash. Rev.Code §§ 4.24.550, 9A.44.130, 9A.44.140, 10.01.200, 70.48.470, 72.09.330 (1992 and Supp.1996); W. Va.Code §§ 61-8F-1 to 61-8F-8 (Lexis Supp.1995); Wis. Stat. § 175.45 (Supp.1995); Wyo. Stat. Ann. §§ 7-19-301 to 7-19-306 (1995).

FN4. Those States are Arizona, California, Connecticut, the District of Columbia, Florida, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New Jersey, North Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Texas, Virginia, Washington, and Wisconsin. See Ariz.Rev.Stat. §§ 36-3701 to 36-3713 (West 2003 and Supp.2007); Cal. Welf. & Inst.Code Ann. §§ 6600 to 6609.3 (West

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

1998 and Supp.2008); Conn. Gen.Stat. § 17a-566 (1998); D.C.Code §§ 22-3803 to 22-3811 (2001); Fla. Stat. §§ 394.910 to 394.931 (West 2002 and Supp.2005); Ill. Comp. Stat., ch. 725, §§ 207/1 to 207/99 (2002); Iowa Code §§ 229A.1-.16 (Supp.2005); Kan. Stat. Ann. § 59-29a02 (2004 and Supp.2005); Ky.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 202A.051 (West ___); Mass. Gen. Laws, ch. 123A (1989); Minn.Stat. § 253B.02 (1992); Mo. Ann. Stat. §§ 632.480 to 632.513 (West 2000 and Supp.2006); Neb.Rev.Stat. §§ 83-174 to 83-174.05 (2007); N.J. Stat. Ann. §§ 30:4-27.24 to 30:4-27.38 (West Supp.2004); N.D. Cent.Code Ann. § 25-03.3 (Lexis 2002); Ore.Rev.Stat. § 426.005 (1998); Pa. Stat. Ann., Tit. 42, §§ 9791 to 9799.9 (2007); S.C.Code Ann. §§ 44-48-10 to 44-48-170 (2002 and Supp.2007); Tex. Health & Safety Code Ann. §§ 841.001 to 841.147 (West 2003); Va.Code Ann. §§ 37.2-900 to 37.2-920 (2006 and Supp.2007); Wash. Rev.Code § 71.09.010 (West 1992 and Supp.2002); Wis. Stat. § 980.01-13 (2005).

FN5. See Ala.Code § 15-20-26 (Supp.2000) (restricts sex offenders from residing or accepting employment within 2,000 feet of school or child-care facility); Ark.Code Ann. § 5-14-128 (Supp.2007) (unlawful for level three or four sex offenders to reside within 2,000 feet of school or daycare center); Cal.Penal Code Ann. § 3003 (West Supp.2008) (parolees may not live within 35 miles of victim or witnesses, and certain sex offenders on parole may not live within a quarter mile from a primary school); Fla. Stat. § 947.1405(7)(a)(2) (2001) (released sex offender with victim under 18 prohibited from living within 1,000 feet of a school, daycare center, park, playground, or other place where children regularly congregate); Ga.Code Ann. § 42-1-13 (Supp.2007) (sex offenders required to register shall not reside within 1,000 feet of any childcare facility, school, or area where minors congregate); Ill. Comp. Stat., ch. 720, § 5/11-9.3(b-5) (Supp.2008) (child sex offenders prohibited from knowingly residing within 500 feet of schools); Ky.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 17.495 (West 2000) (registered sex offenders on supervised release shall not reside within 1,000 feet of school or childcare facility); La.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 14:91.1 (West Supp.2004) (sexually violent predators shall not reside within 1,000 feet of schools unless permission is given by school superintendent); Ohio Rev.Code Ann. § 2950.031 (Lexis 2003) (sex offenders prohibited from residing within 1,000 feet of school); Okla. Stat., Tit. 57, § 590 (West 2003) (prohibits sex offenders from residing within 2,000 feet of schools or educational institutions); Ore.Rev.Stat. §§ 144.642, 144.643 (1999) (incorporates general prohibition on supervised sex offenders living near places where children reside); Tenn.Code Ann. § 40-39-111 (2006) (repealed by Acts 2004, ch. 921, § 4, effective Aug. 1, 2004) (sex offenders prohibited from establishing residence within 1,000 feet of school, childcare facility, or victim).

Seeking to counter the significance of the new capital child-rape laws enacted during the past two years, the Court points out that in recent months efforts to enact similar laws in five other States have stalled. Ante, at 2656. These developments, however, all took place after our decision to grant certiorari in this case, see 552 U.S. ----, 128 S.Ct. 829, 169 L.Ed.2d 625 (2008), which gave state legislators reason to delay the enactment of new legislation until the constitutionality of such laws was clarified. And there is no evidence of which I am aware that these legislative initiatives failed because the proposed laws were viewed as inconsistent with our society's standards of decency.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

On the contrary, the available evidence suggests otherwise. For example, in Colorado, the Senate Appropriations Committee in April voted 6 to 4 against Senate Bill 195, reportedly because it "would have cost about $616,000 next year for trials, appeals, public defenders, and prison costs." Associated Press, Lawmakers Reject Death Penalty for Child Sex Abusers, Denver Post, Apr. 11, 2008. Likewise, in Tennessee, the capital child-rape bill was withdrawn in committee "because of the high associated costs." The bill's sponsor stated that " '[b]e-cause of the state's budget situation, we thought to withdraw that bill.... We'll revisit it next year to see if we can reduce the cost of the fiscal note.' " Green, Small Victory in Big Fight for Tougher Sex Abuse Laws, The Leaf-Chronicle, May 8, 2008, p. 1A. Thus, the failure to enact capital child-rape laws cannot be viewed as evidence of a moral consensus against such punishment.

E

Aside from its misleading tally of current state laws, the Court points to two additional "objective indicia" of a "national 2672 consensus," ante, at 2651, but these arguments are patent makeweights. The Court notes that Congress has not enacted a law permitting a federal district court to impose the death penalty for the rape of a child, ante, at 2651 - 2652, but due to the territorial limits of the relevant federal statutes, very few rape cases, not to mention child-rape cases, are prosecuted in federal court. See 18 U.S.C. §§ 2241, 2242 (2000 ed. and Supp. V); United States Sentencing Commission, Report to Congress: Analysis of Penalties for Federal Rape Cases, p. 10, Table 1. Congress' failure to enact a death penalty statute for this tiny set of cases is hardly evidence of Congress' assessment of our society's values.[FN6]

FN6. Moreover, as noted in the petition for rehearing, the Uniform Code of Military Justice permits such a sentence. See 10 U.S.C. § 856; Manual for Courts-Martial, United States, Part II, Ch. X, Rule 1004(c)(9) (2008); id., Part IV, ¶ 45.f(1).

Finally, the Court argues that statistics about the number of executions in rape cases support its perception of a "national consensus," but here too the statistics do not support the Court's position. The Court notes that the last execution for the rape of a child occurred in 1964, ante, at 2657, but the Court fails to mention that litigation regarding the constitutionality of the death penalty brought executions to a halt across the board in the late 1960's. In 1965 and 1966, there were a total of eight executions for all offenses, and from 1968 until 1977, the year when Coker was decided, there were no executions for any crimes.[FN7] The Court also fails to mention that in Louisiana, since the state law was amended in 1995 to make child rape a capital offense, prosecutors have asked juries to return death verdicts in four cases. See State v. Dickerson, 01-1287 (La.App.6/26/02), 822 So.2d 849 (2002); State v. Leblanc, 01-1322 (La.App.5/31/01), 788 So.2d 1255; 2005-1981 (La.Sup.Ct.5/22/07), 957 So.2d 757; State v. Davis, Case No. 262,971 (1st Jud. Dist., Caddo Parish, La.) (cited in Brief for Respondent 42, and n. 38). In two of those cases, Louisiana juries imposed the death penalty. See 2005-1981 (La.Sup.Ct.5/22/07), 957 So.2d 757; Davis, supra. This 50% record is hardly evidence that juries share the Court's view that the death penalty for the rape of a young child is unacceptable under even the most aggravated circumstances.[FN8]

FN7. Department of Justice, Bureau of Justice Statistics, online at http:// www. ojp. usdoj. gov/ bjs/ glance/ tables/ exetab. htm; see also Death Penalty Information Center, Executions in the U.S. 1608-2002: The ESPY File Executions by Date (2007), online at http:// www. death penalty-info.org/ESPYyear.pdf.

FN8. Of course, the other five capital child rape statutes are too recent for any individual to have been sentenced to death under them.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

F

In light of the points discussed above, I believe that the "objective indicia" of our society's "evolving standards of decency" can be fairly summarized as follows. Neither Congress nor juries have done anything that can plausibly be interpreted as evidencing the "national consensus" that the Court perceives. State legislatures, for more than 30 years, have operated under the ominous shadow of the Coker dicta and thus have not been free to express their own understanding of our society's standards of decency. And in the months following our grant of certiorari in this case, state legislatures have had an additional reason to pause. Yet despite the inhibiting legal atmosphere that has prevailed since 1977, six States have recently enacted new, targeted child-rape laws.

I do not suggest that six new state laws necessarily establish a "national consensus" or even that they are sure evidence of an ineluctable trend. In terms of the Court's metaphor of moral evolution, these 2673 enactments might have turned out to be an evolutionary dead end. But they might also have been the beginning of a strong new evolutionary line. We will never know, because the Court today snuffs out the line in its incipient stage.

II

A

The Court is willing to block the potential emergence of a national consensus in favor of permitting the death penalty for child rape because, in the end, what matters is the Court's "own judgment" regarding "the acceptability of the death penalty." Ante, at 2658. Although the Court has much to say on this issue, most of the Court's discussion is not pertinent to the Eighth Amendment question at hand. And once all of the Court's irrelevant arguments are put aside, it is apparent that the Court has provided no coherent explanation for today's decision.

In the next section of this opinion, I will attempt to weed out the arguments that are not germane to the Eighth Amendment inquiry, and in the final section, I will address what remains.

B

A major theme of the Court's opinion is that permitting the death penalty in child-rape cases is not in the best interests of the victims of these crimes and society at large. In this vein, the Court suggests that it is more painful for child-rape victims to testify when the prosecution is seeking the death penalty. Ante, at 2662. The Court also argues that "a State that punishes child rape by death may remove a strong incentive for the rapist not to kill the victim,"ante, at 2664, and may discourage the reporting of child rape, ante, at 2663 - 2664.

These policy arguments, whatever their merits, are simply not pertinent to the question whether the death penalty is "cruel and unusual" punishment. The Eighth Amendment protects the right of an accused. It does not authorize this Court to strike down federal or state criminal laws on the ground that they are not in the best interests of crime victims or the broader society. The Court's policy arguments concern matters that legislators should-and presumably do-take into account in deciding whether to enact a capital child-rape statute, but these arguments are irrelevant to the question that is before us in this case. Our cases have cautioned against using " 'the aegis of the Cruel and Unusual Punishment Clause' to cut off the normal democratic processes," Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. 304, 323, 122 S.Ct. 2242, 153 L.Ed.2d 335 (2002) (Rehnquist, C. J., dissenting), in turn quoting Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 176, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 49 L.Ed.2d 859 (1976), (joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

STEVENS, JJ.), but the Court forgets that warning here.

The Court also contends that laws permitting the death penalty for the rape of a child create serious procedural problems. Specifically, the Court maintains that it is not feasible to channel the exercise of sentencing discretion in child-rape cases, ante, at 2660 - 2661, and that the unreliability of the testimony of child victims creates a danger that innocent defendants will be convicted and executed, ante, at 2663 - 2664. Neither of these contentions provides a basis for striking down all capital child-rape laws no matter how carefully and narrowly they are crafted.

The Court's argument regarding the structuring of sentencing discretion is hard to comprehend. The Court finds it "difficult to identify standards that would guide the decisionmaker so the penalty is reserved*2674 for the most severe cases of child rape and yet not imposed in an arbitrary way." Ante, at 2660 - 2661. Even assuming that the age of a child is not alone a sufficient factor for limiting sentencing discretion, the Court need only examine the child-rape laws recently enacted in Texas, Oklahoma, Montana, and South Carolina, all of which use a concrete factor to limit quite drastically the number of cases in which the death penalty may be imposed. In those States, a defendant convicted of the rape of a child may be sentenced to death only if the defendant has a prior conviction for a specified felony sex offense. See Mont.Code Ann. § 45-5-503(3)(c) (2007) ("If the offender was previously convicted of [a felony sexual offense] ... the offender shall be ... punished by death ..."); Okla. Stat., Tit. 10, § 7115(K) (West Supp.2008) ("Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any parent or other person convicted of forcible anal or oral sodomy, rape, rape by instrumentation, or lewd molestation of a child under fourteen (14) years of age subsequent to a previous conviction for any offense of forcible anal or oral sodomy, rape, rape by instrumentation, or lewd molestation of a child under fourteen (14) years of age shall be punished by death"); S.C.Code Ann. § 16-3-655(C)(1) (Supp.2007) ("If the [defendant] has previously been convicted of, pled guilty or nolo contendere to, or adjudicated delinquent for first degree criminal sexual conduct with a minor who is less than eleven years of age ... he must be punished by death or by imprisonment for life"); Tex. Penal Code Ann. § 12.42(c)(3) (2007 Supp.); ("[A] defendant shall be punished for a capital felony if it is shown on the trial of an offense under Section 22.021... that the defendant has previously been finally convicted of [a felony sexual offense against a victim younger than fourteen years of age]").

Moreover, it takes little imagination to envision other limiting factors that a State could use to structure sentencing discretion in child rape cases. Some of these might be: whether the victim was kidnapped, whether the defendant inflicted severe physical injury on the victim, whether the victim was raped multiple times, whether the rapes occurred over a specified extended period, and whether there were multiple victims.

The Court refers to limiting standards that are "indefinite and obscure," ante, at 2661, but there is nothing indefinite or obscure about any of the above-listed aggravating factors. Indeed, they are far more definite and clear-cut than aggravating factors that we have found to be adequate in murder cases. See, e.g., Arave v. Creech, 507 U.S. 463, 471, 113 S.Ct. 1534, 123 L.Ed.2d 188 (1993) (whether the defendant was a " 'cold-blooded, pitiless slayer' "); Walton v. Arizona, 497 U.S. 639, 646, 110 S.Ct. 3047, 111 L.Ed.2d 511 (1990) (whether the " 'perpetrator inflict[ed] mental anguish or physical abuse before the victim's death' "); Jurek v. Texas, 428 U.S. 262, 269, 96 S.Ct. 2950, 49 L.Ed.2d 929 (1976) (joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and STEVENS, JJ.) (whether the defendant " 'would commit criminal acts of violence that would constitute a continuing threat to society' "). For these reasons, concerns about limiting sentencing discretion provide no support for the Court's blanket condemnation of all capital rape statutes.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

That sweeping holding is also not justified by the Court's concerns about the reliability of the testimony of child victims. First, the Eighth Amendment provides a poor vehicle for addressing problems regarding the admissibility or reliability of evidence, and problems presented by the testimony of child victims are not unique to capital cases. Second, concerns about 2675 the reliability of the testimony of child witnesses are not present in every child-rape case. In the case before us, for example, there was undisputed medical evidence that the victim was brutally raped, as well as strong independent evidence that petitioner was the perpetrator. Third, if the Court's evidentiary concerns have Eighth Amendment relevance, they could be addressed by allowing the death penalty in only those child-rape cases in which the independent evidence is sufficient to prove all the elements needed for conviction and imposition of a death sentence. There is precedent for requiring special corroboration in certain criminal cases. For example, some jurisdictions do not allow a conviction based on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. See, e.g.,Ala.Code 12-21-222 (1986); Alaska Stat. § 12.45.020 (1984); Ark.Code Ann. § 16-89-111(e)(1) (1977); Cal.Penal Code Ann. § 1111 (West 1985); Ga.Code Ann. § 24-4-8 (1995); Idaho Code § 19-2117 (Lexis 1979); Minn.Stat. § 634.04 (1983); Mont.Code Ann. § 46-16-213 (1985); Nev.Rev.Stat. § 175.291 (1985); N.D. Cent.Code Ann. § 29-21-14 (1974); Okla. St., Tit. 22, § 742 (West 1969); Ore.Rev.Stat. § 136.440 (1984); S.D. Codified Laws § 23A-22-8 (1979). A State wishing to permit the death penalty in child-rape cases could impose an analogous corroboration requirement.

C

After all the arguments noted above are put aside, what is left? What remaining grounds does the Court provide to justify its independent judgment that the death penalty for child rape is categorically unacceptable? I see two.

1

The first is the proposition that we should be "most hesitant before interpreting the Eighth Amendment to allow the extension of the death penalty." Ante, at 2658 (emphasis added); see also ante, at 2659 - 2660, 2661 (referring to expansion of the death penalty). But holding that the Eighth Amendment does not categorically prohibit the death penalty for the rape of a young child would not "extend" or "expand" the death penalty. Laws enacted by the state legislatures are presumptively constitutional, Gregg, 428 U.S., at 175, 96 S.Ct. 2909 (joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and STEVENS, JJ.) ("[I]n assessing a punishment selected by a democratically elected legislature against the constitutional measure, we presume its validity"), and until today, this Court has not held that capital child rape laws are unconstitutional, see ante, at 2654 (Coker "does not speak to the constitutionality of the death penalty for child rape, an issue not then before the Court"). Consequently, upholding the constitutionality of such a law would not "extend" or "expand" the death penalty; rather, it would confirm the status of presumptive constitutionality that such laws have enjoyed up to this point. And in any event, this Court has previously made it clear that "[t]he Eighth Amendment is not a ratchet, whereby a temporary consensus on leniency for a particular crime fixes a permanent constitutional maximum, disabling States from giving effect to altered beliefs and responding to changed social conditions." Harmelin v. Michigan, 501 U.S. 957, 990, 111 S.Ct. 2680, 115 L.Ed.2d 836 (1991) (principal opinion); see also Gregg, supra, at 176, 96 S.Ct. 2909 (joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and STEVENS, JJ.).

2

The Court's final-and, it appears, principal-justification for its holding is that murder, the only crime for which defendants have been executed since this *2676 Court's 1976 death penalty decisions,[FN9] is unique in its moral depravity and in the severity of the injury that it inflicts on the victim and the public. See ante, at 2659 - 2660. But the Court makes little attempt to defend these conclusions.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

FN9. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 49 L.Ed.2d 859 (1976); Proffitt v. Florida, 428 U.S. 242, 96 S.Ct. 2960, 49 L.Ed.2d 913 (1976); Jurek v. Texas, 428 U.S. 262, 96 S.Ct. 2950, 49 L.Ed.2d 929 (1976); Woodson v. North Carolina, 428 U.S. 280, 96 S.Ct. 2978, 49 L.Ed.2d 944 (1976); Roberts v. Louisiana, 428 U.S. 325, 96 S.Ct. 3001, 49 L.Ed.2d 974 (1976).

With respect to the question of moral depravity, is it really true that every person who is convicted of capital murder and sentenced to death is more morally depraved than every child rapist? Consider the following two cases. In the first, a defendant robs a convenience store and watches as his accomplice shoots the store owner. The defendant acts recklessly, but was not the triggerman and did not intend the killing. See, e.g., Tison v. Arizona, 481 U.S. 137, 107 S.Ct. 1676, 95 L.Ed.2d 127 (1987). In the second case, a previously convicted child rapist kidnaps, repeatedly rapes, and tortures multiple child victims. Is it clear that the first defendant is more morally depraved than the second?

The Court's decision here stands in stark contrast to Atkins and Roper, in which the Court concluded that characteristics of the affected defendants-mental retardation in Atkins and youth in Roper-diminished their culpability. See Atkins, 536 U.S., at 305, 122 S.Ct. 2242; Roper, 543 U.S., at 571, 125 S.Ct. 1183. Nor is this case comparable to Enmund v. Florida, 458 U.S. 782, 102 S.Ct. 3368, 73 L.Ed.2d 1140 (1982), in which the Court held that the Eighth Amendment prohibits the death penalty where the defendant participated in a robbery during which a murder was committed but did not personally intend for lethal force to be used. I have no doubt that, under the prevailing standards of our society, robbery, the crime that the petitioner in Enmund intended to commit, does not evidence the same degree of moral depravity as the brutal rape of a young child. Indeed, I have little doubt that, in the eyes of ordinary Americans, the very worst child rapists-predators who seek out and inflict serious physical and emotional injury on defenseless young children-are the epitome of moral depravity.

With respect to the question of the harm caused by the rape of child in relation to the harm caused by murder, it is certainly true that the loss of human life represents a unique harm, but that does not explain why other grievous harms are insufficient to permit a death sentence. And the Court does not take the position that no harm other than the loss of life is sufficient. The Court takes pains to limit its holding to "crimes against individual persons" and to exclude "offenses against the State," a category that the Court stretches-without explanation-to include "drug kingpin activity." Ante, at 2659. But the Court makes no effort to explain why the harm caused by such crimes is necessarily greater than the harm caused by the rape of young children. This is puzzling in light of the Court's acknowledgment that "[r]ape has a permanent psychological, emotional, and sometimes physical impact on the child." Ante, at 2658. As the Court aptly recognizes, "[w]e cannot dismiss the years of long anguish that must be endured by the victim of child rape." Ibid.

The rape of any victim inflicts great injury, and "[s]ome victims are so grievously injured physically or psychologically that life is beyond repair." *2677*Coker,* 433 U.S., at 603, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (opinion of Powell, J.). "The immaturity and vulnerability of a child, both physically and psychologically, adds a devastating dimension to rape that is not present when an adult is raped." Meister, Murdering Innocence: The Constitutionality of Capital Child Rape Statutes, 45 Ariz. L.Rev. 197, 208-209 (2003). See also State v. Wilson, 96-1392, p. 6 (La.Sup.Ct.12/13/96), 685 So.2d 1063, 1067; Broughton, "On Horror's Head Horrors Accumulate": A Reflective Comment on Capital Child Rape Legislation, 39 Duquesne L.Rev. 1, 38 (2000). Long-term studies show that sexual abuse is "grossly intrusive in the lives of children and is harmful to their normal psychological, emotional and sexual development in ways which no just or humane society can tolerate." C. Bagley & K. King, Child Sexual Abuse: The Search for Healing 2 (1990).

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

It has been estimated that as many as 40% of 7- to 13-year-old sexual assault victims are considered "seriously disturbed." A. Lurigio, M. Jones, & B. Smith, Child Sexual Abuse: Its Causes, Consequences, and Implications for Probation Practice, 59 Sep Fed. Probation 69, 70 (1995). Psychological problems include sudden school failure, unprovoked crying, dissociation, depression, insomnia, sleep disturbances, nightmares, feelings of guilt and inferiority, and self-destructive behavior, including an increased incidence of suicide. Meister, supra, at 209; Broughton, supra, at 38; Glazer, Child Rapists Beware! The Death Penalty and Louisiana's Amended Aggravated Rape Statute, 25 Am. J.Crim. L. 79, 88 (1997).

The deep problems that afflict child-rape victims often become society's problems as well. Commentators have noted correlations between childhood sexual abuse and later problems such as substance abuse, dangerous sexual behaviors or dysfunction, inability to relate to others on an interpersonal level, and psychiatric illness. Broughton, supra, at 38; Glazer, supra, at 89; Handbook on Sexual Abuse of Children 7 (L. Walker ed.1988). Victims of child rape are nearly 5 times more likely than nonvictims to be arrested for sex crimes and nearly 30 times more likely to be arrested for prostitution. Ibid.

The harm that is caused to the victims and to society at large by the worst child rapists is grave. It is the judgment of the Louisiana lawmakers and those in an increasing number of other States that these harms justify the death penalty. The Court provides no cogent explanation why this legislative judgment should be overridden. Conclusory references to "decency," "moderation," "restraint," "full progress," and "moral judgment" are not enough.

III

In summary, the Court holds that the Eighth Amendment categorically rules out the death penalty in even the most extreme cases of child rape even though: (1) This holding is not supported by the original meaning of the Eighth Amendment; (2) neither Coker nor any other prior precedent commands this result; (3) there are no reliable "objective indicia" of a "national consensus" in support of the Court's position; (4) sustaining the constitutionality of the state law before us would not "extend" or "expand" the death penalty; (5) this Court has previously rejected the proposition that the Eighth Amendment is a one-way ratchet that prohibits legislatures from adopting new capital punishment statutes to meet new problems; (6) the worst child rapists exhibit the epitome of moral depravity; and (7) child rape inflicts grievous injury on victims and on society in general.

2678 The party attacking the constitutionality of a state statute bears the "heavy burden" of establishing that the law is unconstitutional. Gregg, 428 U.S., at 175, 96 S.Ct. 2909 (joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and STEVENS, JJ.). That burden has not been discharged here, and I would therefore affirm the decision of the Louisiana Supreme Court.

U.S.,2008.
Kennedy v. Louisiana
128 S.Ct. 2641, 171 L.Ed.2d 525, 76 USLW 4584, 08 Cal. Daily Op. Serv. 7920, 2008 Daily Journal D.A.R. 9470, 21 Fla. L. Weekly Fed. S 472

END OF DOCUMENT

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Westlaw.

129 S.Ct. 1
129 S.Ct. 1, 171 L.Ed.2d 932, 77 USLW 3194, 21 Fla. L. Weekly Fed. S 541
(Cite as: 129 S.Ct. 1)

H

Supreme Court of the United States
Patrick KENNEDY, Petitioner,
v.
LOUISIANA
No. 07-343.

Oct. 1, 2008.

Statement of Justice KENNEDY, with whom Justice STEVENS, Justice SOUTER, Justice GINSBURG, and Justice BREYER join, respecting the denial of rehearing.

The opinion of the Court is modified by the addition of a footnote at page 15, after the word "considered" in the last paragraph of Part II-A. The footnote is as follows:

> * When issued and announced on June 25, 2008, the Court's decision neither noted nor discussed the military penalty for rape under the Uniform Code of Military Justice. See 10 U.S.C. §§ 856, 920; Manual for Courts-Martial, United States, Part IV, ¶ 45.f(1) (2008). In a petition for rehearing respondent argues that the military penalty bears on our consideration of the question in this case. For the reasons set forth in the statement respecting the denial of rehearing, post, p. 1, we find that the military penalty does not affect our reasoning or conclusions.

The dissenting opinion is modified as follows:

(1) By the addition of the words "a federal district court to impose" at page 13 between the words "a law permitting" and the words "the death penalty" in the first paragraph of Part I-E;

(2) By the addition of footnote 6 after the word "values" in said paragraph. The footnote is as follows:

> [6] Moreover, as noted in the petition for rehearing, the Uniform Code of Military Justice permits such a sentence. See 10 U.S.C. § 856; Manual for Courts-Martial, United States, Part II, Ch. X, Rule 1004(c)(9) (2008); id., Part IV, ¶ 45.f(1).

The petition for rehearing is denied.

Justice THOMAS and Justice ALITO would grant the petition for rehearing.Statement of Justice KENNEDY, with whom Justice STEVENS, Justice SOUTER, Justice GINSBURG, and Justice BREYER join, respecting the denial of rehearing.

In its petition for rehearing respondent argues that the military penalty for rape, a congressional amendment of the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ) in 2006, and a related executive order in 2007 should alter the Court's analysis of the Eighth Amendment question in this case. After considering the petition as well as supplemental briefs from the parties and the United States, the Court has determined that rehearing is not warranted.

The military death penalty for rape has been the rule for more than a century. As respondent acknowledges in its petition for rehearing, military law has included the death penalty for rape of a child or adult victim since at least 1863. See § 30, 12 Stat. 736. Since 1950, that punishment has applied to peacetime offenses by members of the military. See Art. 120, 64 Stat. 140. The death penalty, however, has not been carried out against a military offender for almost 50 years. The last instance of military capital punishment, in 1961, was for the crimes of rape and attempted murder. See R. Paternoster, R. Brame, & S. Bacon, The Death Penalty: America's Experience with Capital Punishment 69 (2008). There are six individuals now subject to a final sentence of death under the *2 UCMJ, see NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., Death Row U.S.A. 66 (Winter 2008), all of whom committed offenses that involved the death of a victim.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

In 2006, Congress passed the National Defense Authorization Act, which authorized that year's appropriations for military and national-security activities. Pub L. 109-163. Also in that bill, Congress revised the military's sexual-assault statutes, in part by reclassifying the UCMJ's offense of rape as two separate crimes: adult rape and child rape. § 552(a)(1), 119 Stat. 3257. It is unclear what effect, if any, that reclassification worked on the availability of the military death penalty. Pending the President's setting the maximum penalty for adult rape and child rape, Congress included a temporary provision applying the existing maximum punishment of death for rape as the "interim maximum punishment" for those crimes. Id., § 552(b)(1), at 3263; see also 10 U.S.C. § 856. But Congress also removed from the text of the statute itself, § 920, the specific authorization of "death" as a punishment; the new statute provides only that adult rape and child rape shall be punished "as a court-martial may direct." For his part, the President later left in place, in the Manual for Courts-Martial, the availability of the death penalty for rape of an adult or child victim. Exec. Order No. 13447, 72 Fed.Reg. 56214 (2007); Manual for Courts-Martial, United States, Part IV, ¶ 45.f(1) (2008). The parties disagree on the effect of Congress' and the President's actions in light of 10 U.S.C. § 818, which allows imposition of the death penalty only "when specifically authorized by this chapter."

In any event, authorization of the death penalty in the military sphere does not indicate that the penalty is constitutional in the civilian context. The military death penalty for rape was in effect before the decisions in Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 92 S.Ct. 2726, 33 L.Ed.2d 346 (1972)(per curiam), and Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584, 97 S.Ct. 2861, 53 L.Ed.2d 982 (1977); and when the Court surveyed state and federal law in Coker, it made no mention of the military penalty. See id., at 595-596, 593, and n. 6, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (plurality opinion) (not including the military as a "jurisdiction in the United States" that authorized the death penalty for rape, and naming the Federal Government among jurisdictions that recognized the death penalty for rape prior to Furman but citing only the nonmilitary provision). The same is true of more recent Eighth Amendment cases in the civilian context. See Enmund v. Florida, 458 U.S. 782, 789-793, 102 S.Ct. 3368, 73 L.Ed.2d 1140 (1982); Tison v. Arizona, 481 U.S. 137, 152-154, 107 S.Ct. 1676, 95 L.Ed.2d 127 (1987). This case, too, involves the application of the Eighth Amendment to civilian law; and so we need not decide whether certain considerations might justify differences in the application of the Cruel and Unusual Punishments Clause to military cases (a matter not presented here for our decision). Cf. Loving v. United States, 517 U.S. 748, 755, 116 S.Ct. 1737, 135 L.Ed.2d 36 (1996).

That the Manual for Courts-Martial retains the death penalty for rape of a child or an adult when committed by a member of the military does not draw into question our conclusions that there is a consensus against the death penalty for the crime in the civilian context and that the penalty here is unconstitutional. The laws of the separate States, which have responsibility for the administration of the criminal law for their civilian populations, are entitled to considerable weight over and above the punishments Congress and the President consider appropriate in the military context. The more relevant federal benchmark*3 is federal criminal law that applies to civilians, and that law does not permit the death penalty for child rape. Until the petition for rehearing, none of the briefs or submissions filed by the parties or the amici in this case cited or discussed the UCMJ provisions.

Statement of Justice SCALIA, with whom THE CHIEF JUSTICE joins, respecting the denial of rehearing.

Respondent has moved for rehearing of this case because there has come to light a federal statute enacted in 2006 permitting the death sentence under the Uniform Code of Military Justice for rape of a minor. See Pub L. 109-163, § 552(b)(1), 119 Stat. 3263. This provision was not cited by either party, nor by any of the numerous amici in the case; it was first brought to the Court's attention after the opinion had issued, in a letter signed by 85 Members of Congress. Respondent asserts that rehearing is justified because this statute calls into question the majority opinion's conclusion that there is a national consensus against capital punishment for rape of a child.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

I am voting against the petition for rehearing because the views of the American people on the death penalty for child rape were, to tell the truth, irrelevant to the majority's decision in this case. The majority opinion, after an unpersuasive attempt to show that a consensus against the penalty existed, in the end came down to this: "[T]he Constitution contemplates that in the end our own judgment will be brought to bear on the question of the acceptability of the death penalty under the Eighth Amendment." --- U.S. ----, 128 S.Ct. 2641, 2658, 171 L.Ed.2d 525. Of course the Constitution contemplates no such thing; the proposed Eighth Amendment would have been laughed to scorn if it had read "no criminal penalty shall be imposed which the Supreme Court deems unacceptable." But that is what the majority opinion said, and there is no reason to believe that absence of a national consensus would provoke second thoughts.

While the new evidence of American opinion is ultimately irrelevant to the majority's decision, let there be no doubt that it utterly destroys the majority's claim to be discerning a national consensus and not just giving effect to the majority's own preference. As noted in the letter from Members of Congress, the bill providing the death penalty for child rape passed the Senate 95-0; it passed the House 374-41, with the votes of a majority of each State's delegation; and was signed by the President. Justice KENNEDY's statement posits two reasons why this act by Congress proves nothing about the national consensus regarding permissible penalties for child rape. First, it claims the statute merely "reclassif[ied]" the offense of child rape. Ante, at 2. But the law did more than that; it specifically established (as it would have to do) the penalty for the new offense of child rape-and that penalty was death: "For an offense under subsection (a) (rape) or subsection (b) (rape of a child), death or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct." § 552(b)(1), 119 Stat. 3263 (emphasis added). By separate executive order, the President later expressly reauthorized the death penalty as a punishment for child rape. Exec. Order No. 13447, 72 Fed.Reg. 56214 (2007). Based on these acts, there is infinitely more reason to think that Congress and the President made a judgment regarding the appropriateness of the death penalty for child rape than there is to think that the many non-enacting state legislatures upon which the majority relies did so-especially since it was widely believed that Coker took the capital-punishment option off the table. See 4Coker v. Georgia,* 433 U.S. 584, 97 S.Ct. 2861, 53 L.Ed.2d 982 (1977).

Second, Justice KENNEDY speculates that the Eighth Amendment may permit subjecting a member of the military to a means of punishment that would be cruel and unusual if inflicted upon a civilian for the same crime. That is perhaps so where the fact of the malefactor's membership in the Armed Forces makes the offense more grievous. One can imagine, for example, a social judgment that treason by a military officer who has sworn to defend his country deserves the death penalty even though treason by a civilian does not. (That is not the social judgment our society has made, see 18 U.S.C. § 2381, but one can imagine it.) It is difficult to imagine, however, how rape of a child could sometimes be deserving of death for a soldier but never for a civilian.

U.S.,2008.
Kennedy v. Louisiana
129 S.Ct. 1, 171 L.Ed.2d 932, 77 USLW 3194, 21 Fla. L. Weekly Fed. S 541

END OF DOCUMENT

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Westlaw

97 S.Ct. 2861
433 U.S. 584, 97 S.Ct. 2861, 53 L.Ed.2d 982
(Cite as: 433 U.S. 584, 97 S.Ct. 2861)

Supreme Court of the United States
Ehrlich Anthony COKER, Petitioner,
v.
State of GEORGIA.
No. 75-5444.

Argued March 28, 1977.
Decided June 29, 1977.

By a judgment of the Superior Court, Ware County, Georgia, the defendant was convicted of the crimes of motor vehicle theft, armed robbery, rape, kidnapping, and escape. A sentence of death was imposed for the offense of rape and he appealed. The Supreme Court of Georgia, 234 Ga. 555, 216 S.E.2d 782, affirmed and certiorari was granted. Mr. Justice White announced as the judgment of the Supreme Court that a sentence of death for the crime of rape of adult woman was grossly disproportionate and excessive punishment forbidden by Eighth Amendment.

Reversed and remanded.

Mr. Justice Brennan and Mr. Justice Marshall each filed opinions concurring in the judgment in the judgment.

Mr. Justice Powell filed an opinion concurring in the judgment in part and dissenting

Mr. Chief Justice Burger, with whom Mr. Justice Rehnquist joined, filed a dissenting opinion.

West Headnotes

Sentencing and Punishment 350H ⇐1667

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HVIII The Death Penalty
350HVIII(D) Factors Related to Offense
350Hk1666 Nature or Degree of Offense
350Hk1667 k. In General. Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 110k1213.8(8), 110k1213)
Sentence of death for crime of rape of adult woman was grossly disproportionate and excessive punishment forbidden by the Eighth Amendment as cruel and unusual punishment. Code Ga. § 26-2001; U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 8.

2862 Syllabus[FN]

FN* The syllabus constitutes no part of the opinion of the Court but has been prepared by the Reporter of Decisions for the convenience of the reader. See United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co., 200 U.S. 321, 337, 26 S.Ct. 282, 287, 50 L.Ed. 499.

584 While serving various sentences for murder, rape, kidnaping, and aggravated assault, petitioner escaped from a Georgia prison and, in the course of committing an armed robbery and other offenses, raped an adult woman. He was convicted of rape, armed robbery, and the other offenses and sentenced to death on the rape charge, when the jury found two of the aggravating circumstances present for imposing such a sentence, viz., that the rape was committed (1) by a person with prior capital-felony convictions and (2) in the course of committing another capital felony, armed robbery. The Georgia Supreme Court affirmed both the conviction and sentence. Held: The judgment upholding the death sentence is reversed and the case is remanded. Pp. 2865-2870.

234 Ga. 555, 216 S.E.2d 782, reversed and remanded.

Mr. Justice WHITE, joined by Mr. Justice STEWART, Mr. Justice BLACKMUN, and Mr. Justice STEVENS, concluded that the sentence of death for the crime of rape is grossly disproportionate and excessive punishment and is therefore forbidden by the Eighth Amendment as cruel and unusual punishment. Pp. 2865-2870.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

(a) The Eighth Amendment bars not only those punishments that are 'barbaric' but also those that are 'excessive' in relation to the crime committed, and a punishment is 'excessive' and unconstitutional if it (1) makes no measurable contribution to acceptable goals of punishment and hence is nothing more than the purposeless and needless imposition of pain and suffering; or (2) is grossly out of proportion to the severity of the crime. Pp. 2865-2866.

(b) That death is a disproportionate penalty for rape is strongly indicated by the objective evidence of present public judgment, as represented by the attitude of state legislatures and sentencing juries, concerning the acceptability of such a penalty, it appearing that Georgia is currently the only State authorizing the death sentence for rape of an adult woman, that it is authorized for rape in only two other States but only when the victim is a child, and that in the vast majority (9 out of 10) of rape convictions in Georgia since 1973, juries have not imposed the death sentence. Pp. 2866-2868.

(c) 585 Although rape deserves serious punishment, the death penalty, which is unique in its severity and irrevocability, is an excessive penalty for the rapist who, as such and as opposed to the murderer, does not unjustifiably take human life. Pp. 2868-2869.

(d) The conclusion that the death sentence imposed on petitioner is disproportionate punishment for rape is not affected by the fact that the jury found the aggravating circumstances of prior capital-felony convictions and occurrence of the rape while committing armed robbery, a felony for which the death sentence is also authorized, since the prior convictions do not change the fact that the rape did not involve the taking of life, and since the jury did not deem the robbery itself deserving of *2863 the death penalty, even though accompanied by the aggravating circumstances of prior capital-felony convictions. P. 2869.

(e) That under Georgia law a deliberate killer cannot be sentenced to death, absent aggravating circumstances, argues strongly against the notion that, with or without such circumstances, a rapist who does not take the life of his victim should be punished more severely than the deliberate killer. Pp. 2869-2870.

Mr. Justice BRENNAN concluded that the death penalty is in all circumstances cruel and unusual punishment prohibited by the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments. P. 2870.

Mr. Justice MARSHALL concluded that the death penalty is a cruel and unusual punishment prohibited by the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments. P. 2870.

Mr. Justice POWELL concluded that death is disproportionate punishment for the crime of raping an adult woman where, as here, the crime was not committed with excessive brutality and the victim did not sustain serious or lasting injury. P. 2870.
David E. Kendall, New York City, for petitioner.

586 B. Dean Grindle, Jr., Atlanta, Ga., for respondent.

Mr. Justice WHITE announced the judgment of the Court and filed an opinion in which Mr. Justice STEWART, Mr. Justice BLACKMUN, and Mr. Justice STEVENS, joined.

Georgia Code Ann. s 26-2001 (1972) provides that '(a) person convicted of rape shall be punished by death or by imprisonment for life, or by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 20 years.'[FN1]Punishment is determiend by a jury in a separate sentencing proceeding in which at least one of the statutory aggravating circumstances must be found before the death penalty may be imposed.[FN2]Petitioner Coker was convicted of rape and sentenced to death. Both the conviction and the sentence were affirmed by the Georgia Supreme Court. Coker was granted a writ of certiorari, 429 U.S. 815, 97 S.Ct. 56, 50 L.Ed.2d 75, limited to the single claim, rejected by the Georgia court, that the punishment of death for rape violates the Eighth

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Amendment, which proscribes 'cruel and unusual punishments' and which must be observed by the States as well as the Federal Government. Robinson v. California, 370 U.S. 660, 82 S.Ct. 1417, 8 L.Ed.2d 758 (1962).

FN1. The section defines rape as having 'carnal knowledge of a female, forcibly and against her will. Carnal knowledge in rape occurs when there is any penetration of the female sex organ by the male sex organ.'

FN2. See n. 3, infra.

587 I

While serving various sentences for murder, rape, kidnaping, and aggravated assault, petitioner escaped from the Ware Correctional Institution near Waycross, Ga., on September 2, 1974. At approximately 11 o'clock that night, petitioner entered the house of Allen and Elnita Carver through an unlocked kitchen door. Threatening the couple with a 'board,' he tied up Mr. Carver in the bathroom, obtained a knife from the kitchen, and took Mr. Carver's money and the keys to the family car. Brandishing the knife and saying 'you know what's going to happen to you if you try anything, don't you,' Coker then raped Mrs. Carver. Soon thereafter, petitioner drove away in the Carver car, taking Mrs. Carver with him. Mr. Carver, freeing himself, notified the police; and not long thereafter petitioner was apprehended. Mrs. Carver was unharmed.

Petitioner was charged with escape, armed robbery, motor vehicle theft, kidnaping, and rape. Counsel was appointed to represent him. Having been found competent to stand trial, he was tried. The jury returned a verdict of guilty, rejecting his *2864 general plea of insanity. A sentencing hearing was then conducted in accordance with the procedures dealt with at length in Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 49 L.Ed.2d 859 (1976), where this Court sustained the death penalty for murder when imposed pursuant to the statutory procedures.[FN3] The jury was 588 instructed that *2865 it could consider as aggravating circumstances whether the rape 589 had been committed by a person with a prior record of conviction for a capital felony and whether the rape had been committed in the course of committing another capital felony, namely, the armed robbery of Allen Carver. The court also instructed, pursuant to statute, that even if 590 aggravating circumstances were present, the death penalty need not be imposed if the jury found they were out-weighed by mitigating circumstances, that is, circumstances not constituting justification or excuse for the offense in question, 591 'but which, in fairness and mercy, may be considered as extenuating or reducing the degree' of moral culpability or punishment. App. 300. The jury's verdict on the rape count was death by electrocution. Both aggravating circumstances on which the court instructed were found to be present by the jury.

FN3.Ga.Code s 26-3102 (Supp. 1976):

'Capital offenses; jury verdict and sen- tence.

'Where, upon a trial by jury, a person is convicted of an offense which may be punishable by death, a sentence of death shall not be imposed unless the jury verdict includes a finding of at least one statutory aggravating circumstance and a recommendation that such sentence be imposed. Where a statutory aggravating circumstance is found and a recommendation of death is made, the court shall sentence the defendant to death. Where a sentence of death is not recommended by the jury, the court shall sentence the defendant to imprisonment as provided by law. Unless the jury trying the case makes a finding of at least one statutory aggravating circumstance and recommends the death sentence in its verdict, the court shall not sentence the defendant to death, provided that no such finding of statutory aggravating circumstance shall be necessary in offenses of treason or aircraft hijacking. The provisions of this section shall not affect a sentence when the case is tried without a jury or when the judge accepts a plea of guilty.'

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Ga.Code s 27-2302 (Supp.1976):

Recommendation to mercy.

'In all capital cases, other than those of homicide, when the verdict is guilty, with a recommendation to mercy, it shall be legal and shall be a recommendation to the judge of imprisonment for life. Such recommendation shall be binding upon the judge.'

Ga.Code s 27-2534.1 (Supp.1976):

'Mitigating and aggravating circumstances; death penalty.

'(a) The death penalty may be imposed for the offenses of aircraft hijacking or treason, in any case.

'(b) In all cases of other offenses for which the death penalty may be authorized, the judge shall consider, or he shall include in his instructions to the jury for it to consider, any mitigating circumstances or aggravating circumstances otherwise authorized by law and any of the following statutory aggravating circumstances which may be supported by the evidence:

'(1) The offense of murder, rape, armed robbery, or kidnapping was committed by a person with a prior record of conviction for a capital felony, or the offense of murder was committed by a person who has a substantial history of serious assaultive criminal convictions.

'(2) The offense of murder, rape, armed robbery, or kidnapping was committed while the offender was engaged in the commission of another capital felony, or aggravated battery, or the offense of murder was committed while the offender was engaged in the commission of burglary or arson in the first degree.

'(3) The offender by his act of murder, armed robbery, or kidnapping knowingly created a great risk of death to more than one person in a public place by means of a weapon or device which would normally be hazardous to the lives of more than one person.

'(4) The offender committed the offense of murder for himself or another, for the purpose of receiving money or any other thing of monetary value.

'(5) The murder of a judicial officer, former judicial officer, district attorney or solicitor or former district attorney or solicitor during or because of the exercise of his official duty.

'(6) The offender caused or directed another to commit murder or committed murder as an agent or employee of another person.

'(7) The offense of murder, rape, armed robbery or kidnapping was outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible or inhuman in that it involved torture, depravity of mind, or an aggravated battery to the victim.

'(8) The offense of murder was committed against any peace officer, corrections employee or fireman while engaged in the performance of his official duties.

'(9) The offense of murder was committed by a person in, or who has escaped from, the lawful custody of a peace officer or place of lawful confinement.

'(10) The murder was committed for the purpose of avoiding, interfering with, or preventing a lawful arrest or custody in a place of lawful confinement, of himself or another.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

'(c) The statutory instructions as determined by the trial judge to be warranted by the evidence shall be given in charge and in writing to the jury for its deliberation. The jury, if its verdict be a recommendation of death, shall designate in writing, signed by the foreman of the jury, the aggravating circumstance or circumstances which it found beyond a reasonable doubt. In non-jury cases the judge shall make such designation. Except in cases of treason or aircraft hijacking, unless at least one of the statutory aggravating circumstances enumerated in section 27-2534.1(b) is so found, the death penalty shall not be imposed.'

Ga.Code s 27-2537 (Supp.1976):

'Review of death sentences.

'(a) Whenever the death penalty is imposed, and upon the judgment becoming final in the trial court, the sentence shall be reviewed on the record by the Supreme Court of Georgia. The clerk of the trial court, within ten days after receiving the transcript, shall transmit the entire record and transcript to the Supreme Court of Georgia together with a notice prepared by the clerk and a report prepared by the trial judge. The notice shall set forth the title and docket number of the case, the name of the defendant and the name and address of his attorney, a narrative statement of the judgment, the offense, and the punishment prescribed. The report shall be in the form of a standard questionnaire prepared and supplied by the Supreme Court of Georgia.

'(b) The Supreme Court of Georgia shall consider the punishment as well as any errors enumerated by way of appeal.

'(c) With regard to the sentence, the court shall determine:

'(1) Whether the sentence of death was imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor, and

'(2) Whether, in cases other than treason or aircraft hijacking, the evidence supports the jury's or judge's finding of a statutory aggravating circumstance as enumerated in section 27-2534.1(b), and

'(3) Whether the sentence of death is excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases, considering both the crime and the defendant.

'(d) Both the defendant and the State shall have the right to submit briefs within the time provided by the court, and to present oral argument to the court.

'(e) The court shall include in its decision a reference to those similar cases which it took into consideration. In addition to its authority regarding correction of errors, the court, with regard to review of death sentences, shall be authorized to:

'(1) Affirm the sentence of death; or

'(2) Set the sentence aside and remand the case for resentencing by the trial judge based on the record and argument of counsel. The records of those similar cases referred to by the Supreme Court of Georgia in its decision, and the extracts prepared as hereinafter provided for, shall be provided to the resentencing judge for his consideration.

'(f) There shall be an Assistant to the Supreme Court, who shall be an attorney appointed by the Chief Justice of Georgia and who shall serve at the pleasure of the court. The court shall accumulate the records of all capital felony cases in which sentence was imposed after January 1, 1970, or such earlier date as the court may deem appropriate. The Assistant shall provide the court with whatever extracted information it desires with respect thereto, including but not limited to a synopsis or brief of the facts in the record concerning the crime and the defendant.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

'(g) The court shall be authorized to employ an appropriate staff and such methods to compile such data as are deemed by the Chief Justice to be appropriate and relevant to the statutory questions concerning the validity of the sentence.

'(h) The office of the Assistant shall be attached to the office of the Clerk of the Supreme Court of Georgia for administrative purposes.

'ni) The sentence review shall be in addition to direct appeal, if taken, and the review and appeal shall be consolidated for consideration. The court shall render its decision on legal errors enumerated, the factual substantiation of the verdict, and the validity of the sentence.'

II

Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 92 S.Ct. 2726, 33 L.Ed.2d 346 (1972), and the Court's decisions last Term in Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 49 L.Ed.2d 859 (1976); Proffitt v. Florida, 428 U.S. 242, 96 S.Ct. 2960, 49 L.Ed.2d 913 (1976); Jurek v. Texas, 428 U.S. 262, 96 S.Ct. 2950, 49 L.Ed.2d 929 (1976); Woodson v. North Carolina, 428 U.S. 280, 96 S.Ct. 2978, 49 L.Ed.2d 944 (1976); and Roberts v. Louisiana, 428 U.S. 325, 96 S.Ct. 3001, 49 L.Ed.2d 974 (1976), make unnecessary the recanvassing of certain critical aspects of the controversy about the constitutionality of capital punishment. It is now settled that the death penalty is not invariably cruel and unusual 2866 punishment within the meaning of the Eighth Amendment; it is not inherently barbaric or an unacceptable mode of punishment for crime; neither is it always disproportionate to the crime for which it is imposed. It is also established that imposing capital punishment, at least for murder, in accordance with the procedures provided under the Georgia statutes saves the sentence from the infirmities which led the Court to invalidate the prior Georgia capital punishment statute in Furman v. Georgia, supra.

In sustaining the imposition of the death penalty in Gregg, *592 however, the Court firmly embraced the holdings and dicta from prior cases, Furman v. Georgia, supra; Robinson v. California, 370 U.S. 660, 82 S.Ct. 1417, 8 L.Ed.2d 758 (1962); Trop v. Dulles, 356 U.S. 86, 78 S.Ct. 590, 2 L.Ed.2d 630 (1958); and Weems v. United States, 217 U.S. 349, 30 S.Ct. 544, 54 L.Ed. 793 (1910), to the effect that the Eighth Amendment bars not only those punishments that are 'barbaric' but also those that are 'excessive' in relation to the crime committed. Under Gregg, a punishment is 'excessive' and unconstitutional if it (1) makes no measurable contribution to acceptable goals of punishment and hence is nothing more than the purposeless and needless imposition of pain and suffering; or (2) is grossly out of proportion to the sevrity of the crime. A punishment might fail the test on either ground. Furthermore, these Eighth Amendment judgments should not be, or appear to be, merely the subjective views of individual Justices; judgment should be informed by objective factors to the maximum possible extent. To this end, attention must be given to the public attitudes concerning a particular sentence history and precedent, legislative attitudes, and the response of juries reflected in their sentenceing decisions are to be consulted. In Gregg, after giving due regard to such sources, the Court's judgment was that the death penalty for deliberate murder was neither the purposeless imposition of severe punishment nor a punishment grossly disproportionate to the crime. But the Court reserved the question of the constitutionality of the death penalty when imposed for other crimes. 428 U.S., at 187 n. 35, 96 S.Ct., at 2932.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

III

That question, with respect to rape of an adult woman, is now before us. We have concluded that a sentence of death is grossly disproportionate and excessive punishment for the crime of rape and is therefore forbidden by the Eighth Amendment as cruel and unusual punishment.[FN4]

FN4. Because the death sentence is a disproportionate punishment for rape, it is cruel and unusual punishment within the meaning of the Eighth Amendment even though it may measurably serve the legitimate ends of punishment and therefore is not invalid for its failure to do so. We observe that in the light of the legislative decisions in almost all of the States and in most of the countries around the world, it would be difficult to support a claim that the death penalty for rape is an indispensable part of the States' criminal justice system.

*593 A

As advised by recent cases, we seek guidance in history and from the objective evidence of the country's present judgment concerning the acceptability of death as a penalty for rape of an adult woman. At no time in the last 50 years have a majority of the States authorized death as a punishment for rape. In 1925, 18 States, the District of Columbia, and the Federal Government authorized capital punishment for the rape of an adult female.[FN5]By 1971 just prior to the decision in Furman v. Georgia, that number had declined, but not substantially, to 16 States plus the Federal Government.[FN6]Furman then invalidated 2867 most of the capital punishment statutes in this country, including the rape statutes, because, among other reasons, of the manner in which the death penalty was imposed and utilized under those laws.

FN5. See Bye, Recent History and Present Status of Capital Punishment in the United States, 17 J.Crim.L. & C., 234, 241-242 (1926).

FN6.Ala.Code, Tit. 14, s 395 (1958); Ark.Stat.Ann. s 41-3403 (1964); Fla.Stat.Ann. s 794.01 (1965); Ga.Code s 26-2001 (1970); Ky.Rev.Stat.Ann. ss 435.080-435.090 (1962); La.Rev.Stat.Ann. s 14:42 (1950); Md.Ann.Code, Art. 27, s 461 (1957); Miss.Code Ann. s 2358 (1957); Mo. Rev.Stat. s 559260 (1969); Nev.Rev.Stat. s 200.360 (1963) (rape with substantial bodily harm); N.C.Gen.Stat. s 14-21 (1969); Okl.Stat.Ann., Tit. 21, s 1115 (1958); S.C.Code Ann. ss 16-72, 16-80 (1962); Tenn. Code Ann. s 39-3702 (1955); Tex.Penal Code s 1189 (1961); Va.Code Ann. s 18.1-44 (1960); 18 U.S.C. s 2031.

With their death penalty statutes for the most part invalidated, the States were faced with the choice of enacting modified capital punishment laws in an attempt to satisfy the requirements of Furman or of being satisfied with life imprisonment as the ultimate punishment for any offense. Thirty-fiveStates *594 immediately reinstituted the death penalty for at least limited kinds of crime. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S., at 179 n. 23, 96 S.Ct., at 2928.This public judgment as to the acceptability of capital punishment, evidenced by the immediate, post-Furman legislative reaction in a large majority of the States, heavily influenced the Court to sustain the death penalty for murder in Gregg v. Georgia, supra, at 179-182, 96 S.Ct., at 2928-2929.

But if the 'most marked indication of society's endorsement of the death penalty for murder is the legislative response to Furman,' Gregg v. Georgia, supra, at 179-180, 96 S.Ct., at 2928, it should also be a telling datum that the public judgment with respect to rape, as reflected in the statutes providing the punishment for that crime, has been dramatically different. In reviving death penalty laws to satisfy Furman's mandate, none of the States that had not previously authorized death for rape chose to include rape among capital felonies. Of the 16 States in which rape had been a capital offense, only three provided the death penalty for rape of an adult woman in their revised statutes Georgia, North Carolina, and Louisiana. In the latter two States, the death penalty was mandatory for those found guilty, and those laws were invalidated by Woodson and Roberts. When Louisiana and North Carolina, responding to those decisions, again revised their capital punishment laws, they reenacted the death penalty for murder but not for rape; none of the seven other legislatures that to our knowledge have amended or replaced their death penalty statutes since July 2, 1976, including four States (in addition to Louisiana and North Carolina) that had authorized the death sentence for rape prior to 1972 and had reacted to Furman with mandatory statutes, included rape among the crimes for which death was an authorized punishment.[FN7]

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

> FN7. 1976 Okla.Sess.Laws, c. 1, p. 627; 1976 La. Acts, Nos. 657, 694; 1976 Ky.Acts. c. 15 (Ex. Sess.); 1977 Wyo.Sess.Laws, c. 122. Recent legislative action has taken place in North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, California, and New Jersey. The legislation has been signed into law in North Carolina and Virginia, N.C.Sess. Laws (May 19, 1977); 1977 Va.Acts, c. 492 (Mar. 29, 1977), and has been vetoed in Maryland and California, Washington Post, May 27, 1977, p. Al, col. 1; N.Y. Times, May 28, 1977, p. 8, col. 6. The Governor of New Jersey apparently has not yet acted on the legislation in that State.

595 Georgia argues that 11 of the 16 States that authorized death for rape in 1972 attempted to comply with Furman by enacting arguably mandatory death penalty legislation and that it is very likely that, aside from Louisiana and North Carolina, these States simply chose to eliminate rape as a capital offense rather than to require death for each and every instance of rape.[FN8] The argument is not without force; but 4 of the 16 States did not take the mandatory course and also did not continue rape of an adult *2868 woman as a capital offense. Further, as we have indicated, the legislatures of 6 of the 11 arguably mandatory States have revised their death penalty laws since Woodson and Roberts without enacting a new death penalty for rape. And this is to say nothing of 19 other States that enacted nonmandatory, post-Furman statutes and chose not to sentence rapists to death.

> FN8. The legislation that respondent places in this category is as follows:
>
> Ky.Rev.Stat. s 507.020 (1975); La.Rev.Stat.Ann. s 14:30 (1974); Md.Code Ann., Art. 27, s 413(b) (Supp. 1976); Miss.Code Ann. ss 97-3-19, 97-3-21, 97-25-55, 99-17-20 (Supp. 1975); Mo.Rev.Stat. ss 559.005, 559.009 (Supp. 1975); Nev.Rev.Stat. s 200.030 (1975); N.C.Gen.Stat. ss 14-17, 14-21 (Supp. 1975); Okl.Stat.Ann., Tit. 21, ss 701.1-701.3 (Supp. 1975); S.C.Code Ann. s 16-52 (Supp. 1975); Tenn.Code Ann. ss 39-2402, 39-2406, 39-3702 (1975); Va.Code Ann. ss 18.2-10, 18.2-31 (1975). Brief for Respondent 19 n. 38.

It should be noted that Florida, Mississippi, and Tennessee also authorized the death penalty in some rape cases, but only where the victim was a child and the rapist an adult.[FN9]The Tennessee statute has since been invalidated because the death sentence was mandatory. Collins v. State, 550 S.W.2d 643 (Tenn.1977). The upshot is that Georgia is the sole jurisdiction596 in the United States at the present time that authorizes a sentence of death when the rape victim is an adult woman, and only two other jurisdictions provide capital punishment when the victim is a child.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

> FN9.Fla.Stat.Ann. s 794.011(2) (1976); Miss.Code Ann. s 97-3-65 (Supp.1976); Tenn.Code Ann. s 39-3702 (1974).

The current judgment with respect to the death penalty for rape is not wholly unanimous among state legislatures, but it obviously weighs very heavily on the side of rejecting capital punishment as a suitable penalty for raping an adult woman.[FN10]

> FN10. In Trop v. Dulles, 356 U.S. 86, 102, 78 S.Ct. 590, 598, 2 L.Ed.2d 630 (1958), the plurality took pains to note the climate of international opinion concerning the acceptability of a particular punishment. It is thus not irrelevant here that out of 60 major nations in the world surveyed in 1965, only 3 retained the death penalty for rape where death did not ensue. United Nations, Department of Economic and Social Affairs, Capital Punishment 40, 86 (1968).

B

It was also observed in Gregg that '(t)he jury . . . is a significant and reliable objective index of contemporary values because it is so directly involved.' 428 U.S., at 181, 96 S.Ct., at 2929, and that it is thus important to look to the sentencing decisions that juries have made in the course of assessing whether capital punishment is an appropriate penalty for the crime being tried. Of course, the jury's judgment is meaningful only where the jury has an appropriate measure of choice as to whether the death penalty is to be imposed. As far as execution for rape is concerned, this is now true only in Georgia and in Florida; and in the latter State, capital punishment is authorized only for the rape of children.

According to the factual submissions in this Court, out of all rape convictions in Georgia since since 1973 and that total number has not been tendered 63 cases had been reviewed by the Georgia Supreme Court as of the time of oral argument; and of these, 6 involved a death sentence, 1 of which was set aside, leaving 5 convicted rapists now under sentence 597 of death in the State of Georgia. Georgia juries have thus sentenced rapists to death six times since 1973. This obviously is not a negligible number; and the State argues that as a practical matter juries simply reserve the extreme sanction for extreme cases of rape and that recent experience surely does not prove that jurors consider the death penalty to be a disproportionate punishment for every conceivable instance of rape, no matter how aggravated. Nevertheless, it is true that in the vast majority of cases, at least 9 out of 10, juries have not imposed the death sentence.

IV

These recent events evidencing the attitude of state legislatures and sentencing juries do not wholly determine this controversy, for the Constitution contemplates that in the end our own judgment will be brought to bear on the question of the acceptability of the death penalty under the Eighth Amendment. Nevertheless, the legislative rejection of capital punishment for rape strongly confirms our own judgment, *2869 which is that death is indeed a disproportionate penalty for the crime of raping an adult woman.

We do not discount the seriousness of rape as a crime. It is highly reprehensible, both in a moral sense and in its almost total contempt for the personal integrity and autonomy of the female victim and for the latter's privilege of choosing those with whom intimate relationships are to be established. Short of homicide, it is the 'ultimate violation of self.' [FN11]It is also a violent crime because it normally involves force, or the threat of force or intimidation, to overcome the will and the capacity of the victim to resist. Rape is very often accompanied598 by physical injury to the female and can also inflict mental and psychological damage.[FN12]Because it undermines the community's sense of security, there is public injury as well.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

> FN11. U.S.Dept. of Justice Law Enforcement Assistance Administration Report, Rape and Its Victims: A Report for Citizens, Health Facilities, and Criminal Justice Agencies 1 (1975), quoting Bard & Ellison, Crisis Intervention and Investigation of Forcible Rape, The Police Chief (May 1974), reproduced as Appendix I B to the Report.
>
> FN12. See Note, The Victim In a Forcible Rape Case: A Feminist View, 11 Am.Crim.L.Rev. 335, 338 (1973); Comment, Rape and Rape Laws: Sexism in Society and Law, 61 Calif.L.Rev. 919, 922-923 (1973).

Rape is without doubt deserving of serious punishment; but in terms of moral depravity and of the injury to the person and to the public, it does not compare with murder, which does involve the unjustified taking of human life. Although it may be accompanied by another crime, rape by definition does not include the death of or even the serious injury to another person.[FN13]The murderer kills; the rapist, if no more than that, does not. Life is over for the victim of the murderer; for the rape victim, life may not be nearly so happy as it was, but it is not over and normally is not beyond repair. We have the abiding conviction that the death penalty, which 'is unique in its severity and irrevocability,' Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S., at 187, 96 S.Ct., at 2931, is an excessive penalty for the rapist who, as such, does not take human life.

> FN13. See n. 1, supra, for the Georgia definition of rape.

This does not end the matter; for under Georgia law, death may not be imposed for any capital offense, including rape, unless the jury or judge finds one of the statutory aggravating circumstances and then elects to impose that sentence. Ga.Code s 26-3102 (1976 Supp); Gregg v. Georgia, supra, 428 U.S., at 165-166, 96 S.Ct., at 2921-2922.For the rapist to be executed in Georgia, it must therefore be found not only that he committed rape but also that one or more of the following aggravating circumstances were present: (1) that the rape was committed by a person with a prior record of conviction for a capital felony; (2) that the rape was committed while the offender was engaged in the commission of another capital felony, or aggravated battery; or (3) the rape 'was outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible or 599 inhuman in that it involved torture, depravity of mind, or aggravated battery to the victim.'[FN14]Here, the first two of these aggravating circumstances were alleged and found by the jury.

> FN14. There are other aggravating circumstances provided in the statute, see n. 3, supra, but they are not applicable to rape.

Neither of these circumstances, nor both of them together, change our conclusion that the death sentence imposed on Coker is a disproportionate punishment for rape. Coker had prior convictions for capital felonies rape, murder, and kidnaping but these prior convictions do not change the fact that the instant crime being punished is a rape not involving the taking of life.

It is also true that the present rape occurred while Coker was committing armed robbery, a felony for which the Georgia statutes authorize the death penalty.[FN15]But *2870 Coker was tried for the robbery offense as well as for rape and received a separate life sentence for this crime; the jury did not deem the robbery itself deserving of the death penalty, even though accompanied by the aggravating circumstance, which was stipulated, that Coker had been convicted of a prior capital crime.[FN16]

> FN15. In Gregg v. Georgia, the Georgia Supreme Court refused to sustain a death sentence for armed robbery because, for one reason, death had been so seldom imposed for this crime in other cases that such a sentence was excessive and could not be sustained under the statute. As it did in this case, however, the Georgia Supreme Court apparently continues to recognize armed robbery as a capital offense for the purpose of applying the aggravating-circumstances provisions of the Georgia Code.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

FN16. Where the accompanying capital crime is murder, it is most likely that the defendant would be tried for murder, rather than rape; and it is perhaps academic to deal with the death sentence for rape in such a circumstance. It is likewise unnecessary to consider the rapefelony murder a rape accompanied by the death of the victim which was unlawfully but nonmaliciously caused by the defendant.

Where the third aggravating circumstance mentioned in the text is present that the rape is particularly vile or involves torture or aggravated battery it would seem that the defendant could very likely be convicted, tried, and appropriately punished for this additional conduct.

600 We note finally that in Georgia a person commits murder when he unlawfully and with malice aforethought, either express or implied, causes the death of another human being. He also commits that crime when in the commission of a felony he causes the death of another human being, irrespective of malice. But even where the killing is deliberate, it is not punishable by death absent proof of aggravating circumstances. It is difficult to accept the notion, and we do not, that the rapist, with or without aggravating circumstances, should be punished more heavily than the deliberate killer as long as the rapist does not himself take the life of his victim. The judgment of the Georgia Supreme Court upholding the death sentence is reversed, and the case is remanded to that court for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

So ordered.

Mr. Justice BRENNAN, concurring in the judgment.

Adhering to my view that the death penalty is in all circumstances cruel and unusual punishment prohibited by the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments, Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 227, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 2971, 49 L.Ed.2d 859 (1976) (dissenting opinion), I concur in the judgment of the Court setting aside the death sentence imposed under the Georgia rape statute.

Mr. Justice MARSHALL, concurring in the judgment.

In Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 231, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 2973, 49 L.Ed.2d 859 (1976) (dissenting opinion), I stated: 'In Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 314, 92 S.Ct. 2726, 2764, 33 L.Ed.2d 346 (1972) (concurring opinion), I set forth at some length my views on the basic issue presented to the Court in these cases. The death penalty, I concluded, is a cruel and unusual punishment prohibited by the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments. That continues to be my view.'

601 I then explained in some detail my reasons for reaffirming my position. I continue to adhere to those views in concurring in the judgment of the Court in this case.

Mr. Justice POWELL, concurring in the judgment in part and dissenting in part.

I concur in the judgment of the Court on the facts of this case, and also in the plurality's reasoning supporting the view that ordinarily death is disproportionate punishment for the crime of raping an adult woman. Although rape invariably is a reprehensible crime, there is no indication that petitioner's offense was committed with excessive brutality or that the victim sustained serious or lasting injury. The plurality, however, does not limit its holding to the case before us or to similar cases. Rather, in an opinion that ranges well beyond what is necessary, it holds that capital punishment always regardless of the circumstances is a disproportionate penalty for the crime of rape.

The Georgia statute, sustained in Gregg v. Georgia,

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

428 U.S. 153, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 49 L.Ed.2d 859 (1976), specifies aggravating *2871 circumstances that may be considered by the jury when appropriate. With respect to the crime of rape, only three such circumstances are specified: (i) the offense was committed by a person with a prior record of conviction for a capital felony; (ii) the offense was committed while the offender was engaged in another capital felony or in aggravated battery; and (iii) the offense was 'outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible or inhuman in that it involved torture, depravity of mind, or an aggravated battery to the victim.'Ante, at 2864, n. 3. Only the third circumstance describes in general the offense of aggravated rape, often identified as a separate and more heinous offense than rape. See, e. g., ALI, Model Penal Code s 207.4, Comment, p. 246 (Tent.Draft No. 4, 1955); ALI, Model Penal Code s 213.1 (Prop. Off. Draft, 1962); Nev.Rev.Stat. s 200.363 (1975). That third circumstance was not submitted602 to the jury in this case, as the evidence would not have supported such a finding. It is therefore quite unnecessary for the plurality to write in terms so sweeping as to foreclose each of the 50 state legislatures from creating a narrowly defined substantive crime of aggravated rape punishable by death.[FN1]

> FN1. It is not this Court's function to formulate the relevant criteria that might distinguish aggravated rape from the more usual case, but perhaps a workable test would embrace the factors identified by Georgia: the cruelty or viciousness of the offender, the circumstances and manner in which the offense was committed, and the consequences suffered by the victim. See also Ralph v. Warden, 438 F.2d 786 (CA4 1970), cert. denied, 408 U.S. 942, 92 S.Ct. 2846, 33 L.Ed.2d 766 (1972); 438 F.2d, at 794 (opinion of Haynsworth, C. J.). The legislative task of defining, with appropriate specificity, the elements of the offense of aggravated rape would not be easy, see Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 460, 92 S.Ct. 2726, 2839, 33 L.Ed.2d 346 (1972) (Powell, J., dissenting), but certainly this Court should not assume that the task is impossible.

The dissent of THE CHIEF JUSTICE, relying on selected excerpts from my opinion in Furman, seeks to buttress the view that for sentencing purposes meaningful distinctions cannot be drawn between rapes regardless of the circumstances and effect upon the victim. Post, at 2873, n. 2. The dissent emphasizes the difficulties of proof. But the jury system is designed and operates successfully to resolve precisely this type of factual issue. The law of negligence, for example, is replete with issues requiring the jury to determine degrees of culpability and the extent or permanency of physical and psychological injury.

I am complimented by the frequency with which THE CHIEF JUSTICE, in his dissent, cites and quotes from my opinion in Furman.That opinion, however, did not prevail, and as with most of the writing in Furman it now must be read in light of Gregg and Woodson v. North Carolina, 428 U.S. 280, 96 S.Ct. 2978, 49 L.Ed.2d 944 (1976), which have established the controlling general principles. But contrary to implications in THE CHIEF JUSTICE's dissent, my opinion in Furman did emphasize that the proportionality test as to rape should be applied on a case-by-case basis, noting that in some cases the death sentence would be 'grossly excessive.' 408 U.S., at 461, 92 S.Ct., at 2839.I remain in disagreement with the simplistic all-or-nothing views of the plurality opinion and the dissenting opinion of THE CHIEF JUSTICE.

In accord with our decisions last Term, the plurality opinion states:

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

'(T)he death penalty is not invariably cruel and unusual punishment within the meaning of the Eighth Amendments *603 it is not inherently barbaric or an unacceptable mode of punishment for crime; neither is it always disproportionate to the crime for which it is imposed.'Ante, at 2865.

Thus capital punishment may be imposed on those sentenced in accordance with the procedures identified in Gregg and Woodson v. North Carolina, 428 U.S. 280, 96 S.Ct. 2978, 49 L.Ed.2d 944 (1976), at least when the offender is convicted of murder, the crime involved in all five of last Term's capital cases.

Today, in a case that does not require such an expansive pronouncement, the plurality draws a bright line between murder and all rapes regardless of the degree of brutality of the rape or the effect upon the victim. I dissent because I am not persuaded that such a bright line is appropriate. As noted in Snider v. Peyton, 356 F.2d 626, 627 (CA4 1966), '(t)here is extreme variation in the degree of culpability of 2872 rapists.'The deliberate viciousness of the rapist may be greater than that of the murderer. Rape is never an act committed accidentally. Rarely can it be said to be unpremeditated. There also is wide variation in the effect on the victim. The plurality opinion says that '(l)ife is over for the victim of the murderer; for the rape victim, life may not be nearly so happy as it was, but it is not over and normally is not beyond repair.'Ante, at 2869. But there is indeed 'extreme variation' in the crime of rape. Some victims are so grievously injured physically or psychologically that life is beyond repair.

Thus, it may be that the death penalty is not disproportionate punishment for the crime of aggravated rape. Final resolution of the question must await careful inquiry into objective indicators of society's 'evolving standards of decency,' particularly legislative enactments and the responses of juries in capital cases.[FN2]See Gregg v. Georgia, supra, 428 U.S., at 173-182, 96 S.Ct., at 2925-2929 *604 joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and Stevens, JJ.); Woodson v. North Carolina, supra, 428 U.S., at 294-295, 96 S.Ct., at 2987 (plurality opinion); Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 436-443, 92 S.Ct. 2726, 2827-2830, 33 L.Ed.2d 346 (1972) (Powell, J., dissenting). The plurality properly examines these indicia, which do support the conclusion that society finds the death penalty unacceptable for the crime of rape in the absence of excessive brutality or severe injury. But it has not been shown that society finds the penalty disproportionate for all rapes. In a proper case a more discriminating inquiry than the plurality undertakes well might discover that both juries and legislatures have reserved the ultimate penalty for the case of an outrageous rape resulting in serious, lasting harm to the victim. I would not prejudge the issue. To this extent, I respectfully dissent.

> FN2. These objective indicators are highly relevant, but the ultimate decision as to the appropriateness of the death penalty under the Eighth Amendment as the plurality notes, ante, at 2868 must be decided on the basis of our own judgment in light of the precedents of this Court.

Mr. Chief Justice BURGER, with whom Mr. Justice REHNQUIST joins, dissenting.

In a case such as this, confusion often arises as to the Court's proper role in reaching a decision. Our task is not to give effect to our individual views on capital punishment; rather, we must determine what the Constitution permits a State to do under its reserved powers. In striking down the death penalty imposed upon the petitioner in this case, the Court has overstepped the bounds of proper constitutional adjudication by substituting its policy judgment for that of the state legislature. I accept that the Eighth Amendment's concept of disproportionality bars the death penalty for minor crimes. But rape is not a minor crime; hence the Cruel and Unusual Punishments Clause does not give the Members of this Court license to engraft their conceptions of proper public policy onto the considered legislative judgments of the States. Since I cannot agree that Georgia lacked the constitutional*605 power to impose the penalty of death for rape, I dissent from the Court's judgment.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

(1)

On December 5, 1971, the petitioner, Ehrlich Anthony Coker, raped and then stabbed to death a young woman. Less than eight months later Coker kidnaped and raped a second young woman. After twice raping this 16-year-old victim, he stripped her, severely beat her with a club, and dragged her into a wooded area where he left her for dead. He was apprehended and pleaded guilty to offenses stemming from these incidents. He was sentenced by three separate courts to three life terms, two 20-year terms, and one 8-year term of imprisonment.[FN1] Each judgment specified that the 2873 sentences it imposed were to run consecutively rather than concurrently. Approximately 1 1/2 years later, on September 2, 1974, petitioner escaped from the state prison where he was serving these sentences. He promptly raped another 16-year-old woman in the presence of her husband, abducted her from her home, and threatened her with death and serious bodily harm. It is this crime for which the sentence now under review was imposed.

> FN1. On March 12, 1973, the Superior Court of Richmond County, Ga., sentenced Coker to 20 years' imprisonment for the kidnaping of petitioner's second victim, and to life imprisonment for one act of rape upon her. On May 28, 1973, the Superior Court of Taliaferro County, Ga., sentenced Coker to eight years' imprisonment for aggravated assault upon the same victim, and to life imprisonment for the second rape upon her. On April 6, 1973, the Superior Court of Clayton County, Ga., sentenced Coker to 20 years' imprisonment for the rape of petitioner's first victim, and to life imprisonment for her murder. App. 307-312.

The Court today holds that the State of Georgia may not impose the death penalty on Coker. In so doing, it prevents the State from imposing any effective punishment upon Coker for his latest rape. The Court's holding, moreover, bars Georgia from guaranteeing its citizens that they *606 will suffer no further attacks by this habitual rapist. In fact, given the lengthy sentences Coker must serve for the crimes he has already committed, the Court's holding assures that petitioner as well as others in his position will henceforth feel no compunction whatsoever about committing further rapes as frequently as he may be able to escape from confinement and indeed even within the walls of the prison itself. To what extent we have left States 'elbowroom' to protect innocent persons from depraved human beings like Coker remains in doubt.

(2)

My first disagreement with the Court's holding is its unnecessary breadth. The narrow issue here presented is whether the State of Georgia may constitutionally execute this petitioner for the particular rape which he has committed, in light of all the facts and circumstances shown by this record. The plurality opinion goes to great lengths to consider societal mores and attitudes toward the generic crime of rape and the punishment for it; however, the opinion gives little attention to the special circumstances which bear directly on whether imposition of the death penalty is an appropriate societal response to Coker's criminal acts: (a) On account of his prior offenses, Coker is already serving such lengthy prison sentences that imposition of additional periods of imprisonment would have no incremental punitive effect; (b) by his life pattern Coker has shown that he presents a particular danger to the safety, welfare, and chastity of women, and on his record the likelihood is therefore great that he will repeat his crime at the first opportunity; (c) petitioner escaped from prison, only a year and a half after he commenced serving his latest sentences; he has nothing to lose by further escape attempts; and (d) should he again succeed in escaping from prison, it is reasonably predictable that he will repeat his pattern of attacks on *607 women and with impunity since the threat of added prison sentences will be no deterrent.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Unlike the plurality, I would narrow the inquiry in this case to the question actually presented: Does the Eighth Amendment's ban against cruel and unusual punishment prohibit the State of Georgia from executing a person who has, within the space of three years, raped three separate women, killing one and attempting to kill another, who is serving prison terms exceeding his probable lifetime and who has not hesitated to escape confinement at the first available opportunity? Whatever one's view may be as to the State's constitutional power to impose the death penalty upon a rapist who stands before a court convicted for the first time, this case reveals a chronic rapist whose continuing danger to the community is abundantly clear.

Mr. Justice POWELL would hold the death sentence inappropriate in this case because 'there is no indication that petitioner's offense was committed with excessive brutality or that the victim sustained 2874 serious or lasting injury.'Ante, at 2870.[FN2]Apart from the reality that rape is inherently one *608 of the most egregiously brutal acts one human being can inflict upon another, there is nothing in the Eighth Amendment that so narrowly limits the factors which may be considered by a state legislature in determining whether a particular punishment is grossly excessive. Surely recidivism, especially the repeated commission of heinous crimes, is a factor which may properly be weighed as an aggravating circumstance, permitting the imposition of a punishment more severe than for one isolated offense. For example, as a matter of national policy, Congress has expressed its will that a person who has committed two felonies will suffer enhanced punishment for a third one, 18 U.S.C. s 3575(e)(1); Congress has also declared that a second conviction for assault on a mail carrier may be punished more seriously than a first such conviction, 18 U.S.C. s 2114. Many States *609 provide an increased penalty for habitual criminality. See, e. g., Wis.Stat.Ann. s 939.62 (1958); see also Annot., 58 A.L.R. 20 (1929); 82 A.L.R. 345 (1933); 79 A.L.R.2d 826 (1961).[FN3] As a factual matter, the 2875 plurality opinion is correct in stating that Coker's 'prior convictions do not change the fact that the instant crime being punished is a rape not involving the taking of life,'ante, at 2869; however, it cannot be disputed that the existence of these prior convictions makes Coker a substantially more serious menace to society than a first-time offender: [FN4]

> FN2. The position today adopted by Mr. Justice POWELL constitutes a disquieting shift from the view he embraced several Terms ago in Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 460-461, 92 S.Ct. 2726, 2839, 33 L.Ed.2d 346 (1972) (dissenting opinion), where he stated:
>
> 'While I reject each of (petitioners') attempts to establish specific categories of cases in which the death penalty may be deemed excessive, I view them as groping toward what is for me the appropriate application of the Eighth Amendment. While in my view the disproportionality test may not be used either to strike down the death penalty for rape altogether or to install the Court as a tribunal for sentencing review, that test may find its application in the peculiar circumstances of specific cases. Its utilization should be limited to the rare case in which the death penalty is rendered for a crime technically falling within the legislatively defined class but factually falling outside the likely legislative intent in creating the category.' (Emphasis ad- ded.)
>
> While Mr. Justice POWELL purports to dissent from the broadest sweep of the Court's holding, I cannot see that his view differs materially from that of the plurality. He suggests two situations where it might be proper to execute rapists: (1) where the

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

'offense (is) committed with excessive brutality'; and (2) where 'the victim sustained serious or lasting injury.'The second part of this test was rejected by Mr. Justice POWELL himself in Furman, and with good reason: '(T)he emotional impact (upon the rape victim) may be impossible to gauge at any particular point in time. The extent and duration of psychological trauma may not be known or ascertainable prior to the date of trial.' Id., at 460, 92 S.Ct., at 2839.Can any Member of the Court state with confidence that a 16-year-old woman who is raped in the presence of her husband three weeks after giving birth to a baby 'sustained (no) serious or lasting injury'? This bifurcation of rape into categories of harmful and nonharmful eludes my comprehension.

The difficulty with the first part of Mr. Justice POWELL's test is that rape is inherently an aggravated offense; in Mr. Justice POWELL's own words, 'the threat of both (physical and psychological) injury is always present.' Id., at 459, 92 S.Ct., at 2838.Therefore the 'excessive brutality' requirement must refer to something more, I assume, than the force normally associated with physically coercing or overpowering the will of another. Rather, what must be meant is that the rapist has engaged, in torture or has committed an aggravated battery upon the victim. See, ante, at 2870-2871, and n. 1. However, torture and aggravated battery are offenses separate from rape, and ordinarily are punished separately. The clear negative inference of Mr. Justice POWELL's analysis therefore appears to be that where rape alone is committed, i. e., rape unaccompanied by any other criminal conduct, the death penalty may never be imposed.

FN3. This Court has consistently upheld the constitutional validity of such punishment-enhancing statutes. See, e. g., Spencer v. Texas, 385 U.S. 554, 559-560, 87 S.Ct. 648, 651, 17 L.Ed.2d 606 (1967):

'No claim is made here that recidivist statutes are . . . unconstitutional, nor could there be under our cases. Such statutes and other enhanced-sentence laws, and procedures designed to implement their underlying policies, have been enacted in all the States, and by the Federal Government as well. . . . Such statutes . . . have been sustained in this Court on several occasions against contentions that they violate constitutional strictures dealing with double jeopardy, ex post facto laws, cruel and unusual punishment, due process, equal protection, and privileges and immunities.'(Footnote and citations omitted; emphasis added.)

Accord, Oyler v. Boles, 368 U.S. 448, 451, 82 S.Ct. 501, 503, 7 L.Ed.2d 446 (1962).

FN4. This special danger is demonstrated by the very record in this case. After tying and gagging the victim's husband, and raping the victim, petitioner sought to make his getaway in their automobile. Leaving the victim's husband tied and gagged in his bathroom, Coker took the victim with him. As he started to leave, he brandished the kitchen knife he was carrying and warned the husband that 'if he would get pulled over or the police was following him in any way that he would kill he would kill my wife. He said he didn't have nothing to lose that he was in prison for the rest of his life, anyway . . ...' Testimony of the victim's husband, App. 121 (emphasis added).

'There is a widely held view that those who present the strongest case for severe measures of incapacitation are not murderers as a group (their offenses often are situational) but rather those who have repeatedly engaged in violent, combative behavior. A well-demonstrated 610 propensity for life-endangering behavior is thought to provide a more solid basis for infliction of the most severe measures of incapacitation than does the fortuity of a single homicidal incident.'Packer, Making the Punishment Fit the Crime, 77 Harv.L.Rev. 1071, 1080 (1964). (Emphasis added.)

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

In my view, the Eighth Amendment does not prevent the State from taking an individual's 'well-demonstrated propensity for life-endangering behavior' into account in devising punitive measures which will prevent inflicting further harm upon innocent victims. See Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 183 n. 28, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 2930, 49 L.Ed.2d 859 (1976). Only one year ago Mr. Justice White succinctly noted: '(D)eath finally forecloses the possibility that a prisoner will commit further crimes, whereas life imprisonment does not.' Roberts v. Louisiana, 428 U.S. 325, 354, 96 S.Ct. 3001, 3016, 49 L.Ed.2d 974 (1976) (dissenting opinion); see also Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S., at 311, 92 S.Ct., at 2763 (White, J., concurring).

In sum, once the Court has held that 'the punishment of death does not invariably violate the Constitution,' Gregg v. Georgia, supra, 428 U.S., at 169, 96 S.Ct., at 2923, it seriously impinges upon the State's legislative judgment to hold that it may not impose such sentence upon an individual who has shown total and repeated disregard for the welfare, safety, personal integrity, and human worth of others, and who seemingly cannot be deterred from continuing such conduct.[FN5]I therefore would 611 hold that the death sentence here imposed is within the power reserved to the State and leave for another day the question of whether such sanction would be proper under other circumstances. The dangers which inhere whenever the Court casts its constitutional decisions in terms sweeping beyond the facts of the case presented, are magnified in the context of the Eighth Amendment. In Furman v. Georgia, supra, at 431, 92 S.Ct., at 2824, Mr. Justice POWELL, in dissent stated:

FN5. Professor Packer addressed this:

'What are we to do with those whom we cannot reform, and, in particular, those who by our failure are thought to remain menaces to life? Current penal theories admit, indeed insist upon, the need for permanent incapacitation in such cases. Once this need is recognized, the death penalty as a means of incapacitation for the violent psychopath can hardly be objected to on grounds that will survive rational scrutiny, if the use of the death penalty in any situation is to be permitted. And its use in rape cases as a class, while inept, is no more so than its use for any other specific offense involving danger to life and limb.'Making the Punishment Fit the Crime, 77 Harv.L.Rev. 1071, 1081 (1964). (Emphasis added.)

'(W)here, as here, the language of the applicable (constitutional) provision provides*2876 great leeway and where the underlying social policies are felt to be of vital importance, the temptation to read personal preference into the Constitution is understandably great. It is too easy to propound our subjective standards of wise policy under the rubric of more or less universally held standards of decency.'(Emphasis added.)

Since the Court now invalidates the death penalty as a sanction for all rapes of adults at all times under all circumstances,[FN6] I reluctantly turn to what I see as the broader issues raised by this holding.

FN6. I find a disturbing confusion as to this issue in the plurality opinion. The issue is whether Georgia can, under any circumstances and for any kind of rape 'mild' or 'gross' impose the death penalty. Yet the plurality opinion opens its discussion, apparently directed at demonstrating that this was not an 'aggravated' rape, saying that following the rape and kidnaping, 'Mrs. Carver was unharmed.' Ante, at 2863. If the Court is holding that no rape can ever be punished by death, why is it relevant whether Mrs. Carver was 'unharmed'?

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

(3)

The plurality, ante, at 2868-2869, acknowledges the gross nature of the crime of rape. A rapist not only violates a victim's privacy and personal integrity, but inevitably causes serious psychological as well as physical harm in the process. The longrange effect upon the victim's life and health is likely 612 to be irreparable; it is impossible to measure the harm which results. Volumes have been written by victims, physicians, and psychiatric specialists on the lasting injury suffered by rape victims. Rape is not a mere physical attack it is destructive of the human personality. The remainder of the victim's life may be gravely affected, and this in turn may have a serious detrimental effect upon her husband and any children she may have. I therefore wholly agree with Mr. Justice WHITE's conclusion as far as it goes that '(s)hort of homicide, (rape) is the 'ultimate violation of self."Ante, at 2868. Victims may recover from the physical damage of knife or bullet wounds, or a beating with fists or a club, but recovery from such a gross assault on the human personality is not healed by medicine or surgery. To speak blandly, as the plurality does, of rape victims who are 'unharmed,' or to classify the human outrage of rape, as does Mr. Justice POWELL, in terms of 'excessively brutal,' ante, at 2870, versus 'moderately brutal,' takes too little account of the profound suffering the crime imposes upon the victims and their loved ones.

Despite its strong condemnation of rape, the Court reaches the inexplicable conclusion that 'the death penalty . . . is an excessive penalty' for the perpetrator of this heinous offense.[FN7]This, the Court holds, is true even though in Georgia the death penalty may be imposed only where the rape is coupled with one or more aggravating circumstances. The process by which this conclusion is reached is startling as it is disquieting. It represents a clear departure from precedent by making this Court 'under the aegis of the Cruel and Unusual Punishments Clause, the ultimate arbiter of the standards of criminal responsibility in diverse areas of the 613 criminal law, throughout the country.' Powell v. Texas, 392 U.S. 514, 533, 88 S.Ct. 2145, 2154, 20 L.Ed.2d 1254 (1968) (opinion of Marshall, J.).[FN8] This seriously strains and distorts our *2877 federal system, removing much of the flexibility from which it has drawn strength for two centuries.

FN7. While only three Justices have joined Mr. Justice WHITE in this portion of his opinion, see separate opinion of Mr. Justice POWELL, ante, p. 2870, I take this to be the view of the Court in light of Mr. Justice BRENNAN's and Mr. Justice MARSHALL's statements joining the judgment.

FN8. Only last Term in Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 49 L.Ed.2d 859 (1976), Mr. Justice Stewart, Mr. Justice Powell, and Mr. Justice Stevens warned that 'the requirements of the Eighth Amendment must be applied with an awareness of the limited role to be played by the courts,' and noted that 'we may not act as judges as we might as legislators,' Id., at 174-175,96 S.Ct., at 295. Accord, Roberts v. Louisiana, 428 U.S. 325, 355-356, 96 S.Ct. 3001, 3017, 49 L.Ed.2d 974 (1976). (White, J., dissenting). Mr. Justice STEWART, Mr. Justice POWELL, and Mr. Justice STEVENS further noted that '(t)he deference we owe to decisions of the state legislatures under our federal system, (Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S.), at 465-470, 92 S.Ct., at 2842-2844 (Rehnquist, J., dissenting), is enhanced where the specification of punishments is concerned, for 'these are peculiarly questions of legislative policy.' Gore v. United States, 357 U.S. 386, 393, 78 S.Ct. 1280, 1285, 2 L.Ed.2d 1405 (1958).' 428 U.S., at 176, 96 S.Ct., at 2926 (Emphasis added.)

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

The analysis of the plurality opinion is divided into two parts: (a) an 'objective' determination that most American jurisdictions do not presently make rape a capital offense, and (b) a subjective judgment that death is an excessive punishment for rape because the crime does not, in and of itself, cause the death of the victim. I take issue with each of these points.

(a)

The plurality opinion bases its analysis, in part, on the fact that 'Georgia is the sole jurisdiction in the United States at the present time that authorizes a sentence of death when the rape victim is an adult woman.'Ante, at 2867. Surely, however, this statistic cannot be deemed determinative, or even particularly relevant. As the opinion concedes, ante, at 2867, two other States Louisiana and North Carolina have enacted death penalty statutes for adult rape since this Court's 1972 decision in Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 92 S.Ct. 2726, 33 L.Ed.2d 346.If the Court is to rely on some 'public opinion' process, does this not suggest the beginning of a 'trend'?

*614 More to the point, however, it is myopic to base sweeping constitutional principles upon the narrow experience of the past five years. Considerable uncertainty was introduced into this area of the law by this Court's Furman decision. A large number of States found their death penalty statutes invalidated; legislatures were left in serious doubt by the expressions vacillating between discretionary and mandatory death penalties, as to whether this Court would sustain any statute imposing death as a criminal sanction.[FN9] Failure of more States to enact statutes imposing death for rape of an adult woman may thus reflect hasty legislative compromise occasioned by time pressures following Furman, a desire to wait on the experience of those States which did enact such statutes, or simply an accurate forecast of today's holding.

FN9. I take no satisfaction in my predictive caveat in Furman:

> 'Since there is no majority of the Court on the ultimate issue presented in these cases, the future of capital punishment in this country has been left in an uncertain limbo. Rather than providing a final and unambiguous answer on the basic constitutional question, the collective unpact of the majority's ruling is to demand an undetermined measure of change from the various state legislatures and the Congress.' 408 U.S., at 403, 92 S.Ct., at 2811 (dissenting opinion).

In any case, when considered in light of the experience since the turn of this century, where more than one-third of American jurisdictions have consistently provided the death penalty for rape, the plurality's focus on the experience of the immediate past must be viewed as truly disingenuous. Having in mind the swift changes in positions of some Members of this Court in the short span of five years, can it rationally be considered a relevant indicator of what our society deems 'cruel and unusual' to look solely to what legislatures have refrained from doing under conditions of great uncertainty arising from our less than lucid holdings on the Eighth Amendment? Far more representative of societal mores of the 20th century is the accepted *615 practice in a substantial number of jurisdictions preceding the Furman decision. '(The) problem . . . is the suddenness of the Court's perception of progress in the human attitude since 2878 decisions of only a short while ago.' Furman v. Georgia, supra, at 410, 92 S.Ct., at 2814 (Blackmun, J., dissenting). Cf. Rudolph v. Alabama, 375 U.S. 889, 84 S.Ct. 155, 11 L.Ed.2d 119 (1963).

However, even were one to give the most charitable acceptance to the plurality's statistical analysis, it still does not, to my mind, support its conclusion. The most that can be claimed is that for the past year Georgia has been the only State whose adult rape death penalty statute has not otherwise been invalidated; two other state legislatures had enacted rape death penalty statutes in the last five years, but these were invalidated for reasons unrelated to rape under the Court's decisions last Term. Woodson v. North Carolina, 428 U.S. 280, 96 S.Ct. 2978, 49 L.Ed.2d 944 (1976); Roberts v. Louisiana, 428 U.S. 325, 96 S.Ct. 3001, 49 L.Ed.2d 974 (1976). Even if these figures could be read as indicating that no other States view the death penalty as an appropriate punishment for the rape of an adult woman, it would not necessarily follow that Georgia's imposition of such sanction violates the Eighth Amendment.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

The Court has repeatedly pointed to the reserve strength of our federal system which allows state legislatures, within broad limits, to experiment with laws, both criminal and civil, in the effort to achieve socially desirable results. See, e. g., Whalen v. Roe, 429 U.S. 589, 597-598, and n. 22, 97 S.Ct. 869, 875-876, 51 L.Ed.2d 64 (1977); Johnson v. Louisiana, 406 U.S. 356, 376, 92 S.Ct. 1620, 1641, 32 L.Ed.2d 152 (1972) (opinion of Powell, J.); California v. Green, 399 U.S. 149, 184-185, 90 S.Ct. 1930, 1948-1949, 26 L.Ed.2d 489 (1970) (Harlan, J., concurring); Fay v. New York, 332 U.S. 261, 296, 67 S.Ct. 1613, 1631, 91 L.Ed. 2043 (1947). Various provisions of the Constitution, including the Eighth Amendment and the Due Process Clause, of course place substantive limitations on the type of experimentation a State may undertake. However, as the plurality admits, the crime of rape is second perhaps only to murder in its gravity. It follows then that Georgia did not approach 616 such substantive constraints by enacting the statute here in question. See also infra at 2879-2881.

Statutory provisions in criminal justice applied in one part of the country can be carefully watched by other state legislatures, so that the experience of one State becomes available to all. Although human lives are in the balance, it must be remembered that failure to allow flexibility may also jeopardize human lives those of the victims of undeterred criminal conduct. See, infra, at 2880.Our concern for the accused ought not foreclose legislative judgments showing a modicum of consideration for the potential victims.

Three state legislatures have, in the past five years, determined that the taking of human life and the devastating consequences of rape will be minimized if rapists may, in a limited class of cases, be executed for their offenses.[FN10] That these States are presently a minority does not, in my view, make their judgment less worthy of deference. Our concern for human life must not be confined to the guilty; a state legislature is not to be thought insensitive to human values because it acts firmly to protect the lives and related values of the innocent. In this area the choices for legislatures are at best painful and difficult and deserve a high degree of deference. Only last Term Mr. Justice White observed:

> FN10. The statute here in question does not provide the death penalty for any and all rapes. Rather, the jury must find that at least one statutorily defined aggravated circumstance is present. Ga.Code ss 26-3102, 27-2534.1(b)(1), (2), and (7) (Supp.1976).

'It will not do to denigrate these legislative judgments as some form of vestigial savagery or as purely retributive in motivation; for they are solemn judgments, reasonably based, that imposition of the death penalty will save the lives of innocent persons. This concern for life and human values and the sincere efforts of the States to pursue them are matters of the greatest moment with which the judiciary should be most reluctant617 to interfere.'*2879 Roberts v. Louisiana, supra, 428 U.S., at 355, 96 S.Ct., at 3017 (dissenting opinion). (Emphasis added.)

The question of whether the death penalty is an appropriate punishment for rape is surely an open one. It is arguable that many prospective rapists would be deterred by the possibility that they could suffer death for their offense; it is also arguable that the death penalty would have only minimal deterrent effect.[FN11]It may well be that rape victims would become more willing to report the crime and aid in the apprehension of the criminals if they knew that community disapproval of rapists was sufficiently strong to inflict the extreme penalty; or perhaps they would be reluctant to cooperate in the prosecution of rapists if they knew that a conviction might result in the imposition of the death penalty. Quite possibly, the occasional, well-publicized execution of egregious rapists may cause citizens to feel greater security in their daily lives;[FN12] or, on the contrary, it may be that members of a civilized community will suffer the pangs of a heavy conscience because such punishment will be perceived as excessive.[FN13]We cannot know which among 618 this range of possibilities is correct, but today's holding forecloses the very exploration we have said federalism was intended to foster. It is difficult to believe that Georgia would long remain alone in punishing rape by death if the next decade demonstrated a drastic reduction in its incidence of rape, an increased cooperation by rape victims in the apprehension and prosecution of rapists, and a greater confidence in the rule of law on the part of the populace.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

FN11.'The value of capital punishment as a deterrent of crime is a complex factual issue the resolution of which properly rests with the legislatures, which can evaluate the results of statistical studies in terms of their own local conditions and with a flexibility of approach that is not available to the courts. Furman v. Georgia, (408 U.S.,) at 403-405, 92 S.Ct., at 2810-2812 (Burger, C. J., dissenting).' Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S., at 186, 96 S.Ct., at 2931 (joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and Stevens, JJ.).

FN12.'There are many cases in which the sordid, heinous nature of a particular (rape), demeaning, humiliating, and often physically or psychologically traumatic, will call for public condemnation.' Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S., at 459, 92 S.Ct., at 2839 (Powell, J., dissenting).

FN13. Obviously I have no special competence to make these judgments, but by the same token no other Member of the Court is competent to make a contrary judgment. This is why our system has, until now, left these difficult policy choices to the state legislatures, which may be no wiser, but surely are more attuned to the mores of their communities, then are we.

In order for Georgia's legislative program to develop it must be given time to take effect so that data may be evaluated for comparison with the experience of States which have not enacted death penalty statutes. Today, the Court repudiates the State's solemn judgment on how best to deal with the crime of rape before anyone can know whether the death penalty is an effective deterrent for one of the most horrible of all crimes. And this is done a few short years after Mr. Justice Powell's excellent statement:

'In a period in our country's history when the frequency of (rape) is increasing alarmingly, it is indeed a grave event for the Court to take from the States whatever deterrent and retributive weight the death penalty retains.' Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S., at 459, 92 S.Ct., at 2839 (dissenting opinion) (footnote omitted).

To deprive States of this authority as the Court does, on the basis that '(t)he current judgment with respect to the death penalty for rape . . . weighs very heavily on the side of rejecting capital punishment as a suitable penalty for raping an adult woman,'ante, at 2867, is impermissibly rash. The current judgment of some Members of this Court has undergone significant change in the short time since Furman.[FN14]Social *2880 change on great issues generally reveals itself in small increments, and the 'current judgment' of many States could 619 well be altered on the basis of Georgia's experience, were we to allow its statute to stand.[FN15]

FN14. Indeed as recently as 1971 a year before Furman a majority of this Court appeared to have no doubt about the constitutionality of the death penalty. See McGautha v. California, 402 U.S. 183, 91 S.Ct. 1454, 28 L.Ed.2d 711 (1971).

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

FN15. To paraphrase Mr. Justice Powell, '(w)hat (the Court is) saying, in effect, is that the evolutionary process has come suddenly to an end; that the ultimate wisdom as to the appropriateness of capital punishment (for adult rape) under all circumstances, and for all future generations, has somehow been revealed.' Furman v. Georgia, supra, at 430-431, 92 S.Ct., at 2824 (dissenting opinion).

(b)

The subjective judgment that the death penalty is simply disproportionate to the crime of rape is even more disturbing than the 'objective' analysis discussed supra. The plurality's conclusion on this point is based upon the bare fact that murder necessarily results in the physical death of the victim, while rape does not. Ante, at 2869, 2870. However, no Member of the Court explains why this distinction has relevance, much less constitutional significance. It is, after all, not irrational nor constitutionally impermissible for a legislature to make the penalty more severe than the criminal act it punishes[FN16] in the hope it would deter wrongdoing:

FN16. For example, hardly any thief would be deterred from stealing if the only punishment upon being caught were return of the money stolen.

'We may not require the legislature to select the least severe penalty possible so long as the penalty selected is not cruelly inhumane or disproportionate to the crime involved.' Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S., at 175, 96 S.Ct., at 2926.

Accord, Furman v. Georgia, supra, 408 U.S., at 451, 92 S.Ct., at 2834 (Powell, J., dissenting).

It begs the question to state, as does the plurality opinion:

'Life is over for the victim of the murderer; for the rape victim, life may not be nearly so happy as it was, but it is not over and normally is not beyond repair.'Ante, at 2869.

620 Until now, the issue under the Eighth Amendment has not been the state of any particular victim after the crime, but rather whether the punishment imposed is grossly disproportionate to the evil committed by the perpetrator. See Gregg v. Georgia, supra, at 173, 96 S.Ct., at 2925; Furman v. Georgia, supra, at 458, 92 S.Ct., at 2838 (Powell, J., dissenting). As a matter of constitutional principle, that test cannot have the primitive simplicity of 'life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth.'Rather States must be permitted to engage in a more sophisticated weighing of values in dealing with criminal activity which consistently poses serious danger of death or grave bodily harm. If innocent life and limb are to be preserved I see no constitutional barrier in punishing by death all who engage in such activity, regardless of whether the risk comes to fruition in any particular instance. See Packer, 77 Harv.L.Rev., at 1077-1079.

Only one year ago the Court held it constitutionally permissible to impose the death penalty for the crime of murder, provided that certain procedural safeguards are followed. Compare Gregg v. Georgia, supra; Proffitt v. Florida, 428 U.S. 242, 96 S.Ct. 2960, 49 L.Ed.2d 913 (1976), and Jurek v. Texas, 428 U.S. 262, 96 S.Ct. 2950, 49 L.Ed.2d 929 (1976), with Roberts v. Louisiana, 428 U.S. 325, 96 S.Ct. 3001, 49 L.Ed.2d 974 (1976), and Woodson v. North Carolina, 428 U.S. 280, 96 S.Ct. 2978, 49 L.Ed.2d 944 (1976). Today, the plurality readily admits that '(s)hort of homicide, (rape) is the 'ultimate violation of self."Ante, at 2868. Moreover, as stated by Mr. Justice Powell:

'The threat of serious injury is implicit in the definition of rape; the victim is either forced into submission by physical violence or by the threat of violence.' Furman v. Georgia, supra, 408 U.S., at 460, 92 S.Ct., at 2839 (dissenting opinion).

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

2881 Rape thus is not a crime 'light years' removed from murder in the degree of its heinousness; it certainly poses a serious potential danger to the life and safety of innocent victims apart from the devastating psychic consequences. It would *621 seem to follow therefore that, affording the States proper leeway under the broad standard of the Eighth Amendment, [FN17] murder is properly punishable by death, rape should be also, if that is the considered judgment of the legislators.

> FN17. Mr. Justice Stewart, Mr. Justice Powell, and Mr. Justice Stevens in Gregg v. Georgia noted: '(I)n assessing a punishment selected by a democratically elected legislature against the constitutional measure (of the Eighth Amendment), we presume its validity. . . . (A) heavy burden rests on those who would attack the judgment of the representatives of the people.' 428 U.S., at 175, 96 S.Ct., at 2926 (emphasis added). Accord, Furman v. Georgia, supra, 408 U.S., at 451, 92 S.Ct., at 2834 (Powell, J., dissenting).
>
> The reason for this special deference to state legislative enactments was described:
>
> 'This is true in part because the constitutional test is interwined with an assessment of contemporary standards and the legislative judgment weighs heavily in ascertaining such standards. '(I)n a democratic society legislatures, not courts, are constituted to respond to the will and consequently the moral values of the people.' Furman v. Georgia, (408 U.S.,) at 383, 92 S.Ct., at 2800 (Burger, C. J., dissenting).' 428 U.S., at 175-176, 96 S.Ct., at 2926.

The Court's conclusion to the contrary is very disturbing indeed. The clear implication of today's holding appears to be that the death penalty may be properly imposed only as to crimes resulting in death of the victim. This casts serious doubt upon the constitutional validity of statutes imposing the death penalty for a variety of conduct which, though dangerous, may not necessarily result in any immediate death, e. g., treason, airplane hijacking, and kidnaping. In that respect, today's holding does even more harm than is initially apparent. We cannot avoid taking judicial notice that crimes such as airplane hijacking, kidnaping, and mass terrorist activity constitute a serious and increasing danger to the safety of the public. It would be unfortunate indeed if the effect of today's holding were to inhibit States and the Federal Government from experimenting with various remedies including possibly imposition of the penalty of death to prevent and deter such crimes.

*622 Some sound observations, made only a few years ago, deserve repetition:

'Our task here, as must so frequently be emphasized and re-emphasized, is to pass upon the constitutionality of legislation that has been enacted and that is challenged. This is the sole task for judges. We should not allow our personal preferences as to the wisdom of legislative and congressional action, or our distaste for such action, to guide our judicial decision in cases such as these. The temptations to cross that policy line are very great. In fact, as today's decision reveals, they are almost irresistible.' Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S., at 411, 92 S.Ct., at 2815 (Blackmun, J., dissenting).

Whatever our individual views as to the wisdom of capital punishment, I cannot agree that it is constitutionally impermissible for a state legislature to make the 'solemn judgment' to impose such penalty for the crime of rape. Accordingly, I would leave to the States the task of legislating in this area of the law.

U.S.Ga., 1977.
Coker v. Georgia
433 U.S. 584, 97 S.Ct. 2861, 53 L.Ed.2d 982

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

END OF DOCUMENT

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Supreme Court of the United States
Daryl Renard ATKINS, Petitioner,
v.
VIRGINIA.
No. 00-8452.

Argued Feb. 20, 2002.
Decided June 20, 2002.

Defendant was convicted, in the Circuit Court, York County, N. Prentis Smiley, Jr., J., of capital murder and was sentenced to death. The Virginia Supreme Court affirmed the conviction, 257 Va. 160, 510 S.E.2d 445, and sentence, 260 Va. 375, 534 S.E.2d 312.Certiorari was granted. The Supreme Court, Justice Stevens, held that executions of mentally retarded criminals were "cruel and unusual punishments" prohibited by Eighth Amendment, abrogating Penry v. Lynaugh, 109 S.Ct. 2934.

Reversed and remanded.

Chief Justice Rehnquist dissented and filed opinion in which Justices Scalia and Thomas joined.

Justice Scalia dissented and filed opinion in which Chief Justice Rehnquist and Justice Thomas joined.

West Headnotes

[1] Sentencing and Punishment 350H 1482

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HVII Cruel and Unusual Punishment in General
350HVII(E) Excessiveness and Proportionality of Sentence
350Hk1482 k. Proportionality. Most Cited Cases
Punishment is "excessive," and therefore prohibited by Eighth Amendment, if it is not graduated and proportioned to offense. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 8.

[2] Sentencing and Punishment 350H 1435

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HVII Cruel and Unusual Punishment in General
350HVII(A) In General
350Hk1434 Scope of Prohibition
350Hk1435 k. In General. Most Cited Cases
Claim that punishment is unconstitutionally excessive is judged by currently prevailing standards of decency. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 8.

[3] Sentencing and Punishment 350H 1480

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HVII Cruel and Unusual Punishment in General
350HVII(E) Excessiveness and Proportionality of Sentence
350Hk1480 k. In General. Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 110k1480)

Sentencing and Punishment 350H 1483

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HVII Cruel and Unusual Punishment in General
350HVII(E) Excessiveness and Proportionality of Sentence
350Hk1483 k. Punishment Authorized by Statute. Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 110k1483)
Determination of whether punishment in particular case is unconstitutionally excessive in light of evolving community standards should be informed by objective factors to maximum possible extent, with clearest and most reliable one being legislation enacted by country's legislatures. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 8.

[4] Criminal Law 110 1134.75

110 Criminal Law
110XXIV Review
110XXIV(L) Scope of Review in General
110XXIV(L)8 Sentencing
110k1134.75 k. In General. Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 110k1134(3))

Sentencing and Punishment 350H 1480

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HVII Cruel and Unusual Punishment in General
350HVII(E) Excessiveness and Proportionality of

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Sentence
350Hk1480 k. In General. Most Cited Cases
In deciding whether punishment in particular case is unconstitutionally excessive, Supreme Court may bring its own judgment to bear by asking whether there is reason to agree or disagree with judgment reached by citizenry and its legislators. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 8.

[5] Sentencing and Punishment 350H 1642

350H Sentencing and Punishment
350HVIII The Death Penalty
350HVIII(B) Persons Eligible
350Hk1642 k. Mentally Retarded Persons. Most Cited Cases
Execution of mentally retarded criminal is unconstitutionally "cruel and unusual punishment," abrogating Penry v. Lynaugh, 109 S.Ct. 2934.

2242 304 Syllabus FN

FN* The syllabus constitutes no part of the opinion of the Court but has been prepared by the Reporter of Decisions for the convenience of the reader. See United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co., 200 U.S. 321, 337, 26 S.Ct. 282, 50 L.Ed. 499.

Petitioner Atkins was convicted of capital murder and related crimes by a Virginia jury and sentenced to death. Affirming, the Virginia Supreme Court relied on Penry v. Lynaugh, 492 U.S. 302, 109 S.Ct. 2934, 106 L.Ed.2d 256, in rejecting Atkins' contention that he could not be sentenced to death because he is mentally retarded.

2243 Held: Executions of mentally retarded criminals are "cruel and unusual punishments" prohibited by the Eighth Amendment. Pp. 2246-2252.

(a) A punishment is "excessive," and therefore prohibited by the Amendment, if it is not graduated and proportioned to the offense. E.g., Weems v. United States, 217 U.S. 349, 367, 30 S.Ct. 544, 54 L.Ed. 793. An excessiveness claim is judged by currently prevailing standards of decency. Trop v. Dulles, 356 U.S. 86, 100-101, 78 S.Ct. 590, 2 L.Ed.2d 630. Proportionality review under such evolving standards should be informed by objective factors to the maximum possible extent, see, e.g., Harmelin v. Michigan, 501 U.S. 957, 1000, 111 S.Ct. 2680, 115 L.Ed.2d 836, the clearest and most reliable of which is the legislation enacted by the country's legislatures, Penry, 492 U.S., at 331, 109 S.Ct. 2934. In addition to objective evidence, the Constitution contemplates that this Court will bring its own judgment to bear by asking whether there is reason to agree or disagree with the judgment reached by the citizenry and its legislators, e.g., Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584, 597, 97 S.Ct. 2861, 53 L.Ed.2d 982.Pp. 2246-2248.

(b) Much has changed since Penry's conclusion that the two state statutes then existing that prohibited such executions, even when added to the 14 States that had rejected capital punishment completely, did not provide sufficient evidence of a consensus. 492 U.S., at 334, 109 S.Ct. 2934. Subsequently, a significant number of States have concluded that death is not a suitable punishment for a mentally retarded criminal, and similar bills have passed at least one house in other States. It is not so much the number of these States that is significant, but the consistency of the direction of change. Given that anticrime legislation is far more popular than legislation protecting violent criminals, the large number of States prohibiting the execution of mentally retarded persons (and the complete absence of legislation reinstating such executions) provides powerful evidence that today society views mentally retarded offenders as categorically less culpable than the average criminal. The evidence carries even greater force when it is noted that the legislatures addressing the issue have voted overwhelmingly in favor of the prohibition. *305 Moreover, even in States allowing the execution of mentally retarded offenders, the practice is uncommon. Pp. 2248-2250.

(c) An independent evaluation of the issue reveals no reason for the Court to disagree with the legislative consensus. Clinical definitions of mental retardation require not only subaverage intellectual functioning, but also significant limitations in adaptive skills. Mentally retarded persons frequently know the difference between right and wrong and are competent to stand trial, but, by definition, they have diminished capacities to understand and process information, to communicate, to abstract from mistakes and learn from experience, to engage in logical reasoning, to control impulses, and to understand others' reactions. Their deficiencies do not warrant an exemption from criminal sanctions, but diminish their personal culpability. In light of these deficiencies, the Court's death penalty jurisprudence provides two reasons to agree with the legislative consensus. First, there is a serious question whether either justification underpinning the death penalty-retribution and deterrence of capital crimes-applies to mentally retarded offenders. As to retribution, the severity of the appropriate punishment necessarily depends on the offender's culpability. If the culpability of the average murderer is insufficient to justify imposition of death, see Godfrey v. Georgia, 446 U.S. 420, 433, 100 S.Ct. 1759, 64 L.Ed.2d 398, the lesser culpability of the mentally retarded offender surely does not merit that form of retribution. As to deterrence, the same cognitive and behavioral impairments that make mentally retarded defendants less morally culpable *2244 also make it less likely that they can process the information of the possibility of execution as a penalty and, as a result, control their conduct based upon that information. Nor will exempting the mentally retarded from execution lessen the death penalty's deterrent effect with respect to offenders who are not mentally retarded. Second, mentally retarded defendants in the aggregate face a special risk of wrongful execution because of the possibility that they will unwittingly confess to crimes they did not commit, their lesser ability to give their counsel meaningful assistance, and the facts that they are typically poor witnesses and that their demeanor may create an unwarranted impression of lack of remorse for their crimes. Pp. 2250-2252.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

260 Va. 375, 534 S.E.2d 312, reversed and remanded.

STEVENS, J., delivered the opinion of the Court, in which O'CONNOR, KENNEDY, SOUTER, GINSBURG, and BREYER, JJ., joined. REHNQUIST, C.J., filed a dissenting opinion, in which SCALIAand THOMAS, JJ., joined, post, p. 2252. SCALIA, J., filed a dissenting opinion, in which REHNQUIST, C.J., and THOMAS, J., joined, post, p. 2259.

306 James W. Ellis, for the petitioner.

Pamela A. Rumpz, for the respondent.

For U.S. Supreme Court briefs, see:2001 WL 1663817 (Pet.Brief)2002 WL 63726 (Resp.Brief)2002 WL 225883 (Reply.Brief)

Justice STEVENS delivered the opinion of the Court.

Those mentally retarded persons who meet the law's requirements for criminal responsibility should be tried and punished when they commit crimes. Because of their disabilities in areas of reasoning, judgment, and control of their impulses, however, they do not act with the level of moral culpability that characterizes the most serious adult criminal conduct. Moreover, their impairments can jeopardize the 307 reliability and fairness of capital proceedings against mentally retarded defendants. Presumably for these reasons, in the 13 years since we decided Penry v. Lynaugh, 492 U.S. 302, 109 S.Ct. 2934, 106 L.Ed.2d 256 (1989), the American public, legislators, scholars, and judges have deliberated over the question whether the death penalty should ever be imposed on a mentally retarded criminal. The consensus reflected in those deliberations informs our answer to the question presented by this case: whether such executions are "cruel and unusual punishments" prohibited by the Eighth Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

I

Petitioner, Daryl Renard Atkins, was convicted of abduction, armed robbery, and capital murder, and sentenced to death. At approximately midnight on August 16, 1996, Atkins and William Jones, armed with a semiautomatic handgun, abducted Eric Nesbitt, robbed him of the money on his person, drove him to an automated teller machine in his pickup truck where cameras recorded their withdrawal of additional cash, then took him to an isolated location where he was shot eight times and killed.

Jones and Atkins both testified in the guilt phase of Atkins' trial.[FN1] Each confirmed most of the details in the other's account of the incident, with the important exception that each stated that the other had actually shot and killed Nesbitt. Jones' testimony, which was both more coherent and credible than Atkins', was obviously credited by the jury and was *2245 sufficient to establish Atkins' guilt.[FN2] At the penalty 308 phase of the trial, the State introduced victim impact evidence and proved two aggravating circumstances: future dangerousness and "vileness of the offense." To prove future dangerousness, the State relied on Atkins' prior felony convictions as well as the testimony of four victims of earlier robberies and assaults. To prove the second aggravator, the prosecution relied upon the trial record, including pictures of the deceased's body and the autopsy report.

FN1. Initially, both Jones and Atkins were indicted for capital murder. The prosecution ultimately permitted Jones to plead guilty to first-degree murder in exchange for his testimony against Atkins. As a result of the plea, Jones became ineligible to receive the death penalty.

FN2. Highly damaging to the credibility of Atkins' testimony was its substantial inconsistency with the statement he gave to the police upon his arrest. Jones, in contrast, had declined to make an initial statement to the authorities.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

In the penalty phase, the defense relied on one witness, Dr. Evan Nelson, a forensic psychologist who had evaluated Atkins before trial and concluded that he was "mildly mentally retarded." [FN3] His conclusion was based on interviews with people who knew Atkins,[FN4] a review of school and court 309 records, and the administration of a standard intelligence test which indicated that Atkins had a full scale IQ of 59.[FN5]

FN3. The American Association on Mental Retardation (AAMR) defines mental retardation as follows: "Mental retardation refers to substantial limitations in present functioning. It is characterized by significantly subaverage intellectual functioning, existing concurrently with related limitations in two or more of the following applicable adaptive skill areas: communication, self-care, home living, social skills, community use, self-direction, health and safety, functional academics, leisure, and work. Mental retardation manifests before age 18." Mental Retardation: Definition, Classification, and Systems of Supports 5 (9th ed.1992).

The American Psychiatric Association's definition is similar: "The essential feature of Mental Retardation is significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning (Criterion A) that is accompanied by significant limitations in adaptive functioning in at least two of the following skill areas: communication, self-care, home living, social/interpersonal skills, use of community resources, self-direction, functional academic skills, work, leisure, health, and safety (Criterion B). The onset must occur before age 18 years (Criterion C). Mental Retardation has many different etiologies and may be seen as a final common pathway of various pathological processes that affect the functioning of the central nervous system." Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders 41 (4th ed.2000). "Mild" mental retardation is typically used to describe people with an IQ level of 50-55 to approximately 70. Id., at 42-43.

FN4. The doctor interviewed Atkins, members of his family, and deputies at the jail where he had been incarcerated for the preceding 18 months. Dr. Nelson also reviewed the statements that Atkins had given to the police and the investigative reports concerning this case.

FN5. Dr. Nelson administered the Wechsler Adult Intelligence Scales test (WAIS-III), the standard instrument in the United States for assessing intellectual functioning. AAMR, Mental Retardation, supra. The WAIS-III is scored by adding together the number of points earned on different subtests, and using a mathematical formula to convert this raw score into a scaled score. The test measures an intelligence range from 45 to 155. The mean score of the test is 100, which means that a person receiving a score of 100 is considered to have an average level of cognitive functioning. A. Kaufman & E. Lichtenberger, Essentials of WAISIII Assessment 60 (1999). It is estimated that between 1 and 3 percent of the population has an IQ between 70 and 75 or lower, which is typically considered the cutoff IQ score for the intellectual function prong of the mental retardation definition. 2 Kaplan & Sadock's Comprehensive Textbook of Psychiatry 2952 (B. Sadock & V. Sadock eds. 7th ed.2000).

At the sentencing phase, Dr. Nelson testified: "[Atkins'] full scale IQ is 59. Compared to the population at large, that means less than one percentile .... Mental retardation is a relatively rare thing. It's about one percent of the population." App. 274. According to Dr. Nelson, Atkins' IQ score "would automatically qualify for Social Security disability income." Id., at 280. Dr. Nelson also indicated that of the over 40 capital defendants that he had evaluated, Atkins was only the second individual who met the criteria for mental retardation. Id., at 310. He testified that, in his opinion, Atkins' limited intellect had been a consistent feature throughout his life, and that his IQ score of 59 is not an "aberration, malingered result, or invalid test score." Id., at 308.

The jury sentenced Atkins to death, but the Virginia Supreme Court ordered a second*2246 sentencing hearing because the trial court had used a misleading verdict form. 257 Va. 160, 510 S.E.2d 445 (1999). At the resentencing, Dr. Nelson again testified. The State presented an expert rebuttal witness, Dr. Stanton Samenow, who expressed the opinion that Atkins was not mentally retarded, but rather was of "average intelligence, at least," and diagnosable as having antisocial personality disorder.[FN6] App. 476. The jury again sentenced Atkins to death.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

> FN6. Dr. Samenow's testimony was based upon two interviews with Atkins, a review of his school records, and interviews with correctional staff. He did not administer an intelligence test, but did ask Atkins questions taken from the 1972 version of the Wechsler Memory Scale. Id., at 524-525, 529. Dr. Samenow attributed Atkins' "academic performance [that was] by and large terrible" to the fact that he "is a person who chose to pay attention sometimes, not to pay attention others, and did poorly because he did not want to do what he was required to do." Id., at 480-481.

310 The Supreme Court of Virginia affirmed the imposition of the death penalty. 260 Va. 375, 385, 534 S.E.2d 312, 318 (2000). Atkins did not argue before the Virginia Supreme Court that his sentence was disproportionate to penalties imposed for similar crimes in Virginia, but he did contend "that he is mentally retarded and thus cannot be sentenced to death." Id., at 386, 534 S.E.2d, at 318. The majority of the state court rejected this contention, relying on our holding in Penry. 260 Va., at 387, 534 S.E.2d, at 319. The court was "not willing to commute Atkins' sentence of death to life imprisonment merely because of his IQ score." Id., at 390, 534 S.E.2d, at 321.

Justice Hassell and Justice Koontz dissented. They rejected Dr. Samenow's opinion that Atkins possesses average intelligence as "incredulous as a matter of law," and concluded that "the imposition of the sentence of death upon a criminal defendant who has the mental age of a child between the ages of 9 and 12 is excessive." Id., at 394, 395-396, 534 S.E.2d, at 323-324. In their opinion, "it is indefensible to conclude that individuals who are mentally retarded are not to some degree less culpable for their criminal acts. By definition, such individuals have substantial limitations not shared by the general population. A moral and civilized society diminishes itself if its system of justice does not afford recognition and consideration of those limitations in a meaningful way." Id., at 397, 534 S.E.2d, at 325.

Because of the gravity of the concerns expressed by the dissenters, and in light of the dramatic shift in the state legislative landscape that has occurred in the past 13 years, we granted certiorari to revisit the issue that we first addressed in the Penry case. 533 U.S. 976, 122 S.Ct. 24, 150 L.Ed.2d 805 (2001).

311 II

[1] The Eighth Amendment succinctly prohibits "[e]xcessive" sanctions. It provides: "Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted." In Weems v. United States, 217 U.S. 349, 30 S.Ct. 544, 54 L.Ed. 793 (1910), we held that a punishment of 12 years jailed in irons at hard and painful labor for the crime of falsifying records was excessive. We explained "that it is a precept of justice that punishment for crime should be graduated and proportioned to [the] offense." Id., at 367, 30 S.Ct. 544. We have repeatedly applied this proportionality precept in later cases interpreting the Eighth Amendment. See Harmelin v. Michigan, 501 U.S. 957, 997-998, 111 S.Ct. 2680, 115 L.Ed.2d 836 (1991) (KENNEDY, J., concurring in part and concurring in judgment); see also id., at 1009-1011, 111 S.Ct. 2680 (White, J., dissenting).[FN7] Thus, even *2247 though "imprisonment for ninety days is not, in the abstract, a punishment which is either cruel or unusual," it may not be imposed as a penalty for "the 'status' of narcotic addiction," Robinson v. California, 370 U.S. 660, 666-667, 82 S.Ct. 1417, 8 L.Ed.2d 758 (1962), because such a sanction would be excessive. As Justice Stewart explained in Robinson: "Even one day in prison would be a cruel and unusual punishment for the 'crime' of having a common cold." Id., at 667, 82 S.Ct. 1417.

> FN7. Thus, we have read the text of the Amendment to prohibit all excessive punishments, as well as cruel and unusual punishments that may or may not be excessive.

[2] A claim that punishment is excessive is judged not by the standards that prevailed in 1685 when Lord Jeffreys presided over the "Bloody Assizes" or when the Bill of Rights was adopted, but rather by those that currently prevail. As Chief Justice Warren explained in his opinion in Trop v. Dulles, 356 U.S. 86, 78 S.Ct. 590, 2 L.Ed.2d 630 (1958): "The basic concept underlying the Eighth Amendment is nothing less than the dignity of man.... The Amendment must draw its meaning from the 312 evolving standards of decency that mark the progress of a maturing society." Id., at 100-101, 78 S.Ct. 590.

[3] Proportionality review under those evolving standards should be informed by " 'objective factors to the maximum possible extent,' " see Harmelin, 501 U.S., at 1000, 111 S.Ct. 2680 (quoting Rummel v. Estelle, 445 U.S. 263, 274-275, 100 S.Ct. 1133, 63 L.Ed.2d 382 (1980)). We have pinpointed that the "clearest and most reliable objective evidence of contemporary values is the legislation enacted by the country's legislatures." Penry, 492 U.S., at 331, 109 S.Ct. 2934. Relying in part on such legislative evidence, we have held that death is an impermissibly excessive punishment for the rape of an adult woman, Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584, 593-596, 97 S.Ct. 2861, 53 L.Ed.2d 982 (1977), or for a defendant who neither took life, attempted to take life, nor intended to take life, Enmund v. Florida, 458 U.S. 782, 789-793, 102 S.Ct. 3368, 73 L.Ed.2d 1140 (1982). In Coker, we focused primarily on the then-recent legislation that had been enacted in response to our decision 10 years earlier in Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 92 S.Ct. 2726, 33 L.Ed.2d 346 (1972)(per curiam), to support the conclusion that the "current judgment," though "not wholly unanimous," weighed very heavily on the side of rejecting capital punishment as a "suitable penalty for raping an adult woman." Coker, 433 U.S., at 596, 97 S.Ct. 2861. The "current legislative judgment" relevant to our decision in Enmund was less clear than in Coker but "nevertheless weigh[ed] on the side of rejecting capital punishment for the crime at issue." Enmund, 458 U.S., at 793, 102 S.Ct. 3368.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

[4] We also acknowledged in Coker that the objective evidence, though of great importance, did not "wholly determine" the controversy, "for the Constitution contemplates that in the end our own judgment will be brought to bear on the question of the acceptability of the death penalty under the Eighth Amendment." 433 U.S., at 597, 97 S.Ct. 2861. For example, in Enmund, we concluded by expressing our own judgment about the issue:

"For purposes of imposing the death penalty, Enmund's criminal culpability must be limited to his participation 313 in the robbery, and his punishment must be tailored to his personal responsibility and moral guilt. Putting Enmund to death to avenge two killings that he did not commit and had no intention of committing or causing does not measurably contribute to the retributive end of ensuring that the criminal gets his just deserts. This is the judgment of most of the legislatures that have recently addressed the matter, and we have no reason to disagree with that judgment for purposes of construing and applying the Eighth Amendment." 458 U.S., at 801, 102 S.Ct. 3368 (emphasis added).

Thus, in cases involving a consensus, our own judgment is "brought to bear," Coker, 433 U.S., at 597, 97 S.Ct. 2861, by asking whether there is reason to disagree with *2248 the judgment reached by the citizenry and its legislators.

Guided by our approach in these cases, we shall first review the judgment of legislatures that have addressed the suitability of imposing the death penalty on the mentally retarded and then consider reasons for agreeing or disagreeing with their judgment.

III

The parties have not called our attention to any state legislative consideration of the suitability of imposing the death penalty on mentally retarded offenders prior to 1986. In that year, the public reaction to the execution of a mentally retarded murderer in Georgia [FN8] apparently led to the enactment314 of the first state statute prohibiting such executions.[FN9] In 1988, when Congress enacted legislation reinstating the federal death penalty, it expressly provided that a "sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a person who is mentally retarded." [FN10] In 1989, Maryland enacted a similar prohibition.[FN11] It was in that year that we decided Penry, and concluded that those two state enactments, "even when added to the 14 States that have rejected capital punishment completely, do not provide sufficient evidence at present of a national consensus." 492 U.S., at 334, 109 S.Ct. 2934.

FN8. Jerome Bowden, who was identified as having mental retardation when he was 14 years old, was scheduled for imminent execution in Georgia in June 1986. The Georgia Board of Pardons and Paroles granted a stay following public protests over his execution. A psychologist selected by the State evaluated Bowden and determined that he had an IQ of 65, which is consistent with mental retardation. Nevertheless, the board lifted the stay and Bowden was executed the following day. The board concluded that Bowden understood the nature of his crime and his punishment and therefore that execution, despite his mental deficiencies, was permissible. See Montgomery, Bowden's Execution Stirs Protest, Atlanta Journal, Oct. 13, 1986, p. A1.

FN9. Ga.Code Ann. § 17-7-131(j) (Supp.1988).

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

FN10. The Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988, Pub.L. 100-690, § 7001(l), 102 Stat. 4390, 21 U.S.C. § 848(l). Congress expanded the federal death penalty law in 1994. It again included a provision that prohibited any individual with mental retardation from being sentenced to death or executed. Federal Death Penalty Act of 1994, 18 U.S.C. § 3596(c).

FN11. Md. Ann.Code, Art. 27, § 412(f)(1) (1989).

Much has changed since then. Responding to the national attention received by the Bowden execution and our decision in Penry, state legislatures across the country began to address the issue. In 1990, Kentucky and Tennessee enacted statutes similar to those in Georgia and Maryland, as did New Mexico in 1991, and Arkansas, Colorado, Washington, Indiana, and Kansas in 1993 and 1994.[FN12] In 1995, when New York reinstated its death penalty, it emulated the Federal Government by expressly exempting the mentally retarded.[FN13] Nebraska followed suit in 1998.[FN14] There appear 315 to have been no similar enactments during the next two years, but in 2000 and 2001 six more States-South Dakota, Arizona, Connecticut, Florida, Missouri, and North Carolina-joined the procession.[FN15] The Texas Legislature unanimously*2249 adopted a similar bill,[FN16] and bills have passed at least one house in other States, including Virginia and Nevada.[FN17]

FN12. Ky.Rev.Stat. Ann. §§ 532.130, 532.135, 532.140; Tenn.Code Ann. § 39-13-203; N.M. Stat. Ann. § 31-20A-2.1; Ark.Code Ann. § 5-4-618; Colo.Rev.Stat. § 16-9-401; Wash. Rev.Code § 10.95.030; Ind.Code §§ 35-36-9-2 through 35-36-9-6; Kan. Stat. Ann. § 21-4623.

FN13. N.Y.Crim. Proc. Law § 400.27. However, New York law provides that a sentence of death "may not be set aside ... upon the ground that the defendant is mentally retarded" if "the killing occurred while the defendant was confined or under custody in a state correctional facility or local correctional institution." N.Y.Crim. Proc. Law § 400.27.12(d) (McKinney 2001-2002 Interim Pocket Part).

FN14. Neb.Rev.Stat. § 28-105.01.

FN15. S.D. Codified Laws § 23A-27A-26.1; Ariz.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 13-703.02; Conn. Gen.Stat. § 53a-46a; Fla. Stat. § 921.137; Mo.Rev.Stat. § 565.030; 2001-346 N.C. Sess. Laws p. 45.

FN16. House Bill No. 236 passed the Texas House on April 24, 2001, and the Senate version, S. 686, passed the Texas Senate on May 16, 2001. Governor Perry vetoed the legislation on June 17, 2001. In his veto statement, the Texas Governor did not express dissatisfaction with the principle of categorically excluding the mentally retarded from the death penalty. In fact, he stated: "We do not execute mentally retarded murderers today." See Veto Proclamation for H.B. No. 236. Instead, his motivation to veto the bill was based upon what he perceived as a procedural flaw: "My opposition to this legislation focuses on a serious legal flaw in the bill. House Bill No. 236 would create a system whereby the jury and judge are asked to make the same determination based on two different sets of facts .... Also of grave concern is the fact that the provision that sets up this legally flawed process never received a public hearing during the legislative process." Ibid.

FN17. Virginia Senate Bill No. 497 (2002); House Bill No. 957 (2002); see also Nevada Assembly Bill 353 (2001). Furthermore, a commission on capital punishment in Illinois has recently recommended that Illinois adopt a statute prohibiting the execution of mentally retarded offenders. Report of the Governor's Commission on Capital Punishment 156 (Apr. 2002).

It is not so much the number of these States that is significant, but the consistency of the direction of change.[FN18] Given the well-known fact that anticrime legislation is far more popular than legislation providing protections for persons guilty of violent crime, the large number of States prohibiting the execution of mentally retarded persons (and the 316 complete absence of States passing legislation reinstating the power to conduct such executions) provides powerful evidence that today our society views mentally retarded offenders as categorically less culpable than the average criminal. The evidence carries even greater force when it is noted that the legislatures that have addressed the issue have voted overwhelmingly in favor of the prohibition.[FN19] Moreover, even in those States that allow the execution of mentally retarded offenders, the practice is uncommon. Some States, for example New Hampshire and New Jersey, continue to authorize executions, but none have been carried out in decades. Thus there is little need to pursue legislation barring the execution of the mentally retarded in those States. And it appears that even among those States that regularly execute offenders and that have no prohibition with regard to the mentally retarded, only five have executed offenders possessing a known IQ less than 70 since we decided Penry.[FN20] The practice, therefore, has become truly unusual, and it is fair to say that a national consensus has developed against it.[FN21]

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

FN18. A comparison to Stanford v. Kentucky, 492 U.S. 361, 109 S.Ct. 2969, 106 L.Ed.2d 306 (1989), in which we held that there was no national consensus prohibiting the execution of juvenile offenders over age 15, is telling. Although we decided Stanford on the same day as Penry, apparently only two state legislatures have raised the threshold age for imposition of the death penalty. Mont.Code Ann. § 45-5-102 (1999); Ind.Code § 35-50-2-3 (1998).

FN19. App. D to Brief for AAMR et al. as Amici Curiae.

FN20. Those States are Alabama, Texas, Louisiana, South Carolina, and Virginia. D. Keyes, W. Edwards, & R. Perske, People with Mental Retardation are Dying Legally, 35 Mental Retardation (Feb.1997) (updated by Death Penalty Information Center, available at http://www.advocacyone.org/deathpenalty. html (as visited June 18, 2002).

FN21. Additional evidence makes it clear that this legislative judgment reflects a much broader social and professional consensus. For example, several organizations with germane expertise have adopted official positions opposing the imposition of the death penalty upon a mentally retarded offender. See Brief for American Psychological Association et al. as Amici Curiae; Brief for AAMR et al. as Amici Curiae. In addition, representatives of widely diverse religious communities in the United States, reflecting Christian, Jewish, Muslim, and Buddhist traditions, have filed an amicus curiae brief explaining that even though their views about the death penalty differ, they all "share a conviction that the execution of persons with mental retardation cannot be morally justified." Brief for United States Catholic Conference et al. as Amici Curiae 2. Moreover, within the world community, the imposition of the death penalty for crimes committed by mentally retarded offenders is overwhelmingly disapproved. Brief for European Union as Amicus Curiae 4. Finally, polling data shows a widespread consensus among Americans, even those who support the death penalty, that executing the mentally retarded is wrong. Bonner & Rimer, Executing the Mentally Retarded Even as Laws Begin to Shift, N.Y. Times, Aug. 7, 2000, p. A1; App. B to Brief for AAMR, et al. as Amici Curiae (appending approximately 20 state and national polls on the issue). Although these factors are by no means dispositive, their consistency with the legislative evidence lends further support to our conclusion that there is a consensus among those who have addressed the issue. See Thompson v. Oklahoma, 487 U.S. 815, 830, 831, n. 31, 108 S.Ct. 2687, 101 L.Ed.2d 702 (1988) (considering the views of "respected professional organizations, by other nations that share our Anglo-American heritage, and by the leading members of the Western European community").

2250 *317 To the extent there is serious disagreement about the execution of mentally retarded offenders, it is in determining which offenders are in fact retarded. In this case, for instance, the Commonwealth of Virginia disputes that Atkins suffers from mental retardation. Not all people who claim to be mentally retarded will be so impaired as to fall within the range of mentally retarded offenders about whom there is a national consensus. As was our approach in Ford v. Wainwright, 477 U.S. 399, 106 S.Ct. 2595, 91 L.Ed.2d 335 (1986), with regard to insanity, "we leave to the State[s] the task of developing appropriate ways to enforce the constitutional restriction upon [their] execution of sentences." Id., at 405, 416-417, 106 S.Ct. 2595.[FN22]

FN22. The statutory definitions of mental retardation are not identical, but generally conform to the clinical definitions set forth in n. 3, supra.

IV

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

This consensus unquestionably reflects widespread judgment about the relative culpability of mentally retarded offenders, and the relationship between mental retardation and the penological purposes served by the death penalty. Additionally, it suggests that some characteristics of mental retardation undermine the strength of the procedural protections that our capital jurisprudence steadfastly guards.

318 As discussed above, clinical definitions of mental retardation require not only subaverage intellectual functioning, but also significant limitations in adaptive skills such as communication, self-care, and self-direction that became manifest before age 18. Mentally retarded persons frequently know the difference between right and wrong and are competent to stand trial. Because of their impairments, however, by definition they have diminished capacities to understand and process information, to communicate, to abstract from mistakes and learn from experience, to engage in logical reasoning, to control impulses, and to understand the reactions of others.[FN23] There is no evidence that they are more likely to engage in criminal conduct than others, but there is abundant evidence that they often act on impulse rather than pursuant to a premeditated plan, and that in group settings they are followers rather than leaders.[FN24] Their deficiencies*2251 do not warrant an exemption from criminal sanctions, but they do diminish their personal culpability.

FN23. J. McGee & F. Menolascino, The Evaluation of Defendants with Mental Retardation in the Criminal Justice System, in The Criminal Justice System and Mental Retardation 55, 58-60 (R. Conley, R. Luckasson, & G. Bouthilet eds.1992); Appelbaum & Appelbaum, Criminal-Justice Related Competencies in Defendants with Mental Retardation, 14 J. of Psychiatry & L. 483, 487-489 (Winter 1994).

FN24. See, e.g., Ellis & Luckasson, Mentally Retarded Criminal Defendants, 53 Geo. Wash. L.Rev. 414, 429 (1985); Levy-Shiff, Kedem, & Sevillia, Ego Identity in Mentally Retarded Adolescents, 94 Am. J. Mental Retardation 541, 547 (1990); Whitman, Self Regulation and Mental Retardation, 94 Am. J. Mental Retardation 347, 360 (1990); Everington & Fulero, Competence to Confess: Measuring Understanding and Suggestibility of Defendants with Mental Retardation, 37 Mental Retardation 212, 212-213, 535 (1999) (hereinafter Everington & Fulero).

In light of these deficiencies, our death penalty jurisprudence provides two reasons consistent with the legislative consensus that the mentally retarded should be categorically excluded from execution. First, there is a serious question as to whether either justification that we have recognized as 319 a basis for the death penalty applies to mentally retarded offenders. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 183, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 49 L.Ed.2d 859, (1976) (joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and STEVENS, JJ.), identified "retribution and deterrence of capital crimes by prospective offenders" as the social purposes served by the death penalty. Unless the imposition of the death penalty on a mentally retarded person "measurably contributes to one or both of these goals, it 'is nothing more than the purposeless and needless imposition of pain and suffering,' and hence an unconstitutional punishment." Enmund, 458 U.S., at 798, 102 S.Ct. 3368.

With respect to retribution-the interest in seeing that the offender gets his "just deserts"-the severity of the appropriate punishment necessarily depends on the culpability of the offender. Since Gregg, our jurisprudence has consistently confined the imposition of the death penalty to a narrow category of the most serious crimes. For example, in Godfrey v. Georgia, 446 U.S. 420, 100 S.Ct. 1759, 64 L.Ed.2d 398 (1980), we set aside a death sentence because the petitioner's crimes did not reflect "a consciousness materially more 'depraved' than that of any person guilty of murder." Id., at 433, 100 S.Ct. 1759. If the culpability of the average murderer is insufficient to justify the most extreme sanction available to the State, the lesser culpability of the mentally retarded offender surely does not merit that form of retribution. Thus, pursuant to our narrowing jurisprudence, which seeks to ensure that only the most deserving of execution are put to death, an exclusion for the mentally retarded is appropriate.

With respect to deterrence-the interest in preventing capital crimes by prospective offenders-"it seems likely that 'capital punishment can serve as a deterrent only when murder is the result of premeditation and deliberation,' " Enmund, 458 U.S., at 799, 102 S.Ct. 3368. Exempting the mentally retarded from that punishment will not affect the "cold calculus that precedes the decision" of other potential murderers. Gregg, 428 U.S., at 186, 96 S.Ct. 2909. Indeed, that sort of calculus is at the opposite end of the spectrum from behavior of mentally retarded 320 offenders. The theory of deterrence in capital sentencing is predicated upon the notion that the increased severity of the punishment will inhibit criminal actors from carrying out murderous conduct. Yet it is the same cognitive and behavioral impairments that make these defendants less morally culpable-for example, the diminished ability to understand and process information, to learn from experience, to engage in logical reasoning, or to control impulses-that also make it less likely that they can process the information of the possibility of execution as a penalty and, as a result, control their conduct based upon that information. Nor will exempting the mentally retarded from execution lessen the deterrent effect of the death penalty with respect to offenders who are not mentally retarded. Such individuals are unprotected by the exemption and will continue to face the threat of execution. Thus, executing the mentally retarded will not measurably further the goal of deterrence.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

The reduced capacity of mentally retarded offenders provides a second justification for a categorical rule making such offenders ineligible for the death penalty. The risk "that the death penalty will be imposed in spite of factors which may call for a less severe penalty," Lockett v. Ohio, 438 U.S. 586, 605, 98 S.Ct. 2954, 57 L.Ed.2d 973 (1978), is enhanced, not only by the 2252 possibility of false confessions,[FN25] but also by the lesser ability of mentally retarded defendants to make a persuasive showing of mitigation in the face of prosecutorial evidence of one or more aggravating factors. Mentally retarded defendants may be less able to give meaningful assistance to their counsel and *321 are typically poor witnesses, and their demeanor may create an unwarranted impression of lack of remorse for their crimes. As Penry demonstrated, moreover, reliance on mental retardation as a mitigating factor can be a two-edged sword that may enhance the likelihood that the aggravating factor of future dangerousness will be found by the jury. 492 U.S., at 323-325, 109 S.Ct. 2934. Mentally retarded defendants in the aggregate face a special risk of wrongful execution.

> FN25. See Everington & Fulero 212-213. Despite the heavy burden that the prosecution must shoulder in capital cases, we cannot ignore the fact that in recent years a disturbing number of inmates on death row have been exonerated. These exonerations have included at least one mentally retarded person who unwittingly confessed to a crime that he did not commit. See Baker, Death-Row Inmate Gets Clemency; Agreement Ends Days of Suspense, Washington Post, Jan. 15, 1994, p. A1.

[5] Our independent evaluation of the issue reveals no reason to disagree with the judgment of "the legislatures that have recently addressed the matter" and concluded that death is not a suitable punishment for a mentally retarded criminal. We are not persuaded that the execution of mentally retarded criminals will measurably advance the deterrent or the retributive purpose of the death penalty. Construing and applying the Eighth Amendment in the light of our "evolving standards of decency," we therefore conclude that such punishment is excessive and that the Constitution "places a substantive restriction on the State's power to take the life" of a mentally retarded offender. Ford, 477 U.S., at 405, 106 S.Ct. 2595.

The judgment of the Virginia Supreme Court is reversed and the case is remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

It is so ordered.

Chief Justice REHNQUIST, with whom Justice SCALIA and Justice THOMAS join, dissenting.
The question presented by this case is whether a national consensus deprives Virginia of the constitutional power to impose the death penalty on capital murder defendants like petitioner, i.e., those defendants who indisputably are competent to stand trial, aware of the punishment they are about to suffer and why, and whose mental retardation has been found an insufficiently compelling reason to lessen their individual responsibility for the crime. The Court pronounces *322 the punishment cruel and unusual primarily because 18 States recently have passed laws limiting the death eligibility of certain defendants based on mental retardation alone, despite the fact that the laws of 19 other States besides Virginia continue to leave the question of proper punishment to the individuated consideration of sentencing judges or juries familiar with the particular offender and his or her crime. See ante, at 2248.

I agree with Justice SCALIA, post, at 2259 (dissenting opinion), that the Court's assessment of the current legislative judgment regarding the execution of defendants like petitioner more resembles a post hoc rationalization for the majority's subjectively preferred result rather than any objective effort to ascertain the content of an evolving standard of decency. I write separately, however, to call attention to the defects in the Court's decision to place weight on foreign laws, the views of professional and religious organizations, and 2253 opinion polls in reaching its conclusion. See ante, at 2249-2250, n. 21. The Court's suggestion that these sources are relevant to the constitutional question finds little support in our precedents and, in my view, is antithetical to considerations of federalism, which instruct that any "permanent prohibition upon all units of democratic government must [be apparent] in the operative acts (laws and the application of laws) that the people have approved." Stanford v. Kentucky, 492 U.S. 361, 377, 109 S.Ct. 2969, 106 L.Ed.2d 306 (1989) (plurality opinion). The Court's uncritical acceptance of the opinion poll data brought to our attention, moreover, warrants additional comment, because we lack sufficient information to conclude that the surveys were conducted in accordance with generally accepted scientific principles or are capable of supporting valid empirical inferences about the issue before us.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

In making determinations about whether a punishment is "cruel and unusual" under the evolving standards of decency embraced by the Eighth Amendment, we have emphasized that legislation is the "clearest and most reliable objective *323 evidence of contemporary values." Penry v. Lynaugh, 492 U.S. 302, 331, 109 S.Ct. 2934, 106 L.Ed.2d 256 (1989). See also McCleskey v. Kemp, 481 U.S. 279, 300, 107 S.Ct. 1756, 95 L.Ed.2d 262 (1987). The reason we ascribe primacy to legislative enactments follows from the constitutional role legislatures play in expressing policy of a State. " '[I]n a democratic society legislatures, not courts, are constituted to respond to the will and consequently the moral values of the people.' " Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 175-176, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 49 L.Ed.2d 859 (1976) (joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and STEVENS, JJ.) (quoting Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 383, 92 S.Ct. 2726, 33 L.Ed.2d 346 (1972) (Burger, C. J., dissenting)). And because the specifications of punishments are "peculiarly questions of legislative policy," Gore v. United States, 357 U.S. 386, 393, 78 S.Ct. 1280, 2 L.Ed.2d 1405 (1958), our cases have cautioned against using " 'the aegis of the Cruel and Unusual Punishment Clause' " to cut off the normal democratic processes, Gregg, supra, at 176, 96 S.Ct. 2909 (quoting Powell v. Texas, 392 U.S. 514, 533, 88 S.Ct. 2145, 20 L.Ed.2d 1254 (1968) (plurality opinion)).

Our opinions have also recognized that data concerning the actions of sentencing juries, though entitled to less weight than legislative judgments, " 'is a significant and reliable objective index of contemporary values,' " Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584, 596, 97 S.Ct. 2861, 53 L.Ed.2d 982 (1977) (plurality opinion) (quoting Gregg, supra, at 181, 96 S.Ct. 2909), because of the jury's intimate involvement in the case and its function of " 'maintain[ing] a link between contemporary community values and the penal system,' " Gregg, supra, at 181, 96 S.Ct. 2909 (quoting Witherspoon v. Illinois, 391 U.S. 510, 519, n. 15, 88 S.Ct. 1770, 20 L.Ed.2d 776 (1968)). In Coker, supra, at 596-597, 97 S.Ct. 2861, for example, we credited data showing that "at least 9 out of 10" juries in Georgia did not impose the death sentence for rape convictions. And in Enmund v. Florida, 458 U.S. 782, 793-794, 102 S.Ct. 3368, 73 L.Ed.2d 1140 (1982), where evidence of the current legislative judgment was not as "compelling" as that in Coker (but more so than that here), we were persuaded by "overwhelming [evidence] that American juries ... repudiated imposition of the death penalty" for a defendant who neither took life nor attempted or intended to take life.

*324 In my view, these two sources-the work product of legislatures and sentencing jury determinations-ought to be the sole indicators by which courts ascertain the contemporary American conceptions of decency for purposes of the Eighth Amendment. They are the only objective indicia of contemporary values firmly supported by our precedents. More importantly, however, they can be reconciled with the undeniable precepts that the democratic branches of government and individual sentencing juries are, by design, 2254 better suited than courts to evaluating and giving effect to the complex societal and moral considerations that inform the selection of publicly acceptable criminal punishments.

In reaching its conclusion today, the Court does not take notice of the fact that neither petitioner nor his amici have adduced any comprehensive statistics that would conclusively prove (or disprove) whether juries routinely consider death a disproportionate punishment for mentally retarded offenders like petitioner.[FN*] Instead, it adverts to the fact that other countries have disapproved imposition of the death penalty for crimes committed by mentally retarded offenders, see ante, at 2249-2250, n. 21 (citing the Brief for European Union as Amicus Curiae 2). I fail to see, however,*325 how the views of other countries regarding the punishment of their citizens provide any support for the Court's ultimate determination. While it is true that some of our prior opinions have looked to "the climate of international opinion," Coker, supra, at 596, n. 10, 97 S.Ct. 2861, to reinforce a conclusion regarding evolving standards of decency, see Thompson v. Oklahoma, 487 U.S. 815, 830, 108 S.Ct. 2687, 101 L.Ed.2d 702 (1988) (plurality opinion); Enmund, supra, at 796-797, n. 22, 102 S.Ct. 3368; Trop v. Dulles, 356 U.S. 86, 102-103, 78 S.Ct. 590, 2 L.Ed.2d 630 (1958) (plurality opinion); we have since explicitly rejected the idea that the sentencing practices of other countries could "serve to establish the first Eighth Amendment prerequisite, that [a] practice is accepted among our people." Stanford, 492 U.S., at 369, n. 1, 109 S.Ct. 2969 (emphasizing that "American conceptions of decency ... are dispositive" (emphasis in original)).

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

> FN* Apparently no such statistics exist. See Brief for American Association on Mental Retardation et al. as Amici Curiae 19, n. 29 (noting that "actions by individual prosecutors and by juries are difficult to quantify with precision"). Petitioner's inability to muster studies in his favor ought to cut against him, for it is his "heavy burden," Stanford v. Kentucky, 492 U.S. 361, 373, 109 S.Ct. 2969, 106 L.Ed.2d 306 (1989) (internal quotation marks omitted), to establish a national consensus against a punishment deemed acceptable by the Virginia Legislature and jury who sentenced him. Furthermore, it is worth noting that experts have estimated that as many as 10 percent of death row inmates are mentally retarded, see R. Bonner & S. Rimer, Executing the Mentally Retarded Even as Laws Begin to Shift, N.Y. Times, Aug. 7, 2000, p. A1, a number which suggests that sentencing juries are not as reluctant to impose the death penalty on defendants like petitioner as was the case in Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584, 97 S.Ct. 2861, 53 L.Ed.2d 982 (1977), and Enmund v. Florida, 458 U.S. 782, 102 S.Ct. 3368, 73 L.Ed.2d 1140 (1982).

Stanford's reasoning makes perfectly good sense, and the Court offers no basis to question it. For if it is evidence of a national consensus for which we are looking, then the viewpoints of other countries simply are not relevant. And nothing in Thompson, Enmund, Coker, or Trop suggests otherwise. Thompson, Enmund, and Coker rely only on the bare citation of international laws by the Trop plurality as authority to deem other countries' sentencing choices germane. But the Trop plurality-representing the view of only a minority of the Court-offered no explanation for its own citation, and there is no reason to resurrect this view given our sound rejection of the argument in Stanford.

To further buttress its appraisal of contemporary societal values, the Court marshals public opinion poll results and evidence that several professional organizations and religious groups have adopted official positions opposing the imposition of the death penalty upon mentally retarded offenders. See ante, at 2249-2250, n. 21 (citing Brief for American Psychological Association et al. as Amici Curiae; Brief for American Association on Mental Retardation et al. as Amici Curiae; noting that "representatives of widely diverse religious326 communities *2255 ... reflecting Christian, Jewish, Muslim, and Buddhist traditions ...'share a conviction that the execution of persons with mental retardation cannot be morally justified' "; and stating that "polling data shows a widespread consensus among Americans ... that executing the mentally retarded is wrong"). In my view, none should be accorded any weight on the Eighth Amendment scale when the elected representatives of a State's populace have not deemed them persuasive enough to prompt legislative action. In Penry, 492 U.S., at 334-335, 109 S.Ct. 2934, we were cited similar data and declined to take them into consideration where the "public sentiment expressed in [them]" had yet to find expression in state law. See also Stanford, 492 U.S., at 377, 109 S.Ct. 2969 (plurality opinion) (refusing "the invitation to rest constitutional law upon such uncertain foundations" as "public opinion polls, the views of interest groups, and the positions adopted by various professional associations"). For the Court to rely on such data today serves only to illustrate its willingness to proscribe by judicial fiat-at the behest of private organizations speaking only for themselves-a punishment about which no across-the-board consensus has developed through the workings of normal democratic processes in the laboratories of the States.

Even if I were to accept the legitimacy of the Court's decision to reach beyond the product of legislatures and practices of sentencing juries to discern a national standard of decency, I would take issue with the blind-faith credence it accords the opinion polls brought to our attention. An extensive body of social science literature describes how methodological and other errors can affect the reliability and validity of estimates about the opinions and attitudes of a population derived from various sampling techniques. Everything from variations in the survey methodology, such as the choice of the target population, the sampling design used, the questions asked, and the statistical analyses used to interpret the data can skew the results. See, e.g., R. Groves, Survey 327 Errors and Survey Costs (1989); 1 C. Turner & E. Martin, Surveying Subjective Phenomena (1984).

The Federal Judicial Center's Reference Manual on Scientific Evidence 221-271 (1994) and its Manual for Complex Litigation § 21.493, pp. 101-103 (3d ed.1995), offer helpful suggestions to judges called upon to assess the weight and admissibility of survey evidence on a factual issue before a court. Looking at the polling data (reproduced in the Appendix to this opinion) in light of these factors, one cannot help but observe how unlikely it is that the data could support a valid inference about the question presented by this case. For example, the questions reported to have been asked in the various polls do not appear designed to gauge whether the respondents might find the death penalty an acceptable punishment for mentally retarded offenders in rare cases. Most are categorical (e.g.,"Do you think that persons convicted of murder who are mentally retarded should or should not receive the death penalty?"), and, as such, would not elicit whether the respondent might agree or disagree that all mentally retarded people by definition can never act with the level of culpability associated with the death penalty, regardless of the severity of their impairment or the individual circumstances of their crime. Second, none of the 27 polls cited disclose the targeted survey population or the sampling techniques used by those who conducted the research. Thus, even if one accepts that the survey instruments were adequately designed to address a relevant question, it is impossible to know whether the sample was representative enough or the methodology sufficiently sound to tell us anything about the opinions of the citizens of a particular State or the American public at large. Finally, the information provided to us does not indicate why a particular survey was conducted or, in a few cases, by whom, factors which also can bear on the *2256 objectivity of the results. In order to be credited here, such surveys should be offered as 328 evidence at trial, where their sponsors can be examined and cross-examined about these matters.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

* * *

There are strong reasons for limiting our inquiry into what constitutes an evolving standard of decency under the Eighth Amendment to the laws passed by legislatures and the practices of sentencing juries in America. Here, the Court goes beyond these well-established objective indicators of contemporary values. It finds "further support to [its] conclusion" that a national consensus has developed against imposing the death penalty on all mentally retarded defendants in international opinion, the views of professional and religious organizations, and opinion polls not demonstrated to be reliable. Ante, at 2249-2250, n. 21. Believing this view to be seriously mistaken, I dissent.

APPENDIX TO OPINION OF REHNQUIST, C. J.

[1] Poll survey results reported in Brief for American Association on Mental Retardation et al. as Amici Curiae in Support of Petitioner and cited by the Court ante, at 2249-2250, n. 21.

ST.	POLL	DATE	RESPONSE	QUESTION
AR	Arkansans' Opinion on the Death Penalty, Opinion Research Associates, Inc., Q. 13 (July 1992) John DiPippa, Will Fairchild's Death Violate the Constitution, or Simply Our Morality?, Arkansas Forum, Sept. 1993	1992	61% never appropriate 17% is appropriate 5% opposed to all executions 17% undecided	"Some people say that there is nothing wrong with executing a person who is mentally retarded. Others say that the death penalty should never be imposed on a person who is mentally retarded. Which of these positions comes closest to your own?"
AZ	Behavior Research Center, Survey 2000-3 (July 2000)	2000	71% oppose 12% favor 11% it depends 6% ref/unsure	"For persons convicted of murder, do you favor or oppose use of the death penalty when the defendant is mentally retarded?"
CA	Field Research Corp., California Death Penalty Survey, Q. 22 (Dec.1989) Frank Hill, Death Penalty For The Retarded, San Diego Union-	1989	64.8% not all right 25.7% is all right 9.5% no opinion	"Some people feel there is nothing wrong with imposing the death penalty on persons who are mentally retarded depending on the circumstances. Others feel the death penalty

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

	Tribune, Mar. 28, 1993, at G3			should never be imposed on persons who are mentally retarded under any circumstance. The death penalty on a mentally retarded person is ... ?"
CA	Field Research Corp., California Death Penalty Survey, Q. 62b (Dec. 1997); Paul Vang Slambrouck, Execution Ends a Convict's Mental Stay, The Christian Science Monitor, Apr. 27, 1998, at 1.		74% disagree 17% agree 9% no opinion	"Mentally retarded defendants should be given the death penalty when they commit capital crimes."
CT	Quinnipac University Polling Institute, Death Penalty Survey Info., Q. 35 (April 23, 2001)	2001	77% no 12% yes 11% don't know	"Do you think that persons convicted of murder who are mentally retarded should or should not receive the death penalty?"
FL	Amnesty International; Martin Dyckman, Death Penalty's High Price, St. Petersburg Times, Apr. 19, 1992, at 3D.	1986	71% opposed	[not provided]
GA	Georgia State University Tracy Thompson, Executions of Retarded Opposed, Atlanta Journal, Jan. 6, 1987, at 1B	1987	66% opposed 17% favor 16% depends	[not provided]
LA	Marketing Research Inst., Loyola Death Penalty Survey, IQ's (Feb. 1993)	1993	71% no 12% yes 13% uncertain	"Would you vote for the death penalty if the convicted person is mentally retarded?"
LA	Louisiana Poll, Poll 104, Q. 9 (Apr.2001)	2001	68% no 19% yes 11% no opinion 2% won't say	"Do you believe mentally retarded people, who are convicted of capital murder, should be executed?"
MD	Survey Research Center, University of Maryland (Nov. 1988)	1988	82% opposed 8% favor 10% other	"Would you favor or oppose the death penalty for a person convicted of murder if he or she is mentally retarded?"
MO	Missouri Mental Retardation and Death Penalty Survey, Q. 5 (Oct.1993)	1993	61.3% not all right 23.7% is all right 15% don't know	"Some people feel there is nothing wrong with imposing the death penalty on persons who are mentally retarded depending on the circumstances. Others feel that the death penalty should never be imposed on persons who are mentally retarded under any circumstances. Do you think it IS or IS NOT all right to impose the death penalty on a mentally retarded person?"
NC, SC	Charlotte Observer-WVIR-TV News Poll (Sept. 2000); Diane Suchetka, Carolinas Join Emotional Debate Over Execu	2000	64% yes 21% no 14% not sure	"Should the Carolinas ban the execution of people with mental retarda- tion? [illegible]

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

	Living Mentally Retarded, Charlotte Observer, Sept. 13, 2000
N M	Research & Polling Inc., Use of the Death Penalty Public Opinion Poll, Q. 2 (Dec.1990)	1990	57.1% oppose 10.5% support 26.2% depends 6.1% don't know	62% support the death penalty. Asked of those that support it, "for which of the following do you support use of the death penalty ... when the convicted person is mentally retarded?"
	NY, Patrick Caddell Enterprises, N.Y. Public Opinion Poll: The Death Penalty: An Executive Summary, 6, 7, (May 1989) Ronald Tabak & J. Mark Lane, The Execution of Injustice: A Cost and Lack of Benefit Analysis of the Death Penalty, 25 Loyola (LA) L.Rev. 59, 95 (1989)	1989	82% oppose 10% favor 9% don't know	"I'd like you to imagine you are a member of a jury. The jury has found the defendant guilty of murder beyond a reasonable doubt and now needs to decide about sentencing. You are the last juror to decide and your decision will determine whether or not the offender will receive the death penalty. Would you favor or oppose sentencing the offender to the death penalty if the convicted person were mentally retarded?"
OK	Survey of Oklahoma Attitudes Regarding Capital Punishment: Survey Conducted for Oklahoma Indigent Defense System, Q. C (July 1999)	1999	83.5% should not be executed 10.8% should be executed 5.7% depends	"Some people think that persons convicted of murder who are mentally retarded (or have a mental age of between 5 and 10 years) should not be executed. Other people think that 'retarded' persons should be subject to the death penalty like anyone else. Which is closer to the way you feel, that 'retarded' persons should not be executed, or that 'retarded' persons should be subject to the death penalty like everyone else?"
	TX, Austin American-Statesman, Nov. 15, 1988, at B7	1988	73% opposed	not provided
TX	Sam Houston State University, College of Criminal Justice, Texas Crime Poll On-line (1995) Domingo Ramirez, Jr., Murder Trial May Hinge on Defendant's IQ, The Fort Worth Star-Telegram, Oct. 6, 1997, at 1	1995	61% more likely to oppose	"For each of the following items that have been found to affect people's attitude about the death penalty, please state if you would be more likely to favor or more likely to oppose the death penalty, or wouldn't it matter ... if the murderer is severely mentally retarded?"
	TX, Scripps Howard Texas Poll, Death Penalty (Mar.2001) Dan Parker, More Texans Support Death Penalty, Corpus Christi Caller Times, Mar. 22, 2001, at A1	2001	66% no 17% yes 17% don't know, no answer	"Should the state use the death penalty when the inmate is considered mentally retarded?"
TX	Houston Chronicle (Feb.2001)	2001	59.9% no support	"Would you support the death pen-

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

	Stephen Brewer & Mike Tolson, A Deadly Distinction: Part III, Debate Fervent in Mental Cases, Johnny Paul Penry Illustrates a Lingering Capital Conundrum, The Houston Chronicle, Feb. 6, 2001, at A6		19.3% support 20.7% not sure/no answer	alty if you were convinced the defendant were guilty, but the defendant is mentally impaired?"
	US Harris Poll, Unfinished Agenda on Race, Q. 32 (Sept. 1988) Saundra Torry, High Court to Hear Case on Retarded Slayer, The Washington Post, Jan. 11, 1989, at A6		71% should not be executed 21% should be executed 4% depends 4% not sure/refused	Some people think that persons convicted of murder who have a mental age of less than 18 (or the retarded) should not be executed. Other people think that retarded persons should be subject to the death penalty like anyone else. Which is closer to the way you feel, that retarded persons should not be executed or that retarded persons should be subject to the death penalty like anyone else?"
US	Yankelovich Clancy Shulman, Time/CNN Poll, Q. 14 (July 7, 1989) Samuel R. Gross, Second Thoughts: Americans' Views on the Death Penalty at the Turn of the Century, Capital Punishment and the American Future (Feb.2001)	1989	61% oppose 27% favor 12% not sure	"Do you favor or oppose the death penalty for mentally retarded individuals convicted of serious crimes, such as murder?"
	US The Tarrance Group, Death Penalty Poll, Q. 9 (Mar. 1993) Samuel R. Gross, Update: American Public Opinion on the Death Penalty-It's Getting Personal, 83 Cornell L.Rev. 1448, 1467 (1998)	1993	56% not all right 32% is all right 11% unsure	"Some people feel that there is nothing wrong with imposing the death penalty on persons who are mentally retarded, depending on the circumstances. Others feel that the death penalty should never be imposed on persons who are mentally retarded under any circumstances. Which of these views comes closest to your own?"
US	Public Policy Research, Crime in America, Q. 72 (July 1995)	1995	67% likely to oppose 7% likely to favor 26% wouldn't matter	"For each item please tell me if you would be more likely to favor the death penalty, more likely to oppose the death penalty or it wouldn't matter ... if it is true that the murderer is severely mentally retarded?"
	US Princeton Research, Newsweek Poll, Q. 16 (Nov. 1995) Samuel R. Gross, Update: American Public Opinion on the Death Penalty-It's Getting Personal, 83 Cornell L.Rev. 1448,		83% oppose 9% favor 8% don't know/refused	If the convicted person was mentally retarded would you favor or oppose the death penalty?"

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

1468 (1998)

US	Peter Hart Research Associates, Inc., Innocence Survey, Q. 12 (Dec.1999)	1999	58% strongly/somewhat favor 26% strongly/somewhat oppose 12% mixed/neutral 4% not sure	"... [F]or each proposal I read, please tell me whether you strongly favor, somewhat favor, have mixed or neutral feelings, somewhat oppose, or strongly oppose that proposal .... [P]rohibit the death penalty for defendants who are mentally retarded."
US	Peter Hart Research Associates, Inc., Innocence Survey, Q. 9 (Dec.1999)	1999	52% much/somewhat less likely 19% no difference 7% not sure 47% much less likely 5% somewhat less likely	"Suppose you were on a jury and a defendant was convicted of murder. Now it's time to determine the sentence. If you knew that the defendant was mentally retarded or otherwise mentally impaired in a serious way, would you be much less likely to support the use of the death penalty in this specific case, somewhat less likely, or would it make no difference to you?"
US	Houston Chronicle (Feb.2001) Stephen Brewer & Mike Tolson, A Deadly Distinction: Part III, Debate Fervent in Mental Cases, Johnny Paul Penry Illustrates a Lingering Capital Conundrum, The Houston Chronicle, Feb. 6, 2001, at A6	2001	63.8% no support 16.4% support 19.8% not sure/no answer	"Would you support the death penalty if you were convinced the defendant were guilty, but the defendant is mentally impaired?"

*337 Justice SCALIA, with whom THE CHIEF JUSTICE and Justice THOMAS join, dissenting.

Today's decision is the pinnacle of our Eighth Amendment death-is-different jurisprudence. Not only does it, like all of that jurisprudence, find no support in the text or history of the Eighth Amendment; it does not even have support in current social attitudes regarding the conditions that render *338 an otherwise just death penalty inappropriate. Seldom has an opinion of this Court rested so obviously upon nothing but the personal views of its Members.

I

I begin with a brief restatement of facts that are abridged by the Court but important to understanding this case. After spending the day drinking alcohol and smoking marijuana, petitioner Daryl Renard Atkins and a partner in crime drove to a convenience store, intending to rob a customer. Their victim was Eric Nesbitt, an airman from Langley Air Force Base, whom they abducted, drove to a nearby automated teller machine, and forced to withdraw $200. They then drove him to a deserted area, ignoring his pleas to leave him unharmed. According to the co-conspirator, whose testimony the jury evidently credited, Atkins ordered Nesbitt out of the vehicle and, after he had taken only a few steps, shot him one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight times in the thorax, chest, abdomen, arms, and legs.

The jury convicted Atkins of capital murder. At resentencing (the Virginia Supreme Court affirmed his conviction but remanded for resentencing because the trial court had used an improper verdict form, 257 Va. 160, 179, 510 S.E.2d 445, 457 (1999)), the jury heard extensive evidence of petitioner's alleged mental retardation. A psychologist testified that petitioner was mildly mentally retarded with an IQ of 59, that he was a "slow learner," App. 444, who showed a "lack of success in pretty much every domain of his life,"id., at 442, and that he had an "impaired" capacity to 2260 appreciate the criminality of his conduct and to conform his conduct to the law, id., at 453. Petitioner's family members offered additional evidence in support of his mental retardation claim (e.g., that petitioner is a "follower," id., at 421). The Commonwealth contested the evidence of retardation and presented testimony of a psychologist who found "absolutely no evidence other than the IQ score ... indicating that [petitioner]*339 was in the least bit mentally retarded" and concluded that petitioner was "of average intelligence, at least." Id., at 476.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

The jury also heard testimony about petitioner's 16 prior felony convictions for robbery, attempted robbery, abduction, use of a firearm, and maiming. Id., at 491-522. The victims of these offenses provided graphic depictions of petitioner's violent tendencies: He hit one over the head with a beer bottle, id., at 406; he slapped a gun across another victim's face, clubbed her in the head with it, knocked her to the ground, and then helped her up, only to shoot her in the stomach, id., at 411-413. The jury sentenced petitioner to death. The Supreme Court of Virginia affirmed petitioner's sentence. 260 Va. 375, 534 S.E.2d 312 (2000).

II

As the foregoing history demonstrates, petitioner's mental retardation was a central issue at sentencing. The jury concluded, however, that his alleged retardation was not a compelling reason to exempt him from the death penalty in light of the brutality of his crime and his long demonstrated propensity for violence. "In upsetting this particularized judgment on the basis of a constitutional absolute," the Court concludes that no one who is even slightly mentally retarded can have sufficient "moral responsibility to be subjected to capital punishment for any crime. As a sociological and moral conclusion that is implausible; and it is doubly implausible as an interpretation of the United States Constitution." Thompson v. Oklahoma, 487 U.S. 815, 863-864, 108 S.Ct. 2687, 101 L.Ed.2d 702 (1988) (SCALIA, J., dissenting).

Under our Eighth Amendment jurisprudence, a punishment is "cruel and unusual" if it falls within one of two categories: "those modes or acts of punishment that had been considered cruel and unusual at the time that the Bill of Rights was adopted," Ford v. Wainwright, 477 U.S. 399, 405, 106 S.Ct. 2595, 91 L.Ed.2d 335 (1986), and modes of punishment that are inconsistent with *340 modern " 'standards of decency,' " as evinced by objective indicia, the most important of which is "legislation enacted by the country's legislatures," Penry v. Lynaugh, 492 U.S. 302, 330-331, 109 S.Ct. 2934, 106 L.Ed.2d 256 (1989).

The Court makes no pretense that execution of the mildly mentally retarded would have been considered "cruel and unusual" in 1791. Only the severely or profoundly mentally retarded, commonly known as "idiots," enjoyed any special status under the law at that time. They, like lunatics, suffered a "deficiency in will" rendering them unable to tell right from wrong. 4 W. Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 24 (1769) (hereinafter Blackstone); see also Penry, 492 U.S., at 331-332, 109 S.Ct. 2934 ("[T]he term 'idiot' was generally used to describe persons who had a total lack of reason or understanding, or an inability to distinguish between good and evil"); id., at 333, 109 S.Ct. 2934 (citing sources indicating that idiots generally had an IQ of 25 or below, which would place them within the "profound" or "severe" range of mental retardation under modern standards); 2 A. Fitz-Herbert, Natura Brevium 233B (9th ed. 1794) (originally published 1534) (An idiot is "such a person who cannot account or number twenty pence, nor can tell who was his father or mother, nor how old he is, etc., so as it may appear that he hath no understanding of reason what shall be for his profit, or what for his loss"). Due to their incompetence, idiots were "excuse[d] 2261 from the guilt, and of course from the punishment, of any criminal action committed under such deprivation of the senses." 4 Blackstone 25; see also Penry, supra, at 331, 109 S.Ct. 2934. Instead, they were often committed to civil confinement or made wards of the State, thereby preventing them from "go[ing] loose, to the terror of the king's subjects." 4 Blackstone 25; see also S. Brakel, J. Parry, & B. Weiner, The Mentally Disabled and the Law 12-14 (3d ed.1985); 1 Blackstone 292-296; 1 M. Hale, Pleas of the Crown 33 (1st Am. ed. 1847). Mentally retarded offenders with less severe impairments-those who were not "idiots"-suffered criminal prosecution *341 and punishment, including capital punishment. See, e.g., I. Ray, Medical Jurisprudence of Insanity 65, 87-92 (W. Overholser ed.1962) (recounting the 1834 trial and execution in Concord, New Hampshire, of an apparent "imbecile"-imbecility being a less severe form of retardation which "differs from idiocy in the circumstance that while in [the idiot] there is an utter destitution of every thing like reason, [imbeciles] possess some intellectual capacity, though infinitely less than is possessed by the great mass of mankind"); A. Highmore, Law of Idiocy and Lunacy 200 (1807) ("The great difficulty in all these cases, is to determine where a person shall be said to be so far deprived of his sense and memory as not to have any of his actions imputed to him: or where notwithstanding some defects of this kind he still appears to have so much reason and understanding as will make him accountable for his actions ...").

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

The Court is left to argue, therefore, that execution of the mildly retarded is inconsistent with the "evolving standards of decency that mark the progress of a maturing society." Trop v. Dulles, 356 U.S. 86, 101, 78 S.Ct. 590, 2 L.Ed.2d 630 (1958) (plurality opinion) (Warren, C. J.). Before today, our opinions consistently emphasized that Eighth Amendment judgments regarding the existence of social "standards" "should be informed by objective factors to the maximum possible extent" and "should not be, or appear to be, merely the subjective views of individual Justices." Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584, 592, 97 S.Ct. 2861, 53 L.Ed.2d 982 (1977) (plurality opinion); see also Stanford v. Kentucky, 492 U.S. 361, 369, 109 S.Ct. 2969, 106 L.Ed.2d 306 (1989); McCleskey v. Kemp, 481 U.S. 279, 300, 107 S.Ct. 1756, 95 L.Ed.2d 262 (1987); Enmund v. Florida, 458 U.S. 782, 788, 102 S.Ct. 3368, 73 L.Ed.2d 1140 (1982). "First" among these objective factors are the "statutes passed by society's elected representatives," Stanford v. Kentucky, supra, at 370, 109 S.Ct. 2969; because it "will rarely if ever be the case that the Members of this Court will have a better sense of the evolution in views of the American people than do their elected representatives," Thompson, supra, at 865, 108 S.Ct. 2687 (SCALIA, J., dissenting).

342 The Court pays lipservice to these precedents as it miraculously extracts a "national consensus" forbidding execution of the mentally retarded, ante, at 2250, from the fact that 18 States-less than half (47%) of the 38 States that permit capital punishment (for whom the issue exists)-have very recently enacted legislation barring execution of the mentally retarded. Even that 47% figure is a distorted one. If one is to say, as the Court does today, that all executions of the mentally retarded are so morally repugnant as to violate our national "standards of decency," surely the "consensus" it points to must be one that has set its righteous face against all such executions. Not 18 States, but only 7-18% of death penalty jurisdictions-have legislation of that scope. Eleven of those that the Court counts enacted statutes prohibiting execution of mentally retarded defendants convicted after, or convicted of crimes committed after, the effective date of the legislation; [FN1] those already on death row, *2262 or consigned there before the statute's effective date, or even (in those States using the date of the crime as the criterion of retroactivity) tried in the future for murders committed many years ago, could be put to death. That is not a statement of absolute moral repugnance, but one of current preference between two tolerable approaches. Two of these States permit execution of the mentally retarded in other situations as well: Kansas apparently permits execution of all 343 except the severely mentally retarded; [FN2] New York permits execution of the mentally retarded who commit murder in a correctional facility. N.Y.Crim. Proc. Law § 400.27.12(d) (McKinney 2001); N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27 (McKinney 2002).

FN1. See Ariz.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 13-703.02(I) (Supp.2001); Ark.Code Ann. § 5-4-618(d)(1) (1997); Reams v. State, 322 Ark. 336, 340, 909 S.W.2d 324, 326-327 (1995); Fla. Stat. § 921.137(8) (Supp.2002); Ga.Code Ann. § 17-7-131(j) (1997); Ind.Code § 35-36-9-6 (1998); Rondon v. State, 711 N.E.2d 506, 512 (Ind.1999); Kan. Stat. Ann. §§ 21-4623(d), 21-4631(c) (1995); Ky.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 532.140(3) (1999); Md. Ann.Code, Art. 27, § 412(g) (1996); Booth v. State, 327 Md. 142, 166-167, 608 A.2d 162, 174 (1992); Mo.Rev.Stat. § 565.030(7) (Supp.2001); N.Y.Crim. Proc. Law § 400.27.12(c) (McKinney Supp.2002); 1995 N.Y. Laws, ch. 1, § 38; Tenn.Code Ann. § 39-13-203(b) (1997); Van Tran v. State, 66 S.W.3d 790, 798-799 (Tenn.2001).

FN2. The Kansas statute defines "mentally retarded" as "having significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning ... to an extent which substantially impairs one's capacity to appreciate the criminality of one's conduct or to conform one's conduct to the requirements of law." Kan. Stat. Ann. § 21-4623(e) (2001). This definition of retardation, petitioner concedes, is analogous to the Model Penal Code's definition of a "mental disease or defect" excusing responsibility for criminal conduct, see ALI, Model Penal Code § 4.01 (1985), which would not include mild mental retardation. Reply Brief for Petitioner 3, n. 4.

But let us accept, for the sake of argument, the Court's faulty count. That bare number of States alone-18-should be enough to convince any reasonable person that no "national consensus" exists. How is it possible that agreement among 47% of the death penalty jurisdictions amounts to "consensus"? Our prior cases have generally required a much higher degree of agreement before finding a punishment cruel and unusual on "evolving standards" grounds. In Coker, supra, at 595-596, 97 S.Ct. 2861, we proscribed the death penalty for rape of an adult woman after finding that only one jurisdiction, Georgia, authorized such a punishment. In Enmund, supra, at 789, 102 S.Ct. 3368, we invalidated the death penalty for mere participation in a robbery in which an accomplice took a life, a punishment not permitted in 28 of the death penalty States (78%). In Ford, 477 U.S., at 408, 106 S.Ct. 2595, we supported the common-law prohibition of execution of the insane with the observation that "[t]his ancestral legacy has not outlived its time," since not a single State authorizes such punishment. In Solem v. Helm, 463 U.S. 277, 300, 103 S.Ct. 3001, 77 L.Ed.2d 637 (1983), we invalidated a life sentence without parole under a recidivist statute by which the criminal "was treated more severely than he would have been in any other State." What the Court calls evidence of "consensus" in the present case (a fudged 47%) more closely resembles evidence that we found inadequate 344 to establish consensus in earlier cases. Tison v. Arizona, 481 U.S. 137, 154, 158, 107 S.Ct. 1676, 95 L.Ed.2d 127 (1987), upheld a state law authorizing capital punishment for major participation in a felony with reckless indifference to life where only 11 of the 37 death penalty States (30%) prohibited such punishment. Stanford, 492 U.S., at 372, 109 S.Ct. 2969, upheld a state law permitting execution of defendants who committed a capital crime at age 16 where only 15 of the 36 death penalty States (42%) prohibited death for such offenders.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Moreover, a major factor that the Court entirely disregards is that the legislation of all 18 States it relies on is still in its infancy. The oldest of the statutes is only 14 years old; [FN3] five were enacted last *2263 year; [FN4] over half were enacted within the past eight years.[FN5] Few, if any, of the States have had sufficient experience with these laws to know whether they are sensible in the long term. It is "myopic to base sweeping constitutional principles upon the narrow experience of [a few] years." Coker, 433 U.S., at 614, 97 S.Ct. 2861 (Burger, C. J., dissenting); see also Thompson, 487 U.S., at 854-855, 108 S.Ct. 2687 (O'CONNOR, J., concurring in judgment).

FN3. Ga.Code Ann. § 17-7-131(j).

FN4. Ariz.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 13-703.02; Conn. Gen.Stat. § 53a-46a(h); Fla. Stat. § 921.137; Mo.Rev.Stat. §§ 565.030(4)-(7); N.C. Gen.Stat. § 15A-2005.

FN5. In addition to the statutes cited n. 4 supra, see S.D. Codified Laws § 23A-27A-26.1 (enacted 2000); Neb.Rev.Stat. §§ 28-105.01(2)-(5) (1998); N.Y.Crim. Proc. Law § 400.27(12) (1995); Ind.Code § 35-36-9-6 (1994); Kan. Stat. Ann. § 21-4623 (1994).

The Court attempts to bolster its embarrassingly feeble evidence of "consensus" with the following: "It is not so much the number of these States that is significant, but the consistency of the direction of change." Ante, at 2249 (emphasis added). But in what other direction could we possibly see change? Given that 14 years ago all the death penalty statutes included the mentally retarded, any change (except precipitate undoing of what had just been done) was bound 345 to be in the one direction the Court finds significant enough to overcome the lack of real consensus. That is to say, to be accurate the Court's "consistency-of-the-direction-of-change" point should be recast into the following unimpressive observation: "No State has yet undone its exemption of the mentally retarded, one for as long as 14 whole years." In any event, reliance upon "trends," even those of much longer duration than a mere 14 years, is a perilous basis for constitutional adjudication, as Justice O'CONNOR eloquently explained in Thompson:

> "In 1846, Michigan became the first State to abolish the death penalty .... In succeeding decades, other American States continued the trend towards abolition .... Later, and particularly after World War II, there ensued a steady and dramatic decline in executions .... In the 1950's and 1960's, more States abolished or radically restricted capital punishment, and executions ceased completely for several years beginning in 1968 ....
>
> "In 1972, when this Court heard arguments on the constitutionality of the death penalty, such statistics might have suggested that the practice had become a relic, implicitly rejected by a new societal consensus.... We now know that any inference of a societal consensus rejecting the death penalty would have been mistaken. But had this Court then declared the existence of such a consensus, and outlawed capital punishment, legislatures would very likely not have been able to revive it. The mistaken premise of the decision would have been frozen into constitutional law, making it difficult to refute and even more difficult to reject." 487 U.S., at 854-855, 108 S.Ct. 2687.

Her words demonstrate, of course, not merely the peril of riding a trend, but also the peril of discerning a consensus where there is none.

346 The Court's thrashing about for evidence of "consensus" includes reliance upon the margins by which state legislatures have enacted bans on execution of the retarded. Ante, at 2249. Presumably, in applying our Eighth Amendment "evolving-standards-of-decency" jurisprudence, we will henceforth weigh not only how many States have agreed, but how many States have agreed by how much. Of course if the percentage of legislators voting for the bill is significant, surely the number of people represented by the legislators voting for the bill is also significant: the fact that 49% of the legislators in a State with a population of 60 million voted against the bill should be more impressive than the fact that 90% of the legislators in *2264 a State with a population of 2 million voted for it. (By the way, the population of the death penalty States that exclude the mentally retarded is only 44% of the population of all death penalty States. U.S. Dept. of Commerce, Bureau of Census, Statistical Abstract of the United States 21 (121st ed.2001).) This is quite absurd. What we have looked for in the past to "evolve" the Eighth Amendment is a consensus of the same sort as the consensus that adopted the Eighth Amendment: a consensus of the sovereign States that form the Union, not a nose count of Americans for and against.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Even less compelling (if possible) is the Court's argument, ibid., that evidence of "national consensus" is to be found in the infrequency with which retarded persons are executed in States that do not bar their execution. To begin with, what the Court takes as true is in fact quite doubtful. It is not at all clear that execution of the mentally retarded is "uncommon," ibid., as even the sources cited by the Court suggest, see ante, at 2249, n. 20 (citing D. Keyes, W. Edwards, & R. Perske, People with Mental Retardation are Dying Legally, 35 Mental Retardation (Feb.1997) (updated by Death Penalty Information Center, available at http://www.advocacyone.org/ deathpenalty.html (as visited 347 June 12, 2002) (showing that 12 States executed 35 allegedly mentally retarded offenders during the period 1984-2000)). See also Bonner & Rimer, Executing the Mentally Retarded Even as Laws Begin to Shift, N.Y. Times, Aug. 7, 2000, p. A1 (reporting that 10% of death row inmates are retarded). If, however, execution of the mentally retarded is "uncommon"; and if it is not a sufficient explanation of this that the retarded constitute a tiny fraction of society (1% to 3%), Brief for American Psychological Association et al. as Amici Curiae 7; then surely the explanation is that mental retardation is a constitutionally mandated mitigating factor at sentencing, Penry, 492 U.S., at 328, 109 S.Ct. 2934. For that reason, even if there were uniform national sentiment in favor of executing the retarded in appropriate cases, one would still expect execution of the mentally retarded to be "uncommon." To adapt to the present case what the Court itself said in Stanford, 492 U.S., at 374, 109 S.Ct. 2969: "[I]t is not only possible, but overwhelmingly probable, that the very considerations which induce [today's majority] to believe that death should never be imposed on [mentally retarded] offenders ... cause prosecutors and juries to believe that it should rarely be imposed."

But the Prize for the Court's Most Feeble Effort to fabricate "national consensus" must go to its appeal (deservedly relegated to a footnote) to the views of assorted professional and religious organizations, members of the so-called "world community," and respondents to opinion polls. Ante, at 2249-2250, n. 21. I agree with THE CHIEF JUSTICE, ante, at 2254-2256 (dissenting opinion), that the views of professional and religious organizations and the results of opinion polls are irrelevant.[FN6] Equally irrelevant are the practices of the 348 "world community," whose notions of justice are (thankfully) not always those of our people. "We must never forget that it is a Constitution for the United States of America that we are expounding. ... [W]here there is not first a settled consensus among our own people, the views of other nations, however enlightened the Justices of this Court may think them to be, cannot be imposed upon Americans through the Constitution." 2265Thompson, 487 U.S., at 868-869, n. 4, 108 S.Ct. 2687 (SCALIA, J., dissenting).

> FN6. And in some cases positively counterindicative. The Court cites, for example, the views of the United States Catholic Conference, whose members are the active Catholic Bishops of the United States. See ante, at 2249-2250, n. 21 (citing Brief for United States Catholic Conference et al. as Amici Curiae 2). The attitudes of that body regarding crime and punishment are so far from being representative, even of the views of Catholics, that they are currently the object of intense national (and entirely ecumenical) criticism.

III

Beyond the empty talk of a "national consensus," the Court gives us a brief glimpse of what really underlies today's decision: pretension to a power confined neither by the moral sentiments originally enshrined in the Eighth Amendment (its original meaning) nor even by the current moral sentiments of the American people. " '[T]he Constitution,' the Court says, 'contemplates that in the end our own judgment will be brought to bear on the question of the acceptability of the death penalty under the Eighth Amendment.' "Ante, at 2247 (quoting Coker, 433 U.S., at 597, 97 S.Ct. 2861) (emphasis added). (The unexpressed reason for this unexpressed "contemplation" of the Constitution is presumably that really good lawyers have moral sentiments superior to those of the common herd, whether in 1791 or today.) The arrogance of this assumption of power takes one's breath away. And it explains, of course, why the Court can be so cavalier about the evidence of consensus. It is just a game, after all. " ' [I]n the end,' " Thompson, supra, at 823, n. 8 (plurality opinion (quoting Coker, supra, at 597 (plurality opinion))), it is the feelings and intuition of a majority of the Justices that count-"the perceptions of decency, or of penology, or of mercy, entertained ... by a majority of the small and 349 unrepresentative segment of our society that sits on this Court." Thompson, supra, at 873, 108 S.Ct. 2687 (SCALIA, J., dissenting).

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

The genuinely operative portion of the opinion, then, is the Court's statement of the reasons why it agrees with the contrived consensus it has found, that the "diminished capacities" of the mentally retarded render the death penalty excessive. Ante, at 2250-2252. The Court's analysis rests on two fundamental assumptions: (1) that the Eighth Amendment prohibits excessive punishments, and (2) that sentencing juries or judges are unable to account properly for the "diminished capacities" of the retarded. The first assumption is wrong, as I explained at length in Harmelin v. Michigan, 501 U.S. 957, 966-990, 111 S.Ct. 2680, 115 L.Ed.2d 836 (1991) (opinion of SCALIA, J.). The Eighth Amendment is addressed to always-and-everywhere "cruel" punishments, such as the rack and the thumbscrew. But where the punishment is in itself permissible, "[t]he Eighth Amendment is not a ratchet, whereby a temporary consensus on leniency for a particular crime fixes a permanent constitutional maximum, disabling the States from giving effect to altered beliefs and responding to changed social conditions." Id., at 990, 111 S.Ct. 2680. The second assumption-inability of judges or juries to take proper account of mental retardation-is not only unsubstantiated, but contradicts the immemorial belief, here and in England, that they play an indispensable role in such matters:

> "[I]t is very difficult to define the indivisible line that divides perfect and partial insanity; but it must rest upon circumstances duly to be weighed and considered both by the judge and jury, lest on the one side there be a kind of inhumanity towards the defects of human nature, or on the other side too great an indulgence given to great crimes ...." 1 Hale, Pleas of the Crown, at 30.

Proceeding from these faulty assumptions, the Court gives two reasons why the death penalty is an excessive punishment for all mentally retarded offenders. First, the "diminished350 capacities" of the mentally retarded raise a "serious question" whether their execution contributes to the "social purposes" of the death penalty, viz., retribution and deterrence. Ante, at 2250-2251. (The Court conveniently ignores a third "social purpose" of the death penalty-"incapacitation of dangerous criminals and the consequent prevention of crimes that they may otherwise commit in the future," 2266Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 183, n. 28, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 49 L.Ed.2d 859 (1976) (joint opinion of Stewart, Powell, and Stevens, JJ.). But never mind; its discussion of even the other two does not bear analysis.) Retribution is not advanced, the argument goes, because the mentally retarded are no more culpable than the average murderer, whom we have already held lacks sufficient culpability to warrant the death penalty, see Godfrey v. Georgia, 446 U.S. 420, 433, 100 S.Ct. 1759, 64 L.Ed.2d 398 (1980) (plurality opinion). Ante, at 2251. Who says so? Is there an established correlation between mental acuity and the ability to conform one's conduct to the law in such a rudimentary matter as murder? Are the mentally retarded really more disposed (and hence more likely) to commit willfully cruel and serious crime than others? In my experience, the opposite is true: being childlike generally suggests innocence rather than brutality.

Assuming, however, that there is a direct connection between diminished intelligence and the inability to refrain from murder, what scientific analysis can possibly show that a mildly retarded individual who commits an exquisite torture-killing is "no more culpable" than the "average" murderer in a holdup-gone-wrong or a domestic dispute? Or a moderately retarded individual who commits a series of 20 exquisite torture-killings? Surely culpability, and deservedness of the most severe retribution, depends not merely (if at all) upon the mental capacity of the criminal (above the level where he is able to distinguish right from wrong) but also upon the depravity of the crime-which is precisely why this sort of question has traditionally been thought answerable not by a categorical rule of the sort the Court today 351 imposes upon all trials, but rather by the sentencer's weighing of the circumstances (both degree of retardation and depravity of crime) in the particular case. The fact that juries continue to sentence mentally retarded offenders to death for extreme crimes shows that society's moral outrage sometimes demands execution of retarded offenders. By what principle of law, science, or logic can the Court pronounce that this is wrong? There is none. Once the Court admits (as it does) that mental retardation does not render the offender morally blameless, ante, at 2250-2251, there is no basis for saying that the death penalty is never appropriate retribution, no matter how heinous the crime. As long as a mentally retarded offender knows "the difference between right and wrong,"ante, at 2250, only the sentencer can assess whether his retardation reduces his culpability enough to exempt him from the death penalty for the particular murder in question.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

As for the other social purpose of the death penalty that the Court discusses, deterrence: That is not advanced, the Court tells us, because the mentally retarded are "less likely" than their non-retarded counterparts to "process the information of the possibility of execution as a penalty and ... control their conduct based upon that information." Ante, at 2251. Of course this leads to the same conclusion discussed earlier-that the mentally retarded (because they are less deterred) are more likely to kill-which neither I nor the society at large believes. In any event, even the Court does not say that all mentally retarded individuals cannot "process the information of the possibility of execution as a penalty and ... control their conduct based upon that information"; it merely asserts that they are "less likely" to be able to do so. But surely the deterrent effect of a penalty is adequately vindicated if it successfully deters many, but not all, of the target class. Virginia's death penalty, for example, does not fail of its deterrent effect simply because some criminals are unaware that Virginia has the death penalty. In other words, the supposed fact that some 352 retarded criminals cannot fully appreciate the death penalty has nothing to do with the deterrence rationale, but is simply an echo of the arguments denying a retribution rationale, discussed and rejected *2267 above. I am not sure that a murderer is somehow less blameworthy if (though he knew his act was wrong) he did not fully appreciate that he could die for it; but if so, we should treat a mentally retarded murderer the way we treat an offender who may be "less likely" to respond to the death penalty because he was abused as a child. We do not hold him immune from capital punishment, but require his background to be considered by the sentencer as a mitigating factor. Eddings v. Oklahoma, 455 U.S. 104, 113-117, 102 S.Ct. 869, 71 L.Ed.2d 1 (1982).

The Court throws one last factor into its grab bag of reasons why execution of the retarded is "excessive" in all cases: Mentally retarded offenders "face a special risk of wrongful execution" because they are less able "to make a persuasive showing of mitigation,""to give meaningful assistance to their counsel," and to be effective witnesses. Ante, at 2252. "Special risk" is pretty flabby language (even flabbier than "less likely")-and I suppose a similar "special risk" could be said to exist for just plain stupid people, inarticulate people, even ugly people. If this unsupported claim has any substance to it (which I doubt), it might support a due process claim in all criminal prosecutions of the mentally retarded; but it is hard to see how it has anything to do with an Eighth Amendment claim that execution of the mentally retarded is cruel and unusual. We have never before held it to be cruel and unusual punishment to impose a sentence in violation of some other constitutional imperative.

* * *

Today's opinion adds one more to the long list of substantive and procedural requirements impeding imposition of the death penalty imposed under this Court's assumed power to invent a death-is-different jurisprudence. None of those 353 requirements existed when the Eighth Amendment was adopted, and some of them were not even supported by current moral consensus. They include prohibition of the death penalty for "ordinary" murder, Godfrey, 446 U.S., at 433, 100 S.Ct. 1759, for rape of an adult woman, Coker, 433 U.S., at 592, 97 S.Ct. 2861, and for felony murder absent a showing that the defendant possessed a sufficiently culpable state of mind, Enmund, 458 U.S., at 801, 102 S.Ct. 3368; prohibition of the death penalty for any person under the age of 16 at the time of the crime, Thompson, 487 U.S., at 838, 108 S.Ct. 2687 (plurality opinion); prohibition of the death penalty as the mandatory punishment for any crime, Woodson v. North Carolina, 428 U.S. 280, 305, 96 S.Ct. 2978, 49 L.Ed.2d 944 (1976) (plurality opinion), Sumner v. Shuman, 483 U.S. 66, 77-78, 107 S.Ct. 2716, 97 L.Ed.2d 56 (1987); a requirement that the sentencer not be given unguided discretion, Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 92 S.Ct. 2726, 33 L.Ed.2d 346 (1972)(per curiam), a requirement that the sentencer be empowered to take into account all mitigating circumstances, Lockett v. Ohio, 438 U.S. 586, 604, 98 S.Ct. 2954, 57 L.Ed.2d 973 (1978) (plurality opinion), Eddings v. Oklahoma, supra, at 110, 102 S.Ct. 869; and a requirement that the accused receive a judicial evaluation of his claim of insanity before the sentence can be executed, Ford, 477 U.S., at 410-411, 106 S.Ct. 2595 (plurality opinion). There is something to be said for popular abolition of the death penalty; there is nothing to be said for its incremental abolition by this Court.

This newest invention promises to be more effective than any of the others in turning the process of capital trial into a game. One need only read the definitions of mental retardation adopted by the American Association on Mental Retardation and the American Psychiatric Association (set forth in the Court's opinion, ante, at 2245, n. 3) to realize that the symptoms of this condition can readily be feigned. And whereas the capital defendant who feigns insanity risks commitment to a mental institution until he can be cured (and then tried and executed), 2268Jones v. United States, 463 U.S. 354, 370, and n. 20, 103 S.Ct. 3043, 77 L.Ed.2d 694 (1983), the capital defendant who feigns mental retardation risks nothing at all. The mere pendency 354 of the present case has brought us petitions by death row inmates claiming for the first time, after multiple habeas petitions, that they are retarded. See, e.g., Moore v. Texas, 535 U.S. 1044, 122 S.Ct. 1814, 152 L.Ed.2d 668 (2002) (SCALIA, J., dissenting from grant of applications for stay of execution).

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Perhaps these practical difficulties will not be experienced by the minority of capital-punishment States that have very recently changed mental retardation from a mitigating factor (to be accepted or rejected by the sentencer) to an absolute immunity. Time will tell-and the brief time those States have had the new disposition in place (an average of 6.8 years) is surely not enough. But if the practical difficulties do not appear, and if the other States share the Court's perceived moral consensus that all mental retardation renders the death penalty inappropriate for all crimes, then that majority will presumably follow suit. But there is no justification for this Court's pushing them into the experiment-and turning the experiment into a permanent practice-on constitutional pretext. Nothing has changed the accuracy of Matthew Hale's endorsement of the common law's traditional method for taking account of guilt-reducing factors, written over three centuries ago:

"[Determination of a person's incapacity] is a matter of great difficulty, partly from the easiness of counterfeiting this disability ... and partly from the variety of the degrees of this infirmity, whereof some are sufficient, and some are insufficient to excuse persons in capital offenses. ...

"Yet the law of England hath afforded the best method of trial, that is possible, of this and all other matters of fact, namely, by a jury of twelve men all concurring in the same judgment, by the testimony of witnesses ..., and by the inspection and direction of the judge." 1 Pleas of the Crown, at 32-33.

I respectfully dissent.

U.S.,2002.
Atkins v. Virginia
536 U.S. 304, 122 S.Ct. 2242, 153 L.Ed.2d 335, 70 USLW 4585, 02 Cal. Daily Op. Serv. 5439, 2002 Daily Journal D.A.R. 6937, 15 Fla. L. Weekly Fed. S 397

END OF DOCUMENT

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Legislative Research Services

Alaska State Legislature
Legislative Affairs Agency
Division of Legal & Research Services

State Capitol, Room 3
Juneau, Alaska 99801
Phone: (907) 465-3991

January 15, 1997

MEMORANDUM

TO: Representative Al Vezey

FROM: Patricia Young
Legislative Analyst

RE: History of Capital Punishment in Alaska
Research Request 97.029

You asked for a legislative history of capital punishment in Alaska, both before and since statehood. You requested information on bills introduced to reestablish capital punishment within the state as well as votes by the pubic in regard to the death penalty.

Summary

Although records are incomplete, it appears that capital punishment was condoned, if not legal, in Alaska from the time of its purchase from Russia in 1867. The available historical records suggest that seven persons were hanged by the army or miners' courts between 1869 and 1899. Another eight persons were hanged for crimes deemed to warrant death after criminal and civil codes had been established for Alaska. In 1957, the Territorial Legislature abolished capital punishment, citing concern that innocent persons could be executed. Since that time, nine Alaska Legislatures have considered 17 bills pertaining to the issue. Of the 17, two original bills and the final version of a third focused only on placing an advisory vote before the public regarding whether the legislature should enact a death penalty law. None of the bills, including those for advisory votes, passed. In 1985 the division of elections certified a ballot initiative, but it did not appear on the ballot because of insufficient public support.

The Death Penalty in Alaska

After its purchase from Russia in 1867, Alaska was administered by the U.S. Army and later by the U.S. Navy until passage of the Organic Act of 1884, by which Congress extended the mining laws of the United States and the Oregon Code of Laws, "so far as they may be applicable" to the district of Alaska.[1] According to Carter's Annotated Alaska Codes published in 1907, the laws regarding death warrants and designating the procedures for execution came from the laws of Oregon--presumably by virtue of the Organic Act. The Organic Act also provided for a governor and a court system. However, the more pertinent death penalty laws--those providing that an individual found guilty of murder in the first degree, or murder occasioned by obstruction of, or damage to, a railroad would be put to death unless the jury returned a verdict specifically qualifying that the sentence should be "without capital punishment"-- appear to have been derived from laws in Ohio, and the exact date of their incorporation is uncertain.[2] We know, however, that Congress made provisions for the rights-of-way for railroads in Alaska in 1898; in 1899, a criminal code was established; and in 1900, a civil code.

[1]Information from Robert DeArmond's, "Alaska: 1867-1959," found in Alaska: Blue Book 1973, first edition, 141-154.

Regardless of the exact source or date of inception, the death penalty was used early in Alaska's history. Although records are sketchy and informal, it appears that capital punishment was condoned, if not legal, in Alaska from the time of its purchase from Russia in 1867. The available historical records suggest that seven persons were hanged by the army or miners' courts between 1869 and 1899.[3] Another eight persons were hanged for crimes deemed to warrant death between the advent of criminal and civil codes in Alaska and the abolition of capital punishment in 1957.[4]

Although the Legislative Library has no record of the debate on the elimination of the death penalty, an Associated Press article published following the bill's passage in the House in 1957 suggests that Warren Taylor, the bill's primary sponsor, was concerned about the possibility of individuals being unjustly executed. According to a more recent news article, a "significant basis" for the bill was the uneven application of the penalty--"three-fourths of the people hanged in Alaska this century were members of racial minorities, even though minorities accounted for only about one-fourth of the murders."[5]

The following table represents a compilation of the historical information available on executions in Alaska. The information has been derived from documents provided by the Historical Collections within the Alaska State Library and from information found in Glacier Bay: The Land and the Silence, published by the Alaska National Parks and Monuments Association.

---

[2]See Attachment A, which includes pertinent sections from the following sources: Compilation of the Acts of Congress and Treaties Relating to Alaska from March 30, 1867 to March 3, 1905 (known as the Charlton Code), published in 1906; Carter's Annotated Alaska Codes (known as the Carter Code), published in 1907; Compiled Laws of Alaska (CLA) 1913; Compiled Laws of Alaska, 1933; the Alaska Compiled Laws Annotated (ACLA), 1949; and Chapter 132 Session Laws of Alaska, 1957.

[3]Attachment B contains two items compiled by the Historical Collections of the Alaska State Library and an excerpt describing and documenting the hanging of Michael Dennin in 1899 from Dave Bohn's Glacier Bay: The Land and the Silence published by the Alaska National Parks and Monuments Association.. Library documents include what appears to be a letter from Alaska Superior Court Judge Gerald Williams to "Karen," dated May 23, 1977, regarding hangings prior to 1900, and a list of hangings in Alaska by date, source unknown.

[4]Attachment C contains two items compiled by the Historical Collections of the Alaska State Library:. a letter from Charles J. Zibulka to the curator of the Alaska State Museum and Historical Library, dated August 10, 1965, and a table listing executed persons from 1902 forward, source unknown.

[5]Attachment D contains an Associated Press news article entitled "House Votes to Abolish Alaska Death Penalty," published February 22, 1957; a transcript of that article; and Averil Lerman's," Death's Double Standard: Territorial Alaska's Experience with Capital Punishment Showed Race and Money Mattered," published May 1, 1994, in the Anchorage Daily News.

EXECUTIONS IN ALASKA
Name	Race	Sex	Location of Hanging	Date of Hanging
Scutdoo	Indian	male	Wrangell	December 29,1869
unknown	Indian	male	Wrangell	1869
Boyd	Caucasian	male	Wrangell	Fall, 1877
Sad Kajun (?)	Indian	male	Juneau	July, 1882
Kakusakuch Kajun (?)	Indian	male	Juneau	July, 1882
unknown	unknown	male	Valdez	1898
Michael Dennin	Caucasian	male	Lituya Bay	1899
Fred Hardy	Caucasian	male	Nome	September 9, 1902
Homer Bird	Caucasian	male	Sitka	March 6, 1903
Mailo P. Segura	Immigrated from Montenegro; presumed Caucasian	male	Fairbanks	April 15, 1921
Hamilton	Indian	male	Fairbanks	October 7, 1921
Constantine Beaver	Indian	male	Fairbanks	September 7, 1929
Nelson Charles	Indian	male	Juneau	November 10, 1939
Austin A. Nelson	African-American	male	Juneau	March 1, 1948
Eugene LaMoore	African-American	male	Juneau	April 14, 1950

Prepared by Legislative Research Services, January 1997 (97.029).

Source: Documents provided by the Historical Collections of the Alaska State Library, and information in Glacier Bay: The Land and the Silence, published by the Alaska National Parks and Monuments Association.

Efforts to Reinstitute the Death Penalty in Alaska

Since 1957, nine Alaska Legislatures have considered 17 bills pertaining to the issue. The first attempt to reinstate capital punishment came in 1974, the most recent was in 1996. Of the 17, two original bills--House Bill (HB) 235 introduced in 1983, and Senate Bill (SB) 13 introduced in 1991--and the final version of a third (SB 52 introduced in 1995) focused only on placing advisory votes before the public regarding whether the legislature should enact death penalty laws. The other 14 bills set guidelines for the imposition of the death penalty.[6]

None of the bills passed. Of the 17 bills introduced, 13 died in committee without a floor vote of the originating body (eight died in the first committee; five in the second committee). Of the four bills to progress to a floor vote, one failed (HB 675 in 1974) and three passed the originating body but failed to reach the floor of the other body [HB 235 in 1983, CSSB 17 (Jud)(ct rules & efds fld), and CSSSSB 52 (Jud) in 1996]. Two of the bills that passed one chamber proposed only that advisory votes be placed before the voters.

The attached table, "Alaska Legislation Pertaining to Capital Punishment (1959-1996)," lists the measures introduced and includes a brief synopsis and the major provisions of each bill. As you will see, identical bills introduced in 1981 (HB 458 and SB 73) formed the basis for most of the subsequent proposals.

One additional attempt to bring the issue before the voters began on September 16, 1985, when the division of elections certified a ballot initiative proposed by Representative Fritz Pettyjohn, former Representative Sam Pestinger, and William Moffatt. In order to have the initiative appear on the 1988 primary ballot, supporters needed 21,317 signatures on file by October 9, 1986. Because only 14,245 signatures were collected, the initiative did not appear on the ballot.

I hope this information is helpful. If you have questions, need further information, or would like copies of the various bills, please let me know.

Attachments

[6]Several of the other bills contained provisions for advisory votes, but in those, the advisory vote concerned the effective date of the reinstitution of capital punishment.

ALASKA LEGISLATION PERTAINING TO CAPITAL PUNISHMENT (1959-1996)

1974 - Eighth Legislature

House Bill 675

Prime Sponsor: A.M. Saylors
Referred to House Judiciary; committee substitute passed Judiciary; failed to pass House.
(CS made minor text changes).

- Mandated the death penalty for first degree murder if the murder was 1) intentional and carried out under an agreement; 2) the victim was a peace officer intentionally killed in the course of duty; 3) the murder was committed during the commission or attempted commission of robbery under AS 11.15.240, kidnapping under AS 11.15.260, rape, or burglary under 11.20.080-130; 4) the convicted person was, at the time of the murder, confined in prison or had escaped from prison; or 5) the victim was a witness to a crime who was murdered for the purpose of preventing his or her testimony in a criminal proceeding.
- Changed Rule 35, Rules of Criminal Procedure, to eliminate the power of the court to reduce sentences in the case of certain murder convictions.

1981 - Twelfth Legislature

Senate Bill 73

Prime Sponsor: Brad Bradley
Referred to Senate State Affairs and Judiciary; did not pass out of State Affairs.

- Classifed murder in the first degree as a capital felony punishable by a prison term of 20-99 yrs or death.
- Set procedure for automatic review by the supreme court for capital punishment sentences and listed determinations to be made by the court, including whether sentence was imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice or other arbitrary factor; the evidence supported the finding of an aggravating factor; and the sentence was excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases. If the judgment of conviction and death sentence was upheld, the court would specify the time, place, and manner of execution.
- Set out the sentencing procedure for a capital felony, which included a separate proceeding before a jury including any evidence presented to the jury as to mitigating or aggravating factors the court considered to have probative value, followed by an advisory sentence by a jury which would include findings as to whether aggravating factors existed to justify the death sentence, mitigating factors existed which outweighed the aggravating factors and whether the sentence should be imprisonment or death. The court, after considering evidence and the advisory sentence would impose sentence. If it was death, the court would make written findings of aggravating and/or mitigating factors considered.
- Defined the following as aggravating factors: defendant's conduct manifested deliberate cruelty in that it involved torture or aggravated battery; the conduct created a risk of imminent physical injury to three or more persons, other than accomplices; defendant had a prior felony conviction involving the use of violence; defendant committed the offense pursuant to an agreement for gain; defendant was on release for another felony charge or conviction having assault as an element; defendant knowingly directed the offense at an active or former officer of the court, judicial officer, prosecuting attorney, law enforcement officer, correctional employee, or fireman because of or during official duty; or defendant was a member of an organized group and the offense was committed to further the group's criminal objectives.
- Defined the following as mitigating factors: defendant committed the offense under some degree of duress, coercion, threat or complusion insufficient to constitute a defense, but which affected his conduct; the conduct of a youthful defendant was influenced by a more mature person; defendant had provocation from the victim; or defendant assisted authorities detect or apprehend other persons who committed the offense.

House Bill 458 Text was the same as Senate Bill 73.

Prime Sponsor: Vern Hurlbert
Referred to House Judiciary; did not pass out of committee.

1983 - Thirteenth Legislature

Senate Bill 121 Text was the same as Senate Bill 73, 1981, with the exception listed below.

Prime Sponsor: Fritz Pettyjohn
Co-Sponsors: Tim Kelly, Paul Fischer, and Jan Faiks
Referred to Senate Judiciary and Finance; did not pass out of Judiciary.

The jury imposed sentence rather than issuing an advisory sentence for the court's imposition of sentence.

House Bill 140 Text was the same as SB 73, 1981.

Prime Sponsor: Sam Pestinger
Co-Sponsors: Jerry Ward, Joe Flood, John Liska, Dick Shultz
Referred to House Judiciary and Finance; committee substitute passed Judiciary; did not pass out of Finance.

CSHB 140(Jud) Added the following provisions:

- A person convicted of a capital offense may not be released on bail before sentencing or pending appeal.
- Transferred responsibility for issuing the time, place and manner of execution from the supreme court to the commissioner of corrections.
- Gave defendant a choice of execution by lethal injection or by firing squad.
- Stated an execution by firing squad would be carried out at a state prison by a firing squad of six peace officers.
- Stated that the commissioner of corrections in consultation with a physician would select a method of injection and a drug or combination of drugs for use in an execution by lethal injection.
- Stated that the commissioner could invite up to 9 citizens 19 years of age or older to attend the execution, including the prosecuting and defense attorney, relatives, friends or religious representatives designated by the defendant. No more than 6 media members could attend and were to serve as a pool for other members of the media; and that photographic or recording equipment would not be allowed until the site was restored to an orderly condition.
- Stated that if, after sentence was imposed, the defendant was found to be incompetent or pregnant, the court and attorneys would be notified and the execution of sentence would be stayed pending further order of the court. If pregnant, the death sentence would be stayed until the defendant was no longer pregnant. At that time the court would issue another warrant specifying a date of execution not less than 30 days nor more than 60 days after the date of the warrant. If found to be incompetent, an order for commitment as provided under AS 12.47.110 would be issued. If competent, the supreme court would issue another warrant specifying the date of execution not less than 30 days nor more than 60 days after the date of the warrant.

House Bill 235

Prime Sponsor: Charlie Bussell
Co-Sponsors: Rick Uehling, John Liska, Dick Shultz
Passed the House; referred to Senate State Affiars and Judiciary; did not pass out of Senate State Affairs.

Provided for an advisory vote at the next election on whether the legislature should enact a law providing for capital punishment for murder in the first degree.

1985 - Fourteenth Legislature

Senate Bill 119 Text was the same as CS HB 140 (Jud), 1983, with the provision below added.

Prime Sponsor: Paul Fischer
Co-Sponsors: Tim Kelly, Ann DeVries, Jack Coghill, Jan Faiks, and Mitch Abood
Referred to Health, Education, and Social Services, Judiciary and Finance; did not pass out of Health, Education, and Social Services.

Added a provision for an advisory vote at the next election on whether or not capital punishment for murder in the first degree should go into effect 08/15/87.

House Bill 163 Text was the same as Senate Bill 73, 1981, with the three exceptions listed below.

Prime Sponsor: Fritz Pettyjohn
Co-Sponsors: Roger Jenkins, Dick Shultz, Robin Taylor, Andre Marrou, Max Gruenberg
Referred to House Health, Education, and Social Services, Judiciary and Finance; did not pass out of Health Education, and Social Services.

- The jury imposed sentence rather than issuing an advisory sentence for the court's imposition of sentence.
- If the death penalty was imposed, the defendant was considered to have applied for modification of the verdict or findings under Criminal Rule 35.
- The execution would be carried out at a state correctional facility by either hanging or by continuous, intravenous administration of a lethal dose of sodium thiopental.

1987 - Fifteenth Legislature

Senate Bill 7 Text was practically the same as CS HB 140(Jud), 1983, with the exceptions listed below.

Prime Sponsor: Mitch Abood
Co-Sponsors: Tim Kelly, Jan Faiks, Paul Fischer
Referred to Senate Health, Education, and Social Services, Judiciary, and Finance; did not pass out of Judiciary.

- Stated that death warrant was to specify date of execution which was to be no less than 30 nor more than 60 days after the date of the warrant.
- Omitted the guidelines by which the firing squad would be selected and the form of lethal injection would be determined. Simply stated that regulations were to be adopted.
- Omitted the guidelines concerning attendance at executions. Simply stated that regulations were to be adopted.
- Changed the aggravating factors to be considered to the following: defendant's conduct manifested deliberate cruelty in that it involved sexual assault in the first degree, kidnapping or assault in the first degree; defendant's conduct caused the death of two or more persons, other than accomplices; defendant had a prior conviction for murder; defendant knowingly directed the conduct at the President of the U.S. or governor of the state; defendant knowingly directed the conduct at a law enforcement, judicial officer, or correctional officer during or because of official duties; defendant killed a child 9 years of age or younger during the commission of the offense; defendant committed the offense under an agreement for gain; defendant committed the offense while avoiding lawful arrest or escaping from lawful confinement; or defendant committed the offense after escaping from the lawful custody of a peace officer or place of lawful confinement.

1987 - Fifteenth Legislature (continued)

CSSB 7(HESS) Added the following provisions.

- Amended AS 11.31.100(d) and AS 11.31.110(c) to include capital felonies in the definition of class A felonies
- Inserted the guidelines from CSHB 140 (Jud) by which the firing squad would be selected and the form of lethal injection would be determined.
- Inserted the guidelines from CSHB 140(Jud) concerning attendance at executions.
- Made the following revisions to the list of aggravating factors: 1) added torture and aggravated battery to the list of actions manifesting deliberate cruelty; 2) added a prior conviction for a felony involving the use of violence to the factor citing prior murder convictions; 3) added prosecuting attorneys and firemen to the list of people the defendant may have knowingly directed the offense at; 4) added defendant's conduct created a risk of imminent physical injury to 3 or more persons other than accomplices; 5) deleted the factor citing the killing of a child of 9 years of age or younger; and 6) revised the factors concerning the committing the offense while avoiding arrest or escaping from confinement to say that the defendant was on release for another felony charge or conviction having assault as a necessary element. All these revisions made the list of aggravating factors practically the same as those in CS HB 140 (Jud).
- Added a provision for an advisory vote at the next election on whether or not capital punishment for murder in the first degree should go into effect 08/15/89

Senate Bill 31 Text was the same as CSHB 140(Jud), 1983, with the following addition.

Prime Sponsor: Paul Fischer
Co-Sponsors: Tim Kelly and Jan Faiks
Referred to Senate Health, Education, and Social Services, Judiciary and Finance; did not pass out of Health, Education, and Social Services.

Added a provision for an advisory vote at the next election on whether or not capital punishment for murder in the first degree should go into effect 08/15/89

1989 - Sixteenth Legislature

Senate Bill 17 Although arranged differently, text of the original version was practically the same as CSSB 7 (HESS) 1987, with the following additions.

Prime Sponsor: Paul Fischer
Co-Sponsors: Tim Kelly, Drue Pearce, Rick Halford and Jan Faiks
CSSB 17 (Jud) (ct rules & efds fld) passed the Senate; referred to House Judiciary and Finance; failed to pass Judiciary.

- Amended AS 12.30.020(a) to exclude a capital felony from the requirement of bail and release.
- Amended AS 12.30.020(a) to exclude persons charged with a capital felony from the provision prohibiting new charges against a defendant who remains incompetent for five years after the charges have been dismissed under the subsection.
- In the section regarding the review of judgment of conviction, added to the issues the court shall determine "any other issue the defendant may raise as a point on appeal."
- Added sections regarding the applicability of various sections of the bill to criminal and appellate rules.

CSSB 17 (Jud)

- Added a section of Legislative Findings
- Added a section stating that it was up to the prosecuting attorney to determine whether or not to seek the death penalty. If the death penalty was to be sought, the court, defendant and defendant's counsel were to be notified within 10 days of arraignment.
- Deleted the section providing for execution by firing squad.

1989 - Sixteenth Legislature (continued)

CSSB 17 (Jud)(ct rules & efds fld)

- Deleted the sections regarding the applicability of the bill to criminal and appellate rules.
- Deleted the sections regarding the effective dates.

1991 - Seventeenth Legislature

Senate Bill 13

Prime Sponsor: Paul Fischer
Co-Sponsors: Steve Frank, Drue Pearce and Rick Halford
Referred to Senate Judiciary and Finance; did not pass out of Finance.

Provided for an advisory vote at the next general election on whether the legislature should enact a law providing for capital punishment for murder in the first degree.

1993 - Eighteenth Legislature

House Bill 162 Text was practically the same as CSSB 17 (JUD) (ct rules & efds fld), 1989, with the following changes.

Prime Sponsor: Jerry Sanders
Co-Sponsor: Harley Olberg
Referred to House Judiciary and Finance; did not pass out of Finance.

- Omitted sections amending AS 11.31.100(d) to replace "murder in the first degree" with "capital felony" and omitted amending AS 11.31.110(c).
- Added amendment to AS 12.55.025(i) to "include determining if a sentence of death should be imposed under AS 12.58."
- Required a 99-year sentence for defendants convicted of murder in the 1st degree but not sentenced to death if 1) the conviction was for the murder of a peace officer, firefighter or correctional official engaged in the performance of official duties; 2) the defendant had previous convictions for 1st or 2nd degree murder or homocide with elements of 1st or 2nd degree murder; or 3) the court finds the defendant subjected the victim to substantial physical torture.
- Prohibited a sentence of death from being suspended.
- Required that aggravating factors be found "unanimously beyond a reasonable doubt" and that aggravating factors outweigh mitigating factors unanimously by a preponderance of evidence."
- Removed sexual assault in the first degree, kidnapping, and assault in the 1st degree from the list of aggravating factors. Added being a member of an organized group of 5 or more and committing the offense to further the criminal objectives of the group to the list of aggravating factors.
- Added hanging as a method of execution and specified sodium thiopental as the substance to be used in lethal injection.
- Omitted sections pertaining to witnesses and invitees to and news media coverage of an execution.
- Reinserted sections regarding the applicability of sections of the bill to criminal and appellate rules. Reinserted the sections regarding the effective dates.

ALASKA LEGISLATION PERTAINING TO CAPITAL PUNISHMENT (1959-1996)

1993 - Eighteenth Legislature (continued)

Senate Bill 127 Text was similar to HB 162 with the following exceptions.

Prime Sponsor: Senate Judiciary Committee
Referred to Senate Judiciary and Finance; did not pass out of Judiciary.

- Eliminated section on Legislative Findings.
- Eliminated the provision that the prosecuting attorney determines whether to seek the death penalty.
- Eliminated sections on applicibility of the bill to criminal and appellate court rules.

1995 - Nineteenth Legislature

House Bill 45 Text was similar to SB 127 with the following exceptions.

Prime Sponsor: Jerry Sanders
Co-Sponsor: Vic Kohring
Referred to House State Affairs, Judiciary, and Finance; did not pass out of State Affairs.

- Added a section including capital felonies among violations required to be reported in applications for permits under AS 05.15.140(b).
- Amended AS 11.31 to incorporate capital offenses into attempt, solicitation, and conspiracy to commit a crime.
- Eliminated hanging as the preferred manner of execution.
- Amended AS 47.10 to include capital felony among the charges for which minors of 16 or more must be charged, prosecuted, and sentenced as adults unless they prove themselves amenable to treatment

Senate Bill 52 Text was the same as HB 45 with the following exceptions.

Prime Sponsor: Robin Taylor
Co-Sponsor: Drew Pearce
Referred to Judiciary and Finance; committee subsitute for sponsor substitute passed Senate; referred to House Judiciary and Finance; did not pass out of Finance.

- Eliminated sections amending AS 11.31 (attempt, solicitation, and conspiracy to commit a crime).
- Reinserted the provision that death would be inflicted by hanging unless the defendant elected a lethal dose of sodium thiopental.
- Eliminated provision that minors 16 and over committing capital offenses would be charged, prosecuted and sentenced as adults.

SSSB 52 Text became identical to HB 45.

CSSSSB 52 (Jud) Eliminated all previous provisions; provided for an advisory vote at the next election on whether the legislature should enact a law providing for capital puishment for murder in the first degree.

ALASKA LEGISLATION PERTAINING TO CAPITAL PUNISHMENT (1959-1996)

1995 - Nineteenth Legislature (continued)

House Bill 481 Text was similar to HB 45 with the following exceptions.

Prime Sponsor: Beverly Masek
Co-Sponsors: Vic Kohring and Scott Ogan
Referred to House State Affairs and Judiciary; did not pass out of Judiciary.

- Aggravating factors were limited to the defendant's having caused the death of a child under the age of 18, the defendant's being at least two years older than the child, and the defendant had or was attempting to kidnap, assault, or sexually assault the child.
- Eliminated the advisory vote provision regarding whether the law as passed should go into effect on a certain date.
- Reinserted sections regarding the applicability of the bill to criminal and appellate rules of court.

Source: Individual legislation, bill histories, and final status of bills and resolutions for the respective years.

NATIONAL CONFERENCE of STATE LEGISLATURES

The Forum for America's Ideas

Capital Case Sentencing Procedure

A unanimous jury must sentence to death in 24 states: Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Illinois, Kansas, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Washington, Wyoming.

In Missouri, a jury sentences to death unless a defendant waives trial by jury, and then the judge determines guilt and assesses the death penalty. Similarly in New Mexico, the jury that found a defendant guilty determines in a separate court proceeding whether the defendant should be sentenced to death or life imprisonment. In a nonjury trial, the trial judge makes that determination, also in a sentencing proceeding.

A judge with jury recommendation hands down a death sentence in six states: Alabama, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Kentucky. In Alabama, Georgia, Indiana, Kentucky and Ohio, the jury recommendation must be unanimous.

A judge sentences to death in four states: Arizona, Idaho, Montana, Nebraska

Colorado has three-judge panels that determine a death sentence.

Thirty-six states have a death penalty.

Date: June 2008

Source: Conference of State Court Administrators and the National Center for State Courts.

Clemency Process By State

Governor Has Sole Authority (14)

Alabama	New Jersey	South Carolina
California	New Mexico	Virginia
Colorado	New York	Washington
Kansas	North Carolina	Wyoming
Kentucky	Oregon

Governor: Must Have Recommendation of Clemency from Board or Advisory Group (9)

Arizona	Indiana	Oklahoma
Delaware	Louisiana	Pennsylvania
Florida*	Montana	Texas

Governor: After Non-binding Recommendation of Clemency from Board or Advisory Group (9)

Arkansas	Mississippi	Ohio
Illinois	Missouri	South Dakota
Maryland	New Hampshire	Tennessee

Board or Advisory Group Makes Determination (3)

Connecticut

Georgia

Idaho

Governor Sits on Clemency Board Which Makes the Determination (3)

Nebraska

Nevada
Utah

Notes:
*Florida's Governor must have recommendation of Board, on which s/he sits.

For Federal Death Row inmates, the President alone has pardon power.

Source: "Executive Clemency Process and Execution Warrant Procedure In Death Penalty Cases," National Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty (1993), with updates by DPIC.

2008 enactments:

IDAHO SB 1246 Provides that a judge is not required to sequester a jury in first degree murder cases when the state has not filed a notice of intent to seek the death penalty or has withdrawn such notice.

IDAHO SB1422 Extends the time limitation for filing notice of intent to seek the death penalty in capital cases, allows the state and defense to stipulate or agree to a different time limitation as deemed reasonable by the court.

Illinois SB 2657 Amends the Capital Punishment Reform Study Committee Act. Amends the date by which the Capital Punishment Reform Study Committee must submit its final report to the General Assembly.

MARYLAND HB 1111 Establishes a State Commission on Capital Punishment, provides for the membership of the Commission, authorizes the Commission to hold public hearings, provides for the staffing of the Commission, requires specified entities to cooperate with the Commission.

MARYLAND SB 614 Establishes a State Commission on Capital Punishment, provides for the membership of the Commission, provides for the chair of the Commission, authorizes the Commission to hold public hearings, provides for the staffing of the Commission, requires specified entities to cooperate with the Commission, provides for the funding of the Commission, provides that a member of the Commission may not receive compensation but is entitled to specified reimbursement.

TENNESSEE SB 2718 Extends the reporting period for the Special Committee to Study the Administration of the Death Penalty and provides that upon submitting its report the committee shall cease to exist.

TENNESSEE SB 4154 Concerns sentencing, relates to first degree murder, adds as a statutory aggravating circumstance for a sentence of death or imprisonment for life without parole, the fact that the murder was committed against a probation and parole officer.

UTAH SB 150 Provides an attempt to commit a felony punishable by imprisonment for life without parole is a first degree felony, provides that a person who is convicted of aggravated murder, based on an aggravating circumstance that also constitutes a separate offense, may also be convicted of, and punished for, the separate offense, provides a person who is convicted of murder, based on a predicate offense that also constitutes a separate offense, may also be convicted of, and punished for, the separate offense.

UTAH SB 187 Modifies the Code of Criminal Procedure regarding bail in aggravated murder cases, provides that a charge of aggravated murder is considered a capital felony and not subject to bail unless the prosecutor files a notice that the death penalty will not be sought, or the time for filing the notice has passed.

6) 2007 enactments:

Illinois SB 1023 – Creates the Capital Crimes Database to collect and retain all information on the prosecution, pendency, and disposition of capital and capital eligible cases. Provides that a defendant may request Integrated Ballistic Identification System testing on evidence not previously requested because the technology was not available. Requires any new fingerprint evidence that does not match the defendant or victim to be submitted to the FBI's Integrated Automated Fingerprint Identification System. Requires the creation of guidelines for all mandated recordings of custodial interrogations in homicide investigations. Prohibits the classification of "armed violence" to attach with any offense that makes the possession or use of a dangerous weapon either an element of the base offense, an aggravated or enhanced version of the offense, or a mandatory sentencing factor that increases the sentencing range. Removes the criminal sexual assault from the list of crimes for which the sentence for armed violence may run consecutively.

Louisiana SB 147 Provides a district attorney with the option to not seek a capital verdict, provides that if the district attorney seeks a capital verdict, the offender shall be punished by death or by life imprisonment at hard labor without benefit of parole, probation, or suspension of sentence, in accordance with the determination of the jury, relates to cases of capital punishment.

Missouri HB 820
Requires the selection of an execution team by the Director of the Department of Corrections that will consist of medical support personnel and individuals who administer lethal gas or chemicals, provides the identities of the team members must be kept confidential, provides that the department's records of such personnel is confidential, prohibits any licensing board or department from sanctioning a professional license of a team member due to his or her lawful participation in an execution.

Nevada AB 58: Expands the list of first degree murder acts committed in the perpetration or attempted perpetration of specified crimes to provide that murder of the first degree also includes murder committed in the perpetration or attempted perpetration of abuse of an older person or vulnerable person.

North Carolina HB 784 Increases from 17 years old to 18 the minimum eligible age for the death penalty.

South Dakota HB 1175 Provides for substances used in the execution of a sentence of death and to allow the choice of the substances used in an execution under certain circumstances.

Texas HB 1545 Relates to competency to be executed in a capital case.

Texas SB 705 Relates to an annual report by the Office of Court Administration of the Judicial System about jury charges and sentences in capital cases.

Utah HB 93 Provides that the commission or attempt to commit specified offenses, including sexual offenses, against a child as part of the commission of the homicide constitutes aggravated murder, if committed with reckless indifferences to human life, modifies an element of aggravated murder regarding acting for pecuniary gain, modifies an element of murder to specify knowing as the level of intent when the defendant acts with depraved indifference.

Utah HB 228 Relates to penalty for homicide of a child, provides that murder of a child younger than 14 years of age is a capital felony, amends the definition of aggravated murder, which is a capital offense, to include the intentional or knowing murder of a child younger than 14 years of age.

Utah SB 114 Provides that aggravated murder is a capital felony if the prosecutor elects to file notice of intent to seek the death penalty within 60 days after the arraignment, provides the court may not receive a plea to a noncapital first degree aggravated homicide offense during the filing period unless agreed to by the prosecution, provides that a person who has been convicted of or has pled to a noncapital aggravated homicide offices shall be sentenced to life in prison without parole.

Virginia HB 2418 Relates to prisoner transfer to a facility housing a death chamber, provides that the identities of persons designated to carry out an execution are confidential and not subject to discovery or introduction as evidence in any proceeding, removes the specific time constraints on when a prisoner condemned to die must be transferred to the correctional center wherein the death chamber is housed and when the prisoner must elect to execution by a method other than lethal injection.

Virginia SB 1295 Relates to the transfer of a prisoner to a facility housing death chamber, concerns confidentiality of execution records.

7) 2006 enactments:

Arizona SB 1376 Establishes the State Capital Postconviction Public Defender Office to represent persons who are not financially able to employ counsel in postconviction relief proceedings in state court after a judgment of death has been rendered.

Goergia HB 57 Protects physicians and medical professionals involved in state ordered executions from challenges to their licensure soley on the basis of their participation in such executions.

Idaho HB 533 Adds sexual abuse in conjunction with murder of a minor to the list of agrravating circumstances for the death penalty.

Idaho SB 1302 Provides in a death penalty case that a trial judge does not have to prepare and submit to the state supreme court a report unless the jury has been waved for sentencing. Eliminates the term "excessive" due to the Idaho Supreme Court ruling in State v. Fields, 1995.

Indiana SB 160 Reduces from ten to five the number of family members of a convicted person that may be present at the execution. Allows eight adult family members of the victim to be present at the execution. Instructs the department of corrections to create procedures for determining which family members may attend an execution if there is more than one vicitm or more than eight immediate family members. Establishes a support room for the use of family members of a victim and support persons who will not be present at the execution.

Louisiana HB 635 Adds 2nd degree robbery, cruelty to juveniles, 2nd degree cruelty to juveniles, and terrorism to the list of aggravating circumstances that should be considered in imposing the death sentence.

Oklahoma SB 1807 Prohibits a sentence of death for defendants who experienced an onset of mental retardation before the age of eighteen. Provides the burden of proof is on the defendant. If the courts deems the defendant mentally sound, it does not prohibit the defendant from raising the issue during the sentencing trial or during the appeals process.

South Carolina SB 1138 Creates the crime of criminal sexual conduct with a minor. Provides if the victim is under 11 years of age the mandatory sentence is twenty-five years to life imprisonment. Provides if the defendant has a previous conviction for sexual conduct involving sexual or anal intercourse with a minor who is less than 11 years the sentence will be death or life imprisonment. Provides at least one aggravating circumstance must be found to implement the death penalty. Provides for trial procudure when the prosecuting attorney is seeking the death peanlty and provides for an appeals process.

Virginia HB 45 Raises the age limit of the death penalty from 16 years of age to 18 or older at the time of the capital offense.

8) 2005 enactments:

Mississippi H 63
Appropriates funds and budgets the Office of Capital Post-Conviction Counsel.

Nevada AB 6
Amends the minimum age for death penalty to 18 years old in order to comply with Supreme Court decision Roper v. Simmons.

North Carolina H 1436
Directs the sentencing commission to study and make a recommendation on whether murder committed in violation of a valid domestic violence order of protection should be an aggravating factor in capital sentencing.

Oklahoma S. 329
Provides compensation for state assigned lead counsels or co-counsels, other than a county indigent defender, serving a defendant who is subject to the death penalty shall be compensated at levels established for ordinary state appointed counsel. Allows the fee maximum to be exceeded only when counsel establishes that the case is an exceptional one which requires an extraordinary amount of time to litigate and that the request for extraordinary attorney fees is reasonable.

Texas S 1791
Includes among capital crimes the act of murdering another person in retaliation for or on account of the person's status as a judge.

NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF STATE LEGISLATURES
7700 East First Place Denver, CO 80230 303/364-7700

Death Penalty and the Mentally Retarded
Updated January 2007

Currently, 26 of the 36 states prescribing capital punishment prohibit the imposition of death on defendants determined to be mentally retarded. Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, Virginia, Washington disallow sentencing mentally retarded defendants to death.

Of the 26 states listed above, Arizona, Arkansas, Delaware, Idaho, Illinois, Kentucky, Maryland, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee and Washington include an I.Q. level either as part of the definition of mental retardation or as a basis in creating a presumption of mental retardation. In creating presumptions, Arizona and Arkansas use the lowest level of 65 while Nebraska, New Mexico and South Dakota employ a level of 70. Illinois uses an IQ of 75. Delaware, Idaho, Kentucky, Maryland, Tennessee and Washington incorporate an I.Q. level of 70 into the definition of mental retardation.

A few of the states provide general guidelines in helping courts determine if the defendant is mentally retarded. Arizona, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Virginia and Washington require court ordered psychiatric evaluations of defendants. Alternatively, Connecticut, Maryland, Nebraska, New Mexico, South Dakota and Washington either require an "individually administered" or a "reliable" form of testing when determining a defendant's I.Q. level or general intellectual functioning.

As for retroactive application, Nebraska's statute specifically delineates the process an inmate, sentenced prior to the effective date, must use in motioning for a hearing on mental retardation. Similarly, Arizona, Florida, Kentucky, Missouri and South Dakota's texts only apply to offenses committed after the effective dates. Additionally, the historical notes and references listed after the statutory texts in Colorado, New York and Tennessee clearly prohibit any retroactive application. Courts in Georgia and Indiana have interpreted their respective statutes as to retroactive application. The Georgia Supreme Court ruled that "when a defendant who was tried before the effective date ... alleges in a petition for habeas corpus that he or she is mentally retarded, the habeas corpus court must first determine whether the petitioner has presented sufficient credible evidence to create a genuine issue regarding petitioner's retardation." Fleming v. Zant, 259 Ga. 687, 286 S.E.2d 339 (Ga. 1989). In contrast, the Indiana Supreme Court held that the Mental Retardation Statute does not apply retroactively. Rhodes v. State, 698 N.E.2d 304, (Ind. 1998).

Statutory Definitions:

- ARIZ. REV. STAT. §13-703 and §13-703.02
  Defines mental retardation as a condition based on a mental deficit that involves significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning. Existing concurrently with significant impairment in adaptive behavior, where the onset of the foregoing conditions occurred before the defendant reached the age of eighteen. Creates a rebuttable presumption when the defendant has an IQ of 65 or less. Defendant has the burden of proving by clear and convincing evidence. The court determines whether the defendant is mentally retarded prior to trial, however the defendant may present evidence of mental retardation during the sentencing proceeding, even if deemed not mentally retarded prior to trial.

- ARK. CODE ANN. §5-4-618
  Defines mental retardation as significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning accompanied by significant deficits or impairments in adaptive functioning manifest in the development period, but no later than age 18; and deficits in adaptive behavior. Creates a rebuttable presumption when a defendant has an I.Q. of 65 or below. Defendant has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence. Prior to trial, the court determines whether the defendant is mentally retarded, but the defendant may bring the issue up again during the sentencing phase if the court determined prior to trial that the defendant was not mentally retarded.

- CALIFORNIA PENAL CODE 1376
  Defines mental retardation as significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning existing concurrently with deficits in adaptive behavior and manifested before the age of 18.

- COLO. REV. STAT. ANN. §16-9-401 through 405
  Defines "mentally retarded defendant" as one with significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning existing concurrently with substantial deficits in adaptive behavior and manifested and documented during the developmental period. Allows documentation excused if court finds extraordinary circumstances. Requires the defendant prove by clear and convincing evidence and that the court enter its findings on the defendant's pre-trial motion. Mandates the court to order evaluations of defendant when defendant's pre-trial motion is filed. Permits the use of defendant's statements and medical history in determining whether the defendant is mentally retarded.

- CONN. GEN. STAT. §1-1g and §53a-46a
  Defines "mentally retarded" as having significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning existing concurrently with deficits in adaptive behavior and manifested during the developmental period which is between birth and age 18.

- DEL. SB 450
  Defines "serious mental retardation" as having significantly subaverage intellectual functioning that exists concurrently with substantial deficits in adaptive behavior that were both manifested before the individual became 18 years of age.

- FLA. STAT. ANN. §921.137
  Defines "mentally retarded" as having significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning existing concurrently with deficits in adaptive behavior and manifested during the period from conception to 18. Defendant must notify the court of intent to raise mental retardation bar to execution. After being convicted and sentenced to death, defendant may then file motion to determine whether mental retardation exists. Court then appoints two experts to evaluate the defendant. Court must find by clear and convincing evidence that defendant is mentally retarded. State may appeal a determination of mental retardation.

- GA. CODE ANN. §17-7-131
  Defines mentally retarded as having significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning resulting in or associated with impairments in adaptive behavior which manifested during the developmental period. Requires the defendant be examined by a licensed psychologist or psychiatrist prior to acceptance of defendant's guilty by mentally retarded plea. Specifically states that trials commencing on or after July 1, 1988 cannot impose the death penalty on mentally retarded defendants.

- IDAHO STATUTES §19-2515A
  "Mentally retarded" means significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning that is accompanied by significant limitations in adaptive functioning in a least two of the following skill areas: communication, self-care, home living, social or interpersonal skills, use of community resources, self-direction, functional academic skills, work, leisure, health and safety. The onset of significant limitations in adaptive functioning must occur before the age of 18. "Significant subaverage general intellectual functioning" means an intelligence quotient of 70 or below.

- ILLINOIS COMPILED STATUTES §725 ILCS 5/114-15
  The mental retardation must have manifested itself by the age of 18. AN intelligence quotient (IQ) of 75 or below is presumptive evidence of mental retardation. IQ tests and psychometric tests administered by the defendant must be the kind and type recognized by experts in the field of mental retardation. In order for the defendant to be considered mentally retarded, a low IQ must be accompanied by significant deficits in adaptive behavior in at least 2 of the following skill areas: communication, self-care, social or interpersonal skills, home living, self-direction, academics, health and safety, use of community resources, and work.

- IND. CODE ANN. §35-36-9 through 9-7
  Defines mental retardation as significantly subaverage intellectual functioning and substantial impairment of adaptive behavior prior to becoming 22 years of age that is documented in a court ordered evaluative report. Requires the court to order an evaluation and the defendant must prove by clear and convincing evidence.

- KAN. STAT. ANN. §76-12b01, §21-4623 & 4634
  Defines mental retardation as significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning existing concurrently with deficits in adaptive behavior and manifested during the period from birth to age 18. Requires an examination of the defendant.

- KY. REV. STAT. ANN. §532-130, 135 & 140
  Defines mental retardation as significant subaverage intellectual functioning existing concurrently with substantial deficits in adaptive behavior and manifested during the developmental period. Defines significantly subaverage as an I.Q. of 70 or below. Applies to trials commenced after the effective date.

- LA. ACTS 698, CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE, ARTICLE 905.5.1
  Defines mental retardation as a disability characterized by significant limitations in both intellectual functioning and adaptive behavior as expressed in conceptual, social, and practical adaptive skills. Onset must have occurred before the age of 18.

- MD. CODE ANN. §27-412
  Defines mentally retarded as significantly subaverage intellectual functioning as evidenced by an I.Q. of 70 or below on an individually administered I.Q. test and impairment in adaptive behavior, and the mental retardation is manifested prior to the age of 22. Requires the defendant prove by a preponderance of the evidence.

- MO. REV. STAT. §565.030
  Defines mental retardation as significantly subaverage intellectual functioning with continual extensive related deficits and limitations in two or more adaptive behaviors .... which conditions are manifested and documented before 18 years of age. Issue of mental retardation can be decided prior to trial or can be submitted later to the trier of fact.

- NEB. REV. STAT. §28-105.01
  Defines mental retardation as significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning existing concurrently with deficits in adaptive behavior and an I.Q. of 70 or below on a reliable test is presumptive evidence. The court must find by a preponderance of the evidence. Allows defendants sentenced prior to the effective date to motion for a hearing on the determination of mental retardation. Defendants were given 120 days after the effective date to file a motion.

- NEVADA - NRS 174
  Defines mental retardation as significant subaverage general intellectual functioning which exists concurrently with deficits in adaptive behavior and manifested during the developmental period.

- N.M. STAT. ANN. §31-20A-2.1
  Defines mental retardation as significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning existing concurrently with deficits in adaptive behavior and an I.Q. of 70 or below on a reliable test is presumptive evidence. The court must find by a preponderance of the evidence.

- N.Y. CPL LAW §400.27
  Defines mental retardation as significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning existing concurrently with deficits in adaptive behavior existing prior to age 18. The court must find by a preponderance of the evidence. Allows the use of psychiatric evidence.

- NC SB 173
  Defines mental retardation as significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning (IQ of 70 or below), existing concurrently with significant limitations in adaptive functioning (having significant limitations in two or more of the following adaptive skill areas: communications, self-care, home, living, social skills, community use, self-direction, health and safety, functional academics, leisure skills and work skills), both of which were manifested before the age of 18. Allows for post-conviction determination of mental retardation.

- S.D. CODIFIED LAWS §23A-27A-26.1 and 26.2
  Defines mental retardation as significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning existing concurrently with deficits in adaptive skill areas existing prior to age 18. An I.Q. exceeding 70 on a reliably standardized measure is presumptive evidence that defendant is not mentally retarded. The court must find by a preponderance of the evidence. Applies to trials commenced after the effective date.

- TENN. CODE ANN. §39-13-203
  Defines mental retardation as significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning as evidenced by a functional I.Q. of 70 prior to the age of 18 and deficits in adaptive behavior. Requires the defendant prove by a preponderance of the evidence.

- UTAH CODE §77-15A-101
  Defines mental retardation as significant subaverage general intellectual functioning hat results in and exists concurrently with significant deficiencies in adaptive functioning that exists primarily in the areas of reasoning or impulse control, or in both of these areas; and the subaverage general intellectual functioning and the significant deficiencies in adaptive functioning are both manifested prior to age 22.

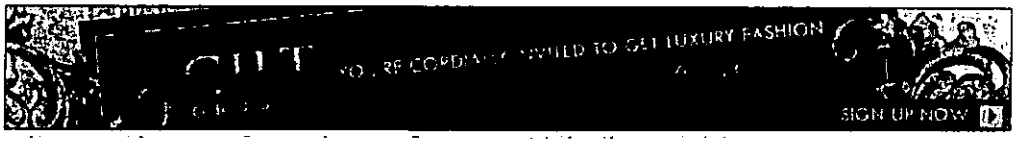
- VIRGINIA CODE §19.2-264.3
  Defines "mentally retarded" as a disability, originating before the age of 18, characterized by (i) significantly subaverage intellectual functioning as demonstrated by performance on a standardized measure of intellectual functioning administered in conformity with accepted professional practice, that is at least two standard deviations below the mean and (ii) significant limitations in adaptive behavior as expressed in conceptual, social and practical adaptive skills.

- WASH. REV. CODE §10.95.030
  Requires a psychologist or psychiatrist to diagnose the defendant. The defendant must establish by a preponderance of the evidence. Defines mental retardation as significant subaverage intellectual functioning existing concurrently with substantial deficits in adaptive behavior and manifested during the developmental period. Defines general intellectual functioning as the results obtained by assessment with one or more of the individually administered general intelligence tests. Defines significant subaverage intellectual functioning as an I.Q. of 70 or below. Adaptive behavior means the effectiveness or degree with which individuals meet the standards of personal independence and social responsibility expected for his or her age. Developmental period is the time between conception and age 18.

Source for how many and which states prohibit execution of the mentally retarded: Death Penalty Information Center: deathpenaltyinfo.org

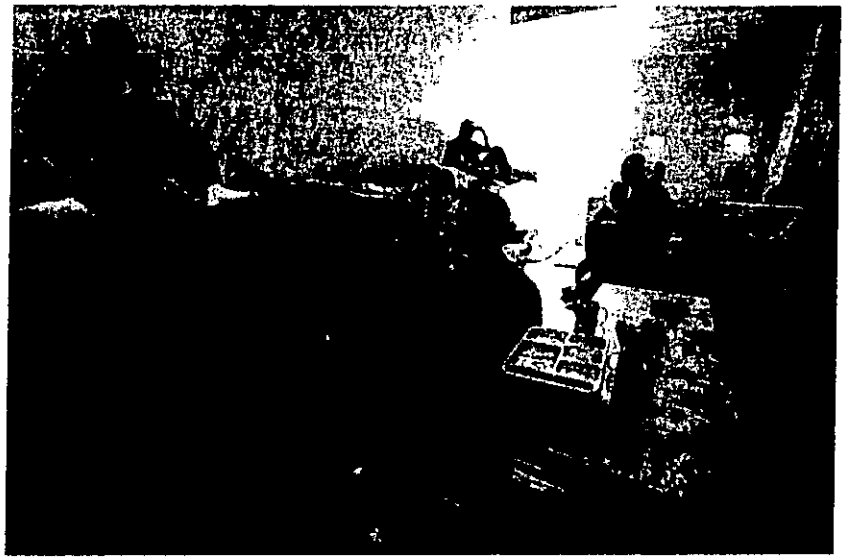
For more information contact Sarah Hammond at sarah.hammond@ncsl.org

Welcome to TimesPeople
What's this?
TimesPeople Lets You Share and Discover the Best of NYTimes.com
11:21 AM Get Started No thanks



Citing Cost, States Consider End to Death Penalty

Next Article in US (1 of 38) »



A county jail in Lawrenceville, Va., was designed for half as many inmates as it houses. Many states are trying to cut prison costs.

By IAN URBINA
Published: February 24, 2009

SIGN IN TO E-MAIL
PRINT
SINGLE PAGE
REPRINTS
SHARE

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — When Gov. Martin O'Malley appeared before the Maryland Senate last week, he made an unconventional argument that is becoming increasingly popular in cash-strapped states: abolish the death penalty to cut costs.

Mr. O'Malley, a Democrat and a Roman Catholic who has cited religious opposition to the death penalty in the past, is now arguing that capital cases cost three times as much as homicide cases where the death penalty is not sought. "And we can't afford that," he said, "when there are better and cheaper ways to reduce crime."

Lawmakers in Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska and New Hampshire have made the same argument in recent months as they push bills seeking to repeal the death penalty, and experts say such bills have a good chance of passing in Maryland, Montana and New Mexico.

ARTICLE TOOLS SPONSORED BY MICKEY ROURKE

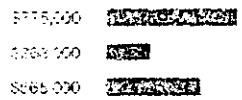
Multimedia



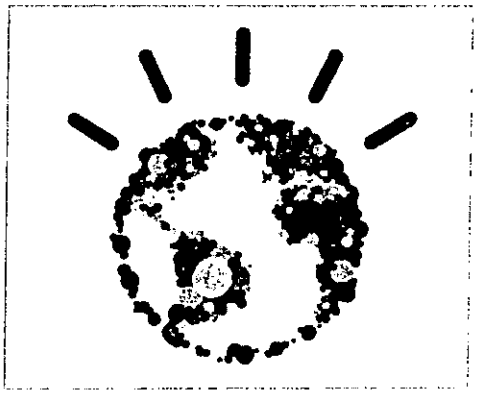
Graphic

The Cost of Capital Cases

Related

Times Topics: Capital Punishment

Politics E-Mail
Keep up with the latest news from Washington with the daily Politics e-mail newsletter.
Sign Up
See Sample | Privacy Policy



MOST POPULAR
E-MAILED BLOGGED SEARCHED

1. Brooklyn's New Culinary Movement
2. Well: The 3 R's? A Fourth Is Crucial, Too: Recess
3. Students Stand When Called Upon, and When Not
4. In Tough Times, the Humanities Must Justify Their Worth
5. Maureen Dowd: I Ponied Up for Sheryl Crow?
6. The Curious Cook: How Much Water Does Pasta Really Need?
7. Op-Ed Contributors: The I's Have It
8. On the Road, for Reasons Practical and Spiritual
9. Books: In the Open at Last, a Secret All Women Share
10. For a New Generation, Kimchi Goes With Tacos

Go to Complete List »

The New York Times OPINION
nytimes.com/opinion

INSIDE NYTIMES.COM

Gov. Martin O Malley

Death penalty opponents say they still face an uphill battle, but they are pleased to have allies raising the economic argument.

Efforts to repeal the death penalty are part of a broader trend in which states are trying to cut the costs of being tough on crime. Virginia and at least four other states, for example, are considering releasing nonviolent offenders early to reduce costs.

The economic realities have forced even longtime supporters of the death penalty, like Gov. Bill Richardson of New Mexico, to rethink their positions.

Mr. Richardson, a Democrat, has said he may sign a bill repealing capital punishment that passed the House last week and is pending in a Senate committee. He cited growing concerns about miscarriages of justice, but he added that cost was a factor in his shifting views and was "a valid reason in this era of austerity and tight budgets."

Capital cases are expensive because the trials tend to take longer, they typically require more lawyers and more costly expert witnesses, and they are far more likely to lead to multiple appeals.

In New Mexico, lawmakers who support the repeal bill have pointed out that despite the added expense, most defendants end up with life sentences anyway.

That has been true in Maryland. A 2008 study by the Urban Institute, a nonpartisan public policy group, found that in the 20 years after the state reinstated the death penalty in 1978, prosecutors sought the death penalty in 162 felony-homicide convictions, securing it in 56 cases, most of which were overturned; the rest of the convictions led to prison sentences.

Since 1978, five people have been executed in Maryland, and five inmates are on death row.

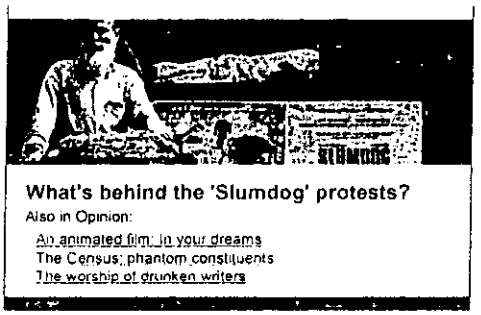
Opponents of repealing capital punishment say such measures are short-sighted and will result in more crime and greater costs to states down the road. At a time when police departments are being scaled down to save money, the role of the death penalty in deterring certain crimes is more important than ever, they say.

"How do you put a price tag on crimes that don't happen because threat of the death penalty deters them?" said Scott Shellenberger, the state's attorney for Baltimore County, Md., who opposes the repeal bill.

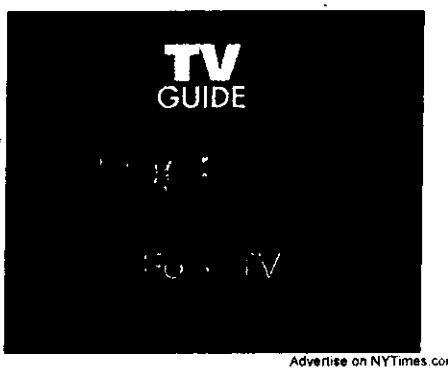
Kent Scheidegger, legal director of the Criminal Justice Legal Foundation, an organization in Sacramento that works on behalf of crime victims, called the anticipated savings a mirage. He added that with the death penalty, prosecutors can more easily offer life sentences in a plea bargain and thus avoid trial costs.

But Eric M. Freedman, a death penalty expert at Hofstra Law School, said studies had shown that plea bargaining rates were roughly the same in states that had the death penalty as in states that did not.

"It makes perfect sense that states are trying to spend their criminal justice budgets better," he said, "and that the first place they look to do a cost-benefit analysis is the death penalty."



ADVERTISEMENTS



Advertise on NYTimes.com

States are looking elsewhere as well.

Last year, in an effort to cut costs, probation and parole agencies in Arizona, Kentucky, Mississippi, New Jersey and Vermont reduced or dropped prison time for thousands of offenders who violated conditions of their release. In some states, probation and parole violators account for up to two-thirds of prison admissions each year; typical violations are failing drug tests or missing meetings with parole officers.

1 | 2 NEXT PAGE »

A version of this article appeared in print on February 25, 2009, on page A1 of the New York edition.

Next Article in US (1 of 38) »

Other papers leave you out of the conversation. Get The Weekender.

Past Coverage

Capital Cases Stalling as Costs Grow Daunting (November 4, 2007)
Official Quits in Georgia Public Defender Budget Dispute (September 7, 2007)
California Addresses Death Penalty Concerns (May 16, 2007)
Georgia Murder Case's Cost Saps Public Defense System (March 22, 2007)

Related Searches

Capital Punishment	Get E-Mail Alerts
Budgets and Budgeting	Get E-Mail Alerts
States (US)	Get E-Mail Alerts
O'Malley, Martin	Get E-Mail Alerts

DINING & WINE »

How Much Water Does Pasta Really Need?

EDUCATION »

A Classroom Where Nobody Sits Still

OPINION »

Op-Ed: The Kindle Swindle?

The Kindle 2 can read books aloud, but it is not paying anyone for audio rights.

MUSIC »

On the Road, for Reasons Practical and Spiritual

OPINION »

Letters: Is 'Marriage' Subject to Compromise?

GREAT HOMES »

In England, Some Deals in the Cornish Market

Home World U.S. N.Y. / Region Business Technology Science Health Sports Opinion Arts Style Travel Jobs Real Estate Automobiles Back to Top

Copyright 2009 The New York Times Company Privacy Policy Search Corrections RSS First Look Help Contact Us Work for Us Site Map

Success

Welcome to TimesPeople
What's this?
TimesPeople Lets You Share and Discover the Best of NYTimes.com
Get Started No thanks

Get Home Delivery Log In Register Now

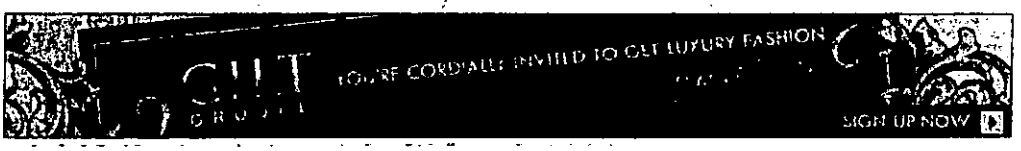
HOME PAGE TODAY'S PAPER VIDEO MOST POPULAR TIMES TOPICS

The New York Times

U.S.

Search All NYTimes.com

WORLD U.S. N.Y. / REGION BUSINESS TECHNOLOGY SCIENCE HEALTH SPORTS OPINION ARTS STYLE TRAVEL JOBS REAL ESTATE AUTOS
POLITICS WASHINGTON EDUCATION



Citing Cost, States Consider End to Death Penalty

Published: February 24, 2009

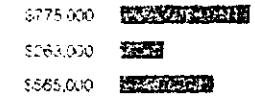
(Page 2 of 2)

SIGN IN TO E-MAIL
PRINT
SINGLE PAGE
REPRINTS
SHARE

ARTICLE TOOLS SPONSORED BY
ACADEMY AWARD® WINNER

As prison crowding has become acute, lawsuits have followed in states like California, and politicians find themselves having to choose among politically unattractive options: spend scarce tax dollars on expanding prisons, loosen laws to stem the flow of incarcerations, or release some nonviolent offenders.

Multimedia



Graphic

The Cost of Capital Cases

The costs of death penalty cases can be extraordinarily high.

The Urban Institute study of Maryland concluded that because of appeals, it cost as much as $1.9 million more for a state prosecutor to put someone on death row than it did to put a person in prison. A case that resulted in a death sentence cost $3 million, the study found, compared with less than $1.1 million for a case in which the death penalty was not sought.

Related

Times Topics: Capital Punishment

In Kansas, State Senator Carolyn McGinn introduced a bill this month that would abolish the death penalty in cases sentenced after July 1. "We are in such a dire deficit situation, and we need to look at things outside the box to solve our budget problems," said Mrs. McGinn, a Republican. Kansas is facing a budget shortfall of $199 million, and Mrs. McGinn said that opting for life imprisonment without parole rather than the death penalty could save the state over $500,000 per capital case.

But skeptics contend that prosecutors will still be on salary and will still spend the same amount, just on different cases. In Colorado, lawmakers plan to consider a bill this week that would abolish the death penalty and use the savings to create a cold-case unit to investigate the state's roughly 1,400 unsolved murders. While the police must continue investigating these cases, there is no money in the budget for that. A group of families who lost relatives in unsolved murders has lobbied lawmakers on the bill.

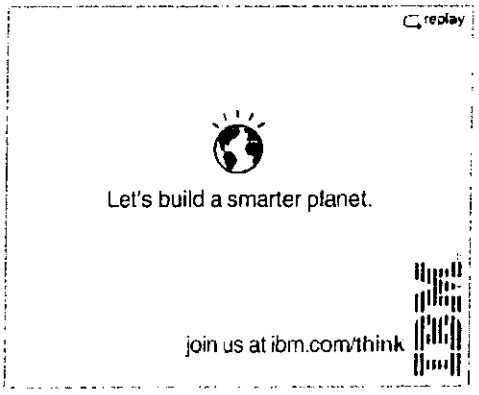
In Virginia, competing sentiments are evident in the legislature.

While lawmakers have proposed allowing prison officials to release low-risk offenders up to 90 days before the end of their sentences, citing a potential saving of $50 million, they are also considering expanding who is eligible for capital punishment to people who assist in killings but do not commit them and to people convicted of murdering fire marshals or auxiliary police officers who are on duty.

Next Article in US (1 of 38) »

Politics E-Mail

Keep up with the latest news from Washington with the daily Politics e-mail newsletter.
Sign Up
See Sample | Privacy Policy



MOST POPULAR
E-MAILED BLOGGED SEARCHED

1. Brooklyn's New Culinary Movement
2. Well: The 3 R's? A Fourth Is Crucial, Too: Recess
3. Students Stand When Called Upon, and When Not
4. In Tough Times, the Humanities Must Justify Their Worth
5. Maureen Dowd: I Ponied Up for Sheryl Crow?
6. The Curious Cook: How Much Water Does Pasta Really Need?
7. Op-Ed Contributors: The I's Have It
8. On the Road, for Reasons Practical and Spiritual
9. Books: In the Open at Last, a Secret All Women Share
10. For a New Generation, Kimchi Goes With Tacos

Go to Complete List »

The New York Times BUSINESS
nytimes.com/business

It is considered unlikely, however, that Gov. Tim Kaine, a Democrat who opposes capital punishment, would sign such a bill.

In 2007, New Jersey became the first state in a generation to abolish the death penalty.

That same year, a vote in Maryland to abolish the death penalty came up one vote short of passing. In December, however, a state commission on capital punishment recommended that Maryland abolish the death penalty because of the high cost and the danger of executing an innocent person.

NEW! Energy & Environment section
Also in Business:
Green Inc.: Energy, the environment & the bottom line
Updates from ClimateWire and GreenWire
Search energy topic guides

« PREVIOUS PAGE 1 | 2

A version of this article appeared in print on February 25, 2009, on page A1 of the New York edition.

Next Article in US (1 of 38) »

ADVERTISEMENTS

Get an exclusive tote when you subscribe to The New York Times.

The New York Times STORE

Past Coverage

Capital Cases Stalling as Costs Grow Daunting (November 4, 2007)
Official Quits in Georgia Public Defender Budget Dispute (September 7, 2007)
California Addresses Death Penalty Concerns (May 16, 2007)
Georgia Murder Case's Cost Saps Public Defense System (March 22, 2007)

Related Searches

Capital Punishment	Get E-Mail Alerts
Budgets and Budgeting	Get E-Mail Alerts
States (US)	Get E-Mail Alerts
O'Malley, Martin	Get E-Mail Alerts

INSIDE NYTIMES.COM

DINING & WINE »

How Much Water Does Pasta Really Need?

EDUCATION »

A Classroom Where Nobody Sits Still

OPINION »
Op-Ed: The Kindle Swindle?
The Kindle 2 can read books aloud, but it is not paying anyone for audio rights.

MUSIC »

On the Road, for Reasons Practical and Spiritual

OPINION »

Letters: Is 'Marriage' Subject to Compromise?

GREAT HOMES »

In England, Some Deals in the Cornish Market

Welcome to TimesPeople
What's this?
TimesPeople Lets You Share and Discover the Best of NYTimes.com
Get Started No, thanks

HOME PAGE MY TIMES TODAY'S PAPER VIDEO MOST POPULAR TIMES TOPICS
Get Home Delivery Log In Register Now

The New York Times
U.S.
U.S. All NYT Search

WORLD U.S. N.Y. / REGION BUSINESS TECHNOLOGY SCIENCE HEALTH SPORTS OPINION ARTS STYLE TRAVEL JOBS REAL ESTATE AUTOS
POLITICS WASHINGTON EDUCATION

Capital Cases Stall as Costs Grow Daunting

By SHAILA DEWAN and BRENDA GOODMAN
Published: November 4, 2007

ATLANTA, Nov. 3 — When Hilton M. Fuller Jr., a semiretired judge of the silver-haired, Southern-gentleman variety, agreed to preside over the trial in a notorious courthouse shooting here, he took a job no one else wanted — the legal community was still in shock over the death of a judge, a court reporter, a sheriff's deputy and a federal agent.

Judge Hilton M. Fuller Jr. has faced harassment threats, a lawsuit and ridicule over his handling of the murder trial of Brian Nichols. (photos)

Related

Ideas & Trends: It's Not Whether to Kill, but How (November 4, 2007)

But now, two years later, the truly thankless nature of Judge Fuller's task has become evident. The legislature has threatened to impeach him. Columnists have taken him to task. On Friday, the district attorney sued him in State Supreme Court. Even fellow judges have abandoned their usual reticence. On a recent afternoon, he received a copy of an e-mail message from a colleague calling him a "debacle," an "embarrassment" and a "fool." And the trial has yet to begin.

The anger directed at Judge Fuller revolves around an issue more and more states are being forced to confront -- the rising cost of an adequate defense in death-penalty cases. Even as an examination of lethal injection by the Supreme Court has seemingly suspended the practice across the country, many experts predict that the cost issue will have far broader implications for the future of the death penalty.

States unwilling to pay the huge costs of defending people charged in capital cases may be unable to conduct executions.

For Brian Nichols, accused of killing four in the courthouse shooting in March 2005, the costs have already reached $1.2 million. That, together with legislative cuts, has left the state public defender system with no money. Until the bills are paid, the judge has delayed the trial, saying that it is unconstitutional not to pay the defense and thus pointless to proceed. In turn, lawmakers have accused him of conspiring to end the death penalty in Georgia.

The state could avoid the multimillion-dollar trial by dropping the death penalty option. Mr. Nichols has offered to plead guilty in exchange for a sentence of life without parole, but the district attorney, Paul L. Howard Jr., has declined.

SIGN IN TO E-MAIL OR SAVE THIS
PRINT
SINGLE PAGE
REPRINTS
SHARE

ARTICLE TOOLS SPONSORED BY
MICKEY ROURKE

More Articles in National »

Breaking News Alerts by E-Mail
Sign up to be notified when important news breaks.
Sign Up
Privacy Policy

replay

Let's build a smarter planet.

join us at ibm.com/think

MOST POPULAR
E-MAILED BLOGGED SEARCHED

Judge Fuller is not the only jurist to try to force states to pay for a defense that will pass muster with higher courts. Last month, the New Mexico Supreme Court suspended the prosecution of two prison inmates accused of killing a guard, saying their lawyers' pay was so low it was unlikely they could be effective. In Utah, a judge has asked if he can force a lawyer to represent a convicted killer on appeal because, at fees amounting to less than $10 an hour, no one wants the job.

In California, a federal judge complained in May that death row inmates were waiting more than three years to get a lawyer because the state would not raise the hourly rate. Arizona, Texas and Louisiana are having similar troubles.

"I don't think there's any question that lethal injection is going to be allowed, it's just a question of how," said Stephen B. Bright, a capital defense lawyer and president of the Southern Center for Human Rights in Atlanta. "But the right to counsel is as fundamental as it gets — every other right depends on it."

Defense costs are just one factor in the steep price states are beginning to consider. A 2005 study by New Jersey Policy Perspective, a liberal research group, estimated that capital punishment had cost the state $256 million since 1983, including $60 million for defense, and the state has not executed a single inmate in that time. A bill to abolish the death penalty is given a fair chance of passing.

But the issue has come into sharpest relief here, thanks to the scrutiny of the courthouse case, arguably the most complicated murder case in state history.

State Senator Preston W. Smith, the Republican chairman of the Judiciary Committee, has complained that Mr. Nichols is receiving a "high-end, O.J.-style defense" that most taxpayers could not afford. But while the price sounds high, especially for a man whose guilt no one doubts, the cost of even a minimal capital defense has been driven up by technology and the increasing sophistication of law enforcement.

1 2 NEXT PAGE »

More Articles in National »

Click here to enjoy the convenience of home delivery of The Times for less than $1 a day.

Tips

To find reference information about the words used in this article, double-click on any word, phrase or name. A new window will open with a dictionary definition or encyclopedia entry.

Past Coverage

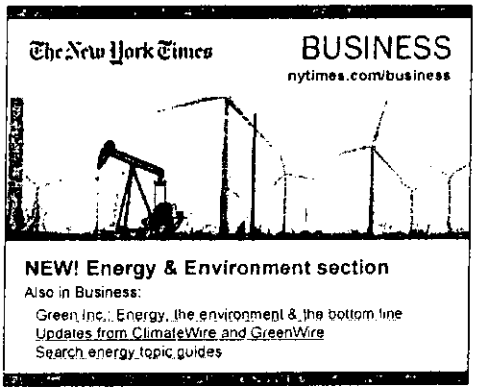
Florida: Ruling on Lethal Injection (November 2, 2007)
Following Moratorium Trend, Court Halts Alabama Execution (October 25, 2007)
Texas Judge Draws Outcry For Allowing an Execution (October 25, 2007)
Alabama: Judge Refuses To Delay Execution (October 24, 2007)

Related Searches

Capital Punishment
Courts
Judges
Legal Profession

1. Brooklyn's New Culinary Movement
2. Well: The 3 R's? A Fourth Is Crucial, Too: Recess
3. Students Stand When Called Upon, and When Not
4. In Tough Times, the Humanities Must Justify Their Worth
5. Maureen Dowd: I Ponied Up for Sheryl Crow?
6. The Curious Cook: How Much Water Does Pasta Really Need?
7. Op-Ed Contributors: The I's Have It
8. On the Road, for Reasons Practical and Spiritual
9. Books: In the Open at Last, a Secret All Women Share
10. For a New Generation, Kimchi Goes With Tacos

Go to Complete List »



ADVERTISEMENTS

INSIDE NYTIMES.COM

DINING & WINE »

How Much Water Does Pasta Really Need?

EDUCATION »

A Classroom Where Nobody Sits Still

OPINION »

Op-Ed: The Kindle Swindle?

The Kindle 2 can read books aloud, but it is not paying anyone for audio rights.

MUSIC »

On the Road, for Reasons Practical and Spiritual

OPINION »

Letters: Is 'Marriage' Subject to Compromise?

GREAT HOMES »

In England, Some Deals in the Cornish Market

Home World U.S. N.Y. / Region Business Technology Science Health Sports Opinion Arts Style Travel Jobs Real Estate Automobiles Back to Top

Copyright 2007 The New York Times Company Privacy Policy Search Corrections RSS First Look Help Contact Us Work for Us Site Map

Welcome to TimesPeople What's this? TimesPeople Lets You Share and Discover the Best of NYTimes.com Get Started No, thanks

HOME PAGE MY TIMES TODAY'S PAPER VIDEO MOST POPULAR TIMES TOPICS Get Home Delivery Log In Register Now

The New York Times U.S. Search U.S. All NYT

WORLD U.S. N.Y. / REGION BUSINESS TECHNOLOGY SCIENCE HEALTH SPORTS OPINION ARTS STYLE TRAVEL JOBS REAL ESTATE AUTOS

POLITICS WASHINGTON EDUCATION

Advertise on NYTimes.com

Capital Cases Stall as Costs Grow Daunting

Published: November 4, 2007

(Page 2 of 2)

SIGN IN TO E-MAIL OR SAVE THIS

PRINT

SINGLE PAGE

REPRINTS

SHARE

ARTICLE TOOLS SPONSORED BY

MICKEY ROURKE

Mr. Nichols faces a 54-count indictment, a team of five prosecutors, and 400 potential prosecution witnesses. Prosecutors gave the defense team 32,000 pages of documents and 400 hours of taped telephone calls. The defense team has an obligation to review all of the information and investigate each witness. To the irritation of lawmakers, Judge Fuller has kept budget requests sealed to keep the defense strategy from becoming public.

Related

Ideas & Trends: It's Not Whether to Kill, but How (November 4, 2007)

Judge Fuller is bound by recent Supreme Court decisions that have underscored the importance of the defense counsel's performance during the sentencing phase of the trial, when juries consider mitigating and aggravating factors in deciding whether to impose the death penalty. In a 2003 case, the court ordered a new sentencing hearing because defense lawyers failed to fully investigate their client's background and present evidence of severe childhood sexual and physical abuse. In a 2005 case, the Supreme Court again found that a more thorough review by the defense would have unearthed information that the jury should have heard.

In both cases, the court cited guidelines issued by the American Bar Association in 2003, which detail the special skills capital defenders must have and the "extraordinary efforts" they must undertake because of the irreversible punishment. Capital defendants must have at least two lawyers, the guidelines say, and each phase of the appeals process should include an independent investigation.

Exonerations have also highlighted the need for a competent defense. "We have all this new evidence being discovered 10 years later," said George H. Kendall, who has monitored capital defense in Georgia and now works in the New York office of Holland & Knight. "If there was a real defense at the time, it would have come up then."

The Nichols defense team, which plans to argue that its client was suffering from a mental disorder, says the anger at Judge Fuller is misplaced. The defense budgets are first presented to the Georgia Public Defender Standards Council, which has not objected to any of the requests as unreasonable. It has simply said it cannot pay.

But neither the judge nor the council has been spared.

The council was established as a statewide public defense system in 2005 in response to widespread problems, including divorce lawyers assigned to capital cases and lawyers

More Articles in National »

Today's Headlines Daily E-Mail

Sign up for a roundup of the day's top stories, sent every morning.

Sign Up

See Sample | Privacy Policy

MOST POPULAR

E-MAILED BLOGGED SEARCHED

1. Brooklyn's New Culinary Movement
2. Well: The 3 R's? A Fourth Is Crucial, Too: Recess
3. Students Stand When Called Upon, and When Not
4. In Tough Times, the Humanities Must Justify Their Worth
5. Maureen Dowd: I Ponied Up for Sheryl Crow?
6. The Curious Cook: How Much Water Does Pasta Really Need?
7. Op-Ed Contributors: The I's Have It
8. On the Road, for Reasons Practical and Spiritual
9. Books: In the Open at Last, a Secret All Women Share
10. For a New Generation, Kimchi Goes With Tacos

Go to Complete List »

The New York Times BUSINESS nytimes.com/business

sleeping through trials. Three months later, the Nichols trial became the first major test of lawmakers' commitment to the new system. They have seized control of the council and gutted its capital defense budget, cutting it to $4.8 million from $7 million a year.

Courts have repeatedly demanded a better defense in capital cases, but states have repeatedly refused to pay for it. In 1996, Congress established a "fast track" that would shorten federal deadlines in capital cases if states agreed to provide competent representation to death row inmates. No state has fulfilled the requirements.

Capital-defense lawyers face the highest possible stakes, but in many states the job is one of the lowest-paid in the legal system. In New Mexico, for example, appointed capital defenders work under a contract system that caps their fee at $24,500, a salary that amounts to an hourly wage of just $19.50 for the average death penalty case, not enough to cover their overhead, according to a brief filed by the New Mexico Criminal Defense Lawyers. In contrast, private criminal defense lawyers in New Mexico made an average of $161 per hour in 2004.

The lead lawyer in the Nichols case, Henderson Hill, is billing $175 an hour instead of his usual $325. Another of his four lawyers has waived her fee. None have been paid since July.

Lawmakers say Judge Fuller and the defense lawyers are deliberately driving up the costs to make sure that the death penalty is too expensive for the state.

And in fact, better-financed systems do reduce the number of capital cases — coming closer, advocates say, to ensuring that the death penalty is reserved for the worst of the worst offenders. North Carolina, which instituted what is often pointed to as a model capital defense system in 2001, has gone from an average of 24 capital convictions a year to 5. It is too soon to know if the reversal rate, extraordinarily high in death penalty cases, has also been reduced.

When Judge Fuller took on the Nichols trial, prosecutors and defense lawyers alike praised the choice, saying he had rarely, if ever, been overturned on appeal. But his reputation has since taken a beating.

"I'm beginning to think I am a fool for taking this case," the judge said, rereading the e-mail message in which a fellow judge called him one. "I thought people would give me the benefit of the doubt. That was naïve."

« PREVIOUS PAGE 1 | 2

More Articles in National »

Click here to enjoy the convenience of home delivery of The Times for less than $1 a day.

Tips

To find reference information about the words used in this article, double-click on any word, phrase or name. A new window will open with a dictionary definition or encyclopedia entry.

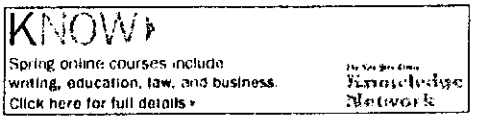
Past Coverage

Florida: Ruling on Lethal Injection (November 2, 2007)
Following Moratorium Trend, Court Halts Alabama Execution (October 25, 2007)
Texas Judge Draws Outcry For Allowing an Execution (October 25, 2007)
Alabama: Judge Refuses To Delay Execution (October 24, 2007)

Related Searches

Capital Punishment
Courts
Judges
Legal Profession

ADVERTISEMENTS



INSIDE NYTIMES.COM

DINING & WINE »

How Much Water Does Pasta Really Need?

EDUCATION »

A Classroom Where Nobody Sits Still

OPINION »

Op-Ed: The Kindle Swindle?

The Kindle 2 can read books aloud, but it is not paying anyone for audio rights.

MUSIC »

On the Road, for Reasons Practical and Spiritual

OPINION »

Letters: Is 'Marriage' Subject to Compromise?

GREAT HOMES »

In England, Some Deals in the Cornish Market

Home World U.S. N.Y. / Region Business Technology Science Health Sports Opinion Arts Style Travel Jobs Real Estate Automobiles Back to Top

Copyright 2007 The New York Times Company Privacy Policy Search Corrections RSS First Look Help Contact Us Work for Us Site Map

The New York Times

MICKEY ROURKE

This copy is for your personal, non-commercial use only. You can order presentation ready copies for distribution to your colleagues, clients or customers here or use the "Reprints" tool that appears next to any article. Visit www.nytreprints.com for samples and additional information. Order a reprint of this article now.

February 19, 2009

Study Calls for Oversight of Forensics in Crime Labs

By SOLOMON MOORE

Crime laboratories around the country are grossly underfunded, lack a scientific foundation and are compromised by critical delays in analyzing physical evidence, according to a broad study of forensic techniques published Wednesday by the National Academy of Sciences, the nation's premier scientific body.

Among its many criticisms, the study counted a backlog of 359,000 requests for forensic analysis in 2005, a 24 percent increase in delays since 2002. A survey of crime laboratories found 80 percent of them to be understaffed.

A new federal agency is needed to regulate these laboratories, standardize forensic techniques and pay for research, according to the report, which was financed by Congress in 2005.

The study recommends that an agency, to be called the National Institute of Forensic Science, be created and be independent of the Justice Department, which has traditionally been the nation's primary forensics research agency. Crime laboratories should be managed separately from police departments to ensure that their findings are protected from bias, the report said.

"The potential for conflicts of interest between the needs of law enforcement and the broader needs of forensic science are too great," the authors wrote.

The report, the product of a two-year review by the academy, an independent body, is not legally binding. But legislators from both parties have already committed to holding hearings on the study, and officials from all the federal law enforcement agencies are reviewing the document in anticipation of possible policy changes.

"I am troubled by the report's general finding that far too many forensic disciplines lack the standards necessary to ensure their scientific reliability in court," said Senator Patrick J. Leahy, Democrat of Vermont and chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

Senator Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania, the ranking Republican on the committee, said he was also troubled by the findings.

The report calls into question the scientific merit of virtually every commonly used forensic method, including analysis of fingerprints, hair, fibers, blood spatters, ballistics and arson. Only DNA, which the panel said had benefited from rigorous scientific scrutiny and peer review outside of the forensics discipline, escaped significant criticism.

"The fact is that many forensic tests, such as those used to infer the source of tooth marks and bite marks, have never been exposed to stringent scientific scrutiny," the report said. The report highlights crime laboratory scandals involving hundreds of tainted cases handled by police agencies in Michigan, Texas and West Virginia, and by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. At least 10 wrongly convicted men have been exonerated as a result of those laboratory investigations, and the cases of hundreds of other people convicted with the help of those facilities are under review.

The panel also found that most of the nation is served by death investigation offices that lack accreditation. It cited an 18-year-old high school student in Indiana who was recently elected deputy coroner after a short training course.

The academy said that in addition, judges and lawyers generally lacked the scientific expertise necessary to "comprehend and evaluate forensic evidence in an informed manner."

Attorney General Eric H. Holder Jr. said his office would be reviewing the report over the next several days.

"We have the potential to solve a lot of crimes, to find people who are guilty and to absolve a lot of people who are not through the use of these great forensic techniques," Mr. Holder said.

Justice Department officials declined to comment on specific recommendations, including the establishment of a National Institute of Forensic Science.

Copyright 2009 The New York Times Company

Privacy Policy | Search | Corrections | RSS | First Look | Help | Contact Us | Work for Us | Site Map

The New York Times

ACADEMY AWARD WINNER

...this copy is for your personal, noncommercial use only. You can order presentation-ready copies for distribution to your colleagues, clients or customers here or use the "Reprints" tool that appears next to any article. Visit www.nytreprints.com for samples and additional information. Order a reprint of this article now.

February 5, 2009

Science Found Wanting in Nation's Crime Labs

By SOLOMON MOORE

Forensic evidence that has helped convict thousands of defendants for nearly a century is often the product of shoddy scientific practices that should be upgraded and standardized, according to accounts of a draft report by the nation's pre-eminent scientific research group.

The report by the National Academy of Sciences is to be released this month. People who have seen it say it is a sweeping critique of many forensic methods that the police and prosecutors rely on, including fingerprinting, firearms identification and analysis of bite marks, blood spatter, hair and handwriting.

The report says such analyses are often handled by poorly trained technicians who then exaggerate the accuracy of their methods in court. It concludes that Congress should create a federal agency to guarantee the independence of the field, which has been dominated by law enforcement agencies, say forensic professionals, scholars and scientists who have seen review copies of the study. Early reviewers said the report was still subject to change.

The result of a two-year review, the report follows a series of widely publicized crime laboratory failures, including the case of Brandon Mayfield, a lawyer from Portland, Ore., and Muslim convert who was wrongly arrested in the 2004 terrorist train bombing in Madrid that killed 191 people and wounded 2,000.

American examiners matched Mr. Mayfield's fingerprint to those found at the scene, although Spanish authorities eventually convinced the Federal Bureau of Investigation that its fingerprint identification methods were faulty. Mr. Mayfield was released, and the federal government settled with him for $2 million.

In 2005, Congress asked the National Academy to assess the state of the forensic techniques used in court proceedings. The report's findings are not binding, but they are expected to be highly influential.

"This is not a judicial ruling; it is not a law," said Michael J. Saks, a psychology and law professor at Arizona State University who presented fundamental weaknesses in forensic evidence to the academy. "But it will be used by others who will make law or will argue cases."

Legal experts expect that the report will give ammunition to defense lawyers seeking to discredit forensic procedures and expert witnesses in court. Lawyers could also use the findings in their attempts to overturn convictions based on spurious evidence. Judges are likely to use the findings to raise the bar for admissibility of certain types of forensic evidence and to rein in exaggerated expert testimony.

The report may also drive federal legislation if Congress adopts its recommendations. Senator Richard C. Shelby, Republican of Alabama, who has pushed for forensic reform, said, "My hope is that this report will provide an objective and unbiased perspective of the critical needs of our crime labs."

Forensics, which developed within law enforcement institutions — and have been mythologized on television shows from "Quincy, M.E." to "CSI: Miami" — suffers from a lack of independence, the report found.

The report's most controversial recommendation is the establishment of a federal agency to finance research and training and promote universal standards in forensic science, a discipline that spans anthropology, biology, chemistry, physics, medicine and law. The report also calls for tougher regulation of crime laboratories.

In an effort to mitigate law enforcement opposition to the report, which has already delayed its publication, the draft focuses on scientific shortcomings and policy changes that could improve forensics. It is largely silent on strictly legal issues to avoid overstepping its bounds.

Perhaps the most powerful example of the National Academy's prior influence on forensic science was a 2004 report discrediting the F.B.I. technique of matching the chemical signatures of lead in bullets at a crime scene to similar bullets possessed by a suspect. As a result, the agency had to notify hundreds of people who potentially had been wrongfully convicted.

In its current draft report, the National Academy wrote that the field suffered from a reliance on outmoded and untested theories by analysts who often have no background in science, statistics or other empirical disciplines.

Although it is not subject to significant criticism in the report, the advent of DNA profiling clearly set the agenda. DNA evidence is presented in less than 10 percent of all violent crimes but has revolutionized the entire science of forensics. While DNA testing has helped to free more than 200 wrongfully convicted people, "DNA was a shock to police culture and created an alternative scientific model, which promoted standardization, transparency and a higher level of precision," said Paul Giannelli, a forensic science expert at Case Western Reserve University School of Law who presented his research to the National Academy. Enforcement officials, Mr. Giannelli said, "chose to say they never make mistakes, but they have little scientific support, and this report could blow them out of the water."

Peter J. Neufeld, a co-director of the Innocence Project, a nonprofit group that uses DNA evidence to exonerate the wrongfully convicted, presented to the academy a study of trial transcripts of 137 convictions that were overturned by DNA evidence and found that 60 percent included false or misleading statements regarding blood, hair, bite mark, shoe print, soil, fiber and fingerprint analyses.

The courts have long struggled with the proper role of scientific evidence. In a 1993 landmark decision, Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, the Supreme Court held that scientific testimony had to meet an objective standard. Federal courts have occasionally excluded evidence like handwriting and hair analysis.

Donald Kennedy, a Stanford scientist who helped select the report's authors, said federal law enforcement agencies resented "intervention" of mainstream science — especially the National Academy — in the courts.

He said the National Institute of Justice, a research arm of the Justice Department, tried to derail the forensic study by refusing to finance it and demanding to review the findings before publication. A bipartisan vote in Congress in 2005 broke the impasse with a $1.5 million appropriation.

Mr. Shelby also accused the National Institute of Justice of trying to infiltrate the forensic study panel with lobbyists for private DNA analysis companies, who were seeking to limit the research to DNA studies.

The National Institute of Justice said it would not comment until the report was released. But a preview of potential turf wars played out in the presentations to the National Academy in December 2007. A forensic expert from the Secret Service blasted the F.B.I. for developing questionable techniques "on an ad-hoc basis, without proper research."

He said the Secret Service wanted the National Academy "to send a message to the entire forensic science community that this type of method development is not acceptable practice."

Everyone interviewed for this article agreed that the report would be a force of change in the forensics field.

One person who has reviewed the draft and who asked not to be identified because of promises to keep the contents confidential said: "I'm sure that every defense attorney in the country is waiting for this report to come out. There are going to be challenges to fingerprints and firearms evidence and the general lack of empirical grounding. It's going to be big."

Copyright 2009 The New York Times Company

Privacy Policy | Search | Corrections | RSS | First Look | Help | Contact Us | Work for Us | Site Map

Reciprocal Discovery

H

Supreme Court of Alaska.
STATE of Alaska, Petitioner,
v.
David E. SUMMERVILLE, Respondent.
No. S-7869.

Nov. 14, 1997.
Rehearing Denied Jan. 2, 1998.

Defendant charged with sex offenses moved for protective order in response to state's request for reciprocal discovery. The Superior Court, Fourth Judicial District, Fairbanks, Richard D. Savell, J., granted protective order, and State appealed. The Court of Appeals, 926 P.2d 465, affirmed, and defendant appealed. The Supreme Court held that amendment to criminal rules allowing reciprocal discovery violated state constitutional privilege against self-incrimination.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes

Criminal Law 110 ⚿393(1)

110 Criminal Law
110XVII Evidence
110XVII(I) Competency in General
110k393 Compelling Self-Incrimination
110k393(1) k. In General. Most Cited Cases

Criminal Law 110 ⚿627.5(3)

110 Criminal Law
110XX Trial
110XX(A) Preliminary Proceedings
110k627.5 Discovery Prior to and Incident to Trial
110k627.5(3) k. Prosecution's Right to Disclosure. Most Cited Cases
Amendment to criminal rules allowing reciprocal discovery violated state constitutional privilege against self-incrimination. Const. Art. 1, § 9; Rules Crim.Proc., Rule 16.

469 Eric A. Johnson, Assistant Attorney General, Office of Special Prosecutions and Appeals, Anchorage, and Bruce M. Botelho, Attorney General, Juneau, for Petitioner.

William R. Satterberg, Jr., Law Offices of William R. Satterberg, Jr., Fairbanks, for Respondent.

Marcia E. Holland, Assistant Public Defender, Fairbanks, and Barbara K. Brink, Public Defender, Anchorage, for Amicus Curiae Alaska Public Defender Agency.

James H. McComas, Pro Bono Counsel, Anchorage, for Amicus Curiae Office of Public Advocacy.

Before MATTHEWS, C.J., and COMPTON, EASTAUGH and FABE, JJ.

OPINION

PER CURIAM.

The decision in this case is controlled by Scott v. State, 519 P.2d 774 (Alaska 1974), unless we are persuaded to overrule Scott. In State v. Dunlop, 721 P.2d 604 (Alaska 1986), we stated:

> We do not lightly overrule our past decisions.... [I]t is a "salutory policy to follow past decisions." ...[W]here we are "clearly convinced the rule was originally erroneous or is no longer sound because of changed conditions, and that more good than harm would result from a departure from precedent," we will so depart.

Id. at 610 (footnote omitted) (quoting State v. Souter, 606 P.2d 399, 400 (Alaska 1980)). We are not persuaded that these standards are met, at least with respect to Scott's holding that the production of the names of non-alibi 470 witnesses and their statements cannot be constitutionally compelled. Because the reciprocal discovery provisions enacted in section 1 of Chapter 95 SLA 1996 are non-severable, and at least one of those provisions violates article 1, section 9 of Alaska's constitution, the entire section is invalid. The pre-existing version of Alaska Criminal Rule 16 must remain in effect. AFFIRMED.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

BRYNER, J., not participating.
Alaska,1997.
State v. Summerville
948 P.2d 469

END OF DOCUMENT

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

Reciprocal Discovery

Supreme Court of Alaska.
Roy Anthony SCOTT, a/k/a Roy Anthony Stropkai, Petitioner,
v.
STATE of Alaska, Respondent.
No. 1968.

March 1, 1974.

The Superior Court, Third Judicial District, Anchorage, Ralph E. Moody, J., issued a pretrial discovery order which required accused to disclose certain information, and petition for review was granted. The Supreme Court, Fitzgerald, J., held that requiring accused to disclose names and addresses of witnesses, statements of witnesses, and evidence relating to alibi defense violated accused's privilege against self-incrimination under the State Constitution, but that requiring accused to give notice of alibi defense was proper.

Vacated and remanded.

West Headnotes

[1] Criminal Law 110 ⚿627.5(3)

110 Criminal Law
110XX Trial
110XX(A) Preliminary Proceedings
110k627.5 Discovery Prior to and Incident to Trial
110k627.5(3) k. Prosecution's Right to Disclosure. Most Cited Cases
Order requiring accused to produce information not expressly provided for in rules for criminal procedure did not constitute an improper promulgation of new rule of criminal procedure. Rules of Criminal Procedure, rule 16(c); Const. art. 4, § 15.

[2] Criminal Law 110 ⚿632(1)

110 Criminal Law
110XX Trial
110XX(A) Preliminary Proceedings
110k632 Dockets and Pretrial Procedure
110k632(1) k. In General. Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 110k632)
Broad latitude must be accorded trial court in conduct and management of pretrial procedures.

[3] Criminal Law 110 ⚿627.5(3)

110 Criminal Law
110XX Trial
110XX(A) Preliminary Proceedings
110k627.5 Discovery Prior to and Incident to Trial
110k627.5(3) k. Prosecution's Right to Disclosure. Most Cited Cases
Mere fact that court ordered accused to submit pretrial information which was not specifically included in rule relating to discovery in criminal case did not establish that court abused its discretion. Rules of Criminal Procedure, rule 16(a, c).

[4] Criminal Law 110 ⚿1991

110 Criminal Law
110XXXI Counsel
110XXXI(D) Duties and Obligations of Prosecuting Attorneys
110XXXI(D)2 Disclosure of Information
110k1991 k. Constitutional Obligations Regarding Disclosure. Most Cited Cases
(Formerly 110k700(2.1), 110k700(2), 110k700)
Prosecution has affirmative duty to disclose to accused any information within its control which tends to negate defendant's guilt.

[5] Courts 106 ⚿97(1)

106 Courts
106II Establishment, Organization, and Procedure
106II(G) Rules of Decision
106k88 Previous Decisions as Controlling or as Precedents
106k97 Decisions of United States Courts as Authority in State Courts
106k97(1) k. In General. Most Cited Cases

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

State Supreme Court is not bound to follow blindly a federal constitutional construction of fundamental principle if state court is convinced that result is based on unsound reason or logic.

[6] Criminal Law 110 ⚿393(1)

110 Criminal Law
110XVII Evidence
110XVII(I) Competency in General
110k393 Compelling Self-Incrimination
110k393(1) k. In General. Most Cited Cases

Privilege against compelled self-incrimination under Alaska Constitution prohibits extensive pretrial prosecutorial discovery in criminal proceedings. Rules of Criminal Procedure, rule 16(c); Const. art. 1, § 9.

[7] Criminal Law 110 ⚿393(1)

110 Criminal Law
110XVII Evidence
110XVII(I) Competency in General
110k393 Compelling Self-Incrimination
110k393(1) k. In General. Most Cited Cases

Fundamental right not to incriminate one's self should apply at every stage of criminal inquiry or proceedings regardless of judge-made exclusionary or evidentiary rules. Rules of Criminal Procedure, rule 16(c); Const. art. 1, § 9; U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 5.

[8] Criminal Law 110 ⚿393(1)

110 Criminal Law
110XVII Evidence
110XVII(I) Competency in General
110k393 Compelling Self-Incrimination
110k393(1) k. In General. Most Cited Cases

Pretrial order requiring accused to disclose names and addresses of witnesses violated accused's privilege against self-incrimination under state Constitution. Rules of Criminal Procedure, rule 16(c); Const. art. 1, § 9.

[9] Criminal Law 110 ⚿393(1)

110 Criminal Law
110XVII Evidence
110XVII(I) Competency in General
110k393 Compelling Self-Incrimination
110k393(1) k. In General. Most Cited Cases

Pretrial order requiring accused to produce for inspection and copying all written or recorded statements of prospective defense or government witnesses which accused possesses violated accused's right against self-incrimination under State Constitution. Rules of Criminal Procedure, rule 16(c); Const. art. 1, § 9.

[10] Criminal Law 110 ⚿393(1)

110 Criminal Law
110XVII Evidence
110XVII(I) Competency in General
110k393 Compelling Self-Incrimination
110k393(1) k. In General. Most Cited Cases

Pretrial discovery order which required accused to produce advance notice of alibi defense together with information indicating place or places he claimed to have been violated accused's right against self-incrimination under State Constitution. Rules of Criminal Procedure, rule 16(c); Const. art. 1, § 9.

[11] Criminal Law 110 ⚿393(1)

110 Criminal Law
110XVII Evidence
110XVII(I) Competency in General
110k393 Compelling Self-Incrimination
110k393(1) k. In General. Most Cited Cases

Pretrial discovery order requiring accused to furnish notice of alibi defense did not violate accused's privilege against self-incrimination under State Constitution. Rules of Criminal Procedure, rule 16(c); Const. art. 1, § 9.

*775 Herbert D. Soll, Public Defender, Larry A. Jordan, Asst. Public Defender, Anchorage, for petitioner.

John E. Havelock, Atty. Gen., Juneau, Seaborn J. Buckalew, Jr., Dist. Atty., Louis Agi, Asst. Dist. Atty., Anchorage, for respondent.

Before RABINOWITZ, C. J., and CONNOR, ER-

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

WIN, BOOCHEVER, and FITZGERALD, JJ.

OPINION

FITZGERALD, Justice.

This petition for review raises the question of the constitutionality of a superior court pretrial order authorizing broad prosecutorial discovery.

The petitioner Scott was arraigned in superior court on an indictment charging him with rape. [FN1] The court in conformity to Rule 16(f) of the Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure scheduled a pretrial omnibus hearing. A few days before the hearing, the respondent State of Alaska filed a motion for a sweeping discovery order. Petitioner filed opposition to the motion, but his objections were overruled. The superior court granted respondent's motion such ordered petitioner to disclose: motion and ordered petitioner to disclose:

(1) the names and addresses of all prospective defense witnesses, other than defendant himself.

(2) the production or inspection and copying of any written or recorded statements in defendant's possession of prospective defense or government witnesses, other than defendant himself.

(3) advance notice of an alibi defense, together with information indicating the place or places defendant claims to have been and the names of witnesses upon whom he intends to rely.

Petitioner promptly sought interlocutory appellate review of the discovery order by way of a petition for review.

We granted the petition for review in this case because we concluded that postponement of appellate review until a final judgment may 'result in injustice because of impairment of a legal right' and because 'the order . . . sought to be reviewed is of such substance and importance as to justify deviation from the normal appellate procedure by way of appeal and to require the immediate attention of this court.'[FN2]

FN2.Alaska App.R. 23(e), 24(a).

In his petition for review, Scott claims error on the part of the trial court in several respects. He suggests that the court, *776 in ordering the pretrial production of certain information not expressly provided for in Rule 16(c) of the Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, promulgated a new rule of criminal procedure. This is, he argues, constitutionally impermissible since article IV, section 15 of the Alaska constitution placed the rule-making authority in this court. Petitioner also claims that the discovery order infringes upon his privilege against compulsory self-incrimination under article I, section 9 of the Alaska constitution and the fifth and fourteenth amendments of the United States Constitution. Furthermore, he argues that the discovery order violates his right to effective confrontation and cross-examination secured by article I, section 11 of the Alaska constitution and the sixth and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution. Petitioner also advances one claim of procedural error. He argues that the superior court abused its discretion in making a discovery order which goes beyond the express provisions of Criminal Rule 16(c).

[1] We find no merit in Scott's claim that the superior court, in ordering the production of certain information not expressly mentioned in Criminal Rule 16(c),[FN3] effectively promulgated a new rule of criminal procedure and thereby usurped this court's constitutional rule-making authority. The record does not establish that the superior court intended to promulgate new rules to govern pretrial procedure in criminal proceedings. Moreover petitioner's reliance upon Lee v. State[FN4] is misplaced. While in Lee we did observe that the 'superior court has no responsibility or authority to promulgate rules of practice and procedure,'[FN5] the statement was not made in the context of a pretrial order by the superior court. In Lee the appellants contended that the trial court was in error for having failed to promulgate rules of procedure by which appeals could be taken from the magistrate's court. In the case before us now, the trial court was ruling upon a motion for discovery brought under existing rules of criminal procedure. Since the underlying facts of the Lee case are essentially different, its rationale is not applicable to the case at bar.

FN3.Alaska R.Crim.P. 16(c) provides:

(1) Non-Testimonial Identification Procedures. A judicial officer may upon motion for good cause shown, require the accused to do or submit to any or all of the following:

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

(i) Appear in a line-up;

(ii) Speak for identification by witnesses to an offense;

(iii) Be fingerprinted;

(iv) Pose for photographs not involving reenactment of a scene;

(v) Try on articles of clothing;

(vi) Permit the taking of specimens of material under his fingernails;

(vii) Permit the taking of samples of his blood, hair and other materials of his body which involve no unreasonable intrusion thereof;

(viii) Provide specimens of his handwriting;

(ix) Submit to a reasonable physical or medical inspection of his body.

(2) Reports or Statements of Experts. The trial court may require that the prosecuting attorney be informed of and permitted to inspect and to copy or photograph any reports or statements of experts made in connection with the particular case, including results of physical or mental examinations and of scientific tests, experiments or comparisons which are intended by the defendant to be used at trial. Information obtained by the state under the provisions of this section shall be used only for cross-examination or rebuttal of defense testimony.

(3) Notice of Intent to Raise Insanity Defense. Following substantial compliance by the state with section (b) of this rule a defendant who intends to offer evidence of a defense of insanity shall inform the state of such intention at the time of plea or at such other time as may be designated by the trial court. The court may order the defendant to submit to psychiatric examination by a psychiatrist or psychologist selected by the court, and the report shall be made available to both parties. Notice of intent to raise a defense of insanity shall not be commented on by the prosecution at trial.

FN4. 374 P.2d 868 (Alaska 1962).

FN5. Id. at 869.

We also disagree with petitioner's contention that since the order in question exceeds the scope of materials discoverable under Criminal Rule 16(c), it constitutes *777 an abuse of trial court discretion.Criminal Rule 16(c) permits the trial court, upon proper motion by the prosecution, to order the accused to submit to certain non-testimonial identification procedures, to allow discovery of experts' reports or statements and to require notice if the accused intends to raise insanity as a defense. The discovery order before us, however, goes beyond the material enumerated in the rule and orders the petitioner to produce the names and addresses of defense witnesses, written statements taken from defense and government witnesses, advance notice of an alibi defense, together with names of prospective alibi witnesses and information concerning the locations to be relied upon for alibi purposes.

[2][3] In our opinion, broad latitude must be accorded a trial court in the conduct and management of pretrial procedures. This interpretation is in keeping with the spirit and purpose of discovery rules generally, and comports with the expressed term of Criminal Rule 16(a).

(a) Scope of Discovery. In order to provide adequate information for informed pleas, expedite trial, minimize surprise, afford opportunity for effective cross-examination, and meet the requirements of due process, discovery prior to trial should be as full and free as possible consistent with protection of persons, effective law enforcement, and the adversary system. (emphasis added)

Reading sections (a) and (c) of Rule 16 together, we conclude that a ruling compelling the production of items not expressly mentioned in section (c) of the rule is within the 'broad discretion of the trial court.'We find no abuse of discretion merely because information not specifically included in the rule is ordered to be disclosed.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

The most serious constitutional claim advanced by petitioner is that the broad prosecutorial discovery order contravenes his privilege against self-incrimination[FN6] under the fifth and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution[FN7] and article 1, section 9 of the Alaska constitution.[FN8] In other words, we must determine whether petitioner has a constitutional right to refuse to disclose some or all of the evidentiary material required to be disclosed by the discovery order.

FN6. Recently, the tension existing between prosecutorial discovery and the constitutional privilege against self-incrimination has received considerable attention from legal commentators. See, e. g., Everett, Discovery in Criminal Cases-In Search of a Standard, 1964 Duke L.J. 477, 492-94, 503-05; Moran, Federal Criminal Rules Changes: Aid or Illusion for the Indigent Defendant?, 51 A.B.A.J. 64 (1965); Nakell, Criminal Discovery for the Defense and the Prosecution-the Developing Constitutional Considerations, 50 N.C.L.Rev. 437 479-516 (1972); Rezneck, Justice Brennan and Discovery in Criminal Cases, 4 Rutgers-Camden L.J. 85 (1972); Symposium, Discovery in Federal Criminal Cases, 33 F.R.D. 47-128 (1965); Traynor, Ground Lost and Found in Criminal Discovery, 39 N.Y.U.L.Rev. 228 (1964); Wilder, Prosecution Discovery and the Privilege Against Self-Incrimination, 6 Am.Crim.L.Q. 3 (1967); Zagel and Carr, State Criminal Discovery and the New Illinois Rules, 1971, U.Ill.L.Forum 557 (1971); Annot., 45 A.L.R.3d 959 (1972); Annot., 96 A.L.R.2d 1224 (1964); Comment, Developments in the Law-Discovery, 74 Harv.L.Rev. 940 (1961); Note, The Self-Incrimination Privilege: Barrier to Criminal Discovery?, 51 Calif.L.Rev. 135 (1963); Note, Prosecutorial Discovery Under Proposed Rule 16, 85 Harv.L.Rev. 994 (1972); 35 Colo.R.Rev. 290 (1963); 63 Colum.L.Rev. 361 (1963); 76 Harv.L.Rev. 838 (1963); 49 Ia.L.Rev. 176 (1963); 61 Mich.L.Rev. 987 (1963); 15 Stan.L.Rev. 700 (1963).

FN7. The fifth amendment to the United States Constitution provides in part:

> No person . . . shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law . . ..

5th Am. U.S. Constitution

The fifth amendment has been made applicable to the states through the fourteenth amendment to the United States Constitution. Malloy v. Hogan, 378 U.S. 1, 84 S.Ct. 1489, 12 L.Ed.2d 653 (1964).

FN8.Art. I, s 9 of the Alaska constitution provides:

> No person shall be compelled in any criminal proceeding to be a witness against himself.

Art. I §9 Ak Constitution

*778 [4] We begin our analysis by examining the historical development of criminal discovery in the context of the privilege against self-incrimination under the fifth amendment to the United States Constitution. The common law recognized no right of discovery in a criminal case by either the prosecution or the defendant. Nor was such a right said to exist under traditional concepts of due process.[FN9] In recent years, however, several exceptions have emerged. The prosecution has an affirmative duty to disclose to an accused any information within its control which tends to negate defendant's guilt.[FN10] It has now become well-settled in many jurisdictions that trial courts have broad discretionary power to order the prosecution to disclose to the defendant any relevant information in the possession or control of the prosecution.[FN11]

FN9. Cicenia v. LaGay, 357 U.S. 504, 510, 78 S.Ct. 1297, 1301,2 L.Ed. 1523, 1529 (1958); State v. Thompson, 11 Terry 456, 134 A.2d 266, 268 (Del.1957); Commonwealth v. Bartolini, 299 Mass. 503, 13 N.E.2d 382, 386 (1938), cert. denied, 304 U.S. 565, 58 S.Ct. 950, 83 L.Ed. 1531 (1938); State v. Goldberg, 261 N.C. 181, 134 S.E.2d 334, 340-341 (1964).

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

FN10. Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S.Ct. 1194, 10 L.Ed.2d 215 (1963); United States ex rel. Butler v. Maroney, 319 F.2d 662, 627 (3d Cir. 1963); People v. Hoffman, 32 Ill.2d 96, 203 N.E.2d 873 (1965).

FN11. State v. Coon, 2 Alaska L.J. No. 1 at 3 (Super.Ct.1964); State ex rel. Polley v. Superior Court of Santa Cruz County, 81 Ariz. 127, 302 P.2d 263, 265 (1956); People v. Riser, 47 Cal.2d 566, 305 P.2d 1, 12 (1956), cert. denied, 358 U.S. 646, 79 S.Ct. 537, 3 L.Ed.2d 568 (1959); State v. Haas, 188 Md. 643, 51 A.2d 647, 649 (1947); Commonwealth v. Bartolini, 299 Mass. 503, 13 N.E.2d 382, 385 (1938), cert. denied, 304 U.S. 565, 58 S.Ct. 950, 83 L.Ed. 1531 (1938); People v. Johnson, 356 Mich. 619, 97 N.W.2d 739, 741-743 (1959); People v. Calandrillo, 29 Misc.2d 495, 215 N.Y.S.2d 364, 366 (Suffolk County Ct.1961); State v. Leland, 190 Or. 598, 227 P.2d 785, 793 (1961), aff'd, 343 U.S. 790, 793, 72 S.Ct. 1002, 1004, 96 L.Ed. 1302 (1952).

Prosecutorial discovery was strongly condemned in early American jurisprudence. The United States Supreme Court in 1886 announced strong opposition to compulsory self-incrimination through discovery orders. In Boyd v. United States,[FN12] Mr. Justice Bradley, speaking for the court, stated:

FN12. 116 U.S. 616, 6 S.Ct. 524, 29 L.Ed. 746 (1886).

Now it is elementary knowledge that one cardinal rule of the court of chancery is never to decree a discovery which might tend to convict the party of a crime, or to forfeit his property. And any compulsory discovery by extorting the party's oath, or compelling the production of his private books and papers, to convict him of crime or to forfeit his property, is contrary to the principles of a free government. It is abhorrent to the instincts of an Englishman; it is abhorrent to the instincts of an American. It may suit the purposes of despotic power, but it cannot abide the pure atmosphere of political liberty and personal freedom.[FN13]

FN13. Id. at 631-632, 6 S.Ct. at 533, 29 L.Ed. at 751 (footnote omitted).

Similar views have since been expressed by Professor Wigmore:

It follows that the production of documents or chattels by a person (whether ordinary witness or party witness) in response to a subpoena, or to a motion to order production, or to other form of process relying on his moral responsibility for truthtelling, may be refused under the protection of the privilege (against self-incrimination). This is universally conceded. (emphasis in original)[FN14]

FN14. 8 J. Wigmore, Evidence s 2264 (McNaughton rev. 1961) (footnote omitted).

As recently as 1967, a federal district court observed that the fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination operated to bar prosecutorial discovery of evidence to be used in the government's case-in-chief.[FN15]

FN15. In United States v. Fratello, 44 F.R.D. 444 (S.D.N.Y.1967), the trial court declined to condition defense discovery upon the defendant's provision to the prosecution of documentary evidence under the former's control. The court concluded that 'the right of a defendant in a criminal case to remain silent in face of accusations against him, even at the discovery stage, seems clear.'

*779 The constitutional questions arising out of prosecutorial discovery are reflected in Rule 16(c) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. That rule by its terms does not directly compel the defendant to provide prosecutorial discovery. Rather, it permits the court to condition discovery when sought by the defense by requiring the defense to make a reciprocal exchange with the government.[FN16] Any possible conflict with fifth amendment rights is thought to be avoided on theories of implied consent or waiver by the defendant. Thus the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure have preserved without resolving the constitutional questions raised by prosecutorial discovery.[FN17]

Federal Rules of Discovery

FN16.Fed.R.Crim.P. 16(c) provides:

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

> (c) Discovery by the Government. If the court grants relief sought by the defendant under subdivision (a)(2) or subdivision (b) of this rule, it may, upon motion of the government, condition its order by requiring that the defendant permit the government to inspect and copy or photograph scientific or medical reports, books, papers, documents, tangible objects, or copies or portions thereof, which the defendant intends to produce at the trial and which are within his possession, custody or control, upon a showing of materiality to the preparation of the government's case and that the request is reasonable. Except as to scientific or medical reports, this subdivision does not authorize the discovery or inspection of reports, memoranda, or other internal defense documents made by the defendant, or his attorneys or agents in connection with the investigation or defense of the case, or of statements made by the defendant, or by government or defense witnesses, or by prospective government or defense witnesses, to the defendant, his agents or attorneys.

Fed. Rule of Discovery

FN17. The Advisory Committee on Rules suggested:

'Mutual disclosure so far as consistent with the privilege against self-incrimination would seem as appropriate as in civil cases.' Fed.R.Crim.P. 16, 18 U.S.C.A. Rule 16, at 19 (1969).

Possibly one of the greatest influences in the development of new concepts of criminal discovery generally and prosecutorial discovery in particular has been Justice Roger J. Traynor, formerly Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of California. Writing for that court in 1962, Justice Traynor upheld broad prosecutorial discovery in Jones v. Superior Court of Nevada County.[FN18] The defendant in the case had been charged with rape. He asserted an affirmative defense of impotency. The Supreme Court of California upheld the prosecution's right to discover the names of witnesses upon whom the defendant intended to rely in advancing his affirmative defense as well as any relevant medical reports and X-rays.[FN19]

FN18. 58 Cal.2d 56, 22 Cal.Rptr. 879, 372 P.2d 919 (1962).

FN19. For critical constitutional commentary upon the holding reached in Jones, supra n. 19, see Smith and McCollom, Counterdiscovery in Criminal Cases: Fifth Amendment Privileges Abridged, 54 A.B.A.J. 256 (1968); Wilder, Prosecution Discovery and the Privilege Against Self-Incrimination, 6 Am.Crim.L.Q. 3 (1967); Note, 63 Colum.L.Rev. 361 (1963); Note, 15 Stan.L.Rev. 700 (1963).

Justice Traynor reasoned that prosecutorial discovery of information relating to issues raised by the affirmative defense

> "does not violate the privilege against self-incrimination. Nor to this extent does it violate the attorney-client privilege. It simply requires petitioner to disclose information that he will shortly reveal anyway. Such information is discoverable.[FN20] "

FN20. 22 Cal.Rptr. at 882, 372 P.2d at 922.

Justice Traynor has discussed the holding in Jones in a law review article and has further explained his reasoning that prosecutorial discovery merely accelerated the timing of the defendant's strategic midtrial decisions.

> (Notice-of-alibi) statutes have been sustained over the objection that they violate constitutional privileges against self-incrimination, for they do not compel the defendant to reveal or produce anything, but merely regulate the procedure*780 by which he presents his case. We found this reasoning persuasive. The trial court's order that the defendant reveal the names of witnesses he intended to call and produce reports and X-rays he intended to introduce in evidence simply required him to disclose information that he would shortly reveal in any event. He was thus required only to decide at a point earlier in time than he would ordinarily have to whether to remain silent or to disclose the information. He lost only the possible tactical advantage of taking the prosecution by surprise at the trial, an advantage that in any event would easily have gone for naught given the probability that the trial court would have granted the prosecution a continuance to prepare a rebuttal.[FN21]

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

FN21. Traynor, Ground Lost and Found in Criminal Discovery, 39 N.Y.U.L.Rev. 228, 247 (1964) (footnote omitted).

In the same discussion, Justice Traynor went on to analogize criminal discovery to civil discovery in which pretrial discovery is a 'two-way street' for both litigants.

Likewise, nothing is lost of the privilege, and much is gained in orderly procedure, if the defendant is required to give advance notice of the evidence he intends to offer in defense after he has himself received pretrial discovery of the prosecution's case. He can hardly demand pretrial discovery and still insist on reserving his own surprises for the trial. The good coin of discovery gains in value when it is fairly exchanged at the appropriate procedural hours.

The Jones case, indicating the two-sideness of the discovery process, suggests that we may be on the way to abandoning our preoccupation with surprise tactics just as we have substantially abandoned the technicalities of pleading that in their time were also overvalued.[FN22]

FN22.Id. at 248, 250.

Seven years after Jones the California Supreme Court decided People v. Pike.[FN23] In that case, a prosecution for first degree murder, the court held that the state was entitled to pretrial discovery of the names, addresses and expected testimony of defense witnesses. But within a year, the California Supreme Court retrenched somewhat from its leading position on prosecutorial discovery. In Prudhomme v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County,[FN24] another prosecution for murder, a trial court was restrained from enforcing a discovery order which would have compelled the defendant's attorney to disclose to the prosecution the names, addresses and expected testimony of defense witnesses. Concluding that the 'trial court failed to inquire into the incriminatory nature of the information sought,'[FN25] the Supreme Court of California was apparently influenced by the limited and conditional nature of the privisions of Rule 16(c) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.[FN26] The court may also have been cautiously anticipating a negative decision by the United States Supreme Court on the constitutionality of prosecutorial discovery.[FN27] Thus having substantially advanced the concept of prosecutorial discovery, the California court in Prudhomme, after carefully reviewing the policy consideration underlying the privilege against self-incrimination, retreated from its vanguard position.

FN23. 71 Cal.2d 595, 78 Cal.Rptr. 672, 455 P.2d 776 (1969).

FN24. 2 Cal.3d 320, 85 Cal.Rptr. 129, 466 P.2d 673 (1970).

FN25. 85 Cal.Rptr. at 134, 466 P.2d at 678.

FN26. Regarding Fed.R.Crim.P. 16(c), the court stated:

Thus, federal rule 16, subdivision (c) is limited to the 'reasonable' disclosure of physical evidence; there is no provision authorizing disclosure of names, addresses or expected testimony of defense witnesses.

Id., 85 Cal.Rptr. at 131, 466 P.2d at 675-676 (footnote omitted.)

FN27. Regarding the forthcoming United States Supreme Court decision on notice-of-alibi statutes, the court observed:

Finally, the United States Supreme Court recently granted certiorari in Williams v. Florida (C.A.Fla.) 224 So.2d 406, which had upheld Florida's alibi statute against the claim that it violated the accused's Fifth Amendment rights.

85 Cal.Rptr. at 132, 466 P.2d at 676.

781 Ironically perhaps the case which may have influenced the California court to draw back in Prudhomme was decided the other way by the United States Supreme Court. The Court in Williams v. Florida[FN28] upheld a Florida notice-of-alibi rule[FN29] against a claim of fifth amendment privilege, adopting the rationale of Jones v. Superior Court of Nevada County. In that case, the defendant in a robbery prosecution challenged the constitutionality of a Florida rule of criminal procedure which compelled him in advance of trial to provide the prosecution with the names and addresses of prospective alibi witnesses as well as information pertaining to the place where he claimed to have been. Rejecting the defendant's fifth amendment claim, the Supreme Court cited Jones v. Superior Court of Nevada County and Justice Traynor's law review article.[FN30] Speaking for six members of the court, Justice White concluded that:

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

FN28. 399 U.S. 78, 90 S.Ct. 1893, 26 L.Ed.2d 446 (1970).

FN29. For state cases that have upheld notice-of-alibi defense and alibi witnesses requirements, see State v. Stump, 254 Iowa 1181, 119 N.W.2d 210, 219-220,cert. denied, 375 U.S. 853, 84 S.Ct. 113, 11 L.Ed.2d 80 (1963); State v. Baldwin, 47 N.J. 379, 221 A.2d 199, 204-205,cert. denied, 385 U.S. 980, 87 S.Ct. 527, 17 L.Ed.2d 442 (1966); People v. Rakiec, 260 App.Div. 452, 23 N.Y.S.2d 607, 612-613 (1940); Commonwealth v. Vecchiolli, 208 Pa.Super. 483, 224 A.2d 96, 99 (1966).

FN30. 399 U.S. at 83, n. 13, 90 S.Ct. at 1897, 26 L.Ed.2d at 451.

However 'testimonial' or 'incriminating' the alibi defense proves to be, it cannot be considered 'compelled' within the meaning of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments.[FN31]

FN31. Id. at 84, 90 S.Ct. at 1897, 26 L.Ed.2d at 451.

Accepting Justice Traynor's rationale in Jones that pretrial prosecutorial discovery merely accelerated the defendant's mid-trial strategy decisions, Justice White reasoned that:

(T)he notice-of-alibi rule by itself in no way affected petitioner's crucial decision to call alibi witnesses or added to the legitimate pressures leading to that course of action. At most, the rule only compelled petitioner to accelerate the time of his disclosure, forcing him to divulge at an earlier date information that the petitioner from the begining planned to divulge at trial. Nothing in the Fifth Amendment privilege entitles a defendant as a matter of constitutional right to await the end of the State's case before announcing the nature of his defense, any more than it entitles him to await the jury's verdict on the State's case-in-chief before deciding whether or not to take the stand himself.[FN32]

FN32. Id. at 85, 90 S.Ct. at 1898, 26 L.Ed.2d at 452.

The holding of the court squarely upheld the prosecution right in advance of trial to obtain the names of witnesses and the location of defendant's alibi against his claim of self-incrimination.

We decline to hold that the privilege against compulsory self-incrimination guarantees the defendant the right to surprise the State with an alibi defense. [FN33]

FN33. Id. at 86, 90 S.Ct. at 1898, 26 L.Ed.2d at 452.

Justice Black, with whom Justice Douglas concurred, forcefully dissented from the majority's holding on the prosecutorial discovery question. According to Justice Black, the Florida notice-of-alibi rule violated the defendant's fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination, and the majority's decision constituted a dangerous move towards the erosion of a constitutional scheme which imposes upon the prosecution the complete burden of proof. Justice Black reasoned:

Although this case itself involves only a notice-of-alibi provision, it is clear that the decision means that a State can require a defendant to disclose in advance of trial any and all information he might possibly use to defend himself at trial. This decision, in my view, is a radical and dangerous departure from the historical*782 and constitutionally guaranteed right of a defendant in a criminal case to remain completely silent, requiring the State to prove its case without any assistance of any kind from the defendant himself.[FN34]

FN34. Id. at 107-108, 90 S.Ct. at 1909-1910, 26 L.Ed.2d at 480.

The dissenting justice disputed the central premise

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

upon which the court based its holding.

The core of the majority's decision is an assumption that compelling a defendant to give notice of an alibi defense before a trial is no different from requiring a defendant, after the State has produced the evidence against him at trial, to plead alibi before the jury retires to consider the case . . .. That statement is plainly and simply wrong as a matter of fact and law, and the Court's holding based on that statement is a complete misunderstanding of the protections provided for criminal defendants by the Fifth Amendment and other provisions of the Bill or Rights.[FN35]

> FN35. Id. at 108, 90 S.Ct. at 1910, 26 L.Ed.2d at 480-481 (footnote omitted).

The rationale of Justice Black's objection to the majority's reasoning is that a defendant's 'pretrial decision cannot be analyzed as simply a matter of 'timing,' influenced by the same factors operating at trial itself.'[FN36]Moreover, Justice Black expressed his concern that the 'timing' rationale employed by the Court would predictably be applied to justify the prosecutorial discovery of other information in the defendant's possession.

> FN36. Id. at 110, 90 S.Ct. at 1911, 26 L.Ed.2d at 482.

The rationale of today's decision is in no way limited to alibi defenses, or any other type or classification of evidence. The theory advanced goes at least so far as to permit the State to obtain under threat of sanction complete disclosure by the defendant in advance of trial of all evidence, testimony, and tactics he plans to use at that trial. In each case the justification will be that the rule affects only the 'timing' of the disclosure, and not the substantive decision itself. This inevitability is clearly revealed by the citation to Jones v. Superior Court . . .[FN37]

> FN37. Id. at 114, 90 S.Ct. at 1913, 26 L.Ed.2d at 484 (citation omitted).

A substantial number of states in addition to Florida have by rule or statute imposed upon the defendant an obligation to disclose his defenses to the prosecution in advance of trial. Almost without exception provisions of this type have been upheld. In reaching that result the courts have grounded their decision on a variety of reasons. Some of the decisions would seem to apply notice-of-alibi provisions without discussing the constitutional considerations. E.g., State v. Baldwin, 47 N.J. 379,221 A.2d 119, 204-205 (1966); State v. Thayer, 124 Ohio St. 1, 176 N.E. 656, 657 (1931); Commonwealth v. Vecchiolli, 208 Pa.Super. 483, 224 A.2d 96, 99 (1966); State v. Kopacka, 261 Wis. 70, 51 N.W.2d 495, 498 (1952). Still other decisions do not extensively discuss or analyze the constitutional problems but subordinate the issues to matters of procedure. E.G., State v. George, 100 Ariz. 350, 414 P.2d 730, 733 (1966); People v. Shulenberg, 279 App.Div. 1115, 112 N.Y.S.2d 374, 375 (1952).

Montana

One state decision which does squarely face the constitutional issues arising out of a notice-of-defense statute is State ex rel. Sikora v. District Court of the Thirteenth Judicial District, 154 Mont. 241, 462 P.2d 897, decided by the Supreme Court of Montana in 1969. Sikora arose under the following circumstances. Under Montana law the defendant in a criminal case is required to give advance notice of his intention to interpose the defenses of insanity, self-defense or alibi and to file with the clerk names and addresses of supporting witnesses. Marie Sikora and two others were charged with murder. After an unfavorable ruling on a pretrial motion, the defendants filed petitions with the Supreme Court of Montana challenging the constitutionality of the statute. Addressing*783 itself first to the notice provision of the statute, the court found no apparent constitutional infirmity. This was so, the court reasoned, since merely giving notice of an intended defense at a procedural stage is ordinarily not incriminating.[FN38] Turning to the statutory requirement compelling pretrial disclosure of supporting witnesses, the court concluded that not all information obtained from a defendant is privileged under the fifth amendment.[FN39] Nevertheless, the court recognized that the application of the statute might itself lead to an invasion of the privilege against self-incrimination. Essentially, the court's holding comes down to this: while much of the statute requiring a defendant to make a pretrial disclosure of his defense and his witnesses may not be on its face unconstitutional, the use or application of the statute may lead to an unconstitutional result. The principal significance of Sikora is that it points out the difficulty in upholding disclosure provisions when courts do attempt to deal directly with constitutional issues of self-incrimination arising out of compelled pretrial disclosure.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

FN38. Justice Haswell dissented in part contending that required disclosure of claims of self defense or insanity violated the constitutional privilege against self-incrimination.

FN39. This has been widely recognized. E. g., Gilbert v. California, 388 U.S. 263, 87 S.Ct. 1951, 18 L.Ed.2d 1178 (1967); United States v. Wade, 388 U.S. 218, 87 S.Ct. 1926, 18 L.Ed.2d 1149 (1967); Schmerber v. California, 384 U.S. 757, 86 S.Ct. 1826, 16 L.Ed.2d 908 (1966); Roberts v. State, 458 P.2d 340 (Alaska 1969).

The rather extended review which we have taken furnishes a backdrop against which we are prepared to consider the question in the light of our own state's legal history and our own state's constitution.

[5] In Baker v. City of Fairbanks [FN40] we acknowledged our responsibility to depart whenever necessary from constitutional interpretations enunciated by the United States Supreme Court and to develop rights and privileges under the Alaska constitution in accordance with our own unique legal background. In particular we stated:

FN40. 471 P.2d 386 (Alaska 1970).

While we must enforce the minimum constitutional standards imposed upon us by the United States Supreme Court's interpretation of the Fourteenth Amendment, we are free, and we are under a duty, to develop additional constitutional rights and privileges under our Alaska Constitution if we find such fundamental rights and privileges to be within the intention and spirit of our local constitutional language and to be necessary for the kind of civilized life and ordered liberty which is at the core of our constitutional heritage. We need not stand by idly and passively, waiting for constitutional direction from the highest court of the land. Instead, we should be moving concurrently to develop and expound the principles embedded in our constitutional law.[FN41]

FN41. Id. at 401-402 (footnote omitted).

We are not bound to follow blindly a federal constitutional construction of a fundamental principle if we are convinced that the result is based on unsound reason or logic.

We agree with the general principle that the court has a substantial interest in reducing the element of surprise in criminal proceedings. So to this extent at least we must be concerned with the constitutional administration of criminal justice as well as with efficient management of prosecutions and other trial activities. However, we share Justice Black's concern for the integrity of the privilege against self-incrimination and agree with his conclusion that the 'timing' rationale employed by the United States Supreme Court in Williams v. Florida to justify pretrial prosecutorial discovery is unpersuasive.

It is our view that a defendant's midtrial strategy choices are not identical to his pretrial decisions; nor are the problems and opportunities contemplated by an accused in formulating the course of action to be followed during the presentation of 784 his defense at trial identical to the same considerations before trial. The weakness of this 'timing' rationale has been accurately pointed out by at least one commentator:

But Justice White's analysis-which equates the defendant's at-trial choice, either to open a source of potentially incriminating information or to forego the opportunity to present a defense, with a parallel choice before trial-confuses one issue and begs a second. Of course, there is some similarity between defendant's pretrial and at-trial choices: in each case the defendant must weigh his critical need to produce exculpatory evidence against the risks of revealing incriminating information. But because of the prosecutor's heavy burden of proof, the defendant is best advised not to open up any source of potentially adverse information unless he feels that the state has in all likelihood proved its case; and it is only after the prosecutor has presented his evidence in court that the defendant can adequately make this judgment. By contrast, there is no way the defendant can know before trial the actual strength of the evidence against him as it will appear to the trier of fact, even if he has himself benefited from extensive discovery; witnesses' testimony under oath and cross-examination may radically depart from their versions of the events as given to the police or defense counsel prior to

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

trial.[FN42]

FN42. Note, Prosecutorial Discovery Under Proposed Rule 16, 85 Harv.L.Rev. 994, 1007-1008 (1972) (footnote omitted).

Our form of government has imposed an extraordinary burden of proof upon the state in criminal litigation. We think that the appropriate constitutional analysis is not the mere balancing of the state's interests in facilitating efficient law enforcement with the interest of the citizenry in maintaining maximum liberty.[FN43]

FN43. Cf. Baker v. City of Fairbanks, 471 P.2d 386, 394 (Alaska 1970):

> Substantial reasons of policy must play an important part in any disposition of (the question whether petty offenses fall within the right to a jury trial). These naturally divide themselves into two major groups. On the one hand, we have considerations of convenience or expediency for the state and its legal subdivisions. It imposes a certain burden upon the machinery of government to make every offense triable by jury . . .
>
> The argument from expediency contains inherent defects. If an individual right is vested by the Constitution, the overriding demands of governmental efficiency must be of a compelling nature and must be identifiable as flowing from some enumerated constitutional power. To allow expediency to be the basic principle would place the individual constitutional right in a secondary position, to be effectuated only if it accorded with expediency. (footnote omitted)

As Justice Black observed:

A criminal trial is in part a search for truth. But it is also a system designed to protect 'freedom' by insuring that no one is criminally punished unless the State has first succeeded in the admittedly difficult task of convincing a jury that the defendant is guilty. That task is made more difficult by the Bill of Rights, and the Fifth Amendment may be one of the most difficult of the barriers to surmount. The Framers decided that the benefits to be derived from the kind of trial required by the Bill of Rights were well worth any loss in 'efficiency' that resulted.[FN44]

FN44. Williams v. Florida, 399 U.S. at 113-114, 90 S.Ct. at 1912, 26 L.Ed.2d at 484 (concurring and dissenting opinion).

Nor are we convinced that discovery in criminal proceedings is completely analogous to discovery in civil litigation; pretrial criminal discovery is not a 'two-way street.' The analogy to civil discovery fails for a number of reasons. A criminal proceeding from its very inception is quite unlike civil litigation. There is ordinarily available to the prosecution substantial and effective avenues of discovery, such as the investigative resources of the police, access to official records, the power to compel testimony by way of grand jury subpoena which are not equally at the hand of the accused. Even more, as Justice Peters noted*785 in his dissent in Jones v. Superior Court:

The simple fact is that our system of criminal procedure is founded upon the principle that the ascertainment of the facts is a 'one-way street.' It is the constitutional right of the defendant, who is presumed to be innocent, to stand silent while the state attempts to meet its burden of proof, that is, to prove the defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. (emphasis in original) [FN45]

FN45. Jones v. Superior Court of Nevada County, 58 Cal.2d 56, 22 Cal.Rptr. 879, 884, 372 P.2d 919, 924 (1962) (dissenting opinion). Similarly, in Prudhomme v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County, 2 Cal.3d 320, 85 Cal.Rptr. 129, 134, 466 P.2d 673, 678 (1970) (concurring opinion), Justice Peters stated:

> Discovery is not a 'two-way street' because of the constitutional rights of defendants not accorded the prosecution . . ..

In our examination of the constitutional issues we found difficulty in accepting the reasoning of Jones v. Superior Court of Nevada County[FN46] and Williams v. Florida.[FN47] The dissenting opinions of Justice Peters in Jones and Justice Black in Williams seem to us more logical and better reasoned.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

FN46. 58 Cal.2d 56, 22 Cal.Rptr. 879, 372 P.2d 919 (1962).

FN47. 399 U.S. 78, 90 S.Ct. 1893, 26 L.Ed.2d 446 (1970).

[6] We are therefore persuaded to interpret article I, section 9, of the Alaska constitution more broadly than the United States Supreme Court construed the fifth amendment in Williams. We hold that the privilege against compelled self-incrimination under the Alaska constitution prohibits extensive pretrial prosecutorial discovery in criminal proceedings.[FN48]

FN48. At least one legal commentator construes the privilege against self-incrimination under the fifth amendment to the United States Constitution in a similar manner.

> . . . (T)he policies inherent in the fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination indicate that the prosecutorial discovery provisions of the proposed amendment to (federal criminal) Rule 16 are unconstitutional and should be rejected . . . (and) that the contention that increased defense discovery must be dependent upon increased prosecutorial discovery exaggerates the risk of defense discovery and is unpersuasive.
>
> Note, Prosecutorial Discovery Under Proposed Rule 16, 85 Harv.L.Rev. 994 (1972).

The principles we choose to follow in deciding whether or not compelled disclosure of defenses may undermine the privilege against self-incrimination involve a three-fold test: Is the evidence testimonial; is it incriminating; and is it compelled? Applying this three-part rule to the court's discovery order in the case now before us leads to the conclusion that the order is in a large part constitutionally impermissible.

The discovery order directs petitioner to produce 'the names and addresses of all prospective defense witnesses, other than the defendant himself,' including 'the names of (alibi) witnesses upon whom he intends to rely.'

The requirement that petitioner produce a list of names and addresses of witnesses meets the testimonial or communicative criterion of the constitutional analysis. That is, a document containing such facts transmitted from one party to another constitutes a communication of cognizable information from one source to another. Secondly, we are of the opinion that the list of names of prospective witnesses may, at least in some instances, tend to be incriminating. Although the list might not appear to be incriminating on its face, certain of the persons identified in such a list may be known felons, perjurers, accomplices, co-defendants, or individuals under suspicion or police surveillance. Moreover, the police may possess additional incriminating information about some of the witnesses and an accused's reference to such persons may tend to arouse suspicion about his relationship with the witness or may tend to implicate him in the criminal activities of such witness.

[7][8] The incriminating nature of requiring a defendant to disclose the names and addresses of his witnesses prior to 786 trial may be more readily understood if placed in another context. We doubt, for instance, whether any court would uphold a statute or rule which would require the defendant to make such disclosure to the police at the station house. It can be said with assurance that such a procedure would be universally found to be a rank violation of the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination. There are, of course, important substantive differences between the investigatory stage of a criminal proceeding and the point of pretrial procedure. Our purpose is using the example is to make clear the incriminating nature of the disclosure. However, we feel the stage of the proceedings is irrelevant to the analysis of this constitutional privilege. The fundamental right not to incriminate one's self should apply at every stage of criminal inquiry or proceedings regardless of judge-made exclusionary or evidentiary rules. As Justice Connor noted in his majority opinion in McConkey v. State:

> The privilege extends not only to answers that would in themselves support a conviction but also to those which might furnish 'a link in the chain of evidence' leading to a conviction.[FN49]

FN49. 504 P.2d 823, 826 (Alaska 1972)

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

(footnote omitted).

Finally, we agree with petitioner's contention that the names and addresses of the witnesses would by the terms of the order be 'compelled' from him in a constitutional sense. Since the production of a list of names and addresses of witnesses is testimonial in nature, incriminating, and compelled by court order, we hold that this portion of the superior court's discovery order violates petitioner's privilege against self-incrimination under article I, section 9, of the Alaska constitution.

[9] The discovery order next commands 'the production or inspection and copying of any written or recorded statements in defendant's possession of prospective defense or government witnesses . . ..' Again, we are of the view that written or recorded statements are 'testimonial' or 'communicative' in nature. Nor do we think it inconceivable that some, although not necessarily all, of such statements will be incriminating and will tend to furnish a link in the chain of evidence leading to a conviction. The potential incriminating nature of such statements was recognized by the Supreme Court of California in Prudhomme v. Superior Court:

> For example, if a defendant in a murder case intended to call witness A to testify that defendant killed in self-defense, pre-trial disclosure of that information could provide the prosecution with its sole eyewitness to defendant's homicide. Similarly, consider the effect of disclosing the name or expected testimony of witness B, whom defendant intends to call only as a 'last resort' to testify that defendant only committed a lesser-included offense.[FN50]

> FN50. See Prudhomme v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County, 2 Cal.3d 320, 85 Cal.Rptr. 129, 466 P.2d 673, 677 (1970).

As in the case of the list of names and addresses of witnesses, we conclude that the witness statements are being 'compelled' in a constitutional sense. Indeed, we are of the opinion that among the species of information sought to be discovered by respondent, disclosure of pretrial recorded statements of defense witnesses presents the most serious infringement upon petitioner's privilege against self-incrimination. Hence, we hold that this section of the superior court's discovery order is unconstitutional under article I, section 9 of our constitution.

[10] Finally, the discovery order requires petitioner to produce 'advance notice of an alibi defense, together with information indicating the place or places defendant claims to have been . . ..' As with the list of witnesses' names, addresses and recorded statements, information going to alibi is, in our opinion, 'communicative' or 'testimonial.' Again, the information is verbal rather than physical, direct rather than indirect, and immediately cognizable. Documents containing written information are simply not fingerprints, voice samples, physical appearances *787 or line-up identifications. Additionally, for the reasons set forth above, we conclude that the information commanded by this portion of the discovery order is 'compelled' in a constitutional sense from petitioner. And we are of the view that information pertaining to an alternate location where an accused claims to have been tends to be incriminating and may provide the state with another 'link' in its chain of evidence. The information sought could be particularly incriminating if the state were able to demonstrate that no one else in such alternative location had seen the accused during the relevant time period. Further, compelled disclosure of the place the defendant claims to have been is as constitutionally infirm as coerced disclosure of witnesses' names, for it may serve to identify the witnesses. Often the place a defendant will specify will be a residence or a place of business, and in many instances the residents of the home or the proprietor of the place of business will have been present. These persons may be able to provide the police with information probative of the defendant's guilt-information the police might never have found but for the compelled disclosure.

It is no answer to say that the defendant would have to disclose the same facts at trial anyway if he intended to rely on an alibi defense, for the state's case may be so weak that the defendant will choose not to expose himself to further criminal liability by revealing incriminating evidence which was nonetheless exculpatory of the crime for which he stands charged. Hence, we hold that the portion of the superior court's order which commands the production of alibi information concerning the place or places the accused claims to have been also offends petitioner's privilege against self-incrimination under the Alaska constitution.

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

[11] Whether the mere notice of an alibi defense tends to be incriminating to an accused, however, is more questionable. We find it difficult to conceive how a notice of this particular defense, standing by itself, might tend to be incriminating. Nor has petitioner persuasively demonstrated to us how such notice alone would disclose the substance of his defense theory or any incriminating weaknesses or inconsistencies therein. Rather, we are of the view that the advance notice of an alibi defense is in the nature of any pretrial plea, much like a plea of 'not guilty.' We find nothing incriminating about this inquiry. Accordingly, we hold that the portion of the superior court's discovery order which calls upon petitioner to furnish respondent with advance notice of an alibi defense does not violate article I, section 9, of the Alaska constitution.[FN51]

> FN51. We do not, however, mean to express our view of the constitutionality of portions of Criminal Rule 16(c) or other pretrial prosecutorial discovery orders not presently before us.

We do not believe that our decision in the instant case will leave respondent in a disadvantaged posture during future prosecutions. Certainly in the past, the state has experienced no substantial inability to conduct prosecutions without the benefit of extensive pretrial discovery. We anticipate that it will continue to perform as effectively in the future. In the event that the state should be unfairly surprised or prejudiced at trial by unexpected defense witnesses, statements or theories, we assume that the trial courts will exercise sound discretion in the regulation of trial proceedings and grant the state a continuance or other appropriate remedy. We recognize that in some cases this may result in delays and inconvenience at trial, but we are not prepared to exchange a fundamental constitutional right for expediency.

We vacate the superior court's pretrial order and remand the case for further proceedings.[FN52]

> FN52. Due to our holdings and disposition in this petition for review, we decline to reach petitioner's claim that the discovery order violated his right to effective confrontation and cross-examination under article I, section 11 of the Alaska constitution or the sixth and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution.

Alaska 1974.
Scott v. State
519 P.2d 774

END OF DOCUMENT

© 2009 Thomson Reuters/West. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

'I AM JIVERY WONG SHOOTING THE PEOPLE'

The man who gunned down 13 people in an immigrant center in Binghampton, N.Y., thought police had harassed him for years, even spreading rumors about him and touching him in his sleep, he wrote in a letter mailed to a TV station the day of the massacre. — The Associated Press

NEWS DIGEST

NATION

D.C.

Prolonged, secret questioning isn't allowable, high court says

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court refused 5-4 Monday to permit prolonged, secret questioning of crime suspects, ruling that even voluntary confessions may not be used in a federal court if the defendant was held more than six hours before he talked. Justice David Souter pointed to the number of people who have been shown to be innocent through DNA evidence, but who nonetheless had confessed to the crime. Police questioning "isolates and pressures the individual," he said, "and there is mounting empirical evidence that these pressures can induce a frighteningly high percentage of people to confess to crimes they never committed."

MASSACHUSETTS

DNA test for cancer virus praised over Pap smear

BOSTON — A new DNA test for the virus that causes cervical cancer does so much better than current methods that some gynecologists hope it will replace the Pap smear in wealthy countries and cruder tests in poor ones. Not only could the new test for human papillomavirus, or HPV, save lives, but scientists also say that women over 30 could drop annual Pap smears and instead have the DNA test just once every three, five or even 10 years. The study was published last week in the New England Journal of Medicine.

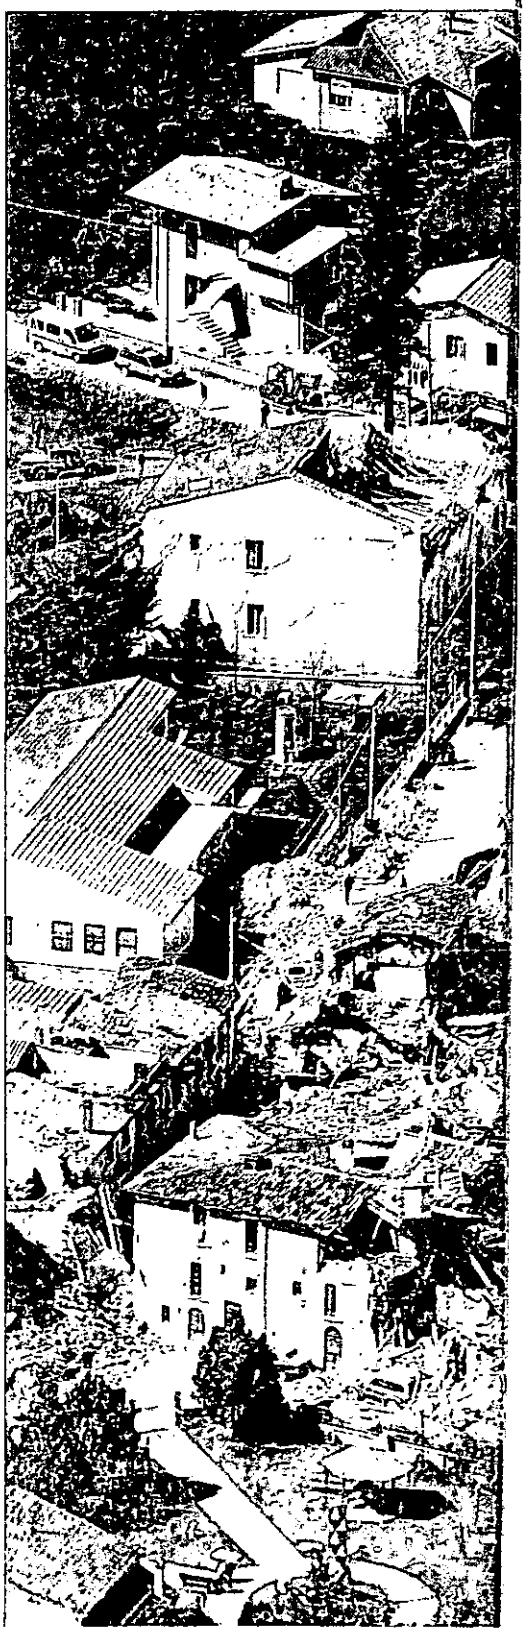
ILLINOIS

1 in 5 American 4-year-olds is obese, report suggests

CHICAGO — A striking new study says almost 1 in 5 American 4-year-olds is obese, and the rate is alarmingly higher among American Indian children, with nearly a third of them obese. Overall, more than half a million 4-year-olds are obese, the study suggests. Almost 13 percent of Asian children were obese, along with 16 percent of whites, almost 21 percent of blacks, 22 percent of Hispanics, and 31 percent of American Indians. The study appeared in Monday's Archives of Pediatrics & Adolescent Medicine.

WORLD

Italian qu



HB 9

SUPPORT

(FILE 3)

From: Rep. Lindsey Holmes
Sent: Monday, February 23, 2009 10:06 AM
To: Jane Pierson
Subject: FW: Death Penalty

-----Original Message-----
From: James McCarty [mailto:James_McCarty@msn.com]
Sent: Friday, February 20, 2009 1:40 PM
To: Rep. Lindsey Holmes
Subject: Death Penalty

FYI I am pro death penalty and have researched info on it in the past and what you have in youu article is not always true it depends upon the age of the criminal when they are sentenced. I do whole heartily that any death penatly passed should be very limited in application. Such as killing multiple people, killers for hire and those who hired them, repeat murderers. And if it were up to me second offence child malestors would be executed.

D. THE COST OF LIFE WITHOUT PAROLE VS THE DEATH PENALTY

Many opponents present, as fact, that the cost of the death penalty is so expensive (at least $2 million per case?), that we must choose life without parole ("LWOP") at a cost of $1 million for 50 years. Predictably, these pronouncements may be entirely false. JFA estimates that LWOP cases will cost $1.2 million - $3.6 million more than equivalent death penalty cases.

Cost of Life Without Parole: Cases Equivalent To Death Penalty Cases	Cost of Death Penalty Cases
1. $34,200/year (1) for 50 years (2), at (1) for 6 years (5), at a 2% (3) annual cost increase, plus $75,000 (4) for trial & appeals = $3.01 million	$60,000/year a 2% (3) annual cost increase, plus $1.5 million (4) for trial & appeals = $1.88 million
2. Same, except 3% (3) = $4.04 million	Same, except 3% (3) = $1.89 million
3. Same, except 4% (3) = $5.53 million	Same, except 4% (3) = $1.91 million

The full article is at: http://www.prodeathpenalty.com/DP.html
There are also other articles pro death penality.

Have a wonderful day and hang in there,
Jim

Dana Strommen

From: irl@gci.net on behalf of Irl Stambaugh [irl@gci.net]
Sent: Sunday, March 08, 2009 6:08 AM
To: Rep. Jay Ramras
Subject: victim rights

March 8, 2009

Representative Jay Ramras

Dear Representative Ramras,

Attached you will find a letter to the editor that was submitted by the Stambaugh family in regards to the death penalty, the article was printed as a compass piece in the AND on 3-8-09. We fully understand that there are strong opinions on all sides of this issue and would never assume that we would change your beliefs (or want to); however I would hope you are able to review the attached with an eye towards possibly minimizing some of the victim impact.

Our sister Jody Stambaugh was raped and murdered in Fairbanks, Alaska at the University of Alaska on December 10, 1972, she was 18 years old and attending her first year at the college. Our primary reason for writing after so many years is Walunga's most recent Parole application in 2008.

Alan Walunga was arrested and tried for the rape /murder, and in addition the vicious assault on Jody's roommate. During the sentencing the report stated that Walunga as a juvenile had a troubled childhood with a history of sexual abuse of minors in his community, then at Mt. Edgecombe School, and then in Fairbanks at Ft. Wainright, finally ending with the murder at UAF. This raises the first question that has been asked before but never adequately addressed.

Just because they are juveniles in most cases, why are students not pre-screened with a background check before they are allowed to reside in a co-ed dorm, don't the other students deserve that protection?

Since his sentencing Walunga has applied for probation / parole on 6 different occasions, even though he was sentenced to a life sentence with a 15 year concurrent time period. The first time he applied was in 1987 he was told at that time he would not be eligible to apply in the future. Then in 2005 the board reconsidered and stated he would again be eligible to apply with no notice to victims and families of the change. As, I'm sure you can imagine our shock in 2008 when Walunga was again allowed to apply. (His request was denied).

Why was he allowed to apply when he had been sentenced to life?

Why was the rule changed in 2005?

Why were victim families not notified that this was the new policy?

As we stated in the attached, please don't get us wrong we are not blaming corrections or their probation/parole section; they have done an amazing job under difficult circumstances in keeping a violent sexual predator in jail where he belongs. What we are attempting to address are some of the policies, regulations and statutes that govern how the entire process is administered and to bring some additional awareness to some of the problems in the hope that they can be improved.

Our final area of concern is that the hearings are closed to the public. In our opinion if a violent offender is trying to be released into a particular community that community should have a right to know. It is our understanding that this privacy extends to local law enforcement who are not informed, at the very least it would seem prudent to advise, and seek comment from law enforcement within an affected community.

Thank you for your time and consideration, for the past 37 years we have quietly gone about our business dealing with our grief in our own way. We hope by bringing this to your attention some positive changes may be made in the way these matters are handled.

Respectfully Submitted;

Irl Stambaugh

Gary Stambaugh

Cc: corrections, Parole board, victims for justice

The Death Penalty, Justified? Maybe.

Our sister Jody Stambaugh was an 18 year old University of Alaska, Fairbanks student when she was raped and murdered in her dorm room during the early evening hours on December 10, 1972. In addition her roommate who came into the room was also seriously assaulted and may have been killed had it not been for others hearing the assault and coming to her aid. This horrendous crime occurred so many years ago, how could it possibly be relevant in today's discussion on the death penalty. I guess I should start at the beginning.

Jody, a third generation Alaskan was born in Ketchikan, Alaska and raised with her two brothers and parents in Ketchikan and Juneau. Both of our parents were state of Alaska employees who worked for the state until their retirement. Jody was an exceptional person, always calm, always kind, and always considerate of others, a good student and a good person who was loved by all she came into contact with. After graduation from high school in Juneau she decided to attend the University of Alaska in Fairbanks and was murdered during her first year at the school.

Allen Walunga spent his early years in a small community in the interior of Alaska. At an early age he became a violent sexual predator when he sexually assaulted several underage girls. (He later admitted to sexually assaulting several young boys in the community during this same time period). So, what did the powers to be do to resolve the issue, they shipped him off to school at Mt. Edgecombe in Sitka, Alaska.

While attending school at Mount Edgecombe he once again exhibited his sexual predatory behavior when he obtained a gas soaked rag and held it to the mouth and nose of an intoxicated female student until she went limp, he thought he had killed her so he ran away. After that incident he moved to Fairbanks and attended high school.

During his time in Fairbanks, Alaska he was charged with pedophilia and child molestation of a female dependant of an officer from Ft. Wainright, Alaska. He was placed on probation for this offense and was still on probation when he killed Jody.

He then went to the University of Alaska, Fairbanks where no one inquired as to his background before they placed him into a co-ed dorm. (Yeah, I know juvenile records are confidential even when it involves a violent sexual predator being in contact with an entire campus of potential victims).

On December 10, 1972 our lives were changed forever, Jody was murdered, another wonderful young lady was assaulted, Walunga was taken into custody. Then the nightmare started.

During Walunga's trial and sentencing before Judge Van Hoomissen in Fairbanks the following facts were entered into the record.

> Walunga was found guilty of murder in the 1st degree and assault with the intent to kill.
>
> The judge found that Walunga "was an extremely dangerous offender who presented a clear and present danger of killing another person if ever released from prison".
>
> Even the defense expert stated in his report: Defendant was treated for psychiatric problems at an early age and was obsessed with the likelihood that he would do an impulsive criminal, and perhaps murderous act to another human being.
>
> In a May 1973 psychiatric report the Doctor states that the "individual be committed to a mental institution for the continuous treatment of his schizophrenia condition. I do not believe that unless some new or revolutionary treatment of schizophrenia becomes known that he should be permitted to walk the streets in a free society".
>
> The other psychologists and psychiatrists that evaluated Walunga formulated a less favorable opinion, as well as Judge Van Hoomissen who all agreed that Walunga never again should be free in our community.
>
> District Attorney Clayton at sentencing took into account the above information and recommended the court impose a sentence that would assure he (Walunga) never again would walk the streets, due to his anti-social personality disorder, being extremely dangerous, obsessed with killing, is fatality bent on destruction, and is schizophrenic.

The probation officer stated in Part:

If we had a death penalty in this state, I would recommend whatever that death penalty might be. This is a heinous crime and I agree that the chances for rehabilitation are poor.

Judge Van Hoomissen goes on to state in part: The evidence is replete with testimony concerning his obsession with killing. The public does need protection. This is probably the most vicious crime that I have had contact with. If we were to release him and say, "let's watch to see if he will do it again". I don't think we can afford to do that.

Judge Van Hoomissen then sentenced Walunga using the following language:

The judge imposed a life sentence on the murder with a concurrent 15 years on the assault with intent to kill count,

The judge concluded by stating:

It is further the order of the court that should the defendant be considered for parole by the parole board, they should have competent legal evidence available to them from competent experts that there is a reasonable probability that Allen Riley Walunga will not commit an offense involving a crime of violence against another human being.

At that time our family felt that justice had been done and Walunga would remain in jail for the remainder of his life. We continued with our lives and through time minimized our grief. Our father had a serious heart attack that I will always, partially attribute to the grief and sorrow he lived with after our sister's death.

Then in September of 1987 we were shocked to find out that Walunga was able to ask for a parole hearing. We learned at that time that by statute he was allowed to apply and that each time he requested a parole hearing the victims are notified and allowed to respond in person or in writing.

So, here we go again the entire senseless murderous incident being rehashed in a hearing, as a family, as individuals, and as victims we responded to Walunga's request and he was denied.

1989 – Requested commutation of sentence, denied.

1991- Tested the waters and applied for a parole hearing, waived hearing.

1992- Applied for a parole hearing, denied.

1997- Tested the waters and applied for a parole hearing, waived hearing.

1998-Applied for a parole hearing, denied, with the additional statement from the parole board that the release of defendant on discretionary parole wholly was out of the question and that the board would never again consider another parole application.

The family and victims breathed another sigh of relief that it was finally over and Walunga would remain in jail.

Then unknown to any family member or victim the new parole board in 2005 decided that it would consider discretionary parole applications every ten years despite what any prior board had decided, and contrary to what Judge Van Hoomissen recommended with good reason in his sentencing report.

2008-Applied for a parole hearing, hearing held in November 2008, denied

It is interesting to note at this particular hearing Walunga was in Arizona corrections and was being represented by a high profile Anchorage attorney. Walunga entered into the record a psychiatric report he had paid for but we were not entitled to see because we were told that it was a medical record. In addition Walunga provided the board and victims with a parole request report that says in part:

He is sorry for the murder, However he fails to mention that there was a second victim,

He has found god,

He thinks he will do well on probation unless he is confronted with "his temptation to form adulterous friendships with abnormally large breasted women",

He also fails to mention his previous sexual misconduct,

The state of Alaska had not done a psychiatric report due to the costs involved. The state attorney was not allowed to remain in the room because we were told at the last minute that it was a closed hearing. We were never afforded the opportunity to obtain our own legal counsel.

In addition we learned that all hearings of this nature were closed to the public and only victims were allowed to attend. We also learned that this privacy rule extended to those that should have had a right to know, an example being the local police chief in the community where Walunga wished to reside did not have a right to know that a violent sexual predator may be released into his community.

This is not an attempt to bash the probation/parole department at corrections, through it all, after having to deal with antiquated rules, regulations and statutes they have done a remarkable job in keeping Walunga behind bars where he cannot harm anyone in our communities.

After going through another emotionally grueling hearing Walunga's request was again denied.

If you can, imagine the heartache we have endured over the last 37 years always fearing that this may be the hearing where he gets his way. During that same time period life continues on with our father and mother having passed away, our children have grown but we continue to attend hearings, and as I promised our mother I will continue to attend hearings.

The other victim has raised a family, but continues to attend hearings fearing that Walunga will be released.

Do we think that this will change anyone's mind on the death penalty? Probably not, but we do hope it makes you think.

Do we think my sister would agree with the death penalty, probably not, she was a better person than a lot of us.

Would we agree with the death penalty? In this case with the above set of facts, you bet we do.

Irl Stambaugh

Gary Stambaugh

Arguments for the Death Penalty
02-27-09

Testimony By: Frank L. Girard, M.Sc., 20 Year resident of Wasilla
1245 East Scotwood Drive
Wasilla, Alaska 99654
373-3072

To the members of House Judiciary:

I am for the death penalty for premeditated, first-degree murder--particularly when the victims are women or children. Society must have more compassion for the murdered and their families than for murderers.

Clearly, the efficacy of a punishment for murder is determined by its deterrence. Does the existence of capital punishment deter more than the threat of life in prison? The answer must be yes. In the biological realm, reproduction trumps, directly or indirectly, all other considerations. Those who are more likely to reproduce will have a greater influence over the genetics of oncoming generations than those who are less likely to reproduce. Those who have a greater fear of death, who have better instinctual resources to avoid death-dealing situations, will produce more offspring than those who are less endowed in these areas. Nothing ruins reproductive capability like being dead! Therefore, after countless generations, we all have a death fear hardwired into our nervous systems. The prospect of death has a strong, even painful, emotional gut-wrenching effect. It takes a brave person indeed to act contrarily to this terrible feeling. Since jail time was unknown in prehistory, the prospect of life in prison elicits only an academic, intellectual response--no strong, raw, aversive emotions like the prospect of death does. Therefore the death penalty must have a stronger deterrence than life in prison.

OBJECTIONS:

(A) Death- row inmates claim they were not deterred by the death penalty.

Clearly the inmates were not deterred; otherwise they would not be on death row. The people to ask about the deterrence of capital punishment are those NOT on death row because they were deterred by the specter of the death penalty.

(B) A state without capital punishment may have a murder rate less than another state that has capital punishment.

There is a different population makeup between the two states. Take an extreme example. Assume a hypothetical state with no death penalty and whose population is mostly nuns. The state would be expected to have a lower murder rate than a capital-punishment state made up of the rest of us. A jurisdiction may technically have capital punishment, but if it very rarely, if ever, executes obviously guilty murderers, its death-penalty statute will have little deterrence.

South Africa, where I lived for many years, had capital punishment and a moderately high murder rate. With the advent of black rule, the death penalty was abolished. The murder rate shot up exponentially. Now South Africa has probably the highest murder rate in the world--MUCH higher than that of the United States.

(C) The death penalty is too expensive because of ceaseless litigation. Therefore it would be cheaper to lock up murderers than to kill them.

Perhaps litigation could be trimmed by legislation or court rulings so that only that which bears directly on the guilt or innocence of the accused is entertained. As life prisoners become geriatric, their health care could eat up any initial financial advantage. States that several decades ago were lavish with life sentences without parole are now realizing this expensive truth. A few prisons have degenerated into nursing homes.

(D) Everything must be done to avoid executing the innocent. I AGREE!!!

We should pay more to get better public defenders and provide larger allowances for them to gather evidence such as DNA findings, etc. At least in capital cases, we should pay a public defender a handsome bonus if he/she gets an acquittal. (Even if only a long prison term is at issue, a bonus would be less than the cost of imprisonment--about $40,000 per year.)

In closing, if having capital punishment on the books only saves the life of one potential murder victim, then it's worth it!

F. L. Girard

Wayne Anthony Ross

From: wws@alaskalife.net on behalf of Wev Shea [wws@alaskalife.net]
Sent: Wednesday, February 25, 2009 8:32 AM
To: Wayne Ross Anthony
Subject: Alaska Death Penalty - Wayne: I thought you might find my article of interest. My Best, Wev

Alaska Dispatch

TALK OF THE TUNDRA

Alaska death penalty debate far more complex than meets the eye

Wev Shea
Feb 25, 2009

As the U.S. Attorney for Alaska, I was the first prosecutor to seek the death penalty against two individuals since the passage of statehood.

These two young men executed another young man in a drive-by shooting. They were convicted of murder in state court.

While these two killers were in separate Alaska prisons, they somehow conspired. They devised a plan and instructed others outside prison to build a bomb to murder the key witness against them in the murder case. These individuals built a bomb and mailed it.

The mail bomb was sent to the witness's Post Office box in Chugiak, as directed by the incarcerated murders. The targeted witness, also a young man, was out of state. His parents picked up the mail bomb package and opened it in the kitchen of their home. The father was killed instantly and the mother was severely maimed, with hundreds of wounds to her face and body.

I arrived at their home within a couple hours of the explosion. Body tissue from the father was stuck to everything in the kitchen that hadn't been destroyed by the horrific blast. It was a crime scene you never forget. You play back the horror experienced by the parents upon opening the package meant for their son. I never forgot it.

I sought the death penalty for the two incarcerated murders who had killed and maimed two innocent bystanders in their attempt to kill the son.

Here is a summary of the key facts I remember as defined for the Assistant Attorney General for the Criminal Division, Robert S. Mueller, III [now director of the FBI] and U.S. Attorney General William P. Barr:

--Histories of intimidation and threats going back to school days

--Histories of abuse and misuse of firearms and explosives

--Histories of attempting to intimidate witnesses against them

--Convicted murderers who killed in a vehicle drive-by

--From two separate Alaska prisons, a successful plan to mail a bomb to execute a trial witness

--From two separate Alaska prisons, instructed and planned with others outside the prisons

--Co-conspirators missed their mail bomb target and killed and maimed innocent bystanders

Attorney General Barr and Assistant Attorney General Mueller demanded I justify in detail why the death penalty should be applicable in this particular case. I personally felt the conduct was so outrageous that the penalty of death was warranted -- not just applicable to the killers.

AAG Mueller and AG Barr ultimately agreed with me after extensive Main Justice review by experts. But they (and rightfully so) attached a caveat: "There will be no compromise or plea deal. The threat of the death penalty must never be used to intimidate the defendant. You, as the United States Attorney for the District of Alaska, have no authority to compromise this case." And, due to the terrorism nature of this case, Main Justice had a key role in all of this.

Despite the forgoing facts, an Alaska U.S. District Court judge held the death penalty was inappropriate for this case. Ultimately, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit agreed with the trial court that the death penalty was not an appropriate remedy for the prison felon killers.

I personally believe heinous crimes as described herein, as well as against children, demand the punishment of death. But when I hear the political rhetoric led by conservatives, like me, in Juneau, I wonder if they have any clue as to the uniqueness of Alaska's grave problems in criminal matters statewide. When I hear a pro-life believer like myself "scream" for the death penalty in Alaska, I know the individual is not knowledgeable on the key issues. The fact is this state is very unique. Alaska, like nowhere else in our nation, has a vastly different justice system in the Bush than other parts of the state, like the Railbelt and Southeast.

Here are some of the reasons why we must think hard about whether we want to reinstitute the death penalty in Alaska:

--Our law enforcement in rural Alaska (including state troopers, prosecutors, defense attorneys and judges) is gravely unfunded.

--Rural Alaska is plagued with injustice because of inadequate investigation resources for prosecutors and defendants.

--Inexperienced prosecutors, including district attorneys, are ill-equipped to address death decisions.

--Inexperienced defense lawyers are ill-equipped to protect potential death-penalty defendants.

--We have an inexperienced Attorney General who is more at home in an apple orchard than the courtroom.

--We have opinionated assistant Attorney Generals entrenched in their own death-penalty views.

--We have politically motivated District Attorneys (and an Attorney General) who place the governor's interest over Alaskans' well-being.

--And overall, our Alaska criminal justice system, from investigators to judges to counsel to prisons, is sorely under-funded.

Grandstanding by members of the Legislature on either side of the death penalty debate is a disservice to the public. This is a complex debate that deserves a thorough analysis. Hopefully the Legislature will delve into the complexities before voting.

Wev Shea, a Republican and an attorney admitted in Alaska in 1977, has been an outspoken critic of corruption in Alaska's GOP. He was a U.S. Attorney for Alaska from 1990 to 1993. He was also a deputy prosecuting attorney in Honolulu from 1981 to 1982. Shea joined the U.S. Navy in 1961, serving in combat from 1967 to 1969, with a nuclear delivery certification in A-6 Intruder attack jets.*

Related Articles

- Palin suggests controversial solutions for rural Alaska
- Could nuclear reactors solve energy crunch in rural Alaska?
- Chavez offers Alaskans crude gift
- Palin still willing to visit villages
- Soaring fuel prices suffocate rural Alaskans. What can be done?

adn.com
Anchorage Daily News

Death penalty would end punishment of victim's family

COMPASS: Other points of view

By IRL STAMBAUGH AND GARY STAMBAUGH

(03/07/09 17:29:03)

Our sister Jody Stambaugh was an 18-year-old University of Alaska, Fairbanks student when she was raped and murdered in her dorm room during the early evening hours on Dec. 10, 1972. Her roommate was also seriously assaulted and might have been killed had not others heard the assault and come to her aid.

This horrendous crime occurred so many years ago. How could it possibly be relevant in today's discussion on the death penalty?

We should start at the beginning.

Jody, a third generation Alaskan, was raised with her two brothers in Ketchikan and Juneau. Jody was an exceptional person, always calm, always kind, and always considerate of others. After graduation from high school in Juneau she decided to attend the University of Alaska in Fairbanks.

A known offender

Allen Walunga spent his early years in a small community in Interior Alaska. At an early age he became a violent sexual predator and sexually assaulted several underage girls. (He later admitted to sexually assaulting several young boys in the community during this same time period).

So, what did the powers to be do? They shipped him off to school at Mount Edgecumbe in Sitka, Alaska.

While attending school at Mount Edgecumbe, he obtained a gas soaked rag and held it to the mouth and nose of an intoxicated female student until she went limp. He thought he had killed her so he ran away. After that incident he moved to Fairbanks and attended high school.

During his time in Fairbanks he was charged with pedophilia and child molestation. He was placed on probation.

He then went to the University of Alaska, Fairbanks where no one inquired as to his background before they placed him in a co-ed dorm. (Juvenile records are confidential even when it involves a violent sexual predator being in contact with an entire campus of potential victims).

The nightmare starts

On Dec. 10, 1972, our lives were changed forever. Jody was murdered, another wonderful young lady was assaulted, and Walunga was taken into custody.

Then the nightmare started.

Walunga was found guilty of murder in the 1st degree and assault with the intent to kill.

Judge Van Hoomissen found that Walunga "was an extremely dangerous offender who presented a clear and present danger of killing another person if ever released from prison".

The probation officer stated in part:

If we had a death penalty in this state, I would recommend whatever that death penalty might be. This is a heinous crime and I agree that the chances for rehabilitation are poor."

Judge Van Hoomissen said, "This is probably the most vicious crime that I have had contact with."

He imposed a life sentence on the murder with a concurrent 15 years on the assault with intent to kill count.

At that time our family felt that justice had been done and Walunga would remain in jail for the remainder of his life. We continued with our lives and through time minimized our grief. Our father had a serious heart attack that I will always partially attribute to the grief and sorrow he lived with after our sister's death.

The first parole request

Then in September of 1987 we were shocked to find out that Walunga was able to ask for a parole hearing.

So here we went again. The entire senseless murderous incident was being rehashed in a hearing. As a family, as individuals, and as victims, we responded to Walunga's request and he was denied.

In 1989 he requested commutation of his sentence and was denied.

In 1991 he tested the waters and applied for a parole hearing.

In 1992 he applied for a parole hearing and was denied.

In 1997 he tested the waters and applied for a parole hearing.

In 1998 he applied for a parole hearing and was denied. The parole board said that the release of the defendant on discretionary parole was wholly out of the question and that the board would never again consider another parole application.

The family and victims breathed another sigh of relief that it was finally over and Walunga would remain in jail.

We thought it was over

Then unknown to any family member or victim, the new parole board in 2005 decided that it would consider discretionary parole applications every 10 years, despite what any prior board had decided and contrary to what Judge Van Hoomissen recommended in his sentencing report.

In 2008 Walunga got a parole hearing. It is interesting to note Walunga was being represented by a high-profile Anchorage attorney. Walunga entered into the record a psychiatric report he had paid for. We were not entitled to see it because we were told that it was a medical record.

Sorry?

In addition, Walunga provided the board and victims with a report that says in part he is sorry for the murder (however, he fails to mention that there was a second victim). He says he has found God. He thinks he will do well on probation unless he is confronted with "his temptation to form adulterous friendships with abnormally large breasted women." He also fails to mention his previous sexual misconduct.

This is not an attempt to bash the probation/parole department at corrections. Through it all, after having to deal with antiquated rules, regulations and statutes they have done a remarkable job in keeping Walunga behind bars where he cannot harm anyone in our communities.

After another emotionally grueling hearing for us, Walunga's request was again denied.

37 years of heartache

If you can, imagine the heartache we have endured over the last 37 years, always fearing that this may be the hearing where he gets his way. During that same time period life continues on. Our father and mother have passed away, and our children have grown but we continue to attend hearings. As we promised our mother, we will continue to attend hearings.

The other victim has raised a family, but continues to attend hearings fearing that Walunga will be released.

Do we think that telling our story will change anyone's mind on the death penalty? Probably not, but we do hope it makes you think.

Do we think my sister would agree with the death penalty? Probably not. She was a better person than a lot of us.

Do we agree with the death penalty? In this case with the above set of facts, you bet we do.

Irl Stambaugh is a retired police officer. Gary Stambaugh is a former sergeant-at-arms for the Alaska State Senate. Both are lifelong Alaskans.

Print Page | Close Window

Copyright © Sun Mar 8 12:33:07 UTC-0800 20091900 The Anchorage Daily News (www.adn.com)

From: Sharpjfa@aol.com
Sent: Monday, February 23, 2009 9:50 AM
To: Tom Wright; Jane Pierson
Subject: The Death Penalty is a Deterrent - 16 Recent Studies

For some of the recent 16 deterrence studies, go to:

http://www.cjlf.org/deathpenalty/DPDeterrence.htm

US Senate testimony
http://judiciary.senate.gov/testimony.cfm?id=1745&wit_id=4991

The Death Penalty as a Deterrent - 16 Recent Studies
Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters, updated 82207

CONTACT information for all of the study authors is within the footnotes

"I oppose the death penalty. " " But my results show that the death penalty (deters) — what am I going to do, hide them?" "Science does really draw a conclusion. It did. There is no question about it." "The results are robust, they don't really go away" "The conclusion is there is a deterrent effect.".

Prof. Naci Mocan, Economics Chairman, University of Colorado at Denver
"Studies say death penalty deters crime", ROBERT TANNER, Associated Press, Jun 10, 2007, 2:01 PM ET (2003) Emory University Economics Department Chairman Hashem Dezhbakhsh and Emory Professors Paul Rubin and Joanna Shepherd state that "our results suggest that capital punishment has a strong deterrent effect. An increase in any of the probabilities -- arrest, sentencing or execution -- tends to reduce the crime rate. In particular, each execution results, on average, in eighteen fewer murders -- with a margin of error of plus or minus 10." (1) Their data base used nationwide data from 3,054 US counties from 1977-1996.

(2003) University of Colorado (Denver) Economics Department Chairman Naci Mocan and Graduate Assistant R. Kaj Gottings found "a statistically significant relationship between executions, pardons and homicide. Specifically each additional execution reduces homicides by 5 to 6, and three additional pardons (commutations) generate 1 to 1.5 additional murders." Their "data set contains detailed information on the entire 6,143 death sentences between 1977 and 1997. (2)

(2001) University of Houston Professors Dale Cloninger and Roberto Marchesini, found that death penalty moratoriums contribute to more homicides. They found: "The (Texas) execution hiatus (in 1996), therefore, appears to have spared few, if any, condemned prisoners while the citizens of Texas experienced a net 90 (to as many as 150) additional innocent lives lost to homicide. Politicians contemplating moratoriums may wish to consider the possibility that a seemingly innocuous moratorium on executions could very well come at a heavy cost." (3)

(2001) SUNY (Buffalo) Professor Liu finds that legalizing the death penalty not only adds capital punishment as a deterrent but also increases the marginal productivity of other deterrence measures in reducing murder rates. "Abolishing the death penalty not only gets rid of a valuable deterrent, it also decreases the deterrent effect of other punishments." "The deterrent effects of the certainty and severity of punishments on murder are greater in retentionist (death penalty) states than in abolition (non death penalty) states." (4)

(2003) Clemson U. Professor Shepherd found that each execution results, on average, in five fewer murders. Longer waits on death row reduce the deterrent effect. Therefore, recent legislation to shorten the time prior to execution should increase deterrence and thus save more innocent lives. Moratoriums and other delays should put more innocents at risk. In addition, capital punishment deters all kinds of murders, including crimes of passion and murders by intimates. Murders of both blacks and whites decrease after executions. (5) NOTE In a later review of individual state data, Shepherd found that for states executing less than once every 27 months, that there was no effect on murders or murders actually rose. Citations to follow.

(2003) FCC economist Dr. Paul Zimmerman finds: "Specifically, it is estimated that each state execution deters somewhere between 3 and 25 murders per year (14 being the average). Assuming that the value of human life is approximately $5 million {i.e. the average of the range estimates provided by Viscussi (1993)}, our estimates imply that society avoids losing approximately $70 million per year on average at the current rate of execution all else equal." The study used state level data from 1978 to 1997 for all 50 states (excluding Washington D.C.). (6)

(2003) Emory University Economics Department Chairman Hashem Dezhbakhsh and Clemson U. Professor Shepherd found that "The results are boldly clear: executions deter murders and murder rates increase substantially during moratoriums. The results are consistent across before-and-after comparisons and regressions regardless of the data's aggregation level, the time period, or the specific variable to measure executions." (7)

(2005) In a review of Illinois state data, University of Houston Professors Dale Cloninger and Roberto Marchesini found that 150 additional Illinois' citizens died, in a four year period because of Governor Ryan suspended executions and commuted all death sentences. (Applied Economics, forthcoming 2006).

Criticisms rebutted and additional studies

(2006) " . . . (Donohue and Wolfers' "D&W") criticisms of Zimmerman's analysis are misrepresentative, moot or unsupportable in terms of the analyses they perform." "It is shown that Zimmerman's published empirical results, or the conclusions drawn from them, are not in any way refuted by D&W's critique." (pg 3) "This later estimate suggests that each execution deters 14 murders on average . . .". (pg 7) "It is shown that D&W made a number of serious misinterpretations in their review of Zimmerman's study and that none of the analyses put forward by D&W (which ostensibly refute Zimmerman's original results and conclusions) hold up under scrutiny. (pg8) " . . . D&W do not even report Zimmerman's "preferred" results correctly, and then proceed by carrying on this error throughout the remainder of their critique."(pg8) "Of course, (D&W's) omission tends to create a strong impression that Zimmerman's analysis 'purports to find reliable relationships between executions and homicides', when his actual conclusions regarding the deterrent effect of capital punishment are far more agnostic." (pg10) " . . . D&W's method of interpreting their results is not consistent with that proscribed by the received econometric literature on randomized testing . . .". "As such, D&W's interpretation of their randomized test in itself does not (and cannot) reasonably lead one to conclude that Zimmerman's estimates suggesting a deterrent effect of capital punishment are spurious." (pg12) " . . . D&W do not appear to have interpreted their randomization test in any meaningful fashion." (pg14) " . . . the state clustering correction employed by D&W may not be producing statistically meaningful results." (pg16) "And while D&W once lamented that recent econometric studies purporting to demonstrate a deterrent effect of capital punishment yield 'heat rather than light', as shown herein, their criticisms of Zimmerman (2004) tend to yield 'smoke rather than fire'."(pg26)

Zimmerman, Paul R., "On the Uses and 'Abuses' of Empirical Evidence in the Death Penalty Debate" (November 2006). ssrn(dot)com/abstract=948424

(2006) "This analysis shows that attempts to make the deterrence effect disappear are ineffective." (p 16)
--- Existence of the death penalty, in law, has a statistically significant impact on reducing murders. (p 23)
--- Execution rates show significant impact in reducing murders. (p 13 & 23)
--- Death row commutations, and other removals, increase murders. (p13 & 23)
--- The criticism of our studies is flawed and does not effect the strength of the measured deterrent effect.
"The Impact of Incentives On Human Behavior: Can we Make It Disappear? The Case of the Death Penalty", Naci H. Mocan, R. Kaj Gittings, NBER Working Paper, 10/06, www(dot)nber.org/papers/w12631

(2007) "Had (D&W's) paper been subjected to the normal blind peer review process in an authoritative economic journal it is highly unlikely that it would have survived intact , if at all. "

"(D&W's) Quibbling over numerous and sometimes meaningless statistical issues obscures the picture painted by the cumulative effect of the nearly dozen studies published since the turn of the 21st century."

"Using differing methodologies and data sets at least five groups of scholars each working independently (and often without knowledge of the others) have arrived at the same conclusion—there is significant and robust evidence that executions deter some homicides. While there may be merit in some of (D&W's) specific criticisms, none addresses the totality of the collection of studies. The probability that chance alone explains the coincidence of these virtually simultaneous conclusions is negligible."

"DW's unsupported claim that the appropriate variable in studies of deterrence using these borrowed tools from portfolio analysis is the amount or level of homicides in the respective jurisdictions. This claim is without theoretical basis or empirical precedent. "

"With regard to DW's specific comments on our two papers (Cloninger & Marchesini, 2001 & 2006) we find very little requiring defense. Implicit in their critique, and explicitly stated in private communications, DW were able to replicate our results based on data we furnished, at their request, as well as data they acquired independently. "

"Reflections on a Critique", Dale O Cloninger and Roberto Marchesini, forthcoming Applied Economic Letters

The findings for deterrence reflect reason, common sense and history.

"According to the standard economic model of crime, a rational offender would respond to perceived costs and benefits of committing crime." "Capital punishment is particularly significant in this context, because it represents a very high cost for committing murder (loss of life). Thus, the presence of capital punishment in a state, or the frequency with which it is used, should unequivocally deter homicide." Furthermore, "an increase in pardons (commutations) implies a decrease in the probability of execution, which economic theory predicts should have a positive (increase) impact on murder rates." (8)

Isaac Ehrlich (1975) provided the first systemic analysis of the relationship between capital punishment and the crime of murder along with the first empirical analysis of the deterrence hypothesis. He found that each execution deterred, on average, 8 murders. Many additional studies have found corroborating evidence supporting the deterrent effect of the death penalty -- from the United States (Ehrlich, 1977, Layson, 1985, Cloninger, 1992, Ehrlich and Liu, 1999, Dezhbakhsh et al, 2000) and Canada (Layson 1983) and the UK (Wolpin, 1978). (9)

Pubic policy makers take note. Stopping executions will sacrifice innocent lives. Reinstating capital punishment will spare more innocent lives.

full report

THE DETERRENT EFFECT OF THE DEATH PENALTY
by Dudley Sharp
last update 42707
(contact info, below)

". . . (E)ach execution results, on average, in eighteen fewer murders . . . ".

Deterrence

The potential for negative consequences deters some behavior. The most severe criminal sanction -- execution -- does not contradict that finding. Reason, common sense, history and the weight of the studies support the deterrent effect of the death penalty. The death penalty protects innocent lives. The absence of the death penalty sacrifices innocent lives.

Is there any group, be they criminologists, historians, psychologists, economists, philosophers, physicians, journalists or criminals that does not recognize that the prospect of negative consequences constrains or deters the behavior of some? Of course not -- not even fiction writers so speculate. Even irrational people wear seat belts, choose not to smoke and do not rob police stations because of the potential for negative consequences.

I. Twelve Recent Deterrence Studies-- The death penalty saves innocent lives

Above

II. Historical support

Reason, history and common sense all support that the potential for negative consequences deters or alters behavior. In short, incentives, negative or positive, matter. That is undisputed.

Numerous, previous studies have also supported a deterrence finding. And the studies that find a deterrent effect of other criminal sanctions give additional support to the deterrent effect of the death penalty, because, if lesser sanctions deter, then we know that more severe sanctions also deter. The studies that find a deterrent effect of 1. increased police presence, or any other levels of security; 2. arrest/arrest rates; 3. criminal sentencing/incarceration terms; and 4. the presence of rules, laws and statutes all provide additional, collateral support for the deterrent effect of the death penalty. And there are likely hundreds, if not thousands, of such studies and examples (database in progress).

III. Negative consequences matter

Many have discounted a deterrent effect because of the irrationality of potential and active criminals. However, both reason and the evidence support that the potential for negative consequences does affect criminal behavior.

Criminals who try to conceal their crime do so for only one reason -- fear of punishment. Likely, more than 99% of all criminals, including capital murderers, act in such a fashion. Fear of capture does not exist without an expectation of punishment.

This doesn't mean that they sit down before every crime, most crimes or even their first crime, and contemplate a cost to benefit analysis of a criminal action. Weighing negative consequences may be conscious or subconscious, thoughtful or instinctive. And we instinctively know the potential negative consequences of some actions. Even pathetically stupid or irrational criminals will demonstrate such obvious efforts to avoid detection. And there is only one reason for that -- fear of punishment.

When dealing with less marginalized personalities, those who choose not to murder, such is a more reasoned group. It would be illogical to assume that a more reasoned group would be less responsive to the potential for negative consequences. Therefore, it would be illogical to assume that some potential murderers were not additionally deterred by the more severe punishment of execution.

As legal writer and death penalty critic Stuart Taylor observes: "All criminal penalties are based on the incontestable theory that most (or at least many) criminals are somewhat rational actors who try so hard not to get caught because they would prefer not to be imprisoned. And most are even keener about staying alive than about avoiding incarceration." (10)

Based upon the overwhelming evidence that criminals do respond to the potential of negative consequences, reason supports that executions deter and that they are an enhanced deterrent over lesser punishments.

IV. The pre trial, trial and death row evidence - the survival effect

At every level of the criminal justice process, virtually all criminals do everything they can to lessen possible punishments. I estimate that less than 1% of all convicted capital murderers request a death sentence in the punishment phase of their trial. The apprehended criminals' desire for lesser punishments is overwhelming and unchallenged.

Of the 7300 inmates sentenced to death since 1973, 85, or 1.2% have waived remaining appeals and been executed. 98.8% have not waived appeals. The evidence is overwhelming that murderers would rather live on death row than die. Why? The survival effect -- life is preferred over death and death is feared more than life. Even on death row, that is the rule.

Even such marginalized personalities as capital murderers fear death more than imprisonment. And that which we fear the most, deters the most. (kudos to Ernest van den Haag and many others)

It is logical to conclude that some of those less marginalized personalities, who choose not to murder, also, overwhelmingly, fear death more than life, and, we, thus, logically conclude that some are deterred from murdering because of the enhanced deterrent effect of execution.

The evidence for the survival effect in pretrial, trial and appeals is overwhelming and that weighs in favor of execution as a deterrent and as an enhanced deterrent over lesser sentences.

V. If unsure about deterrence

Common sense, reason and history all support that the potential for negative consequences restricts the behavior of some. But, if unsure of deterrence, we face the following dilemma -- If executions do deter, halting executions causes more innocents to be murdered and gives those living murderers the opportunity to harm and murder again. If the death penalty does not deter, and we do execute, we punish murderers as the jury deemed appropriate and we prevent those executed murderers from harming or murdering again.

Oddly, death penalty opponents believe that the burden of proof is on those who say the death penalty is a deterrent. Clearly it is not. The weight of the evidence, within reason, history, common sense and the social sciences is that the potential for negative consequences restricts the behavior of some. That is not in dispute. Furthermore, if opponents cannot prove it is not a deterrent, which they never have and never will, then they are the ones who risk sacrificing innocents, both by absence of deterrence and reduced incapacitation.

Regardless of jurisdiction, under all debated scenarios, more innocents are put at risk when we fail to execute. Any alleged concern for innocents weighs in favor of executions.

VI. The individual deterrent effect

The individual deterrent effect is represented by those who state that they were deterred from committing a murder only because of the prospects of a death sentence. Individual cases support the enhanced deterrent effect. (11)

One Iowa prisoner, who escaped from a transportation van, with a number of other prisoners, stated that he made sure that the overpowered guards were not harmed, because of his fear of the death penalty in Texas. The prisoners were being transported through Texas, on their way to New Mexico, when the escape occurred. Most compelling is that he was a twice convicted murderer from a non death penalty state, Iowa. In addition, he was under the false impression that Texas had the death penalty for rape and, as a result, also protected the woman guard from assault. (12)

New York Law School Professor Robert Blecker recorded his interview with a convicted murderer. The murderer robbed and killed drug dealers in Washington DC., where he was conscious that there was no death penalty. He specifically did not murder a drug dealer in Virginia because, and only because, he envisioned himself strapped in the electric chair, which he had personally seen many times while imprisoned in Virginia. (13)

Senator Dianne Feinstein explained, "I remember well in the 1960s when I was sentencing a woman convicted of robbery in the first degree and I remember looking at her commitment sheet and I saw that she carried a weapon that was unloaded into a grocery store robbery. I asked her the question: 'Why was your gun unloaded?' She said to me: 'So I would not panic, kill somebody, and get the death penalty.' That was firsthand testimony directly to me that the death penalty in place in California in the sixties was in fact a deterrent."(13A)

Logic requires that the individual deterrent effect cannot exist without the general deterrent effect. Therefore, reason dictates that the general deterrent effect must exist. The question is not: "Does deterrence exist?" It does. The issue is: "What is the quantifiable impact of deterrence?"

Individual cases support the individual deterrent effect and such cases insure that general deterrence must exist. And, for both, the evidence also suggests that executions provide enhanced deterrence over incarceration.

VII. Conflicting studies

In reviewing 30 years of deterrence studies, the strongest statement one may make against deterrence is that there is conflicting data (14).

Yet, even when academic bias against capital punishment is overt, such as in the case of the American Society of Criminology -- the subtitle to their death penalty resources page is "Anti-Capital Punishment Resources" -- even they fail to state that the death penalty does not deter some potential murderers, only that "social science research has found no consistent evidence of crime deterrence through execution." (15) That is far from stating that executions do not deter. And the criminologists are, very likely, that academic group most hostile toward the death penalty. What social science conflicts with the notion that the potential for negative consequences restrains the behavior of some? And most would agree that execution is the most serious negative consequence that a murderer may face.

Numerous studies find that executions do deter. And there is a rational conclusion based upon common experience. It appears that all criminal sanctions deter some. It would be irrational to conclude that the most severe and publicized sanction -- execution -- does not deter some potential murderers.

Those studies which do not find deterrence say that they could not detect it, not that it doesn't exist. Those studies which find for deterrence state such.

As Professor Cloninger states: " . . . (Our recent) study is but another on a growing list of empirical work that finds evidence consistent with the deterrence hypothesis. These studies as a whole provide robust evidence -- evidence obtained from a variety of different models, data sets and methodologies that yield the same conclusion. It is the cumulative effect of these studies that causes any neutral observer to pause." (16)

Conflicting studies and reason both weigh in favor of the death penalty as a deterrent and as an enhanced deterrent over lesser punishments.

VIII. The brutalization effect of executions

Some, particularly death penalty opponents, find that the brutalization effect is more likely than the deterrent effect. The brutalization effect finds that murders will increase because potential murderers will murder because of the example of state executions.

Why would potential and active murderers be so influenced by the state in such a deep philosophical manner, revealed by brutalization, but they wouldn't be more affected by the simple "you murder, we execute you?"

Death penalty opponents make an interesting about face on this issue. They insist that criminals are so thoughtless and impulsive that they can't be affected by the potential of negative consequences but, then, those same opponents see criminals as so contemplative that their criminal actions increase BECAUSE those criminals follow the example of the state. One might ask those opponents: "Is there any other government action which influences criminals in such a fashion?" Do criminals kidnap more BECAUSE the state increases incarceration rates? Do criminals give money to potential victims BECAUSE the state donates to needy causes?

Murder rates and execution rates

Although deterrence is much more than a simple look at only execution rates and murder rates, we do find that as executions have risen dramatically, the murder rate has plunged.

From 1966-1980, a period which included our last national moratorium on executions (June 1967- January 1976), murders in the United States more than doubled from 11,040 to 23,040. The murder rate also nearly doubled, from 5.6 to 10.2/100,000. During that 1966-1980 period, the US averaged 1 execution every 3 years, with a maximum of two executions per year. From 1995-2000 executions averaged 71 per year, a 21,000% increase over the 1966-1980 period. The US murder rate dropped from a high of 10.2/100,000 in 1980 to 5.5/100,000 in 2000 -- a 46% reduction. The US murder rate is now at its lowest level since 1966 (17).

The Texas example -- The murder rate in Harris County (Houston), Texas has fallen 73% since executions resumed in 1982, through 2000, from 31/100,000 to 8.5/100,000 (18). Harris County is, by far, the most active death penalty sentencing and execution jurisdiction in the US. The Harris County murder rate dropped nearly 70% more than did the national murder rate, during similar periods. Texas' murder rate dropped 62% during that same period, or 41% more than the national average.

Potential murderers may have been affected by the example of the state of Texas but, likely, not in a manner consistent with brutalization.

And "(t)he biggest decline in murder rates has occurred in states that aggressively use capital punishment." (19)

After a thorough review of deterrence studies, Professor Samuel Cameron observed, "The brutalization idea is not one the economists have given any credence." "We must conclude that the deterrence effect dominates the opposing brutalization effect." (20)

Reason, history, common sense and the studies weigh against the brutalization effect.

IX. The incapacitation effect

The incapacitation effect states that executed murderers cannot harm or murder again. Reason dictates that living murderers are infinitely more likely to harm and murder again than are executed murderers.

That obvious logic escapes death penalty opponents who say that we can have foolproof incarceration. What hypocrisy. This is the same group of folks who tell us that our system of justice is so fraught with error that we cannot possibly continue the death penalty. Yet, the facts tell us that living murderers harm and murder again, in prison, after escape and after improper release. Executed murderers do not. In addition, the US death penalty appears to be that criminal justice sanction which is the least likely to convict the factually innocent and the most likely to remedy such rare error upon post conviction review.

Stuart Taylor: "Statistical studies and common sense aside, it's undeniable that the death penalty saves some lives: those of the prison guards and other inmates who would otherwise be killed by murderers serving life sentences without parole, and of people who might otherwise encounter murderous escapees". (21)

Under all circumstances, the execution of murderers will protect innocents at a higher rate than will incarceration.

X. Death Penalty Opponents

Why is it that some death penalty opponents appear to laugh off any potential for a deterrent effect of executions? Because to admit that executions deter some potential murderers would be to admit that, in reaching their goals, they will knowingly benefit murderers at the cost of sacrificing more innocent lives. Of course, opponents will never prove it is not a deterrent and many will admit that executions do deter some.

How many would still oppose executions if they knew that the evidence supported the deterrent effect and that many more innocents are put at risk by not executing?

Stuart Taylor: "So those of us who lean against the death penalty must confront the very real possibility that abolishing it could lead to the violent deaths of unknown numbers of innocent men, women, and children. And those who are still skeptical that the death penalty deters any killings must also confront the risk-benefit calculus suggested by political scientist John McAdams of Marquette University: 'If we execute murderers, and there is, in fact, no deterrent effect, we have killed a bunch of murderers. If we fail to execute murderers, and doing so would in fact have deterred other murders, we have allowed the killing of a bunch of innocent victims. I would much rather risk the former. This, to me, is not a tough call.' " (22)

XI. Conclusion

Those of us who support execution do so because it is a just punishment. The moral foundation for all punishments is that they are deserved. One cannot support a punishment based upon deterrence alone.

Reason, common sense and history all fall on the side of deterrence. Be it Sweden or Rwanda, Texas or Michigan, Singapore or Chile, England or Japan, whether high crime rates or low, the death penalty will always deter some potential murderers. Regardless of jurisdiction, the potential for negative outcomes will always restrict the behavior of some. And, the weight of the evidence clearly supports execution as an enhanced deterrent.

As Professor Rubin states, "Our evidence is that there are substantial benefits from executions and, thus, substantial costs of changing this policy (23).

From Prof. Robert Blecker, New York Law School,

"We support execution as a just and appropriate forfeiture of lives which deserve to be taken. We also support execution as a just and appropriate method to save lives which deserve to be saved. "

copyright 2001-2009, Dudley Sharp
Permission for distribution of this document, in whole or in part, is approved with proper attribution.

Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters
e-mail sharpjfa@aol.com 713-622-5491.
Houston, Texas

Mr. Sharp has appeared on ABC, BBC, CBS, CNN, C-SPAN, FOX, NBC, NPR, PBS, VOA and many other TV and radio networks, on such programs as Nightline, The News Hour with Jim Lehrer, The O'Reilly Factor, etc., has been quoted in newspapers throughout the world and is a published author.

A former opponent of capital punishment, he has written and granted interviews about, testified on and debated the subject of the death penalty, extensively and internationally.

Pro death penalty sites http://homicidesurvivors.com/categories/Dudley%20Sharp%20-%20Justice%20Matters.aspxwww.dpinfo.comwww.cjlf.org/deathpenalty/DPinformation.htmwww.clarkprosecutor.org/html/links/dplinks.htm

www.coastda.com/archives.html see Death Penalty www.lexingtonprosecutor.com/death_penalty_debate.htm
www.prodeathpenalty.comhttp://yesdeathpenalty.googlepages.com/home2 (Sweden) www.wesleylowe.com/cp.html

1). "Does Capital Punishment Have a Deterrent Effect? New Evidence from Postmoratorium Panel Data", American Law and Economics Review V5 N2 2003 (344-376), Hashem Dezhbakhsh, Paul H. Rubin and Joanna M. Shepherd.
contact Dezhbakhsh at econhd@emory.edu, ph 404-727-4679, Rubin at prubin@emory.edu, ph 404-727-6365 and Shepherd at jshepherd@law.emory.edu, ph. 404-727-8957
The quotation is from the complete, pre publication study which can be found at http://userwww.service.emory.edu/~cozden/Dezhbakhsh_01_01_paper.pdf
2) "Getting Off Death Row: Commuted Sentences and the Deterrent Effect of Capital Punishment," Journal of Law and Economics, Volume 46, Number 2, October 2003, at www.journals.uchicago.edu/cgi-bin/resolve?JLE460202 registration required
H. Naci Mocan (mmocan@carbon.cudenver.edu, ph 303-556-8540) and R. Kaj Gottings (rgitting@carbon.cudenver.edu),
This is a revised version of "Pardons, Executions and Homicide," NBER WP8639) at econ.cudenver.edu/mocan/papers/GettingOffDeathRow.pdf
The quote is from the working paper "Pardons, Executions and Homicide", October 2001, located at http://econ.cudenver.edu/beckman/kai.pdf downloaded on 1/22/01
3) "EXECUTION MORATORIUM IS NO HOLIDAY FOR HOMICIDES", Prof. Dale O. Cloninger and Prof. Roberto Marchesini, go to http://www.prodeathpenalty.com/Moratoriums.htm based on the study "Execution and deterrence: a quasi-controlled group experiment", Dale O. Cloninger (cloninger@cl.uh.edu, phone 281-283-3210), Roberto Marchesini (marchesini@cl.uh.edu, phone 281-283-3215), Applied Economics, 4/01, Vol 33, N 5, p569 -- p576
4) Capital Punishment and the Deterrence Hypothesis: Some New Insights and Empirical Evidence, December 2001, Eastern Economic Journal, Forthcoming , ZHIQIANG LIU (e-mail zqliu@buffalo.edu, ph. 716-645-2121) on line at
http://papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm?abstract_id=352681
5) Murders of Passion, Execution Delays and the Deterrence of Capital Punishment, March 2003, at http://people.clemson.edu/~jshephe/, Joanna M. Shepherd, jshepherd@law.emory.edu, ph. 404-727-8957
6). "State Executions, Deterrence and the Incidence of Murder", Paul R. Zimmerman (zimmy@att.net), March 3. 2003, Social Science Research Network, http://papers.ssrn.com/sol3/delivery.cfm/SSRN_ID354680_code021216500.pdf?abstractid=354680
7) Dezhbakhsh, Hashem and Shepherd, Joanna, "The Deterrent Effect of Capital Punishment: Evidence from a 'Judicial Experiment'" (Aug 19, 2003). Emory University Economics Working Paper No. 03-14 at ssrn.com/abstract=432621
contact Dezhbakhsh at econhd@emory.edu or ph 404-727-4679 and Shepherd at jshepherd@law.emory.edu, ph. 404-727-8957
8) "Pardons, Executions and Homicide", H. Naci Mocan (mmocan@carbon.cudenver.edu) and R. Kaj Gottings (rgitting@carbon.cudenver.edu), Journal of Law and Economics, forthcoming. Online version located at http://econ.cudenver.edu/beckman/kai.pdf
downloaded on 1/22/01
9) Professor Ehrlich, e-mail mgtehrl@acsu.buffalo.edu, phone (716) 645-2121. For support and defense of his work go to:
http://wings.buffalo.edu/economics/IEcrime.html
Review from Capital Punishment and the Deterrence Hypothesis: Some New Insights and Empirical Evidence, December 2001, Eastern Economic Journal, Forthcoming , ZHIQIANG LIU, e-mail zqliu@buffalo.edu, ph. 716-645-2121, on line at
http://papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm?abstract_id=352681
10) "Does the Death Penalty Save Innocent Lives?", Stuart Taylor, National Journal. D.C. Dispatch, 5/31/02 at
http://www.theatlantic.com/politics/nj/taylor2001-05-31.htm
11) see paragraph 14, Section B, "The Incapacitation and the Deterrence Effects", Death Penalty and Sentencing Information in the United States, 10/1/97, at http://www.prodeathpenalty.com/DP.html
12) "Langley says Texas death penalty affected his actions during escape", by Stephen Martin, The Daily Democrat (Ft. Madison, Iowa), 1/8/97, pg 1.
13) Bleeker book
13A) California District Attorneys Association, "Prosecutors Perspective on California's Death Penalty," March 2003
14) Section B, "The Incapacitation and the Deterrence Effects", Death Penalty and Sentencing Information in the United States, 10/1/97, at http://www.prodeathpenalty.com/DP.html
15) "ASC RESOLUTION ON THE DEATH PENALTY", ASC Annual Meeting, Montreal, 1987, Anti-Capital Punishment Resources from the ASC's Critical Criminology Division, go to http://sun.soci.niu.edu/~critcrim/dp/dp.html last viewed 12/2/01.
16) "Execution and deterrence: a quasi-controlled group experiment", Dale O. Cloninger (cloninger@cl.uh.edu), Roberto Marchesini (marchesini@cl.uh.edu), Applied Economics, 4/01, Vol 33, N 5, p569 -- p576, located at http://ideas.repec.org/a/taf/applec/v33y2001i5p569-76.html
17) i) Homicide trends in the U.S., Long term trends, Homicide victimization, 1950-99, Bureau of Justice Statistics, Source: FBI, Uniform Crime Reports, 1950-2000 at http://www.ojp.usdoj.gov/bjs/homicide/tables/totalstab.htm
. Page last revised on January 4, 2001
(ii) Crime in the United States -- 2000, Section II -- Crime Index Offenses Reported, "Murder and non negligent homicide", FBI, Uniform Crime Reports at http://www.fbi.gov/ucr/cius_00/00crime2_3.pdf
(iii) "Number of persons executed in the United States, 1930-2001", Key Facts at a Glance, Executions Bureau of Justice Statistics, Source: Capital Punishment 2000, December 2001 at http://www.ojp.usdoj.gov/bjs/glance/tables/exetab.htm
18) Texas Department of Public Safety, Uniform Crime Reporting, Harris County data, from 1982 and 2000 database.
19) Boston Globe, 10/28/97, p A12
20) "A Review of the Econometric Evidence on the Effects of Capital Punishment", The Journal of Socio-Economics, v23 n 1/2, p 197-214, 1994
21) "Does the Death Penalty Save Innocent Lives?", Stuart Taylor, National Journal. D.C. Dispatch, 5/31/02 at
http://www.theatlantic.com/politics/nj/taylor2001-05-31.htm

22) "Does the Death Penalty Save Innocent Lives?", Stuart Taylor, National Journal. D.C. Dispatch, 5/31/02 at http://www.theatlantic.com/politics/nj/taylor2001-05-31.htm
23) "Death penalty deters scores of killings ", Paul H. Rubin, The Atlanta Journal-Constitution: 3/13/02, from www.accessatlanta.com/ajc/opinion/0302/0314death.html

A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps!

From: Sharpjfa@aol.com
Sent: Monday, February 23, 2009 10:39 AM
To: Tom Wright; Jane Pierson
Subject: Physicians & The State Execution of Murderers: No Ethical/Medical Dilemma

Physicians & The State Execution of Murderers: No Ethical/Medical Dilemma
The Hippocratic Oath and "Do No Harm" have nothing to do with executions
Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters, contact info below

Some in the medical community have attempted to create an ethical prohibition against medical professionals involvement in state executions by invoking the famous "do no harm" credo and words within the Hippocratic Oath.

Neither reference is in the context of the state execution of murderers.

THE OATH OF HIPPOCRATES

The select Hippocratic Oath quote, in its original (translated) form, is "I will give no deadly medicine to any one if asked, nor suggest any such counsel; . . " (1) It is a prohibition against euthanasia and has nothing to do with some imagined medical prohibition of participation in state sanctioned executions.

I am unaware of any other ancient texts or translations which indicate a historical context, with that quote, that prohibits physicians from participation in executions.

In 2004, Dr. Markel, a medical historian, writes, "There are two highly controversial vows in the original Hippocratic Oath that we continue to ponder and struggle with as a profession: the pledges never to participate in euthanasia and abortion." (2)

In reality, these are, barely, controversial, now. They are, however, inconvenient. The article never mentions a context of state execution of murderers, because the oath has nothing to do with it.

Dr. Markel continues: "The Hippocratics' reasons for refusing to participate in euthanasia may have been based on a philosophical or moral belief in preserving the sanctity of life or simply on their wish to avoid involvement in any act of assisted suicide, murder, or manslaughter." (2)

Dr. Markel is speculating. What we do know is that it was a reference to euthanasia, specifically. There is not even speculation that the reference had anything to do with the state execution of murderers.

The following are " . . .the results of a study . . . in which 157 deans of allopathic and osteopathic schools of medicine in Canada and the United States were surveyed regarding the use of the Hippocratic Oath": (3)

1. In 1993, 98% of schools administered some form of the Oath.
2. In 1928, only 26% of schools administered some form of the Oath.
3. Only 1 school used the original Hippocratic Oath.
4. 68 schools used versions of the original Hippocratic Oath.
5. 100% of current Oaths pledge a commitment to patients.
6. Only 43% vow to be accountable for their actions.
7. 14% include a prohibition against euthanasia.
8. Only 11% invoke a diety.
9. 8% prohibit abortion.

10. Only 3% prohibit sexual contact with patients.

There is no mention of the state execution of murderers, because the Hippocratic Oath has nothing to do with it.

Although there is no prohibition on the death penalty, there is one against both euthanasia and abortion. Yet, various medical associations have decided to create an imagined ethical problem with the death penalty and have, nearly, fully accepted both abortion and euthanasia.

Now, only 3% prohibit sexual contact with patients, but the original Hyppocratic Oath states: "(I) will abstain from every voluntary act of mischief and corruption; and, further, from the seduction of females or males, of freemen and slaves."

100% pledge a commitment to their patients, but only 43% vow being accountable for their medical actions. Some commitment. (3A)

With these survey results and with medical professionals bringing up the Hippocratic Oath, as if it has something to say in the death penalty debate, possibly we should, now, in the true context of euthanasia and abortion, and other issues, call it what it has become, the Hypocrisy Oath. For example, is the North Carolina Medical Board trying to prevent physicians from performing abortions or have they issued a statement condemning euthanasia? Of course not. But the death penalty? Well, doctors must not participate!

The doctors doth protest too much, me thinks.

DO NO HARM

The famous physician credo "First, do no harm" (a phrase translated into Latin as "Primum non nocere") is often mistakenly ascribed to the (Hippocratic) oath, although it appears nowhere in that venerable pledge." (2)

"Hippocrates came closest to issuing this directive in his treatise Epidemics, in an axiom that reads, "As to disease, make a habit of two things — to help, or at least, to do no harm." (2)

"As to disease". Nothing else. There is no relevance outside medicine and, most certainly, no prohibition against medical professionals participation in the state execution of murderers.

REASON & REALITY

Those ethical codes pertain to the medical profession, only, and to patients, only.

Judicial execution is not part of the medical profession and executions do not make death row inmates patients. Is that news?

The acknowledged anti death penalty editors of The Public Library of Science (PLoS) Medicine agree. They write:

"Execution by lethal injection, even if it uses tools of intensive care such as intravenous tubing and beeping heart monitors, has the same relationship to medicine that an executioner's axe has to surgery." ("Lethal Injection Is Not Humane", PLoS, 4/24/07).

The PLoS Medicine editors make the obvious point: The state execution of murderers is not equivalent or connected to the medical treatment of patients. There is no ethical or moral connection. Hardly a mystery.

Similar acts and similar equipment do not establish any ethical equivalence or connection. Any rational person can see that the state execution of murderers is not a medical treatment, but a criminal justice sanction. The basis for medical treatment is to improve the plight of the patient, for which the medical profession provides obvious and daily exceptions. The basis for execution is to carry out a criminal justice sentence where death is the sanction.

Doctors and nurses can be police and soldiers and can kill, when deemed appropriate, within those lines of duty and without violating the ethical codes of their medical profession, because there is no ethical connection. Similarly, medical professionals do not violate medical codes of ethics, when participating in the state execution of murderers.

Physicians are often part of double or triple blind studies where there is hope that the tested drugs may, someday, prove beneficial. The physicians and other researchers know that many patients, taking placebos or less effective drugs, will suffer more additional harm or death because they are not taking the subject drug or that the subject drug will actually harm or kill more patients than the placebo of other drugs used in the study.

Physicians knowingly harm individual patients, in direct contradiction to their "do no harm" oath.

For the greater good, those physicians sacrifice innocent, willing and brave patients. Of course, there have been medical experiments without consent and, even, today, they continue ("Critical Care Without Consent", Washington Post, May 27, 2007; Page A01).

Physicians knowingly make exceptions to their "do no harm" requirement, every day, within their profession, where that code actually does apply. And, they should. There are obvious ethical nuances and we should consider and pay attention to them, as is done within the medical profession.

SEE DO NO HARM: Additional Notes, at bottom.

Physicians and medical institutions will pick and chose those ethical foundations which they, from time to time and issue to issue, find convenient and, hopefully, truly relevant to ethics.

Medical professionals need to stop the ridiculous ethical posturing and tell the truth - they don't like the death penalty. In medical writings, against executions, you can easily find a strong bias, evidenced by use of the common and inaccurate anti death penalty claims, with no apparent effort at fact checking or balance. (4)

Any participation in executions by medical professionals should be a matter for their own personal conscience. In fact, 20-40% of doctors surveyed would participate in the execution process.

There is no ethical prohibition against medical professionals participating in executions. Stop using personal bias to create one.

It's unethical.

DO NO HARM: Additional Notes:

40,000 to 100,000 innocents die, every year, in the US because of medical misadventure or improper medical treatment. (5)

It appears that some 500-1000 innocent patients die, every year, in the US, due to some type of medical misadventure, with anesthesia. (5)

There is no proof of an innocent executed in the US since 1900.

Furthermore, even with errors in lethal injection, those cases resulted in the death of the inmate - the intended outcome for the guilty murderer.

In the errors of medical professionals, we are speaking of a large number of deaths and injuries to innocent patients - the opposite of the intended outcome.

---

1) Original Oath of Hippocrates
http://www.imagerynet.com/hippo.orig.html

2) "'I Swear by Apollo' - On Taking the Hippocratic Oath", New England Journal of Medicine, May 13, 2004 article, by Howard Markel, PhD, MD, Director of the Center for the History of Medicine at the University of Michigan Medical School

3) "The Use of the Hippocratic Oath: A Review of 20th Century Practice and a Content Analysis of Oaths Administered in Medical Schools in the U.S. and Canada in 1993." by Robert D. Orr, M.D. and Norman Pang, M.D. http://www.imagerynet.com/hippo.ama.html

3A) It is the ethical equivalent of reporters saying we are 100% devoted to bringing accuracy to our readers, but only 43% of us will fact check.

4) "An absolute: Doctors don't kill", op/ed, by Dr. Charles van der Horst, News and Observer, Dec 04, 2008). My response to him can be found as "Is Dr. van der Horst just ignorant or something else? Doc?" in the comments section for "Clap hands, here comes Charlie", UNC Healthcare Blog, December 8, 2008, 4:30 pm http://unchealthcare.wordpress.com/2008/12/08/clap-hands-here-comes-charlie/

5) "Deaths from Medical Misadventure"at www.wrongdiagnosis.com/m/medical_misadventure/deaths.htm and
"Health Grades Quality Study: Patient Safety in American Hospitals, July 2004" www.healthgrades.com/media/english/pdf/HG_Patient_Safety_Study_Final.pdf

Additional info

The following is a Dutch protocol for parenteral (intravenous) administration to obtain euthanasia:

Intravenous administration is the most reliable and rapid way to accomplish euthanasia and therefore can be safely recommended. A coma is first induced by intravenous administration of 20 mg/kg sodium thiopental (Nesdonal) in a small volume (10 ml physiological saline). Then a triple intravenous dose of a non-depolarizing neuromuscular muscle relaxant is given, such as 20 mg pancuronium bromide (Pavulon) or 20 mg vecuronium bromide (Norcuron). The muscle relaxant should preferably be given intravenously, in order to ensure optimal availability. Only for pancuronium bromide (Pavulon) are there substantial indications that the agent may also be given intramuscularly in a dosage of 40 mg.

wweek.com/___ALL_OLD_HTML/euthanasics.html originally written May, 2005. Updated as merited.

copyright 2005-2009 Dudley Sharp - Permission for distribution of this document, in whole or in part, is approved with proper attribution.

Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters
e-mail sharpjfa@aol.com, 713-622-5491,
Houston, Texas

Mr. Sharp has appeared on ABC, BBC, CBS, CNN, C-SPAN, FOX, NBC, NPR, PBS , VOA and many other TV and radio networks, on such programs as Nightline, The News Hour with Jim Lehrer, The O'Reilly Factor, etc., has been quoted in newspapers throughout the world and is a published author.

A former opponent of capital punishment, he has written and granted interviews about, testified on and debated the subject of the death penalty, extensively and internationally.

A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps!

From: Sharpjfa@aol.com
Sent: Monday, February 23, 2009 10:36 AM
To: Tom Wright; Jane Pierson
Subject: Catholic Scholars: Support for the Death Penalty

Catholic Scholars: Support for the Death Penalty
Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters, contact info below

There are thoughtful writings on both sides of this debate, but the pro death penalty position is much stronger.

Recently deceased Avery Cardinal Dulles, in one of his final interviews, states that he thought the Church may return to a "more traditional posture" on the death penalty. "Recent popes, Dulles conceded, beginning with John XXIIII, seem to have taken quasi-abolitionist positions on both matters. Yet used sparingly and with safeguards to protect the interests of justice, Dulles argued, both the death penalty and war have, over the centuries, been recognized by the church as legitimate, sometimes even obligatory, exercises of state power. The momentum of "internal solidification," he said, may lead to some reconsideration of these social teachings." ("An unpublished interview with Avery Dulles", All Things Catholic by John L. Allen, Jr., NCRcafe.org, Posted on Dec 19, 2008, at http://ncrcafe.org/node/2340)

Based upon the strength of the Catholic biblical, theological and traditional support for the death penalty as, partially, revealed, below, I think the Church will have to.

Even today, a Catholic in good standing can call for more executions, if their prudential judgements finds for that.

(1) "Capital Punishment: New Testament Teaching", 1998, Fr. John A. Hardon, S.J., considered one of the most prominent Roman Catholic theologians of the 20th century. See bottom. http://www.therealpresence.org/archives/Sacred_Scripture/Sacred_Scripture_014.htm

"There are certain moral norms that have always and everywhere been held by the successors of the Apostles in communion with the Bishop of Rome. Although never formally defined, they are irreversibly binding on the followers of Christ until the end of the world." "Such moral truths are the grave sinfulness of contraception and direct abortion. Such, too, is the Catholic doctrine which defends the imposition of the death penalty."

"Most of the Church's teaching, especially in the moral order, is infallible doctrine because it belongs to what we call her ordinary universal magisterium."

"Equally important is the Pope's (Pius XII) insistence that capital punishment is morally defensible in every age and culture of Christianity." " . . . the Church's teaching on 'the coercive power of legitimate human authority' is based on 'the sources of revelation and traditional doctrine.' It is wrong, therefore 'to say that these sources only contain ideas which are conditioned by historical circumstances.' On the contrary, they have 'a general and abiding validity.' (Acta Apostolicae Sedis, 1955, pp 81-2)."

about Fr. John A. Hardon, S.J.
http://www.mariancatechist.com/html/general/stjohnhardon.htm
http://www.therealpresence.org/archives/archives.htm
http://www.mariancatechist.com/html/general/fatherhardon.htm
http://www.saintphilomena.com/newpage4.htm
http://credo.stormloader.com/Saints/hardon.htm

(2) "The Death Penalty", by Romano Amerio, a faithful Catholic Vatican insider, scholar, professor at the Academy of Lugano, consultant to the Preparatory Commission of Vatican II, and a peritus (expert theologian) at the Council.
http://www.domid.blogspot.com/2007/05/amerio-on-capital-punishment.html

"Amerio has the great gift of going to the heart of a subject in a few lines and very neatly distinguishes genuine Catholicism from imitations and aberrations." "What makes Amerio's analysis unique is that he restricts himself to official and semi-official pronouncements by popes, cardinals, bishops, episcopal conferences and articles in L'Osservatore Romano, from the time of Pope John XXIII to 1985 when the book was originally written." (1)

titled "Amerio on capital punishment ", Chapter XXVI, 187. The death penalty, from the book Iota Unum, May 25, 2007

About Romano Amerio
http://chiesa.espresso.repubblica.it/articolo/176565?eng=y http://www.newliturgicalmovement.org/2006/02/romano-amerio-and-pope-benedict.html http://www.latin-mass-society.org/2007/romanoamerio.html http://www.angeluspress.org/oscatalog/item/6700/iota-unum

(3) "Christian Scholars & Saints: Support for the Death Penalty", at http://www.homicidesurvivors.com/2006/10/12/catholic-and-other-christian-references-support-for-the-death-penalty.aspx

(4) "Capital Punishment: A Catholic Perspective",
by Br. Augustine (Emmanuel Valenza)
http://www.sspx.org/against_the_sound_bites/capital_punishment.htm

(5) "Capital Punishment: The Case for Justice", Prof. J. Budziszewski, First Things, August / September 2004 http://www.orthodoxytoday.org/articles4/BudziszewskiPunishment.shtml

(6) "The Death Penalty", by Solange Strong Hertz at http://www.ourworld.compuserve.com/HOMEPAGES/REMNANT/death2.htm

(7) "A Seamless Garment In a Sinful World" by John R. Connery, S. J., America, 7/14/84, p 5-8).

(8) "God's Justice and Ours" by US Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia, First Things, 5/2002
http://www.firstthings.com/article.php3?id_article=2022

(9) Forgotten Truths: "Is The Church Against Abortion and The Death Penalty"
by Luiz Sergio Solimeo, Crusade Magazine, p14-16, May/June 2007
http://www.tfp.org/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=957

(10) "The Purpose of Punishment (in the Catholic tradition)", by R. Michael Dunningan, J.D., J.C.L., CHRISTIFIDELIS, Vol.21,No.4, sept 14, 2003
http://www.st-joseph-foundation.org/newsletter/lead.php?document=2003/21-4

(11) "MOST CATHOLICS OPPOSE CAPITAL PUNISHMENT?",
KARL KEATING'S E-LETTER, Catholic Answers, March 2, 2004
http://www.catholic.com/newsletters/kke_040302.asp

(12) "THOUGHTS ON THE BISHOPS' MEETING: NOWADAYS, VOTERS IGNORE BISHOPS", KARL KEATING'S E-LETTER, Catholic Answers,, Nov. 22, 2005
http://www.catholic.com/newsletters/kke_051122.asp

Christian, non Catholic Scholars

(13) Chapter V:The Sanctity of Life, "Principles of Conduct: Aspects of Biblical Ethics" By John Murray
http://books.google.com/books?id=phoqAAaGMpUC&pg=PA107&lpg=PA114&ots=mFvByHqGSy&dq=Murray+%22It+is+the+sanctity+of+human+life+that+underlies+the+sixth+commandment.%22&ie=ISO-8859-1&output=html&sig=ACfU3U1b0mdM3BfpNSXnhrwFYXaE_9Ij9A

(14) "Capital Punishment: What the Bible Says", Dr. Lloyd R. Bailey, Abingdon Press, 1987. The definitive biblical review of the death penalty.

(15) "Why I Support Capital Punishment", by Andrew Tallman
sections 7-11 biblical review, sections 1-6 secular review
http://andrewtallmanshowarticles.blogspot.com/search?q=Capital+punishment

---

Religious positions in favor of capital punishment are neither necessary not needed to justify that sanction. However, the biblical and theological record is very supportive of the death penalty.

Many of the current religious campaigns against the death penalty reflect a fairly standard anti death penalty message, routed in secular arguments. When they do address religious issues, they often neglect solid theological foundations, choosing, instead, select biblical sound bites which do not impact the solid basis of death penalty support.

Footnotes:
(1) Books: 'Iota Unum: A Study of Changes in the Catholic Church', by Romano Amerio, Fr Peter Joseph (reviewer)
IOTA UNUM: A Study of Changes in the Catholic Church in the 20th Century
by Romano Amerio (English translation by Fr John Parsons)
(Sarto House, USA, 786 pp)
Reprinted from AD2000 Vol 9 No 8 (September 1996), p. 14

70% of Catholics supported the death penalty as of May, 2005, Gallup Poll, Moral Values and Beliefs. The May 2-5, 2005 poll also found that 74% of Americans favor the death penalty for murderers, while 23% oppose.

copyright 1999-2009 Dudley Sharp
Permission for distribution of this document, in whole or in part, is approved with proper attribution.

Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters
e-mail sharpjfa@aol.com, 713-622-5491,
Houston, Texas

Mr. Sharp has appeared on ABC, BBC, CBS, CNN, C-SPAN, FOX, NBC, NPR, PBS , VOA and many other TV and radio networks, on such programs as Nightline, The News Hour with Jim Lehrer, The O'Reilly Factor, etc., has been quoted in newspapers throughout the world and is a published author.

A former opponent of capital punishment, he has written and granted interviews about, testified on and debated the subject of the death penalty, extensively and internationally.

A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps!

From: Sharpjfa@aol.com
Sent: Monday, February 23, 2009 10:31 AM
To: Tom Wright; Jane Pierson
Subject: New Jersey's bad example

Subject: Gov. O'Malley and Maryland's Majority Report, against the death penalty, make some of the same errors found in the New Jersey Study.

To: Maryland Legislature, Prosecutors and media throughout the region

From: Dudley Sharp, contact info below

New Jersey DEAD WRONG: Abolishes Death Penalty by Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters, contact info below from http://www.hallnj.org/cm/listing.jsp?cId=3

Summary

The New Jersey Death Penalty Commission made significant errors within their findings. The evidence, contrary to the Commissions findings, was so easy to obtain that it appears either willful ignorance or deception guided their report.

A brief review.

FORMAT: Below, are the 7 points made within the New Jersey Death Penalty Study Commission Report, January, 2007. The RUBUTTAL presents the obvious points avoided by the Commission and discussed by this author, a death penalty expert.

I was invited to be a presenter, before the NJDPSC, but my time didn't fit their schedule.

1) There is no compelling evidence that the New Jersey death penalty rationally serves a legitimate penological intent.

REBUTTAL:

- The reason that 81% of Americans found that Timothy McVeigh should be executed was justice - the most profound concept in criminal justice, as in many other aspects of life. It is the same reason that New Jersey citizens, 12 jurors, put all those on death row.

- Although the Commission and the NJ Supreme Court both attempt to discount deterrence, logically, they cannot.

First, all prospects for a negative outcome deter some. This is not, logically or historically rebutted. It cannot be. Secondly, those studies which don't find for deterrence, do not say that it doesn't exist, only that their study didn't find it. Those studies which find for deterrence did. 16 recent studies do.

- The Commission had ample opportunity and, more importantly, the responsibility to read and contact the authors of those many studies which have, recently, found for deterrence. There seems to be no evidence that they did so. On such an important factor as saving innocent lives, why didn't they? The testimony before the Commission, critical of those studies, would not withstand a review by the authors of those studies. That should be an important issue that the Commission should have investigated, but did not.

- LIFE WITHOU PAROLE: The Commission considered the risk of innocents executed and concluded that it wasn't worth the risk and that a life sentence would serve sufficiently without that risk to innocents.

Again, the Commission avoided both fact and reason. The risk to innocents is greater with a life sentence than with the death penalty.

First, we all know that living murderers, in prison, after escape or after improper release, are much more likely to harm and murder, again, than are executed murderers - an obvious truism ignored by the Commission.

Secondly, no knowledgeable and honest party questions that the death penalty has the most extensive due process protections in US criminal law. Therefore, it is logically conclusive, that actual innocents are more likely to be sentenced to life imprisonment and more likely to die in prison serving under that sentence, that it is that an actual innocent will be executed.

Thirdly, there has been a recent explosion of studies finding for death penalty deterrence. The criticism of those studies has, itself, been rebutted.

- Therefore, in choosing a life without parole and calling for the end of the death penalty, the Commission has made the choice to put more innocents at risk - the opposite of their stated rationale.

2) The costs of the death penalty are greater than the costs of life in prison without parole, but it is not possible to measure these costs with any degree of precision.

REBUTTAL:

- The NJ legislature's own cost review found that the cost differential was indeterminate. However, based upon their exclusions, LWOP may very well be more expensive.

- For the amount of time and resources allegedly expended by the Commission, this section of their review was unconscionable in its lack of responsibility to the Commission's directive.

- The Commission concludes that the current system in New Jersey is very expensive, without noting the obvious ways in which those issues can be addressed to lessen those costs. Why?

One example, they find that proportionality review cost $93, 000 per case. Why didn't the Commission recommend doing away with proportionality review? There is no reason, legally, to have it and it has been a disaster, cost wise, with no benefit.

Secondly, the Commission states: "Nevertheless, consistent with the Commission's findings, recent studies in states such as Tennessee, Kansas, Indiana, Florida and North Carolina have all concluded that the costs associated with death penalty cases are significantly higher than those associated with life without parole cases. These studies can be accessed through the Death Penalty Information Center." (Report, page 33).

On many topics the Death Penalty Information Center has been one of the most deceptive or one sided anti death penalty groups in the country. While it is not surprising that the Commission would give them as a reference, multiple times, it doesn't speak well of the Commission.

Did the Commission read any of the studies referenced by the DPIC? It appears doubtful, or the Commission would not have referenced them.

For example, let's look at the North Carolina (Duke University) study. That cost study compared the cost of only a twenty year "life sentence" to the death penalty. Based upon that study, a true life without parole sentence would be more costly than the death penalty. Somehow the Commission missed that rather important fact.

These types of irresponsible and misleading references by the Commission do nothing to inspire any confidence in their findings, but do reinforce the opinion that their conclusions were predetermined.

Please see "Cost Comparisons: Death Penalty Cases Vs Equivalent Life Sentence Cases", to follow.

3) There is increasing evidence that the death penalty is inconsistent with evolving standards of decency.

REBUTTAL:

The Commission uses several references to prove their point. None of them succeeded.

- The first was based upon polling in New Jersey. The data showed strong support (78%) for executions in NJ, except when asking those polled to choose between a life sentence or a death sentence, for which life gets greater support. The major problem with this long standing and misleading polling question is that it has nothing to do with the legal reality of sentencing. Secondly, that poll shows broad support for BOTH sanctions, not a call to abandon either. The Commission, somehow, overlooked that obvious point.

Jurors have the choice of both sentences in states with the death penalty and life without parole. Therefore, a proper polling question for NJ would be,

A) should we eliminate the death penalty and ONLY have life without parole? or
B) should we give jurors the OPTION of choosing life or death in capital murder cases?

Based upon other polls, I suspect B would be the resounding winner of this poll in NJ.

We know support is 78% in NJ, for crimes similar to those on NJ death row.

Secondly, the Commissions polling speaker avoided the most obvious and reliable polling question on this topic - asking about the punishment for a specific crime, just as jurors have to decide.

NOTE: 78% of NJ citizens support the death penalty for crimes such as those on NJ's death row. (Dec., 2007)

81% of Americans supported the execution of Timothy McVeigh. 85% of Connecticut citizens polled supported the execution of serial rapist/murderer Michael Ross.

Thirdly, poll New Jersey citizens with the following questions. Is life without parole or the death penalty the most appropriate punishment for those who rape and murder children? Or should NJ remove the death penalty as a jury option for those who rape and murder children?

- Two religious speakers spoke against execution. Both are easily rebutted by religious scholars holding different views.

- Another alleged example of this evolving standard is based upon the fact there has been a reduction in death sentences. Such reduction is easily explained by a number of factors, other than some imagined "evolving standard of decency".

Murders have dropped some 40%, capital murders have likely dropped by even a greater number, based upon other factors. This, by itself, explains the overwhelming percentage of the drop in death sentences.

In addition, many prosecutors, such as those in NJ, know that their courts will not allow executions, leading to prosecutorial frustration as a contributing factor in any reduction - not an evolving standard of decency, but an evolving and increasing frustration.

Please review: "Why the reduction in death sentences?", to follow.

4) The available data do not support a finding of invidious racial bias in the application of the death penalty in New Jersey.

CLARIFICATION:

In fact, there is no data to support any racial bias, invidious or otherwise. The Commission must have read the series of NJ studies.

5) Abolition of the death penalty will eliminate the risk of disproportionality in capital sentencing.

REBUTTAL:

Yes, Commission, and the abolition of all criminal sentences will eliminate the risk of disproportionality in all sentences, as well. This is hardly a rational reason to get rid of any sentence. Get rid of the expensive and unnecessary proportionality review.

6) The penological interest in executing a small number of persons guilty of murder is not sufficiently compelling to justify the risk of making an irreversible error.

REBUTTAL:

- The risk to innocents is greater with life without parole than with the death penalty. See (1), above LIFE WITHOUT PAROLE.

7) The alternative of Life imprisonment in a maximum security institution without the possibility of parole would sufficiently ensure public safety and address other legitimate social and penological interests, including the interests of the families of murder victims.

REBUTTAL:

This Commission statement is quite simply, false.

- Life imprisonment puts more innocents at risk than does the death penalty.

- Justice, just punishment, retribution and/or saving innocent lives, among others, are all legitimate social and penological interests all served by the death penalty.

- 81% of Americans supported the execution of Timothy McVeigh. 85% of Connecticut citizens polled supported the execution of serial, rapist/murderer Michael Ross.

The overwhelming majority of those polled did not have family members murdered.

Is the Commission trying to tell us that a poll of NJ murder victim survivors would show a majority opposed to the death penalty? Of course not, that would be as absurd as the Commissions conclusions in this section.

Conclusion:

Almost without exception, The Commission accepted the standard anti death penalty position, without presenting the easily accessible rebuttal to that position.

Enough said.

NJ Death Penalty Study Commission

It is alleged that the Commission had fair hearings, with both sides adequately presented.

Alleged fair hearings mean nothing, if decisions are predetermined, as this one was.

11 of the 13 committee members were either known or leaning anti death penalty. The contempt for and discounting of pro death penalty positions in both the hearings and final report confirm that.

All the prosecutors on the Commission were up for reappointment - by the staunchly anti death penalty Governor. Would any of them sacrifice their livelihood to fight for the death penalty? Of course not and they did not.

One committee member - one - was confirmable as pro death penalty.

Most, if not all, of Committee Chairman Rev. Howard's previous affiliations were anti death penalty.

Rev. Howard's fairness is best shown by the Commission's final report, which was laughable in its exclusion of pro death penalty positions, positions which would have either overwhelmed or neutralized the anti death penalty, predetermined conclusions of the panel, had those pro death penalty positions been given a fair showing in that report - which they weren't.

The Commission hearings and final report were, as all show trials, a farce.

copyright 2007-2009 Dudley Sharp
Permission for distribution of this document, in whole or in part, is approved with proper attribution.

Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters
e-mail sharpjfa@aol.com, 713-622-5491,
Houston, Texas

Mr. Sharp has appeared on ABC, BBC, CBS, CNN, C-SPAN, FOX, NBC, NPR, PBS , VOA and many other TV and radio networks, on such programs as Nightline, The News Hour with Jim Lehrer, The O'Reilly Factor, etc., has been quoted in newspapers throughout the world and is a published author.

A former opponent of capital punishment, he has written and granted interviews about, testified on and debated the subject of the death penalty, extensively and internationally.

A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps!

From: Sharpjfa@aol.com
Sent: Monday, February 23, 2009 10:30 AM
To: Tom Wright; Jane Pierson
Subject: Death Penalty and Deterrence: Let's be clear

Death Penalty and Deterrence: Let's be clear
by Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters, 0104

In their story, "States With No Death Penalty Share Lower Homicide Rates", The New York Times did their best to illustrate that the death penalty was not a deterrent, by showing that the average murder rate in death penalty states was higher than the average rate in non death penalty states and, it is. (1)

What the Times failed to observe is that their own study confirmed that you can't simply compare those averages to make that determination regarding deterrence.

As one observer stated: "The Times story does nothing more than repeat the dumbest of all dumb mistakes — taking the murder rate in a traditionally high-homicide state with capital punishment (like Texas) and comparing it to a traditionally low-homicide state with no death penalty (like North Dakota) and concluding that the death penalty doesn't work at all. Even this comparison doesn't work so well. The Times own graph shows Texas, where murder rates were 40 percent above Michigan's in 1991, has now fallen below Michigan . . .". (2)

Within the Times article, Michigan Governor John Engler states, "I think Michigan made a wise decision 150 years ago," referring to the state's abolition of the death penalty in 1846. "We're pretty proud of the fact that we don't have the death penalty."(3)

Even though easily observed on the Times' own graphics, they failed to mention the obvious. Michigan's murder rate is near or above that of 31 of the US's 38 death penalty states. And then, it should be recognized that Washington, DC (not found within the Times study) and Detroit, Michigan, two non death penalty jurisdictions, have been perennial leaders in murder and violent crime rates for the past 30 years. Delaware, a jurisdiction similar in size to them, leads the nation in executions per murder, but has significantly lower rates of murders and violent crime than do either DC or Detroit, during that same period.

Obviously, the Times study and any other simple comparison of jurisdictions with and without the death penalty, means little, with regard to deterrence.

Also revealed within the Times study, but not pointed out by them,: "One-third of the nation's executions take place in Texas—and the steepest decline in homicides has occurred in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas, which together account for nearly half the nation's executions." (4)

And, the Times also failed to mention that the major US jurisdiction with the most executions is Harris County (Houston, Texas), which has seen a 73% decrease in murder rates since resuming executions in 1982 -- possibly the largest reduction for a major metropolitan area since that time.

Also omitted from the Times review, although they had the data, is that during a virtual cessation of executions, from 1966-1980, that murders more than doubled in the US. Any other rise and fall in murders, after that time, has been only a fraction of that change, indicating a strong and direct correlation between the lack of executions and the dramatic increase in murders, if that is specifically what you are looking for.

If deterrence was measured by direct correlation's between execution, or the lack thereof, and murder rates, as implied by the Times article, and as wrongly assumed by those blindly accepting that model, then there would be no debate, only more confusion. Which may have been the Times' goal.

Let's take a look at the science.

Some non death penalty jurisdictions, such as South Africa and Mexico lead the world in murder and violent crime rates. But then some non death penalty jurisdictions, such as Sweden, have quite low rates. Then there are such death penalty jurisdictions as Japan and Singapore which have low rates of such crime. But then other death penalty jurisdictions, such as Rwanda and Louisiana, that have high rates.

To which an astute observer will respond: But socially, culturally, geographically, legally, historically and many other ways, all of those jurisdictions are very different. Exactly, a simple comparison of only execution rates and murder rates cannot tell the tale of deterrence. And within the US, between states, there exist many variables which will effect the rates of homicides.

See REVIEW, below

And, as so well illustrated by the Times graphics, a non death penalty state, such as Michigan has high murder rates and another non death penalty state, such as North Dakota, has low murder rates and then there are death penalty states, such as Louisiana, with high murder rates and death penalty states, such South Dakota, with low rates. Apparently, unbeknownst to the Times, but quite obvious to any neutral observer, there are other factors at play here, not just the presence or absence of the death penalty. Most thinking folks already knew that.

As Economics Professor Ehrlich stated in the Times piece and, as accepted by all knowledgeable parties, there are many factors involved in such evaluations. That is why there is a wide variation of crime rates both within and between some death penalty and non death penalty jurisdictions, and small variations within and between others. Any direct comparison of only execution rates and only murder rates, to determine deterrence, would reflect either ignorance or deception.

Ehrlich called the Times study "a throwback to the vintage 1960s statistical analyses done by criminologists who compared murder rates in neighboring states where capital punishment was either legal or illegal." "The statistics involved in such comparisons have long been recognized as devoid of scientific merit." He called the Times story a "one sided affair" devoid of merit. Most interesting is that Ehrlich was interviewed by the Time's writer, Fessenden, who asked Ehrlich to comment on the results before the story was published. Somehow Ehrlich's overwhelming criticisms were left out of the article.

Ehrlich also referred Fessenden to some professors who produced the recently released Emory study. Emory Economics department head, Prof. Deshbakhsh "says he was contacted by Fessenden, and he indicated to the Times reporter that the study suggested a very strong deterrent effect of capital punishment." Somehow,
Fessenden's left that out of the Times story, as well. (5).

There is a constant within all jurisdictions -- negative consequences will always have an effect on behavior.

Maybe the Times will be a bit more thoughtful, next time.

REVIEW

"The List: Murder Capitals of the World", 09/08, Foreign Policy Magazine
Capital punishment (cp) or not (ncp)
murder rates/100,000 population

4 out of the top 5 do not have the death penalty

1. Caracas (ncp), Venezuela 130-160
Bad policing.
2. New Orleans (cp), La, USA 69-95
Variable because of different counts in surging population. Drug related.
Nos 2 & 3 in US, Detroit (ncp), 46 and Baltimore (cp), 45.
3. Cape Town (ncp), South Africa 62
Most crimes with people who know each other.
4. Port Mores (ncp), Papua New Guinea 54
Chinese gangs, corrupt policing
5. Moscow (ncp), Russia 9.6
various

Of the Top 10 Countries With Lowest Murder Rates (1), 7 have the death penalty

O f the Top 10 Countries With Highest Murder Rates (2), 5 have the death penalty

Top 10 Countries With Lowest Murder Rates
Iceland 0.00 ncp
Senegal 0.33 ncp
Burkina Faso 0.38 cp
Cameroon 0.38 cp
Finland 0.71 ncp
Gambia 0.71 cp
Mali 0.71 cp
Saudi Arabia 0.71 cp
Mauritania 0.76 cp
Oman cp

Top 10 Countries With Highest Murder Rates
Honduras 154.02 ncp
South Africa 121.91 ncp
Swaziland 93.32 cp
Colombia 69.98 ncp
Lesotho 50.41 cp
Rwanda 45.08 ncp
Jamaica 37.21 cp
El. Salvador 36.88 cp
Venezuela 33.20 ncp
Bolivia 31.98 cp

(1) http://www.mapsofworld.com/world-top-ten/countries-with-lowest-murder-rates.html no date

(2) http://www.mapsofworld.com/world-top-ten/countries-with-highest-murder-rates.html no date

FOOTNOTES

1) "States With No Death Penalty Share Lower Homicide Rates", The New York Times 9/22/00 located at www (dot) nytimes.com/2000/09/22/national/22STUD.html and www (dot) nytimes.com/2000/09/22/national/22DEAT.html
2) "Don't Know Much About Calculus: The (New York) Times flunks high-school math in death-penalty piece", William Tucker, National Review, 9/22/00, located at www (dot) nationalreview.com/comment/comment092200c.shtml

3) ibid, see footnote 11
4) "The Death Penalty Saves Lives", AIM Report, August 2000, located atwww (dot) aim.org/publications/aim_report/2000/08a.html
5) "NEW YORK TIMES UNDER FIRE AGAIN", Accuracy in Media, 10/16/00, go to www (dot) aim.org/

copyright 2000-2008 Dudley Sharp: Permission for distribution of this document, in whole or in part, is approved with proper attribution.

Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters
e-mail sharpjfa@aol.com, 713-622-5491,
Houston, Texas

Mr. Sharp has appeared on ABC, BBC, CBS, CNN, C-SPAN, FOX, NBC, NPR, PBS , VOA and many other TV and radio networks, on such programs as Nightline, The News Hour with Jim Lehrer, The O'Reilly Factor, etc., has been quoted in newspapers throughout the world and is a published author.

A former opponent of capital punishment, he has written and granted interviews about, testified on and debated the subject of the death penalty, extensively and internationally.

Pro death penalty sites

homicidesurvivors.com/categories/Dudley%20Sharp%20-%20Justice%20Matters.aspx

www.dpinfo.com
www.cjlf.org/deathpenalty/DPinformation.htm
www.clarkprosecutor.org/html/links/dplinks.htm
www.coastda.com/archives.html
www.lexingtonprosecutor.com/death_penalty_debate.htm
www.prodeathpenalty.com
yesdeathpenalty.googlepages.com/home2 (Sweden)
www.wesleylowe.com/cp.html

A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps!

From: Sharpjfa@aol.com
Sent: Monday, February 23, 2009 10:29 AM
To: Jane Pierson
Subject: the 130 "innocents" fraud death penalty

from dudley sharp

Re: fact checking issues, on innocence and the death penalty.

It is very important to take note that the 130 exonerated from death row is a blatant scam, easily uncovered by fact checking.

The Death Penalty Information Center has been responsible for some of the most serious deceptions by the anti death penalty side, inclusive of this 130 exonerated and innocence scam.

Dieter and DPIC have produced the claims regarding the exonerated and innocents released from death row list. The scam is that DPIC just decided to redefine what exonerated and innocence mean according to their own perverse definitions.

Richard Dieter, head of the Death Penalty Information Center (DPIC): defining what "exonerated" or "innocent" means.

". . . (DPIC) makes no distinction between legal and factual innocence. " 'They're innocent in the eyes of the law,' Dieter says. 'That's the only objective standard we have.' "

That is untrue, of course. We are all aware of the differences between legal guilt and actual guilt and legal innocence (not guilty) and actual innocence, just as the courts are.

Furthermore, there is no finding of actual innocence, but it is "not guilty". Dieter knows that we are all speaking of actual innocence, those cases that have no connection to the murder(s). He takes advantage of that by redefining exonerated and innocence.

Dieter "clarifies" the three ways that former death row inmates get onto their "exonerated" by "innocence" list.

"A defendant whose conviction is overturned by a judge must be further exonerated in one of three ways: he must be acquitted at a new trial, or the prosecutor must drop the charges against him, or a governor must grant an absolute pardon."

None establishes actual innocence.

DPIC has " . . . included supposedly innocent defendants who were still culpable as accomplices to the actual triggerman."

DPIC: "There may be guilty persons among the innocents, but that includes all of us."

Good grief. DPIC wishes to apply collective guilt of capital murder to all of us.

Dieter states: "I don't think anybody can know about a person's absolute innocence." (Green). Dieter said he could not pinpoint how many are "actually innocent" -- only the defendants themselves truly know that, he said." (Erickson)

Or Dieter won't assert actual innocence in 1, 102 or 350 cases. He doesn't want to clarify a real number with proof of actual innocence, that would blow his entire deception.

Or, Dieter declare all innocent: "If you are not proven guilty in a court of law, you're innocent." (Green)

Dieter would call Hitler and Stalin innocent. Those are his "standards".

And that is the credibility of the DPIC.

For fact checking.

1. "Case Histories: A Review of 24 Individuals Released from Death Row", Florida Commission on Capital Cases, 6/20/02, Revised 9/10/02 at http://www.floridacapitalcases.state.fl.us/Publications/innocentsproject.pdf

83% error rate in "innocent" claims.

2. "Is 'the innocence list' an appropriate name?", 1/19/03 FRANK GREEN, TIMES-DISPATCH STAFF WRITER http://www.stopcapitalpunishment.org/coverage/106.html

Dieter admits they don't discern between legal innocence and actual innocence. One of Dieter's funnier quotes;"The prosecutor, perhaps, or Dudley Sharp, perhaps, thinks they're still guilty because there was evidence of their guilt, but that's a subjective judgment." Yep, "EVIDENCE OF GUILT", can't you see why Dieter would think they were innocent? And that's how the DPIC works.

3. The Death of Innocents: A Reasonable Doubt, New York Times Book Review, p 29, 1/23/05, Adam Liptak, national legal correspondent for The NY Times

"To be sure, 30 or 40 categorically innocent people have been released from death row . . . ".

That is out of the DPIC claimed 119 "exonerated", at that time, for a 75% error rate.

NOTE: It's hard to understand how an absolute can have a differential of 33%. I suggest the "to be sure" is, now, closer to 25.

4. CRITIQUE OF DPIC LIST ("INNOCENCE:FREED FROM DEATH ROW"), Ward Campbell, http://www.prodeathpenalty.com/DPIC.htm

5. "The Death Penalty Debate in Illinois", JJKinsella,6/2000, http://www.dcba.org/brief/junissue/2000/art010600.htm

6.THE DEATH PENALTY - ALL INNOCENCE ISSUES, Dudley Sharp http://homicidesurvivors.com/2006/03/20/all-innocence-issues--the-death-penalty.aspx

Origins of "innocence" fraud, and review of many innocence issues

7. "Bad List", Ramesh Ponnuru, National Review, 9/16/02 www.nationalreview.com/advance/advance091602.asp#title5

How bad is DPIC?

8. "Not so Innocent", By Ramesh Ponnuru,National Review, 10/1/02 www.nationalreview.com/ponnuru/ponnuru100102.asp

DPIC from bad to worse.

Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters
e-mail sharpjfa@aol.com, 713-622-5491,
Houston, Texas

Mr. Sharp has appeared on ABC, BBC, CBS, CNN, C-SPAN, FOX, NBC, NPR, PBS , VOA and many other TV and radio networks, on such programs as Nightline, The News Hour with Jim Lehrer, The O'Reilly Factor, etc., has been quoted in newspapers throughout the world and is a published author.

A former opponent of capital punishment, he has written and granted interviews about, testified on and debated the subject of the death penalty, extensively and internationally.

A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps!

Jane Pierson

From: Sharpjfa@aol.com
Sent: Monday, February 23, 2009 11:06 AM
To: Tom Wright; Jane Pierson
Subject: Cost Comparisons: Death Penalty Cases Vs Equivalent Life Sentence Cases Dudley S
Follow Up Flag: Follow up
Flag Status: Red

Cost Comparisons: Death Penalty Cases Vs Equivalent Life Sentence Cases
Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters, contact info below

In comparing the cost of death penalty cases to other sentences, the studies are woefully incomplete.

Generally, such studies have one or more of the following problems.

1) Most studies exclude the cost of geriatric care, recently found to be $60,000-$80,000/inmate/yr. A significant omission from life sentence costs.

2) All studies exclude the cost savings of the death penalty, which is the ONLY sentence which allows for a plea bargain to a maximum life sentence. Such plea bargains accrue as a cost benefit to the death penalty, such benefit being the cost of trials and appeals for every such plea bargain, estimated at $500,000 to $1 million, which would accrue as a cost benefit/credit to the death penalty.

Depending upon jurisdiction, this MIGHT result in a minimal cost differential between the two sanctions or an actual net cost benefit to the death penalty, depending upon how many LWOP cases are plea bargained and how many death penalty cases result in a death sentence.

3) FCC economist Dr. Paul Zimmerman finds that executions result in a huge cost benefit to society. "Specifically, it is estimated that each state execution deters somewhere between 3 and 25 murders per year (14 being the average). Assuming that the value of human life is approximately $5 million {i.e. the average of the range estimates provided by Viscussi (1993)}, our estimates imply that society avoids losing approximately $70 million per year on average at the current rate of execution all else equal." The study used state level data from 1978 to 1997 for all 50 states (excluding Washington D.C.). (1)

That is a cost benefit of $70 million per execution. 15 additional recent studies, inclusive of their defenses, support the deterrent effect.

No cost study has included such calculations.

Although we find it inappropriate to put a dollar value on life, evidently this is not uncommon for economists, insurers, etc.

We know that living murderers are infinitely more likely to harm and murder, again, than are executed murderers. There is no doubt that executions do save innocent lives. What value do you put on the lives saved? Certainly not less than $5 million.

4) Some "cost studies" are blatantly deceptive. Always fact check.
a) Some studies compare the cost of a death penalty case, including pre trial, trial, appeals and incarceration, to only the cost of incarceration for 40 years, excluding all trial costs and appeals, for a life sentence. The much cited Texas "study" does this. Hardly an apples to apples cost comparison.

b) The pure deception in some cost "studies" is overt. It has been claimed that it costs $3.2 million/execution in Florida. That "study" decided to add the cost of the entire death penalty system in Florida ($57 million), which included all of the death penalty cases and dividing that number by only the number of executions (18). One could just have easily stated that the cost of the estimated 200 death row inmates was $285,000 per case.

5) There is no reason for death penalty appeals to take longer than 5-7 years, prior to execution, as in Virginia. All death penalty appeals, direct and writ, should travel through the process concurrently, thereby giving every appellate issue 5-7 years of consideration through both state and federal courts. Again, as in Virginia, strict and enforced time limitations, for both the state and the inmate, should be used. There is no need for endless repetition and delay.

Justice
6) The main reason sentences are given is because jurors find that it is the most just punishment available. No state, concerned with justice, will base a decision on cost alone. If they did, all cases would be plea bargained and every crime would have a probation option.

1). "State Executions, Deterrence and the Incidence of Murder", Paul R. Zimmerman (zimmy@att.net), March 3. 2003, Social Science Research Network, http://papers.ssrn.com/sol3/delivery.cfm/SSRN_ID354680_code021216500.pdf?abstractid=354680

copyright 2003-2009 Dudley Sharp
Permission for distribution of this document, in whole or in part, is approved with proper attribution.

Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters
e-mail sharpjfa@aol.com, 713-622-5491,
Houston, Texas

Mr. Sharp has appeared on ABC, BBC, CBS, CNN, C-SPAN, FOX, NBC, NPR, PBS , VOA and many other TV and radio networks, on such programs as Nightline, The News Hour with Jim Lehrer, The O'Reilly Factor, etc., has been quoted in newspapers throughout the world and is a published author.

A former opponent of capital punishment, he has written and granted interviews about, testified on and debated the subject of the death penalty, extensively and internationally.

Pro death penalty sites

homicidesurvivors.com/categories/Dudley%20Sharp%20-%20Justice%20Matters.aspx

www.dpinfo.com
www.cjlf.org/deathpenalty/DPinformation.htm
www.clarkprosecutor.org/html/links/dplinks.htm
www.coastda.com/archives.html
www.lexingtonprosecutor.com/death_penalty_debate.htm
www.prodeathpenalty.com
yesdeathpenalty.googlepages.com/home2 (Sweden)
www.wesleylowe.com/cp.html

Jane Pierson

From: Sharpjfa@aol.com
Sent: Monday, February 23, 2009 10:51 AM
To: Tom Wright; Jane Pierson
Subject: The Death Penalty: Not a Human Rights Violation
Follow Up Flag: Follow up
Flag Status: Red

The Death Penalty: Not a Human Rights Violation
Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters

Some wrongly state that executions are a human rights violation. The human rights violation argument often comes from European leadership and human rights organizations.

The argument is as follows: Life is a fundamental human right. Therefore, taking it away is a fundamental violation of human rights.

Those who say that the death penalty is a human rights violation have no solid moral or philosophical foundation for making such a statement. What opponents of capital punishment really are saying is that they just don't approve of executions.

Certainly, both freedom and life are fundamental human rights. On this, there is virtually no disagreement. However, again, virtually all agree, that freedom may be taken away when there is a violation of the social contract. Freedom, a fundamental human right, may be taken away from those who violate society's laws. So to is the fundamental human right of life forfeit when the violation of the social contract is most grave.

No one disputes that taking freedom away is a different result than taking life away. However, the issue is the incorrect claim that taking away fundamental human rights -- be that freedom or life -- is a human rights violation. It is not. It depends specifically on the circumstances.

How do we know? Because those very same governments and human rights stalwarts, rightly, tell us so. Universally, both governments and human rights organizations approve and encourage taking away the fundamental human right of freedom, as a proper response to some criminal activity.

Why do governments and human rights organizations not condemn just incarceration of criminals as a fundamental human rights violation? Because they think incarceration is just fine.

Why do some of those same groups condemn execution as a human rights violation? Only because they don't like it. They have no moral or philosophical foundation for calling execution a human rights violation.

In the context of criminals violating the social contract, those criminals have voluntarily subjected themselves to the laws of the state. And they have knowingly placed themselves in a position where their fundamental human rights of freedom and life are subject to being forfeit by their actions.

Opinion is only worth the value of its foundation. Those who call execution a human rights violation have no credible foundation for that claim. What they are really saying is "We just don't like it."

copyright 2005-2009 Dudley Sharp

Permission for distribution of this document, in whole or in part, is approved with proper attribution.

Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters
e-mail sharpjfa@aol.com, 713-622-5491,
Houston, Texas

Mr. Sharp has appeared on ABC, BBC, CBS, CNN, C-SPAN, FOX, NBC, NPR, PBS , VOA and many other TV and radio networks, on such programs as Nightline, The News Hour with Jim Lehrer, The O'Reilly Factor, etc., has been quoted in newspapers throughout the world and is a published author.

A former opponent of capital punishment, he has written and granted interviews about, testified on and debated the subject of the death penalty, extensively and internationally.

Pro death penalty sites

homicidesurvivors.com/categories/Dudley%20Sharp%20-%20Justice%20Matters.aspx

www.dpinfo.com
www.cjlf.org/deathpenalty/DPinformation.htm
www.clarkprosecutor.org/html/links/dplinks.htm
www.coastda.com/archives.html
www.lexingtonprosecutor.com/death_penalty_debate.htm
www.prodeathpenalty.com
yesdeathpenalty.googlepages.com/home2 (Sweden)
www.wesleylowe.com/cp.html

A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps!

Jane Pierson

From: Sharpjfa@aol.com

Sent: Monday, February 23, 2009 10:50 AM

To: Tom Wright; Jane Pierson

Subject: cost studies _ LET ME KNOW - They're all different, see this one Maryland

In a message dated 2/18/2009 2:24:55 P.M. Central Standard Time, Sharpjfa writes:

To: Maryland Legislature, Prosecutors and media throughout the region

From: Dudley Sharp, contact info below

SUMMARY: The cost errors, within the Majority Report, are so substantial that their cannot be considered reliable. Is it possible that a properly managed death penalty system could be less expensive than a true life sentence? Read on.

NOTE: See the hidden "Minority Report", stuck between pages 128 and 129 of the majority report. It is a 23 page rebuttal of the majority report. The Governor made sure that is was well hidden. There is not even a reference to it in the Table of Contents, even though the Minority Report is much, much longer than any section of the majority report. Politics at is worst.

Some observations on the Urban Institute (UI) Cost of the Death Penalty in Maryland (1) as well as on the Majority Report.

The UI conclusion was that the lifetime case cost for the 56 death penalty cases will cost Maryland taxpayers $186 million, or $106 million more than if death wasn't pursued in those cases or about $47,000 per year per inmate, more.

The study found that the average cost of a case where a death notice was not sought was $1.1 million/case, that being $250,000 for adjudication and $860,000 for confinement/prison costs.

Unfortunately, many more cases were used than just those which make up life without parole (LWOP). This, wrongly and totally, skewed the results.

That was inappropriate from a public policy standpoint and the majority should have known it.

The only public policy cost discussion regarding the death penalty, nationwide, is the cost differential between LWOP cases and death penalty cases. This is very well known, If anyone doesn't know it, it would take 10 minutes online to figure it out.

It begs the question, why did the UI muddy the waters with a bunch of cases that didn't get LWOP?

Regardless of UI's reasons, the answer is, they shouldn't have.

Here's why.

1) The public policy debate is concentrated on LWOP as a considered replacement for the death penalty. Sentences less than LWOP are not under consideration in this current debate.

2) By including cases of less than LWOP, within the non death category, UI and the majority has lowered the costs of that category, perhaps substantially, and has misled or confused the public as to the real cost disparities, if any, which may exist between the death penalty and LWOP in Maryland.

3) Had UI only included LWOP cases in that category, the cost disparity would be reduced, perhaps substantially.

Using current data, scenarios exist that could result in a finding that the death penalty may actually be less expensive than LWOP. See below.

What wasn't calculated

4) a) Each case, whereby a plea bargain to a sanction less than death was rendered, the state saves about $250, 000/case for legal expenses, based upon UI estimates.

b) The number is, likely, far above that $250,000/case evaluation, because 1) UI wrongly included non LWOP cases and 2) wrongly credited the cost reduction of those pleas, within the LWOP category, when, instead, 3) a credit of $250,000/case, but likely much larger, should have been placed in the death case data calculations, resulting in an additional increase per case cost within the true LWOP category and a greater reduction in the death case category.

Properly, this credit can happen only when LWOP plea cases are isolated. This is public policy 101. The majority wrongly discounted plea bargains to a life sentence. The cost savings are substantial.

5) For example:

a) Presume the average LWOP case, resulting in LWOP, has adjudication costs of $500, 000, from pre trial to conviction and throughout appeals. If a LWOP sentence was given as part of a plea bargain, prior to a death notice being filed, UI shows that cost as $0 for adjudication, thus lowering the average cost of all cases where death wasn't pursued in potentially capital cases.

That would be improper, from any standpoint.

b) A LWOP plea bargain can only occur because the state has the death penalty. So, instead of lowering the average cost of all LWOP cases, all LWOP plea cases would be removed from the LWOP database and a cost credit of $500,000 would be applied as a cost benefit within death penalty category, because it was solely the presence of the death penalty which allows for a plea bargain to LWOP. Thus, death penalty costs and overall costs to the state, would drop substantially and the average costs of LWOP would rise.

c) That results in two changes:
1) The average cost of LWOP cases will rise, possibly substantially, because a $0 adjudication cost entry will be removed from the LWOP cases; and
2) The average cost of death penalty cases may lower, possibly substantially, because a $500, 000 cost reduction will be made to the death penalty cost basis, for each such LWOP plea.

To state the obvious, UI made an error in reversing the credit in pleas.

6) For an accurate public policy review of death penalty costs vs LWOP costs, Maryland Legislators should:

a) Compare the costs of only the death penalty cases which were pursued and a death penalty resulted and only LWOP cases that were pursued, resulting in a LWOP sentence; and

b) include the proper calculations for credit of LWOP pleas bargains, which are solely the result of the presence of the death penalty.

c) Why exclude the death penalty cases which were pursued, resulting in sentences less than the death penalty? For the same reason we exclude LWOP cases which result in sentences of less than LWOP.

You should be looking , only, at true death cases costs vs true LWOP costs. If UI wants to add a bunch of other cost categories, fine, but these are the two that must be done.

They weren't.

COST SAVINGS - Death Row incarceration

1) The extra $350,000 per case for additional cost for death row incarceration is an unnecessary waste of taxpayer money. Missouri doesn't even have a death row for their death sentenced prisoners.

2) There is no reason that death penalty appeals should take longer than 7-10 years.
a) Both appellate paths, direct appeal and writ, should travel through the appellate process, at the same time.
b) The legislature, trial and appellate courts should work together to establish reasonable time frames for appeals and responses to them.

GERIATRIC CARE - Prisoner geriatric care has recently been found to be about $70,000/inmate/year, on average. Has that been calculated in Maryland?

REQUIREMENT

Maryland must redo their calculations to compare costs of true LWOP cases to death penalty cases, for two reasons.

First, it is the only public policy cost issue which exists, with regard to the death penalty in Maryland

Secondly, what you have, now, cannot be relied upon.

UI: Additional Errors in Judgement

UI's reliance on Donahue and Wolfers (2006), who have been highly critical of some of the recent studies finding for deterrence, was unwarranted and inappropriate.

UI's authors failed to note that Donahue and Wolfers criticisms have been dissected and trashed by those authors whose studies found for deterrence.

I believe all of those replies, heavily critical of Donahue and Wolfers, were published prior to the UI report.
Furthermore, UI failed to mention that Donahue and Wolfers' work was not peer reviewed, but many and most of the studies finding for deterrence were. Had Donahue and Wolfers work been peer reviewed, it is a question if it ever would have been published in a peer reviewed publication.

Both of these points are important and inexcusable omissions by UI.

Instead of mentioning the rebuttals, UI, instead, deferred to Donahue and Wolfers, as a way of neutralizing the importance of the studies finding for deterrence, and then mentioned a study which found against deterrence.

UI wrongly states that studies go either way so we shouldn't bother with them.

Total nonsense. 16 recent studies, including strong rebuttals to criticism, find for death penalty deterrence.

In one reply to Donahue and Wolfers, after their data had been re-run, based upon Donahue and Wolfers criticism:

"I oppose the death penalty. " " But my results show that the death penalty (deters) — what am I going to do, hide them?" "Science does really draw a conclusion. It did. There is no question about it." "The results are robust, they don't really go away" "The conclusion is there is a deterrent effect.".

Prof. Naci Mocan, Economics Chairman, University of Colorado at Denver
"Studies say death penalty deters crime", ROBERT TANNER, Associated Press, June 10, 2007, 2:01 PM ET

Furthermore, one of the deterrence studies found a $70 million cost benefit, per execution, because of the number of lives saved per execution.

Obviously, that would render the death penalty a huge cost benefit in Maryland.

Many other important conclusions of the deterrence studies were omitted from the UI report. If UI didn't wish to give a proper, accurate review of deterrence, stay away from it. Why wrongly muddy the waters?

Public policy makers take note.

Misleading Conclusion

The UI authors stated that:

"Prior research on the costs of capital punishment in other states unambiguously finds that capital cases are more expensive to prosecute than non-capital cases. "

To "prosecute", generally yes, but not always.

And when did the studies ONLY look at prosecution?

In one of UI's included studies, Cook, North Carolina Cost Study (1993), the UI authors seemed to have missed a very important and obvious point.

The study finds that, for two different calculations, that the death penalty costs $163, 000 and $213,000/case more than a life sentence.

But, the calculation for a life sentence is only to 20 years.

For a true life sentence, you would be adding $300, 000 or more to each life case, meaning that a life sentence costs more than the death penalty.

Furthermore, the authors conceded not including geriatric care, recently found to be $69, 000/inmate/yr. meaning lifers cost a lot more than death sentenced prisoners, possibly adding an additional $300,000/case, or more, for a true LWOP sentence.

That could render life cases $600, 000 or more, more expensive than death sentences in North Carolina.

Furthermore, the calculations didn't include the benefit of plea bargains to life, possible only because of the death penalty.

Unambiguous, UI? Not close.

Based upon the UI authors not seeing these very obvious and important facts, or deciding not to share them within their report, one may conclude that UI authors may have made similar errors or omissions in their review of the other included studies.

Reviewers should keep that in mind.

CONCLUSION

UI, a public policy institution, avoided the only public policy issue which exists in the death penalty cost debate:

"What is the difference in cost between the death penalty and a true LWOP?"

Depending upon the number of plea bargains to LWOP, there may be very little cost difference between the death penalty and LWOP.

Furthermore, if both the presence of the death penalty, as well as executions, saves many innocent lives, as 16 of the recent deterrence studies(1) suggest, then the benefit of the death penalty far surpasses any alleged cost deficit, if any, or is a huge added benefit to any cost benefit of the death penalty, if there is one.

Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters
e-mail sharpjfa@aol.com, 713-622-5491,
Houston, Texas

Mr. Sharp has appeared on ABC, BBC, CBS, CNN, C-SPAN, FOX, NBC, NPR, PBS , VOA and many other TV and radio networks, on such programs as Nightline, The News Hour with Jim Lehrer, The O'Reilly Factor, etc., has been quoted in newspapers throughout the world and is a published author.

A former opponent of capital punishment, he has written and granted interviews about, testified on and debated the subject of the death penalty, extensively and internationally.

Pro death penalty sites

homicidesurvivors.com/categories/Dudley%20Sharp%20-%20Justice%20Matters.aspx

www.dpinfo.com
www.cjlf.org/deathpenalty/DPinformation.htm
www.clarkprosecutor.org/html/links/dplinks.htm
www.coastda.com/archives.html see Death Penalty
www.lexingtonprosecutor.com/death_penalty_debate.htm
www.prodeathpenalty.com
http://yesdeathpenalty.googlepages.com/home2 (Sweden)
www.wesleylowe.com/cp.html

(1) http://www.urban.org/UploadedPDF/411625_md_death_penalty.pdf

A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps!

Jane Pierson

From: Sharpjfa@aol.com
Sent: Thursday, February 26, 2009 6:36 AM
To: Tom Wright; Jane Pierson
Subject: Reply please Can Rev. Carroll Pickett be trusted "At the Death House Door"?

Dear Jane and Tom:

I didn't see this in the record. I may have missed it.

The opposition put a flyer , in the record, regarding this film, In addition, there is an anti death penalty meeting on March 8th, with Rev Pickett as the speaker. http://www.aadp.info/

dudley

In a message dated 2/23/2009 2:36:07 P.M. Central Standard Time, Sharpjfa writes:

> Can Rev. Carroll Pickett be trusted "At the Death House Door"?
> Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters, contact info below
>
> To: Film schools, festivals, institutes, websites and reviewers, worldwide .
> Distributed since May, 2008
>
> Rev. Pickett is on a promotional tour for the anti death penalty film "At the Death House Door". It is, primarily, about the Reverend's experience ministering to 95 death row inmates executed in Texas.
>
> Rev. Pickett's inaccuracies are many and important.
>
> Does Rev. Pickett just make facts up as he goes along, hoping that no one fact checks, or is he just confused or ignorant?
>
> Some of his miscues are common anti death penalty deceptions. The reverend is an anti death penalty activist.
>
> Below are comments or paraphrases of Rev. Pickett, taken from interviews, followed by my REPLY:.
>
> I encourage more fact checking.
>
> 1) Pickett: (In 1989) "I was so 100% certain that he couldn't have committed this crime. (Carlos) was a super person to minister to. I knew Carlos was not guilty. " "I knew (executed inmate) Carlos (De Luna) didn't do it." (1)
>
> REPLY: There is this major problem. It appears that Rev. Pickett is, now, either lying about his own 1989 opinions or he is very confused.
>
> In 1999, 4 years after Rev. Pickett had left his death row ministry, and he had become an anti death penalty activist, and 10 years after De Luna's execution, the reverend was asked, in a PBS Frontline interview,
>
> "Do you think there have been some you have watched die who were strictly innocent?"
>
> Pickett's reply: "I never felt that."(2)

For at least 15 years, Pickett never felt that any of the 95 executed were actually innocent.

This directly conflicts with his current statements on Carlos De Luna. Rev. Pickett is, now, saying that he was 100% sure of De Luna's innocence in 1989!

If he was 100% sure of DeLuna's execution in 1989, what's up with the PBS interview?.

How could Rev. Pickett forget the only "innocent" person he saw executed - he was 100% sure of his innocence - on his watch? Wouldn't anyone find that to be 100% impossible to forget, particularly when you are asked, specifically, about it during a formal interview?

When is the first confirmable date that Rev. Pickett stated he believed in DeLuna's actual innocence?

It appears the reverend has either revised history to support his new anti death penalty activism - he's lying - or he is, again, very confused. Reverend?

2) Sara Hickman, musician, anti death penalty activist, and acquaintance of Pickett's, wrote " . . . Rev. Carroll Pickett (the death row minister who witnessed 95 executions in Huntsville; he is convinced that at least 15 of those men were innocent),. . . ". (3)

Reply: In 1999 Rev. Pickett didn't believe any of those 95 executed were innocent, now, in 2008, he is convinced that 15 innocents were executed. Quite remarkable, if true.

Rev. Pickett can you tell us which 15 you are convinced were executed innocents? And what is your evidence? Or did Ms. Hickman get it wrong? Reverend?

I have inquired with Ms. Hickman (sara@sarahickman.com) and Rev Pickett (carrollpickett57@gmail.com) but, so far, no reply.

3) Introduction: In 1974, prison librarian Judy Standley and teacher Von Beseda were murdered during an 11 day prison siege and escape attempt. Ignacio Cuevas was sentenced to death, as one of three prisoners who were involved. The other two died in the shootout.

Ms. Standley and Ms. Beseda were part of Rev. Pickett's congregation, outside of prison.

Pickett: After Cuevas was executed, Rev. Pickett alleges that he met with Judy Standley's family and they told the reverend that "This (the execution) didn't bring closure." "This didn't help us." According to Rev. Pickett, "They didn't want him (Ignacio Cuevas) executed." (1)

Reply; There might be a big problem. Judy Standley's five children wrote a statement, before the execution, which stated: "We are relieved the ordeal may almost be over, but we are also aware that to some, this case represents only one of many in which, arguably, `justice delayed is justice denied," "We are hopeful the sentence will finally be carried out and that justice will at last be served," said the statement, signed by Ty, Dru, Mark, Pam and Stuart Standley. (4)

Sure seemed like the kids wanted Cuevas to be executed. Doesn't it? Reverend?

4) Pickett: spoke of the Soldier of Fortune murder for hire case, stating the husband got the death penalty, while the hired murderer got 6 years. (1)

Reply: Rev. Pickett's point, here, appears to be the unfairness of the sentence disparity. More fact problems. John Wayne Hearn, the hitman, was sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of Sandra Black.

5) Pickett: "A great majority of them (the 95 executed inmates he ministered to) were black or Hispanic." (1)

Reply: The reverend's point, here, appears to emphasize the alleged racist nature of the death penalty. There is a problem for the reverend- the facts - the "great majority" were 47 white (49%) with 32 black (34%), and 16 Hispanic (17%).

6) Pickett: "Out of the 95 we executed only one that had a college degree. All the rest of them their education was 9th grade and under." (1)

Reply: Not even close. Rev. Pickett's point, here, seems to be that capital murderers are, almost all, idiots who can't be held responsible for their actions. But, there are more fact problems for the reverend. In a review of only 31 of the 95 cases, 5 had some college or post graduate classes and 16 were high school graduates or completed their GED. Partial review (Incomplete Count) , below.

Would Rev. Pickett tell us about the educational achievements of all the true innocent murder victims and those that weren't old enough for school?

7) Pickett: believes that, no way, could someone, so afraid of lightning and thunder, such as Carlos De Luna, use a knife (in a crime). (1)

Reply: Is the reverend not aware of DeLuna's record? In 1980, "De Luna was charged with attempted aggravated rape and driving a stolen vehicle, he pleaded no contest and was sentenced to 2 to 3 years. Paroled in May 1982, De Luna returned to Corpus Christi. Not long after, he attended a party for a former cellmate and was accused of attacking the cellmate's 53-year-old mother. She told police that De Luna broke three of her ribs with one punch, removed her underwear, pulled down his pants, then suddenly left. He was never prosecuted for the attack, but authorities sent him back to prison on a parole violation. Released again in December of that year, he came back to Corpus Christi and got a job as a concrete worker. Almost immediately, he was arrested for public intoxication. During the arrest, De Luna allegedly laughed about the wounding of a police officer months earlier and said the officer should have been killed. Two weeks after that arrest, Lopez was murdered." (Chicago Tribune) Being a long time criminal, we can presume that there were numerous additional crimes committed by De Luna and which remained unsolved.

Was De Luna capable of committing a robbery murder, even though he had big brown eyes and was scared of lightning? Of course. Rev. Pickett?

8) Pickett: speaks of how sincere hostage taker, murderer Ignacio Cuevas was. Rev. Pickett states that "between 11 and midnight (I) believe almost everything" the inmates say, because they are about to be executed. (1)

Reply: Bad judgement. Minutes later, Cuevas lied when on the gurney, stating that he was innocent. This goes to show how Rev. Pickett and many others are easily fooled by these murderers. Pickett concedes the point.

9) Pickett: "In my opinion and in the opinion of the convicts, life in prison, with no hope of parole, is a much worse punishment (than the death penalty)." "Most of these people (death row inmates) fear life in prison more than they do the possibility of execution." (5)

REPLY: More fact problems. We know that isn't the opinion of those facing a possible death sentence of those residing on death row. This gives more support to my suspicion that Rev. Pickett is putting words into the inmates' mouths.

Facts: What percentage of capital murderers seek a plea bargain to a death sentence, rather than seeking a life sentence? Zero or close to it. They prefer long term imprisonment. What percentage of convicted capital murderers argue for execution in the penalty phase of their capital trial? Zero or close to it. They prefer long term imprisonment. What percentage of death row inmates waive their appeals and speed up the execution process? Nearly zero (less than 2%). They prefer long term imprisonment. This is not, even remotely, in dispute. How could Rev. Pickett not be aware of this? How long was he ministering to Texas' death row? 13 years? So, what? Did he just make this up?

10) Pickett: stated that "doctors can't (check the veins of inmates pending execution), it's against the law." (1)

Reply: Ridiculous. Obviously untrue.

11) Pickett: Pavulon (a paralytic) has been banned by vets but we use it on people. (1)

REPLY: This is untrue and is a common anti death penalty deception. The American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA) states, "When used alone, these drugs (paralytics) all cause respiratory arrest before loss of consciousness, so the animal may perceive pain and distress after it is immobilized." Obviously, paralytics are never used alone in the human lethal injection process or animal euthanasia. The AVMA does not mention the specific paralytic - Pavulon - used in lethal injection for humans. These absurd claims, falsely attributed to veterinary literature, have been a bald faced lie by anti death penalty activists.

In Belgium and the Netherlands, their euthanasia protocol is as follows: A coma is first induced by intravenous administration of 20 mg/kg sodium thiopental (Nesdonal) (NOTE-the first drug in human lethal injection) in a small volume (10 ml physiological saline). Then a triple intravenous dose of a non-depolarizing neuromuscular muscle relaxant is given, such as 20 mg pancuronium bromide (Pavulon) (NOTE-the second drug, the paralytic, in human lethal injection) or 20 mg vecuronium bromide (Norcuron). The muscle relaxant should preferably be given intravenously, in order to ensure optimal availability (NOTE: as in human lethal injection). Only for pancuronium bromide (Pavulon) are there substantial indications that the agent may also be given intramuscularly in a dosage of 40 mg. (NOTE: That is how effective the second drug in human lethal injection is, that it can be given intramuscularly and still hasten death).

Just like execution/lethal injection in the US, although we give a third drug which speeds up death, even more.

12) Pickett: "Most of the inmates would ask the question, "How can Texas kill people who kill people and tell people that killing people is wrong?" That came out of inmates' mouths regularly and I think it's a pretty good question to ask." (5)

REPLY: I simply don't believe it. Most? Would that be more than 47 out of 95? 10 out of 95? Doubtful. I suspect it is no coincidence that "Why do we kill people to show that killing is wrong" has been a common anti death penalty slogan for a very long time. I suspect that Rev. Pickett has just picked it up, used it and placed it in inmate's mouths. Furthermore, we don't execute murderers to show that murder is wrong. Most folks know that murder is wrong even without a sanction.

13) Pickett: said an inmate said "its burning" "its burning", during an execution. (1)

REPLY: This may have occurred for a variety of reasons and does not appear to be an issue. It is the third drug which is noted for a burning sensation, if one were conscious during its injection. However, none of the inmates that Rev. Pickett handled were conscious after the first drug was administered. That would not be the case, here, as the burning complaints came at the very beginning of the injection process, which would involve a reaction where the burning would be quite minor. Has Rev. Pickett reviewed the pain and suffering of the real victims - the innocent murdered ones?

Bottom line. Reverend Pickett's credibility is as high as a snakes belly.

Time to edit the movie?!

Incomplete count
this is a review of 31 out of the 95 death row inmates ministered by Rev. Pickett 21 of the 31 below had some college or post graduate classes (5) or were high school graduates or completed their GED (16)

---
1) Brooks 12
3) O'Bryan post graduate degree - dentist
41 James Russel 10th
42 G Green sophomore college
45 David Clark 10th and GED
46 Edward Ellis 10th
47 Billy White 10th
48 Justin May 11th
49 Jesus Romero 11th and GED
50 Robert Black, Jr. a pilot (probably beyond 12th)
55. Carlos Santana 11th
57 Darryl Stewart 12th
58 Leonel Herrera 11th and GED
60) Markum Duff Smith Post graduate College
33) Carlos De Luna 9th
95 Ronald Keith Allridge 10th and GED
93 Noble Mays Junior in College
92 Samuel Hawkins 12th
91 Billy Conn Gardner 12th
90 Jeffery Dean Motley 9th
89 Willie Ray Williams 11th
86 Jesse Jacobs 12th
85 Raymond Carl Kinnamon 11th and GED
84 Herman Clark sophomore college
83 Warren Eugene Bridge 11th
82 Walter Key Williams 12th
72 Harold Barnard 12th
73 Freddie Webb 11th and GED
75 Larry Anderson 12th
77 Stephen Nethery 12th
79 Robert Drew 10th

1) "Chaplain Discusses 'Death House' Ministry", Interview, Legal Affairs, FRESH AIR, NPR, May 19, 2007.

2) "The Execution: Interview with Reverend Carroll Pickett", PBS, FRONTLINE, 1999 www(DOT)pbs.org/wgbh/pages/frontline/shows/execution/readings/pickett.html

3) "Hickman: Texas needs to start a dialogue on the death penalty", OTHER TAKES, Austin American-Statesman, July 30, 2008

4) "Appellate court refuses to stay killer's execution", Kathy Fair, HOUSTON CHRONICLE, Section A, Page 1, 2 Star edition, 05/23/1991

5) THE FAILURE INTERVIEW: REVEREND CARROLL PICKETT—AUTHOR OF

"WITHIN THESE WALLS: MEMOIRS OF A DEATH HOUSE CHAPLAIN" Interview, by Kathleen A. Ervin www(DOT) failuremag.com/arch_history_carroll_pickett_interview.html

Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters
e-mail sharpjfa@aol.com, 713-622-5491,
Houston, Texas

Mr. Sharp has appeared on ABC, BBC, CBS, CNN, C-SPAN, FOX, NBC, NPR, PBS , VOA and many other TV and radio networks, on such programs as Nightline, The News Hour with Jim Lehrer, The O'Reilly Factor, etc., has been quoted in newspapers throughout the world and is a published author.

A former opponent of capital punishment, he has written and granted interviews about, testified on and debated the subject of the death penalty, extensively and internationally

---

A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps!

Jane Pierson

From: Sharpjfa@aol.com
Sent: Thursday, February 26, 2009 7:03 AM
Subject: STUDY: COST SAVINGS FROM REPEAL OF DEATH PENALTY MAY BE ELUSIVE

To: Maryland Legislature, Prosecutors and media throughout the region

Forwarded by Dudley Sharp, contact info at bottom

NOTE: I think CJLF is being very generous. Not only do most, if not all, cost evaluations avoid the death penalty credit for plea bargains to life, they usually don't calculate the cost of geriatric care for lifers and, quite often, the evaluations are so biased, against the death penalty, that they don't represent anything close to a balanced review. For example, the Maryland cost review reversed the credit for the plea bargain to a life sentence.

I am not affiliated with CJLF.

CJLF
Criminal Justice Legal Foundation

09-05

PRESS RELEASE

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
February 25, 2009

Michael Rushford, President
(916) 446-0345

STUDY: COST SAVINGS FROM REPEAL OF DEATH PENALTY MAY BE ELUSIVE

Prior Studies Fail to Account for Savings from Guilty Pleas with Life Sentences

Legislatures expecting a large savings in trial costs from repealing the death penalty may be in for a disappointment, according to a study released today by the Sacramento-based Criminal Justice Legal Foundation. The most widely cited estimates ignore or minimize an important cost-saving effect of having the death penalty available.

In states where the death penalty is the maximum punishment, a larger number of murder defendants are willing to plead guilty and receive a life sentence. The greater cost of trials where the prosecution does seek the death penalty is offset, at least in part, by the savings from avoiding trial altogether in cases where the defendant pleads guilty. Although this effect is well known to people working in the field, there appears to be no prior study to determine the actual size of this effect.

An example of the plea bargaining effect occurred two weeks ago in Navarro County, Texas. Shaun Earl Arender confessed to the sexual assault and murder of six-year-old Hanna Mack and was sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole in return for avoiding the death penalty. If Texas did not have the death penalty, this case would almost certainly have gone to trial. Sentencing expert Douglas Berman of Ohio

State University notes on his blog, "I think an important and underexamined aspect of the death penalty is its impact on plea bargaining and other pre-trial aspects of the investigation and prosecution of horrible murders."

The study released today, The Death Penalty and Plea Bargaining of Life Sentences, analyzed data gathered by the U.S. Bureau of Justice Statistics from 33 large urban counties. The study examined how many of the murder cases were resolved by guilty plea, how many went to trial, and how many resulted in a sentence of at least 20 years.

In states with the death penalty, the average county obtained sentences of 20 years or more in 50.7% of cases where the defendant was charged with murder and convicted of murder or voluntary manslaughter. These sentences were obtained through a guilty plea in 18.9% of the cases. In states without the death penalty, sentences of 20 years or more were obtained in 40.5% of such cases, but only 5.0% of those were guilty pleas, a little over a quarter of the number in the death penalty states.

The difference in the two groups of counties is "statistically significant," meaning it is highly unlikely to have happened at random. A correlational study such as this cannot definitively prove that the death penalty is the cause of the difference observed, but no other explanation is apparent.

This result is consistent with a 2006 study by economist Ilyana Kuziemko, then at Harvard and now at Princeton. She found that the availability of the death penalty did not have a large effect on the total number of cases plea bargained, but without the death penalty more defendants obtained reductions to lower degrees of homicide.

Opponents of the death penalty contend that life imprisonment will serve just as well to incapacitate convicted murderers. (The separate question of deterrence remains hotly disputed.) However, incapacitation will certainly be reduced and more innocent people will be murdered if fewer defendants are actually sentenced to life in prison. Without the threat of the death penalty, either many more cases must go to trial or many more murderers will be released in the future.

In a recent, widely cited study of death penalty costs in Maryland by the Urban Institute, one-third of the cases eligible for the death penalty were resolved by a guilty plea. Yet the study's estimate of costs makes no allowance for the possibility that percentage would drop sharply if the death penalty were repealed. Study commission reports in New Jersey and California have similarly ignored the issue or made inadequate allowance for it.

"The fact that these studies have omitted an important and obvious factor raises serious questions about their credibility," said CJLF's Legal Director Kent Scheidegger, the author of the study. "What else did they leave out?" To take just one example, both the Maryland and California studies calculate death row imprisonment costs on the assumption that inmates sentenced to death will live out their natural lives in prison. With an effective death penalty system executing its judgments in an average of five years, the imprisonment costs would be dramatically lower than these estimates.

"Repeal advocates are promising legislatures a pot of gold," said Scheidegger. "That pot may be as elusive as the mythical one at the end of the rainbow, or it may be purchased with the lives of innocent people."

CJLF Legal Director Kent Scheidegger is available for comment at (916) 446-0345.

The working paper for this study may be found on CJLF's web site at:
http://www.cjlf.org/papers/wpaper09-01.pdf

Criminal Justice Legal Foundation
2131 L Street, Sacramento, CA 95816 * P.O. Box 1199, Sacramento, CA 95812
(916) 446-0345 * Web page: http://www.cjlf.org

---

forwarded by
Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters
e-mail sharpjfa@aol.com, 713-622-5491,
Houston, Texas

Mr. Sharp has appeared on ABC, BBC, CBS, CNN, C-SPAN, FOX, NBC, NPR, PBS , VOA and many other TV and radio networks, on such programs as Nightline, The News Hour with Jim Lehrer, The O'Reilly Factor, etc., has been quoted in newspapers throughout the world and is a published author.

A former opponent of capital punishment, he has written and granted interviews about, testified on and debated the subject of the death penalty, extensively and internationally.

Pro death penalty sites

homicidesurvivors.com/categories/Dudley%20Sharp%20-%20Justice%20Matters.aspx

www.dpinfo.com
www.cjlf.org/deathpenalty/DPinformation.htm
www.clarkprosecutor.org/html/links/dplinks.htm
www.coastda.com/archives.html see Death Penalty
www.lexingtonprosecutor.com/death_penalty_debate.htm
www.prodeathpenalty.com
http://yesdeathpenalty.googlepages.com/home2 (Sweden)
www.wesleylowe.com/cp.html

A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps!

Jane Pierson

From: Sharpjfa@aol.com
Sent: Friday, March 06, 2009 10:53 AM
To: catholicanchor@gci.net
Subject: The Death Penalty Provides More Protection for Innocents

The Death Penalty Provides More Protection for Innocents
Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters, contact info below

Often, the death penalty dialogue gravitates to the subject of innocents at risk of execution. Seldom is a more common problem reviewed. That is, how innocents are more at risk without the death penalty.

Enhanced Due Process

No knowledgeable and honest party questions that the death penalty has the most extensive due process protections in US criminal law.

Therefore, actual innocents are more likely to be sentenced to life imprisonment and more likely to die in prison serving under that sentence, that it is that an actual innocent will be executed.

That is. logically, conclusive.

Enhanced Incapacitation

To state the blatantly clear, living murderers, in prison, after release or escape, are much more likely to harm and murder, again, than are executed murderers.

Although an obvious truism, it is surprising how often folks overlook the enhanced incapacitation benefits of the death penalty over incarceration.

There are a few absolutes when it comes to Life Without Parole. The legislature can lessen sentences, retroactively, and the executive branch can lessen any individual sentence.

Enhanced Deterrence

16 recent studies, inclusive of their defenses, find for death penalty deterrence.

A surprise? No.

Life is preferred over death. Death is feared more than life.

Some believe that all studies with contrary findings negate those 16 studies. They don't. Studies which don't find for deterrence don't say no one is deterred, but that they couldn't measure those deterred.

What prospect of a negative outcome doesn't deter some? There isn't one . . . although committed anti death penalty folk may say the death penalty is the only one.

However, the premier anti death penalty scholar accepts it as a given that the death penalty is a deterrent, but does not believe it to be a greater deterrent than a life sentence. Yet, the evidence is compelling and un refuted that death is feared more than life.

Enhanced Fear

Some death penalty opponents argue against death penalty deterrence, stating that it's a harsher penalty to be locked up without any possibility of getting out.

Reality paints a very different picture.

What percentage of capital murderers seek a plea bargain to a death sentence? Zero or close to it. They prefer long term imprisonment.

What percentage of convicted capital murderers argue for execution in the penalty phase of their capital trial? Zero or close to it. They prefer long term imprisonment.

What percentage of death row inmates waive their appeals and speed up the execution process? Nearly zero. They prefer long term imprisonment.

This is not, even remotely, in dispute.

What of that more rational group, the potential murderers who choose not to murder, is it likely that they, like most of us, fear death more than life?

Life is preferred over death. Death is feared more than life.

Furthermore, history tells us that lifers have many ways to get out: Pardon, commutation, escape, clerical error, change in the law, etc.

In choosing to end the death penalty, or in choosing not implement it, some have chosen to spare murderers at the cost of sacrificing more innocent lives.

Furthermore, possibly we have sentenced 25 actually innocent people to death since 1973, or 0.3% of those so sentenced. Those have all been released upon post conviction review. The anti death penalty claims, that the numbers are significantly higher, are a fraud, easily discoverable by fact checking.

The innocents deception of death penalty opponents has been getting exposure for many years. Even the behemoth of anti death penalty newspapers, The New York Times, has recognized that deception.

To be sure, 30 or 40 categorically innocent people have been released from death row . . . (1) This when death penalty opponents were claiming the release of 119 "innocents" from death row. Death penalty opponents never required actual innocence in order for cases to be added to their "exonerated" or "innocents" list. They simply invented their own definitions for exonerated and innocent and deceptively shoe horned large numbers of inmates into those definitions - something easily discovered with fact checking.

There is no proof of an innocent executed in the US, at least since 1900.

If we accept that the best predictor of future performance is past performance, we can, reasonably, conclude that the DNA cases will be excluded prior to trial, and that for the next 8000 death sentences, that we will experience a 99.8% accuracy rate in actual guilt convictions. This improved accuracy rate does not include the many additional safeguards that have been added to the system, over and above DNA testing.

Of all the government programs in the world, that put innocents at risk, is there one with a safer record and with greater protections than the US death penalty?

Unlikely.

Full report -All Innocence Issues: The Death Penalty, upon request.

Full report - The Death Penalty as a Deterrent, upon request

(1) The Death of Innocents: A Reasonable Doubt,
New York Times Book Review, p 29, 1/23/05, Adam Liptak, national legal correspondent for The NY Times

copyright 2007-2009, Dudley Sharp
Permission for distribution of this document, in whole or in part, is approved with proper attribution.

Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters
e-mail sharpjfa@aol.com 713-622-5491,
Houston, Texas

Mr. Sharp has appeared on ABC, BBC, CBS, CNN, C-SPAN, FOX, NBC, NPR, PBS, VOA and many other TV and radio networks, on such programs as Nightline, The News Hour with Jim Lehrer, The O'Reilly Factor, etc., has been quoted in newspapers throughout the world and is a published author.

A former opponent of capital punishment, he has written and granted interviews about, testified on and debated the subject of the death penalty, extensively and internationally.

Pro death penalty sites

http://homicidesurvivors.com/categories/Dudley%20Sharp%20-%20Justice%20Matters.aspx

www.dpinfo.comwww.cjlf.org/deathpenalty/DPinformation.htm
www.clarkprosecutor.org/html/links/dplinks.htm
www.coastda.com/archives.html
www.lexingtonprosecutor.com/death_penalty_debate.htm
www.prodeathpenalty.com
http://yesdeathpenalty.googlepages.com/home2 (Sweden) www.wesleylowe.com/cp.html

A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps!

Jane Pierson

From: Sharpjfa@aol.com
Sent: Friday, March 06, 2009 10:54 AM
To: catholicanchor@gci.net
Subject: Catholic Scholars: Support for the Death Penalty

Catholic Scholars: Support for the Death Penalty
Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters, contact info below

There are thoughtful writings on both sides of this debate, but the pro death penalty position is much stronger.

Recently deceased Avery Cardinal Dulles, in one of his final interviews, states that he thought the Church may return to a "more traditional posture" on the death penalty. "Recent popes, Dulles conceded, beginning with John XXIIII, seem to have taken quasi-abolitionist positions on both matters. Yet used sparingly and with safeguards to protect the interests of justice, Dulles argued, both the death penalty and war have, over the centuries, been recognized by the church as legitimate, sometimes even obligatory, exercises of state power. The momentum of "internal solidification," he said, may lead to some reconsideration of these social teachings." ("An unpublished interview with Avery Dulles", All Things Catholic by John L. Allen, Jr., NCRcafe.org, Posted on Dec 19, 2008, at http://ncrcafe.org/node/2340)

Based upon the strength of the Catholic biblical, theological and traditional support for the death penalty as, partially, revealed, below, I think the Church will have to.

Even today, a Catholic in good standing can call for more executions, if their prudential judgements finds for that.

(1) "Capital Punishment: New Testament Teaching", 1998, Fr. John A. Hardon, S.J., considered one of the most prominent Roman Catholic theologians of the 20th century. See bottom.http://www.therealpresence.org/archives/Sacred_Scripture/Sacred_Scripture_014.htm

"There are certain moral norms that have always and everywhere been held by the successors of the Apostles in communion with the Bishop of Rome. Although never formally defined, they are irreversibly binding on the followers of Christ until the end of the world." "Such moral truths are the grave sinfulness of contraception and direct abortion. Such, too, is the Catholic doctrine which defends the imposition of the death penalty."

"Most of the Church's teaching, especially in the moral order, is infallible doctrine because it belongs to what we call her ordinary universal magisterium."

"Equally important is the Pope's (Pius XII) insistence that capital punishment is morally defensible in every age and culture of Christianity." " . . . the Church's teaching on 'the coercive power of legitimate human authority' is based on 'the sources of revelation and traditional doctrine.' It is wrong, therefore 'to say that these sources only contain ideas which are conditioned by historical circumstances.' On the contrary, they have 'a general and abiding validity.' (Acta Apostolicae Sedis, 1955, pp 81-2)."

about Fr. John A. Hardon, S.J.
http://www.mariancatechist.com/html/general/stjohnhardon.htmhttp://www.therealpresence.o

(2) "The Death Penalty", by Romano Amerio, a faithful Catholic Vatican insider, scholar, professor at the Academy of Lugano, consultant to the Preparatory Commission of Vatican II, and a peritus (expert theologian) at the Council.

http://www.domid.blogspot.com/2007/05/amerio-on-capital-punishment.html

"Amerio has the great gift of going to the heart of a subject in a few lines and very neatly distinguishes genuine Catholicism from imitations and aberrations." "What makes Amerio's analysis unique is that he restricts himself to official and semi-official pronouncements by popes, cardinals, bishops, episcopal conferences and articles in L'Osservatore Romano, from the time of Pope John XXIII to 1985 when the book was originally written." (1)

titled "Amerio on capital punishment ", Chapter XXVI, 187. The death penalty, from the book Iota Unum, May 25, 2007

About Romano Ameriohttp://chiesa.espresso.repubblica.it/articolo/176565?eng=yhttp://www.newliturgicalmovement.org/2006/02/romano-amerio-and-pope-benedict.htmlhttp://www.latin-mass-society.org/2007/romanoamerio.htmlhttp://www.angeluspress.org/oscatalog/item/6700/iota-unum

(3) "Christian Scholars & Saints: Support for the Death Penalty", at http://www.homicidesurvivors.com/2006/10/12/catholic-and-other-christian-references-support-for-the-death-penalty.aspx

(4) "Capital Punishment: A Catholic Perspective",
by Br. Augustine (Emmanuel Valenza)
http://www.sspx.org/against_the_sound_bites/capital_punishment.htm

(5) "Capital Punishment: The Case for Justice", Prof. J. Budziszewski, First Things, August / September 2004 http://www.orthodoxytoday.org/articles4/BudziszewskiPunishment.shtml

(6) "The Death Penalty", by Solange Strong Hertz at http://www.ourworld.compuserve.com/HOMEPAGES/REMNANT/death2.htm

(7) "A Seamless Garment In a Sinful World" by John R. Connery, S. J., America, 7/14/84, p 5-8).

(8) "God's Justice and Ours" by US Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia, First Things, 5/2002
http://www.firstthings.com/article.php3?id_article=2022

(9) Forgotten Truths: "Is The Church Against Abortion and The Death Penalty"
by Luiz Sergio Solimeo, Crusade Magazine, p14-16, May/June 2007
http://www.tfp.org/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=957

(10) "The Purpose of Punishment (in the Catholic tradition)",
by R. Michael Dunningan, J.D., J.C.L., CHRISTIFIDELIS, Vol.21,No.4, sept 14, 2003
http://www.st-joseph-foundation.org/newsletter/lead.php?document=2003/21-4

(11) "MOST CATHOLICS OPPOSE CAPITAL PUNISHMENT?",
KARL KEATING'S E-LETTER, Catholic Answers, March 2, 2004
http://www.catholic.com/newsletters/kke_040302.asp

(12) "THOUGHTS ON THE BISHOPS' MEETING: NOWADAYS, VOTERS IGNORE BISHOPS", KARL KEATING'S E-LETTER, Catholic Answers,, Nov. 22, 2005
http://www.catholic.com/newsletters/kke_051122.asp

Christian, non Catholic Scholars

(13) Chapter V:The Sanctity of Life, "Principles of Conduct: Aspects of Biblical Ethics" By John Murray
http://books.google.com/books?id=phoqAAaGMpUC&pg=PA107&lpg=PA114&ots=mFvByHqGSy&dq=Murray+%22It+is+the+sanctity+of+human+life+that+underlies+the+sixth+commandment.%22&ie=ISO-8859-1&output=html&sig=ACfU3U1bomdM3BfpNSXnhrwFYXaE_9Ij9A

(14) "Capital Punishment: What the Bible Says", Dr. Lloyd R. Bailey, Abingdon Press, 1987. The definitive biblical review of the death penalty.

(15) "Why I Support Capital Punishment", by Andrew Tallman
sections 7-11 biblical review, sections 1-6 secular review
http://andrewtallmanshowarticles.blogspot.com/search?q=Capital+punishment

---
Religious positions in favor of capital punishment are neither necessary not needed to justify that sanction. However, the biblical and theological record is very supportive of the death penalty.

Many of the current religious campaigns against the death penalty reflect a fairly standard anti death penalty message, routed in secular arguments. When they do address religious issues, they often neglect solid theological foundations, choosing, instead, select biblical sound bites which do not impact the solid basis of death penalty support.

Footnotes:
(1) Books: 'Iota Unum: A Study of Changes in the Catholic Church', by Romano Amerio, Fr Peter Joseph (reviewer)
IOTA UNUM: A Study of Changes in the Catholic Church in the 20th Century
by Romano Amerio (English translation by Fr John Parsons)
(Sarto House, USA, 786 pp)
Reprinted from AD2000 Vol 9 No 8 (September 1996), p. 14

70% of Catholics supported the death penalty as of May, 2005, Gallup Poll, Moral Values and Beliefs. The May 2-5, 2005 poll also found that 74% of Americans favor the death penalty for murderers, while 23% oppose.

copyright 1999-2009 Dudley Sharp
Permission for distribution of this document, in whole or in part, is approved with proper attribution.

Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters
e-mail sharpjfa@aol.com, 713-622-5491,
Houston, Texas

Mr. Sharp has appeared on ABC, BBC, CBS, CNN, C-SPAN, FOX, NBC, NPR, PBS , VOA and many other TV and radio networks, on such programs as Nightline, The News Hour with Jim Lehrer, The O'Reilly Factor, etc., has been quoted in newspapers throughout the world and is a published author.

A former opponent of capital punishment, he has written and granted interviews about, testified on and debated the subject of the death penalty, extensively and internationally

Pro death penalty sites

homicidesurvivors.com/categories/Dudley%20Sharp%20-%20Justice%20Matters.aspx

www.dpinfo.com
www.cjlf.org/deathpenalty/DPinformation.htm
www.clarkprosecutor.org/html/links/dplinks.htm
www.coastda.com/archives.html see Death Penalty
www.lexingtonprosecutor.com/death_penalty_debate.htm
www.prodeathpenalty.com
http://yesdeathpenalty.googlepages.com/home2 (Sweden)
www.wesleylowe.com/cp.html

A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps!

Jane Pierson

From: Sharpjfa@aol.com
Sent: Friday, March 20, 2009 7:56 AM
Subject: Rebuttal of Gov. Richardson - New Mexico Repeal

To: Governors, Legislatures, Attorneys General & Media throughout the US

From: Dudley Sharp, contact info below

SETTING THE RECORD STRAIGHT: A Rebuttal to Governor Richardson
Repeal of the Death Penalty in New Mexico
Dudley Sharp, contact info below

1) Gov. Bill Richardson states: "Faced with the reality that our system for imposing the death penalty can never be perfect, my conscience compels me to replace the death penalty with a solution that keeps society safe." (1)

REBUTTAL: There is no proof of an innocent executed in the US since 1900. There is overwhelming proof that many thousands of innocents have been murdered because of the lack of perfection in parole, probation, early release, prison/jail management etc.

Why did the Governor choose to end that criminal justice practice - the death penalty - which may be the least likely to result in innocent deaths?

Lack of perfection had nothing to do with his decision.

In addition, the death penalty protects innocents at a higher level than does a life sentence. (FOOTNOTE: "Death penalty repeal arguments are false" paragraph 2 & 3).

No one disputes that the death penalty has greater due process than lesser sentences - meaning that actual innocents, serving life, are more likely to die in prison than are actual innocents likely to be executed.

2) Governor Richardson stated: "The bill I am signing today .. . replaces the death penalty with true life without the possibility of parole – a sentence that ensures violent criminals are locked away from society forever .. . ." . (1)

REBUTTAL: Governor Richardson knows that there is no such thing as true life without "possibility" of parole.

The only absolute with sentencing is that the executive branch, a Governor or President, can commute any sentence and release criminals, early - as Governor Richardson did, in Nov. 2004, when he commuted Janet Vigil's "life" case. (2)

How quickly he "forgot".

Gov. Richardson's buddy, former New Mexico Gov. Toney Anaya, commuted William Wayne Gilbert's death sentence in 1986.

Gilbert led a 7 inmate prison escape, a few months later, where Gilbert shot a guard. (3)

Gilbert had previously murdered " . . . his wife, Carol; a newlywed couple, Kenn and Noel Johnson, and a young model, Barbara McMullen. He bragged of other murders, as well. 'It was very easy to kill," he said. "It's almost like it's the night before Christmas when you're 5 years old.' "

Hardly a great candidate for commutation. But, this commutation wasn't about the criminal or about the citizens of New Mexico. It was all about Gov. Anaya. His commutations of all death row, had nothing to do with allegations of protecting innocents - it did just the opposite, of course - he just didn't like the death penalty and he takes no responsibility for the outcome.

In addition, legislatures can write new laws which, retroactively, reduce sentences already given.

Gov. Richardson is aware that states around the US are, now, doing just that, as more consider reducing life sentences to save money by releasing lifers, early.

3) The Governor stated: "More than 130 death row inmates have been exonerated in the past 10 years in this country, including four New Mexicans – a fact I cannot ignore." (1)

REBUTTAL: The Governor has been informed, repeatedly, that the 130 exonerated is a complete fraud, as has been well documented by many and presented to the Governor, often (FOOTNOTE, paragraph 3). Not only is he not ignoring this deception, he is advancing it, even when it is so easy to disprove. Governor, how many innocents were harmed and murdered because of the lack of perfection in parole, probation, early release, prison/jail management etc.?

---

4) What about law enforcements' concerns?

"The New Mexico Sheriffs' and Police Association opposed repeal, saying capital punishment deters violence against police officers, jailers and prison guards. District attorneys also opposed the legislation, arguing that the death penalty was a useful prosecutorial tool." (4)

They told the Governor that the death penalty saves lives and helped solve cases.

The Governor conceded that "the death penalty may be a deterrent"(1), thereby telling us that the death penalty is more likely to save innocent lives than it is to take them.

He also conceded that by repealing the death penalty he was taken away a tool for law enforcement. (1) He didn't speculate how many innocent lives he was sacrificing by ending that tool.

We may never know why he really ended the death penalty. We do know that it had nothing to do with saving innocent lives.

"Bernalillo County Sheriff Darren White said law enforcement officers have 'lost a layer of protection and it's a sad day in New Mexico.' " (4)

(1) Gov. Bill Richardson's statement on signing the repeal of New Mexico's death penalty (3/18/09)

(2) " In Loving Memory of Estevan Vigil", http://www.nmsoh.org/vigil_estevan_mem.htm

(3) "Let Loose by the Governor", The Justice Story, The New York Daily News, 3/11/07 http://www.nydailynews.com/news/ny_crime/2007/03/11/2007-03-11_let_loose_by_the_governor.html

(4) "New Mexico governor signs measure to abolish death penalty" DEBORAH BAKER, Associated Press Writer, Originally published Wednesday, March 18, 2009 at 5:21 PM

FOOTNOTE: "Death penalty repeal arguments are false"

In a message dated 3/17/2009 4:37:39 P.M. Central Daylight Time, Sharpjfa writes:

To: Governor Richardson, staff and cabinet and Corrections Department and Police Agencies and media throughout New Mexico

From: Dudley Sharp, contact info, below

Dear Honorable Governor Richardson:

In addition to all of the pro-repeal arguments being weak or false (see below), the death penalty should remain as the just sanction for some of the worst crimes.

JUSTICE: The death penalty should remain in New Mexico because of justice. New Mexico is currently investigating serial murders which, to date, have reached 14 victims. Leave the death penalty option up to New Mexico jurors, for such cases as this, as well as the rape/murder of children and the murder of police officers and correction workers and other crimes.

1) COST SAVINGS

The LFC fiscal evaluation wrongly found the North Carolina death penalty more expensive than a 20 year "life" sentence. It wasn't. The was the only study cited (1)

Reasonable and responsible protocols, currently in use, will produce a death penalty which will cost less or no more than LWOP. (2)

Example: Virginia executes in 5-7 years; 65% of those sentenced to death have been executed; 15% of their death penalty cases are overturned. With the high costs of long term imprisonment, a true life sentence will be more expensive than such a death penalty protocol. (2)

Most cost studies suffer from major problems, such as a) not crediting the death penalty for allowing plea bargains to a true life sentence ($300,000 to $1 million savings or more, for each plea); 2) not including geriatric care for life sentences (cost of $60,000-$90,000/year/inmate); c) deceptively inflating costs of executions, based upon putting all the costs of every death penalty case into those executed (see Florida); d) many more such problems, or even worse. (2)

2) MORE PROTECTION FOR INNOCENTS

Of all the government programs in the world, that put innocents at risk, is there one with a safer record and with greater protections than the US death penalty? Unlikely.

Innocents are more protected because of enhanced due process, enhanced incapacitation and enhanced deterrence. (3)

Anti death penalty folks claim that 130 "innocents" have been released from death row, nationally. Fact checking easily uncovers this as a scam. Study reviews have found that 70-83% of those claims are not credible. Possibly 25 "actual" innocents have been identified and released from death row. (4)

There is no proof of an innocent executed in the US, at least since 1900.

There is overwhelming proof that living murderers harm and murder, again. Executed ones don't.

3) 16 recent studies find for DETERRENCE

16 recent studies, inclusive of their defenses, find for death penalty deterrence. No surprise. Life is preferred over death, death is feared more than life. (5)

There is a constant within all jurisdictions -- negative consequences will always deter some - a truism.

NOTE: Repeal proponents bring up that many death penalty states have higher murder rates than non death penalty states. That has nothing to do with the deterrent effect failing, as fully explained to them and you in a previous email. (6)

Whether a jurisdiction has high murder rates or low ones, rather rising or lowering rates, the presence of the death penalty will produce fewer net murders, the absence of the death penalty will produce more net murders.

An analogy. Consider smoking. Whether a jurisdiction has high smoking rates or low ones, or rising or lowering rates, the knowledge of medical problems from smoking will produce fewer net smokers, the absence of any medical problems from smoking would produce more net smokers.

4. STRONG PUBLIC SUPPORT

80% death penalty support, for specific capital murders, such as mass murder, serial murders, rape/murders, terrorism, etc. (6)

-- 82% in the US favor executing Saddam Hussein, In Great Britain: 69%, France: 58%, Germany: 53%, Spain: 51%, Italy: 46%. , Le Monde (France) , 12/06
-- 81% support Timothy McVeigh's execution - "the consensus of all major groups, including men, women, whites, nonwhites, "liberals" and "conservatives." 16% oppose (Gallup 5/2/01).

-- 85% of liberal Connecticut supported serial/rapist murderer Michael Ross' "voluntary" execution. (Quinnipiac 1/12/05)
-- 79% support death penalty for terrorists (4/26/2007 New York State poll)
-- 78% of Nebraskans support death penalty for "heinous crimes." 16% opposed. 76% opposed legislation to abolish. MPB Public Affairs Poll, 2/14/08)

Most quoted polls wrongly poll for murder, not capital murders. The death penalty is only an option in capital cases. Possibly, 10% of all murder cases are death eligible. Those are the only cases relevant to death penalty polling.

5) THE LEAST ARBITARY PUNISHMENT

The US death penalty is likely the least arbitrary and capricious criminal sanctions in the US. About 60,000 murders qualified for a death penalty eligible trial, since 1973. 8000 murderers were so sentenced or 13% of those eligible. Based upon pre trial, trial, appellate and clemency/commutation realities and that high percentage (13%) of receiving the maximum sentence (absent mandatory sentences) the death penalty must be the least arbitrary and capricious sanction.

Permission for distribution of this document, in whole or in part, is approved with proper attribution.

Respectfully submitted, Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters
e-mail sharpjfa@aol.com, 713-622-5491,
Houston, Texas

Mr. Sharp has appeared on ABC, BBC, CBC, CBS, CNN, C-SPAN, FOX, NBC, NPR, PBS , VOA and many other TV and radio networks, on such programs as Nightline, The News Hour with Jim Lehrer, The O'Reilly Factor, etc., has been quoted in newspapers throughout the world and is a published author.

A former opponent of capital punishment, he has written and granted interviews about, testified on and debated the subject of the death penalty, extensively and internationally

1) "LFC Fiscal Error: Death Penalty Repeal - For Senate Judiciary Committee Record" email to Senate, 3/9/2009 6:11:28 P.M. Central Daylight Time
2) "Cost Savings: The Death Penalty: For Senate Judiciary Committee Record", email to Senate, 3/9/2009 4:45:21 P.M. Central Daylight Time
3) "Death Penalty: More Protection for Innocents" NM, email to Governor Richardson, legislature and media, 3/4/2009 2:49:23 P.M. Central Daylight Time
4) "The death row 130 "innocents" scam" NM, email to Governor Richardson, legislature and media, 3/4/2009 1:36:11 P.M. Central Standard Time
5) "The Death Penalty is a Deterrent - 16 Recent Studies", NM, email to Governor Richardson, legislature and media on 3/4/2009 1:31:35 P.M. Central Daylight Time
6) "Death Penalty and Deterrence: Let's be clear" NM, email to Governor Richardson, legislators and media on 3/4/2009 1:52:09 P.M. Central Standard Time

---

A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps!

Dana Strommen

From: Sharpjfa@aol.com
Sent: Monday, March 23, 2009 9:20 AM
Subject: Death Penalty, Deterrence & Murder Rates: Let's be clear

To: Governors. Legislators, Attorneys General and Media throughout the US

From: Dudley Sharp, Contact info below

Death Penalty, Deterrence & Murder Rates: Let's be clear
by Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters, 0309

There is a constant within all jurisdictions -- negative consequences will always deter some. Whether a jurisdiction with high murder rates or low ones, rather rising or lowering rates, the presence of the death penalty will produce fewer net murders, the absence of the death penalty will produce more net murders.
In their story, "States With No Death Penalty Share Lower Homicide Rates", The New York Times did their best to illustrate that the death penalty was not a deterrent, by showing that the average murder rate in death penalty states was higher than the average rate in non death penalty states and, it is. (1)

What the Times failed to observe is that their own study confirmed that you can't simply compare those averages to make that determination regarding deterrence.

As one observer stated: "The Times story does nothing more than repeat the dumbest of all dumb mistakes — taking the murder rate in a traditionally high-homicide state with capital punishment (like Texas) and comparing it to a traditionally low-homicide state with no death penalty (like North Dakota) and concluding that the death penalty doesn't work at all. Even this comparison doesn't work so well. The Times own graph shows Texas, where murder rates were 40 percent above Michigan's in 1991, has now fallen below Michigan . . .". (2)

Within the Times article, Michigan Governor John Engler states, "I think Michigan made a wise decision 150 years ago," referring to the state's abolition of the death penalty in 1846. "We're pretty proud of the fact that we don't have the death penalty."(3)

Even though easily observed on the Times' own graphics, they failed to mention the obvious. Michigan's murder rate is near or above that of 31 of the US's 38 death penalty states. And then, it should be recognized that Washington, DC (not found within the Times study) and Detroit, Michigan, two non death penalty jurisdictions, have been perennial leaders in murder and violent crime rates for the past 30 years. Delaware, a jurisdiction similar in size to them, leads the nation in executions per murder, but has significantly lower rates of murders and violent crime than do either DC or Detroit, during that same period.

Obviously, the Times study and any other simple comparison of jurisdictions with and without the death penalty, means little, with regard to deterrence.

Also revealed within the Times study, but not pointed out by them,: "One-third of the nation's executions take place in Texas—and the steepest decline in homicides has occurred in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas, which together account for nearly half the nation's executions." (4)

And, the Times also failed to mention that the major US jurisdiction with the most executions is Harris County (Houston, Texas), which has seen a 73% decrease in murder rates since resuming executions in 1982 -- possibly the largest reduction for a major metropolitan area since that time.

Also omitted from the Times review, although they had the data, is that during a virtual cessation of executions, from 1966-1980, that murders more than doubled in the US. Any other rise and fall in murders, after that time, has been only a fraction of that change, indicating a strong and direct correlation between the lack of executions and the dramatic increase in murders, if that is specifically what you are looking for.

If deterrence was measured by direct correlation's between execution, or the lack thereof, and murder rates, as implied by the Times article, and as wrongly assumed by those blindly accepting that model, then there would be no debate, only more confusion. Which may have been the Times' goal.

Let's take a look at the science.

Some non death penalty jurisdictions, such as South Africa and Mexico lead the world in murder and violent crime rates. But then some non death penalty jurisdictions, such as Sweden, have quite low rates. Then there are such death penalty jurisdictions as Japan and Singapore which have low rates of such crime. But then other death penalty jurisdictions, such as Rwanda and Louisiana, that have high rates.

To which an astute observer will respond: But socially, culturally, geographically, legally, historically and many other ways, all of those jurisdictions are very different. Exactly, a simple comparison of only execution rates and murder rates cannot tell the tale of deterrence. And within the US, between states, there exist many variables which will effect the rates of homicides.

See REVIEW, below

And, as so well illustrated by the Times graphics, a non death penalty state, such as Michigan has high murder rates and another non death penalty state, such as North Dakota, has low murder rates and then there are death penalty states, such as Louisiana, with high murder rates and death penalty states, such South Dakota, with low rates. Apparently, unbeknownst to the Times, but quite obvious to any neutral observer, there are other factors at play here, not just the presence or absence of the death penalty. Most thinking folks already knew that.

As Economics Professor Ehrlich stated in the Times piece and, as accepted by all knowledgeable parties, there are many factors involved in such evaluations. That is why there is a wide variation of crime rates both within and between some death penalty and non death penalty jurisdictions, and small variations within and between others. Any direct comparison of only execution rates and only murder rates, to determine deterrence, would reflect either ignorance or deception.

Ehrlich called the Times study "a throwback to the vintage 1960s statistical analyses done by criminologists who compared murder rates in neighboring states where capital punishment was either legal or illegal." "The statistics involved in such comparisons have long been recognized as devoid of scientific merit." He called the Times story a "one sided affair" devoid of merit. Most interesting is that Ehrlich was interviewed by the Time's writer, Fessenden, who asked Ehrlich to comment on the results before the story was published. Somehow Ehrlich's overwhelming criticisms were left out of the article.

Ehrlich also referred Fessenden to some professors who produced the recently released Emory study. Emory Economics department head, Prof. Deshbakhsh "says he was contacted by Fessenden, and he indicated to the Times reporter that the study suggested a very strong deterrent effect of capital punishment." Somehow,
Fessenden's left that out of the Times story, as well. (5).

An analogy. Consider smoking. Whether a jurisdiction has high smoking rates or low ones, rather rising or lowering rates, the knowledge of medical problems from smoking will produce fewer net smokers, the absence of any medical problems from smoking would produce more net smokers.

It is the same for all prospects of a negative outcome - they all deter some.

Maybe the Times will be a bit more thoughtful, next time.

REVIEW

"The List: Murder Capitals of the World", 09/08, Foreign Policy Magazine
Capital punishment (cp) or not (ncp)
murder rates/100,000 population

4 out of the top 5 do not have the death penalty

1. Caracas (ncp), Venezuela 130-160
Bad policing.
2. New Orleans (cp), La, USA 69-95
Variable because of different counts in surging population. Drug related.
Nos 2 & 3 in US, Detroit (ncp), 46 and Baltimore (cp), 45.
3. Cape Town (ncp), South Africa 62
Most crimes with people who know each other.
4. Port Mores (ncp), Papua New Guinea 54
Chinese gangs, corrupt policing
5. Moscow (ncp), Russia 9.6
various

Of the Top 10 Countries With Lowest Murder Rates (1), 7 have the death penalty

O f the Top 10 Countries With Highest Murder Rates (2), 5 have the death penalty

Top 10 Countries With Lowest Murder Rates

Iceland 0.00 ncp
Senegal 0.33 ncp
Burkina Faso 0.38 cp
Cameroon 0.38 cp
Finland 0.71 ncp
Gambia 0.71 cp
Mali 0.71 cp
Saudi Arabia 0.71 cp
Mauritania 0.76 cp
Oman cp

Top 10 Countries With Highest Murder Rates
Honduras 154.02 ncp
South Africa 121.91 ncp
Swaziland 93.32 cp
Colombia 69.98 ncp
Lesotho 50.41 cp
Rwanda 45.08 ncp
Jamaica 37.21 cp
El. Salvador 36.88 cp
Venezuela 33.20 ncp
Bolivia 31.98 cp

(1) http://www.mapsofworld.com/world-top-ten/countries-with-lowest-murder-rates.html no date

(2) http://www.mapsofworld.com/world-top-ten/countries-with-highest-murder-rates.html no date

FOOTNOTES

1) "States With No Death Penalty Share Lower Homicide Rates", The New York Times 9/22/00 located at www (dot) nytimes.com/2000/09/22/national/22STUD.html and www (dot) nytimes.com/2000/09/22/national/22DEAT.html
2) "Don't Know Much About Calculus: The (New York) Times flunks high-school math in death-penalty piece", William Tucker, National Review, 9/22/00, located at www (dot) nationalreview.com/comment/comment092200c.shtml
3) ibid, see footnote 11
4) "The Death Penalty Saves Lives", AIM Report, August 2000, located atwww (dot) aim.org/publications/aim_report/2000/08a.html
5) "NEW YORK TIMES UNDER FIRE AGAIN", Accuracy in Media, 10/16/00, go to www (dot) aim.org/

copyright 2000-2008 Dudley Sharp: Permission for distribution of this document, in whole or in part, is approved with proper attribution.

Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters
e-mail sharpjfa@aol.com, 713-622-5491,
Houston, Texas

Mr. Sharp has appeared on ABC, BBC, CBS, CNN, C-SPAN, FOX, NBC, NPR, PBS , VOA and many other TV and radio networks, on such programs as Nightline, The News Hour with Jim Lehrer, The O'Reilly Factor, etc., has been quoted in newspapers throughout the world and is a published author.

A former opponent of capital punishment, he has written and granted interviews about, testified on and debated the subject of the death penalty, extensively and internationally.

Pro death penalty sites

homicidesurvivors.com/categories/Dudley%20Sharp%20-%20Justice%20Matters.aspx

www.dpinfo.com
www.cjlf.org/deathpenalty/DPinformation.htm
www.clarkprosecutor.org/html/links/dplinks.htm
www.coastda.com/archives.html
www.lexingtonprosecutor.com/death_penalty_debate.htm
www.prodeathpenalty.com
yesdeathpenalty.googlepages.com/home2 (Sweden)
www.wesleylowe.com/cp.html

A Good Credit Score is 700 or Above. See yours in just 2 easy steps!

Dana Strommen

From: Sharpjfa@aol.com
Sent: Wednesday, March 25, 2009 4:38 AM
Subject: Support for the death penalty: A Brief

To: Governors. Legislators, Attorneys General and Media throughout the world

From: Dudley Sharp, Contact info below

Support for the death penalty: A Brief
Dudley Sharp, contact info below

Full review in FOOTNOTE

1) COST SAVINGS

Reasonable and responsible protocols, currently in use, will produce a death penalty which will cost less or no more than LWOP.

Example: Virginia executes in 5-7 years; 65% of those sentenced to death have been executed; 15% of their death penalty cases are overturned. With the high costs of long term imprisonment, a true life sentence will be more expensive than such a death penalty protocol.

Most cost studies suffer from major problems, such as a) not crediting the death penalty for allowing plea bargains to a true life sentence ($300,000 to $1 million savings or more, for each plea); 2) not including geriatric care for life sentences (cost of $60,000-$90, 000/year/inmate); c) deceptively inflating costs of executions, based upon putting all the costs of every death penalty case into those executed (see Florida); d) many more such, as the recent Maryland cost study have even worse problems.

2) MORE PROTECTION FOR INNOCENTS

Of all the government programs in the world, that put innocents at risk, is there one with a safer record and with greater protections than the US death penalty? Unlikely.

Innocents are more protected because of enhanced due process, enhanced incapacitation and enhanced deterrence.

Anti death penalty folks claims that 130 "innocents" have been released from death row, nationally. Fact checking easily uncovers this as a scam. Study reviews have found that 70-83% of those claims are not credible. Possibly 25 "actual" innocents have been identified and released from death row.

There is no proof of an innocent executed in the US, at least since 1900.

There is overwhelming proof that murderers murder, again.

3) DETERRENCE

16 recent studies, inclusive of their defenses, find for death penalty deterrence. No surprise. Life is preferred over death, death is feared more than life.

There is a constant within all jurisdictions -- negative consequences will always deter some - a trusim. Whether a jurisdiction has high murder rates or low ones, rather rising or lowering rates, the presence of the death penalty will produce fewer net murders, the absence of the death penalty will produce more net murders.

An analogy. Consider smoking. Whether a jurisdiction has high smoking rates or low ones, or rising or lowering rates, the knowledge of medical problems from smoking will produce fewer net smokers, the absence of any medical problems from smoking would produce more net smokers.

4. STRONG PUBLIC SUPPORT

80% death penalty support, for specific capital murders, such as mass murder, serial murders, rape/murders, terrorism, etc.

-- 82% in the US favor executing Saddam Hussein, In Great Britain: 69%, France: 58%, Germany: 53%, Spain: 51%, Italy: 46%. , Le Monde (France) , 12/06
-- 81% support Timothy McVeigh's execution - "the consensus of all major groups, including men, women, whites, nonwhites, "liberals" and "conservatives." 16% oppose (Gallup 5/2/01).

-- 85% of liberal Connecticut supported serial/rapist murderer Michael Ross' "voluntary" execution. (Quinnipiac 1/12/05)
-- 79% support death penalty for terrorists (4/26/2007 New York State poll)
-- 78% of Nebraskans support death penalty for "heinous crimes." 16% opposed. 76% opposed legislation to abolish. MPB Public Affairs Poll, 2/14/08)

Most quoted polls wrongly poll for murder, not capital murders. The death penalty is only an option in capital cases. Possibly, 10% of all murder cases are death eligible. Those are the only cases relevant to death penalty polling.

5) THE LEAST ARBITARY PUNISHMENT

The US death penalty is likely the least arbitrary and capricious criminal sanctions in the US. About 60,000 murders qualified for a death penalty eligible trial, since 1973. 8000 murderers were so sentenced or13% of those eligible. Based upon pre trial, trial, appellate and clemency/commutation realities and that high percentage (13%) of receiving the maximum sentence (absent mandatory sentences) the death penalty must be the least arbitrary and capricious sanction.

6) Review of any more topics upon request

Permission for distribution of this document, in whole or in part, is approved with proper attribution.

Dudley Sharp, Justice Matters
e-mail sharpjfa@aol.com, 713-622-5491,
Houston, Texas

Mr. Sharp has appeared on ABC, BBC, CBC, CBS, CNN, C-SPAN, FOX, NBC, NPR, PBS , VOA and many other TV and radio networks, on such programs as Nightline, The News Hour with Jim Lehrer, The O'Reilly Factor, etc., has been quoted in newspapers throughout the world and is a published author.

A former opponent of capital punishment, he has written and granted interviews about, testified on and debated the subject of the death penalty, extensively and internationally

Pro death penalty sites

FOOTNOTE: homicidesurvivors.com/categories/Dudley%20Sharp%20-%20Justice%20Matters.aspx

www.dpinfo.com
www.cjlf.org/deathpenalty/DPinformation.htm
www.clarkprosecutor.org/html/links/dplinks.htm
www.coastda.com/archives.html see Death Penalty
www.lexingtonprosecutor.com/death_penalty_debate.htm
www.prodeathpenalty.com
http://yesdeathpenalty.googlepages.com/home2 (Sweden)
www.wesleylowe.com/cp.html

Great Deals on Dell 15" Laptops - Starting at $479

HB 9

OPPOSITION

(FILE 4)

Resolution Adopted by the CCAR

Capital Punishment

Adopted by the CCAR at the 90th Annual Convention of the Central Conference of American Rabbis Phoenix, Arizona, March 26-29, 1979

In 1958 and again in 1960, the Central Conference of American Rabbis stated its opposition to all forms of capital punishment.

We reaffirm that position now. Nothing which we have observed during the intervening years has shaken our convictions that:

a. Both in concept and in practice, Jewish tradition found capital punishment repugnant, despite Biblical sanctions for it. For the past 2.000 years. with the rarest of exceptions, Jewish courts have refused to punish criminals by depriving them of their lives.

b. No evidence has been marshaled to indicate with any persuasiveness that capital punishment serves as a deterrent to crime.

c. We oppose capital punishment under all circumstances.

© 2007 Central Conference of American Rabbis
355 Lexington Avenue | New York, NY 10017 | (212) 972-3636 |
info@ccarnet.org
For questions or comments about this site email the webmaster:
webmaster@ccarnet.org

From: Rabbi Michael Oblath 2/19/09

AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION OF ALASKA
P. O. Box 201844
Anchorage, AK 99520
(907) 258-0044
(907) 258-0288 (fax)
WWW.AKCLU.ORG

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS
SUSAN WINGROVE, Anchorage
PRESIDENT

RICH CURTNER, Anchorage
VICE PRESIDENT

LLOYD EGGAN, Anchorage
TREASURER

TONY STRONG, Juneau
SECRETARY

WILLIE ANDERSON, Juneau
AFFIRMATIVE ACTION OFFICER

KIRSTEN BEY, Nome
JOJO DUCHARME, Anchorage
LISA FITZPATRICK, Anchorage
PAUL GRANT, Juneau
ANDREW HAAS, Homer
SCOTT HENDERSON, Anchorage
KATIE HURLEY, Wasilla
CONNIE OZER, Anchorage
GALEN PAINE, Sitka
JUNE PINNELL-STEVENS, Fairbanks
RICHARD SEIFERT, Fairbanks
NADINE WINTERS, Fairbanks

February 24, 2009

The Honorable Jay Ramras
Chair, House Judiciary Committee
Alaska State House of Representatives
State Capitol, Room 118
Juneau, AK 99801-1182

Via fax 907-465-2070 and email: Rep_Jay_Ramras@legis.state.ak.us

Re: Opposition to HB 9

Dear Chairman Ramras:

On behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) of Alaska and our thousands of members and activists throughout the state, as well as our Board of Directors and Staff, I am writing to express our strong opposition to House Bill 9 seeking to authorize capital punishment in the State of Alaska.

The American Civil Liberties Union of Alaska is a non-partisan organization which preserves and expands personal freedom through public advocacy. As a state affiliate of the national ACLU, we are part of the country's largest and preeminent civil liberties organization, which has been instrumental in shaping constitutional law at the state and federal levels. The ACLU of Alaska protects all Alaskans, with the mission of defending those rights guaranteed under the United States and Alaska Constitutions.

Capital Punishment Denies Civil Liberties

The death penalty is the ultimate denial of civil liberties. The ACLU opposes capital punishment as a clear violation of the United States Constitution's Eighth Amendment ban on cruel and unusual punishments. Capital punishment is routinely imposed based on wholly improper factors, such as race, class, or the quality of counsel. Its administration is fraught with error and results in the conviction and execution of the innocent. To date, 130 death-row inmates have been exonerated in the modern death penalty era.

Unequal justice is no justice at all.

As a State, Alaska has never had the death penalty, and we don't need it now.

Capital punishment is proven to be an unreliable and expensive means of punishment. It is – quite simply – a failed government program. The State of Alaska does not need to visit these failures on our citizens. In brief, capital punishment would:

- Do nothing to protect Alaskans from crime;
- Seriously harm the survivors of homicide victims; and
- Cost Alaska far more than life imprisonment without release.

The United States remains the only advanced Western democracy that fails to recognize capital punishment as a profound human rights violation and as a frightening abuse of government power. Our state does not need to take a step backwards and institute an archaic system whose time has passed.

Many Factually Innocent Persons Have Been Sentenced to Death

130 persons have been exonerated from death row in the last 35 years. These startling numbers establish the unreliability of the capital punishment process. Were Alaskans to institute the death penalty, we would essentially guarantee the wrongful imposition of the ultimate penal sanction.

A 2001 study by the Center for Wrongful Convictions at Northwestern Law School found that 86 innocent people were sentenced to death based on:

Eyewitness error - from confusion or faulty memory;

Government misconduct - by both the police and the prosecution;

Junk science - mishandled evidence or use of unqualified "experts;"

Snitch testimony - often given in exchange for a reduction in sentence;

False confessions - resulting from mental illness or retardation, as well as from police torture; or

Other causes – such as hearsay, questionable circumstantial evidence, etc.

No legislation can create a capital punishment system immune from these shortcomings.

A Columbia Law School study published in 2002, covered 23 years of capital cases and found an overall rate of prejudicial error in the American capital punishment system of 68%.

Death penalty proponents may argue that exonerations establish that the "system works." However, sadly, evidence shows the system has grievously failed:

> Cameron Willingham was executed in Texas in 2004 for arson and the murder of his three daughters. In 2004, the Chicago Tribune had fire experts review the case and in 2006, the Innocence Project had a different set of fire experts review Willingham's case. The experts for the Tribune and Innocence Project found that the science used is no longer valid and that the fire may have been accidental.
>
> Texas itself has hired an investigator to also look at the evidence in Willingham's case. Ernest Willis was exonerated from death row because the science used to convict him is no longer valid. This same science was used to convict and ultimately execute Willingham.
>
> Carlos DeLuna was executed in 1989. The Chicago Tribune also investigated his case. Another man confessed to the crime and there was not sufficient evidence that pointed to DeLuna as the killer.

Numerous Studies Establish the Racial Inequities in Imposition of the Death Penalty

Like the divisions in the Jim Crow South, the death penalty – to this day – continues to divide us by race and socioeconomic status. In 1976, the Supreme Court approved modern death penalty statutes that were supposed to ensure that death sentences were neither arbitrary nor discriminatory.

However, evidence from the past 33 years irrefutably establishes that capital punishment remains arbitrary and improperly linked to race and socioeconomic status. Very recent blue ribbon studies in California,[1] and Maryland,[2] reiterate empirical research from across the country that

---

[1] California Commission on the Fair Administration of Justice Report and Recommendations on the Administration of the Death Penalty in California, June 30, 2008. "Overall, controlling for all other predictor variables, they found all those who kill African Americans, regardless of the ethnicity or race of the perpetrator, are 59.3% less likely to be sentenced to death than those who kill non-Hispanic whites." Id. at 92. The report may be viewed at: http://www.ccfaj.org/documents/reports/dp/official/FINAL%20REPORT%20DEATH%20PENALTY.pdf.

consistently demonstrates: a defendant who kills a white person is far more likely to receive the death penalty than a defendant who kills a person of color; and the racial configuration most likely to result in a death sentence is a black-on-white crime. Similarly, this research demonstrates that defendants whose victims are high in socioeconomic status face a significantly higher risk of execution.

It is important to note, that the death penalty's racial and socioeconomic bias persists despite the best efforts of legislators and judges to erect fair and equitable capital punishment procedures. This bias sends the clear and morally repugnant message that society values wealthy victims more than poor and middle class victims, and white victims more than victims of color. Current statistics in the State of Alaska establish that our Alaska Native population and communities of color are disproportionately represented in the criminal justice system. This fact alone should be sufficient to establish that we must not introduce a flawed and racially inequitable capital punishment system into our State.

Finally, capital punishment is harmful to people of color and poor people for another reason: the death penalty aggressively consumes scarce state resources upon which many poor people and people of color depend. In cities across the country, prosecuting death penalty cases has left prosecutors' offices in dire financial straits. In New Orleans, for example, the prosecutor's office filed for bankruptcy after being held civilly liable for wrongfully sentencing to death an innocent man. Every dollar spent on the death penalty is one dollar unavailable for community policing and other measures to make poor or at-risk communities safer.

Maintaining a Capital Punishment System is Significantly More Expensive than Life Without the Possibility of Parole

Several states have released studies which demonstrate how expensive it is to continue capital punishment. Maryland's Commission on Capital Punishment reported that death penalty cases cost about $1.9 million dollars more per case than non-capital cases. Studies in California, New Jersey, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Washington have reached similar conclusions.

The fiscal notes to HB 9 demonstrate that Alaska would be faced with a similar unjustifiable economic burden.

---

[2] Maryland Commission on Capital Punishment, Final Report to the General Assembly, December 12, 2008. "Finding: Racial disparities exist in Maryland's capital sentencing system. While there is no evidence of purposeful discrimination, the statistics examined from death penalty cases from 1978 to 1999 demonstrate racial disparities when the factors of the race of the defendant and the race of the victim are combined. (Results of Commission Vote on Finding: AGREE = 20; DISAGREE = 1)." Id. at 10. The report may be viewed at: http://goccp.org/capital-punishment/documents/death-penalty-commission-final-report.pdf.

And testimony by State of Alaska agency representatives to this Committee has shown, the cost is not just for indigent defense necessary to attempt to meet constitutional mandates which have ineffectively sought to address the unfair and arbitrary nature of capital punishment. Death penalty cases exhaust the resources of prosecutor's offices as well. Those resources should be put to better use.

Capital Punishment Has No Deterrent Effect

Simply put: there are no studies that show conclusively that the death penalty deters murder. Testimony to this Committee has acknowledged that fact.

Since 1977 over 80% of all executions have occurred in the South, the region with the highest murder rate. The Northeast, the region with the lowest murder rate, has accounted for less than 1% of the executions. Although the issue of deterrence has been studied extensively, there is no credible evidence that capital punishment deters murder or makes us any safer.

Introducing the Death Penalty into Alaska
Would Put Our State on the Wrong Side of History

Civil societies understand the inherent problems with, and moral failings of, capital punishment.

In 2007, New Jersey abolished the death penalty. The Maryland Commission on Capital Punishment recommended abolition of the death penalty.

This year abolition is being seriously discussed and may occur in New Mexico, Montana, Maryland and Colorado.

Last year, Harris County, Texas which if it were a state would be second only to Texas in executions, did not send one person to death row.

The Bureau of Justice Statistics show that in 2007, death sentences were at an all time low since the death penalty was reinstated in 1976.

According to the Death Penalty Information Center, several law enforcement officials and pro-death penalty politicians have misgivings about the use, cost and fairness of the death penalty. These officials include:

> Jeanne Woodward, former Director of the California Department of Corrections and Warden of San Quentin Prison;

James Abbott, Police Chief, West Orange, NJ, and member of the New Jersey Death Penalty Study Commission;

Donald McCartin, former Orange County, CA, Superior Court Judge, who sentenced nine men to death; and

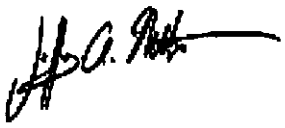
Sen. Joseph Tydings, former U.S. Senator and prosecutor

At a time when our sister states are confronting the myriad shortcomings with capital punishment, Alaska should reject any efforts to introduce this failed system to our State.

The ACLU of Alaska urges the Committee Members to reject House Bill 9.

Please feel free to contact the undersigned if you wish additional documentation regarding any of the information provided.

Sincerely,



Jeffrey Mittman
Executive Director

cc: House Judiciary Committee

Vice Chair Dahlstrom, via email: Representative_Nancy_Dahlstrom@legis.state.ak.us
Representative Coghill, via email: Representative_John_Coghill@legis.state.ak.us
Representative Gatto, via email: Representative_Carl_Gatto@legis.state.ak.us
Representative Lynn, via email: Representative_Bob_Lynn@legis.state.ak.us
Representative Gruenberg, via email: Representative_Max_Gruenberg@legis.state.ak.us
Representative Holmes, via email: Representative_Lindsey_Holmes@legis.state.ak.us

Catholic Bishop of Northern Alaska
1316 Peger Road
Fairbanks, AK 99709
(907) 374-9500

11 March 2009

The Honorable Jay Ramras, Chair
House Judiciary Committee
State Capitol
Juneau, Alaska 99811

Dear Representative Ramras:

As you know, the Catholic Church staunchly defends life: the seamless fabric of life that extends from those still in the womb to those facing their final moments on this earth. As Catholics we believe the taking of life is permissible only in the most extraordinary circumstances in order to prevent the taking of other life. That is why I am distressed at the legislation you co-sponsored, House Bill 9, authorizing capital punishment.

As Archbishop Roger Schwietz has already expressed to you, there are compelling arguments against capital punishment: it is ineffective in deterring violent crime; it falls most heavily on those who are already the most disenfranchised in our society, the poor and those of color; and the evidence sending the convicted to their deaths is too often flawed. For all these reasons capital punishment is not only unjust, it also undermines the dignity of life in our society and our sense of self-worth. Finally, polling data suggests the majority of Alaskans oppose the death penalty.

Thus, I urge you and your legislative colleagues to withdraw your support for HB 9, an unjust, ineffective and potentially unpopular piece of legislation. Rather, I urge you to turn your attention to those pieces of legislation that will increase justice, fairness and the common good.

Thank you for your time and attention.

In His service.

Donald J Kettler

Bishop Donald J. Kettler

cc: Members of House Judiciary
Rep. Scott Kawasaki
Rep. David Guttenburg
Rep. Mike Kelly

COVER SHEET

FAX to: REP. HOLMES 18 pages to follow

907 465-[illegible]

From: Mary Beth Koster
Letters for Justice
Holy Family Cathedral
Anchorage, AK 99501

RE: HB 9

The following letter(s) were written by church members in February. Please work to see that the Death Penalty does NOT return to Alaska.

COVER SHEET

Fax to: Rep. JAY RAMAS
(907) 465-2070

17 pages to follow

From: Mary Beth Koster
Letters for Justice
Holy Family Cathedral
Anchorage, AK 99501

RE: HB 9

The following letter(s) were written by church members in February. Please work to see that the Death Penalty does NOT return to Alaska.

letter re: opposition

Sunday, February 8, 2009 10:09 AM

From: "SManf10089@aol.com" <SManf10089@aol.com>
To: marybethkoster@yahoo.com
Cc: SManf10089@aol.com

To Whom it May Concern:

I am writing to express my opposition to the Death Penalty being reinstated in Alaska.
In reality, it makes no difference in the statistics.
It may make some people feel better.
It costs more money to impose the death penalty than to incarcerate the person.

I also believe we do not do enough to help with prevention of violence, or giving people hope and the tools to help others and themselves. I see many triggers that perpetuate the dangers to the unborn, the general population, and the elderly. Let's put our money into the following to help these populations:

More money for police and health care practitioners as well as:

- decent wages and jobs
- health care
- homes with necessary support
- treatment for mental illness at community level
- reliable treatment, counseling and meds for those wanting to get off drugs and alcohol
- more reasonable rates for child birth assistance and day care.

Thank you! Again, I oppose the imposition of the death penalty.

Sandra Manfred
1503 Elmendorf Drive
Anchorage, Alaska
907 333-1926

Feb. 8th 2009

Holy Family Cathedral
Letters for Justice
Statement in Opposition to the Death Penalty

We, the undersigned, are called to voice our opposition to House Bill 9, which calls for reinstatement of the death penalty.

We object to the death penalty for the following reasons:

- Catholic teaching, as expressed in the Catechism of the Catholic Church and other statements of the Vatican and the bishops, makes clear that the use of the death penalty cannot be justified when the state has other ways to protect society.

-We have other ways to punish criminals and protect society.

-The death penalty in our land is deeply flawed. More than115 people on death row have been exonerated. The death penalty is unfairly applied due to many factors, including where a crime is committed, the race of the victim and offender, and the quality and costs of defense.

-The death penalty diminishes all of us. Its use ought to be abandoned not only for what it does to those who are executed, but what it does to us as a society. We cannot teach respect for life by taking life. The sanction of death, when it is not necessary to protect society, violates respect for human life and dignity.

-The cost of the death penalty are significantly greater than imprisoning convicts for life.

We oppose the death penalty and do not want to see it reinstated in Alaska. We welcome your response and urge you to oppose any legislation calling for the use of capital punishment. Thank you.

Holy Family Cathedral Members

Name		Address
Kay F Gayewski	1805	Juneau Dr Anchorage	AK 99501
Carol Bodges	3541	Heartwood Pl. Anch.	AK 99504
Leone M. Barrett	3761	Winterset Dr	99508
Mary E Mills	4100	Balchen Dr	99517
Greg Bidwell	3301	Purdue St Anch	AK 99508
MANUEL LOPEZ	12571	JOHNS ROAD	ANCH 99515
Lorraine R. Lopez	12871	Johns Road	Anchorage 99515-3708

Dominic DeMaio 811 W. 6th Ave. Anchorage, AK 99501
Mary Jane Henrichsen 2938 Princeton Anchorage AK 99508
Jennifer Shin JOSEPH P. SHIN 3515 LAKESHORE DRIVE ANCHORAGE AK 99517
Scott D. Keller Scott D. Keller 811 W 6th Ave. Anchorage AK 99501
Maureen Johnson Maureen Johnson 124 E. 23rd Anch AK 99503
matt johnson matt johnson 124 E. 23rd Anch. AK 99503

Holy Family Cathedral
Letters for Justice
Statement in Opposition to the Death Penalty

We, the undersigned, are called to voice our opposition to House Bill 9, which calls for reinstatement of the death penalty.

We object to the death penalty for the following reasons:

- Catholic teaching, as expressed in the Catechism of the Catholic Church and other statements of the Vatican and the bishops, makes clear that the use of the death penalty cannot be justified when the state has other ways to protect society.

-We have other ways to punish criminals and protect society.

-The death penalty in our land is deeply flawed. More than115 people on death row have been exonerated. The death penalty is unfairly applied due to many factors, including where a crime is committed, the race of the victim and offender, and the quality and costs of defense.

-The death penalty diminishes all of us. Its use ought to be abandoned not only for what it does to those who are executed, but what it does to us as a society. We cannot teach respect for life by taking life. The sanction of death, when it is not necessary to protect society, violates respect for human life and dignity.

-The cost of the death penalty are significantly greater than imprisoning convicts for life.

We oppose the death penalty and do not want to see it reinstated in Alaska. We welcome your response and urge you to oppose any legislation calling for the use of capital punishment. Thank you.

Holy Family Cathedral Members

Name	Address
Glen Nielsen	2830 Windys Way 99517
Matt Abbay	2502 Leighton Cr 99517
Rita Friedrichs	7445 Questa Ave EAFB 99506
Mary Kim	10260 Jamestown Dr. #22 99507
David A. Talbot	7813 Baymar 99518
TIMOTHY WALSH	PO BOX 91234 ANC. AK. 99509
THERESA L. LUTES	1335 W. 12TH AVE ANCH, AK 99501

G

Guadalupe Ortega 1210 Thuja Ave Anchorage, AK 99501
Lynne R. Alton - P.O. Box 190436, Anchorage, AK 99519-0436
Gillian A. Callahan 570 L #705 - Anch. 99504
Maria Angela Diaz 3424 E. 15th Ave. Anchorage 99508
Lorrie Benson 364 E 23rd anchorage 99503
DAVID VAN TUYL 460 E. 56TH #H ANCHORAGE 99518
Wayne Blue Jacky 19950 Driftwood Bay Dr Eagle River 99577
Guadalupe Ortega 1210 THUJA AVE AK 99507
Maria De Soto PO Box 102247 Anch AK 99510
Brenda Mills 414 E. 23rd Anch. AK 99503
Francisco H Castro 1036 E 9th Ave Anchorage AK 99501
Victoria Castro 1036 E 9th Ave Anchorage AK 99501

Feb 8, 2009

Dear Governor Palin,

Just a quick note asking you to stand firm on opposing the death penalty.

Sincerely

Mary Jane Henrickson

February 8th, 2009

To Senator French

As a constituent of your, living in Anchorage, Alaska, I write to you to express my opposition to the death penalty.

- Pope John Paul II and the bishops have clearly asked us to act to end the use of the death penalty.

-Catholic teaching, as expressed in the Catechism of the Catholic Church and other statements of the Vatican and the bishops, makes clear that the use of the death penalty cannot be justified when the state has other ways to protect society.

- The death penalty in our land is deeply flawed. More than115 people on death row have been exonerated. The death penalty is unfairly applied due to many factors, including where a crime is committed, the race of the victim and offender, and the quality and costs of defense.

-The death penalty diminishes all of us. Its use ought to be abandoned not only for what it does to those who are executed, but what it does to us as a society.

-We cannot teach respect for life by taking life.

I urge you to oppose any legislation that would call for the death penalty to be reinstated in Alaska. I welcome your response.

Sincerely,

Mary E Mills
4100 J Balchen Dr.
Anchorage AK 99517

July 8, 2009

Mr Yara,

I was unable to attend the Bartlett block meeting Thurs. but I understand that a state defense atty. gave a wonderful talk against the death penalty.

Also, belief in the Catholic faith of which I am a member is against the death penalty.

I hope that when this issue comes up that you will vote against it

Sincerely
Mary Jane Henrickson

To Lee Gale, February 8, 2009

I oppose the death penalty. It is inhumane, unfair to race, class, gender and does not prevent Crime.
Let us not allow the death penalty to taint its ugly face on the state of Alaska. Defeat House Bill 9

Sincerely,
Kay Gajewski (KAY GAJEWSKI)
18015 Juneau Dr
Anchorage, AK 99501

February 8th, 2009

To Les Gara

As a constituent of your, living in Anchorage, Alaska, I write to you to express my opposition to the death penalty.

- Pope John Paul II and the bishops have clearly asked us to act to end the use of the death penalty.

-Catholic teaching, as expressed in the Catechism of the Catholic Church and other statements of the Vatican and the bishops, makes clear that the use of the death penalty cannot be justified when the state has other ways to protect society.

- The death penalty in our land is deeply flawed. More than115 people on death row have been exonerated. The death penalty is unfairly applied due to many factors, including where a crime is committed, the race of the victim and offender, and the quality and costs of defense.

-The death penalty diminishes all of us. Its use ought to be abandoned not only for what it does to those who are executed, but what it does to us as a society.

-We cannot teach respect for life by taking life.

I urge you to oppose any legislation that would call for the death penalty to be reinstated in Alaska. I welcome your response.

Sincerely, Matt & Maureen Johnson

124 E. 23rd Ave.
Anchorage, AK 99503

February 8th, 2009

To Les Gara,

As a constituent of your, living in Anchorage, Alaska, I write to you to express my opposition to the death penalty.

- Pope John Paul II and the bishops have clearly asked us to act to end the use of the death penalty.

-Catholic teaching, as expressed in the Catechism of the Catholic Church and other statements of the Vatican and the bishops, makes clear that the use of the death penalty cannot be justified when the state has other ways to protect society.

- The death penalty in our land is deeply flawed. More than115 people on death row have been exonerated. The death penalty is unfairly applied due to many factors, including where a crime is committed, the race of the victim and offender, and the quality and costs of defense.

-The death penalty diminishes all of us. Its use ought to be abandoned not only for what it does to those who are executed, but what it does to us as a society.

-We cannot teach respect for life by taking life.

I urge you to oppose any legislation that would call for the death penalty to be reinstated in Alaska. I welcome your response.

Sincerely, Maureen Johnson

124 E 23rd Ave
Anch. AK 99503

February 8th, 2009

To Johnny Ellis

As a constituent of your, living in Anchorage, Alaska, I write to you to express my opposition to the death penalty.

- Pope John Paul II and the bishops have clearly asked us to act to end the use of the death penalty.

-Catholic teaching, as expressed in the Catechism of the Catholic Church and other statements of the Vatican and the bishops, makes clear that the use of the death penalty cannot be justified when the state has other ways to protect society.

- The death penalty in our land is deeply flawed. More than115 people on death row have been exonerated. The death penalty is unfairly applied due to many factors, including where a crime is committed, the race of the victim and offender, and the quality and costs of defense.

-The death penalty diminishes all of us. Its use ought to be abandoned not only for what it does to those who are executed, but what it does to us as a society.

-We cannot teach respect for life by taking life.

I urge you to oppose any legislation that would call for the death penalty to be reinstated in Alaska. I welcome your response.

Sincerely,

L Warren Johnson Mary Johnson

124 E. 23rd Ave

Anch. AK 99503

2/6/09

Dear Senator Ellis

I am writing to you as a constituent and supporter urging you to vote against HB89 for the following reasons:

Studies have shown that the death penalty does not deter people from committing murder.

States that have the death penalty have found it very expensive to administer in terms of the expense of appeals and subsequent investigations.

Mistakes are made, and innocent people have been released from death row.

The administration of the death penalty necessarily discriminates based on race and socioeconomic factors. Minorities, especially those that kill whites, are much more likely to find themselves on death row. Rich clients can present themselves more sympathetically and hire attorneys that can dedicate themselves wholly to the defendants defense.

As a Catholic, I believe life is precious, and the state should not institute a penalty that undermines the taking of life appear justified. The penalty says it's alright to kill if done righteously - a dangerous message to send.

Also, as a Catholic, I believe that everyone, no matter how debased they are currently, can eventually come to regret their actions and feel contrition. They should be given that opportunity.

Feb. 9,

Dear Mr Ellis,

We are a group at Holy Family church are writing to Juneau in hopes that the death penalty will not be used in Alaska.

Not only am I against it from a religious standpoint but from the financial point as I understand the cost of life imprisonment is much less than death penalty.

I hope you will heed our plea.

Sincerely

Mary Jane Kinneckson

1 of 2

2/6/09

Dear Representative Gardner,

I am writing to you as a constituent and supporter urging you to vote against HB9, the bill that seeks to reinstitute the death penalty in Alaska.

There are many practical reasons why the death penalty should not be reinstituted. It hasn't been shown to be a deterrent, especially in its current form in the United states, where the execution is done in secret, away from public eyes. Studies have found that it cost more to administer the death penalty constitutionally given the greater expense with the trial, the appeal, and subsequent investigations. The death penalty almost can't help but be administered in a way that discriminates based on racial and socio-economic grounds. The rich can afford better attorneys, can often present themselves better, and a jury of community members will more easily identify (and not seek the death penalty for) with people like them - people of the same race. Finally, if done in a rapid and public way, the risk of making a tragic mistake increases, and frequent executions desensitize the public to the awfulness of taking a human life, even if the taking is sanctioned by the state.

I oppose the death penalty as a Catholic for more than just practical reasons. I believe in the sanctity of life. I believe a human being, even one declared enough to commit murder, can obtain an eternal redemption before the eyes of God. I am not claiming that a murderer can be rehabilitated, or that the law should go easy on them. I think a murderer should contemplate what they've done, and privately come to ask for forgiveness. For ~~please~~

2 of 2

Sorry for the length of the letter but I care about this issue.

Please oppose HB9.

Greg Bidwell
3301 Arctic St.

February 8th, 2009

To Senator Leslie McGuire,

As a constituent of yours, living in District 28 Anchorage, Alaska, I write to you to express my opposition to the death penalty.

- Pope John Paul II and the bishops have clearly asked us to act to end the use of the death penalty.

-Catholic teaching, as expressed in the Catechism of the Catholic Church and other statements of the Vatican and the bishops, makes clear that the use of the death penalty cannot be justified when the state has other ways to protect society.

- The death penalty in our land is deeply flawed. More than 115 people on death row have been exonerated. The death penalty is unfairly applied due to many factors, including where a crime is committed, the race of the victim and offender, and the quality and costs of defense.

-The death penalty diminishes all of us. Its use ought to be abandoned not only for what it does to those who are executed, but what it does to us as a society.

-We cannot teach respect for life by taking life.

I urge you to oppose any legislation that would call for the death penalty to be reinstated in Alaska. I welcome your response.

Sincerely,

Lorraine R. Lopez

12871 JOHNS ROAD

99515-3708

Testimony on House Bill 9
25 February 2009

Chairman Ramras and members of the Judiciary Committee:

Good afternoon. My name is Charles Rohrbacher and I am a deacon of the Roman Catholic diocese of Juneau. As a Catholic I am pro-life and I believe that as a society we have a duty to protect human life from conception to natural death. In keeping with the Church's magisterial teaching, as a matter of faith and of principle I am opposed to capital punishment in every circumstance.

But I have come to speak to you this afternoon about my personal experience with the death penalty. In 1977 as a journalist, I became involved in the case of a young Korean immigrant named Chol Soo Lee. He had been wrongfully convicted of a 1973 gang slaying in San Francisco and while in prison was attacked by another inmate and in self-defense killed his attacker. But having been convicted as a gang killer already, his plea of self defense was brushed aside and in short order he was convicted and sentenced to death.

As a journalist I helped in the investigation into the circumstances of the first degree murder conviction that landed Chol Soo Lee in prison in the first place. We discovered that he had been convicted on the basis of being identified as the murderer by white tourists who had witnessed the crime from a distance. He barely spoke English, his public defender got a change of venue and then pulled out of the case two weeks before trial and he was defended by a pro bono attorney appointed by the court at the last minute. In addition, there was a tremendous amount of pressure from the public and from political officials to get a conviction.

Years later it was discovered that police and prosecutors had suppressed important, exculpatory evidence: they failed to inform his defense attorney that the police had statements from other witnesses to the crime who had told police that he wasn't the gunman or who identified an entirely different person as the killer.

In 1982 after eight years of solitary confinement on San Quentin's Death Row, Chol Soo Lee was granted a new trial and was completely exonerated and released from San Quentin's Death Row.

My involvement in the struggle to save this innocent young man from execution taught me this: that human beings are inherently fallible. Human beings can be relied on to make mistakes from time to time. They can be relied on to get things wrong, and even, to act carelessly and at times, unjustly. Our institutions, including our judicial system, are human institutions and are therefore fallible.

Ordinarily, when our courts make mistakes, which are inevitable, it is possible to rectify the wrong done and restore a wrongfully convicted person's liberty to them.

But the death penalty is irrevocable. It is beyond the powers of limited and fallible human beings to bring a wrongfully executed person back from the dead. And because of the fallibility of human beings and of human institutions, one thing is certain: innocent men and women have and will be condemned to death, and have and will be executed.

The possibility, even the probability, that, despite whatever safeguards may be in place, that innocent persons will die at the hands of the state, should deter us from restoring the death penalty in the state of Alaska.

For this reason I urge you to vote against House Bill 9.

Deacon Charles Rohrbacher
Cathedral of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin Mary 416 5th St.
Juneau, AK 99801
charlesr@gci.net

The Gospel of Life and the Sentence of Death: Catholic Teaching on Capital Punishment

By Rev. Augustine Judd, O.P.

Many Catholics find the Church's teaching on capital punishment confusing. While Christian faith affirms the sanctity of human life, the Church also affirms the legitimacy of executing a duly convicted criminal in particular circumstances. To eliminate this confusion, two distinct but related questions need to be considered: 1) Does society have the right to put a criminal to death for a heinous crime? If so, 2) Do today's circumstances justify the exercise of this right?

The Public Debate

Certainly, recent developments have prompted public officials to reconsider these two issues. For example, last year the State of Illinois released Anthony Porter after more than fifteen years on death row and officially reversed his conviction. Another man had confessed on videotape and was charged with the double murder for which Porter had been convicted and sentenced to die.

On one level, extraordinary circumstances mark Porter's case. In 1998 Porter came within two days of his execution before the court spared him on the grounds it wanted to examine his mental capacity. Porter has an IQ of fifty-one. Nor was the new case for his innocence uncovered in the usual manner. It did not come through the work of attorneys, but through the efforts of an independent investigator collaborating closely with a professor at Northwestern University and his journalism students. In the course of their investigation, they found a witness at the trial who had been pressured by police to testify against Porter.

On another level, Porter's case is not extraordinary at all. Too frequently the administration of justice comes dangerously close to what Illinois governor George Ryan calls "the ultimate nightmare, the state's taking an innocent life." According to the Death Penalty Information Center, since 1973 almost ninety people have been freed from death row after the discovery of exculpatory evidence.

For this reason, public officials in jurisdictions supporting capital punishment have begun recently to question whether it can ever fairly be put into practice. On January 31, 2000, Governor Ryan--a death penalty proponent–inaugurated a moratorium on Illinois executions for an indefinite period. His move was prompted by the exoneration of thirteen Illinois death row inmates since 1977–one more than the number actually executed in that state.

Others have followed Ryan's lead. Although the governor vetoed it, the Nebraska legislature passed a moratorium bill last year. At the time this article was being written, the New Hampshire House of Representatives passed a bill abolishing the death penalty and sent it on to the state Senate for further consideration.
At the national level, doubts about the death penalty have spurred legislative efforts. Sen. Patrick Leahy of Vermont has introduced a bill to preserve biological evidence in capital cases for later testing while making that testing more accessible. It would also establish defense counsel competency requirements, inform juries of alternative sentencing options, and limit the federal government's seeking the death penalty in non-death penalty states. In the House of Representatives, Rep. Jesse Jackson Jr. of Illinois has introduced a bill requiring a minimum seven-year moratorium on all executions. Its purpose is to allow all death row inmates the opportunity to explore potentially exculpatory evidence. The executive branch has been involved in this issue as well. Many have recently called upon President Clinton to suspend federal executions, while the Justice Department has announced it will conduct an internal study on whether bias exists in applying for capital sentences.

The changed attitude about the death penalty among public officials seems to mirror a change in the general population. A recent Gallup poll showed support for the death penalty at its lowest level in nineteen years. At sixty-six percent, it represents a drop of fourteen percentage points in six years. Moreover, only fifty-two percent support the death penalty if there is an existing law allowing life without parole. Ninety-one percent (an eleven percent rise from the previous year) said they believed innocent people have been sentenced to death.

Other factors have raised questions about how fairly the death penalty can be applied. Racial bias is one of them. Since the federal death penalty was reinstated, seventy-six percent of those sentenced to death in federal court have been members of minority groups. In the cases where the Attorney General has authorized the government to seek the death penalty, twenty-four percent of the defendants have been white, nineteen percent Hispanic, five percent Asian/Indian, and fifty-two percent African American. At present, seventy-four percent of the nineteen inmates under active federal death sentences are non-white. Of the 127 homicides for which ninety-eight convicts were executed in 1999, 104 were committed against whites, while only twenty-three were committed against African Americans, Hispanics, and Asians.

Another factor has been the growing importance of DNA testing. DNA evidence is responsible for reversing at least eight capital convictions over the last twenty-five years. Of the thirteen Illinois inmates freed from death row, five were freed on these grounds. Unfortunately, DNA testing is difficult to attain even in non-capital cases. Clyde Charles, for example, was freed from a Louisiana prison in 1999, after eighteen years for a rape conviction, when DNA testing proved his innocence. His attorneys and family requested this testing as early as 1989, but were blocked by the state for nine years.

Inadequate representation is a final element casting doubt on the fairness of the death penalty's application. Defendants charged with capital crimes often cannot afford expert counsel and must rely on overworked public defenders or inexperienced, low-paid, court-appointed attorneys. The Chicago Tribune found in a study that attorneys who were later disbarred or suspended represented thirty-three men convicted of capital crimes in Illinois. The lawyer for Betty Lou Beets, a grandmother recently executed in Texas for killing a physically abusive husband, was himself later convicted of a felony.

The Church Asks: Can We?

The Church has also asked whether society may take the life of the guilty. In answering, the Church has always turned first to what God reveals to us in Sacred Scripture and Tradition. Yet Scripture alone is not conclusive on the matter. In the Old Testament, the first murderer's punishment is not death. God cursed and banished Cain for slaying Abel, but also threatened a sevenfold vengeance on anyone who harmed him (Gen 4:15). However, when Noah leaves the Ark, the Lord blesses him and says to him: "Whoever sheds the blood of man, by man shall his blood be shed; for God made man in his own image."(Gen 9:6).

When God gives Moses the Ten Commandments, the prohibition against killing is not absolute. The ordinances given to Moses in conjunction with the commandments prescribe death for murderers and others. Despite this, God occasionally calls for restraint and mercy. As He says to Ezekiel: "I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn back from his ways and live"(Ez 33:11).

Like the Old Testament, the New Testament is not conclusive about capital punishment. On one hand, Jesus certainly stresses the need to be merciful. Consider the parable of the wheat and the tares (Mt 13:24-30). In this parable, the wheat and the tares represent the righteous and the evildoers. Both are allowed to coexist. Unrepentant evildoers will be punished only at the end of time. The point is that ultimately God alone punishes grave offenders.

On the other hand, Jesus seems to tolerate the practice of capital punishment. When Pilate tells Jesus he has the power to release him or have him crucified, Jesus answers: "You would have no power over me unless it had been given you from above."(Jn 19:11) Jesus refers only to the divine basis of civil power, and does not judge the morality of capital punishment. Nor does he contradict the good thief crucified next to him: "We are receiving the due reward of our deeds...."(Lk 23:41)

St. Paul addresses the issue of capital punishment in his Letter to the Romans. He writes: "Would you have no fear of him who is in authority? Then do what is good, and you will receive his approval, for he is God's servant for your good. But if you do wrong, be afraid, for he does not bear the sword in vain; he is the servant of God to execute his wrath on the wrongdoer." (Rom 13:3-4, emphasis added) Here St. Paul simply tolerates a ruler's authority to carry out capital punishment, without commenting on its morality. Certainly his toleration need not imply his approval.

Neither does the Church in the post-apostolic age establish a clear consensus regarding capital punishment. The views of this period range from accommodation to limited acceptance to outright prohibition of the practice. St. Clement of Alexandria (c. 150-215) was the first Christian teacher to attempt to devise a theory accommodating capital punishment. He justified his position from the standpoint of self-defense. He suggested that one could become evil beyond any expectation for reform or "cure." In this case the evildoer may be removed by death to prevent further evildoing. He was the first to argue that an evildoer is like an infected limb that plagues the body. If it cannot be cured, the physician (the judge and executioner) must remove it to prevent the infection from harming the rest of the body (society). Others like Tertullian (c.160-220) and Origen (c.185-220) accepted capital punishment as a civil reality, but condemned Christian participation in it. St. John Chrysostom (349-407) and St. Augustine (354-430) recognized the Christian emperor's "power of the sword," even while they thought its application severe on occasion. Still others like Lactantius (d.317) believed that the Fifth Commandment's prohibition against killing allowed no exceptions, even civil.

By the Middle Ages, Christians widely accepted the civil power's right to put evildoers to death. Even so, the Church was quick to condition this right. St. Thomas Aquinas (1225-1274), for example, points out that only a public authority may judge and execute a serious offender where the society's defense is at stake, and where the offender's reform is not expected. St. Thomas leaves no room for private vigilantism.

Following St. Thomas, Catholic moral theologians down to our own day continued to qualify the situations where the death penalty may be applied. Eventually, they formulated three general prerequisites:

1. For the defense of society, only a public authority may impose capital punishment. This condition excludes both individual and mob acts of vengeance.

2. Capital punishment may be imposed only if it corresponds to the gravity of the crime. In peacetime, capital punishment is chiefly reserved for the crime of murder.

3. Capital punishment may be imposed only if the accused person's guilt is morally certain. In normal circumstances this means the accused has the right to a fair trial and a reasonable defense.

The Church Asks: Should We?

Up to this point, we have only examined whether, according to Catholic teaching, society has the right to impose capital punishment. There is another pertinent question Catholic teaching considers, namely, "Should society exercise that right?" Those answering in the affirmative traditionally appeal to three arguments:

1. Capital punishment as retribution. It restores the balance of justice by inflicting punishment in exchange for the harm done to an individual and society. Opponents of this argument criticize it for being vindictive. They argue capital punishment cannot be applied in degrees. Yet a convict's culpability for a capital crime often does admit of degrees.

2. Capital punishment as deterrence. The threat of death discourages someone from committing heinous acts against individuals and society. Critics dispute the deterrent capability of capital punishment. They say capital punishment may even harden a criminal, who, to avoid arrest and the prospect of execution, is driven to further acts of desperation. Nor will capital punishment effectively deter murders committed "in the heat of passion,"or by the mentally ill or those under the influence of drugs. Finally, critics wonder how executions performed in the presence of just a few witnesses can publicly deter potential wrongdoers.

3. Capital punishment as reform. The threat of imminent death can spur the conversion and repentance of the convicted, aptly preparing him or her for the next life. Yet, execution poignantly eliminates a converted criminal's period of earthly grace and penitence, since one's lifetime is the only period of "probation" one can enjoy.

Authoritative Catholic teaching draws upon all that has been discussed thus far. It distinguishes between society's right to inflict capital punishment, and the need to do so. While the Church does not deny the death penalty's proper legitimacy under certain conditions, she does oppose its modern application, given the particular circumstances of our culture.

Various national conferences of Catholic bishops have defended this teaching. The U.S. bishops have observed how the abolition of capital punishment would reaffirm the Church's teaching on "the unique worth and dignity of each human person from the moment of conception, a creature made in the image and likeness of God" (U.S. Bishops Statement on Capital Punishment, Nov. 1980). Along this line, the Filipino bishops have rejected the classic notion comparing a criminal execution to the removal of a diseased organ. They note that a "human being is not only a member of society as an organ is a member of a living body...". A human being has a value in himself/herself and is not...a limb or organ..." ("Restoring the Death Penalty: 'A Backward Step,'" Catholic International, 15-31 Oct. 1992, Vol. 3 No. 18, pp. 886-887).

The Catechism of the Catholic Church, published during the pontificate of Pope John Paul II, remains a definitive source of recent authoritative Catholic teaching on capital punishment. It states that the "defense of the common good requires that the unjust aggressor be rendered unable to cause harm"(CCC 2266). The Catechism is clear about what this implies: "Assuming that the guilty party's identity and responsibility have been fully determined, the traditional teaching of the Church does not exclude recourse to the death penalty, if this is the only possible way of effectively defending human lives against the unjust aggressor" (CCC 2267).

Thus, the right of civil society to inflict the death penalty is affirmed. In explaining the right, however, the Catechism adds an important caveat: "If...non-lethal means are sufficient to defend and protect people's safety from the aggressor, authority will limit itself to such means, as these are more in keeping with the concrete conditions of the common good and more in conformity with the dignity of the human person" (CCC 2267).

Papal teaching also plays a most instructive role in elaborating Catholic teaching on capital punishment. In Evangelium Vitae, Pope John Paul writes:

The nature and extent of the punishment must be carefully evaluated and decided upon, and ought not go to the extreme of executing the offender except in cases of absolute necessity: In other words, when it would not be possible otherwise to defend society. Today however, as a result of steady improvements in the organization of the penal system, such cases are very rare if not practically nonexistent (Evangelium Vitae, 56, emphasis added).

According to the Holy Father, a society's inability to protect itself by any other means is the determining factor in the decision to execute a criminal. Since our society can remove those guilty of serious offenses by means of life imprisonment, the Holy Father judges as negligible society's need to use the death penalty. Inflicting capital punishment when it is not necessary would transgress Catholic teaching. The pope's opposition to the use of the death penalty is therefore a legitimate exercise of his pastoral leadership as the Vicar of Christ on earth.

Finally, Catholic teaching on capital punishment is an opportunity to examine our own attitudes. While we must show compassion for the victims of crime and support society's legitimate and just self-defense, in Christ we are not free to direct revenge or hate toward anyone. This includes those guilty of criminal wrongdoing. To aid the new evangelization in the new millennium, we must take the words of the American bishops' 1999 Good Friday Appeal to End the Death Penalty to heart:

Increasing reliance on the death penalty diminishes all of us and is a sign of growing disrespect for human life. We cannot overcome crime by simply executing criminals, nor can we restore the lives of the innocent by ending the lives of those convicted of their murders. The death penalty offers the tragic illusion that we can defend life by taking life.... Through education, through advocacy, and through prayer and contemplation on the life of Jesus, we must commit ourselves to a persistent and principled witness against the death penalty, against a culture of death, and for the Gospel of Life.

What Every Catholic Should Know About the Death Penalty

Scripture and the Death Penalty

In A Culture of Life and the Penalty of Death, the bishops explain the scriptural roots of Catholic teaching on the death penalty. This begins with the story of creation which teaches "that every life is a precious gift from God (see Gn 2:7, 21-23). This gift must be respected and protected. We are created in God's image and redeemed by Jesus Christ, who himself was crucified."

The bishops also explain "some argue that biblical statements about 'life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth' (see Ex 21:23-25, Lv 24:17, Dt 19:21) require that the death penalty be used for certain crimes. A correct interpretation of these passages indicates, however, that the principal intent of such laws was to limit the retribution that could be exacted for an offense, not to require a minimum punishment. Furthermore, it is important to read individual passages in the context of Sacred Scripture as a whole. While the Old Testament includes some passages about taking the life of one who kills, the Old Testament and the teaching of Christ in the New Testament call us to protect life, practice mercy, and reject vengeance."

From a Victim's Family...

"No one in our family ever wanted to see the killer of our brother and his wife put to death. We felt instinctively that vengeance wouldn't alleviate our grief. We wanted this murderer in prison so he could never hurt another person. But wishing he would suffer and die would only have diminished us and shriveled our own souls. Hatred doesn't heal. Every time the state kills a person, human society moves in the direction of its lowest, most base urges. We don't have to make that choice. Our lawmakers have the capacity to help us abolish the death penalty and along with it, the fantasy that it will make the pain go away."

—Mary Bosco Van Valkenburg, whose brother and sister-in-law were murdered

Catholic Teaching and the Death Penalty

Catholic teaching offers a unique perspective on crime and punishment. It begins with the recognition that the dignity of the human person applies to both victims and offenders. It affirms our commitment to comfort and support victims and their families, while acknowledging the God-given dignity of every human life, even those who do great harm.

Catholic teaching on human life is rooted in the belief that all life is a gift from God that must be respected and defended from conception to natural death. In his encyclical The Gospel of Life, the Holy Father challenges followers of Christ to be "unconditionally pro life." He reminds us that "the dignity of human life must never be taken away, even in the case of someone who has done great evil. Modern society has the means of protecting itself, without definitively denying criminals the chance to reform" (Gospel of Life, 27).

I renew the appeal I made most recently at Christmas for a consensus to end the death penalty, which is both cruel and unnecessary . . .

Pope John Paul II, St. Louis, Missouri, January 27, 1999

The Catechism of the Catholic Church explains that "the traditional teaching of the Church does not exclude recourse to the death penalty, if this is the only possible way of effectively defending human lives against the unjust aggressor. If, however, non-lethal means are sufficient to defend and protect people's safety from the aggressor, authority will limit itself to such means" (CCC, 2267). The test of whether the death penalty can be used is not the gravity of the offense, but whether it is absolutely necessary to protect society. The Catechism adds that today "the cases in which the execution of the offender is an absolute necessity 'are very rare, if not practically non-existent'" (CCC, 2267).

The Catholic bishops of the United States have spoken out clearly and strongly against the use of the death penalty. In 1999 they issued A Good Friday Appeal to End the Death Penalty. They explained their opposition to the death penalty is based on more than concern for "what it does to those guilty of horrible crimes but for what it does to all of us as a society." In 2005 they issued A Culture of Life and the Penalty of Death. They acknowledged that sentences such as "life in prison without parole" provide non-lethal alternatives and called for an end to the use of the death penalty in the United States, stating "it is time for our nation to abandon the illusion that we can protect life by taking life."

Ending the death penalty would be one important step away from a culture of death and toward building a culture of life.

United States Catholic Bishops, 2005 A Culture of Life and the Penalty of Death

Facts About the Death Penalty

Who Is Affected?

Approximately 3300 inmates are on death row in 35 state, military, and federal prisons. Since 1976, there have been 1138 executions in the United States, including four in 2009. But the impact of the death penalty goes well beyond those on death row. It also impacts the families of inmates, as well as the families of victims. Moreover, citizens of 36 states are implicated in the death penalty through their tax dollars.

Misspent Millions

Studies in state after state have shown that the death penalty is more costly than alternative sentences. For example, the California death penalty system costs taxpayers $114 million per year over and above the costs of keeping convicts locked up for life (L.A. Times, March 6, 2005).

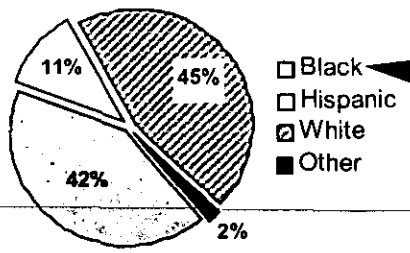
Innocent Lives in the Balance

The criminal justice system is run by human beings—and we make mistakes. At least 130 people from 26 states have been exonerated from death row after evidence of innocence was found. Rather than showing the system is working, exonerations provide evidence that our system is flawed. DNA testing cannot solve these problems. DNA evidence exists in only 10 percent of criminal cases.

Is the Justice System Just?

- Over 90 percent of those on death row across the country were too poor to afford their own attorney.
- Studies by states across the country show geography plays a role in who lives and dies. Similar murders might get death in one county, but not in one nearby.
- Over 80 percent of those executed in the United States were convicted of killing a white person, even though African-Americans are the victims in at least half of all homicides (Death Row USA, NAACP Legal Defense Fund).

Race of Death Row Inmates



Blacks constitute 12.9% of the US population, but 42% of death row inmates

Source: Death Penalty Information Center

What You Can Do

Pray for victims of crime and their families, those who have been wrongly convicted, and those awaiting execution.

Learn about Catholic social teaching, U.S. criminal justice policies, and the policies in your state. Go to the Web site listed below for more information about the death penalty.

Educate people in your parish or community about Catholic social teaching and the criminal justice system. Visit the Web site listed below for Vatican and U.S. bishops' statements on the death penalty, as well as statements from individual bishops and state Catholic Conferences.

Advocate by contacting your elected officials. Discuss Catholic teaching on the death penalty and what steps could be taken at the state and national level to curtail or end its use.

To receive information regarding the Catholic Church's work on the death penalty at the national level, or to link with a particular state's efforts, visit the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops' Web site at usccb.org/deathpenalty.

Join the Catholic Mobilizing Network for the Catholic Campaign to End the Use of the Death Penalty to receive regular updates and information on what you can do to bring an end to the use of the death penalty in the U.S. Go to www.catholicsmobilizing.org for more information.

Catholic UPDATE

C0995

An abbreviated version of

The Gospel of Life

Pope John Paul II's Pro-life Encyclical

JEAN-CLAUDE LEJEUNE

THE GOSPEL OF LIFE is at the heart of Jesus' message. Lovingly received by the Church, it is to be preached as "good news" to the people of every age and culture.

This encyclical is meant to be a pressing appeal addressed to each and every person, in the name of God: Respect, protect, love and serve life, every human life!

The Second Vatican Council, in a passage which retains all its relevance today, forcefully condemned a number of crimes and attacks against human life:

"Whatever is opposed to life itself, such as any type of murder, genocide, abortion, euthanasia, or willful self-destruction, whatever violates the integrity of the human person, such as mutilation, torments inflicted on body or mind, attempts to coerce the will itself; whatever insults human dignity, such as subhuman living conditions, arbitrary imprisonment, deportation, slavery, prostitution, the selling of women and children; as well as disgraceful working conditions, where people are treated as mere instruments of gain rather than as free and responsible persons; all these things and others like them are infamies indeed.

"They poison human society, and they do more harm to those who practice them than to those who suffer from the injury. Moreover, they are a supreme dishonor to the Creator."

Unfortunately, this disturbing state of affairs, far from decreasing, is expanding. With the new prospects opened up by scientific and technological progress there arise new forms of attacks on the dignity of the human being.

The end result of this is tragic. Not only is the fact of the destruction of so many human lives, still to be born or in their final stage, extremely grave and disturbing. No less grave and disturbing is the fact that conscience itself, darkened as it were by such widespread conditioning, is finding it increasingly difficult to distinguish between good and evil in what concerns the basic value of human life.

Recognize positive signs

Many initiatives of help and support for people who are weak and defenseless have sprung up and continue to spring up in the Christian community and in civil society.

©1995 ST ANTHONY MESSENGER PRESS 1615 REPUBLIC ST CINCINNATI OH 45210 PHOTOCOPYING PROHIBITED
EDITOR JACK WINTZ O.F.M. MANAGING EDITOR JOHN BOOKSER FEISTER ART DIRECTOR MARY ALFIERI

that would only secure a precarious and burdensome prolongation of life, so long as the normal care due to the sick person in similar cases is not interrupted"....To forgo extraordinary or disproportionate means is not the equivalent of suicide or euthanasia; it expresses acceptance of the human condition in the face of death.

Among the questions which arise is the use of various types of painkillers and sedatives for relieving the patient's pain when this involves the risk of shortening life....Pius XII affirmed that it is licit to relieve pain by narcotics, even when the result is decreased consciousness and a shortening of life, "if no other means exist, and if, in the given circumstances, this does not prevent the carrying out of other religious and moral duties."

In such a case, death is not willed or sought, even though for reasonable motives one runs the risk of it: There is simply a desire to ease pain effectively by using the analgesics which medicine provides. All the same, "it is not right to deprive the dying person of consciousness without a serious reason."

I confirm that euthanasia is a grave violation of the law of God, since it is the deliberate and morally unacceptable killing of a human person.

Physician-assisted suicide

To concur with the intention of another person to commit suicide and to help in carrying it out through so-called "assisted suicide" means to cooperate in, and at times to be the actual perpetrator of, an injustice which can never be excused, even if it is requested. In a remarkably relevant passage St. Augustine writes that "it is never licit to kill another: even if he should wish it, indeed if he request it, hanging between life and death...nor is it licit even when a sick person is no longer able to live."

Even when not motivated by a selfish refusal to be burdened with the life of someone who is suffering, euthanasia must be called a false mercy, and indeed a disturbing perversion of mercy. True compassion leads to sharing another's pain; it does not kill the person whose suffering we cannot bear. Moreover, the act of euthanasia appears all the more perverse if it is carried out by those, like relatives, who are supposed to treat a family member with patience and love, or by those, such as doctors, who by virtue of their specific profession are supposed to care for the sick person even in the most painful terminal stages.

The choice of euthanasia becomes more serious when it takes the form of a murder committed by others on a person who has in no way requested it and who has never consented to it. The height of arbitrariness and injustice is reached when certain people, such as physicians or legislators, arrogate to themselves the power to decide who ought to live and who ought to die....The life of the person who is weak is put into the hands of the one who is strong; in society the sense of justice is lost, and mutual trust, the basis of every authentic interpersonal relationship, is undermined at its root.

