Compulsory education laws vary greatly from state to state. While some states use a student's date of birth to determine the beginning and ending dates for compulsory education, other states require a student to begin school if he or she will turn 6 during the school year and require a student to remain in school until completion of the school year in which he or she turns 17. Four states—Arizona, Montana, Vermont and Wyoming—require students to remain in school through a specified grade. Most states allow parents to petition their local school board or principal for a waiver of these requirements under certain circumstances, such as enrollment in a vocational education program or an institution of higher education or early completion of required coursework.

Kindergarten Enrollment

States and territories also set a minimum age for children to enroll in kindergarten, which is typically one or two years earlier than the compulsory education age. Every state or territory with a policy on this issue has established age 5 as the minimum age. However, six states—Colorado, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania—leave this decision up to local education agencies. In addition to the age requirement, each state also sets a date by which students must have attained the specified age in order to attend kindergarten. The cutoff dates range from August 1 in Indiana and Missouri to Jan. 1 in Connecticut and Vermont.

The School Age Debate

School attendance ages are often controversial. Many early childhood experts argue that if policymakers establish early cutoff dates for kindergarten, they should also establish aggressive school readiness programs to ensure students' success. Others argue that because there has been an increased emphasis on early childhood development and school readiness, we should continue to challenge children at a younger age. Some experts assert that age may be an arbitrary indicator or measure of a child's ability to succeed in school and should not be used at all. Others point out that when a state considers legislation, such as Nebraska, allowing younger children to enter kindergarten, policymakers must understand that there is likely to be a large increase in the number of children entering kindergarten during the first year of the new policy, thereby straining already tight school district budgets and increasing the need for teachers.

The age through which students must attend school can also be controversial. To encourage more students to attend institutions of higher education and to decrease dropout rates, juvenile crime and teen pregnancy, some state legislatures have increased the school attendance requirement to age 17 or 18. Opponents are concerned about forcing students to be in the classroom against their will. They say that these students may become disruptive and may require teachers and principals to spend more time and resources disciplining such students for disruptive or violent behavior and truancy. They also point out that there probably will be a greater need for funding, teachers and classrooms for alternative education.

State Action

Many state legislatures continue to debate school attendance policies. During the 2005 legislative session, Indiana changed their kindergarten enrollment date from July 1st to August 1st. During the 2004 legislative session, at least seven states enacted legislation regarding compulsory education. Alaska extended the required school age for a child who is six years of age on or before Sept. 1 following the beginning of the school year, and who is under the age of 20 and has not completed the 12th grade. Illinois increased the compulsory school age from 16 to 17 years of age, with certain exceptions. Kansas and Kentucky will both, under specific circumstances, grant exemptions from compulsory attendance. Nebraska changed the mandatory ages for compulsory education beginning in the 2005-06 school year to age of 6 by Jan. 1 of the current school year through the age of 17, with certain exceptions. In New York, local school districts will have the power to require minors from 16 to 17 years of age to attend full time day instruction. Finally, Virginia strengthened the mechanisms for enforcement of the compulsory school attendance law.

Compulsory School Age Requirements

Updated by Melodye Bush

Last Updated June 2010

Summary

Compulsory school attendance refers to the minimum and maximum age required by each state in which a student must be enrolled in and attending public school or some equivalent education program defined by the law.

The vast majority of states include an added clause providing for pupils to be released from compulsory attendance requirements upon graduation of high school, regardless of their age.

Arizona, Vermont and Wyoming all exempt children from compulsory attendance requirements upon completion of the 10th grade.

Five states – Virginia, South Dakota, Nevada, Maryland and Connecticut – allow the minimum compulsory age to be extended by at least one year if the parent(s) obtain a waiver from their assigned school.

Nearly half of all states allow children ranging from age 14 to 18 to be exempt from the compulsory attendance requirement if they meet one or more of the following stipulations: are employed, have a physical or mental condition that makes the child's attendance infeasible, have passed the 8th-grade level, have their parents' permission, have the permission of the district court or the local school board, meet the requirements for an exit interview, or have arranged alternative education such as vocational or technical school. Endnotes are provided for Indiana, Louisiana, Massachusetts and Virginia as examples of such legislation.

Notes:

[1] Arkansas: "Any parent, guardian, or other person residing within the state and having custody or charge of any child may elect for the child not to attend kindergarten if the child will not be age six on September 15 of that particular school year."

[2] Connecticut: "The parent or person having control of a child five years of age shall have the option of not sending the child to school until the child is six years of age and the parent or person having control of a child six years of age shall have the option of not sending the child to school until the child is seven years of age.

[3] Indiana: An individual is required to stay in school until he or she: graduates; is between 16 and 18 and meets the requirements for an exit interview; or reaches at least 18 years of age. Withdrawal before 18 requires parent/guardian's and principal's written permission.

[4] Louisiana: "A child between the ages of seventeen and eighteen may withdraw from school prior to graduation if both the following circumstances exist: (a) The written consent of his parents, tutor, or legal guardian. (b) An exit interview is conducted where the student and his parent, tutor, or legal guardian provide written acknowledgment that withdrawal from school shall likely reduce the student's future earning potential and increase the student's likelihood of being unemployed in the future. During such exit interview, a student who is withdrawing from school shall be given information that has been prepared and supplied by the Louisiana Workforce Commission regarding available training and employment opportunity programs, provided such information is available."

[5] Massachusetts: "Every child between the minimum and maximum ages established for school attendance by the board of education, except a child between fourteen and sixteen who meets the requirements for the completion of the sixth grade of the public school as established by said board and who holds a permit for employment in private domestic service or service on a farm, under section eighty-six of chapter one hundred and forty-nine, and is regularly employed thereunder for at least six hours per day, or a child between fourteen and sixteen who meets said requirements and has the written permission of the superintendent of schools of the town where he resides to engage in non-wage-earning employment at home, or a child over fourteen who holds a permit for employment in a cooperating employment, as provided in said section eighty-six, shall, subject to section fifteen, attend a public day school in said town, or some other day school approved by the school committee, during the number of days required by the board of education in each school year, unless the child attends school in another town, for said number of days, under sections six to twelve, inclusive, or attends an experimental school project established under an experimental school plan, as provided in section one G of chapter fifteen, but such attendance shall not be required of a child whose physical or mental condition is such as to render attendance inexpedient or impracticable subject to the provisions of section three of chapter seventy-one B or of a child granted an employment permit by the superintendent of schools when such superintendent determines that the welfare of such child will be better served through the granting of such permit, or of a child who is being otherwise instructed in a manner approved in advance by the superintendent or the school committee."

[6] Montana: requires that a child shall remain in school until the latter of either the child's 16th birthday or the date of completion of the work of the eighth grade.

[7] New Hampshire: The superintendent, may grant waivers upon proof that the pupil is 16 years of age or older and has an alternative learning plan for obtaining either a high school diploma or its equivalent. This law takes effect July 1st, 2009.

[8] New York: Both New York City and Buffalo require minors to attend school from the age of 6 until the age of 17. Each district in the state is authorized to require minors between 16 and 17 who are not employed to attend school. The board of education of the Syracuse city school district is authorized to require minors who are five years of age on or before December first to attend kindergarten instruction.

[9] South Carolina: In South Carolina, kindergarten is mandatory. However, state statutes permit parental waiver for kindergarten at age five.

[10] Tennessee: "A parent or guardian who believes that such parent's or guardian's child is not ready to attend school at the designated age of mandatory attendance may make application to the principal of the public school which the child would attend for a one semester or one year deferral in required attendance.

[11] Texas: School districts may require persons who voluntarily enroll in school or voluntarily attend school after their 18th birthday to attend school until the end of the school year.
[12] Virginia: "For a student who is at least 16 years of age, there shall be a meeting of the student, the student's parents, and the principal or his designee of the school in which the student is enrolled in which an individual student alternative education plan shall be developed in conformity with guidelines prescribed by the Board..."

1 Nearly all States exempt those whose physical or mental condition precludes attendance. Other exemptions not directly related to employment include those because of distance from school or school transportation; expulsion, suspension or determined to be disruptive; marriage; excused by court or judge; and receiving religious education.

2 The Dropout Prevention Act is a comprehensive program to have all the schools within the state make an attempt to keep students in school. There were no changes to the age limits for school attendance, but the establishment of a state-wide program is a major effort to prevent students from leaving school early - for any reason.

Quick Stats Fact Sheet

High School Dropout: A Quick Stats Fact Sheet

By Maggie Monrad, National High School Center at AIR

Each year almost one-third of public high school students fail to graduate from high school.[1] The high school dropout problem is a crisis for the United States, in part because it impacts not only individuals and their education, but also because the economic and social costs are so dramatic. Globally, the United States ranks seventeenth in high school graduation rates and fourteenth in college graduation rates among developed nations.[2] Domestically, the nation and its communities suffer from a lack of productive workers and higher costs associated with incarceration, health care, and other social services.[3] As the 21st century United States moves towards an increasingly global economy, more individuals are discovering that higher levels of education are critical to their own and their nation's ability to compete and thrive – in fact, about 90 percent of the fastest growing jobs will require some postsecondary education.[4] Understanding the magnitude of the dropout problem and the forces that impact dropout rates is critically important to developing dropout prevention strategies.

Who drops out?

- Secretary of Education Margaret Spellings' testimony to the U.S. House of Representatives Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor, HHS, and Education estimated that approximately one million students drop out every year.[5]
- High school dropouts are more likely to be unemployed, earn lower wages, have higher rates of public assistance, are more likely to be single parents, and have children at a younger age.[6]
- Every school day 7,000 U.S. students leave high school never to return.[7] In 2004, approximately 3.8 million 16- through 24- year olds were not enrolled in high school and had not earned a high school diploma or alternative credential, such as a GED.[8]
- Based on calculations per school day (180 days of school, seven hours each day), one high school student drops out every nine seconds.[9]
- The dropout rate for students with emotional/behavioral disabilities is approximately twice that of general education students.[10]
- Research has confirmed that the lowest-performing readers are most at risk of dropping out of high school. Those achieving in the lowest quartile are 3.5 times more likely to drop out than students in the next highest quarter of academic achievement, and 20 times more likely to drop out than top-performing students.[11]

Race/Ethnicity/Socioeconomic Status

- Male students are consistently eight percent less likely to graduate than female students, and the gap is as large as 14 percent between male and female African-American students.[12]

- Among minorities, only about 52 percent of Hispanic students and 56 percent of African-American students will graduate in four years, compared with 78 percent of white students.[13]

- High school students from low-income families (the lowest 20 percent) were six times more likely to drop out than students from higher income families. Ultimately, about one half of all dropouts never receive a high school credential.[14]

Students with Disabilities Aged 14 and Older Who Dropped Out, by Race/Ethnicity

Race/Ethnicity	Percent of Group who Dropped Out
American Indian/Alaska Native	52.2%
Black	44.5%
Hispanic	43.5%
Asian/Pacific Islander	28.0%

Impact: Crime

- Estimates indicate that approximately 30 percent of federal inmates, 40 percent of state prison inmates, and 50 percent of persons on death row are high school non-completers. Moreover, non-completers are 3.5 times more likely than high school completers to be imprisoned at some point during their lifetime.[15]

- Raising the high school completion rate one percent for all men ages 20- through 60- would save the US $1.4 billion annually in crime related costs.[16] Each class of high school dropouts costs the U.S. economy more than $8 billion in incarceration expenses and lost wages per year.[17] If the male graduation rate was increased by only five percent, the U.S. could save $7.7 billion a year through reducing crime related costs and increasing earnings.[18]

Impact: Economy

- A single 18-year-old dropout earns $260,000 less over a lifetime and contributes $60,000 less in federal and state income taxes. Combined income and tax losses for one cohort of 18-year-olds who drop out is $192 billion which is 1.6 percent of the GDP.[19] America loses more than $26 billion in federal and state income taxes each year from the 23 million high school dropouts aged 18 to 67.[20]

- Almost 1.3 million students didn't graduate from US high schools in 2004, costing more than $325 billion in lost wages, taxes, and productivity over their lifetimes.[21] The Alliance for Excellent Education has estimated that the more than 12 millions students who will drop out over the next decade will cost the nation $3 trillion dollars.[22]

Unemployment and Earnings for Full-time Wage and Salary Workers Age 25 and Over, by Educational Attainment

1.6	Doctoral degree	$1,421
1.1	Professional degree	1,370
2.1	Master's degree	1,129
2.6	Bachelor's degree	937
3.3	Associate degree	699
4.2	Some college, no degree	653

Impact: Personal Income and Employment

- A male high school graduate who works until age 65 will earn, on average, nearly $333,000 more than a dropout; a worker with some college will earn $538,000 more. According to a recent report published by Teachers College at Columbia University, male high school graduates earn up to $322,000 more over the course of their lifetimes than dropouts, while college graduates earn up to $1.3 million more.[23] In total, there is more than $309 billion lost wages over the students' lifetimes.[24]

- In 1964, a high school dropout earned 64 cents for every dollar earned by an individual with at least a high school degree. In 2004, the high school dropout earned only 37 cents for each dollar earned by an individual with more education.[25]

- The median income of high school dropouts aged 18 and over was $12,184 in 2003. By comparison, the median income of those aged 18 and over who completed their education with a high school credential (including GED) was $20,431.[26]

Law urged to make teens stay in school

The Boston Globe

By James Vaznis, Globe Staff | October 21, 2009

Massachusetts students would be required to stay in school until age 18 under an ambitious proposal, part of a broader effort to halve the state's high school dropout rate, to be announced today by a special state commission.

With approximately 10,000 Massachusetts students quitting school each year, some as young as 14 years old, commission members say the state can no longer afford to ignore the dropout crisis, especially when striving to develop a more highly educated and skilled workforce.

For more than a decade, the state's dropout rate has remained stagnant. According to the most recent data available, 3.4 percent of students statewide quit school during the 2007-08 academic year, while several urban districts have rates nearly triple that. Under current state law, students can legally drop out by choice at age 16, and students as young as 14 can withdraw from school with permission from the superintendent for medical reasons, employment, or to do nonwage work at home.

If these dropouts never return to receive a diploma, they can become a huge drain on the state's economy. They are less likely to have a job and are far more likely to go to jail or depend on public assistance than residents who have graduated from high school, according to the commission's report, which is being released this afternoon.

"This whole report is a call to action," said Paul Reville, the secretary of education and chairman of the commission, which was created under a 2008 law to develop dropout prevention strategies. "It's critical work. We can ill afford the waste, loss, and tragedy these persistent rates represent."

In the coming months, the Patrick administration plans to put together legislation to raise the compulsory school age, a measure that will be tied to creation of an array of programs aimed at preventing students from dropping out and reaching out to those who have. By April this year, 19 states required students to stay in school until 18, according to the Education Commission of the States. The group includes New Hampshire, where the change took effect this year.

Some strategies recommended by the commission include hiring case managers to make the school experience more personal for these students, creating internships so students clearly see the connection between the classroom and potential careers, and using standardized test scores and other data to gauge, as early as elementary school, whether a student runs the risk of not finishing high school.

Given the state's dire budget predicament, Reville said, gaining the funding needed to push the effort forward could be a challenge. Already, sluggish state revenues have forced a sharp reduction in funding for dropout prevention this year.

But Reville emphasized that fighting for these students is worthwhile. "We are not going to hold back because of a budget crisis and say this problem doesn't exist," he said.

While the commission did not put a pricetag on its proposals, the report pointed out that overall enrollment in alternative education programs at local high schools would more than double, from 4,500 to 12,000, as more students stay in school.

Some members of the Legislature have expressed skepticism in the past about raising the age of school leaving, worried about the cost associated with creating programs for these students or further exacerbating problems that many districts already have with truancy. Those concerns led to passage of the bill that created the commission.

But others in the Legislature strongly support raising the attendance age. Representative Garrett Bradley, Democrat of Hingham, has already filed a bill to raise the maximum attendance age, which will be the subject of a hearing next month.

Reville said he has not examined that legislation yet, but anticipates that it will need to be reworked to encapsulate all the panel's recommendations.

Representative Martha M. Walz, a Boston Democrat who cochairs the Joint Committee on Education, has not yet taken a position on Bradley's bill, but said she was encouraged that the commission had given the age change a favorable recommendation and had suggested other programs and resources that could help these students succeed in school.

"My gut instinct tells me keeping students in school until age 18 is the right way to go if we can address underlying reasons that cause them to drop out and create programs that address their need," Walz said.

Students drop out of school for a wide array of reasons. Some grow frustrated because of consistently poor academic performance in school, particularly those not fluent in English and those who require special education, according to the report. Other students say they don't have time for school because they need to help their families earn income.

The commission also found that some students said they did not stick with school simply because no one seemed to care whether they did.

Compared with the national average, Massachusetts loses a smaller share of students. According to the most recent federal data available, from 2007, the national high school dropout average was 8.7 percent.

But rates in several Massachusetts urban districts often exceed or hover around the national average. In the 2007-08 school year, Lawrence lost 12.9 percent of its students; Fall River, 12.5 percent; Holyoke, 11.6 percent; Springfield, 9.7 percent; and Boston, 7.6 percent.

Reducing dropout rates is one part of the state's strategy to boost the state's high school graduation rate, which for the class of 2008 stood at about 81 percent. Dropouts accounted for about half of the students who did not earn a diploma in four years, while most of the others in that group opted for a fifth year of school.

Each dropout, over his or her lifetime, costs more than $118,000 in government expenditure and other benefits, according to research conducted a few years ago by Northeastern University's Center for Labor Market Studies.

Some districts are already working on reducing dropout rates. Boston opened a "re-engagement center" last month where high school dropouts can receive extra support as they resume their quest for a diploma.

Thomas Scott, executive of the Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents, said that decreasing the dropout rate is a good goal, but that the state needs to put money behind the policy. "You have to invest in this population for them to stay in school," said Scott. ■

Analysis

This bill would create a new crime – motivation by prejudice, bias, or hatred. Because this creates a new crime, the Department of Corrections has no historical information to determine the number of offenders that will be placed under the custody of the department.

The Department of Corrections will closely monitor potential future impacts of this legislation.

BILL NO. SB 011

Analysis

SB 011 would adopt a new crime – motivation by prejudice, bias, or hatred. A person commits the crime if the person commits a crime prohibited in Title 11, and knowingly directed the conduct to a victim because of the victim's race, sex, color, creed, physical or mental disability, sexual orientation, gender identity, ancestry, or national origin. The penalty for the new crime would increase the penalty for the underlying crime one level, so that a class A misdemeanor that is motivated by prejudice, bias, or hatred, would then be a class C felony.

Passage of this legislation would have no foreseeable fiscal impact on the Department of Law.

MEMORANDUM February 22, 2011

SUBJECT: Amendment A.1 to SB 11 and the Alaska Rules of Evidence
(Work Order No. 27-LS0087\A.1)

TO: Senator Hollis French
Chair of the Senate Judiciary Committee
Attn: Cindy Smith

FROM: Gerald P. Luckhaupt
Assistant Revisor

You have asked for my comments concerning the need for amendment A.1 to protect constitutional rights to freedom of expression and freedom of association. I fail to see a need for the amendment. I also have concerns about the language used in the amendment.

The language apparently is modeled after language included in the Matthew Shepard and James Byrd, Jr. Hate Crimes Prevention Act.

> (1) IN GENERAL. - Nothing in this division shall be construed to allow a court, in any criminal trial for an offense described under this division or an amendment made by this division, in the absence of a stipulation by the parties, to admit evidence of speech, beliefs, association, group membership, or expressive conduct unless that evidence is relevant and admissible under the Federal Rules of Evidence. Nothing in this division is intended to affect the existing rules of evidence.

This section basically says that it does nothing. Evidence remains admissible if relevant and no changes to the existing rules of evidence are intended. Normally I would not expect changes to the admissibility of evidence in a bill unless the bill states that it is amending the rules of evidence. This section appears to me to merely restate the obvious.

Amendment A.1 is similar but different. Instead of saying that evidence is admissible if relevant and admissible under the rules of evidence, the amendment states that certain evidence "may not be introduced as substantive evidence at trial, unless the evidence specifically relates to that offense." It appears to me that at a minimum a change to the existing rules of evidence is intended as the amendment does not tie admissibility to relevancy but to some other sort of specific relationship to the offense. This relationship is not explained, but the fact that some change to the existing rules of evidence is intended can be inferred from the second sentence of the amendment which states: "However, nothing in this section affects the rules of evidence governing the impeachment of a witness." This sentence clearly states that no change is intended to the rules of evidence regarding impeachment of a witness; obviously then some change to the existing rules of evidence regarding the introduction of "substantive evidence" must be intended.[1] It is not clear to me what that change might be but evidently some sort of new relationship requirement is being adopted.

Is the amendment needed to protect freedom of expression or association? In my opinion the amendment is not needed. SB 11 does not alter the rules of evidence and automatically allows the introduction of all evidence of a person's membership in associations or speech. Any evidence would still have to be relevant[2] and admissible.[3] Rule 402 specifically provides that relevant evidence is admissible except as provided by the Constitution of the United States or of this state. If the introduction of certain evidence would violate the constitution then that evidence is not admissible. Relevant evidence also may be excluded if the evidence's "probative value is outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice . . . ."[4] And, finally, evidence of a person's character is not admissible for the purpose of proving that the person acted in conformity therewith

[1] Note the differences in the last sentence of the amendment and the last sentence of the federal statute upon which it is supposedly based. The amendment states that the new section of law does not affect the rules of evidence regarding impeachment of a witness. The federal statute states that nothing is intended to affect the existing rules of evidence -- it is not limited to impeachment of a witness.

[2] Rule 401. Definition of Relevant Evidence. Relevant evidence means evidence having any tendency to make the existence of any fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action more probable or less probable than it would be without the evidence.

[3] Rule 402. Relevant Evidence Admissible--Exceptions--Irrelevant Evidence Inadmissible. All relevant evidence is admissible, except as otherwise provided by the Constitution of the United States or of this state, by enactments of the Alaska Legislature, by these rules, or by other rules adopted by the Alaska Supreme Court. Evidence which is not relevant is not admissible.

[4] Rule 403. Exclusion of Relevant Evidence on Grounds of Prejudice, Confusion, or Waste of Time. Although relevant, evidence may be excluded if its probative value is outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion of the issues, or misleading the jury, or by considerations of undue delay, waste of time, or needless presentation of cumulative evidence.

except in certain situations explained by Rule 404.[5] SB 11 does not change any of these rules or automatically allow introduction of a person's speech or associations.

[5] Rule 404. Character Evidence Not Admissible to Prove Conduct--Exceptions--Other Crimes. (a) Character Evidence Generally. Evidence of a person's character or a trait of character is not admissible for the purpose of proving that the person acted in conformity therewith on a particular occasion, except:

(1) Character of Accused. Evidence of a relevant trait of character offered by an accused, or by the prosecution to rebut the same;

(2) Character of Victim. Evidence of a relevant trait of character of a victim of crime offered by an accused, or by the prosecution to rebut the same, or evidence of a relevant character trait of an accused or of a character trait for peacefulness of the victim offered by the prosecution in a case to rebut evidence that the victim was the first aggressor, subject to the following procedure:

(i) When a party seeks to admit the evidence for any purpose, the party must apply for an order of the court at any time before or during the trial or preliminary hearing.

(ii) The court shall conduct a hearing outside the presence of the jury in order to determine whether the probative value of the evidence is outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion of the issues, or unwarranted invasion of the privacy of the victim. The hearing may be conducted in camera where there is a danger of unwarranted invasion of the privacy of the victim.

(iii) The court shall order what evidence may be introduced and the nature of the questions which shall be permitted.

(iv) In prosecutions for the crime of sexual assault in any degree and attempt to commit sexual assault in any degree, evidence of the victim's conduct occurring more than one year before the date of the offense charged is presumed to be inadmissible under this rule, in the absence of a persuasive showing to the contrary.

(3) Character of Witness. Evidence of the character of a witness, as provided in Rules 607, 608, and 609.

(b) Other Crimes, Wrongs, or Acts. (1) Evidence of other crimes, wrongs, or acts is not admissible if the sole purpose for offering the evidence is to prove the character of a person in order to show that the Admissibility of that evidence or any other evidence would still have to be relevant, admissible (and thereby constitutional), not overly prejudicial, and, if character evidence, it would have to satisfy one of the specific exceptions listed in Rule 404.

In my opinion, additional evidence that the amendment is not needed is provided by the existence of AS 12.55.155(c)(22), our "hate crime" aggravating factor. The elements of the aggravating factor are identical to the elements of proposed AS 11.76.150. If protected speech and associations could be used as evidence of a violation of AS 11.76.150 they could be used as evidence of a violation of the aggravating factor also. I have not heard of a case where constitutionally protected speech or associations were admitted as evidence under AS 12.55.155(c)(22).

person acted in conformity therewith. It is, however, admissible for other purposes, including, but not limited to, proof of motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, or absence of mistake or accident.

(2) In a prosecution for a crime involving a physical or sexual assault or abuse of a minor, evidence of other acts by the defendant toward the same or another child is admissible if admission of the evidence is not precluded by another rule of evidence and if the prior offenses

(i) occurred within the 10 years preceding the date of the offense charged;

(ii) are similar to the offense charged; and

(iii) were committed upon persons similar to the prosecuting witness.

To all above addressees by the ACLU letter of 2-16-2011:

Mr. Mittman's concerns about associational rights in his ACLU letter of 2-16-2011 are the same as he expressed last year in the previous bill. We have amended the draft to include "sexual orientation" and "gender identity" in Sec. 2, AS 12.55.155(c)(22) on page 2, lines 11-13 of SB 11.

Our legislative counsel and drafter, Jerry Luckhaupt, will not be available this afternoon unless urgent because he is testifying on a bill in House Judiciary beginning 1:00 Feb 16 in Rm 120. However, in talking to Mr. Luckhaupt this morning he does not believe SB 11 needs to include language similar to the federal bill cited which he believes repeats the obvious; that the Alaska Rules of Evidence are clear (ref. AK Rule Evidence 404) and have been correctly applied for years without additional protections. Nothing in SB 11, he says, overrides the rules of evidence.

Without offering legal advice, it is my understanding that character evidence is generally not admissible per rule 404(a), but it may be admissible to prove motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, or absence of mistake or accident under 404(b). That a defendant is a member of the Klu Klux Klan or dislikes black people in general is not admissible unless tied to other evidence, such as evidence of motive, intent, etc. Mr. French, former state prosecutor, should know Rule 404 and other rules of evidence well and their applicability in criminal actions in Alaska courts. Our drafter has addressed these legal issues in the past and can again if requested when he is available.

See you at the hearing.

SB 11, 26-LS0087 – Increased sentencing for crimes motivated by prejudice, bias or hatred

"An Act relating to the commission of a crime when the defendant directed the conduct constituting the crime at the victim based on the victim's race, sex, color, creed, physical or mental disability, sexual orientation, gender identity, ancestry, or national origin."

SPONSOR STATEMENT

This bill increases the sentencing for crimes motivated prejudice, bias, or hatred based on the victim's race, sex, color, creed, physical or mental disability, sexual orientation, gender identity, ancestry, or national origin. This new crime can only be committed when a person commits some underlying crime and the person directed the conduct constituting the crime at the victim due to one of the listed characteristics of the victim. The new crime increases the classification of the underlying crime one level.

Without creating a new list of "hate crimes" under AS 11.76, new Sec. 11.76.150 simply reclassifies the level of any crime up one notch if motivated by prejudice, bias, or hatred based on the victim's race, sex, color, creed, physical or mental disability, sexual orientation, gender identity, ancestry, or national origin. For example, a class B misdemeanor becomes a class A misdemeanor; a class A misdemeanor becomes a C felony; a class C felony becomes a B felony, etc. Such reclassification, of course, increases the penalties appropriate to the classification in sentencing under AS 12.55. The bill also amends AS 55.155(c)(22), an aggravating factor as sentencing for felonies, by adding "sexual orientation" and "gender identity" to the list of protected characteristics.

The need for this bill is demonstrated by increasing reports of violence against homeless persons, minorities, religious groups, and others motivated by prejudice, bias, and hatred in Alaska and across the country in our highly diverse and multicultural society. When crimes are committed because of people's differences, the effects reverberate beyond a single victim or group into an entire community, city, state, and society as a whole. While this bill alone cannot eliminate prejudice, bias, or hatred, it will send a message that Alaskans will not tolerate hate crimes in any form, and sentencing for them will be substantially increased.

SUBJECT: Sectional Summary -- SB 11 (Work Order No. 27-LS0087\A)

TO: Senator Bettye Davis
Attn: Thomas Obermeyer

FROM: Gerald P. Luckhaupt
Legislative Counsel

You have requested a sectional summary of the above-described bill. As a preliminary matter, please note that a sectional summary of a bill should not be considered an authoritative interpretation of the bill -- the bill itself is the best statement of its contents.

Section 1. This new crime can only be committed when a person commits some underlying crime and the person directed the conduct constituting the crime at the victim due to one of the listed characteristics of the victim. The new crime increases the classification of the underlying crime one level.

Section 2. Amends AS 55.155(c)(22), an aggravating factor at sentencing for felonies, by adding "sexual orientation" and "gender identity" to the list of protected characteristics.

SB 202: Hate Crimes
March 2010

The Alaska Women's Lobby, a statewide group with steering committees in Fairbanks, Anchorage and Juneau organized to protect and advance the rights of women, children and families supports SB 202.

According to the Anti-Defamation League 43 states and the District of Columbia have enacted hate crime laws using a "penalty-enhancement" concept similar to that proposed in SB 202. Alaska should join these states in emphasizing that people who choose to intimidate not only an individual victim but the victim's community have committed a more serious offense and should be held accountable as such.

All Alaskans have an interest in an effective response to violent bigotry. Hate crimes deserve increased penalties because the perpetrator has damaged more than one individual or institution. The offender tries to intimidate other members of the minority group by his or her actions against one person. Members of the targeted group may feel isolated, vulnerable and unprotected by the law. We need to be weaving communities together not allowing a few, bound by their ignorance, to try and keep us fragmented.

Thank you to Senator Davis for introducing this important piece of legislation. We agree with the message of her sponsor statement that while this measure alone cannot eliminate prejudice or hatred, it can send a message that Alaskans will not tolerate hate crimes in any form. Please join her in working this bill through the legislative process.

Subject: Please Support Senate Bill 202, the Alaska Hate Crimes Bill

Dear Senator Davis,

I am writing to ask you to support Senate Bill 202, the Alaska Hate Crimes Bill, with an amendment to include "gender identity and expression."

I support this bill because it covers crimes motivated by prejudice, bias, or hatred based on the victim's "race, sex, color, creed, physical or mental disability, sexual orientation, ancestry, or national origin." This bill emphasizes that Alaska has no tolerance for such acts. The Alaska court system has primary jurisdiction over crimes of assault and battery, which may result in prosecution as hate crimes when occurring in Alaska. Alaska prosecutors and law enforcement officials need the support and force of an Alaska statute in order to most effectively investigate, prosecute, and track all potential hate crimes within the state.

I also support the amendment of SB 202 to add the phrase "gender identity and expression" to Sec. 11.76.150 (a) because people who are perceived as gender variant, whether heterosexual or gay, seem "different" to some people and may evoke a violent emotional response leading to harm. A substantial number of crimes have been documented that are based on the societal perception of someone as "too feminine" or "too masculine." These crimes can include bullying of both straight and gay persons in schools and throughout Alaskan communities.

I appreciate Senate Judiciary Committee for holding a hearing on SB 202, ask for its passage out of committee with a "gender identity" amendment, and support its swift movement through the legislative process so that it becomes law in the very near future.

Thank you very much for your consideration.

Thank you profusely for sponsoring the amendment of gender identity and expression to Section 11.76.150(a) of SB 202. May it pass quickly out of the Senate Judiciary committee. I strongly support your efforts to counter those whose irrational fears and prejudices incite them to hateful acts. The weekly displays seen at last summer's Assembly meetings were disgraceful and unsettling, clear proof that discrimination exists, and sadly is often promoted from the pulpit.

I, for one, would like to see tax waivers for churches modified or even eliminated. As the trend toward mega-churches continues, we can ill afford to have our local tax base further eroded, especially by those who abuse the privilege while pushing a political agenda that defies human decency. If they have sufficient funds to attempt to impose their warped views on everyone, then they should expect to be assessed the same as everyone else.

Good luck in Juneau. Your service is most appreciated!

Racially motivated attack nets prison terms for Anchorage pair

VIDEO: The duo taped the attack; one posted clips on YouTube.

By ELIZABETH BLUEMINK
ebluemink@adn.com

The Anchorage duo who threatened and harassed a Native man while he was walking down the street two years ago have been sentenced to prison terms on felony civil rights violations.

Robert Gum, 19, was sentenced to 20 months in prison, and Deanna Scaglione, 21, also known as Deanna Powers, was sentenced to 16 months. Both were given three years of probation, according to court documents.

Federal prosecutors said that the two pursued the Native man, who was on his way to Bean's Cafe, by car and on foot and verbally and physically threatened him -- pelting him with eggs and a water bottle, saying they'd hurt him with a baseball bat and a gun and shouting racial slurs. They took turns recording their June 2008 attack on a video camera and Scaglione later posted clips of the bullying on YouTube.

The two were turned in by a woman who helped raise Scaglione after Scaglione's mother died. The woman called Crime Stoppers, a privately operated tip line.

Gum and Scaglione were arrested in 2009. They admitted to investigators that their attack was racially motivated and that it was Gum's idea. They also admitted that they egged two other Alaska Natives in downtown Anchorage that night, according to prosecutors.

In a plea for leniency, Gum's grandfather wrote that Gum recognized that he had done something very wrong and needed to make amends. But he said his grandson has many Native family members and is "not a racist."

Gum was "a very young man" who committed a stupid crime while "trying to be noticed by his friends," the grandfather wrote.

During the sentencing in federal District Court, the victim of the assault gave a powerful testimonial to the court, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Kevin Feldis, the prosecutor in the case.

The victim "spoke about the impact on him, the fear and the hurt he felt, but also how he moved forward and (his) forgiveness" of his attackers, Feldis said.

The case was investigated by the Anchorage Police Department and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"Conduct like the assault that occurred in this case is a crime not only against the victim but also against our entire community and must be appropriately punished," said U.S. Attorney Karen Loeffler after the sentencing.

State prosecutors have also charged the two on misdemeanor assault and harassment charges.

Sentencing in that case has been set for later this month.

Summary

On October 28, 2009, President Barack Obama signed the Matthew Shepard and James Byrd, Jr. Hate Crimes Prevention Act into law, as Division E of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010 (P.L. 111-84; H.R. 2647). This law broadens federal jurisdiction over hate crimes by authorizing the Attorney General to provide assistance, when requested by a state, local, or tribal official, for crimes that (1) would constitute a violent crime under federal law or a felony under state or tribal law, and (2) are motivated by the victim's actual or perceived race, color, religion, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity, or disability. In other words, hate crimes are traditional crimes during which the offender is motivated by one or more biases considered to be particularly reprehensible and damaging to society as a whole. Prior to enactment, however, hate crimes were not separate and distinct offenses under federal law. Furthermore, federal jurisdiction over hate crime was limited to certain civil rights offenses. Although there is a consensus that hate crime is deplorable, determining the definitive federal role in addressing hate crime has proved contentious, as reflected in the legislative history and congressional debate. Legislation to widen federal jurisdiction over hate crime was passed by the Senate in the 106th and 108th Congresses, by the House in the 109th Congress, and by both chambers in the 110th Congress. Opponents of hate crime legislation view separate federal offenses for hate crime as redundant and largely symbolic, arguing that separate hate crime offenses would be in addition to the legal prohibitions for traditional crime that already exist under either federal or state law. They also contend that in most cases the federal nexus is tenuous, and that such offenses are best handled at the state and local level. Proponents for creating a separate and distinct federal offense for hate crime maintain that there is a fundamental difference between ordinary crime and hate crime. They believe that hate crimes are often perpetrated to send a message of threat and intimidation to a wider group, and that the effects of hate crime extend beyond the particular victim and reflect more pervasive patterns of discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin, and other characteristics. In the 111th Congress, the House Judiciary Committee amended and ordered reported a hate crimes bill (H.R. 1913; H.Rept. 111-86) on April 23, 2009. The House passed H.R. 1913 on April 29, 2009. Senator Reid, for Senator Kennedy, introduced the Matthew Shepard Hate Crimes Prevention Act (S. 909) on April 28, 2009. Senator Leahy successfully amended the National Defense Authorization Act (S. 1390) with language that is similar to S. 909 on July 16, 2009. The Senate passed S. 1390, amended, on July 23, 2009. The hate crime provisions were included in the conference report on the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010 (H.R. 2647; H.Rept. 111-288). The House passed the conference report on H.R. 2647 on October 7, 2009; the Senate passed it on October 22, 2009. In addition, Representative Sheila Jackson-Lee has introduced three hate crime-related bills (H.R. 70, H.R. 256, and H.R. 262), and Representative Maloney has introduced a hate crime statistics act (H.R. 823). At issue for Congress is whether the prevalence and harmfulness of hate crimes warrant greater federal intervention to ensure that such crimes are systematically addressed at all levels of government. Another related issue is the completeness and comprehensiveness of national hate crime data. Representative Eddie Bernice Johnson introduced (H.R. 3419), which would amend the Hate Crime Statistics Act to require data collection on crimes committed against homeless persons. Senator Benjamin Cardin introduced an identical bill (S. 1765). On several occasions, the Senate Judiciary Committee was scheduled to mark up this bill during the 111th Congress, but consideration of this bill was postponed.

Obama Signs Hate Crimes Bill

By JEFF ZELENY

Doug Mills/The New York Times The hate crimes measure was included in the national defense authorization act that President Obama signed into law on Wednesday.

President Obama signed a hate crimes bill into law on Wednesday, telling an audience at the White House that the provision would "strengthen the protections against crimes based on the color of your skin, the faith in your heart, or the place of your birth."

The law expands the definition of violent federal hate crimes to those committed because of a victim's sexual orientation. Under existing federal law, hate crimes are defined as those motivated by the victim's race, color, religion or national origin.

"Prosecutors will have new tools to work with states in order to prosecute to the fullest those who would perpetrate such crimes," Mr. Obama said, speaking in the East Room of the White House at an evening reception, "Because no one in America should ever be afraid to walk down the street holding the hands of the person they love."

The hate crimes measure was included in a defense spending bill, which Democratic leaders in Congress intentionally did in an effort to keep Republicans from blocking the legislation. The legislation had been under consideration in Congress for years. It was named in memory of Matthew Shepard, the gay Wyoming college student who was murdered 11 years ago.

"You understood that we must stand against crimes that are meant not only to break bones, but to break spirits — not only to inflict harm, but to instill fear," Mr. Obama said. "You understand that the rights afforded every citizen under our Constitution mean nothing if we do not protect those rights — both from unjust laws and violent acts."

The audience at the White House included Denis and Judy Shepard, the parents of Matthew, and the family of the late Senator Edward M. Kennedy, who championed the legislation for years, but died before the bill was ultimately passed.

Summaries

Congressional Research Service Summary

The following summary was written by the Congressional Research Service, a well-respected nonpartisan arm of the Library of Congress. GovTrack did not write and has no control over these summaries.

4/28/2009--Introduced.

Matthew Shepard Hate Crimes Prevention Act - Adopts the definition of "hate crime" as set forth in the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 (i.e., a crime in which the defendant intentionally selects a victim or, in the case of a property crime, the property that is the object of the crime because of the actual or perceived race, color, religion, national origin, ethnicity, gender, disability, or sexual orientation of any person). Authorizes the Attorney General to: (1) provide state, local, or tribal law enforcement agencies with technical, forensic, prosecutorial, or other assistance in the investigation or prosecution of violent crimes and hate crimes; and (2) award grants to assist such agencies with the extraordinary expenses associated with the investigation and prosecution of hate crimes. Authorizes the Office of Justice Programs to award grants to state, local, or tribal programs designed to combat hate crimes committed by juveniles. Authorizes appropriations to the Department of Justice (DOJ), including the Community Relations Service, for FY2010-FY2012 to prevent and respond to hate crime acts. Amends the federal criminal code to prohibit willfully causing bodily injury to any person because of the actual or perceived race, color, religion, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity, or disability of such person. Amends the Hate Crimes Statistics Act to expand data collection and reporting requirements under such Act to include: (1) crimes manifesting prejudice based on gender and gender identity; and (2) hate crimes committed by and against juveniles. Declares that nothing in this Act shall be construed to prohibit the exercise of constitutionally-protected free speech.

To provide Federal assistance to States, local jurisdictions, and Indian tribes to prosecute hate crimes, and for other purposes.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

April 28, 2009

Mr. REID (for Mr. KENNEDY (for himself, Mr. LEAHY, Ms. SNOWE, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. SPECTER, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. DURBIN, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. LEVIN, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. WHITEHOUSE, Mr. CARDIN, Ms. KLOBUCHAR, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mrs. GILLIBRAND, Mr. MERKLEY, Mr. REED, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mr. KERRY, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. DODD, Mr. BAYH, Mr. UDALL of Colorado, Mrs. SHAHEEN, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. BROWN, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. CASEY, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. NELSON of Nebraska, Ms. LANDRIEU, Ms. CANTWELL, and Mr. AKAKA)) introduced the following bill; which was read twice and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary

A BILL

To provide Federal assistance to States, local jurisdictions, and Indian tribes to prosecute hate crimes, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the 'Matthew Shepard Hate Crimes Prevention Act'.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The incidence of violence motivated by the actual or perceived race, color, religion, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity, or disability of the victim poses a serious national problem.

(2) Such violence disrupts the tranquility and safety of communities and is deeply divisive.

(3) State and local authorities are now and will continue to be responsible for prosecuting the overwhelming majority of violent crimes in the United States, including violent crimes motivated by bias. These authorities can carry out their responsibilities more effectively with greater Federal assistance.

(4) Existing Federal law is inadequate to address this problem.

(5) A prominent characteristic of a violent crime motivated by bias is that it devastates not just the actual victim and the family and friends of the victim, but frequently savages the community sharing the traits that caused the victim to be selected.

(6) Such violence substantially affects interstate commerce in many ways, including the following:

(A) The movement of members of targeted groups is impeded, and members of such groups are forced to move across State lines to escape the incidence or risk of such violence.

(B) Members of targeted groups are prevented from purchasing goods and services, obtaining or sustaining employment, or participating in other commercial activity.

(C) Perpetrators cross State lines to commit such violence.

(D) Channels, facilities, and instrumentalities of interstate commerce are used to facilitate the commission of such violence.

(E) Such violence is committed using articles that have traveled in interstate commerce.

(7) For generations, the institutions of slavery and involuntary servitude were defined by the race, color, and ancestry of those held in bondage. Slavery and involuntary servitude were enforced, both prior to and after the adoption of the 13th amendment to the Constitution of the United States, through widespread public and private violence directed at persons because of their race, color, or ancestry, or perceived race, color, or ancestry. Accordingly, eliminating racially motivated violence is an important means of eliminating, to the extent possible, the badges, incidents, and relics of slavery and involuntary servitude.

(8) Both at the time when the 13th, 14th, and 15th amendments to the Constitution of the United States were adopted, and continuing to date, members of certain religious and national origin groups were and are perceived to be distinct 'races'. Thus, in order to eliminate, to the extent possible, the badges, incidents, and relics of slavery, it is necessary to prohibit assaults on the basis of real or perceived religions or national origins, at least to the extent such religions or national origins were regarded as races at the time of the adoption of the 13th, 14th, and 15th amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

(9) Federal jurisdiction over certain violent crimes motivated by bias enables Federal, State, and local authorities to work together as partners in the investigation and prosecution of such crimes.

(10) The problem of crimes motivated by bias is sufficiently serious, widespread, and interstate in nature as to warrant Federal assistance to States, local jurisdictions, and Indian tribes.

SEC. 3. DEFINITION OF HATE CRIME.

In this Act--

(1) the term 'crime of violence' has the meaning given that term in section 16, title 18, United States Code;

(2) the term 'hate crime' has the meaning given such term in section 280003(a) of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 (28 U.S.C. 994 note); and

(3) the term 'local' means a county, city, town, township, parish, village, or other general purpose political subdivision of a State.

SEC. 4. SUPPORT FOR CRIMINAL INVESTIGATIONS AND PROSECUTIONS BY STATE, LOCAL, AND TRIBAL LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICIALS.

(a) Assistance Other Than Financial Assistance-

(1) IN GENERAL- At the request of State, local, or tribal law enforcement agency, the Attorney General may provide technical, forensic, prosecutorial, or any other form of assistance in the criminal investigation or prosecution of any crime that--

(A) constitutes a crime of violence;

(B) constitutes a felony under the State, local, or tribal laws; and

(C) is motivated by prejudice based on the actual or perceived race, color, religion, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity, or disability of the victim, or is a violation of the State, local, or tribal hate crime laws.

(2) PRIORITY- In providing assistance under paragraph (1), the Attorney General shall give priority to crimes committed by offenders who have committed crimes in more than one State and to rural jurisdictions that have difficulty covering the extraordinary expenses relating to the investigation or prosecution of the crime.

(b) Grants-

(1) IN GENERAL- The Attorney General may award grants to State, local, and tribal law enforcement agencies for extraordinary expenses associated with the investigation and prosecution of hate crimes.

(2) OFFICE OF JUSTICE PROGRAMS- In implementing the grant program under this subsection, the Office of Justice Programs shall work closely with grantees to ensure that the concerns and needs of all affected parties, including community groups and schools, colleges, and universities, are addressed through the local infrastructure developed under the grants.

(3) APPLICATION-

(A) IN GENERAL- Each State, local, and tribal law enforcement agency that desires a grant under this subsection shall submit an application to the Attorney General at such time, in such manner, and accompanied by or containing such information as the Attorney General shall reasonably require.

(B) DATE FOR SUBMISSION - Applications submitted pursuant to subparagraph (A) shall be submitted during the 60-day period beginning on a date that the Attorney General shall prescribe.

(C) REQUIREMENTS- A State, local, and tribal law enforcement agency applying for a grant under this subsection shall--

(i) describe the extraordinary purposes for which the grant is needed;

(ii) certify that the State, local government, or Indian tribe lacks the resources necessary to investigate or prosecute the hate crime;

(iii) demonstrate that, in developing a plan to implement the grant, the State, local, and tribal law enforcement agency has consulted and coordinated with nonprofit, nongovernmental victim services programs that have experience in providing services to victims of hate crimes; and

(iv) certify that any Federal funds received under this subsection will be used to supplement, not supplant, non-Federal funds that would otherwise be available for activities funded under this subsection.

(4) DEADLINE- An application for a grant under this subsection shall be approved or denied by the Attorney General not later than 180 business days after the date on which the Attorney General receives the application.

(5) GRANT AMOUNT- A grant under this subsection shall not exceed $100,000 for any single jurisdiction in any 1-year period.

(6) REPORT- Not later than December 31, 2010, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report describing the applications submitted for grants under this subsection, the award of such grants, and the purposes for which the grant amounts were expended.

(7) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS- There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subsection $5,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2010 and 2011.

SEC. 5. GRANT PROGRAM.

(a) Authority To Award Grants- The Office of Justice Programs of the Department of Justice may award grants, in accordance with such regulations as the Attorney General may prescribe, to State, local, or tribal programs designed to combat hate crimes committed by juveniles, including programs to train local law enforcement officers in identifying, investigating, prosecuting, and preventing hate crimes.

(b) Authorization of Appropriations- There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section.

SEC. 6. AUTHORIZATION FOR ADDITIONAL PERSONNEL TO ASSIST STATE, LOCAL, AND TRIBAL LAW ENFORCEMENT.

There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Justice, including the Community Relations Service, for fiscal years 2010, 2011, and 2012 such sums as are necessary to increase the number of personnel to prevent and respond to alleged violations of section 249 of title 18, United States Code, as added by section 7 of this Act.

SEC. 7. PROHIBITION OF CERTAIN HATE CRIME ACTS.

(a) In General- Chapter 13 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

'Sec. 249. Hate crime acts

'(a) In General-

'(1) OFFENSES INVOLVING ACTUAL OR PERCEIVED RACE, COLOR, RELIGION, OR NATIONAL ORIGIN- Whoever, whether or not acting under color of law, willfully causes bodily injury to any person or, through the use of fire, a firearm, a dangerous weapon, or an explosive or incendiary device, attempts to cause bodily injury to any person, because of the actual or perceived race, color, religion, or national origin of any person--

'(A) shall be imprisoned not more than 10 years, fined in accordance with this title, or both; and

'(B) shall be imprisoned for any term of years or for life, fined in accordance with this title, or both, if--

'(i) death results from the offense; or

'(ii) the offense includes kidnapping or an attempt to kidnap, aggravated sexual abuse or an attempt to commit aggravated sexual abuse, or an attempt to kill.

'(2) OFFENSES INVOLVING ACTUAL OR PERCEIVED RELIGION, NATIONAL ORIGIN, GENDER, SEXUAL ORIENTATION, GENDER IDENTITY, OR DISABILITY-

'(A) IN GENERAL- Whoever, whether or not acting under color of law, in any circumstance described in subparagraph (B) or paragraph (3), willfully causes bodily injury to any person or, through the use of fire, a firearm, a dangerous weapon, or an explosive or incendiary device, attempts to cause bodily injury to any person, because of the actual or perceived religion, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity or disability of any person--

'(i) shall be imprisoned not more than 10 years, fined in accordance with this title, or both; and

'(ii) shall be imprisoned for any term of years or for life, fined in accordance with this title, or both, if--

'(I) death results from the offense; or

'(II) the offense includes kidnapping or an attempt to kidnap, aggravated sexual abuse or an attempt to commit aggravated sexual abuse, or an attempt to kill.

'(B) CIRCUMSTANCES DESCRIBED- For purposes of subparagraph (A), the circumstances described in this subparagraph are that--

'(i) the conduct described in subparagraph (A) occurs during the course of, or as the result of, the travel of the defendant or the victim--

'(I) across a State line or national border; or

'(II) using a channel, facility, or instrumentality of interstate or foreign commerce;

'(ii) the defendant uses a channel, facility, or instrumentality of interstate or foreign commerce in connection with the conduct described in subparagraph (A);

'(iii) in connection with the conduct described in subparagraph (A), the defendant employs a firearm, dangerous weapon, explosive or incendiary device, or other weapon that has traveled in interstate or foreign commerce; or

'(iv) the conduct described in subparagraph (A)--

'(I) interferes with commercial or other economic activity in which the victim is engaged at the time of the conduct; or

'(II) otherwise affects interstate or foreign commerce.

'(3) OFFENSES OCCURRING IN THE SPECIAL MARITIME OR TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION OF THE UNITED STATES- Whoever, within the special maritime or territorial jurisdiction of the United States, commits an offense described in paragraph (1) or (2) shall be subject to the same penalties as prescribed in those paragraphs.

'(b) Certification Requirement-

'(1) IN GENERAL- No prosecution of any offense described in this subsection may be undertaken by the United States, except under the certification in writing of the Attorney General, or his designee, that--

'(A) the State does not have jurisdiction;

'(B) the State has requested that the Federal Government assume jurisdiction;

'(C) the verdict or sentence obtained pursuant to State charges left demonstratively unvindicated the Federal interest in eradicating bias-motivated violence; or

'(D) a prosecution by the United States is in the public interest and necessary to secure substantial justice.

'(2) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION- Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to limit the authority of Federal officers, or a Federal grand jury, to investigate possible violations of this section.

'(c) Definitions- In this section--

'(1) the term 'bodily injury' has the meaning given such term in section 1365(h)(4) of this title, but does not include solely emotional or psychological harm to the victim;

'(2) the term 'explosive or incendiary device' has the meaning given such term in section 232 of this title;

'(3) the term 'firearm' has the meaning given such term in section 921(a) of this title; and

'(4) the term 'gender identity' for the purposes of this chapter means actual or perceived gender-related characteristics.'.

(b) Technical and Conforming Amendment- The analysis for chapter 13 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

'249. Hate crime acts.'.

SEC. 8. STATISTICS.

(a) In General- Subsection (b)(1) of the first section of the Hate Crime Statistics Act (28 U.S.C. 534 note) is amended by inserting 'gender and gender identity,' after 'race,'.

(b) Data- Subsection (b)(5) of the first section of the Hate Crime Statistics Act (28 U.S.C. 534 note) is amended by inserting ', including data about crimes committed by, and crimes directed against, juveniles' after 'data acquired under this section'.

SEC. 9. SEVERABILITY.

If any provision of this Act, an amendment made by this Act, or the application of such provision or amendment to any person or circumstance is held to be unconstitutional, the remainder of this Act, the amendments made by this Act, and the application of the provisions of such to any person or circumstance shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 10. RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.

For purposes of construing this Act and the amendments made by this Act the following shall apply:

(1) RELEVANT EVIDENCE- Courts may consider relevant evidence of speech, beliefs, or expressive conduct to the extent that such evidence is offered to prove an element of a charged offense or is otherwise admissible under the Federal Rules of Evidence. Nothing in this Act is intended to affect the existing rules of evidence.

(2) VIOLENT ACTS- This Act applies to violent acts motivated by actual or perceived race, color, religion, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity or disability of a victim.

(3) CONSTITUTIONAL PROTECTIONS- Nothing in this Act shall be construed to prohibit any constitutionally protected speech, expressive conduct or activities (regardless of whether compelled by, or central to, a system of religious belief), including the exercise of religion protected by the First Amendment and peaceful picketing or demonstration. The Constitution does not protect speech, conduct or activities consisting of planning for, conspiring to commit, or committing an act of violence.

(4) FREE EXPRESSION- Nothing in this Act shall be construed to allow prosecution based solely upon an individual's expression of racial, religious, political, or other beliefs or solely upon an individual's membership in a group advocating or espousing such beliefs.

HR 1913: Local Law Enforcement Hate Crimes Prevention Act of 2009

April 29, 2009

Background:

Representative John Conyers of Michigan introduced the Local Law Enforcement Hate Crimes Prevention Act of 2009 on April 2, 2009 and the bill was promptly referred to the House Committee on the Judiciary. Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts is sponsoring the companion bill (S. 909). The Judiciary marked up the bill on April 22, 2009 and April 23, 2009 and moved to the House floor. The committee amendments removed the "findings" portion contained in the original bill and also removed language concerning the Hate Crimes Statistics Act (28 U.S.C. 534). An amendment offered by Rep. John Conyers on the House floor was adopted on April 29, 2009. This amendment 1) clarifies the coverage of tribal lands, 2) extends the period for the Attorney General to approve applications for grants 3) clarifies that offenses committed with weapons can be considered hate crimes 4) clarifies jurisdictions of the bill and 5) limits prosecutions, trials, and punishment for offenses not resulting in death. The bill passed the house on April 29, 2009 by a vote of 249 to175. The Local Law Enforcement Hate Crimes Prevention Act of 2009 (H.R. 1913) currently carries one hundred twenty cosponsors and is under consideration in the Senate Judiciary Committee.

DEFINITION OF HATE CRIME:

"crime of violence" – defined in section 16, title 18, United States Code

"hate crime" – defined in section 280003(a) of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 (28 U.S.C. 994 note)

"local" - means a county, city, town, township, parish, village, or other general purpose political subdivision of a State.

SUPPORT FOR CRIMINAL INVESTIGATIONS AND PROSECUTIONS:
At the request of a state, local, or tribal law enforcement agency, the Attorney General (AG) may provide assistance in the criminal investigation of any crime that:

Constitutes an act of violence;
Constitutes a felony under the state, local, or tribal laws
Is motivated by prejudice based on race, color, religion, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity, or disability of the victim, or
Is a violation of state, local, or tribal hate crime laws.

The AG will give priority to crimes and offenders in multiple state jurisdictions and to rural jurisdictions, particularly those having difficulty covering "extraordinary expenses" relating to the investigation or prosecution of the crime. The AG may award grants to state, local, and Tribal law enforcement agencies for those expenses. The Office of Justice Programs (OJP) will implement the grant program and address the concerns and needs of all affected parties. Each state, local, and Tribal law enforcement agency that desires a grant must submit an application to the AG. Applications must be a 60-day period prescribed by the AG. A state, local, or Tribal law enforcement agency applying for a grant must:

Describe the "extraordinary purposes" for which the grant is needed
Certify that the state, local, or Indian tribe lacks the resources to investigation or prosecute the hate crime
Demonstrate that the state, local, or Tribal law enforcement agency has consulted with non-profit, nongovernmental service programs that provide services to victims of hate crimes
Certify that any federal funds granted will be used to supplement, not supplant, non-federal funds for specified activities

An application for a grant must be approved or denied by the AG not later than 180 business days after the date received. A grant must not exceed $100,000 for any single jurisdiction in any 1-year period. By December 31, 2011, the AG must submit a report to congress describing the applications, awarded grants, and purposes for which the grants were expended.

$5 million for each FY 2010 and FY 2011 is authorized to be appropriated for this program.

GRANT PROGRAM:
OJP may award grants with the regulations prescribed by the AG to state, local, or tribal programs designed to combat hate crimes committed by juveniles. This includes programs to train local law enforcement in identifying, investigating, prosecuting, and preventing hate crimes.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this program.

AUTHORIZATION FOR ADDITIONAL PERSONNEL
There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Justice, including the Community Relations Service, for fiscal years 2010, 2011, and 2012, such sums as are necessary to increase the number of personnel to prevent and respond to alleged hate crimes.

PROHIBITION OF CERTAIN HATE CRIME ACTS
This language adds a section entitled "Hate crime acts" to Chapter 13 of title 18, USC.
This section establishes that any person who attempts or commits a hate crime (as defined in the statute):

Shall be imprisoned not more than 10 years, fined, or both AND Shall be imprisoned for any term of years or for life if:

Death results from the offense
The offense includes kidnapping or an attempt to kidnap,
The offense includes aggravated sexual abuse, or an attempt to commit aggravated sexual abuse
Or an attempt to kill

Re: Senate Bill 11
ACLU Review of Constitutional Issues

Chair French, Vice-Chair Wielechowski:

Thank you for the opportunity to submit written testimony with respect to Senate Bill 11.

As you know, the American Civil Liberties Union of Alaska represents thousands of members and activists throughout the state who seek to preserve and expand individual freedoms and civil liberties guaranteed under the United States and Alaska Constitutions. In that regard, we would like to advise the Committee of several issues with respect to SB 11.

The ACLU supports legislation designed to protect the civil rights of individuals who may be targeted for violence or harassment based on membership in a historically disfavored class. Evidence establishes that transgender persons, and lesbian, gay and bisexual individuals face discrimination and are targeted for violence.

To the extent that AS.12.55.155(c)(22) already establishes as an aggravating factor that a "defendant knowingly direct[s] . . . conduct constituting the offense at a victim because of that person's race, sex, color, creed, physical or mental disability, ancestry, or national origin," it is appropriate that both "sexual orientation" and "gender identity" be included as protected classes.

The ACLU applauds and thanks Senator Davis, the Bill's sponsor, for her continuing commitment to advance equal protections for all Alaskans.

Too, as the Committee is aware, hate crimes legislation at the federal level has included protections based on sexual orientation and gender identity, based on the evidence of discrimination encountered by these classes.

Needed Protections of Speech and Associational Rights

The ACLU is very concerned, however, that the important First Amendment rights of all Alaskans must be carefully protected.

Whether under the US or Alaska Constitutions, the rights of freedom of speech and of association are crucial to our democratic society. The ACLU must oppose any legislation which would lead to governmental restrictions on, or chilling of, any speech or associational rights, even if those rights represent unpopular or repugnant views.

We hope that – through working with the Sponsor's office and the Judiciary Committee – we can address the inclusion of necessary protections of speech and associational rights in SB 11.

As currently drafted, the Bill would allow prosecution of a defendant and introduction at trial of constitutionally protected speech or association as substantive evidence of the defendant's motivation, whether or not that evidence directly related to the alleged crime.

For example, if a defendant were alleged to have targeted a victim who was Jewish, the defendant's membership in the Klu Klux Klan, or internet postings he wrote attacking Zionism could be introduced at trial. Such introduction would not only be unconstitutional, but also the basis for challenging and overturning a conviction.

Contrast with the above example, a defendant who – while attacking the same Jewish victim – states: "Jews have no place in America." Introduction of such evidence would not be based on the defendant's associations or beliefs, but rather relate to the attack and specifically relevant to his motivation to commit the alleged crime.

In order to differentiate between these two situations, we recommend the inclusion in SB 11 of language such as:

> In a prosecution for an offense under this section, evidence of expression or associations of the defendant may not be introduced as substantive evidence at trial, unless the evidence specifically relates to that offense.
> However, nothing in this section affects the rules of evidence governing the impeachment of a witness.

It is instructive to note that similar language was included in the Federal MATTHEW SHEPARD AND JAMES BYRD, JR. HATE CRIMES PREVENTION ACT, HR 2647; Public Law No. 111-084:

> SEC. 4710. RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.
> For purposes of construing this division and the amendments made by this division the following shall apply:
> (1) IN GENERAL.—Nothing in this division shall be construed to allow a court, in any criminal trial for an offense described under this division or an amendment made by this division, in the absence of a stipulation by the parties, to admit evidence of speech, beliefs, association, group membership, or expressive conduct unless that evidence is relevant and admissible under the Federal Rules of Evidence. Nothing in this division is intended to affect the existing rules of evidence.

Minor Amendments

Presuming the amendments outlined above, the ACLU will support SB 11.

Thank you again permitting us to share our concerns. Please feel free to contact the undersigned should you require any additional information.

Re: Senate Bill 11

Dear Senator Davis:

The Disability Law Center of Alaska supports Senate Bill 11, which proposes to increase the sentencing for crimes motivated by prejudice, bias, or hatred based on the victim's status, including physical or mental disability.

Through much of our country's history and well into the twentieth century, people with disabilities -- including those with developmental delays, epilepsy, cerebral palsy and other physical and mental impairments -- were seen as useless and dependent, hidden and excluded from society, either in their own homes or in institutions. Now, this history of isolation is gradually giving way to inclusion in all aspects of society, and people with disabilities everywhere are living and working in communities alongside family and friends. But this has not been a painless process. People with disabilities often seem "different" to people without disabilities. They may look different or talk differently. They may require the assistance of a wheelchair, a cane, or other assistive technologies. They may have seizures or have difficulty understanding seemingly simple directions.

These perceived differences evoke a range of emotions, from misunderstanding and apprehension to superiority and hatred. Bias against people with disabilities takes many forms, often resulting in discriminatory actions in employment, housing, and public accommodations. Laws like the Fair Housing Amendments Act, the Americans with Disabilities Act and the Rehabilitation Act are designed to protect people with disabilities from this type of prejudice.

Perhaps most unfortunately, disability bias can also manifest itself in the form of violence, and it is imperative that a message be sent to our state that these acts of bias motivated hatred are not acceptable in our society.

In 2009, the Bureau of Justice Statistics released a National Crime Victims Survey, which report was the first estimate of crime against people with disabilities. The findings reveal the harsh realities faced by this vulnerable population.

MEMBER OF THE NATIONAL DISABILITY RIGHTS NETWORK

- Age-adjusted rate of nonfatal violent crime against persons with disabilities was 1.5 times higher than the rate for persons without disabilities.
- Youth ages 12 to 19 with a disability experienced violence at nearly twice the rate as those without a disability.
- Persons with a disability had an age-adjusted rate of rape or sexual assault that was more than twice the rate for persons without a disability.
- Females with a disability had a higher victimization rate than males with a disability; males had a higher rate than females among those without a disability.
- Persons with a cognitive functioning disability had a higher risk of violent victimization than persons with any other type of disability.
- Persons with more than one type of disability accounted for about 56% of all violent crime victimizations against those with any disability.
- Nearly 1 in 5 violent crime victims with a disability believed that they became a victim because of their disability.

Too frequently, bias-motivated crimes against those with disabilities have gone unreported and, because of the special problems associated with investigating and prosecuting hate violence against an individual with a disability, unprosecuted. These factors contribute to the victimization of individuals with disabilities.

Senate Bill 11 is vitally important for this vulnerable population and must be enacted in order to bring the full protection of the law to those targeted for violent, bias motivated crimes simply because they have a disability.

Sincerely,

DISABILITY LAW CENTER OF ALASKA

SPONSOR STATEMENT FOR SB 15

"an Act relating to penalties for certain alcohol offenses involving persons under 21 years of age committed by a sex offender or a child kidnapper."

Senate Bill 15 makes providing alcohol for those who are under 21 years of age by people with a history or background as a sex offender an aggravating offense.

If SB 15 is enacted, penalties could increase a violation to a Class B misdemeanor, a class A misdemeanor would be punishable as a class C felony and a class C felony goes to a class B felony.

Currently there are laws against those who would commit each crime separately. However, what is being discovered that those who are providing alcohol to people under 21 have the intent to commit a sexual offense. There have been instances where sex trafficking and sex offenses are preceded by providing alcohol to those under 21 years of age.

Re: SB 15 Changes and Fiscal Notes

CHANGES TO SB 15 FROM 27-LS0119\M to 27-LS0119\I
Two substantive changes:

Lines 5 and 6 on page 1:
Aggravated penalties applies to:

- AS 04.16.51 Furnishing or delivery of alcoholic beverages to persons under the age of 21.
- AS 04.16.055 Room rental for purposes of consuming alcoholic beverages.
- AS 04.16.057 Permitting a person under 21 years of age to possess liquor in dwelling.

The addition of AS 12.63.100 -- the definition of sex offender child kidnapper.

FISCAL NOTES
There were two fiscal notes issued thus far for SB 15.

- Department of Law issued an indeterminate fiscal note six days before hearing.
- Department of Corrections issued a substantial fiscal note the morning of the bill hearing.

In the fiscal note analysis the DOC says their data from the past 15 years would indicate that there would be 3.5 total convictions per year of persons who were both a sex offender and were caught providing alcohol to the underage. The fiscal note seems to reflect 7 convictions a year (3.5 at a class C felony and another 3.5 at a class B felony). Also, there were other issues concerning the DOC calculations.

This was discussed briefly in committee. However, the Chair felt that the fiscal note was better dealt with in either Judiciary or once the bill picked up the additional referral, the Finance Committee.

The DOC Director of Administrative Services and their Legislative Liasion met with our office, they did agree that there may be an error and that the fiscal note needs to be adjusted.

Analysis

This bill would elevate the offenses of furnishing alcohol to persons under the age of 21 (under AS 04.16.051 - AS 04.16.057) if the offense is committed by a sex offender or child kidnapper. For example, if the offense committed under AS 04.16.051 - AS 04.16.057 is a class C felony, the offense would be elevated to a class B felony.

Based on averages over the past 10 years*

Sec 1(1): Class B misdemeanors - No increased impact to the Dept. of Corrections.

Sec 1(2): Average number of sex offender or child kidnappers coming in with a second offense of furnishing alcohol to a minor/class A misdemeanor per year = 4 offenders.
* This offense would be elevated to a class C felony, which would be an increase in sentence of 243 mandays.
* This would be an overall increase of 972 mandays per year.
* At the current daily cost of care ($136.44) this would be an increase of $132,619.7 annually.

Sec 1(3): Average number of sex offenders or child kidnappers coming in with a second offense of furnishing alcohol to a minor/class C felony per year = 1 offender.
* This offense would be elevated to a class B felony, which would be an increase in sentence of 730 mandays (2 years).
*In Year 1 (FY2012) 1 new incarceration at 365 mandays per year at the current daily cost of care ($136.44) would be an increase of $19,800.60.
* In Years 2 thru 6 averaging 1 new incarceration per year would be an overall increase of 730 mandays per year (2 year increase in sentence will result in an overlap in the out years of inmates being housed at one time).
* At the current daily cost of care ($136.44) this would be an increase of $99,601.2 annually (starting in the second year).

For example, if the offense committed under AS 04.16.051 - AS 04.16.057 is a class C felony, the offense would be elevated to a class B felony.

Should this legislation pass, the Department of Corrections has data to support an average of 3.5 convictions per year under the following sections:

Section 1(2): if the underlying offense is a class A misemeanor, a sex offender or child kidnapper committing the offense is guilty of a class C felony and shall be punished as provided in AS 12.55;

3.5 convictions per year represents an increase of 860 mandays per year @ $136.44/da = $117.3/yr

Section 1(3) : if the underlying offense is a class C felony, a sex offender or child kidnapper committing the offense is guilty of a class B felony and shall be punished as provided in AS 12.55.

3.5 convictions per year represents an increase of 2,579 mandays per year @ $136.44/day = $351.9/yr

BILL NO. SB 015 \M

Analysis

SB 15 raises one level the severity of offenses for providing alcohol to persons under 21 years of age if the offender is a sex offender or child kidnapper. For example, a nonlicensee who furnishes alcohol to a person under 21 years of age commits a class A misdemeanor for a first offense. SB 15 would make this offense a class C felony if the offender was a sex offender or child kidnapper.

This would have an indeterminate fiscal impact on the Department of Law. Any time an offense is raised from a misdemeanor to a felony there is an impact. Felony prosecutions require more time – for example, a felony requires a grand jury indictment and a jury of 12 persons.

Re: SB 15 – Alcohol Offenses Committed by Sex Offenders, Child Kidnappers

Dear Senator Meyer,

On behalf of the Advisory Board on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse, I would like to express our support for your efforts to protect children and youth from falling victim to sexual exploitation, trafficking, and kidnapping. While there is no specific data reflecting how often a young person gains access to alcohol through a convicted sex offender or child kidnapper, there is data that shows that young people gain access to alcohol at least one third of the time from adults or friends.

The Center for Behavioral Health Statistics and Quality reported in February 2011 that, between 2006 and 2009, 93.4% of the 709,000 adolescents aged 12-14 who reported drinking alcohol gained access to the alcohol — for free — from other people. Of those, 13.5% were given the alcohol by an unrelated adult. In Alaska, 34.7% of traditional high schools students participating in the 2009 Youth Risk Behavior Survey reported that they had used alcohol in the past thirty days and that they got that alcohol from someone else. While we don't know who provided that alcohol, or whether they were a convicted sex offender or child kidnapper, we do know there is connection between providing alcohol to minors and victimization.

Recent new coverage of sexual exploitation of young Alaskan women by Channel 2, KTUU news highlighted the role of drugs and alcohol in this form of victimization. Young people are often ensnared in human trafficking and sexual exploitation through the provision of drugs and alcohol, among other "grooming" efforts. By creating an aggravating factor to target individuals who use alcohol to coerce, induce, or otherwise attempt to engage a young person in sexual activity will help to address this problem.

Given the traumatic and potentially lifelong harm that can result from situations in when predators use alcohol (and other drugs) to prey upon young people, SB 15 provides a balanced approach to increasing the penalty for individuals who engage in this sort of victimization and exploitation. We appreciate your efforts on behalf our most vulnerable youth.

Sincerely,

J. Kate Burkhart
Executive Director

A BILL

FOR AN ACT ENTITLED

"An Act classifying certain substances as schedule IIIA controlled substances; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

 Section 1. AS 11.71.160(f) is amended to read:

(f) Schedule IIIA includes, unless specifically excepted or unless listed in another schedule, any material, compound, mixture, or preparation that contains any quantity of the following substances or that contains any of its salts, isomers, whether optical, position, or geometric, or salts of isomers whenever the existence of those salts, isomers, or salts of isomers is possible within the specific chemical designation:

(1) hashish;

(2) hash oil or hashish oil;

(3) tetrahydrocannabinols;

(4) parahexyl;

(5) dronabinol (synthetic) in sesame oil and encapsulated in a soft gelatin capsule in a U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved drug product; [AND]

(6) nabilone;

(7) (6aR,10aR)-9-(hydroxymethyl)-6, 6-dimethyl-3-(2-methyloctan-2-yl)-6a,7,10,10a-tetrahydrobenzo[c]chromen-1-ol, also known as HU-210;

(8) (6aS,10aS)-9-(hydroxymethyl)-6,6-dimethyl-3-(2-methyloctan-2-yl)-6a,7,10,10a-tetrahydrobenzo[c]chromen-1-ol, also known as Dexanabinol or HU-211;

(9) 1-pentyl-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole, also known as JWH-018;

(10) 1-Butyl-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole, also known as JWH-073;

FROM: Senator Kevin Meyer

DATE: February 9, 2011

RE: SB 17 Request for Hearing

I respectfully request the Senate Judiciary Committee to schedule a hearing for SB 17, "An Act classifying certain synthetic cannabinoids as schedule IIA controlled substances; and providing for an effective date."

The following documents are attached and will be sent electronically:

- Current version of the bill: 27-LS0121\B
- Sponsor Statement for version B
- Sectional Analysis
- Letters of support
- Back up information
- Fiscal Notes
- Witness/Testimony:
  - Dennis Wheeler, Anchorage Municipality Attorney
  - Jennifer Messick, Assistant Municipal Prosecutor
  - Sgt. Robert Thompson, Fairbanks Police Department
- Staff member assigned to the bill: Christine R. Marasigan, 465-6876

This bill would make it unlawful to sell, use, purchase, possess, manufacture transport or deliver synthetic cannabinoids otherwise known as "Spice" or "K2."

Please contact Christine if you have any questions regarding this legislation.

SPONSOR STATEMENT FOR SB 17

"An Act classifying certain synthetic cannabinoids as schedule IIA controlled substances; and providing for an effective date."

SB 17 would classify certain synthetic cannabinoids, commonly known as K2 or Spice as a schedule IIA controlled substance.

This new drug is dangerous, cheap and legally available. Sold in smoke shops and gas stations as incense, it is marketed to people who are interested in herbal alternatives to cannabis. Synthetic cannabinoids are inexpensive, accessible and undetectable in most drug tests. Here in Alaska, the drug enjoys some popularity amongst North Slope workers, U.S. Military members and students. The U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, Municipality of Anchorage and the U.S. Military have all taken action to control or prohibit use of this drug.

Synthetic cannabinoids are abused mainly by smoking organic material which is sprayed with the drug, or prepared in a drink. Users experience severe adverse reactions including dangerously high blood pressure, hallucinations, nausea, vomiting, agitation, delusions, loss of consciousness, and panic attacks. The chemical composition of synthetic cannabinoids is considerably more potent and intense than tetrahydrocannabinol (THC the active ingredient in marijuana).

11 states have passed legislation classifying synthetic marijuana as a controlled substance. 21 states, including Alaska, have introduced similar legislation. Should SB 17 pass, it will be unlawful to sell, use, purchase, possess, manufacture, transport or deliver synthetic cannabinoids.

MEMORANDUM January 27, 2011

SUBJECT: Sectional Summary - SB 17 (Work Order No. 27-LS0121\B)

TO: Senator Kevin Meyer
Attn: Christine Marasigan

FROM: Gerald P. Luckhaupt
Assistant Revisor

You have requested a sectional summary of the above-described bill. As a preliminary matter, please note that a sectional summary of a bill should not be considered an authoritative interpretation of the bill -- the bill itself is the best statement of its contents.

Section 1 of the bill amends AS 11.71.150(b), by adding certain compounds to the list of Schedule IIA controlled substances contained in that section. The compounds that are being included:

(21) (6aR,10aR)-9-(hydroxymethyl)-6, 6-dimethyl-3-(2-methyloctan-2-yl)-6a,7,10,10a-tetrahydrobenzo[c]chromen-1-ol, also known as HU-210;

(22) (6aS,10aS)-9-(hydroxymethyl)-6, 6-dimethyl-3-(2-methyloctan-2-yl)-6a,7,10,10a-tetrahydrobenzo[c]chromen-1-ol, also known as Dexanabinol or HU-211;

(23) 1-Pentyl-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole, also known as JWH-018;

(24) 1-Butyl-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole, also known as JWH-073;

(25) (2-methyl-1-propyl-1H-indol-3-yl)-1-naphthalenyl-methanone, also known as JWH-015;

(26) 1-pentyl-3-(4-chloro-1-naphthoyl)indole, also known as JWH-398;

(27) 1-pentyl-3-(2-methoxyphenylacetyl)indole, also known as JWH-250;

(28) 1-hexyl-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole, also known as JWH-019;

(29) 1-(2-(4-(morpholinyl)ethyl))-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole, also known as JWH-200;

(30) 2-[(1R,3S)-3-hydroxycyclohexyl]-5-(2-methyloctan-2-yl)phenol, also known as CP 47, 497, and homologues are commonly known, or have been identified by other states or the federal government, as forms of synthetic marijuana.

Section 2 of the bill provides an effective date.

Re: Senate Bill 17

Dear Senator Meyer,

Thank you for introducing Senate Bill 17, "An Act classifying certain synthetic cannabinoids as schedule IIA controlled substances; and providing for an effective date."

The Municipality of Anchorage fully supports the passage of SB 17 and its companion bill, HB 7. In the last few years, the use of synthetic cannabinoids has quickly become a significant health and public safety issue.

Due to the huge range in potency between the various compounds and products, municipal first responders have encountered users of these drugs having severe reactions, including from bizarre and dangerous behavior to unconsciousness and death. Users who operate machinery, especially motor vehicles, have had significant accidents and present a danger to others that is on par with operating under the influence of alcohol.

In response, the Municipality has enacted its own local code, but does not have the jurisdiction to deal with the influx of the drug on a state-wide basis or impose the kinds of meaningful criminal sentences that are needed to stem the manufacture, distribution, and sale of these drugs.

Thank you again for introducing this important legislation.

Sincerely,

Dan Sullivan

Juneau AK 99801

Dear Senator Meyer:

As the Chief of Police for the Fairbanks Police Department, I would like to extend my support of Senate Bill No. 17 "An Act classifying certain synthetic cannabinoids as schedule IIA controlled substances."

According to the U.S. Department of Justice Drug Enforcement Administration, these substances have no known therapeutic use and are known to cause a variety of effects including seizures, hallucinations, psychotic episodes, and non-responsiveness. In addition the Alaska Information Analysis Center (AKIAC) has reported in studies that subjects have reported having difficulties with balance, slurred speech, and being light headed.

These cannabinoids present a significant threat to the safety of Alaska's citizens as long as they remain unclassified. Without this new legislation a person who is under the influence of synthetic cannabinoids while operating a motor vehicle is not in violation of the law. This presents a clear danger to the citizens of Alaska, as someone could potentially be under the influence of a synthetic cannabinoid while driving and experience hallucinations, seizures, or a psychotic episode. This is not a hypothetical situation and the Fairbanks Police Department has already investigated a motor vehicle accident where the driver of the vehicle was having seizures as a result of consuming synthetic cannabinoids.

By classifying synthetic cannabinoids as a schedule II controlled substance, the act of operating a motor vehicle under the influence of a synthetic cannabinoid would become an illegal act. This bill would therefore have a direct impact on the safety of the citizens of the State of Alaska.

Sincerely

Laren Zager

Re: SB 17 – Regulation of Synthetic Cannabinoids

Dear Senator Meyer,

On behalf of the Advisory Board on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse, I would like to express our thanks for your efforts to regulate synthetic marijuana or "cannabinoids." These products pose a grave risk to youth and adults, causing serious health consequences and impairments to users of these drugs.

The dangers posed by synthetic marijuana are serious. While the base products may be natural, the chemicals used to mimic the properties of THC are not approved for human consumption. National news reports on the effects of these products include elevated heart rate and blood pressure, extreme anxiety, poisoning, nausea and vomiting, hallucinations, overdoses, and even addiction.

The American Association of Poison Control Centers reported more than 3,000 calls related to poisoning by synthetic marijuana products in 2010 – and nearly 400 calls since January 1 of this year. The U.S. Army banned use of synthetic marijuana by service members in August 2010. The U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA) exercised its emergency scheduling authority to temporarily control five chemicals used in synthetic marijuana products (JWH-018, JWH-073, JWH-200, CP-47,497, and cannabicyclohexanol). This federal regulation is limited in duration (12-18 months), leaving Alaskans at risk after that time without the state taking action.

The effects of synthetic marijuana are being felt right here in Alaska. News reports of crimes involving these products have come from Fairbanks and Anchorage. The U.S. Army reported courts martial and non-judicial discipline of more than thirty soldiers in Alaska by December 2010. The Anchorage School District reports situations requiring medical care due to use by students (though not to the same extent as actual marijuana).

Given the health consequences and the role synthetic marijuana can play in criminal activity, there is a more than adequate basis for the regulation of these products to protect the health and safety of Alaskans. Thank you for your work to protect Alaskans from these harmful products.

Sincerely,

J. Kate Burkhart

DEA MOVES TO EMERGENCY CONTROL SYNTHETIC MARIJUANA

Agency Will Study Whether To Permanently Control Five Substances

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The United States Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) is using its emergency scheduling authority to temporarily control five chemicals (JWH-018, JWH-073, JWH-200, CP-47,497, and cannabicyclohexanol) used to make "fake pot" products. Except as authorized by law, this action will make possessing and selling these chemicals or the products that contain them illegal in the U.S. for at least one year while the DEA and the United States Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) further study whether these chemicals and products should be permanently controlled.

A Notice of Intent to Temporarily Control was published in the Federal Register today to alert the public to this action. After no fewer than 30 days, DEA will publish in the Federal Register a Final Rule to Temporarily Control these chemicals for at least 12 months with the possibility of a six-month extension. They will be designated as Schedule I substances, the most restrictive category, which is reserved for unsafe, highly abused substances with no medical usage.

Over the past year, smokable herbal blends marketed as being "legal" and providing a marijuana-like high, have become increasingly popular, particularly among teens and young adults. These products consist of plant material that has been coated with research chemicals that mimic THC, the active ingredient in marijuana, and are sold at a variety of retail outlets, in head shops and over the Internet. These chemicals, however, have not been approved by the FDA for human consumption and there is no oversight of the manufacturing process. Brands such as "Spice," "K2," "Blaze," and "Red X Dawn" are labeled as incense to mask their intended purpose.

Since 2009, DEA has received an increasing number of reports from poison centers, hospitals and law enforcement regarding these products. Fifteen states have already taken action to control one or more of these chemicals. The Comprehensive Crime Control Act of 1984 amends the Controlled Substances Act (CSA) to allow the DEA Administrator to emergency schedule an abused, harmful, non-medical substance in order to avoid an imminent public health crisis while the formal rule-making procedures described in the CSA are being conducted.

"The American public looks to the DEA to protect its children and communities from those who would exploit them for their own gain," said DEA Acting Administrator Michele M. Leonhart. "Makers of these harmful products mislead their customers into thinking that 'fake pot' is a harmless alternative to illegal drugs, but that is not the case. Today's action will call further attention to the risks of ingesting unknown compounds and will hopefully take away any incentive to try these products."

and other information in your case record, we will try to resolve it. * * * * * * * * * *

(Emphasis added). We provide similar definitions of the terms "marked" and "extreme" in the listings section for children, with criteria appropriate to childhood.

Why are we providing a limited reopening of the public comment period?

In response to the NPRM, we received many public comments that seemed to misunderstand our current policy, what changes we were proposing, and how the proposals might affect adults and children. We believe that much of the confusion was caused by our failure to provide sufficiently detailed information about our current policies and where our proposals came from. We apologize for that omission, which we have corrected in this notice.

Although we received a wide variety of comments, we are reopening the public comment period on a limited basis to specifically address the misunderstanding of our current and proposed policy regarding the use of standardized tests. We are requesting public comment only on this issue in light of the clarification we are providing in this notice.

Many commenters focused on two aspects of our proposed rule: (1) A definition of "marked" based on a standardized test score that is two standard deviations below the mean; and, (2) a separate definition of "marked" based on functioning that would be the equivalent of such a score if there were a standardized test. As discussed above, neither of these proposals represents new policy; both are based on our longstanding rules. However, some commenters said that our proposal would encourage our adjudicators to use standardized tests. Many said that we should drop all reference to standardized tests in the mental illness sections of the proposed rules and that the change would reduce the number of children and adults with serious mental disorders who qualify for disability benefits. Some who are already beneficiaries or who have family members who are beneficiaries were concerned that they would lose their benefits.

We did not intend for, and do not believe that, our proposed rules would do any of these things. The childhood mental disorders listings have contained a provision defining "marked" limitation as a score that is two standard deviations below the mean on a standardized test for 20 years. We developed those rules with information we received from a group of mental health experts. We did not propose to change that provision or the way we determine disability in children with serious mental disorders. We proposed only to extend the provision to adults since it has worked well in childhood claims.

The proposed rules for adults and children do not state that adjudicators should obtain standardized tests, encourage them to do so, or indicate that there are standardized tests for all serious mental disorders. Rather, our proposed rules state only that if a person has a standardized test and the scores are two standard deviations below the mean, the test will show that the person has a "marked" limitation. Consistent with our current childhood rules, the proposed rules also state that adjudicators must not rely on the results of standardized tests alone but must consider all of the evidence in the person's case record.

Since the beginning of 2001, our functional equivalence regulation has contained an alternative rule defining "marked" limitation for children based on functioning that would be consistent with a score on a standardized test that is two standard deviations below the mean, if there were such a test. As with the provision for actual scores from an actual test, the rule provides that we will find that the child has a marked limitation if the child is functioning at that level. The regulation section, like the proposed rule for the mental disorders listings, also provides other definitions for the term "marked." We began using this regulation in 1997, 13 years ago. The number of awards of children who apply for SSI has not fallen since that time.[13] Given this experience, we believe that it was appropriate to include the rule in both the adult and child mental disorders listings.

Perhaps most importantly, it appeared that many commenters did not understand that we do not deny a person's claim merely because his or her impairment(s) does not meet or medically equal the criteria of our listings. As under our current rules, adults with mental disorders who cannot perform their past work or a significant number of jobs in the national economy considering their age, education, and work experience would still be able to qualify under other rules we have for finding persons disabled.

We also want to make clear that we do not reexamine the entitlement of beneficiaries when we revise listings. When we periodically perform continuing disability reviews to determine if beneficiaries are still disabled, we continue to use the same listing section we used to make our most recent favorable decision.[14] Thus, beneficiaries who qualified under a current listing would continue to qualify as long as their impairments continued to meet or medically equal the current listing.

In light of the importance of this issue and the widespread misunderstanding of our proposed rules, we are reopening the comment period for the limited purpose of allowing interested persons to provide any additional comments they may have on our proposed policy regarding the use of standardized tests.

Michael J. Astrue,

Commissioner of Social Security.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Drug Enforcement Administration

21 CFR Part 1308

[Docket No. DEA–345N]

Schedules of Controlled Substances: Temporary Placement of Five Synthetic Cannabinoids Into Schedule I AGENCY: Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA), U.S. Department of Justice.

ACTION: Notice of Intent.

SUMMARY: The Deputy Administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) is issuing this notice of intent to temporarily place five synthetic cannabinoids into the Controlled Substances Act (CSA) pursuant to the temporary scheduling provisions under 21 U.S.C. 811(h) of the CSA. The substances are 1-pentyl-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole (JWH–018), 1-butyl-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole (JWH–073), 1-[2-(4-morpholinyl)ethyl]-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole (JWH–200), 5-(1,1-dimethylheptyl)-2-[(1*R*,3*S*)-3-hydroxycyclohexyl]-phenol (CP–47,497), and 5-(1,1-dimethyloctyl)-2-[(1*R*,3*S*)-3-hydroxycyclohexyl]-phenol (cannabicyclohexanol; CP–47,497 C8 homologue). This intended action is based on a finding by the DEA Deputy Administrator that the placement of these synthetic cannabinoids into Schedule I of the CSA is necessary to avoid an imminent hazard to the public safety. Finalization of this action will impose criminal sanctions and regulatory controls of Schedule I substances under the CSA on the manufacture, distribution, possession, importation, and exportation of these synthetic cannabinoids.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Christine A. Sannerud, Ph.D., Chief, Drug and Chemical Evaluation Section, Office of Diversion Control, Drug Enforcement Administration, 8701 Morrissette Drive, Springfield, VA 22152, telephone (202) 307–7183, fax (202) 353–1263, or e-mail ode@dea.usdoj.gov.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Background

The Comprehensive Crime Control Act of 1984 (Pub. L. 98–473), which was signed into law on October 12, 1984, amended section 201 of the CSA (21 U.S.C. 811) to give the Attorney General the authority to temporarily place a substance into Schedule I of the CSA for one year without regard to the requirements of 21 U.S.C. 811(b) if he finds that such action is necessary to avoid imminent hazard to the public safety. The Attorney General may extend the temporary scheduling up to six months. A substance may be temporarily scheduled under the emergency provisions of the CSA if it is not listed in any other schedule under section 202 of the CSA (21 U.S.C. 812) or if there is no exemption or approval in effect under 21 U.S.C. 355 for the substance. The Attorney General has delegated his authority under 21 U.S.C. 811 to the Administrator of DEA (28 CFR 0.100). The Administrator has redelegated this function to the Deputy Administrator, pursuant to 28 CFR, appendix to subpart R, section 12.

Section 201(h)(4) of the CSA (21 U.S.C. 811(h)(4)) requires the Deputy Administrator to notify the Assistant Secretary for Health, delegate of the Secretary of Health and Human Services, of her intention to temporarily place a substance into Schedule I of the CSA. Comments submitted by the Assistant Secretary for Health in response to this notification, including whether there is an exemption or approval in effect for the substance in question under the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act, shall be taken into consideration before a final order is published.

In making a finding that placing a substance temporarily into Schedule I of the CSA is necessary to avoid an imminent hazard to the public safety, the Deputy Administrator is required to consider three of the eight factors set forth in section 201(c) of the CSA (21 U.S.C. 811(c)). These factors are as follows: (4) History and current pattern of abuse; (5) The scope, duration and significance of abuse; and (6) What, if any, risk there is to the public health.

Synthetic Cannabinoids

Synthetic cannabinoids have been developed over the last 30 years for research purposes to investigate the cannabinoid system. No legitimate non-research uses have been identified for these synthetic cannabinoids. They have not been approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for human consumption. These THC-like synthetic cannabinoids, 1-pentyl-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole (JWH–018), 1-butyl-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole (JWH–073), 1-[2-(4-morpholinyl)ethyl]-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole (JWH–200), 5-(1,1-dimethylheptyl)-2-[(1*R*,3*S*)-3-hydroxycyclohexyl]-phenol (CP–47,497), and 5-(1,1-dimethyloctyl)-2-[(1*R*,3*S*)-3-hydroxycyclohexyl]-phenol (cannabicyclohexanol; CP–47,497 C8 homologue), are so termed for their THC-like pharmacological properties. Though they have similar properties to delta-9-tetrahydrocannabinol (THC) found in marijuana and have been found to be more potent than THC in animal studies. Numerous herbal products have been analyzed and JWH–073, JWH–018, JWH–200, CP–47,497, and cannabicyclohexanol have been identified in varying mixture profiles and amounts spiked on plant material.

Factor 4. History and Current Pattern of Abuse

The emergence of these synthetic cannabinoids represents a recent phenomenon in the designer drug market. Since the initial identification of JWH–018 in December 2008, many additional synthetic cannabinoids with purported psychotropic effects have been identified in related products. The popularity of these THC-like synthetic cannabinoids has greatly increased in the United States and they are being abused for their psychoactive properties. Primarily found laced on plant material, these synthetic cannabinoids are also being abused alone as self-reported on Internet discussion boards. This abuse has been characterized by both acute and long term public health and safety problems. Even though there is no accepted use for these synthetic cannabinoids, multiple shipments of JWH–018 and JWH–073 have been intercepted by U.S. Customs and Border Protection in 2010, with one being in excess of 50 kilograms. Additionally, bulk loads of JWH–018 and JWH–200 have been seized by law enforcement in 2010. In Casper, Wyoming, products seized in a raid, which were laced with synthetic cannabinoids, were found in conjunction with illicit drugs.

The products containing these THC-like synthetic cannabinoids are marketed as "legal" alternatives to marijuana and are being sold over the Internet and in tobacco and smoke shops, drug paraphernalia shops, and convenience stores. These synthetic cannabinoids alone or spiked on plant material have the potential to be extremely harmful due to their method of manufacture and high pharmacological potency. DEA has been made aware that smoking these synthetic cannabinoids for the purpose of achieving intoxication and experiencing the psychoactive effects is identified as a reason for emergency room visits and calls to poison control centers.

As of October 15, 2010, 15 states in the United States, European and Scandinavian countries have controlled one or more of the synthetic cannabinoids DEA is temporarily scheduling here.

Factor 5. Scope, Duration and Significance of Abuse

According to forensic laboratory reports, the first appearance of these synthetic cannabinoids in the United States occurred in November 2008, when U.S. Customs and Border Protection analyzed "Spice" products. From January 2010 through September 2010, the National Forensic Laboratory Information System, a national repository of drug evidence analyses from forensic laboratories across the United States, reported over 500 exhibits relating to these synthetic cannabinoids from various States including Alabama, Arkansas, California, Florida, Hawaii, Iowa, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Minnesota, Missouri, North Dakota, Nebraska, Nevada, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia. Additionally, the American Association of Poison Control Centers (AAPCC) has reported receiving over 1,500 calls as of September 27, 2010, relating to products spiked with these synthetic cannabinoids from 48 states and the District of Columbia.

Factor 6. What, if Any, Risk There Is to the Public Health

JWH–018, JWH–073, JWH–200, CP–47,497, and cannabicyclohexanol share pharmacological similarities with the Schedule I substance THC. Health warnings have been issued by numerous state public health departments and poison control centers describing the adverse health effects associated with these synthetic cannabinoids and their related products including agitation, anxiety, vomiting, tachycardia, elevated blood pressure, seizures, hallucinations and non-responsiveness. Case reports describe psychotic episodes, withdrawal, and dependence associated with use of these synthetic cannabinoids, similar to syndromes observed in cannabis abuse. Emergency room physicians have reported admissions connected to the abuse of these synthetic cannabinoids. Additionally, when responding to incidents involving individuals who have reportedly smoked these synthetic cannabinoids, first responders report that these individuals suffer from intense hallucinations. Detailed chemical analysis by DEA and other investigators have found these synthetic cannabinoids spiked on plant material in products marketed to the general public. The risk of adverse health effects is further increased by the fact that similar products vary in the composition and concentration of synthetic cannabinoids(s) spiked on the plant material.

Self-reported abuse of these THC-like synthetic cannabinoids alone and spiked on plant material appear on Internet discussion boards. According to self-reports, these substances are cannabis-like (or THC-like) in their psychoactive effects and are more potent than THC in this regard. The most common route of administration of these synthetic cannabinoids is by smoking, using a pipe, water pipe, or rolling the drug-spiked plant material in cigarette papers.

The marketing of products that contain one or more of these synthetic cannabinoids is geared towards teens and young adults. Despite disclaimers that the products are not intended for human consumption, retailers promote that routine urinalysis tests will not typically detect the presence of these synthetic cannabinoids.

Furthermore, a number of the products and synthetic cannabinoids appear to originate from foreign sources and are manufactured in the absence of quality controls and devoid of regulatory oversight. These products and associated synthetic cannabinoids are readily accessible via the Internet.

DEA has considered the three criteria for placing a substance into Schedule I of the CSA (21 U.S.C. 812). The data available and reviewed for JWH–073, JWH–018, JWH–200, CP–47,497, and cannabicyclohexanol indicate that these synthetic cannabinoids each have a high potential for abuse, no currently accepted medical use in treatment in the United States and are not safe for use under medical supervision.

Based on the above data, the continued uncontrolled manufacture, distribution, importation, exportation, and abuse of JWH–018, JWH–073, JWH–200, CP–47,497, and cannabicyclohexanol pose an imminent hazard to the public safety. DEA is not aware of any recognized therapeutic uses of these synthetic cannabinoids in the United States. As required by section 201(h)(4) of the CSA (21 U.S.C. 811(h)), the Deputy Administrator in a letter dated October 6, 2010, notified the Assistant Secretary of Health of the intention to temporarily place five synthetic cannabinoids in Schedule I.

In accordance with the provisions of section 201(h) of the CSA (21 U.S.C. 811(h)) and 28 CFR 0.100, the Deputy Administrator has considered the available data and the three factors required to support a determination to temporarily schedule five synthetic cannabinoids: 1-butyl-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole, 1-pentyl-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole, 1-[2-(4-morpholinyl)ethyl]-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole, 5-(1,1-dimethylheptyl)-2-[(1*R*,3*S*)-3-hydroxycyclohexyl]-phenol, and 5-(1,1-dimethyloctyl)-2-[(1*R*,3*S*)-3-hydroxycyclohexyl]-phenol in Schedule I of the CSA and finds that placement of these synthetic cannabinoids into Schedule I of the CSA is necessary to avoid an imminent hazard to the public safety.

Because the Deputy Administrator finds that it is necessary to temporarily place these synthetic cannabinoids into Schedule I to avoid an imminent hazard to the public safety, the final order, if issued, will be effective on the date of publication of the order in the Federal Register. JWH–018, JWH–073, JWH–200, CP–47,497, and cannabicyclohexanol will be subject to the regulatory controls and administrative, civil and criminal sanctions applicable to the manufacture, distribution, possession, importing and exporting of a Schedule I controlled substance under the CSA. Further, it is the intention of the Deputy Administrator to issue such a final order as soon as possible after the expiration of thirty days from the date of publication of this notice and the date that notification was transmitted to the Assistant Secretary for Health.

Regulatory Certifications

Regulatory Flexibility Act

The Deputy Administrator hereby certifies that this rulemaking has been drafted in accordance with the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. 601–612), has reviewed this regulation, and by approving it certifies that this regulation will not have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities. This action provides a notice of intent to temporarily place 1-butyl-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole, 1-pentyl-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole, 1-[2-(4-morpholinyl)ethyl]-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole, 5-(1,1-dimethylheptyl)-2-[(1*R*,3*S*)-3-hydroxycyclohexyl]-phenol, and 5-(1,1-dimethyloctyl)-2-[(1*R*,3*S*)-3-hydroxycyclohexyl]-phenol into Schedule I of the CSA. DEA is not aware of any legitimate non-research uses for these synthetic cannabinoids in the United States.

Executive Order 12988

This regulation meets the applicable standards set forth in Sections 3(a) and 3(b)(2) of Executive Order 12988 Civil Justice Reform.

Executive Order 13132

This rulemaking does not preempt or modify any provision of State law; nor does it impose enforcement responsibilities on any State; nor does it diminish the power of any State to enforce its own laws. Accordingly, this rulemaking does not have federalism implications warranting the application of Executive Order 13132.

Unfunded Mandates Reform Act of 1995

This rule will not result in the expenditure by State, local and tribal governments, in the aggregate, or by the private sector, of $126,400,000 or more (adjusting for inflation) in any one year, and it will not significantly or uniquely affect small governments. Therefore, no actions were deemed necessary under the provisions of the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act of 1995.

Congressional Review Act

This rule is not a major rule as defined by 804 of the Small Business Regulatory Enforcement Fairness Act of 1996 (Congressional Review Act). This rule will not result in an annual effect on the economy of $100,000,000 or more; a major increase in costs or prices; or significant adverse effects on competition, employment, investment, productivity, innovation, or on the ability of United States-based companies to compete with foreign-based companies in domestic and export markets.

List of Subjects in 21 CFR Part 1308

Administrative practice and procedure, Drug traffic control, Reporting and recordkeeping requirements.

Under the authority vested in the Attorney General by section 201(h) of the CSA (21 U.S.C. 811(h)), and delegated to the Deputy Administrator of the DEA by Department of Justice regulations (28 CFR 0.100, and section 12 of the Appendix to Subpart R), the Deputy Administrator hereby intends to order that 21 CFR part 1308 be amended as follows:

PART 1308—SCHEDULES OF CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES

1. The authority citation for part 1308 continues to read as follows:

Authority: 21 U.S.C. 811, 812, 871(b), unless otherwise noted.

2. Section 1308.11 is amended by adding new paragraphs (g)(1), (2), (3), (4), and (5) to read as follows:

§ 1308.11 Schedule I.

DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY

Coast Guard

33 CFR Part 165

[Docket No. USCG–2010–0062]

RIN 1625–AA00

Safety Zone; Fleet Week Maritime Festival, Pier 66, Elliot Bay, Seattle, WA

AGENCY: Coast Guard, DHS.

ACTION: Supplemental notice of proposed rulemaking.

SUMMARY: The Coast Guard proposes to amend its regulation establishing a permanent safety zone extending 100 yards from Pier 66, Elliot Bay, WA to ensure adequate safety during the parade of ships and aerial demonstration for Fleet Week. This supplemental notice of proposed rulemaking introduces revisions to enforcement dates, times and location of this safety zone. This safety zone is necessary in order to restrict vessel movement for participant and spectator safety in the proximity of Pier 66, Elliot Bay, WA to provide unencumbered access for response craft in the event of an emergency during the annual parade of ships and aerial demonstration.

DATES: Comments and related material must be received by the Coast Guard on or before December 27, 2010.

ADDRESSES: You may submit comments identified by docket number USCG–2010–0062 using any one of the following methods:

(1) Federal eRulemaking Portal: http://www.regulations.gov.

(2) Fax: 202–493–2251.

(3) Mail: Docket Management Facility (M–30), U.S. Department of Transportation, West Building Ground Floor, Room W12–140, 1200 New Jersey Avenue, SE., Washington, DC 20590–0001.

(4) Hand Delivery: Same as mail address above, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, except Federal holidays. The telephone number is 202–366–9329.

To avoid duplication, please use only one of these four methods. See the "Public Participation and Request for Comments" portion of the SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION section below for instructions on submitting comments.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: If you have questions on this proposed rule, call or e-mail LTJG Ashley M. Wanzer, Sector Puget Sound Waterways Management Division, Coast Guard; telephone 206–217–6175, e-mail SectorSeattleWWM@uscg.mil. If you have questions on viewing or submitting material to the docket, call Renee V. Wright, Program Manager, Docket Operations, telephone 202–366–9826.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Public Participation and Request for Comments

We encourage you to participate in this rulemaking by submitting comments and related materials. All comments received will be posted without change to http://www.regulations.gov and will include any personal information you have provided.

Submitting Comments

If you submit a comment, please include the docket number for this rulemaking (USCG–2010–0062), indicate the specific section of this document to which each comment applies, and provide a reason for each suggestion or recommendation. You may submit your comments and material online (via http://www.regulations.gov) or by fax, mail, or hand delivery, but please use only one of these means. If you submit a comment online via http://www.regulations.gov, it will be considered received by the Coast Guard when you successfully transmit the comment. If you fax, hand deliver, or mail your comment, it will be considered as having been received by the Coast Guard when it is received at the Docket Management Facility. We recommend that you include your name and a mailing address, an e-mail address, or a telephone number in the body of your document so that we can contact you if we have questions regarding your submission.

To submit your comment online, go to http://www.regulations.gov, click on the "submit a comment" box, which will then become highlighted in blue. State Legislation on Synthetic Cannabinoids Pending on January 18, 2011

As of January 18, 2011, 21 states had legislation pending to modify existing laws or create new laws relating synthetic cannabinoids.

2011 PENDING LEGISLATION

Alaska H 7
Classifies certain synthetic cannabinoids as schedule IIA controlled substances.

Alaska S 17
Classifies certain synthetic cannabinoids as schedule IIA controlled substances.

Arkansas S 2
Amends the schedule VI substances regarding drugs in the criminal code; declares an emergency.

Arizona H 2167
Relates to definition of dangerous drugs; relates to synthetic.

Florida H 39
Relates to controlled substances; defines term homologue for purposes of Florida Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act; includes certain hallucinogenic substances on list of controlled substances in Schedule I; reenacts provisions to incorporate amendment.

Florida S 336
Revises the list of controlled substances included in Schedules I, II, III, IV, and V.

Florida S 204
Relates to controlled substances; defines the term homologue for purposes of the Florida Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act; includes certain hallucinogenic substances on the list of controlled substances in Schedule I; reenacts specified provisions relating to prohibited acts and penalties regarding controlled substances and the offense severity chart of the Criminal Punishment Code.

Iowa H 33
Adds hallucinogenic substances to the list of schedule I controlled substances; adds salvia divinorum and salvinorin A to the list of schedule I controlled substances; adds certain synthetic cannabinoids to the list of schedule I controlled substances in addition to the tetrahydrocannabinols and synthetic equivalents listed in schedule I.

Iowa S 35
Adds certain synthetic cannabinoids to the list of schedule I controlled substances; adds certain synthetic cannabinoids, also known as K2, to the list of schedule I controlled substances in addition to the tetrahydrocannabinols and synthetic equivalents listed in schedule I under Code section 124.204; A schedule I controlled substance is considered to have a high potential for abuse and no medical purpose in treatment in the United States.

Iowa SSB 1016
Revises the lists of drugs on the controlled substances schedules, and provides penalties; removes marijuana from schedule I and reclassifies it as a schedule II controlled substance; strikes references to the authority of the board of pharmacy to adopt rules for the use of marijuana or tetrahydrocannabinols for medicinal purposes.

Iowa HSB 5
Adds hallucinogenic substances to the list of schedule I controlled substances; adds salvia divinorum and salvinorin A", also known as divinorin A to the list of schedule I controlled substances; adds certain synthetic cannabinoids, also known as "K2", to the list of schedule I controlled substances in addition to the tetrahydrocannabinols and synthetic equivalents listed in schedule I under Code section 124.204(4)(u); A schedule I controlled substance is considered to have a high potential.

Indiana S 152
Relates to synthetic cannabinoids; defines synthetic cannabinoid and makes possessing, dealing in, manufacturing, or delivering a synthetic cannabinoid equivalent to possessing, dealing in, manufacturing, or delivering marijuana, hash oil, or hashish; makes conforming amendments and corrections.

Indiana S 5
Relates to synthetic cannabinoids; defines synthetic cannabinoid and makes possessing, dealing in, manufacturing, or delivering a synthetic cannabinoid equivalent to possessing, dealing in, manufacturing, or delivering marijuana, hash oil, or hashish; makes conforming amendments.

Indiana H 1102
Relates to possession or manufacture of synthetic cannabinoid; defines synthetic cannabinoid and makes possessing, dealing in, manufacturing, or delivering a synthetic cannabinoid equivalent to possessing, dealing in, manufacturing, or delivering marijuana, hash oil, or hashish; makes conforming amendments.

Indiana H 1277
Prohibits sale of synthetic cannabinoids; defines "synthetic cannabinoid" and makes dealing in, manufacturing, or delivering a synthetic cannabinoid equivalent to possessing, dealing in, manufacturing, or delivering marijuana, hash oil, or hashish; enhances the penalty based on the same weights used to enhance the penalty for dealing in, manufacturing, or delivering hash oil or hashish; makes conforming amendments and a technical correction.

Indiana S 448
elates to spice; defines "synthetic cannabinoid" and makes possessing, dealing in, manufacturing, or delivering a synthetic cannabinoid equivalent to possessing, dealing in, manufacturing, or delivering marijuana, hash oil, or hashish; makes conforming amendments.

Indiana S 57
Relates to synthetic cannabinoids; defines synthetic cannabinoid and makes possessing, dealing in, manufacturing, or delivering a synthetic cannabinoid equivalent to possessing, dealing in, manufacturing, or delivering marijuana, hash oil, or hashish; makes conforming amendments.

Indiana H 1315

Relates to spice and salvia divinorum; defines synthetic cannabinoid and makes possessing, dealing in, manufacturing, or delivering a synthetic cannabinoid or salvia divinorum equivalent to possessing, dealing in, manufacturing, or delivering marijuana, hash oil, or hashish; makes conforming amendments and a technical correction.

Kentucky H 121
Relates to crimes and punishments and declaring an emergency; bans possession, trafficking, or manufacture of 3,4-methylenedioxypyrovalerone the primary ingredient of a drug with a street name "dove"; amend various sections of KRS Chapters 217 and 218A and KRS 530.064 relating to unlawful transaction with a minor to conform.

Minnesota H 57
Relates to public safety; establishes the crimes of sale or possession of synthetic cannabinoids; provides for a penalty.

Minnesota S 7
Relates to public safety; adds synthetic marijuana to the list of Schedule I controlled substances; prescribes criminal penalties.

Mississippi S 2163
Conforms the punishment for the illegal possession, manufacture and sale of synthetic cannabinoids to the punishment for the illegal possession, manufacture and sale of marihuana.

Mississippi S 2226
Includes cathinone derivatives in Schedule I; clarifies the punishment for offenses involving synthetic cannabinoids; clarifies the punishment for offenses involving synthetic cannabinoids.

Mississippi H 518
Includes synthetic Cannabinoids in schedule I.

Mississippi S 2369
Relates to cathinone derivatives in schedule I and to clarify the punishment for offenses involving synthetic cannabinoids; clarifies the punishment for offenses involving synthetic cannabinoids.

Mississippi H 869
Amends existing code, to include cathinone derivatives in Schedule I and to clarify the punishment for offenses involving synthetic cannabinoids; clarifies the punishment for offenses involving synthetic cannabinoids.

Montana H 185
Bans synthetic marijuana; relates to crimes; relates to alcohol and drugs.

North Dakota S 2119
Relates to the scheduling of controlled substances; modifies provisions of the controlled substance schedule relating to certain substances, including tetrahydrocannabinols and synthetic cannabinoids.

New Jersey A 2644
Adds certain cannabis-like chemical substances to list of controlled dangerous substances.

New Jersey S 2606

New York S 1834
Prohibits sale or distribution of any product containing a synthetic cannabinoid; defines the chemical compounds which constitute a synthetic cannabinoid; imposes a civil penalty of not more than $500 for a violation thereof; creates defenses based on over the counter drugs approved by the federal food and drug administration or lack of knowledge that the product contained a synthetic cannabinoid.

Oregon H 2462
Directs State Board of Pharmacy to classify certain synthetic cannabinoid compounds as Schedule I controlled substances; declares emergency, effective on passage.

Oregon H 2709
Directs State Board of Pharmacy to classify certain synthetic cannabinoid compounds as Schedule I controlled substances; declares emergency, effective on passage.

South Carolina H 3137
Relates to materials, compounds, mixtures, and preparations classified as schedule i drugs, add synthetic cannabis to the list of schedule I drugs.

South Carolina H 3144
Relates to materials, compounds, mixtures, and preparations classified as schedule i drugs, add synthetic cannabis to the list of schedule I drugs.

South Carolina S 78
Relates to materials, compounds, mixtures, and preparations classified as schedule I drugs; adds synthetic cannabis to the list of schedule I drugs.

Texas H 49
Relates to the addition of certain synthetic derivatives of marihuana to Penalty Group 2 of the Texas Controlled Substances Act.

Texas H 108
Relates to the addition of a synthetic derivative of marihuana to Penalty Group 2 of the Texas Controlled Substances Act.

Texas H 597
Relates to adding certain synthetic cannabinoids to Penalty Group 2 of the Texas Controlled Substances Act.

Texas S 331
Relates to adding certain synthetic cannabinoids to Penalty Group 2 of the Texas Controlled Substances Act.

Utah H 23
Modifies provisions relating to the Utah Controlled Substances Act by creating a controlled class of listed synthetic cannabinoid substances found in products often referred to as spice.

Utah H 200
Modifies the Criminal Code prohibiting the sale, distribution, and other activities relating to products containing a synthetic cannabinoid to any person under 19 years of age; provides advertising restrictions for products containing a synthetic cannabinoid; prohibits a person from providing a product containing a synthetic cannabinoid to any person under 19 years of age.

Virginia H 1243
Creates a new category for synthetic marijuana as a series of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1 of the Drug Control Act, notwithstanding the provisions regarding punishment for possession and distribution of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1, punishment for possession and distribution of synthetic marijuana is largely in accord with the provisions for actual marijuana.

Virginia H 1427
Creates a new category for synthetic marijuana as a series of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1 of the Drug Control Act, notwithstanding the provisions regarding punishment for possession and distribution of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1, punishment for possession and distribution of synthetic marijuana is largely in accord with the provisions for actual marijuana.

Virginia H 1434
Creates a new category for synthetic marijuana as a series of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1 of the Drug Control Act notwithstanding the provisions regarding punishment for possession and distribution of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1, punishment for possession and distribution of synthetic marijuana is largely in accord with the provisions for actual marijuana.

Virginia H 1473
Creates a new category for synthetic marijuana as a series of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1 of the Drug Control Act; relates that notwithstanding the provisions regarding punishment for possession and distribution of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1, punishment for possession and distribution of synthetic marijuana is largely in accord with the provisions for actual marijuana.

Virginia H 1481
Creates a new category for synthetic marijuana as a series of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1 of the Drug Control Act; relates that the provisions regarding punishment for possession and distribution of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1, punishment for possession and distribution of synthetic marijuana is largely in accord with the provisions for actual marijuana.

Virginia H 1778
Creates a new category for synthetic marijuana as a series of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1 (Section 54.1-3446) of the Drug Control Act ([Section] 54.1-3400 et seq.); provides that the provisions regarding punishment for possession and distribution of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1, punishment for possession and distribution of synthetic marijuana is largely in accord with the provisions for actual marijuana.

Virginia H 1878
Creates a new category for synthetic marijuana as a series of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1 of the Drug Control Act; provides that the provisions regarding punishment for possession and distribution of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1, punishment for possession and distribution of synthetic marijuana is largely in accord with the provisions for actual marijuana.

Virginia H 2049
Creates a new category for synthetic marijuana as a series of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1 (Section 54.1-3446) of the Drug Control Act ([Section] 54.1-3400 et seq.); notwithstands the provisions regarding punishment for possession and distribution of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1, punishment for possession and distribution of synthetic marijuana is largely in accord with the provisions for actual marijuana.

Virginia S 745
Creates a new category for synthetic marijuana as a series of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1 of the Drug Control Act, notwithstanding the provisions regarding punishment for possession and distribution of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1, punishment for possession and distribution of synthetic marijuana is largely in accord with the provisions for actual marijuana.

Virginia S 746
Creates a new category for synthetic marijuana as a series of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1 of the Drug Control Act, notwithstanding the provisions regarding punishment for possession and distribution of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1, punishment for possession and distribution of synthetic marijuana is largely in accord with the provisions for actual marijuana.

Virginia S 748
Creates a new category for synthetic marijuana as a series of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1 of the Drug Control Act, notwithstanding the provisions regarding punishment for possession and distribution of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1, punishment for possession and distribution of synthetic marijuana is largely in accord with the provisions for actual marijuana.

Virginia S 749
Creates a new category for synthetic marijuana as a series of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1 of the Drug Control Act, notwithstanding the provisions regarding punishment for possession and distribution of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1, punishment for possession and distribution of synthetic marijuana is largely in accord with the provisions for actual marijuana.

Virginia S 926
Creates a new category for synthetic marijuana as a series of controlled substances listed in Schedule I (Section 54.1-3446) of the Drug Control Act ([Section] 54.1-3400 et seq.); Notwithstands the provisions regarding punishment for possession and distribution of controlled substances listed in Schedule I, punishment for possession and distribution of synthetic marijuana is largely in accord with the provisions for actual marijuana.

Virginia S 1082
Adds synthetic marijuana (known as K2 and Spice and various other names) to Schedule I of the Drug Control Act.

Virginia S 1186
Creates a new category for synthetic marijuana as a series of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1 (Section 54.1-3446) of the Drug Control Act ([Section] 54.1-3400 et seq.); Notwithstands the provisions regarding punishment for possession and distribution of controlled substances listed in Schedule 1, punishment for possession and distribution of synthetic marijuana is largely in accord with the provisions for actual marijuana; provides that has an emergency clause.

Virginia S 1373
Creates a new category for synthetic cannabinoids as a series of controlled substances listed in Schedule I (Section 54.1-3446) of the Drug Control Act ([Section] 54.1-3400 et seq.); Notwithstands the provisions regarding punishment for possession and distribution of controlled substances listed in Schedule I, punishment for possession and distribution of synthetic cannabinoids is largely in accord with the provisions for actual marijuana.

Washington S 5101
Places certain synthetic cannabinoids into schedule I of the uniform controlled substances act.

West Virginia H 2505
Adds synthetic cannabinoids and hallucinogens and stimulants to the Schedule I list of controlled substances (K2).

West Virginia S 63
Extends number of prohibited products included in definition of salvia divinorum.

Wyoming H 62
Relates to the Wyoming Controlled Substances Act; conforms punctuation and spelling in the act to terminology in federal law; adds and deleting substances in the various schedules of the act as specified; amends registration requirements as specified; amends methamphetamine precursor sales restrictions to match federal requirements; specifies penalties; authorizes a person to sign a consent for a third party to receive prescription tracking reports; specifies applicability of new registration requirements.

Wyoming S 59
Relates to the Wyoming Controlled Substances Act; adds specified controlled substances to schedule I of the act; authorizes additional positions.

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA
AO No. 2010-87(S)

AN ORDINANCE AMENDING ANCHORAGE MUNICIPAL CODE CHAPTER 8.35 TO PROHIBIT THE MANUFACTURE, ASSEMBLY, DISTRIBUTION, MARKETING, SALE, USE OR POSSESSION OF SUBSTANCES CONTAINING SYNTHETIC CANNABINOIDS, TO PROHIBIT THE SALE OR POSSESSION OF PARAPHERNALIA RELATED TO THE USE OF SYNTHETIC CANNABINOIDS, TO PROVIDE PENALTIES, AND AMENDING SECTION 14.60.030 TO PROVIDE FOR CIVIL PENALTIES.

WHEREAS, the Municipality is aware that substances containing synthetic cannabinoids were and are manufactured, or assembled for, or marketed, sold or offered for sale to, residents of the Municipality, including minors; and

WHEREAS, local law enforcement personnel and "first responders" indicate there is an increased use of synthetic cannabinoids, currently marketed and sold under a variety of names, including "K2", "Spice", "Black Mamba", "Blue Pearl", "Genie", "DaScents", "Spike", "Space" and "Zohai"; and

WHEREAS, some users of the synthetic cannabinoids endanger the public by operating vehicles while under the influence and endanger the welfare of first responders; and

WHEREAS, some users experience severe reactions, resulting in unconsciousness, seizures, and hospitalization; and

WHEREAS, users of the drug report the effects are similar to marijuana and LSD usage, including blurred vision, extremely elevated blood pressure, irregular heart rates, hallucinations, delusions, vomiting, euphoria, "highs", and disturbing side effects including feelings of excruciating pain, agitation and loss of control; and

WHEREAS, representatives of businesses selling the substance indicate it is available to minors as well as adults; and

WHEREAS, products containing synthetic cannabinoids are not tested by the Food and Drug Administration (U.S. Department of Agriculture) or other governmental regulatory agency for human consumption and may contain chemicals detrimental to the health and welfare of those ingesting them; and

WHEREAS, medical studies and treatises note deleterious health risks and adverse effects associated with the use of synthetic cannabinoids and products containing the synthetic cannabinoids; and

WHEREAS, despite packaging warning purchasers the products are not for human consumption, the warnings are not being heeded; and

WHEREAS, synthetic cannabinoids are banned in many states and municipalities throughout the United States as a danger to public health and welfare; and

WHEREAS, the smoke emanating from the burning or incineration of synthetic cannabinoids may cause adverse effects on bystanders or those in the vicinity of such activity; and

WHEREAS, it is in the best interest of the Municipality to prohibit the manufacture, assembly, possession, use, sale, marketing, or offering for sale of synthetic cannabinoids within the boundaries of the Municipality to protect the health, safety and welfare of its citizens; now, therefore,

THE ANCHORAGE ASSEMBLY ORDAINS:

Section 1. Anchorage Municipal Code chapter 8.35 is amended by adding a new section to read as follows:

8.35.100 [SALE OF] [s] Synthetic cannabinoids.

A. It shall be unlawful for any person or entity [~~organization~~] to knowingly manufacture, assemble, distribute, dispense, sell, attempt to sell, give, trade, barter, transfer, or to otherwise furnish in a single transaction any product or combination of products containing synthetic cannabinoids, such as products commonly known as "K2", "Spice", "Genie", "DaScents", "Zohai" or similar products, [,] Synthetic cannabinoids contain[~~ing~~] one or more of the following chemical compounds:

1. HU-210: (6aR, 1OaR)-9-(hydroxymehty1)-6,6 dimethyl-3-(2methyloctan-2-yl)-6a,7,10,1Oa-tetrahydrobenzo[c]chromen- 1-o1, or 6aR-trans-3-(1,1-Dimethylheptyl)-6a,7,10,10a-tetrahydro-1-hydroxy-6,6-dimethyl-6H-dibenzo[b,d]pran-9-methanol;

2. HU-211: (6aS, 10aS)-9- (hydroxmethy1)-6,6-dimethyl-3-(2-methyloctan-2-y1)-6a,7,10,10a-tetsahydrobenzo[c]chromen-1-ol)(also known as Dexanabinol);

3. CP47,497 and homologues: 2-[(IR,3S)-3-hydroxycyclohexyl]-5-(2-methyloctan-2-y1)phenol;

4. JWH-018: 1-Pentyl-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole;

5. JWH-019: 1-Hexyl-1-(1-naphthoyl)indole);

6. JWH-073: 1-Butyl-3-(1 -napthoyl)indole;

7. JWH-081: 1-pentyl-3-(4-methoxy-1-napthoyl)indole, (also known as 4-methoxynapthalen-1-yl-(1-pehtylindol-3-yl)methanon);

8. JWH-200: 1-[2-(4-morpholinyl)ethyl]-3-(1-naphthoyl)indole;

9. JWH-250: 1-pentyl-3-(2-methoxyphenlacetyl)indole, (also known as 2-(2-methoxypehyl)-1-(1-pentylindol-3-yl)ethonone;

10. JWH-398: 1-Pentyl-3-(4-chloro-1-napthoyl)indole)

11[12]. TEMPP: 1-(3 trifluoromethylphenyl) piperazine;
~~[Salvia Divnorum or Salvinorum A; all parts of the plant presently classified botanically as Salvia Divinorum, whether growing or not, the seeds thereof, any extract from any part of the plant, and every compound, manufacture, salts, derivative, mixture or preparation of the plant, its seeds or extracts;]~~

12 [13].BZP: N-benzylpiperazine; or

13 [14].Any other synthetic cannabinoids or derivatives, salts, isomers, or salts of isomers with similar chemical structure and pharmacological activity as the substances described above.

14. This prohibition shall also apply to any other equivalent compound, substance, or derivative, whether described as tobacco, herbs, incense, food, nutrient, spice or any blend thereof which, when smoked or ingested, mimics the effects of a controlled substance, regardless of whether the substance is marketed for the purpose of being smoked or ingested.

B. It shall be unlawful to manufacture synthetic cannabinoids described in subsection A. within the Municipality.

C. It shall be unlawful for any person or entity [~~organization~~] to recklessly manufacture, assemble, distribute, sell, market, display for sale, or offer for sale within the Municipality products containing synthetic cannabinoids described in subsection A.

D. Products containing synthetic cannabinoids may not be possessed, ingested, burned, incinerated or ignited in ~~any public place or on any property owned, leased or controlled by~~ the Municipality. ~~For purposes of this section, "public place" includes any public transit vehicle, any public street or other right of way, and any public school building or grounds.~~

E. A person or entity [~~organization~~] violating the provisions of subsections A. or B. shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punishable by:

1. A fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment of not more than one year, or both.

F. A person or entity [~~organization~~] violating the provisions of subsection C. shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punishable by:

1. A fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment of not more than 6 months, or both.

G. A person or entity [~~organization~~] violating the provisions of subsection D. shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punishable by:

1. A fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment of not more than 6 months, or both.

H. As an alternative to the remedies, procedures and penalties provided in this title and section 1.45.010, a violation of subsection C. or D. may be charged as a civil violation subject to and prosecuted in accordance with title 14, and in such case shall be punishable by a civil penalty in accordance with chapter 14.60.

I. If, after multiple violations by the same person or entity, the Municipal Attorney and the Anchorage Police Department determine the imposition of criminal penalties or civil fines will not be effective in enforcing this section, the Municipal Attorney may seek any other remedies provided by law, including injunctive relief.

J. It is not an offense under this section if the person or entity was acting at the direction of an authorized agent of the municipality to enforce or ensure compliance with this section.

K. Any product described in subsection A. found in the illegal possession of any person or entity may be confiscated and destroyed by the municipality.

L. This section does not apply to drugs or substances lawfully prescribed or drugs or substances approved by the federal Food and Drug Administration or drugs or substances specifically permitted by state law.

Section 2. Anchorage Municipal Code section 8.35.010 is hereby amended to read as follows (the remainder of the section is not affected and therefore not set out):

A. The following words, terms and phrases, when used in this chapter, shall have the meanings ascribed to them in this section, except where the context clearly indicates a different meaning:

Assembly outlaws chemical known as 'synthetic marijuana'

By ROSEMARY SHINOHARA
rshinohara@adn.com
(12/08/10 20:59:04)

A street chemical that authorities say can cause severe reactions will be illegal in Anchorage starting in early January.

The Anchorage Assembly on Tuesday voted unanimously to ban the sale, possession or use of products containing synthetic versions of cannabinoids. The products go by a variety of names such as K2, Spice and Spike, and are found in convenience stores and tobacco shops in parts of the country where they're not illegal.

Cannabinoids, natural and synthetic, are versions of the active ingredients in marijuana.

"These products pose serious and significant health risks up to and including death, and they offer nothing positive to anyone ingesting it," said Assembly member Paul Honeman, a former police officer. Assembly members Honeman, Dick Traini and Mike Gutierrez and Mayor Dan Sullivan sponsored the new city law.

State Sen. Kevin Meyer, R-Anchorage, has pre-filed a legislative bill for consideration next year that would criminalize such products on a statewide basis.

In Anchorage, it will be a misdemeanor to sell, make, have or use products containing cannabinoids starting on Jan. 6.

The Anchorage School District made public its fears about use of the synthetic chemical last April, and said some Anchorage teens have been hospitalized. In October, school district spokeswoman Heidi Embley said regular marijuana is still much more prevalent, and that the district knew of probably only a handful of synthetic cannabinoid cases.

Lawmakers seek ban on Spice, legal synthetic marijuana

SYNTHETIC: Alarming trend sweeps nation, finally gets to Alaska.

By CASEY GROVE
casey.grove@adn.com

(10/20/10 11:41:47)

A new street drug that authorities claim is capable of causing everything from hallucinations and slurred speech to death is sweeping the nation and has made its way to Alaska, according to local police and public officials.

It goes by many names -- Spice, Spike, K2 -- but the new craze among kids, the military and others looking for a high is essentially synthetic marijuana: plant material that can hold any number of various sprayed-on psychotropic compounds.

And for now, it is legal.

State Sen. Kevin Meyer and Anchorage Assembly members Mike Gutierrez and Paul Honeman hope to change that.

The drug can be 600 to 800 times stronger than pot and can cause a physical addiction similar to methamphetamine, Gutierrez said at a press conference Tuesday.

"It's a lot more dangerous than marijuana," Guttierez said. "Your 14-year-old can walk into a convenience store and, right next to the energy drinks, they can buy it."

Meyer has pre-filed a bill for the state Legislature that would criminalize the drug, and Honeman and Gutierrez plan to introduce a resolution to the Assembly Oct. 26 that would ask local retailers to voluntarily remove it from their shelves until the Legislature has a chance to make it illegal.

Until then, the various types of synthetic pot continue to be marketed as incense and sold in convenience stores and tobacco shops across the country. Everywhere, that is, except 10 states that have already criminalized it.

Driving under the influence of synthetic marijuana can lead to an impaired driving arrest with the same penalties as drunken driving, according to local law enforcement. Hallucinations from smoking it can also compel people to commit other crimes, they say.

A 28-year-old Fairbanks man who told Alaska State Troopers he'd smoked synthetic marijuana early Tuesday morning kicked in the door of an unoccupied home on Goldhill Road, took off all of his clothes and went to sleep in a bed, according to a trooper report.

He did it because "God told him to," troopers said.

In a separate case, in March, a Fort Richardson soldier just back from Iraq was convicted of operating a vehicle while under the influence of Spike. He was arrested after driving his Chevrolet Avalanche over three raised medians, into a concrete wall, and then driving down a sidewalk on flat tires and with a broken axle, according to a police report. The 25-year-old man later admitted to smoking some Spike, according to the police report.

The arresting officer noted some strange behavior in his report.

"I asked him who was drinking and driving and he said, 'You were,'" wrote Officer Earl Ernest in his report. "He then hollered, 'You drink, you drive, you die.' I asked if he was saying he was going to kill me and he said, 'Yes.' He then threw the cell phone he'd been holding."

The man, who later pleaded guilty to driving under the influence, had no alcohol in his system, according to a breath-alcohol test noted in the police report.

"You may not always have a bad trip, so to speak, but if you do, chances are, you're going to end up in the emergency room, you're going to be seeing the EMTs, you're going to be seeing an ER doc," Gutierrez said.

Some Anchorage teens have been hospitalized, according to the Anchorage School District, which publicized its fears about synthetic marijuana use last April. Still, use of drugs like Spice by Anchorage students does not come close to the number of cases of marijuana use, school district spokeswoman Heidi Embley said.

"You could probably count the number of cases on one hand," Embley said.

Gutierrez and Honeman had not yet compiled a list of Anchorage stores selling Spice and similar smokeable products, but they planned to do so in order to notify stores of their upcoming resolution.

Army punishes 36 for using synthetic pot

SPICE AND K2: U.S. Army Alaska banned head shop product in August.

The Associated Press

(12/21/10 11:33:48)

The U.S. Army Alaska says it has punished 36 soldiers for the use of synthetic marijuana since it banned the substance.

Seven soldiers were tried at courts-martial, and 29 received nonjudicial punishments, the Fairbanks Daily News-Miner reported.

Synthetic marijuana is known as Spice or K2. It's a blend of spices and herbs sprayed with a compound similar to the psychoactive ingredient in marijuana. It's commonly sold in head shops.

Some users think the substance can't be detected in drugs tests. But the Army says its urine tests can now find the chemicals used in Spice.

In March, a 25-year-old Fort Richardson soldier just back from Iraq was convicted of driving under the influence of Spice. He was arrested after driving his Chevrolet Avalanche over three raised medians, into a concrete wall and down a sidewalk with flat tires and a broken axle.

The U.S. Army Alaska banned Spice in August.

It had seen an increase in users with high blood pressure and heart rates admitted to hospitals at Fort Richardson in Anchorage and Fort Wainwright in Fairbanks.

The soldiers have had life-threatening reactions in some cases, the commander of U.S. Army Alaska, Brig. Gen. Raymond Palumbo, wrote in a commentary published in the Fort Richardson and Fort Wainwright newspapers.

"We have no idea what the long-term effects are since the chemicals vary and have not been fully tested," Palumbo wrote. "But we do know that in the short term, bad things happen when people use Spice."

This month, the Anchorage Assembly voted unanimously to make the chemicals illegal in the city as of Jan. 6. It will be a misdemeanor to sell, make, have or use products containing cannabinoids, which are versions of the active ingredients in marijuana. The products are found in convenience stores and tobacco shops in parts of the country where they're not illegal.

In October, state Sen. Kevin Meyer, R-Anchorage, proposed a bill to outlaw Spice after state troopers arrested a Fairbanks man who used the substance, broke into a house, stripped naked and slept in the homeowners' bed. He told troopers God had told him to do so.

The U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency has started a process to outlaw five chemicals commonly used in synthetic marijuana.

'Fake Marijuana' Users Showing Up in Emergency Rooms

Called 'K2' or 'Spice,' the drug is legal in many states

THURSDAY, Nov. 11 --(HealthDay News) -- A form of synthetic marijuana known as "K2" is sending young people to the hospital with racing heart beats, extreme anxiety and hallucinations, toxicologists warn.

In recent months, physicians and toxicologists say more young people have been showing up in emergency rooms after smoking synthetic marijuana. Despite the side effects, K2 is legal in many states, although many state legislators are rushing to pass legislation banning it.

Since the start of 2010, the American Association of Poison Control Centers has received nearly 2,000 reports of people who became ill after smoking K2, compared to about a dozen in 2009. Poison control officials described some of the symptoms as "life-threatening."

K2 is often marketed as incense and sold in packets of herbs laced with synthetic marijuana at "head shops," gas stations, convenience stores and online for about $30 to $40 per three-gram bag. The drug also goes by other names, including Spice, Spice Gold, Spice Diamond, Yucatan Fire, Solar Flare, K2 Summit, Genie, PEP Spice, and Fire n Ice, according to the U.S. Drug Intelligence Center.

While people who smoke K2 think they're going to experience deep relaxation and euphoria, those who end up in the hospital report unpleasant experiences, said Dr. Anthony Scalzo, medical director of the Missouri Poison Center and chief of toxicology at St. Louis University.

"The classic symptoms are agitation, anxiety, racing heart beat, elevated blood pressure," Scalzo said. "And some kids are having very negative psychotropic experiences. One said, 'I felt like I went down to hell'."

In some cases, the drug also causes vomiting, tremors and seizures, according to federal drug abuse agencies.

Scalzo was the first to sound the alarm about K2 earlier this year after seeing a couple of dozen of reports of young people treated at emergency rooms who said they'd smoked K2.

The drug, also sold under the name Happy Shaman Herbs, Smoke, Skunk and Zohai, among others, was developed for study purposes in the mid-'90s in the lab of John Huffman, a Clemson University chemist, who was conducting National Institute on Drug Abuse-supported research on cannabinoids.

The chemical makeup of the drug, which he called JWH-018 and JWH-073, was similar to tetrahydrocannabinol (THC), the active ingredient in marijuana, only considerably more potent.

While THC is a cannabinoid, it's one of many, Huffman said. There are many other substances that interact with the cannabinoid receptors in the brain and other organs, Huffman said.

"These receptors don't exist so that people can smoke marijuana and get high; they play a role in regulating appetite, nausea, mood, pain and inflammation. They may be involved in the development of conditions such as osteoporosis, liver disease and some kinds of cancer," Huffman said. "Synthetic cannabinoids can help us understand these interactions and ultimately this knowledge may contribute to the development of new therapies.

Huffman and his colleagues described JWH-018 and JWH-073 in scientific literature. "Evidently some people have figured out how to make them," Huffman said.

Huffman warned that the drugs were only meant to be used in the lab and were not designed for use in people, Huffman said. "These compounds were not meant for human consumption," Huffman said. "Their effects in humans have not been studied and they could very well have toxic effects. They absolutely should not be used as recreational drugs."

And while the makers of K2 seem to have latched on to JWH-018, many other labs have developed their own synthetic cannabinoids that may also find their way into synthetic marijuana products, Scalzo said.

The K2 craze caught on several years ago Europe, prompting several countries to make synthetic cannabis products illegal.

In the United States, the Drug Enforcement Agency has listed K2 as a "drug or chemical of concern." But because it isn't officially "scheduled," it remains legal under federal law, according to published reports.

Alarmed by the rise in popularity, several states have rushed to outlaw K2. Earlier this year, Kansas became the first state to ban K2. Other states that have outlawed it include Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Kentucky, Alabama, Michigan and Illinois (where K2 remains legal until the end of the year). There are similar bills pending in many other states, including Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, New York, New Jersey and Louisiana.

Scalzo said the prohibitions don't come a moment too soon. Little is known about the health effects of the drug. But he's heard enough anecdotal reports about strange behavior -- ranging from extreme agitation to withdrawal to a suicide after smoking K2 -- to be concerned.

"This chemical was not meant to be used in any kind of pharmaceutical manner," Scalzo said.

Fake Weed, Real Drug: K2 Causing Hallucinations in Teens

By Jeanna Bryner, LiveScience Managing Editor posted: 03 March 2010 04:46 pm ET

Teens are getting high on an emerging drug called "fake weed," a concoction also known as K2 and "spice" that is also causing hallucinations, vomiting, agitation and other dangerous effects.

In the last month, Dr. Anthony Scalzo, a professor of toxicology at Saint Louis University, has seen nearly 30 cases of teenagers experiencing these adverse effects after smoking the fake weed, a legal substance that reportedly offers a marijuana-like high.

"K2 use is not limited to the Midwest; reports of its use are cropping up all over the country," Scalzo said. "I think K2 is likely a bigger problem than we're aware of at this time." For instance, Atlanta has seen about 12 cases recently.

K2 has been sold since 2006 as incense or potpourri for about $30 to $40 per three gram bag – comparable in cost to marijuana.

"K2 may be a mixture of herbal and spice plant products, but it is sprayed with a potent psychotropic drug and likely contaminated with an unknown toxic substance that is causing many adverse effects," said Scalzo, who also directs the Missouri Regional Poison Control Center.

Origin of K2

This K2 compound was first created in the mid-1990s in the lab of organic chemist John W. Huffman of Clemson University, who studies cannabinoid receptors. He's not sure how the recipe for what is named JWH-018 (his initials) got picked up, but he did publish details on a series of compounds including JWH-018 in a book chapter. Even before that book came out, he recalls learning that in China and Korea people were selling the compound as a plant growth stimulant.

As for where it was first smoked or used as a recreational drug, Huffman thinks perhaps somewhere in Europe.

"Apparently somebody picked it up, I think in Europe, on the idea of doping this incense mixture with the compound and smoking it," Huffman told LiveScience. "You can get very high on it. It's about 10 times more active than THC," the active ingredient in marijuana.

From a chemist's perspective, that means K2 has an affinity for the cannabinoid brain receptor (CB1) that's about 10 times greater than THC. For the less chemically inclined, it means you can smoke a lot less K2 to get just as high.

The compound works on the brain in the same way as marijuana's active ingredient THC, or tetrahydrocannabinol. Both compounds bind to the CB1 receptors, which primarily affect the central nervous system. JWH-018 also binds to the peripheral brain (CB2) receptors, which are involved in the immune system, Huffman said.

Hallucinations and delusions

Since JWH-018 or K2 acts like marijuana, you'd expect to see the same effects, including sleepiness, relaxation, reduced blood pressure, and at high doses, hallucinations and delusions.

While some patients between the ages of 14 and 21 were showing up with hallucinations, other symptoms, such as increased agitation and elevated blood pressure and heart rates, didn't match up with marijuana.

Scalza speculates either another compound is responsible for the nasty side effects, or the concentration of JWH-018 is too high.

To answer this question, Scalzo is having doctors test patients' urine for JWH-018 and other compounds, but he is having trouble getting patients to agree to the test.

"This is not something that people are agreeing to," Scalzo said during a telephone interview. "Here's a legal substance that we don't know really that much about that people are putting into their bodies without quality control."

And even though doctors like Scalzo say they'd like to help the teens, that's not enough. "Phenomenally, people are saying no. They're afraid someone is going to find something," though Scalzo has no idea why they'd be afraid.

Dangerous drug

Both Scalzo and Huffman agree the drug is dangerous.

Further testing is needed, but Scalzo says the symptoms, such as fast heart beat, dangerously elevated blood pressure, pale skin and vomiting suggest that K2 is affecting the cardiovascular system of users. It also is believed to affect the central nervous system, causing severe, potentially life-threatening hallucinations and, in some cases, seizures.

"It's like playing Russian roulette. You don't know what it's going to do to you," Huffman said. "You're a potential winner of a Darwin award," referring to the tongue-in-cheek awards given to people who "do a service to humanity by removing themselves from the gene pool."

In addition to the compound being made without strict quality control or any regulation, as far as anyone knows, the compound itself has never been tested on humans. And when it was tested on mice, Huffman said, the animals were euthanized at the end of the experiment, so scientists don't even know how it affects mice long-term. "And mice are not humans," Huffman said.

Analysis

This legislation would amend AS 11.71.150 by adding several synthetic drugs as schedule IIA controlled substances. It is not estimated that this bill will significantly increase the workload of the division of Alaska State Troopers. There is no fiscal cost to the AST as a result of this legislation.

Analysis

This bill adds several chemical forms of Synthetic cannabinoids to Schedule IIA of Alaska's prohibited substance Schedules. Currently, marijuana, a natural form of cannabis, is a Schedule VIA prohibited substance. The anticipated fiscal impact is zero, however, if litigation ensues there will be addition costs in defending this litigation.

Analysis

This legislation makes synthetic cannabinoids a schedule IIA controlled substance. Currently, possession of a schedule IIA is a Class C felony with a possible sentence of 0-2 years. Manufacturing or delivering a schedule IIA controlled substance is a Class B felony with a possible sentence of 0-4 years. The current average daily cost to house an inmate is $136.44. Therefore, housing an offender could cost the department anywhere from $0.0 (no time served) to $199.2 (for a 4-year sentence).

Department of Corrections is unable to determine the fiscal impacts of the passage of this legislation, as we cannot estimate the total number of actual violations that will occur.

STATE OF ALASKA BILL NO. SB017
2011 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Analysis

This proposed legislation would add certain synthetic cannabinoids to the schedule IIA list of controlled substances. This bill would become effective immediately upon passage.

The Alaska Scientific Crime Detection Laboratory (Crime Laboratory) provides analysis of suspected controlled substances, issues reports, and provides expert testimony for the state of Alaska. For calendar year 2010 the laboratory received 1,267 requests for controlled substances analysis. A full time position is capable of analyzing 480 requests per year. The Controlled Substances Section of the Crime Lab currently has 2.5 full time staff assigned to it.

Once controlled, it is anticipated that the Crime Laboratory will receive significant requests for analysis related to the newly controlled substances. With the large presence of internet sales, and the ability for manufacturers to rapidly change the substances present in the materials sold, any suspected of containing these newly controlled substances will require scientific analysis at the Crime Laboratory.

This new position would come at an initial cost of $126,800. This includes a starting salary with benefits of $96,000, a work station start up cost of $7,300 for equipment , $2,000 for supplies, and there will be $3,000 in travel funds required for the ongoing training and education necessary for an analyst to maintain their expertise and certifications. There is an expected $5,000 in contractual costs as well, and this position also requires an initial $3,500 to obtain licensing required for the laboratory's LIMS database. Subsequently, there is a yearly 18% maintenance fee for that license. In addition to the above considerations involved with this new position, the Crime Laboratory would be required to obtain the standards necessary to analyze these nine new chemicals and their various isomers. This would be a one-time cost of $10,000.

In addition to the ongoing salary, benefits, and necessary travel costs relative to this position, all positions utilize an ongoing $2,000 for supply needs, and there is an ongoing licensing and maintenance cost of $5,600 per year. Therefore, the initial cost for this position would be $126,800, with a subsequent ongoing cost of $106,600.

Senate Judiciary Changes to SB 30 Release of Property

- Restricted provisions for property return to apply only to victims of crime (original bill did not have that restriction, so applied potentially to a broad range of parties

- Delineated the proposed court hearing process and the responsibilities of the various parties, including conditions the court could set regarding retention and/or documentation of returned property.

In 2nd SJUD, the bill was brought back by the sponsor to address an amendment raised by the Department of Law that was substantive and therefore appropriately discussed by the committee (the amendment deleted reference to "law enforcement agency" and replaced it with "the party that objects to the return of the property" since that is not always the law enforcement agency.

"An Act providing for the release of certain property in the custody of a law enforcement agency to a crime victim under certain conditions and relating to requests for that release by the office of victims' rights."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

 Section 1. AS 12.36 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 12.36.070. Return of property by hearing. (a) A crime victim who is the owner of property not belonging to a law enforcement agency that is in the custody of the agency under this chapter may request that the office of victims' rights request that the agency return the property to the crime victim. The request under this subsection shall be filed by the office of victims' rights on behalf of the crime victim after the office has conducted an investigation and has concluded that the crime victim is entitled to the return of the property under the factors listed in (c) of this section.

(b) Within 10 days after receipt of a request under (a) of this section and following reasonable notice to the prosecution, defense, and other interested parties, the agency shall request a hearing before the court to determine if the property shall be released to the crime victim. If the property is being held in connection with a criminal case, the hearing shall be before the court with jurisdiction of the criminal case. If no criminal case is pending regarding the property, the hearing shall be before a district or superior court where the property is located.

(c) At the hearing, a party that objects to the return of the property shall state the reason on the record. After a hearing, the court may order the return of the property in the custody of a law enforcement agency to the crime victim if

(1) the crime victim by a preponderance of the evidence provides satisfactory proof of ownership; and

(2) the law enforcement agency fails to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the agency or another interested party needs to retain possession of the property for evidentiary purposes as authorized in this chapter.

(d) If the court orders the return of the property to the crime victim, the court may impose reasonable conditions on the return. Those conditions may include an order that the crime victim retain and store the property so that the property is available for future court hearings, requiring photographs of the property to be taken, or any other condition the court considers necessary to maintain the evidentiary integrity of the property.

(e) In this section, "crime victim" has the meaning given to "victim" in AS 12.55.185.

 Sec. 2. AS 24.65 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 24.65.115. Authority to request return of property on behalf of certain persons. Notwithstanding another provision of this chapter, the victims' advocate may file a request under AS 12.36.070 with a law enforcement agency for the return of property to a crime victim after having conducted an investigation and determining that the crime victim is entitled to the return of the property under the factors listed in AS 12.36.070(c). In fulfilling the requirements of this section, the victims' advocate may use any of the powers granted to the advocate under this chapter.

(2) a party that objects to the return of the property fails to prove by a preponderance of evidence that the property must be retained by the agency for evidentiary purposes under the provisions of this chapter or other law.

Re: New CS for SB 30 (JUD)

On March 23, 2011, the Office of Attorney General contacted me about the possibility of amendments to CS SB 30 (JUD) which was heard and past out of Judiciary to Finance on March 21, 2011. I agreed with the AG's proposed amendments and made inquiry with your office to request the bill be brought back to Senate Judiciary. On March 25, 2011, without objection, the Senate agreed to return SB 30 to Judiciary.

The attached CS was drafted in response to the AG request. Changes from CS SB 30 (JUD) are as follows:

Section 1

p. 2 Line 6: insert At the hearing, a party that objects to the return of the property shall state the reason on the record.
Line 11: delete [is authorized], insert needs
Line 12: delete [possession of the property.], insert possession of the property for evidentiary purposes as authorized in this chapter.
Lines 13 – 18: delete all language; insert (d) If the court orders the return of the property to the crime victim, the court may impose reasonable conditions on the return. Those conditions may include an order that the crime victim retain and store the property so that the property is available for future court hearings, requiring photographs of the property to be taken, or any other condition the court considers necessary to maintain the evidentiary integrity of the property.

Changes to SB30:

1. The bill is amended to clarify that only victims of crime who have property in custody are eligible to apply for assistance by the Office for Victims' Rights. This will continue to include secondary victims, but will comport with the statutory mission of OVR, which is to provide services to crime victims.

2. The bill has new language on Page 2, starting at line 14 that outlines processes for the court to employ when property is returned, either to ensure its availability in future proceedings or to establish a chain of custody up to its release and its admissibility in future proceedings. This was added at the request of the department of law, with the sponsor's concurrence.

(1) the crime victim by a preponderance of the evidence provides satisfactory proof of ownership; and

(2) the law enforcement agency fails to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the agency or another interested party is authorized to retain possession of the property.

(d) The court may impose reasonable conditions on a crime victim claiming property under this section. If the court orders the return of the property to the crime victim, the court shall impose conditions to ensure that the property is available for future court proceedings. If the court cannot assure the availability of the property, the court shall establish the chain of custody up to the date of the property return and the admissibility of the property at future court proceedings.

(e) In this section, "crime victim" has the meaning given to "victim" in AS 12.55.185.

 Sec. 2. AS 24.65 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 24.65.115. Authority to request return of property on behalf of certain persons. Notwithstanding another provision of this chapter, the victims' advocate may file a request under AS 12.36.070 with a law enforcement agency for the return of property to a crime victim after having conducted an investigation and determining that the crime victim is entitled to the return of the property under the factors listed in AS 12.36.070(c). In fulfilling the requirements of this section, the victims' advocate may use any of the powers granted to the advocate under this chapter.

FN* Sitting by assignment made pursuant to Article IV, Section 11 of the Alaska Constitution and Administrative Rule 23(a).

OPINION

MANNHEIMER, Judge.

This is an original application for relief brought by the victim of a crime. The application has two distinct parts.

The first part of this original application presents the question of whether a crime victim or, alternatively, the Alaska Office of Victims' Rights acting on behalf of a crime victim, has an independent right to seek appellate review of an alleged error in the sentence imposed on the perpetrator of the crime. The second part of this original application presents a more case-specific question: whether Cynthia Cooper is entitled to have a portion of the sentencing hearing sealed from public access.

The Municipality of Anchorage prosecuted Daniel R. Cooper Jr. for assaulting his wife, Cynthia Cooper. Daniel Cooper ultimately pleaded no contest to misdemeanor assault, and he received a suspended imposition of sentence conditioned on his satisfactory completion of 1 year's probation. One of Daniel's conditions of probation required him to attend a counseling program, but the program Daniel was ordered to attend is not one of the "batterer's intervention" treatment programs approved by the Alaska Department of Corrections. Cynthia Cooper (who is represented by the Office of Victims' Rights) takes the position that, under Alaska law (specifically, under AS 12.55.101(a)(1)), if a defendant convicted of a crime of domestic violence is ordered to participate in rehabilitative counseling or treatment as a condition of probation, this counseling or treatment must be a batterer's intervention treatment program approved by the Department of Corrections. Cynthia therefore contends that Daniel's sentence is illegal.

The Municipality disagrees with Cynthia's interpretation of this statute. The Municipality believes that Daniel's sentence is legal, and the Municipality has therefore declined to appeal the sentence.

After it became clear that the Municipality did not intend to challenge Daniel's sentence, Cynthia filed the present original application for relief. Cynthia contends that, because she is the victim of the crime, she has standing to challenge the district court's sentencing decision. That is, Cynthia asserts that, regardless of the Municipality's position on this matter, she has an independent right to seek appellate review of the sentence (either the right to appeal the sentence or, at least, the right to seek discretionary review of the sentence by filing an original application for relief).

The Office of Victims' Rights is representing Cynthia in this litigation. However, the Office of Victims' Rights argues that they are not merely Cynthia's attorney. Rather, the Office of Victims' Rights contends that, regardless of Cynthia's personal standing to pursue this litigation, the Office of Victims' Rights is independently authorized to pursue an appeal in any criminal case where the Office has appeared on behalf of the victim.

As explained above, the second part of this original application for relief presents the question of whether Cynthia is entitled to have a portion of the sentencing hearing sealed from public access.

The sentencing hearing in this case was open to the public when it was held; in fact, the hearing was attended by representatives of the media. During her sentencing argument, Daniel's defense attorney referred to the fact that Cynthia's son (who lived with the couple) was suffering from mental health and behavioral problems. The defense attorney argued that the boy's problems were a major source of stress in Cynthia's and Daniel's relationship, and that this stress was the primary contributing factor in Daniel's assaultive conduct.

On the Monday following the sentencing hearing, Cynthia-or, more precisely, the Office of Victims' Rights on Cynthia's behalf-filed a motion asking the district court to seal many of the defense attorney's statements on this subject. Cynthia contended that the defense attorney's statements contained information that was protected by the psychotherapist-patient privilege.

The district court declined to seal the defense attorney's statements-prompting Cynthia to supplement her original application for relief with a challenge to the district court's ruling.

For the reasons explained here, we conclude that Cynthia has no standing to challenge the sentence imposed by the district court, and that the Office of Victims' Rights has no independent standing to challenge the sentence either.

We further conclude, for two separate reasons, that the district court correctly declined to seal the defense attorney's statements at the sentencing hearing. First, with one possible exception, none of the challenged statements contained information protected by the psychotherapist-patient privilege. Second, neither Cynthia nor her attorney from the Office of Victims' Rights voiced a contemporaneous objection to these statements.

Part I

Does a crime victim or, alternatively, the Office of Victims' Rights, have standing to challenge the sentence imposed on the perpetrator of a crime?

As explained above, both Cynthia Cooper and her attorney, the Office of Victims' Rights, wish to challenge the sentence imposed on Daniel Cooper because the district court failed to require Daniel to attend a Department of Corrections-approved batterer's intervention program.

Daniel takes the position that neither Cynthia nor the Office of Victims' Rights has standing to pursue an appeal or a petition challenging his sentence.

We solicited amicus curiae briefs from the Municipality of Anchorage, the Alaska Department of Law's Office of Special Prosecutions and Appeals, the Alaska Public Defender Agency, and the Alaska Office of Public Advocacy. All of these agencies take the position that neither a crime victim nor the Office of Victims' Rights has standing to bring an appeal or a petition challenging the judgement entered against the defendant in a criminal case.

We also granted amicus curiae status to the National Crime Victim Law Institute, the Victim Advocacy and Research Group (a lawyers' organization that provides pro bono legal services to victims of violence and their care-givers), and the Alaska Network on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault. These organizations support Cynthia's position that a crime victim has standing to pursue an appeal in a criminal case.

As we explain in more detail later in this opinion, courts from other states are unanimous in holding that a crime victim does not have the right to participate as an independent party in a criminal case. Many of these courts acknowledge that a crime victim does have standing to seek appellate relief if the trial court or an executive branch agency violates one or more of the procedural rights given to victims in a victims' rights act-generally, the right to advance notice of court proceedings, the right to be present during court proceedings, and the right to be heard before the court makes certain types of decisions. But these same courts agree that a crime victim is not an independent litigant in a criminal case, and that a crime victim does not have the right to challenge the propriety or legality of the substantive decisions made by the trial court-decisions such as what sentence should be imposed on the perpetrator of the crime.

For the reasons explained here, we agree with these courts that crime victims do not have an independent right to appeal the sentence imposed on the perpetrator of the crime. We also reject the contention of the Office of Victims' Rights that they have an independent right to challenge the decisions of the trial court in any case where the Office has appeared on behalf of a crime victim.

Accordingly, we dismiss Part I of this original application for relief.

Underlying facts

The Municipality of Anchorage prosecuted Daniel Cooper for assaulting his wife, Cynthia Cooper. This prosecution was ultimately resolved by a plea bargain. Under the terms of the agreement, Daniel agreed to plead no contest to one count of "family violence" under Anchorage Municipal Code § 8.10.050 (i.e., domestic assault committed in the presence of minor children), with the further agreement that he would receive a suspended imposition of sentence with 1 year's probation. Apparently, Cynthia was consulted during the negotiation of this plea agreement.

When the Municipality and Daniel's defense attorney originally described the contemplated plea bargain to the district court, the defense attorney stated that one of Daniel's conditions of probation would be to "[complete a] domestic violence intervention program" within a year. However, when the parties later returned to court for Daniel's sentencing, it became clear that there was disagreement concerning exactly what kind of counseling or therapy Daniel would be obligated to pursue.

In advance of sentencing, Daniel had been participating in counseling with Dr. Keith Wiger. Even though Dr. Wiger's program was not approved by the Department of Corrections as a certified "domestic violence intervention program", Daniel's defense attorney told the sentencing judge-District Court Judge Gregory J. Motyka-that the plea agreement would allow Daniel to satisfy his counseling obligation by continuing in Dr. Wiger's program. The municipal prosecutor did not concede that the plea bargain (as originally negotiated) allowed this, but the prosecutor stated that the Municipality did not object to Judge Motyka's exercising discretion on the question of whether to order Daniel to continue with Dr. Wiger's program or, instead, order him to enroll in a domestic violence intervention program approved by the Department of Corrections.

This colloquy drew an objection from the attorney from the Office of Victims' Rights who was representing Cynthia Cooper. The Victims' Rights attorney declared that Cynthia had agreed to the plea bargain only because Daniel would be required to complete a DOC-approved domestic violence intervention program. The Victims' Rights attorney told Judge Motytka, "It's [Cynthia's] position that [the agreement as previously stated in court] was a contract, ... and that the parties are now bound by that agreement."

Judge Motyka pointed out that no one was bound by any facet of the plea agreement until the agreement was formally accepted by the court. The Victims' Rights attorney conceded that this was correct. However, the Victims' Rights attorney argued that, under AS 12.55.101(a)(1), if the court ordered Daniel Cooper to attend any treatment "for the purpose of rehabilitat[ing] perpetrators of domestic violence", that treatment had to take place in a program approved by the Department of Corrections.

Judge Motyka asked the prosecutor if the Municipality still took the position that the question of domestic violence counseling or treatment would be "left to [the court's] discretion". The prosecutor said yes. Judge Motyka then declared that he disagreed with the Victims' Rights attorney's interpretation of the law; that is, Judge Motyka did not believe that AS 12.55.101(a) required him to impose a DOC-approved batterer's intervention program instead of some other form of rehabilitative treatment. And, when Judge Motyka ultimately imposed the terms of Daniel's probation, he allowed Daniel to continue attending Dr. Wiger's program.

After Judge Motyka sentenced Daniel, Cynthia filed a motion asserting that the counseling portion of Daniel's sentence was illegal. Judge Motyka refused to modify this aspect of the sentence, and Cynthia thereupon sought appellate review of Judge Motyka's decision.

Alaska law defining the rights of crime victims

Our system of criminal law has its roots in England. Originally, there was no criminal law "system" as we know it today-no network of police agencies and government prosecutors. When a crime was committed, it was up to the members of the community to apprehend the perpetrator, and (except in cases where the crime was of particular interest to the crown) it was up to the victim to prosecute the case in court.

The basic premise of this system was that criminal conduct constituted an injury to the victim-either to the victim's physical self, or to the victim's property, or to the victim's dependents. Thus, it was the victim's task to bring the perpetrator to court so that the perpetrator could be punished. As explained in Wayne R. LaFave, Jerold H. Israel, and Nancy J. King, Criminal Procedure (2nd ed.1999),

> [T]he English originally viewed the responsibility of the state for the administration of justice as "limited to providing means by which the injured person, or his kinsman or friends[,] might secure adequate redress without resorting to private warfare." When the Normans introduced the jury, they did not substantially alter that philosophy. They sought merely to gain the advantage of community knowledge of local events. As first established, jurors were neighbors who are likely to know something of the facts in question. They typically based their verdicts on their own knowledge and what they heard from their friends. As England moved from a rural to a more urbanized society, it was no longer possible to assume that jurors were self-informed. A method had to be developed for presenting the facts to the jury in the course of the trial. At that time, the > English still had a strong tradition of private prosecution (although its underlying philosophy arguably had shifted the role of the private person from [seeking] personal vindication to assisting the state in redressing a wrong against the state), and the juries had already established the practice of hearing occasional witnesses. The natural progression, it is argued, was to move to an adversary trial in which both sides were allowed to present their own witnesses and to cross-examine the opposition's witnesses.

LaFave, § 1.4(c), Vol. 1, p. 177 n. 113 (citations omitted).

As LaFave indicates, the involvement of the state in this process was seen as a beneficial substitute for private retribution and vendetta. Although the victim personally prosecuted the case, a jury decided whether the defendant was guilty, and a judge imposed punishment on the guilty. Even so, "the early English view [was that] criminal prosecution [was] a means of providing personal redress, with the person claiming to be the victim of a crime having personally to establish his right to redress." FN1

FN1. LaFave, § 1.4(d), Vol. 1, p. 189.

This was the system that the early American colonists imported from England:

> Under the English common law system that the colonists brought with them to this country, satisfaction of the victim's interest in gaining the conviction of the offender lay largely in the victim's own hands. With no organized police department, if investigation was needed to determine who had committed the crime, that task fell to the victim (unless the Crown had some special interest in the offense). Whatever governmental assistance was available often came at a fee, as did much private investigative assistance. Once the identity of the offender was determined, the victim had to arrange for the arrest and the issuance of the arrest warrant. Since the English common law system also relied primarily on private prosecution, the victim then bore the responsibility of presenting the prosecution [case] at trial....

LaFave, § 1.4(k), Vol. 1, pp. 209-210 (footnotes omitted). This system obviously favored the rich and powerful-those with sufficient influence and resources to apprehend the purported wrongdoer and to pursue the case in court.

But by the late eighteenth century, society's view of criminal conduct and the proper function of the criminal law had begun to change. Criminal conduct was no longer viewed as a private injury to the victim. Rather, crime was seen as an injury to the community. Criminal investigations were conducted by public police departments, and criminal prosecutions were brought by the state on behalf of the community as a whole.FN2 It became the government's task to bring the wrongdoer to justice: government prosecutors, not crime victims, decided whether charges should be filed; likewise, if charges were filed, government prosecutors directed the litigation of those charges.

FN2. LaFave, § 1.4(d), Vol. 1, p. 189.

> [During] the ... half century [following American independence], public prosecutors gained a virtual monopoly over the decision to prosecute and the presentation of the prosecution [case] at trial. Most jurisdictions continued to permit private attorneys representing the victim to participate in the prosecution, but that practice ordinarily was dependent upon the permission of the prosecutor and was used primarily in misdemeanor cases. ...
> Another somewhat later development impacting the victim's role was the establishment of the local police department. With the police department available to conduct investigations and make arrests, the victim's role in these aspects of the process was reduced dramatically. Victims were not legally precluded from either conducting investigations > or making arrests, but the legal, economic, and other advantages enjoyed by the police made victim[s'] use of that authority impracticable in all but exceptional cases. In large part, the victims' actions at this stage of the process came to be limited to reporting offenses to the police and then providing such additional cooperation (e.g., eye-witness identification) as the police might request.

LaFave, § 1.4(k), Vol. 1, pp. 210-11 (footnotes omitted).

Crime was no longer perceived as primarily an injury to the individual victim. Rather,

> Crime [was] now conceived of entirely in terms of an offense against society. The damage to the individual victim [was] incidental[,] and its redress [was] no longer regarded as a function of the criminal justice process. Rather, it [was] separated off and ... treated as a matter of civil justice. While the victim [was] allowed to decide what [should] be done with the case as a civil matter[,] ... the criminal case belong[ed] solely to the state and public officials.

LaFave, § 1.4(k), Vol. 1, p. 211 (quoting William McDonald, "Towards a Bicentennial Revolution in Criminal Justice: The Return of the Victim", 13 Am.Crim. L.Rev. 649, 650 (1976)).

By the twentieth century, it was firmly established that "in American jurisprudence ..., a private citizen lacks a judicially cognizable interest in the [criminal] prosecution or nonprosecution of another...." Linda R.S. v. Richard D., 410 U.S. 614, 619, 93 S.Ct. 1146, 1149, 35 L.Ed.2d 536 (1973).

Obviously, this meant that there would be times when government prosecutors would be at odds with crime victims. The government prosecutor might not view the facts in the same way as the victim, and thus the prosecutor might conclude that no crime had been committed. Or the prosecutor might agree that a crime had probably been committed, but nevertheless conclude that the case could not be proved in court. Or the prosecutor might disagree with the victim concerning the proper charges to file against the defendant. Or, after charges were filed and the case brought to court, the prosecutor might disagree with the victim concerning how the case should be litigated, or whether (and on what terms) the case should be settled, or what punishment should be sought in the event of the defendant's conviction.

It was not that lawmakers failed to recognize these potential conflicts. Rather, it was perceived that these problems were outweighed by the societal benefits of having an objective government official, as opposed to a person whose personal interests were at stake, decide whether a citizen should be charged with a crime, and what that charge should be, and how that charge should be litigated or settled.

And yet, in the latter part of the twentieth century, some people began to call for a re-evaluation of the victim's role-or, more precisely, non-role-in this modern system. The reformers asserted that, because crime victims had no right to actively participate in the criminal justice process, the criminal justice system had stopped paying sufficient attention to the people harmed or threatened by criminal conduct. Responding to this criticism, various states enacted statutes or constitutional amendments (or both) which were (in the words of the Massachusetts Supreme Court) "intended to change the traditional [role] of victims from virtually silent observers to active participants in the criminal justice process".[FN3]

> FN3. Hagen v. Commonwealth, 437 Mass. 374, 772 N.E.2d 32, 38 (2002) (internal quotations omitted).

In Alaska, these reform efforts led to the amendment of our statutes governing criminal procedure and, later, to the amendment of our state constitution.

In 1989, the Alaska Legislature enacted the Crime Victims' Rights Act.[FN4] The section of this act that enumerates victims' rights, AS 12.61.010, provides (among other things) that a crime victim has the same right as the defendant to be present at court hearings [FN5] and the right to be notified of these court hearings,[FN6] as well as the right to make a written or oral statement for use in preparation of the pre-sentence report in felony cases,[FN7] and the right to appear personally at the defendant's sentencing hearing and to present a written statement and/or make a sworn or unsworn oral presentation at that hearing.[FN8]

FN4. SLA 1989, ch. 59.

FN5. AS 12.61.010(a)(1).

FN6. AS 12.61.010(a)(2)-(3).

FN7. AS 12.61.010(a)(8).

FN8. AS 12.61.010(a)(9).

Five years later, in 1994, a victims' rights section (Section 24) was added to Article I of the Alaska Constitution.[FN9] Article I, Section 24, states:

FN9. See Legislative Resolve No. 58 of the 18th Alaska Legislature, section 2.

> Crime victims, as defined by law, shall have the following rights as provided by law: the right to be reasonably protected from the accused through the imposition of appropriate bail or conditions of release by the court; the right to confer with the prosecution; the right to be treated with dignity, respect, and fairness during all phases of the criminal and juvenile justice process; the right to timely disposition of the case following the arrest of the accused; the right to obtain information about and be allowed to be present at all criminal or juvenile proceedings where the accused has the right to be present; the right to be allowed to be heard, upon request, at sentencing, before or after conviction or juvenile adjudication, and at any proceeding where the accused's release from custody is considered; the right to restitution from the accused; and the right to be informed, upon request, of the accused's escape or release from custody before or after conviction or juvenile adjudication.

Cynthia Cooper and the Office of Victims' Rights rely on this section of the constitution, as well as the provisions of the Alaska Victims' Rights Act quoted above, to support their contention that the victim of a crime and/or the Office of Victims' Rights are authorized to seek appellate review of a sentencing judge's decision.

Under Alaska law, does a victim of a crime have an independent right to appeal the sentence imposed on the perpetrator of the crime?

As we have just explained, a crime victim in Alaska now has the right to attend all the proceedings that the defendant has the right to attend, and a crime victim has the right to provide input before certain decisions are made-in particular, the decision as to what sentence a convicted defendant should receive. But neither Article I, Section 24 of the Alaska Constitution nor the Victims' Rights Act (AS 12.61) expressly gives crime victims the right to intervene in the litigation of a criminal case-in the sense of determining what charges should be brought, or determining how those charges should be litigated or settled, or determining whether the prosecutor should seek appellate review of particular judicial decisions.

Moreover, as we explained earlier, the case presently before us involves a situation where the prosecuting authority (the Municipality of Anchorage) does not believe that the challenged judicial decision was illegal or adverse to the government's interests. At the sentencing hearing, when it appeared that the plea bargain might unravel over the issue of court-ordered treatment, the prosecutor took the position that Judge Motyka would be acting within his lawful authority if he declined to order Daniel Cooper to attend a DOC-approved batterer's intervention program.

Thus, by bringing this original application for relief, Cynthia Cooper is not merely pursuing a legal claim that the prosecutor has declined to pursue. Rather, she is pursuing a legal claim that is adverse to the declared interests of the Municipality of Anchorage-because a decision in her favor might lead to a motion by Daniel Cooper to withdraw from the plea agreement.

Although Alaska law does not expressly give crime victims the right to appeal a defendant's sentence, Cynthia Cooper contends that this right is implicit in one or more clauses of Article I, Section 24 or AS 12.61.010.

(a) Cynthia Cooper's argument that the district court's imposition of an allegedly illegal sentence violates her right to a timely disposition of the criminal case

Cynthia points out that Article I, Section 24 of the Alaska Constitution gives crime victims the right to "timely disposition of [a criminal] case following the arrest of the accused". As explained earlier in this opinion, Cynthia claims that, under Alaska sentencing law, once Judge Motyka made the decision to order Daniel Cooper to attend rehabilitative treatment as a condition of probation, the judge was obliged to order Daniel to attend a DOC-approved batterer's intervention program. Cynthia argues that, because Judge Motyka failed to do this, Daniel Cooper's sentence is illegal. Then, relying on appellate decisions which declare that an illegal sentence is not "meaningfully imposed", Cynthia argues that Daniel has never been "meaningfully" sentenced-and, thus, that she (Cynthia) has been denied her right (as a crime victim) to a "timely disposition" of this case.

It is true that, in prior decisions, this Court has repeatedly declared that, to the extent a sentence is illegal, it has not been "meaningfully imposed". FN10 But these decisions involved the question of whether the illegal portion of the sentence could be adjusted or corrected to the defendant's detriment, despite the fact that the double jeopardy clause normally precludes a court from adjusting a defendant's sentence upward once it has been imposed. In this context, when we declared that the illegal sentence (or the illegal portion of the sentence) had not been "meaningfully imposed", we were saying that the double jeopardy clause did not forbid adjustment of the sentence (or the challenged portion of the sentence) to the defendant's detriment.

This is quite different from asserting that a defendant who receives an illegal (or partially illegal) sentence has never really been sentenced for any purpose. The fact that there may be a legal defect in the defendant's sentence does not mean that the sentencing was a complete nullity, nor does it mean that a victim's right to a timely disposition of the criminal case has been violated.

A victim's right to a timely disposition of a criminal case is satisfied if the proceedings take place in a timely manner, even if an appellate court later concludes that the proceedings were flawed and must be repeated. In the present case, even if we assume for purposes of argument that one aspect of Daniel Cooper's sentence was illegal (the portion directing him to complete his treatment with Dr. Wiger rather than engaging in treatment at a DOC-approved batterer's intervention program), and even if we assume that the double jeopardy clause would allow correction of this purported flaw, the fact remains that the sentencing did take place. Cynthia's right to a timely disposition of the case was therefore satisfied.

See Hagen v. Commonwealth, 437 Mass. 374, 772 N.E.2d 32, 36 (2002), where the Massachusetts Supreme Court said:

> We conclude that[, by guaranteeing crime victims a right to prompt disposition of criminal charges,] the Legislature sought to assure for victims a prompt disposition within the context of the trial process.... In the present case, the defendant was tried and sentenced within one year of [his] indictment.... The statutory requirement of a "prompt disposition" thus has been satisfied.

For these reasons, we reject Cynthia's contention that the entry of judgement against a criminal defendant does not constitute a "disposition" of the case if there is an attackable flaw in the sentencing judge's decision.

(b) Cynthia Cooper's argument that, because crime victims have a constitutional and statutory right to be heard at the sentencing hearing, crime victims must have the right to independently challenge the sentencing judge's decision if the victim concludes that the sentence is illegal

Cynthia's next argument is based on the fact that the Alaska Constitution and the Alaska Victims' Rights Act give crime victims the right to be heard at sentencing-that is, the right to provide input before the judge decides what sentence the defendant should receive. Cynthia argues that a crime victim must have a corresponding right to appeal the judge's sentencing decision if the victim concludes that the judge has imposed an illegal sentence.

To properly analyze this argument, it is crucial to distinguish between, on the one hand, a crime victim's acknowledged procedural rights to attend the sentencing proceedings and to provide input before the judge makes the sentencing decision and, on the other, the right asserted by Cynthia Cooper in this litigation: the asserted right to intervene in the lawsuit and independently demand or seek appellate review of the judge's sentencing decision.

In her brief to this Court, Cynthia cites several appellate decisions from other states that have enacted victims' rights laws. She claims that these courts have recognized a crime victim's standing to litigate various claims based on their states' victims' rights acts.

Cynthia's brief contains a mistaken analysis of some of these appellate decisions. For example, Cynthia claims that the New Jersey Supreme Court held in State v. Timmendequas, 161 N.J. 515, 737 A.2d 55, 75-76 (1999), that, because crime victims in New Jersey have a constitutional right to attend the trial, a crime victim has standing to object to a defendant's request for change of venue if the new location would pose a substantial obstacle to the victim's attending the trial. This is a misreading of the New Jersey court's decision. The Timmendequas decision merely holds that it is not improper for a trial judge to take account of the inconvenience that a change of venue would pose to the crime victim, " provided that the constitutional rights of the defendant are not denied or infringed on by [the judge's] decision".[FN11]

> FN11. Timmendequas, 737 A.2d at 76 (emphasis in the original).

Moreover, in the Timmendequas case, it was the prosecutor who addressed the trial judge and articulated the victim's concerns.[FN12] Thus, Timmendequas does not even reach the narrower question of whether the victim was personally entitled to be heard on this issue if, for some reason, the prosecutor did not share the victim's position.

> FN12. Id. at 74-75.

Similarly, in State in the Interest of K.P., 311 N.J.Super. 123, 709 A.2d 315 (1997), the question was whether a juvenile court judge, when deciding whether to grant a media request to open the proceedings to the public, could lawfully consider the victim's opposition to this request-an opposition that was presented by the prosecuting attorney.

It is true that the New Jersey court worded its decision in terms of the victim's "standing", but the issue was not the victim's standing as a party to the lawsuit, but rather whether the court could lawfully consider the victim's position when ruling on a non-party newspaper's request to open the proceedings to the media. As stated by the New Jersey court, "[t]he issue [was to identify] the factors [that] the court may [properly] consider [when] exercising its discretion." FN13

FN13. Interest of K.P., 709 A.2d at 316.

The New Jersey court did not reach the issue of whether the victim might have the right to seek appellate review of an adverse decision. Moreover, as was the case in Timmendequas, it was the prosecutor who addressed the judge and articulated the victim's concerns.FN14 Thus, like Timmendequas, the decision in Interest of K.P. does not reach the narrower question of whether the victim would have been personally entitled to be heard on this issue if the victim and the prosecutor had been at odds.

Cynthia cites Melissa J. v. Superior Court, 190 Cal.App.3d 476, 237 Cal.Rptr. 5 (1987), as a case in which a court recognized a crime victim's standing to sue to protect their procedural rights. This is correct: in Melissa J., the California Court of Appeal held that a crime victim is entitled to notice and a right to be heard before the sentencing judge terminates or reduces the defendant's previously imposed obligation to pay restitution; the court also held that a crime victim has standing (after exhausting trial court remedies) to ask an appellate court to enforce this procedural right.FN15 However, while the California court concluded that a crime victim could seek an appellate remedy for an improper abridgement of their procedural right to be heard, the court also noted that a crime victim "is not considered a party to [the] criminal proceeding".FN16

FN16. Id. at 6.

Returning to the present case, we conclude that this case does not require us to decide whether Alaska law would likewise recognize a crime victim's standing to sue to enforce the procedural rights specified in Article I, Section 24 of our state constitution or in AS 12.61.010-because, in the present case, those rights were honored. Cynthia Cooper was notified of the trial court proceedings, she attended those proceedings (along with her lawyer from the Office of Victims' Rights), and she was allowed to present her views to the sentencing judge (both personally and through her lawyer).

Rather, the question before us is whether, if a crime victim's procedural rights have been honored but the victim is dissatisfied with the sentencing judge's substantive decision, the victim may independently seek appellate review of that decision. American courts are unanimous in answering "no" to this question.

For example, in State v. Lamberton, 183 Ariz. 47, 899 P.2d 939 (1995), the Arizona Supreme Court acknowledged that a crime victim would have standing to seek appellate review if the crime victim was denied one or more of the rights enumerated in Arizona's Victims' Rights Act. Id. at 942. At the same time, however, the Arizona court held that a crime victim had no standing to seek appellate review of a trial court's decision to grant the defendant's petition for post-conviction relief and to order re-sentencing. Id. at 942-43.

The Maryland Court of Appeals (that state's highest court) reached the same decision in Cianos v. State, 338 Md. 406, 659 A.2d 291 (1995). The court held that a crime victim is not a party to the criminal litigation, and that the victim has no right to appeal the judgement entered against the defendant. Like the Arizona court, the Maryland court acknowledged that a crime victim could seek appellate enforcement of the rights granted by Maryland's Victims' Rights Act. But the Maryland court declared that any such appeal "is collateral to[,] and may not interrupt[,] a criminal case", nor can judicial review of a victims' rights violation "result in reversal of the judgment [or] a reopening of the [underlying criminal] case". Id. at 293-94.

In Dix v. Superior Court, 53 Cal.3d 442, 279 Cal.Rptr. 834, 807 P.2d 1063 (1991), the California Supreme Court held that a crime victim has no right to object to a prosecutor's decision to ask the sentencing judge to "recall" (i.e., vacate) a defendant's sentence and to allow the defendant to be re-sentenced at a later time, so that the defendant could testify against other offenders and thus, potentially, earn a reduction of his sentence. The California Supreme Court declared that "[e]xcept as specifically provided by law, a private citizen has no personal legal interest in the outcome of an individual criminal prosecution against another person.... [T]he victim of the crime is not a party." FN17

In Dix, the crime victim argued that the contemplated "recall" of the defendant's sentence would jeopardize the victim's personal safety, since the defendant had allegedly threatened the victim with future harm.FN18 The crime victim pointed out that the California Constitution had been amended in 1982 to guarantee crime victims the right to appropriate detention, trial, and punishment of criminal offenders. The victim argued that, because of the threat to his personal safety, any "recall" of the defendant's sentence would violate those rights.FN19 The California court answered:

FN19. Id. at 1067.

> The [California] Constitution and statutes do accord individual felony victims certain "rights" of a ... specific and personal nature. These include the "right" to restitution in appropriate circumstances, and [the right] to receive notice, appear [in court], and state [their] views in connection with disposition and sentencing. [But] whatever special considerations of standing may apply to this limited category of "victims' rights", ... [w]e hold that [the victim] has no personal "right" or "interest" which would permit his intervention in the decision [whether] to recall [the defendant's] sentence.
> Dix, 279 Cal.Rptr. at 838, 807 P.2d at 1067.

Having lost his argument to the California Supreme Court, the crime victim in Dix then took his case to the federal courts. In Dix v. County of Shasta, 963 F.2d 1296, 1298-1300 (9th Cir.1992),FN20 the Ninth Circuit held that crime victims have no federal due process interest in the incarceration of criminals, even when their state has enacted a victims' rights act.

FN20. Overruled on other grounds in Sandin v. Conner, 515 U.S. 472, 115 S.Ct. 2293, 132 L.Ed.2d 418 (1995).

Similarly, in Gansz v. People, 888 P.2d 256, 257-59 (Colo.1995), the Colorado Supreme Court held that, despite the enactment of a victims' rights amendment, the Colorado Constitution still does not give crime victims the right to appeal a court's dismissal of criminal charges. In Johnston v. State, 702 N.E.2d 1085, 1088 (Ind.App.1998), the Indiana Court of Appeals held that crime victims have no standing to contest a sentencing judge's decision to grant a downward modification of a defendant's sentence.FN21 In State v. Barnett, 980 S.W.2d 297, 308 (Mo.1998), the Missouri Supreme Court held that, despite the procedural rights guaranteed to crime victims by the Missouri Victims' Rights Act, crime victims have no right to dictate the prosecutor's charging decision, nor do they have standing to object to the judge's sentencing decision.

FN21. Affirmed in part, Johnston v. Dobeski, 739 N.E.2d 121, 123 (Ind.2000).

Another decision reaching this same conclusion is Reed v. Becka, 333 S.C. 676, 511 S.E.2d 396 (App.Ct.1999), where the South Carolina Supreme Court held that a crime victim has no right to veto a plea agreement and force the prosecutor to renew the negotiations or take the defendant to trial. The South Carolina court acknowledged that South Carolina's Victims' Rights Act gives crime victims the right to confer with the prosecuting attorney concerning any contemplated plea agreement.[FN22] Nevertheless, the court declared, a crime victim "possesses no rights in the appellate process", nor any "right to veto a proposed plea agreement": [FN23]

FN23. Id. at 399, 400.

> Nothing in our Constitution or statutes provides the "victim" standing to appeal the trial court's order [accepting the proposed plea agreement]. [While] the rights granted by the South Carolina Constitution and statutes are enforceable by a writ of mandamus, [these provisions of law do not confer a right of] direct participation at the trial level.

Amicus curiae Victim Advocacy and Research Group contends that one court-the Massachusetts Supreme Court-has held that crime victims have standing to intervene in criminal litigation and independently challenge the rulings of the trial court. The Victim Advocacy and Research Group claims that the Massachusetts court recognized a crime victim's standing in Hagen v. Commonwealth, 437 Mass. 374, 772 N.E.2d 32 (2002). We disagree. Here is the pertinent language from Hagen:

> [T]he victim of a crime does not have a judicially cognizable interest in the prosecution of another. The rights which [the victim in this case] seeks to enforce ... are not private but in fact are lodged in the Commonwealth. A [criminal] prosecution is conducted in the interests of the Commonwealth, not on behalf of the victim.... The district attorney is the elected advocate of the people for a broad spectrum of societal interests-from ensuring that criminals are punished for wrongdoing, to allocating limited resources to maximize public protection....
> [N]othing in [the Massachusetts Victims' Rights Act] either alters our long-standing jurisprudence that the victim of a crime does not have a judicially cognizable interest in the prosecution of another or confers on a victim the status of a party to the criminal proceeding[.]

Hagen, 772 N.E.2d at 37-38 (citations and internal quotations omitted).

Although the Hagen decision appears to firmly reject the idea that crime victims have standing in criminal cases, the Victim Advocacy and Research Group argues that "[t]he language of the [Hagen] decision ... is ... misleading"-that the Massachusetts court actually recognized a crime victim's standing, but the court "soft-pedaled its ruling" for political reasons.

The Victim Advocacy and Research Group supports this argument by pointing out that, in Justice Cowin's concurring opinion in Hagen, she criticized her colleagues for "creat[ing] a right of victims to participate in the proceeding as a nonparty".[FN24] But Justice Cowin was not speaking of a victim's right to independently challenge the rulings of the trial court. Rather, she was criticizing the Hagen majority for suggesting that crime victims have the right to personally address the trial judge before the judge makes decisions that involve any of the rights guaranteed by the Massachusetts Victims' Rights Act.

FN24. Hagen, 772 N.E.2d at 38.

The majority in Hagen declared that "victims should be permitted an opportunity to address the [trial] court directly when their fundamental right to a prompt disposition is jeopardized." FN25 Justice Cowin believed that this was an unwarranted expansion of the Massachusetts Victims' Rights Act. She took the position that, except in situations where a victim's right to independently address the court is expressly granted (for instance, the victim's right to speak at the sentencing hearing),FN26 the Victims' Rights Act should not be interpreted as conferring on victims the right to personally address the court. Rather, Justice Cowin argued, crime victims who wish to express their position on other subjects affecting their rights must "seek assistance from the victim and witness board, the district attorney[,] or the Attorney General, none of whom is required to assist the victim in this specific regard." FN27

FN25. Id. at 38.

FN26. See Massachusetts General Law 258B, § 3(p), which declares that crime victims have the right "to be heard through an oral and written victim impact statement at sentencing[,] ... about the effects of the crime on the victim and as to a recommended sentence...."

FN27. Id. at 39.

To sum up: Many states have enacted victims' rights acts, either by constitutional amendment or by legislation or both. And among these states, many courts are prepared to recognize a crime victim's standing to sue for enforcement of the procedural rights granted by the victims' rights act-the rights to notice, to attend court proceedings, and to offer their views on certain decisions (especially sentencing and parole release). But no court has endorsed the position espoused by Cynthia Cooper in this appeal-the position that the enactment of a victims' rights act gives crime victims the right to participate as independent parties to a criminal prosecution or to otherwise challenge the substantive rulings of the trial court.

We agree with the reasoning of the court decisions discussed above-in particular, the distinction these courts have drawn between, on the one hand, protecting a crime victim's procedural rights and, on the other hand, allowing crime victims to participate as independent parties in criminal prosecutions.

Under Alaska law, crime victims are guaranteed the right to attend a defendant's sentencing hearing and to offer their views regarding the sentence that the defendant should receive. It may well be (although we do not decide this issue) that if a court failed to honor these rights, a crime victim would be entitled to ask an appellate court to issue a writ of mandamus-that is, an order directing the trial court to let the victim exercise these rights.

But as we explained above, the present case does not involve an infringement of Cynthia Cooper's right to attend Daniel Cooper's sentencing hearing and to offer her views regarding the proper sentence. These rights were fully honored.

Instead, Cynthia asserts that a victim's right to be heard at the sentencing hearing necessarily carries with it the right to challenge the sentencing judge's decision if the victim believes that the judge imposed an unlawful sentence. But the fact that a person or organization is legally entitled to express their views in court does not necessarily mean that this person or organization is also entitled to appeal the court's decision if the court does not adopt their view of the facts or their view of the law.

For instance, Alaska law calls for the Department of Corrections to prepare a pre-sentence report in all felony cases.[FN28] In that pre-sentence report, the Department of Corrections offers its conclusions regarding the facts of the case and often expresses its view regarding the sentence that should be imposed. Even though the Department's view may not necessarily coincide with the positions taken by either the prosecuting attorney or the defense attorney, no one has suggested that the Department of Corrections has an independent right to appeal the court's sentencing decision if the sentencing judge does not adopt the Department's view.

FN28. Alaska Criminal Rule 32.1(b)(1).

The same thing is true with regard to the right of crime victims to appear at the sentencing hearing and express their views concerning the proper sentence. Alaska law guarantees crime victims the right to provide this input when the judge is making the sentencing decision, but the law does not guarantee crime victims a right to attack the sentencing decision if the judge fails to adhere to the crime victim's views regarding the proper sentence.

(c) Cynthia Cooper's argument that, unless crime victims have a right to appeal, prosecutors and defense attorneys will collude with sentencing judges to evade and defeat the rights of crime victims

Cynthia Cooper, and the various amici curiae allied with her, contend that if this Court does not allow her to independently challenge the district court's sentencing decision, we will (in effect) be authorizing prosecutors and defense attorneys to collude with trial court judges to circumvent the law-for example, by agreeing to unlawful settlements of criminal cases in which the defendant is not required to suffer the full penalty provided by law for their crime, or is not required to participate in rehabilitative programs specified by law.

We need not reach the question of what this Court would do if the record of the trial court proceedings demonstrated this type of flagrant misconduct. In the present case, there was no flagrant misconduct. In fact, there was no misconduct at all.

Cynthia Cooper and the Office of Victims' Rights assert that (1) Judge Motyka concluded that Daniel Cooper's conditions of probation should include a program of rehabilitative counseling or treatment for batterers, and that (2) once Judge Motyka reached this conclusion, the judge could not lawfully allow Daniel to pursue this rehabilitative counseling or treatment by attending Dr. Wiger's program-because Dr. Wiger's program is not approved by the Department of Corrections. Cynthia and the Office of Victims' Rights argue that, under AS 12.55.101(a), Judge Motyka was obliged to order Daniel to attend a DOC-approved batterer's intervention program.

The pertinent portion of AS 12.55.101(a) reads:

> If a person convicted of a crime involving domestic violence is placed on probation, the court ... may
> (1) require the defendant to participate in and complete to the satisfaction of the court one or more programs for the rehabilitation of perpetrators of domestic violence that meet the standards set by, and that are approved by, the Department of Corrections under AS 44.28.020(b), if the program is available in the community where the defendant resides; the court may not order a defendant to participate in or complete a program for the rehabilitation of perpetrators of domestic violence that does not meet the standards set [by], and that is not approved [by,] the Department of Corrections under AS 44.28.020(b).

As can be seen, the statute says that the sentencing judge "may require" the defendant to attend a batterer's intervention program. Generally, the legislature's use of the word "may" means that an action is permitted but not

FN29. See, e.g., Wongittilin v. State, 36 P.3d 678, 682 (Alaska 2001).

Cynthia concedes that the statute gives sentencing judges discretion on this point. She argues, however, that once a sentencing judge concludes that a defendant should participate in a program for the rehabilitation of domestic violence offenders, the statute limits the judge's discretion concerning the particular program that the defendant is ordered to attend.

Cynthia asserts that, in the present case, "the prosecution, the defense, and the judge all agreed that [Daniel] Cooper needed a rehabilitation program to deal with his domestic violence and abuse". Accordingly, Cynthia argues, Judge Motyka was required to specify a batterer's intervention program approved by the Department of Corrections.

Cynthia's argument hinges on the underlying premise that any rehabilitative program designed to cure or counteract a defendant's propensity to commit acts of domestic violence must be deemed a "batterer's intervention" program of the sort that AS 12.55.101(a) addresses. We do not agree with this premise.

Initially, we note that the definition of "crime involving domestic violence" is quite broad. AS 12.55.185(4) declares that, for purposes of the sentencing statutes, "domestic violence" has the meaning given in AS 18.66.990. In prior decisions-chiefly, Bingaman v. State, 76 P.3d 398, 407 (Alaska App.2003), and Carpentino v. State, 42 P.3d 1137, 1141 (Alaska App.2002) (opinion on rehearing)-we have explained how the definition of "domestic violence" codified in AS 18.66.990 is much broader than what most people would think.

The phrase "domestic violence" is normally understood to mean an assault committed by one domestic partner against another. But under AS 18.66.990, this phrase is defined in a wide-ranging way, quite divorced from its everyday meaning:

> For example, if an elderly uncle comes to visit his favorite nephew and, while lighting his pipe, recklessly scorches a table cloth or a chair, the old man has seemingly just committed an act of "domestic violence" as defined in AS 18.66.990(3). That is, the uncle has committed the listed offense of criminally negligent burning under AS 11.46.430 (negligently damaging the property of another by fire), and the victim is related to the perpetrator within the fourth degree of consanguinity-thus qualifying them as "household members" under AS 18.66.990(5)(E).
> Similarly, if a group of former college roommates decide to hold a twenty-year reunion at one of their homes, and if one of the visiting former roommates gets drunk and recklessly jams his friend's CD player while trying to insert a CD into it, this roommate has seemingly just committed an act of "domestic violence". The intoxicated roommate has committed the listed offense of fourth-degree criminal mischief under AS 11.46.486(a)(1) (tampering with the property of another with reckless disregard for the risk of harm or loss), and all of the former college roommates are "household members" under AS 18.66.990(5)(B).

Carpentino, 42 P.3d at 1141.

Similarly, "a person who causes a traffic accident through criminal negligence and, by chance, happens to injure the child of a former high school sweetheart has committed a 'crime involving domestic violence' as defined in AS 18.66.990." Bingaman, 76 P.3d at 412.

Because the definition of "crime involving domestic violence" is so expansive-because it encompasses many situations that have nothing to do with an assault by one domestic partner against another-there will be many cases in which, even though the defendant's crime may qualify as a "crime involving domestic violence", it makes no sense to require the defendant to undergo batterer's intervention treatment.

Second, even in cases of typical "domestic violence", where one domestic partner has in fact assaulted another, there will be times when the sentencing judge may reasonably conclude that a batterer's intervention treatment program is not the answer. For instance, the judge may conclude that the defendant's assaultive conduct arose from a major mental illness (for instance, schizophrenia), or that the assaultive conduct was the one-time product of a specific emotional stress (for example, the loss of a career or the loss of a child).

In such circumstances, the sentencing judge might reasonably conclude that, rather than sending the defendant to a batterer's intervention program (that is, a program designed to address the possessive, controlling, and manipulative behaviors that typify batterers), it would be more productive to order the defendant to engage in other kinds of treatment. And because there will be such cases, it makes sense for the legislature to allow the sentencing judge to evaluate each case on its own merits, rather than requiring judges to send all defendants to complete a batterer's intervention treatment program.

In the present case, the defense attorney argued that Daniel Cooper had not committed acts of violence before, and that the present case was "an anomaly". The defense attorney also argued that it was important for Daniel to continue participating in Dr. Wiger's program because "abuse is not his only issue".

Shortly before Judge Motyka imposed Daniel's sentence, the judge declared that, given the facts of the case, he did not believe that AS 12.55.101(a) required him to send Daniel to a batterer's intervention program:

> The Court: [The violence committed on the victim in this case was], at best, a slap. It [was] an act done by a 57-year-old man with no priors, [no] alcohol or anger convictions. Minimal injur[y]. And if you took [away] all the bad blood, what you would have is a first-time offender pleading [no contest] to family violence.... I don't agree with [the Office of Victims' Rights' contention] that [the statute] requires a DVIP [i.e., a domestic violence intervention program] in this [situation].

Based on this record, it appears that Judge Motyka concluded that a batterer's intervention program was not the best treatment for Daniel Cooper, and that Daniel should instead be ordered to complete Dr. Wiger's program.

For these reasons, we reject Cynthia Cooper's argument that the prosecutor, the defense attorney, and Judge Motyka colluded to circumvent the statute. We also reject Cynthia's argument that Judge Motyka found that Daniel needed to attend a batterer's intervention program, but then violated the statute by sending Daniel to a batterer's intervention program that was not DOC-approved. Rather, the record shows that Judge Motyka concluded that Daniel should be sent to Dr. Wiger's program instead of a batterer's intervention program.

(d) Cynthia Cooper's argument that a crime victim must be able to appeal a judge's decision if the judge fails to give sufficient consideration to any of the interests of crime victims enumerated in the Alaska Constitution and the Alaska Statutes

Finally, Cynthia Cooper argues that crime victims must have the right to appeal whenever a judge fails to sufficiently consider any of the interests of crime victims guaranteed by law- i.e., the interests enumerated in Article I, Section 24 of the Alaska Constitution and in various provisions of the Alaska Statutes.

Cynthia points out that Article I, Section 24 guarantees the right of crime victims to be treated with "fairness during all phases of the criminal ... justice process". Cynthia argues that this right to be treated with fairness must encompass the right to insist on enforcement of all of the provisions of the Alaska Statutes that speak to the interests of crime victims.

For instance, with regard to the present case, AS 12.55.101(a) declares that when a sentencing judge is considering whether to grant probation to a defendant convicted of a crime of domestic violence, the judge is obliged to consider "the safety and protection of the victim and any [other] member of the victim's family". Cynthia argues that, because of this statutory mandate (coupled with the constitutional guarantee of fair treatment for crime victims), a victim of domestic violence must have the right to appeal a sentencing judge's decision if the judge imposes a sentence that does not (in the victim's estimation) adequately guarantee the safety and protection of the victim and the other members of the victim's family.

In the present case, Cynthia contends that Judge Motyka failed to give adequate consideration to her safety and the safety of her children when the judge declined to order Daniel to participate in a batterer's intervention program. Cynthia argues that Judge Motyka, in making this decision, improperly disregarded her safety-and thus violated AS 12.55.101(a)-"by failing to ensure that [Daniel] receive[d] appropriate rehabilitat[ive treatment]".

Several provisions of the Alaska Statutes require judges to consider the interests of crime victims before making certain decisions. One example is AS 12.55.101(a). Another example is AS 12.30.027(a), which states that before a court orders the pre-trial or post-trial bail release of a defendant prosecuted for a crime of domestic violence, the court must "consider the safety of the alleged victim or other household member".

But we do not read these statutes to mean that crime victims are to be deemed parties to the criminal prosecution of the perpetrator. Nor do we read these statutes as demonstrating the legislature's intent to have crime victims file appeals whenever they are dissatisfied with a judge's weighing of their interests.

Our conclusion regarding the legislature's position on this issue is confirmed by actions the legislature took during its 2005 session. In that 2005 legislative session, a bill was introduced-House Bill 55-relating to the rights of crime victims. Under House Bill 55, a new statute (AS 12.61.013) would have been enacted giving crime victims the right to petition the superior court or the district court "for an order restraining [the] violation or compelling [the] implementation of [any of the] rights granted to victims by regulation, statute, or constitutional provision".[FN30] If the victim was dissatisfied with the trial court's ruling, the victim could then appeal the trial court's decision to this Court.[FN31] The proposed statute would also have required an expedited appellate process, as well as relaxation of the appellate rules governing the form and content of briefs and other documents. [FN32]

FN30. 24th Legislature, House Bill 55, § 3.

FN32. Id.

The legislature took no action on House Bill 55. Instead, the legislature enacted a more modest proposal giving crime victims the right to seek appellate review of one particular type of sentencing decision: the right to petition this Court to review any felony sentence which, because of the mitigating factors listed in AS 12.55.125(d), has been reduced below the presumptive range for that crime.[FN33] See AS 12.55.120(f).

FN33. SLA 2005, ch. 65, § 4.

Under this legislation, a crime victim's right to petition for review of the defendant's sentence applies only to felony cases-because only felony offenses carry a presumptive range of sentences. The case presently before this Court involves a misdemeanor sentence. Thus, the legislature's recent enactment of AS 12.55.120(e) does not aid Cynthia Cooper's argument that she is entitled to seek appellate review of Judge Motyka's sentencing decision.

In fact, the legislature's enactment of a statute of such limited scope severely undercuts Cynthia's contention that the legislature has granted crime victims broad, independent authority to challenge any sentencing decision. The legislature's passage of House Bill 54, coupled with its failure to take action on House Bill 55, indicates that the legislature purposely declined to pass legislation that would have made a crime victim a "party" to a criminal case, or that would have given crime victims an extensive independent right to litigate whenever they believed that their rights had been abridged or that inadequate consideration had been given to their interests. Instead, the legislature gave crime victims the limited right to seek appellate review of certain felony sentences (sentences below the presumptive range).

We acknowledge that, under AS 12.55.101(a), a judge must consider the goal of protecting the victim(s) when the judge sentences a defendant to probation for a crime of domestic violence. Indeed, this duty to consider the future safety of victims is not confined to domestic violence cases. Under AS 12.55.005, the sentencing judge in any criminal case must consider "the need to confine the defendant to prevent further harm to the public", "the effect of the sentence ... as [an expression of] community condemnation of the criminal act and as a reaffirmation of societal norms", and "restoration of the victim and the community".[FN34]

FN34. AS 12.55.005(3), (6), and (7).

Thus, under Alaska law, a sentencing judge must always consider the victim's interests and the interests of the community-protection of the community, reaffirmation of community values, and restoration of the victim and the community-when choosing the defendant's sentence. But this does not mean that all members of the community have the right to challenge the judge's sentencing decision if they believe that the judge's decision fails to adequately protect the public, or fails to adequately express condemnation of the defendant's crime, or fails to adequately restore the community. Even though Alaska law requires sentencing judges to consider both the interests of the community at large and the interests of the people who have particularly suffered as a result of the defendant's conduct, a criminal prosecution is not a private lawsuit brought by the victim(s) against the defendant, nor is a sentencing hearing a community meeting in which all members of the public have a right to enter the discussion and, if dissatisfied, challenge the decision.

As we explained in the first section of this opinion, our system of criminal justice is no longer based on the idea that individual victims should bring perpetrators to court in order to obtain retribution and restitution for the harm done to their personal interests. Rather, criminal conduct is seen as an injury to the community. Criminal prosecutions are undertaken in the name of the community, and the executive branch of government (as the representative of the community) has the sole responsibility and authority to initiate and litigate criminal cases-and, if necessary, to challenge a trial court's decisions by seeking appellate review.

When the legislature enacted our state's Victims' Rights Act (AS 12.61), and when the legislature and the voters later enacted the victims' rights provision of our state constitution (Article I, Section 24), they undoubtedly wanted to enhance the participation of crime victims in the criminal justice process, and to make sure that judicial officers and prosecuting attorneys paid attention to the interests of crime victims. But the question before us now is whether the legislature and the voters wanted to change the basic rule that criminal litigation is initiated and directed by public prosecutors who act in the name of the community, rather than by crime victims who act in their own interest.

It is true, as we acknowledged earlier, that prosecuting attorneys may sometimes make decisions that run contrary to the interests or the wishes of crime victims. Likewise, there will be times when a crime victim disagrees with the sentencing judge concerning how much jail time a defendant should serve, or how big a fine the defendant should pay, or what obligations the defendant should have to fulfill when the defendant is released on probation.

One might argue-in fact, Cynthia does argue-that, in these instances, there is a possibility that the prosecutor or the sentencing judge will be wrong, and the crime victim will be right. But most often there will be no "right" answer and no "wrong" answer. Instead, it will be a question of judgement or a question of degree.

Who is to say whether a defendant should be charged with manslaughter (that is, reckless homicide) or, instead, the lesser offense of negligent homicide? Who is to say whether the government should take the defendant to trial or, instead, negotiate a plea bargain with the defendant? If the case goes to trial and the defendant is convicted, who is to say whether the defendant should receive a sentence of five years' imprisonment or only three?

For two hundred years, the people of this country have believed that the fairest way to resolve these questions is to put the responsibility in the hands of public officials-prosecutors and judges-who have no personal interest in the case. Indeed, some courts have held that the constitutional guarantee of due process of law includes the requirement that all decisions in a criminal prosecution be made by a prosecutor who has no personal stake in the outcome.[FN35]

> FN35. See Adkins v. Commonwealth, 26 Va.App. 14, 492 S.E.2d 833 (1997), where the court held that the defendant's right to due process was violated when a private attorney retained by the victim's family was appointed as a special prosecutor to handle the defendant's case, after the regular prosecuting attorney withdrew. The court stated:
> > [When] a special prosecutor has a personal interest in the outcome of the prosecution, his objectivity and impartiality are called into question, and a defendant's right to a fair and impartial trial is violated. A special prosecutor who was formerly employed by the victim's family in connection with the same proceeding is incapable of exercising the fair-minded prosecutorial discretion to which the defendant is entitled....
> Adkins, 492 S.E.2d at 835. Accord, State v. Eldridge, 951 S.W.2d 775, 782-83 (Tenn.Crim.App.1997).

There will be times when a crime victim is dissatisfied with the way a case is handled or resolved. But we, as a society, have decided that it is fairer to let public officials make these decisions, rather than putting the victim in charge of making these decisions, or letting the victim second-guess or veto these decisions.

In the main, this a matter of principle. But it is also a matter of practicality. The case presently before this Court is not entirely representative of the problem, because here there is only one primary victim. There can easily be more than one victim in a criminal case. Assault and theft cases with three or more victims are not unusual. Indeed, in cases of securities fraud or consumer fraud, there can be dozens or even hundreds of victims. If each of these victims had a separate right to ask for appellate review of the decisions of the prosecuting attorney and the sentencing judge, the system would be unworkable, and our goal of uniform justice would recede farther from sight.

Conceivably, the people of this state (or their elected representatives) might decide to change this fundamental aspect of the criminal justice system. But the question in the present case is whether the voters and the legislature have already done so. Did the voters and the legislature, by enacting the victims' rights section of our state constitution and the statutes that comprise our Victims' Rights Act, intend to alter our system of justice so that crime victims are treated as independent parties in criminal prosecutions (as they were two hundred years ago), with the right to go to court to challenge the substantive decisions of prosecutors and trial judges? We conclude that the answer is "no".

(e) Conclusion

For all of the reasons we have discussed here, we conclude that a crime victim does not have an independent right to appeal or petition an appellate court to review the sentence imposed on the perpetrator of the crime (except, perhaps, for the limited right of petition now granted by AS 12.55.120(f)).

As we noted earlier, some courts have recognized a crime victim's right to pursue litigation seeking relief in the nature of mandamus (i.e., an appellate court order directing a lower court to follow the law) when a lower court fails to honor the procedural rights given to crime victims by state constitution or by state statute. This issue is not raised in the present case; neither Cynthia Cooper nor her attorney from the Office of Victims' Rights claims that Judge Motyka failed to allow them to attend and be heard at the sentencing hearing.

Accordingly, we leave for another day the question of whether a crime victim in Alaska has the right to seek appellate relief when a lower court fails to honor a crime victim's procedural rights specified in Article I, Section 24 of the Alaska Constitution or in the Alaska Statutes.

The authority of the Office of Victims' Rights to independently pursue this litigation

As explained above, the Office of Victims' Rights is representing Cynthia Cooper in this litigation. However, the Office claims that they have a greater role in this litigation than simply providing legal representation to Cynthia at public expense. The Office asserts that even if Cynthia has no standing to challenge the sentence imposed by the district court, the Office of Victims' Rights has independent authority to challenge this sentence.

The Office of Victims' Rights points out that the Alaska Legislature has given the Office "jurisdiction to advocate on behalf of [the] victims of felony offenses or class A misdemeanors ... involving domestic violence or a crime against a person under AS 11.41." [FN36] Further, the legislature has directed the Office of Victims' Rights to "assist crime victims in obtaining the rights [that] crime victims are guaranteed under the constitution and the laws of [Alaska] with regard to the contacts crime victims have with justice agencies." [FN37] Based on its statutory role as an advocate for crime victims, the Office of Victims' Rights argues that it has the independent authority to file lawsuits that advance the interests of crime victims, even when the crime victims themselves would have no right to sue.

FN37. AS 24.65.110(a).

But the fact that the Office of Victims' Rights is authorized to serve as an advocate for crime victims does not mean that the Office has an independent right to file lawsuits that the victims themselves could not file.

Attorneys-and this includes attorneys who are salaried officers of a public agency-are the legal representatives of the clients they serve. An attorney is empowered to appear in court for the client, and to make certain decisions on the client's behalf, but the attorney's authority to file a lawsuit is merely an extension of the client's authority to do so. The lawsuit can go forward only if the client has standing to pursue the litigation. That is, when an attorney has no personal legal rights at stake and is acting solely as the legal representative of a client, the attorney has no independent right to file a lawsuit when the client has no personal right to file the lawsuit.

The following cases all hold that a government attorney who is statutorily authorized or obliged to serve as the legal representative of a government agency has no independent authority to pursue litigation if the client agency does not wish to pursue that litigation:

See Soliman v. Ebasco Services Inc., 822 F.2d 320, 323 (2nd Cir.1987); Santa Rita Mining Co. v. Department of Property Valuation, 111 Ariz. 368, 530 P.2d 360, 363 (1975); Chun v. Board of Trustees of the Employees' Retirement System of the State of Hawaii, 87 Hawai'i 152, 952 P.2d 1215, 1225, 1230 (1998); Motor Club of Iowa v. Iowa Department of Transportation, 251 N.W.2d 510, 513, 515-16 (Iowa 1977); State v. Hagan, 44 N.D. 306, 175 N.W. 372, 374 (1919); Matter of Taylor B., 201 W.Va. 60, 491 S.E.2d 607, 613 (1997).

Moreover, the claim made by the Office of Victims' Rights-that the Office has independent authority to file a lawsuit whenever the Office determines that the lawsuit would advance the interests of crime victims-is inconsistent with the statutes that describe the Office's powers.

As explained above, AS 24.65.100(a) gives the Office of Victims' Rights the authority to advocate on behalf of crime victims, and AS 24.65.110(a) gives the Office the authority to assist crime victims in securing their legal rights. But even in situations where the Office of Victims' Rights believes that the rights of a crime victim have been violated, the legislature has not authorized the Office to file a lawsuit. Instead, as we are about to explain, the legislature has given the Office of Victims' Rights the authority to publicly criticize a government agency if the Office believes that the agency has violated a crime victim's rights.

Under AS 24.65.120-130, the Office of Victims' Rights is given the power to investigate potential violations of crime victims' rights. If the Office preliminarily concludes that a government agency or official has violated the rights of a crime victim, the Office must consult with that agency or official. AS 24.65.140. If that consultation fails to resolve the problem, and the Office still believes that a crime victim's rights have been violated, the Office "shall [formally] report [its] opinion and recommendations to [the] agency [involved]". AS 24.65.150(a). And, after waiting a reasonable amount of time following its report to the agency in question, and with the approval of the complaining citizen, the Office "may present [its] opinion and recommendations to the governor, the legislature, a grand jury, the public, or any of these". AS 24.65.160.

These are essentially the same powers that are given to an analogous arm of the government: the Office of the Ombudsman.

Under AS 24.55.160-220, the Ombudsman is empowered to investigate and ultimately report on the workings of state government, if the Ombudsman concludes that an agency of the government has treated a citizen unfairly or unreasonably. Like the Office of Victims' Rights, the Office of the Ombudsman is authorized to investigate complaints against government agencies. If the Ombudsman preliminarily concludes that a government agency has treated a citizen unfairly or unreasonably, the Office must consult with the agency involved. AS 24.55.180. If that consultation fails to resolve the problem, and the Ombudsman still believes that the agency has mistreated the citizen, the Ombudsman "shall [formally] report [its] opinion and recommendations ... to [the] agency [involved]". AS 24.55.190. And, after waiting a reasonable amount of time following its report to the agency in question, the Ombudsman "may present the opinion and recommendations to the governor, the legislature, a grand jury, the public[,] or any of these". AS 24.65.200.

In other words, it appears that the legislature intended the Office of Victims' Rights to act as a special ombudsman in the area of victims' rights. This undercuts the Office of Victims' Rights' assertion that the Office has an independent power to intervene in a criminal prosecution and appeal the final judgement-because the Ombudsman has no such power.

As we have explained above, neither the statutes outlining the powers of the Ombudsman nor the statutes outlining the powers of the Office of Victims' Rights have any provision for filing lawsuits against an offending state agency or official. Instead, the legislature has granted the Ombudsman and the Office of Victims' Rights the powers to investigate, to advise and mediate, and, when necessary, to publicize the failings of government agencies-by informing the public of their findings, and/or by communicating those findings to an arm of the government that is empowered to take legal action.

This is the approach taken in the American Bar Association's "Model Ombudsman Act for State Governments" first issued in 1974 and later revised in 1997. Under the terms of the Model Act, an ombudsman is authorized to investigate, to consult and to mediate, and to criticize. However, the ombudsman has no power to coerce government agencies to take action, nor the power to sue government agencies in court-except to the limited extent of suing government agencies to force them to comply with Ombudsman subpoenas, or to enjoin their willful obstruction of the Ombudsman's other investigative efforts, or to force them to honor the obligation of confidentiality that normally attaches to the Ombudsman's preliminary report. (See, for example, AS 24.55.190(c).)

With respect to the Office of Victims' Rights' assertion that they have the authority to challenge the substance of the district court's sentencing decision in this case, we particularly note the following Comment to Section 3(a)(1) of the Model Ombudsman Act for State Governments (1997)-a model act that was drafted by the United States Ombudsman Association, based primarily on the ABA's Model Act: FN38

> FN38. The complete text of this Model Act is available through the web site of the American Bar Association's section on Administrative Law and Regulatory Practice:
> http://www.abanet. org/adminlaw/ombuds/ usoamodel1.html

> [The Model Act precludes ombudsman investigations of judicial acts because of] the existence of the long-established system of appellate review of judicial decisions.... [T]he Ombudsman would have jurisdiction to investigate administrative or ministerial acts by employees of the judicial branch, when those acts are peripheral to the adjudication itself[, as well as jurisdiction to] make recommendations for improving administrative procedures that would have a prospective effect. [However, the] Ombudsman would not, of course, have the jurisdiction to question, criticize or review the substantive content of any judicial order, decision or opinion.

This same limitation on an ombudsman's authority is also reflected in the ABA's "Standards for the Establishment and Operation of Ombuds Offices" issued in 2004. Under the ABA Standards, an ombudsman should have no authority to "make, change, or set aside a law, policy, or administrative decision" (Standard D(1)), or to "directly compel [any] entity or any person to implement the [ombudsman's] recommendations" (Standard D(3)). Moreover, under Standard D(5), an ombudsman should have no authority to "accept jurisdiction over an issue that is currently pending in a legal forum unless all parties and the presiding [judicial] officer in that action explicitly consent".

Alaska's ombudsman statutes-in particular, AS 24.55.100-200-do not depart from the substance of sections 11 through 15 of the ABA's Model Ombudsman Act. Based on the wording of our statutes, and based on the commentary to the ABA's 1974 Model Ombudsman Act and its successors, we conclude that the Alaska Legislature intended to codify the policy embodied in the model ombudsman acts-the policy that the ombudsman does not "have the jurisdiction to question, criticize[,] or review the substantive content of any judicial order, decision[,] or opinion".

As we pointed out earlier, when the Alaska Legislature created the Office of Victims' Rights, the legislature defined the powers of that Office using provisions that parallel the statutes defining the powers of the state ombudsman. We therefore conclude that the legislature intended this same policy to apply to the Office of Victims' Rights. That is, the legislature did not intend for the Office of Victims' Rights to have the authority to initiate litigation to question, criticize, or otherwise seek review of the substantive content of any judicial order, decision, or opinion.

For these reasons, we reject the assertion of the Office of Victims' Rights that the Office has independent authority to appeal or otherwise challenge a sentencing decision in circumstances where the Office's client (i.e., the crime victim whom they are representing) has no personal standing to pursue the litigation.

Part II

Did the district court abuse its discretion when the court denied Cynthia Cooper's post-hearing request to seal the statements made by Daniel Cooper's defense attorney concerning the mental health and behavioral problems suffered by Cynthia's son?

As we explained at the beginning of this opinion, the second part of Cynthia Cooper's original application for relief raises the question of whether Cynthia is entitled to have a portion of the sentencing hearing sealed from public access.

The sentencing hearing in this case was open to the public, and the hearing was apparently attended by spectators and representatives of the media.

During the defense attorney's sentencing argument on behalf of Daniel Cooper, she referred to the fact that Cynthia's son (who lived with the couple) was suffering from mental health and behavioral problems. The defense attorney argued that the boy's problems were a major source of stress in Cynthia's and Daniel's relationship, and that this stress was a primary factor in causing Daniel to engage in this instance of assaultive conduct.

Neither Cynthia nor her attorney from the Office of Victims' Rights objected to the defense attorney's statements about the boy's problems. However, on the Monday following the sentencing hearing, the Office of Victims' Rights (acting on Cynthia's behalf) filed a motion asking the district court to seal the defense attorney's statements on this subject. Cynthia contended that the defense attorney's statements contained "confidential and privileged information" about her son.

Ultimately, the district court declined to seal the defense attorney's statements. The district court's ruling led to this second part of Cynthia's original application for relief.

A more detailed history of this litigation, and a description of the various legal arguments that Cynthia has asserted in favor of sealing the defense attorney's statements

Cynthia's original motion to seal portions of the sentencing record asserted that the defense attorney's statements violated her son's right of privacy and her son's right (as the family member of a crime victim) to be treated with fairness, dignity, and respect. However, in later pleadings, the Office of Victims' Rights emphasized that the legal basis of Cynthia's request was the assertion that the defense attorney's statements revealed confidential information that was protected by the son's psychotherapist-patient privilege.

In its "Reply to [the opposition to the] Motion to Temporarily Seal Court Records" (dated April 2, 2004), the Office of Victims' Rights acknowledged that any admissible information presented at the sentencing hearing-even "derogatory and misleading comments"-should properly remain part of the public record. But the Office of Victims' Rights argued that the defense attorney's challenged statements did not contain admissible information. Rather, the Office of Victims' Rights asserted, the defense attorney's statements contained "inadmissible, privileged information"-and, thus, those statements should be struck from the public record. The problem, the Office of Victims' Rights told the court, was that the defense attorney's statements violated the psychotherapist-patient privilege.

The Municipality of Anchorage opposed Cynthia's motion. One of the Municipality's arguments was that the Office of Victims' Rights had no legal authority to file motions on Cynthia's behalf on this kind of issue-since the issue did not involve any infringement of the rights contained in the Victims' Rights Act, but rather involved an assertion of evidentiary privilege by Cynthia on behalf of her son.

As we explained in the preceding section of this opinion, there is an arguable legal basis for the Municipality's position. However, we need not resolve this legal issue-because, as we explain here, Cynthia's claim of privilege lacks merit.

On May 4, 2004, the district court denied Cynthia's motion to seal the defense attorney's statements. The court noted that the defense attorney's statements were relevant to the issues to be decided at the sentencing hearing, and the court further noted that neither Cynthia nor her attorney from the Office of Victims' Rights objected (at the time) to the defense attorney's statements.

Two weeks later, the Office of Victims' Rights filed a motion asking the district court to reconsider its decision. In its motion for reconsideration, the Office of Victims' Rights conceded that the defense attorney's statements might have been relevant to the issues at the sentencing hearing, but the Office reiterated its argument that those statements were nevertheless inadmissible. In addition, the Office of Victims' Rights raised a new argument: the contention that, before the defense attorney could make the challenged statements, Daniel Cooper was obliged to take the stand and personally testify to the assertions of fact contained in his defense attorney's statements.

The district court did not issue a decision on this motion for reconsideration. Instead, the court allowed the motion to become denied by operation of law (after the passage of 30 days). See Criminal Rule 42(k)(4).

Why Cynthia is entitled to pursue only the one argument based on the psychotherapist-patient privilege

As just explained, Cynthia filed several pleadings in the district court, and those pleadings mentioned various theories as to why the district court should have sealed the defense attorney's statements. Cynthia's original pleading mentioned notions of privacy and victims' rights. However, the Office of Victims' Rights (acting on Cynthia's behalf) ultimately told the district court that the issue was one of evidentiary privilege. Cynthia asserted that the defense attorney's statements should be struck from the public record because those statements contained confidential information that was protected by the psychotherapist-patient privilege codified in Alaska Evidence Rule 504.

After the district court denied Cynthia's motion to seal the defense attorney's statements, Cynthia filed a motion for reconsideration in which she raised yet another potential legal basis for sealing the challenged statements. But as our supreme court stated in Blackburn v. Department of Transportation and Public Facilities, 103 P.3d 900, 906 (Alaska 2004), a court "[is] under no obligation to consider an issue raised for the first time in a motion for reconsideration"-and if the trial court decides not to address the newly raised issue, that issue can not be pursued on appeal.

For these reasons, we conclude that the sole argument that Cynthia has preserved for appeal is the argument that the defense attorney's statements violated the psychotherapist-patient privilege. All of Cynthia's other arguments are waived.

Why we reject Cynthia's argument that the defense attorney's statements should be struck from the public record of the sentencing hearing

We have two reasons for rejecting Cynthia's contention that the challenged statements should be struck from the public record. First, with one possible exception, none of the challenged statements appear to be covered by the psychotherapist-patient privilege. Second, Cynthia waived whatever psychotherapist-patient privilege she might otherwise have claimed when she and her attorney from the Office of Victims' Rights failed to contemporaneously object to the challenged statements.

(a) With one possible exception, Cynthia had no valid claim of privilege with respect to the defense attorney's statements

Alaska Evidence Rule 504(b) contains the following definition of the psychotherapist-patient privilege:

> General Rule of Privilege. A patient has a privilege to refuse to disclose and to prevent any other person from disclosing confidential communications made for the purpose of diagnosis or treatment of the patient's physical, mental[,] or emotional conditions ... between or among the patient, the patient's physician or psychotherapist, or persons who are participating in the diagnosis or treatment under the direction of the physician or psychotherapist, including members of the patient's family.

As can be seen from the text of this rule, the privilege applies only to "confidential communications" among the group of people named in Evidence Rule 504(b). The term "confidential communication" is defined in Evidence Rule 504(a)(4):

> A communication is confidential if [it is] not intended to be disclosed to third persons other than those present to further the interest of the patient in the consultation, examination, or interview, or [to] persons reasonably necessary for the transmission of the communication, or [to] persons who are participating in the diagnosis and treatment under the direction of the physician or psychotherapist, including members of the patient's family.

During her sentencing argument on behalf of Daniel Cooper, the defense attorney referred several times to the mental health and behavioral problems suffered by Cynthia's son. But the psychotherapist-patient privilege does not cover all testimony that discloses that someone suffers from mental health or behavioral problems, or that describes those problems, or that describes other people's reactions to those problems. The privilege has a narrower scope: it applies only to testimony that reveals the substance of confidential communications made for the purpose of diagnosing or treating those problems.

Cynthia objects to statements made by the defense attorney which asserted or revealed: (1) that Cynthia's son had undergone counseling for something that had happened to him; (2) that the boy was troubled; (3) that he was not responding well to the counseling; (4) that he engaged in abusive behavior while in counseling; (5) that he had been sent to live in a residential facility for several months; (6) that Cynthia and Daniel were experiencing stress because of their uncertainty as to how to deal with the boy's problems; (7) that, a few days before Daniel's act of domestic violence, both Cynthia and Daniel had to leave work because school officials contacted them and informed them that Cynthia's son was engaging in inappropriate behavior; (8) that Cynthia believed that her son had engaged in other inappropriate behavior at home; (9) that, one day later, Daniel told Cynthia that he thought that her son needed to return to residential treatment; [FN39] (10) that two nights before the domestic assault, Cynthia and Daniel were having dinner with another couple, and the man of this couple ordered Cynthia's son to leave the table because the boy was being obnoxious; (11) that Cynthia believed that the man had acted inappropriately, so she followed her son up to his room to talk to him; (12) that, following this conversation with her son, Cynthia came back downstairs and announced (in front of everyone) that she was going to end her relationship with Daniel-that she was leaving, and that she was taking her son with her, to protect her son from Daniel's plan to send the boy back to a residential facility; (13) that Daniel and Cynthia had a house rule that Cynthia's son was not to have his bedroom door closed; and (14) that on the night of the domestic assault, Cynthia apparently assisted her son in locking his door.

> FN39. This statement was conceivably made for the purposes of furthering the boy's treatment, but it does not appear to be confidential. From the defense attorney's narrative, it seems that Daniel made this statement in front of another couple who were having dinner at Cynthia's and Daniel's home.

None of the defense attorney's statements appear to reveal the substance of "confidential communications" as that term is defined in Evidence Rule 504(a)(4). Indeed, many of the defense attorney's statements do not reveal the substance of any communication at all.

The defense attorney did allude to one communication that is arguably covered by the psychotherapist-patient privilege: a statement attributed to a mental health professional who was treating Cynthia's son, in which the mental health professional expressed an assessment of the boy's case. This particular statement may not have been admissible over a claim of privilege. But as we explain in the next section of this opinion, no objection was made.

(b) Cynthia forfeited her claim of privilege by failing to object to the defense attorney's statements

Under the law of evidence, there are many types of evidence which should be excluded if someone objects, but which remain admissible if no one objects. For instance, the law excludes many types of hearsay evidence, but this hearsay evidence is admissible-and is properly considered by the court-if no one objects.[FN40]

FN40. Haves v. State, 581 P.2d 221, 222 n. 2 (Alaska 1978); Vaska v. State, 74 P.3d 225, 230 (Alaska App.2003); Cassell v. State, 645 P.2d 219, 220-21 (Alaska App.1982).

There is a similar rule for evidence that is covered by one of the privileges codified in the 500 section of the Alaska Evidence Rules. Under Evidence Rule 510, the holder of an evidentiary privilege waives their privilege if they "voluntarily ... consent[ ] to disclosure of any significant part of the matter or [the] communication".

Evidence Rule 510 speaks of "waiver", which normally entails an affirmative action-a voluntary relinquishment of a known right.[FN41] However, the Commentary to Evidence Rule 510 explains that Rule 510 is really talking about forfeiture-the loss of the privilege through failure to act. This rule of forfeiture applies even when the privilege-holder was unaware, at the time, that they could have claimed a privilege and prevented the disclosure of the information:

FN41. See, for instance, Vroman v. Soldotna, 111 P.3d 343, 347 n. 9 (Alaska 2005); Hillman v. Nationwide Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 758 P.2d 1248, 1253 (Alaska 1988).

> In [these] situations, once [the] confidentiality [of the information] is destroyed through voluntary disclosure, no subsequent claim of privilege can restore it, and [the privilege-holder's] knowledge or lack of knowledge of the existence of the privilege appears to be irrelevant. 8 Wigmore [on Evidence] § 2327.
> Commentary to Alaska Evidence Rule 510, third paragraph.

Moreover, in this context, the law deems a person to have "consented" to the disclosure of privileged information if the person, being present and able to object to the disclosure, fails to object. For instance, in John W. Strong et al., McCormick on Evidence (5th ed.1999), the authors explain that this rule of forfeiture- i.e., loss of the privilege through inaction-governs the attorney-client privilege:

> [I]t is clear that the client may assert the privilege even though he is not a party to the cause [in which] the privileged testimony is sought to be elicited. [But] if he is present at the hearing[,] whether as [a] party, witness, or bystander[,] he must assert the privilege personally or by [his] attorney, or it will be waived.

McCormick, § 92, Vol. 1, pp. 369-370.

See also McCormick's discussion of the same rule applied to the marital privilege, id., § 83, Vol. 1, p. 336: "A failure by the holder to assert the privilege by objection ... is a waiver."

Also see Williams v. Utility Equipment, Inc., 837 P.2d 1112, 1116-17 (Alaska 1992), where the Alaska Supreme Court held that, despite the existence of a protective order excluding the challenged testimony, "[the appellant] waived his objections ... when he did not make specific objections [at the time] the testimony was presented".

In Clifton v. State, 758 P.2d 1279 (Alaska App.1988), this Court applied the same rule to the psychotherapist-patient privilege. We declared that this privilege is not self-executing: "The plain language of [Evidence Rule 504] appears to require that someone act to exercise the privilege." Id. at 1284. Accordingly, we found no plain error in a case where neither the defendant nor his attorney objected (until appeal) to the contested disclosures. Id.

In the present case, Cynthia and her attorney did not object to the defense attorney's statements until after the sentencing hearing was over, and after the sentencing judge had already relied on the challenged statements. In her brief to this Court, Cynthia asserts that she was "surprised and caught off guard" by the defense attorney's statements. There is nothing in the record to support this assertion. In fact, the record appears to belie this assertion-because the statements that Cynthia challenges in this appeal were uttered over the course of several minutes. The defense attorney repeatedly referred to these matters during her sentencing argument to the court; the challenged statements are scattered throughout ten pages of the sentencing transcript.

Moreover, under the rule of forfeiture that we have described above, it does not matter if Cynthia was surprised by the fact that the defense attorney would mention these matters. When the holder of an evidentiary privilege is present and able to object to the disclosure of information covered by the privilege, but the privilege-holder fails to object, the privilege is lost and the disputed evidence is admissible.

Arguably, the present case raises a slightly different issue: whether a privilege-holder who has waived the privilege by failing to object may later retroactively assert the privilege and ask the court to erase or seal the record of the earlier challenged testimony.

According to Wigmore on Evidence,[FN42] the rule at common law is that once an evidentiary privilege is waived, the privilege can not be reasserted by the privilege-holder at a later stage of the same proceeding, or at any subsequent judicial proceeding:

> FN42. J. Wigmore, Evidence in Trials at Common Law (Chadbourn rev.1978).

> A waiver at a former trial should bar a claim of the [physician-patient] privilege at a later trial, for the original disclosure takes away once and for all the confidentiality sought to be protected by the privilege. To enforce it thereafter is to seek to preserve a privacy which exists in legal fiction only. Wigmore, § 2389(4), Vol. 8, pp. 860-61.
> Accord: Cerro Gordo Charity v. Fireman's Fund American Life Ins. Co., 819 F.2d 1471, 1478 (8th Cir.1987); State v. Mincey, 141 Ariz. 425, 687 P.2d 1180, 1194 (1984); State v. Clark, 296 N.W.2d 372, 376 (Minn.1980); State v. Bishop, 187 N.J.Super. 187, 453 A.2d 1365, 1368 (App.Div.1982); People v. Bloom, 193 N.Y. 1, 85 N.E. 824, 825-26 (1908); General American Life Ins. Co. v. Ettinger, 266 A.D. 876, 42 N.Y.S.2d 836, 837 (1943); In re Postley, 125 Misc.2d 416, 479 N.Y.S.2d 464, 465 (1984).

For these reasons, we conclude that Cynthia's failure to raise a contemporaneous objection to the defense attorney's statements means that Cynthia forfeited her right to claim that the defense attorney's statements violated her son's psychotherapist-patient privilege.

(c) Conclusion

As we have explained here, none of the defense attorney's statements (with one possible exception) revealed confidential communications covered by the psychotherapist-patient privilege. Moreover, neither Cynthia Cooper nor her attorney from the Office of Victims' Rights objected to the defense attorney's statements until after the sentencing hearing was over. For these reasons, the psychotherapist-patient privilege provided no basis for Cynthia Cooper to ask the district court to seal the defense attorney's statements from the public.

Overall Conclusion

This case has required us to resolve weighty issues that have not been decided before in Alaska. Our opinion is quite lengthy, and not only because the issues were new.

The question of victims' rights inspires strong feelings, and the main question posed in this appeal-whether a crime victim has a right to independently challenge the substantive decisions of the trial judge-has required us to examine some of the most fundamental principles of our criminal justice system. We have been aided in this task by a number of amicus curiae briefs, and we appreciate the care and effort that went into the researching and writing of those briefs.

For the reasons explained here, we conclude that neither Cynthia Cooper nor the Office of Victims' Rights has the right to challenge the district court's sentencing decision. The right to challenge the sentencing decision rests solely with the parties to this criminal prosecution-the plaintiff, Municipality of Anchorage, and the defendant, Daniel Cooper. Accordingly, this portion of the original application for relief is DISMISSED.

We further conclude that the district court correctly denied Cynthia Cooper's request to seal portions of the sentencing hearing from the public-because (with one possible exception) the challenged statements made by the defense attorney do not contain information protected by the psychotherapist-patient privilege, and also because Cynthia waived whatever privilege she would otherwise have had when she failed to contemporaneously object to the defense attorney's statements. Accordingly, with regard to this portion of the original application for relief, the decision of the district court is AFFIRMED.

Re: CS for SB 30 (JUD)

On February 28, 2011 CS SB 30 (STA) was heard and held in Senate Judiciary. Committee member comments indicated bill language may allow for defendants to misuse the return of property hearing process, and detract from the intention of the bill, to promote victim rights. Further, that use of the current definition in the law of crime victim would assist the Office of Victims' Rights in their determinations of whether a crime victim is entitled to a return of property, and remain consistent with their current mission.

The CS before you was drafted in response to these concerns. Changes from CS SB 30 (STA) are as follows:

Title of Act
Line 2: delete [the owner]; insert a crime victim

Section 1
p. 1 Line 6: delete [the owner]; insert A crime victim who is the owner
Line 9: delete [owner]; insert crime victim
Line 10: delete [owner]; insert crime victim
Line 11: delete [owner]; insert crime victim
p. 2 Line 2: delete [owner]; insert crime victim
Line 7: delete [owner]; insert crime victim
Line 8: delete [owner]; insert crime victim
Line 13: delete [an owner]; insert a crime victim
Line 14: delete [lines 14 – 24 of CS SB 30 (STA)]; insert property under this section. If the court orders the return of the property to the crime victim, the court shall impose conditions to ensure that the property is available for future court proceedings. If the court cannot assure the availability of the property, the court shall establish the chain of custody up to the date of the property return and the admissibility of the property at future court proceedings.
Line 19: insert (e) In this section, "crime victim" has the meaning given to "victim" in AS 12.55.185.

Section 2
p. 2 Line 25: delete [an owner]; insert a crime victim

BILL NO. CSSB030(JUD) \D

Analysis

SB 30 would adopt a procedure for the owner of property to request the Office of Victims' Rights to investigate whether property in the custody of law enforcement should be returned to them. The Victims' Advocate may, after an investigation, request that a hearing about the property be held. This note is indeterminate because the department may be required to represent law enforcement agencies at the hearings proposed in the bill. At this time we are not sure how many of these proceedings will occur. The issues raised may be complex, particularly if defense counsel opposes the return.

A BILL

FOR AN ACT ENTITLED

"An Act providing for the release of certain property in the custody of a law enforcement agency to the owner under certain conditions and relating to requests for that release by the office of victims' rights."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 12.36 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 12.36.070. Return of property by hearing. (a) The owner of property not belonging to a law enforcement agency that is in the custody of the agency under this chapter may request that the office of victims' rights request that the agency return the property to the owner. The request under this subsection shall be filed by the office of victims' rights on behalf of the owner after the office has conducted an investigation and has concluded that the owner is entitled to the return of the property under the factors listed in (c) of this section.

(b) Within 10 days after receipt of a request under (a) of this section and following reasonable notice to the prosecution, defense, and other interested parties, the agency shall request a hearing before the court to determine if the property shall be released to the owner. If the property is being held in connection with a criminal case, the hearing shall be before the court with jurisdiction of the criminal case. If no criminal case is pending regarding the property, the hearing shall be before a district or superior court where the property is located.

(c) After a hearing, the court may order the return of the property in the custody of a law enforcement agency to the owner if

(1) the owner by a preponderance of the evidence provides satisfactory proof of ownership; and

(2) the law enforcement agency fails to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the agency or another interested party is authorized to retain possession of the property.

(d) The court may impose reasonable conditions on an owner claiming property under this section.

 Sec. 2. AS 24.65 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 24.65.115. Authority to request return of property on behalf of certain persons. (a) Notwithstanding another provision of this chapter, the victims' advocate may file a request under AS 12.36.070 with a law enforcement agency for the return of property to an owner after having conducted an investigation and determining that the owner is entitled to the return of the property under the factors listed in AS 12.36.070(c). In fulfilling the requirements of this section, the victims' advocate may use any of the powers granted to the advocate under this chapter.

(b) In this section, "crime victim" includes any person who is the owner of property that

(1) is in the custody of a law enforcement agency in connection with a criminal case; and

(2) is not evidence of a crime of which the person has been charged, indicted, or presented.

Hi Cindy,

I just wanted to follow up with you on the "crime victim" definition for CS SB30. I have been pondering a different definition that would not preclude those who have been charged with an offense. As noted, sometimes property seized may not be related to the offense under investigation, and unnecessarily seized. Sometimes law enforcement takes more than they need, as the exact nature and scope of the offense is still being determined. You could have a situation where a vehicle owner, whose car was used in a DUI injury accident, is charged with Reckless Endangerment for letting a drunk driver use their car, but that same owner may have also had significant personal property (tools, paperwork, computers, etc) in the vehicle that is not connected at all to the crime. Also, in a DV crime, at times it is fairly messy determining property claims. It seems we need to allow for those situations where a person is charged (or under suspicion) to still be able to at least ask for their property back and get the process going. People lose a lot of their rights/liberties just by virtue of being charged with a crime, particularly a DV crime. This bill kind of helps balance the loss of liberty that can occur in the pre-trial phase by giving those persons an opportunity to be heard (at least by OVR).

I welcome any suggestions you or Sen. French might have to refine this definition. Thanks so much.

SENATOR FRED DYSON

CS SB 30 NOTES

1. Alaska Statutes - Title 12 Code of Criminal Procedure, Chapter 36 Disposition of Recovered or Seized Property, Sec. 20 Return of Property, provides the legal process for return of property.
2. 12.36.020(a) identifies those circumstances when a law enforcement agency may not return property to an owner.
3. 12.36.020(b) provides for the return of property to owners at the discretion of the prosecuting attorney where photographs are used as evidence in place of the property, stating the prosecuting attorney may release the property to the owner upon presentation of satisfactory proof of ownership.
4. 12.36.020(c) states that wrongfully taken or damaged property that is not properly photographed and authenticated under 12.45.086 Photographic evidence of property wrongfully taken or damaged, and used as evidence in a criminal or children's court proceeding, is to be returned to the owner within 60 days after the final disposition of the case.
5. 12.36.020(c) is problematic for two reasons. First, it is the property owner who suffers unjustly if the property was not properly photographed and authenticated; and second, final disposition of the case may be protracted for a long period of time. The return of property to its rightful owner may be hindered by concerns of prosecution, defense, and/or other interested parties.
6. 12.45.086 Photographic evidence of property wrongfully taken or damaged, defines the process for admissibility of photographs as evidence in criminal and children's court proceedings. This section states that properly submitted photographs are to be regarded to the same extent as if the property itself was introduced as evidence. This sounds good, but in practice falls short of its intent. 12.45.086(c) seems to recognize this problem by singling out only the theft of commercial fishing gear as being property that shall be returned to the owner as soon as possible. Nearly all thefts of property from businesses should be returned to the rightful owners ASAP.
7. SB 30 (formerly SB 297) seeks to restore victims to a pre-offense condition by providing directly to the property owner the right of a court hearing to recover possession of the owner's property, and requiring that the law enforcement agency prove to the court that another parties' interest in the property overrides the owner's interest in having it returned. SB 297 was endorsed by the Alaska Peace Officers Association.
8. CS SB 30 (STA) provides that property owners must make a request for hearing through the Office of Victims' Rights (OVR) for two important purposes, 1) to vet the requests and determine if certain conditions are met in the law to allow for an owner claiming property to have a hearing, and 2) to keep the numbers of requests from becoming onerous to the Court and law enforcement agencies.
9. 12.36.090 Definitions of "law enforcement agency" includes the Office of District Attorney, Department of Law, as this is a public agency having one of its principal functions being the enforcement of the criminal law.
10. CS SB 30 (STA) establishes that the term crime victim, as used in AS 24.65 Office of Victims' Rights, includes any person who is the owner of property that is in the custody of a law enforcement agency.

SPONSOR STATEMENT

CS SB 30 (STA)

An Act providing for the release of property in the custody of a law enforcement agency to the owner under certain conditions and relating to requests for that release by the Office of Victims' Rights

CS SB 30 (STA) introduces within the Alaska Code of Criminal Procedure a process for victims of property crime to petition the court for relief in recovering their property held as evidence.

Too often victims of theft and robbery are victimized a second time by bureaucracy. This is particularly true in cases of property crimes where demonstrable loss occurs to the victim's person or business as a result of property being held for a protracted period of time by a law enforcement agency, usually at the direction of prosecution, defense counsel and/or other interested parties.

The law as currently written, provides discretionary authority to the prosecution for release of property, but does not clearly provide a right of hearing for a property owner to directly petition the court in those circumstances when property owners, prosecution and defense cannot come to agreement on return of property to the owner.

Victims of property theft often face the added burden of replacing stolen property. Small business owners who suffer property loss may face bankruptcy if the loss results in the inability to consummate a sale, continue their business operations, or the stolen property is uninsured or underinsured.

Property recovered by a law enforcement agency may be held as evidence for a protracted period of time. Property owners deserve protections in the law to ensure their property is held as evidence only as long as necessary for the prosecution and defense to physically retain the item, without jeopardizing the case.

CS SB 30 (STA) will provide property owners in the Alaska Code of Criminal Procedure, a clearly identifiable process to petition the court through the Office of Victims' Rights for the recovery of their property in those circumstances where they are otherwise not able to reach agreement with interested parties on the return of property.

Re: CS for SB 30 (STA)

On February 3, 2011 SB 30 was heard and held in State Affairs. Committee member comments indicated a concern that SB 30 may inadvertently open the door to a significant number of requests for hearing from property owners, and that some type of requirement or intermediary step be considered to prevent the hearings from becoming onerous to the Court system and law enforcement agencies.

A CS was drafted to address these concerns, and on February 17, 2011, CS SB 30 (STA) was submitted to Senate State Affairs and passed out the same date to Judiciary. The CS changes to SB 30 are as follows:

1. Property owners must make a request for hearing through the Office of Victims' Rights (OVR).
2. OVR will conduct an investigation into the request to make an initial determination if the owner is entitled to return of the property being claimed under the requirements of proposed 12.36.070(c): that the owner provides satisfactory proof of ownership, and the law enforcement agency is not able to show that the agency or another interested party is authorized to retain the property.
3. Once OVR makes such a determination, they will request on behalf of the owner that the agency return the property.
4. The court of jurisdiction is identified in cases involving a pending criminal case, and in situations where no criminal case is pending
5. Establishes the burden of proof to be a preponderance of the evidence, for both the property owner showing ownership and the law enforcement agency showing that they or another party are authorized to retain possession of the property.

Section 2

1. Establishes within Title 24, Chapter 65 Office of Victims' Rights, the authority for OVR to request a law enforcement agency for return of property on behalf of certain persons claiming property using any of the powers granted to OVR under this chapter
2. Establishes that the term crime victim, as used in this section, includes any person who is the owner of property that is in the custody of a law enforcement agency.

ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)

This bill provides for a statutory amendment to disposition of recovered or seized property for return of property by hearing. This note is indeterminate because the department may be required to represent law enforcement agencies at the hearings proposed in the bill. At this time we are not sure how many of these proceedings will occur. The issues raised may be complex, particularly if defense counsel opposes the return.

RE Senate Bill 30

Dear Senator Dyson,

On behalf of the National Federation of Independent Business/Alaska, I wish to express our support for Senate Bill 30. The National Federation of Independent Business is the largest small-business advocacy group in Alaska.

SB 30 would provide a mechanism for businesses that have had property stolen to gain assistance in recovering the items that are often critical to the continuation of a person's business.

While often there is not a problem retrieving property from authorities that are prosecuting a case, there are times when small businesses find that they are not considered as important as other issues. SB 30 provides the person assistance from the office of victims' rights to help recover stolen property being held by a law enforcement agency.

While the problem of retrieving stolen property is not always a problem, small businesses have found themselves fighting the government who has bottomless resources. The legal cost and loss of business are a very heavy burden to small businesses.

We believe that CSSB 30 is a reasonable solution to a potentially devastating problem for small businesses.

Sincerely yours,

Dennis L. DeWitt
Alaska State Director

A BILL

FOR AN ACT ENTITLED

"An Act relating to the counting of write-in votes."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

 Section 1. AS 15.15.360 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(d) Write-in votes shall be counted according to the following rules:

(1) writing in the name of a candidate whose name is printed on the ballot does not invalidate a write-in vote unless the director determines, on the basis of other evidence, that the ballot was so marked for the purpose of identifying the ballot;

(2) in order to vote for a write-in candidate, the voter must write in the candidate's name in the space provided and fill in the oval opposite the candidate's name in accordance with (a)(1) of this section;

(3) a vote for a write-in candidate, other than a write-in vote for governor and lieutenant governor, shall be counted if the oval is filled in for that candidate and if the name of the candidate, as it appears on the write-in declaration of candidacy, or the last name of the candidate is written in the space provided;

(4) if the write-in vote is for governor and lieutenant governor, the vote

shall be counted if the oval is filled in and the names of the candidates for governor and lieutenant governor, as they appear on the write-in declaration of candidacy, or the last names of the candidates for governor and lieutenant governor, or the name of the candidate for governor, as it appears on the write-in declaration of candidacy, or the last name of the candidate for governor is written in the space provided;

(5) in counting votes for a write-in candidate, the director shall disregard any abbreviation, misspelling, or other minor variation in the form of the name of a candidate if the intention of the voter can be ascertained.

* Sec. 2. AS 15.15 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 15.15.365. Counting of write-in votes in general election. (a) Write-in votes on a general election ballot shall be counted by candidate only if the aggregate of all votes cast for all write-in candidates for the particular office is

(1) the highest number of votes received by any candidate for the office; or

(2) the second highest number of votes received by any candidate and the difference between the total number of votes received by the candidate having the highest number of votes and the aggregate of all votes cast for all write-in candidates for the office is less than the percentage necessary for a recount at the state's cost under AS 15.20.450.

(b) Write-in votes that do not meet the requirements of this section may not be individually counted under this section.

(c) If the director determines that the requirements of (a) of this section have been met, the director shall establish the place and date for counting those write-in votes, and the director, or a designee of the director, shall count all write-in ballots under AS 15.15.360(d).

(d) This section does not apply to the counting of federal write-in absentee ballots submitted under 42 U.S.C. 1973ff.

* Sec. 3. AS 15.15.360(a)(9), 15.15.360(a)(10), 15.15.360(a)(11), and 15.15.360(a)(12) are repealed.

MEMORANDUM February 1, 2011

SUBJECT: Comments on the committee's questions
(CSSB 31(JUD) (Work Order No. 27-LS0350\E))

TO: Senator Hollis French
Chair of the Senate Judiciary Committee
Attn: Cindy Smith

FROM: Alpheus Bullard
Legislative Counsel

The committee raised a number of questions relating to CSSB 31(JUD) (27-LS0350\E) Monday afternoon. I have a few comments that may be of assistance to the committee's deliberations. I have paraphrased the committee's questions below.

Why are abbreviations included along with misspellings and other minor variations in the form of the name of a candidate under committee substitute's sec. 15.15.360(d)(5)?

In drafting the bill, I mirrored language, to the extent applicable, found in the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act.[1] The division of elections (division) is already required to observe the standard set forth by that Act for certain voters, I used the language to ensure a consistent standard.

As employed in the committee substitute, the paragraph clarifies that, if the intention of the voter can be ascertained, the voter's write-in vote for a candidate shall be counted by the director of elections (director). One circumstance that might clearly demonstrate the voter's intent, but not constitute a misspelling or other minor variation, would be a voter's abbreviation of a write-in candidate's hyphenated last name.[2]

[1] "Any abbreviation, misspelling, of other minor variation in the form of a name of a candidate or political party shall be disregarded in determining the validity of the ballot if the intention of the voter can be ascertained." (42 U.S.C. § 1973ff-2(C)(3)).

[2] Cindy Smith asked if there were any cases addressing the acceptance or construction of abbreviations used by a person voting for a write-in candidate. I am not aware of any cases relating to the construction of, or practice of accepting, abbreviations used by person's voting for a write-in candidate.

The intention of the voter is paramount.[3] If the intention of a voter can be ascertained by the director when she reviews a voter's write-in vote, whether the voter employs an abbreviation, misspells the write-in candidate's name, or makes some other minor variation in the name of the candidate, the form of the variation or mistake should not be considered significant.

What is the function of the committee substitute's sec. 15.15.365(b)?

The committee substitute's sec. 15.15.365(b) provides:

> (b) Write-in votes that do not meet the requirements of this section may not be individually counted under this section.

Subsection (b) provides that write-in votes on a general election ballot will only be counted by candidate if the conditions required under the section are met. Subsection (a) provides:

> (a) Write-in votes on a general election ballot shall be counted by candidate only if the aggregate of all votes cast for all write-in candidates for the particular office is
> (1) the highest number of votes received by any candidate for the office; or
> (2) the second highest number of votes received by any candidate and the difference between the total number of votes received by the candidate having the highest number of votes and the aggregate of all votes cast for all write-in candidates for the office is less than the percentage necessary for a recount at the state's cost under AS 15.20.450.

Subsection (b) is redundant. Subsection (a) already provides that "[w]rite-in votes on a general election ballot shall be counted by candidate only if . . ." As a drafting choice, I included the language of the provision's subsection (b) because it appears in the regulation that is the basis for the committee substitute's sec. 2 (6 AAC 25.085(c)).

[3] See Miller v. Treadwell, Op. No. 6532, 2010 Alas. LEXIS 133 (Alaska Dec. 22, 2010), at 2, citing Edgmon v. State, Office of the Lieutenant Governor, Division of Elections, 152 P.3d 1154 (Alaska 2007), at 1157 ("the voter shall not be disenfranchised because of mere mistake, but [the voter's] intention shall prevail") (internal citations and quotations omitted); State, Division of Elections v. Alaska Democratic Party, Case No. S-14054, Order dated Oct. 29, 2010 at 3 ("[w]e have consistently emphasized the importance of voter intent because the opportunity to freely cast [one's] ballot is fundamental") (internal citations omitted).

While it is my legal opinion that the subsection is not necessary, I strongly recommend consulting with the division as to what their opinion on the matter is; given that the division has been operating pursuant to the regulation, as drafted, for over 10 years.[4]

Why is the "as appears on the write-in declaration of candidacy" language retained in the committee substitute's sec. 15.15.360(d)(3) and (4)?

Under AS 15.25.105(a), votes for a write-in candidate in the general election will not be counted unless the candidate has filed a letter of intent (write-in declaration of candidacy) with the director. Under AS 15.25.105(a)(9) that letter must include "the name of the candidate as the candidate wishes it to be written on the ballot by the voter[.]" This permits a candidate to provide an alternative name (i.e. a nickname or pseudonym)[5] or spelling of the candidate's name. This alternative name, or spelling of the candidate's name, appears on the write-in declaration of candidacy.[6]

While the appropriate interpretation of the phrase was litigated in Miller v. Treadwell, Op. No. 6532, 2010 Alas. LEXIS 133 (Alaska Dec. 22, 2010), the Court interpreted the "as it appears" language of AS 15.15.360(A)(11) to not require that a candidate's name be correctly spelled.

> Miller points to language in AS 15.15.360(a)(11) providing that "[a] vote for a write-in candidate . . . shall be counted if the oval is filled in for that candidate and if the name, as it appears on the write-in declaration of

> We agree with the State that subsection AS 15.15.360(11) concerns pseudonyms. The "nickname" field on the declaration of candidacy form supports this interpretation [AS 15.15.030(4)]. If that field were not present, a candidate with a pseudonym might write only his or her legal name on the form, thus invalidating ballots with the candidate's pseudonym written in. The "nickname" field allows a candidate to ensure that his or her pseudonym "appears on the write-in declaration of candidacy" so that the write-in votes listing that pseudonym will count. Thus, the word "appears" relates to a pseudonym's possible presence on the ballot, not the particular form of the vote, and demonstrates that the statute is inclusive — it is designed to include, rather than exclude, votes.

Miller v. Treadwell, Op. No. 6532, 2010 Alas. LEXIS 133, 6 - 7 (Alaska Dec. 22, 2010) (internal footnotes omitted).

[6] By way of analogous comparison, see AS 15.25.030(a)(15), which requires a member of a political party who seeks to become a candidate of that party in the primary election, to include "the manner in which the candidate wishes the candidate's name to appear on the ballot" on the candidate's declaration of candidacy.

> candidacy, of the candidate or the last name of the candidate is written in the space provided." He argues that this subsection, read in the context of other provisions of the statute, requires that a write-in candidate's name be written and spelled perfectly, even if the voter's intent to vote for a particular candidate can be readily ascertained. But when read as a whole, AS 15.15.360's purpose is inclusive, not exclusive; it is designed to ensure that ballots are counted, not excluded. And this inclusiveness is consistent with the overarching purpose of an election: "to ascertain the public will."

Id. 2010 Alas. LEXIS 133 at 5 - 6 (internal citations omitted).

The argument, rejected by the Court, that the "as it appears" language evidences a legislative intent to require that a write-in candidate's name be spelled correctly, is addressed by the committee substitute's sec. 15.15.360(d)(5), which provides:

> (5) in counting votes for a write-in candidate, the director shall disregard any abbreviation, misspelling, or other minor variation in the form of the name of a candidate if the intention of the voter can be ascertained.

The inclusion of this paragraph should provide a clear statutory answer as to whether the "as it appears" language of AS 15.15.360 should be interpreted to require that a candidate's name must be spelled correctly, while still allowing a write-in candidate to provide the division, under AS 15.25.105(a)(9), an alternative spelling or nickname that people intending to vote for that candidate might write on the ballot.

May a write-in candidate running for the office of governor run without an accompanying write-in candidate for the office of lieutenant governor?

A write-in candidate for governor must run together with a candidate for lieutenant governor. AS 15.25.105(b) provides:

> (b) If a write-in candidate is running for the office of governor, the candidate must file a joint letter of intent together with a candidate for lieutenant governor. Both candidates must be of the same political party or group.

AS 15.15.360. Rules for counting ballots

(a) The election board [OR DIRECTOR, AS MAY BE APPROPRIATE] shall count ballots according to the following rules:

(1) A voter may mark a ballot only by filling in, making "X" marks, diagonal, horizontal, or vertical marks, solid marks, stars, circles, asterisks, checks, or plus signs that are clearly spaced in the oval opposite the name of the candidate, proposition, or question that the voter desires to designate.

(2) A failure to properly mark a ballot as to one or more candidates does not itself invalidate the entire ballot.

(3) If a voter marks fewer names than there are persons to be elected to the office, a vote shall be counted for each candidate properly marked.

(4) If a voter marks more names than there are persons to be elected to the office, the votes for candidates for that office may not be counted.

(5) The mark specified in (1) of this subsection shall be counted only if it is substantially inside the oval provided, or touching the oval so as to indicate clearly that the voter intended the particular oval to be designated.

(6) Improper marks on the ballot may not be counted and do not invalidate marks for candidates properly made.

(7) An erasure or correction invalidates only that section of the ballot in which it appears.

(8) A vote marked for the candidate for President or Vice-President of the United States is considered and counted as a vote for the election of the presidential electors.

(b) Write-in votes shall be counted according to the following rules:

MEMORANDUM January 25, 2011

SUBJECT: Providing the Director of Elections the authority to ascertain the intention of a voter under AS 15.15.360(a)
(CSSB 31( ), Work Order No. 27-LS0350\B)

TO: Senator Joe Thomas
Attn: Grier Hopkins

FROM: Alpheus Bullard
Legislative Counsel

You requested a blank committee substitute that would revise Senate Bill 31 (27-LS0350\M) and AS 15.15.360 to provide the Director of Elections (director) the authority, in counting votes for a write-in candidate, to disregard any abbreviation, misspelling, or other minor variation in the form of the name of a candidate if the intention of the voter can be ascertained.

AS 15.15.360 prescribes how an election board shall count ballots. The change you requested required modifications to the bill beyond the substitution of "director" for "election board" in the bill's ultimate paragraph.[1]

While a regulation, 6 AAC 25.085(d),[2] provides the director authority to establish the place and date for counting certain write-in votes, the director is not currently authorized

[1] Note the change to the bill's title.

[2] 6 AAC 25.085. Counting of write-in votes in general election.

(a) Except as provided in 6 AAC 25.670, the provisions of this section apply for the counting of write-in votes in a general election in this state.

(b) Counting write-in votes in a general election by candidate will only be done under this section if the aggregate of all votes cast for all write-in candidates for the particular office is

(1) the highest number of votes received by any candidate for the office; or

(2) the second highest number of votes received by any candidate and the difference between the total number of votes received by the candidate having the highest number of votes and the aggregate of under statute to count ballots outside of certain statutorily identified situations.[3] Nothing now in statute specifically authorizes the director to count ballots in a close election contest between a candidate on the ballot and a write-in candidate.

For this reason, your requested committee substitute includes an added section codifying the substance of 6 AAC 25.085 and further providing that the director shall count write-in ballots in certain elections for a federal or statewide office.

If I can be of further assistance please do not hesitate to contact me.

all votes cast for all write-in candidates for the office is less than the percentage necessary for a recount at the state's cost under AS 15.20.450.

(c) Write-in votes that do not meet the requirements of this section will not be individually counted under this section.

(d) If the director determines that the requirements of this section have been met, the director will establish the place and date for counting those write-in votes.

[3] While the director has general administrative supervision over the conduct of state elections and may adopt regulations necessary for the administration of state elections (AS 15.15.010) and regulations prescribing the manner in which the precinct ballot count is accomplished so as to ensure accuracy in the ballot count (AS 15.15.350), the director is authorized to review or count ballots only in certain statutorily enumerated areas. The director must (1) count or review certain absentee and vote by mail ballots under AS 15.15.430, AS 15.20.082(c), AS 15.20.201(d), AS 15.20.480, and AS 15.20.800(e); (2) review and count certain ballots under AS 15.15.430; and (3) review all ballots in a recount election (AS 15.20.480).

(4) If a voter marks more names than there are persons to be elected to the office, the votes for candidates for that office may not be counted.

(5) The mark specified in (1) of this subsection shall be counted only if it is substantially inside the oval provided, or touching the oval so as to indicate clearly that the voter intended the particular oval to be designated.

(6) Improper marks on the ballot may not be counted and do not invalidate marks for candidates properly made.

(7) An erasure or correction invalidates only that section of the ballot in which it appears.

(8) A vote marked for the candidate for President or Vice-President of the United States is considered and counted as a vote for the election of the presidential electors.

(9) Write-in votes are not invalidated by writing in the name of a candidate whose name is printed on the ballot unless the election board or director determines, on the basis of other evidence, that the ballot was so marked for the purpose of identifying the ballot.

(10) In order to vote for a write-in candidate, the voter must write in the candidate's name in the space provided and fill in the oval opposite the candidate's name in accordance with (1) of this subsection.

(11) A vote for a write-in candidate, other than a write-in vote for governor and lieutenant governor, shall be counted if the oval is filled in for that candidate and if the name, as it appears on the write-in declaration of candidacy, of the candidate or the last name of the candidate is written in the space provided.

(12) If the write-in vote is for governor and lieutenant governor, the vote shall be counted if the oval is filled in and the names, as they appear on the write-in declaration of candidacy, of the candidates for governor and lieutenant governor or the last names of the candidates for governor and lieutenant governor, or the name, as it appears on the write-in declaration of candidacy, of the candidate for governor or the last name of the candidate for governor is written in the space provided.

(13) In counting votes for a write-in candidate, the election board or director shall disregard any abbreviation, misspelling, or other minor variation in the form of the name of a candidate if the intention of the voter can be ascertained.

* Sec. 2. AS 15.15 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 15.15.365. Counting of write-in votes in general election. (a) Write-in votes on a general election ballot shall be counted by candidate only if the aggregate of all votes cast for all write-in candidates for the particular office is

(1) the highest number of votes received by any candidate for the office; or

(2) the second highest number of votes received by any candidate and the difference between the total number of votes received by the candidate having the highest number of votes and the aggregate of all votes cast for all write-in candidates for the office is less than the percentage necessary for a recount at the state's cost under AS 15.20.450.

(b) Write-in votes that do not meet the requirements of this section may not be individually counted under this section.

(c) If the director determines that the requirements of (a) of this section have been met,

(1) the director shall establish the place and date for counting those write-in votes; and

(2) in an election for federal or statewide office, the director shall count all write-in ballots under AS 15.15.360.

(d) This section does not apply to the counting of federal write-in absentee ballots submitted under 42 U.S.C. 1973ff.

Supreme Court of Missouri, Division No. 1.
Oscar P. KASTEN, Appellant,
v.
Ora N. GUTH, Respondent.

No. 50373.
Feb. 10, 1964.

Action to contest county school superintendent election. The Circuit Court of Perry County, J. O. Swink, J., entered a judgment adverse to the contestant who appealed. The Supreme Court, Holman, J., held that notice to contest election alleging that 67 uncounted votes were cast for person with same first and last name as contestant without insertion of any middle initial and that voters intended those ballots to be cast for contestant, a write-in candidate, thereby giving contestant more votes than declared winner was sufficient to state claim upon which relief could be granted.

Reversed and remanded.

111 Stephen N. Limbaugh, Limbaugh, Limbaugh & Russell, Cape Girardeau, for appellant.

Francis Toohey, Jr., Roscoe D. Moore, Perryville, for respondent.

HOLMAN, Judge.

In this action appellant, Oscar P. Kasten, seeks to contest the election of respondent, Ora N. Guth, to the office of county superintendent of public schools at the school election held on April 2, 1963. The circuit court sustained respondent's motion to dismiss the notice of election contest filed by appellant. Contestant has duly appealed from that judgment. We have jurisdiction because the case involves the title to an 'office under this state.' Article V, § 3, Constitution of Missouri, 1945, V.A.M.S.; Armantrout v. Bohon, Mo.App., 157 S.W.2d 530.

The Notice of Election Contest reads as follows:

'Take notice that I, Oscar P. Kasten, hereby present this notice to the Circuit Court of Perry County, Missouri, for the purpose of contesting the election of Ora N. Guth to the office of County Superintendent of Schools for Perry County, Missouri, at the election held on April 2, 1963, and as grounds for such contest state as follows:

'1. On Tuesday, April 2, 1963, an election was held in Perry County, Missouri, 112 for the purpose of electing, among other officers, a county superintendent of schools for Perry County, Missouri.

'2. The printed ballot for this office contained the name of Ora N. Guth, she being the only candidate who had announced for this office in accordance with the requirements of Section 167.020 RSMo 1959 [V.A.M.S.].

'3. About 15 days before the election held April 2, 1963, Oscar P. Kasten decided to run for the office of Perry County Superintendent of Schools and announced his candidacy as a write-in candidate through the media of newspapers, radio, posters, printed cards and word of mouth.

'4. The formal canvass of the ballots cast for this office revealed the following tabulation: For Ora N. Guth 1107 votes; for Oscar P. Kasten 1084 votes; for Oscar Kasten 67 votes; for Oscar P. Kassel 1 vote; for Oscar P. Casten 1 vote; for Roger Kasten 1 vote; for Leo Rozier 1 vote; for James Burgess 1 vote.

'In addition, there were 145 votes which were voided because the name of Oscar P. Kasten was written in but the name of the printed candidate was not crossed out. On the basis of the foregoing Ora N.

© 2011 Thomson Reuters. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

'5. Contestant Oscar P. Kasten avers that he should have been declared the winner of such election for the following reasons: (a) The sixty-seven (67) votes cast for Oscar Kasten were intended for contestant and should have been counted for him. (b) The one (1) vote cast for Oscar P. Kassel was intended for contestant and should have been counted for him. (c) The one (1) vote cast for Oscar P. Casten was intended for contestant and should have been counted for him. (d) The one (1) vote cast for Roger Kasten was intended for contestant and should have been counted for him. (e) The one hundred forty-five (145) voided votes which had contestant's name written in but which failed to have contestee's name crossed out were intended for contestant and should have been counted for him. (f) The votes cast for Oscar P. Kasten, Oscar Kasten, Oscar P. Kassel, Oscar P. Casten and Roger Kasten were all intended to be cast for one and the same person, Oscar P. Kasten, and all said votes should have been counted for him. (g) The vote cast by Jerri Carter and that cast by Joan Lorberg were invalid because they were cast in the City of Perryville District when such persons were residents of the Hunt District and such votes should have been cast in the Hunt District. (h) The vote cast by Winifred Ketchum and that cast by Mary Lewis were invalid because such persons had not resided in the State of Missouri one whole year before the election of April 2, 1963.

'Wherefore, contestant, Oscar P. Kasten, prays for a recount of all votes cast in the election of Perry County Superintendent of Schools held April 2, 1963, in Perry County, Missouri; that all votes cast for Oscar Kasten, Oscar P. Kassel, Oscar P. Casten, Roger Kasten and all void ballots be counted for contestant; that the votes of Jerri Carter, Joan Lorberg, Winifred Ketchum and Mary Lewis be voided and not counted for the reasons mentioned in this notice and for such other and further relief as may appear proper and just.'

Ora N. Guth filed the following motion to dismiss the foregoing notice: '1. Comes now the contestee and moves to dismiss the notice of election contest filed by contestant on the ground that such notice fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. 2. Contestee further moves that the notice of election contest filed by contestant be dismissed for the reason that he has failed to comply with the mandatory provisions of § 167.020 RSMo 1959 [V.A.M.S.] pertaining to the requirement that all candidates for the office of County Superintendent of Schools must file a declaration of candidacy at least 45 days before the date of the election and that he is therefore not entitled to file this contest nor to hold the office of 113 County Superintendent of Schools.' As stated, the trial court sustained said motion to dismiss.

We will first consider the allegations of paragraph 2 of the motion. While it states that contestant 'is therefore not entitled to file this contest nor to hold the office of County Superintendent of Schools,' we construe that portion of the motion as alleging that contestant was disqualified from election or was not entitled to be elected to the office in question because he had not filed a written declaration of his candidacy at least 45 days before the election.

It is provided in § 167.010 (unless otherwise indicated all statutory references are to RSMo 1959, V.A.M.S.) that '[t]he qualified voters of each and every county in this state shall elect a county superintendent of public schools at the annual district school meeting held on the first Tuesday in April, 1943, and every four years thereafter. * * *' Section 167.020 provides that '[a]t least forty-five days before the annual school meeting in any year when a county superintendent of public schools is to be elected, any person desiring to be a candidate for election to the office of county superintendent of public schools must file with the county clerk a written declaration of his candidacy for the office, which declaration shall be filed by the county clerk and no filing fee shall be charged. * * *' Respondent contends that the quoted portion of § 167.020 is mandatory and that no person is eligible to be voted for at the election unless he has filed a written declaration within the time specified therein. Appellant contends that the provision in regard to filing a written declaration of candidacy relates only to the requirement for a candidate to have his name printed on the ballot, but that 'the printing of one's name on the ballot is not a mandatory requirement for election. A write-in candidate who has not filed a declaration of his candidacy and whose name is not on the printed ballot may still be elected if he receives the greatest number of votes.'

[1][2] As indicated by the foregoing, a solution of the question presented requires a construction of the provisions of § 167.020. It is elementary that the primary rule to be followed in the construction of statutes is to ascertain and give effect to the intent of the legislature. Taney County v. Empire District Elec. Co., Mo.Sup., 309 S.W.2d 610. A strict literal construction of the quoted portion of the statute would tend to support the contention of respondent. However, in determining the legislative intent, we think the words used in the statute must be considered in connection with certain basic fundamental principles that are firmly established in this state.

We have said that 'the very taproot and reason for any election at all among a free people is that the majority may rule * * *. Election laws must be liberally construed in aid of the right of suffrage. State ex rel. [Wills] v. Hough, 193 Mo. [615], l. c. 651, 91 S.W. 905 [l. c.]; Hale v. Stimson, 198 Mo. 134, 95 S.W. 885. The whole tendency of American authority is towards liberality to the end of sustaining the honest choice of electors.' Nance v. Kearbey, 251 Mo. 374, 158 S.W. 629, 631. While mandatory statutory requirements must be followed, '[e]lections should be so held as to afford a free and fair expression of the popular will * * *.' State ex Inf. McKittrick ex rel. Martin v. Stoner, 347 Mo. 242, 146 S.W.2d 891, 894. The statutes of this state indicate that it is the established public policy that a qualified voter may vote for any candidate of his choice by writing the name of such person on the ballot and the voter is not restricted to voting for the candidated whose names are printed thereon. Our general election laws contain the express provision that '[i]f the voter desires to vote for one or more candidates whose name or names do not appear on the printed ballot he may do so by drawing a line through the printed name of candidate for such office, and writing below such canceled name the name of person for whom he desires to vote, and placing a 114 cross mark in the square at the left of such name.' Section 111.580(2). Other statutes, by reference, have made that provision applicable in elections conducted in cities of the first, second, third, and fourth classes. See §§ 122.210, 122.400, 77.040, and 79.030. Similar provisions appear in § 423 of the Charter of Kansas City. See also § 122.960 relating to elections in the City of St. Louis; Gumm v. Hubbard, 97 Mo. 311, 11 S.W. 61; Bradley v. Cox, 271 Mo. 438, 197 S.W. 88; Ousley v. Powell, Mo.App., 12 S.W.2d 102.

[3] In construing § 167.020, we think it is significant that it contains no express provision to the effect that no person should be voted for whose name does not appear upon the printed ballot. We also note that subsection 2 of that statute contains the following: 'The voting for county superintendent shall be by ballot and all ballots cast shall be counted for the persons for whom cast, and it is hereby made the duty of the members of the board of directors and the chairman and secretary of the annual school meeting to see that each ballot so cast is counted for the person receiving the same * * *.' It is, of course, implicit in every election statute that the ballot shall be counted for the person for whom cast. We therefore, have concluded that this provision was inserted in the statute in order to make it clear that the ballot should be counted for any person for whom it is cast and that the voting not be restricted to the candidated printed on the ballot.

We have also considered our constitutional provisions, i. e., Art. I, § 25, that 'all elections shall be free and open; and no power, civil or military, shall at any time interfere to prevent the free exercise of the right of suffrage,' and Art. VIII, § 2, which provides that all qualified electors are 'entitled to vote at all elections by the people.' It is the majority rule in this nation that statutory provisions expressly stating that no person shall be voted for unless his name is printed on the ballot are unconstitutional under constitutional provisions similar to those above quoted. See Littlejohn v. People, 52 Colo. 217, 121 P. 159, Ann.Cas.1913D, 610; Annotation, Ann.Cas.1913D, 614; 18 Am.Jur., Elections, § 191, p. 307. It therefore appears that if § 167.020 should be construed in accordance with respondent's contention there is good authority for holding it unconstitutional. We need not expressly so hold. It is sufficient to say that it is presumed that the legislature did not intend to enact an unconstitutional statute.

We also note that respondent in her brief concedes that 'had no one filed for the office of county superintendent of schools and a blank ballot would be prepared, write-in candidates would be permitted, or the election would be a nullity but where you have candidates who have complied with the statute, no other persons would be entitled to be elected at such election.' We do not agree that the situation would have been any different in the event no one had filed.

© 2011 Thomson Reuters. No Claim to Orig. US Gov. Works.

If it is mandatory that a candidate file a timely declaration in order to be qualified for election, then that requirement should be applied in every event. The situation suggested in respondent's brief tends to accentuate the fact that the construction for which she contends is unreasonable.

In view of all of the foregoing, we have concluded that the legislature, in enacting § 167.020, did not intend to restrict the electors to voting for the candidates printed on the ballot, but, on the contrary, intended that any elector could vote for a person of his own selection by drawing a line through the names printed on the ballot and writing in the name of his candidate. Any other conclusion would attribute to the legislature an intent contrary to our established public policy to the effect that a qualified voter be permitted to vote for any person of his choice and that the will of a majority of the voters should prevail. We accordingly rule the point under consideration contrary to the contention of respondent.

[4] As to the remaining point raised by respondent's motion to dismiss, we are clearly of the opinion that the appellant's 115 notice states a claim upon which relief can be granted. It is alleged that Oscar P. Kasten received 1,084 votes and that 67 votes were cast for Oscar Kasten which were intended to be voted for Oscar P. Kasten, contestant herein. For the purposes of the motion these allegations are considered to be true. Hence it must be ruled that the 67 votes cast for Oscar Kasten should have been counted for contestant, which would have given him a total of 1,151 votes, and he should therefore have been declared the winner of said election.

In the case of Gumm v. Hubbard, 97 Mo. 311, 11 S.W. 61, Caleb Gumm contested the election of Joel D. Hubbard. The court approved a recount wherein 'one vote for 'J. D. Huba,' one for 'J. D. Hubba,' one for 'Huber,' one for 'J. D. Hub,' and one for 'D. Huber' were counted for contestee. Effect should be given to the will of the electors, and it is now generally agreed that the circumstances surrounding the election may be given in evidence, on an election contest, to explain ambiguities in the ballots. McCrary, Elec. § 396; Cooley, Const. Lim. 611; 6 Amer. & Eng.Cyclop.Law, 431. There were but two candidates for this office, and their names are so unlike that there is no danger of confusion as between them. The election, as to these candidates, was local, confined to the county where they resided, and the voting population seems to have been largely German. Under the evidence, the court might well have found that these ballots were for the contestee, and there would have been no error in counting them for him.' 11 S.W. 63.

'Generally, where the voter's intention is found it should not be defeated by the fact that the name of the candidate is misspelled, the wrong initials are employed, or some other or slightly different name of similar pronunciation has been written instead of that of the candidate actually intended to be voted for. If there is a misspelling of a candidate's name when written in by a voter or when printed on the ballot, evidence of the circumstances surrounding the election is admissible for the purpose of showing that the ballot was intended for a particular candidate, unless the name is so different that thus to apply it would be to contradict the ballot itself or unless the ballot is so defective that it fails to show any intention whatever. Although some courts deem themselves bound by a stricter rule, it has been held that a ballot which contains a candidate's surname only may be counted, even though there are other persons in the county having the same surname, where it is shown that there was no other person of such name who was a candidate for the same or any other office. This rule is also followed if only the middle name of the candidate is wrong, if the first name is abbreviated, or if the wrong initials are used. Furthermore, where there are two persons in the same district with the same name, one of them a candidate, and the other not, and there are ballots which do not designate which of these persons is voted for thereon, parol evidence may be received to show for whom the votes were intended.' 18 Am.Jur., Elections, § 195, p. 311.

[5] In 29 C.J.S. Elections § 180, pp. 263, 265, it is stated that 'a candidate for public office is generally entitled to have his name written upon the official ballot by voters who desire to support him as their choice, although he has not been nominated by any convention, caucus, or meeting and under most statutes, when an elector desires to vote for a person whose name is not on the ballot he may do so by writing his name on the ballot in an appropriate place, notwithstanding the person whose name is thus written in was not eligible to have his name printed on the ballot. * * * [I]f the voter's intention can be determined, that intention will not be defeated because of an irregularity in the writing of the candidate's name. Thus ballots have been held not invalidated because the voter misspelled the candidate's name or address, as where the error was so slight and of such a nature as to render the name as written within the scope of the doctrine of idem sonans; or because the voter wrote some other or slightly different name of like or similar pronunciation,116 as where there is a clear relation between the appearance or sound of the name written in and that of the candidate and only one man of a particular name is a candidate for the office; or where the voter omitted the candidate's initial or employed a wrong initial, or wrote the candidate's initials in place of his given name, or wrote only the candidate's last name, there being no other candidate of the same name to be voted for.' See also, Annotation, 86 A.L.R.2d 1025.

[6][7] Certain questions are suggested by the allegations of the notice and the points briefed that will likely arise upon the trial of this case. Due to the nature of the case we deem it advisable to express our views upon those questions. In accord with the foregoing authorities, we are of the opinion that evidence is admissible which bears upon the intent of voters who wrote in the name of Oscar Kasten, Oscar P. Kassel, Oscar P. Casten, and Roger Kasten on their ballot. As to the votes cast for Oscar Kasten, we have the view that said name is so similar to Oscar P. Kasten that they should be counted for contestant unless it should appear from the evidence that there was a person residing in Perry County (other than contestant) who had the name of Oscar Kasten and who possessed the qualifications specified in § 167.010 for the office here involved. In the event it should appear that there were on the date of the election two residents of Perry County bearing the name of Oscar Kasten and possessing the aforesaid qualifications, then the court shall determine from all of the evidence in the case the identity of the person for whom those voters intended to cast their ballot. There were 145 ballots which were alleged to have been voided because the name of contestant was written in but no line was drawn through respondent's name. Contestant alleges that those votes should have been counted for him. We have the view that those ballots should not be counted for either appellant or respondent. Ousley v. Powell, Mo.App., 12 S.W.2d 102.

The judgment is reversed and cause remanded for further proceedings in accordance with the views herein expressed.

Court of Appeals of North Carolina.
In re PROTEST BY ROCKY MIDGETTE OF 2 NOVEMBER 1993 MANTEO TOWN ELECTION.

No. 9410SC332.
Dec. 6, 1994.

Candidate in town election appealed from order of Superior Court, Wake County, Henry V. Barnette, Jr., J., which affirmed decision of State Board of Elections, which directed that additional 41-votes for write-in candidate be certified by County Board of Elections. The Court of Appeals, Greene, J., held that: (1) when confronted with technical errors in following write-in procedure, court would generally look to face of ballot, and if write-in candidate's name was on ballot, but not in exact accordance with mandatory statutory requirements, to extrinsic evidence to see if voter's choice could be determined; (2) 36 ballots which had no name written on them should not have been counted for write-in candidate; and (3) five ballots with variations of write-in candidate's name written on them were properly counted for write-in candidate.

Affirmed in part, reversed in part, and remanded.

GREENE, Judge.

Dellerva W. Collins (Ms. Collins) appeals from an order entered 4 February 1994 in Wake County Superior Court, affirming the State Board of Elections' (the State Board) 23 November 1993 decision directing that an *521 additional forty-one votes for write-in candidate Rocky Dillon Midgette (Rocky Midgette) be certified by the Dare County Board of Elections (the County Board) for the 2 November 1993 town election for three seats on the Manteo town board.

On 2 November 1993, the town of Manteo, North Carolina, had a general election to elect three town commissioners by plurality vote. Ms. Collins, Edward C. Etheridge, and Lee Tugwell filed as candidates 214 and were listed on the ballot while Rocky Midgette was a write-in candidate. On 3 November 1993, Rocky Midgette wrote a letter to the chairman and supervisor of the County Board, stating that although 152 votes were attributed to him, "41 ballots were set aside because the precinct could not figure out whether they should be counted or not." He asked the County Board to count the forty-one votes for him.

The County Board met on 4 November 1993 to canvass the votes and determined that thirty-six ballots which were punched in the proper place but did not have a name written on the ballot should not be counted because the directions on the ballot stated that a name must be written in. The County Board also determined that several ballots on which voters wrote "R. Midgette," "Rocky," "Midgette," or some other abbreviation of Rocky Midgette's name should not be counted. The County Board therefore dismissed Rocky Midgette's complaint for lack of probable cause and determined that the official canvass results for town commissioner were 254 votes for Edward Etheridge, 254 votes for Lee Tugwell, 185 votes for Ms. Collins, and 162 votes for Rocky Midgette.

Rocky Midgette filed a complaint with the County Board and protested the following alleged violations and misconduct:

> (1) Precinct officials and the Board of Elections refused to count several ballots on which voters wrote "R. Midgette", "Rocky", "Midgette" or some other, similar abbreviations of Rocky Midgette's name. Those votes should have been counted because the voter expressed a clear intent to vote for Rocky Midgette. Although the name was not written out completely and there are other citizens in town named Midgette, no other Midgette was actively seeking the town commissioner's office.
> (2) Approximately 36 ballots were rejected and not counted at all because the voter had punched next to place 70 on the punchcard ballot but had not written in Rocky Midgette's name.... Because 70 was the place to vote for write-ins, campaign material for Rocky instructed voters to punch next to 70, and there was no other write-in candidate in the election, it is clear that the voters' intent in punching out 70 was to vote for Rocky Midgette.

Rocky Midgette requested that all ballots with a variation of his name and the thirty-six ballots on which place 70 was punched be counted for him and added to his total.

215 The County Board held a hearing on 13 November 1993 and by order dated 16 November 1993, made the following findings of fact based on testimony from Rocky Midgette and several voters and the affidavits of several voters:

> 5. Rocky Midgette ran an active campaign for town commissioner. He set up approximately 500 posters, distributed 1,000 flyers, mailed over 500 postcards to voters, visited homes, ran display ads in the newspaper, spoke at candidates' forum sponsored by League of Women Voters, and had workers telephone voters.
> 6. Rocky Midgette's campaign material directed voters to cast a write-in vote for him by punching 70 on the ballot and writing in his name.
> 7. No other person was actively campaigning as a write-in candidate for town commissioner, and no other person named Midgette or Midgett or Rocky was running as a candidate in the town election or otherwise actively seeking votes for town office.

testified and 13 voters had affidavits presented which indicated they punched space 70 on their ballots but did not write anything on the ballot itself. These voters indicated that they either mistakenly wrote Rocky Midgette's name in the booklet on line 70 or did not believe it was necessary to write his name anywhere because it was already written in the booklet on line 70.

Based on these findings of fact, the County Board concluded it properly excluded one ballot with space 70 punched and "Rocky" written on it, two ballots with space 70 punched and "R. Midgette" written on them, two ballots with space 70 punched and "Midgette" written on them, and thirty-six ballots with space 70 punched but no name written on them. The County Board therefore dismissed Rocky Midgette's complaint.

Rocky Midgette then appealed to the State Board which, after considering the Board's findings of fact and conclusions of law, all submissions previously distributed to all State Board members, and verbal presentations before the County Board and the State Board, rejected the County Board's order. By decision and order entered 23 November 1993, the State Board ordered that "the 41 questioned votes for write in candidate Rocky Midgette be certified by" the County Board.

On 3 December 1993, Ms. Collins filed a petition with the State Board to reconsider its 23 November 1993 decision; however, on 9 December 1993, the State Board, by letter, informed her that it would not reconsider its decision. On 15 December 1993, Ms. Collins, pursuant to N.C.Gen.Stat. § 150B-43, appealed the 23 November 1993 and 9 December 1993 decisions of the State Board to Wake County Superior Court. On 22 December 1993, she filed an amendment to her petition to except to the failure of the State Board to include findings of fact and conclusions of law "in contravention of N.C.G.S. Section 150A-36" and requested that "the matter be remanded to the State Board ... for appropriate findings of fact and conclusions of law." On 22 December 1993, she also filed a motion to remand for findings of fact and conclusions of law. By order entered 4 February 1994, the trial court found that the State Board "adopted the findings of fact of the county board and concluded as a matter of law that the additional votes should be counted for Mr. Midgette." The trial court also concluded the State Board "acted within the scope of its authority in determining that the 41 additional votes should be counted for Rocky 217 Midgette," its decision was "supported by substantial admissible evidence in view of the entire record as submitted," and its decision was not "in violation of constitutional provisions, in excess of authority, made upon unlawful procedure, affected by other error of law or arbitrary and capricious." The trial court therefore denied Ms. Collins' appeal and affirmed the State Board's decision.

The issue presented is whether it is impossible to determine the voter's choice from ballots containing variations of Rocky Midgette's name and ballots with no name written on them, but punched in the space for write-in candidates, where Rocky Midgette conducted an active campaign and was the only write-in candidate.

*523 [1][2] Because Ms. Collins contends the State Board's decision to count the forty-one votes in question was in excess of its statutory authority and was an error of law, de novo review is required. Brooks, Comm'r of Labor v. Rebarco, Inc., 91 N.C.App. 459, 463, 372 S.E.2d 342, 344 (1988). N.C.Gen.Stat. § 163-151, which provides for marking ballots in primaries and elections, states that in an election, "if a voter desires to vote for a person whose name is not printed on the ballot, he shall write in the name of the person in the space immediately beneath the name of a candidate, if any, printed on the ballot for that particular office." N.C.G.S. § 163-151 (1991). N.C.Gen.Stat. § 163-170, which governs the rules for counting ballots, provides:

> Only official ballots shall be voted and counted. No official ballot shall be rejected because of technical errors in marking it unless it is impossible to determine the voter's choice. In applying the general rule, all election officials shall be governed by the following rules....
> (5) Write-In Votes.-If a name has been written in on an official general election ballot as provided in G.S. 163-151, it shall be counted in accordance with the following rules:
> a. The name written in shall not be counted unless written in by the voter or a person authorized to assist the voter pursuant to G.S. 163-152.

b. The name shall be written in immediately below the name of a candidate for a particular office, if any, and shall be counted as a vote for the person whose name has been written in for that office....

218 N.C.G.S. § 163-170 (1994). Under these statutes, while a voter must write in the name of a person not on the ballot in order for the vote to be counted, any technical errors in following this procedure will not make the ballot invalid "unless it is impossible to determine the voter's choice." See Duke Power Co. v. Clayton, 274 N.C. 505, 164 S.E.2d 289 (1968) (all parts of same statute dealing with same subject are to be construed together as a whole, and every part must be given effect if this can be done by fair and reasonable intendment). We must therefore determine whether it is impossible to tell the voter's choice for the thirty-six ballots where no name was written in and the five ballots marked "Rocky," "R. Midgette," or "Midgette."

[3] It is unclear under N.C.Gen.Stat. § 163-170 whether or not, in determining if it is impossible to ascertain a voter's choice, a court is to look to the circumstances surrounding an election or only to the specific ballot in question. We agree, however, with the approach taken by other courts, which have dealt with this issue by generally looking to the face of the ballot, and if the write-in candidate's name is on the ballot, but not in exact accordance with mandatory statutory requirements, looking to extrinsic evidence to see if the voter's choice can be determined. "[T]here must be an expression of intent on the ballot, but the ballot is to be read in the light of surrounding circumstances, evidence of which is admissible." Fifteen Registered Voters on behalf of Flanagan, 129 N.J.Super. 296, 323 A.2d 521, 523 (1974) (write-in votes for "Wright" or "Mr. Wright" should be counted for "Harry C. Wright" where evidence showed no other "Wright" sought the office and where "Harry Wright" vigorously campaigned); see also Meyer v. Lamm, 846 P.2d 862 (Colo.1993) (if ballot is substantially marked as law requires, and from such marking, intention of voter, when viewed in light of circumstances surrounding election, can be ascertained, ballot should be counted); Devine v. Wonderlich, 268 N.W.2d 620 (Iowa 1978) (candidate's surname sufficient to indicate vote for him where he vigorously campaigned, and it was unlikely to confuse him with others having same surname, none of whom were politically active); 26 Am.Jur.2d Elections §§ 268-72 (1966). Based on this general rule, courts have considered extrinsic evidence to determine a voter's intention where he or she has written in only a surname, where only the middle name of the candidate is wrong, where the first name is abbreviated, or if the wrong initials are used. 26 Am.Jur.2d Elections § 272.

[4][5] In this election, the thirty-six ballots which have no name written on them do not express an intention of the voter's choice *524 because 219 they do not contain Rocky Midgette's name, a variation of Rocky Midgette's name, or any name at all, and disregard completely the requirements of Sections 163-151 and 163-170, the instructions on the ballot, and even the instructions Rocky Midgette provided in his campaign. Accordingly, because no name at all was written on these thirty-six ballots, we do not consider any extrinsic evidence in attempting to ascertain voter intent based on the rules articulated above. These thirty-six ballots, therefore, are tantamount to technical errors which make it impossible to determine the voter's choice. The County Board's findings of fact, which the trial court found the State Board adopted, cannot support the conclusion that these thirty-six votes should be counted for Rocky Midgette.

[6][7] We now consider the one ballot marked "Rocky," the two ballots marked "R. Midgette," and the two ballots marked "Midgette." Because there is some evidence of voter intent on these five ballots, it is appropriate to look at extrinsic evidence. The evidence adduced at the hearing before the County Board, contained in the County Board's findings of fact, indicates that Rocky Midgette ran an active campaign for town commissioner by setting up approximately 500 posters, distributing 1,000 flyers, mailing over 500 postcards to voters, visiting homes, running display ads in the newspaper, speaking at a candidates' forum sponsored by the League of Women Voters, and having workers telephone voters. There was also evidence that Rocky Midgette was the only person actively campaigning as a write-in candidate for town commissioner, and no other person named Midgette or Midgett or Rocky was running as a candidate in the town election or otherwise actively seeking votes for town office. Given these facts, it is not impossible to tell the voter's choice from these five ballots, and the State Board correctly ordered the County Board to count these five votes for Rocky Midgette. See McIntosh v. Helton, 828 S.W.2d 364 (Ky.1992) (write-in votes for candidate could be counted for him even though they only designated him by initials rather than name as statute requires; election commission had given approval to use of initials and only one person with initials in question campaigned for position). For these reasons, the trial court's decision should be affirmed in part and reversed in part. We remand the case to the trial court with directions to reverse the State Board's decision in part and remand to the State Board so that it may order the County Board not to count the thirty-six ballots which did not have a name written in.

ACKER, P.J.

We have for consideration a "petition of James H. Montgomery to *250 establish identity by candidate nominated under different names."

James H. Montgomery, a registered Republican, is currently the incumbent councilman of Grove City Borough Council for the 2nd Ward of Grove City, Pa. His re-election bid for that office was opposed by Joseph M. Jaskol, also a registered Republican, in the May 19, 1987, primary. After a tabulation of the primary votes, the Mercer County Election Board certified that Montgomery had been nominated as the Republican candidate for the council seat.

No candidates were listed on the Democratic ballot for the Second Ward Councilmanic seat. There were, however, a number of write-in votes cast for that office on behalf of both Montgomery and Jaskol. The election board did not certify that either candidate has secured the necessary 10 votes to be the Second Ward nominee of the Democratic Party.[FN1] Rather, the board, pursuant to 25 P.S. §3155, certified that 12 votes under 11 variations of the name James H. Montgomery were written-in for that nomination at the May 19, 1987, primary. The names as written on the ballots, and the number of votes received by each, were certified as follows:

FN1. Under 25 P.S. §3155, the county election board shall not certify the votes cast on irregular ballots for any person unless the total number of votes cast for said person is equal to or greater than the number of signatures required on a nomination petition for the particular office. Under 25 P.S. §2872.1(35), 10 signatures would be needed on a nomination petition for 2nd Ward councilman.

*251 Montgomery now seeks to have these votes counted in his favor, and to be declared the nominee of more than one party, i.e., the nominee of the Democratic Party.

DISCUSSION

Section 3156 of the Election Code, 25 P.S. §2600 et seq., provides in pertinent part:

"Any person who has been nominated at a primary election by more than one party for the same office under different names may, at any time not later than five days after the certification by the county board of the votes cast at a primary election, present a petition to the court of common pleas of the proper county, praying for an order declaring such petitioner by his true name to be the person who was thus nominated by more than one party under different names. If the court shall determine that the different names so appearing on the returns of the primary represent one and the same person, the court shall enter an order finding said fact and directing the county board to revise its return accordingly."

2 However, the election code itself does not provide any instruction on how the court is to make this determination. Therefore, we turn to the case law on the subject for guidance.

The seminal case on this subject appears to be *252*McCracken Appeal*, 370 Pa. 562, 88 A.2d 787 (1952). Appellee therein, Joseph Kratochvil Jr., received 313 votes as a write-in (sticker) candidate for township treasurer during the general election. His opponent, Thomas H. McCracken, who had previously won the nomination of both the Republican and Democratic tickets, received 314 votes. At issue was one ballot on which the voter had written-in the name "Joseph Kratochvil," without the "Jr." Kratochvil petitioned to have the vote cumulated with his other votes. The election returns board, after a hearing, determined that Joseph Kratochvil and Joseph Kratochvil Jr. were one and the same person and ordered that the vote be cumulated, raising Kratochvil's total to 314 votes. Kratochvil then won the casting of lots due to the tie vote and was declared the successful candidate. McCracken appealed to the court of common pleas, which affirmed the decision of the board. McCracken then appealed to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, asserting the illegality of Kratochvil's election.

In commenting on the duties of the county election board to canvas and compute the election results, the court stated:

"There could scarcely be a duty more apparent and impelling on an election board than that of ascertaining for whom votes were cast. Id. at 565, 88 A.2d at 788 (emphasis in original).

Further, the court stated:

In any disputed election, nothing can be more vital towards the accomplishment of an honest and just selection than the ascertainment of the intention of the voter. What was the intention of the voter who wrote Joseph Kratochvil instead of Joseph Kratochvil Jr.? Can anyone doubt that the voter wished to register his vote for Joseph Kratochvil Jr.? And with that fact established, nothing should be *253 permitted to change the effect of that intention so honestly manifested." Id. at 566, 88 A.2d at 789.

Finally, the court declared, quoting from 9 Ruling Case Law, at 1144:

"[W]here the voter's intent is found it should not be defeated by the fact that the name of the candidate is misspelled, the wrong initials employed, or some other or slightly different name of like or similar pronounciation has been written instead of that of the candidate actually intended to be voted for. . . . A ballot may be counted which contains a candidate's surname only, although there are other persons in the county having the same surname, it being shown that there was no other person of such name who was a candidate for the same or any other office; and so also if only the middle name of the candidate is wrong or if the first name is abbreviated, or if the wrong initials are used." Id. at 566, 88 A.2d at 789.

The court then concluded from its examination of the record that the names of Joseph Kratochvil and Joseph Kratochvil Jr. identify one and the same individual, and affirmed the decision of the election board cumulating the votes.

3 A second decision bearing on this subject is Parente Appeal, 390 Pa. 249, 134 A.2d 62 (1957). Appellee therein, John R. Stieska, petitioned the county election board to cumulate all the votes cast in the various forms of his name and to declare him the successful nominee on the ticket. The board credited Stieska and his principal competitor, Hugo J. Parente, with only such votes as were written-in with their full names. Stieska appealed the board's action to the court of common pleas, which sustained the appeal and ordered that all the contested write-in votes be cumulated. Parente appealed to the Supreme Court, which concluded that the court *254 of common pleas, upon the appeal of a decision of the county election board, is not precluded from cumulating votes for a candidate by write-ins on voting machines, if the evidence so warrants it, in order to effectuate the will of the voters. The court then affirmed the cumulation of the following votes:

"John R. Stieska, 58; John Steiska, 33; J. Steiska, 13; J. R. Stieska, 1; Stieska, 59; John T. Stieska, 1;

Hugo J. Parente, 70; Hugo Parente, 27; H. Parente, 8; Parente, 38; Parenti, 5; Hugo Parenti, 1."

From the election code and these cases, it is evident that this court has the power and duty to determine the intent of the voter in casting his ballot, and having found such intent, to see it effectuated. Here, the court is faced with a determination of whether the 12 votes case under variations of the name James H. Montgomery were intended as votes for the petitioner.

Numerous decisions in Pennsylvania have addressed similar problems involving the cumulation of votes.[FN2] These decisions evidence no absolute rule on what variations of a petitioner's name may be allowed in order to cumulate the contested votes. However, the thrust is towards a liberal application 255 of the cumulation rule as long as the court can determine the voter's intent in casting his ballot.

FN2. See Antonelli Appeal, 405 Pa. 179, 174 A.2d 107 (1961); Nomination of Lamb, 73 Pa. D. & C.2d 142 (1975); Petition of Warner, 51 Sch. L.R. 96 (1956); Petition of Wenzel, 51 Sch. L.R. 172 (1956); In re Kramer's Nomination, 94 P.L.J. 241 (1945); In re Nomination of McLaughlin, 31 Erie L.J. 184 (1947); In re Election of Edgmont Township Supervisor, 53 Del. 317 (1965). In re Recount of Vote in the Second District, Third Ward, Borough of Steelton, 65 Dauph. 192 (1953); In re Election for Tax Collector of Seward Borough, 36 West. 291 (1955).

In the instant case, James H. Montgomery is the incumbent councilman for the Second Ward and is well known to the voters of that ward. There is no evidence of any other James H. Montgomery running as a candidate for that office. [FN3] With the following exception, we are convinced that the variations of the name James H. Montgomery written-in at the May 19 primary represent one and same person who is the petitioner, James H. Montgomery. We do not believe that the one vote cast for "Mantony" is sufficiently close to the petitioner's name to allow its cumulation on his behalf.

FN3. There was however a Robert F. Montgomery running for School Director.

*4 Wherefore, we conclude and find as a fact that the identity of the petitioner, James H. Montgomery, under the different names written-in for the remaining 11 votes is established, and we direct the Mercer County Election Board to revise its return accordingly.

Hence, this ORDER

And now, on this June 24, 1987, it is hereby ordered and decreed that the county election board as constituted by a prior court order shall count as votes for James H. Montgomery upon the Democratic ticket all write-in votes cast for the petitioner, James H. Montgomery, except the one vote cast for "Mantony," and shall revise its return accordingly. Those votes to be counted are:

CS FOR SENATE BILL NO. 31(JUD)

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

TWENTY-SEVENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

BY THE SENATE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

Offered:
Referred:

Sponsor(s): SENATORS THOMAS, FRENCH, MENARD, AND WIELECHOWSKI

A BILL

FOR AN ACT ENTITLED

"An Act relating to the counting of write-in votes."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

 Section 1. AS 15.15.360 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(d) Write-in votes shall be counted according to the following rules:

(1) writing in the name of a candidate whose name is printed on the ballot does not invalidate a write-in vote unless the director determines, on the basis of other evidence, that the ballot was so marked for the purpose of identifying the ballot;

(2) in order to vote for a write-in candidate, the voter must write in the candidate's name in the space provided and fill in the oval opposite the candidate's name in accordance with (a)(1) of this section;

(3) a vote for a write-in candidate, other than a write-in vote for governor and lieutenant governor, shall be counted if the oval is filled in for that candidate and if the name of the candidate, as it appears on the write-in declaration of candidacy, or the last name of the candidate is written in the space provided;

(4) if the write-in vote is for governor and lieutenant governor, the vote

shall be counted if the oval is filled in and the names of the candidates for governor and lieutenant governor, as they appear on the write-in declaration of candidacy, or the last names of the candidates for governor and lieutenant governor, or the name of the candidate for governor, as it appears on the write-in declaration of candidacy, or the last name of the candidate for governor is written in the space provided;

(5) in counting votes for a write-in candidate, the director shall disregard any abbreviation, misspelling, or other minor variation in the form of the name of a candidate if the intention of the voter can be ascertained.

 Sec. 2. AS 15.15 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 15.15.365. Counting of write-in votes in general election. (a) Write-in votes on a general election ballot shall be counted by candidate only if the aggregate of all votes cast for all write-in candidates for the particular office is

(1) the highest number of votes received by any candidate for the office; or

(2) the second highest number of votes received by any candidate and the difference between the total number of votes received by the candidate having the highest number of votes and the aggregate of all votes cast for all write-in candidates for the office is less than the percentage necessary for a recount at the state's cost under AS 15.20.450.

(b) Write-in votes that do not meet the requirements of this section may not be individually counted under this section.

(c) If the director determines that the requirements of (a) of this section have been met, the director shall establish the place and date for counting those write-in votes, and the director, or a designee of the director, shall count all write-in ballots under AS 15.15.360(d).

(d) This section does not apply to the counting of federal write-in absentee ballots submitted under 42 U.S.C. 1973ff.

 Sec. 3. AS 15.15.360(a)(9), 15.15.360(a)(10), 15.15.360(a)(11), and 15.15.360(a)(12) are repealed.

Intent of law will be a good measuring stick

Joe Miller left a number of things in the wake of his failed bid to unseat Sen. Lisa Murkowski, like divisions in the Republican Party and a highlighted need to examine state election law concerning write-in ballots.

Miller's bid for the Senate and Murkowski's successful write-in campaign exposed the vagueness of some election laws, such as exactly what counts as a write-in vote. State law says a person has to fill in the bubble next to the write-in option and then write in the candidate's name.

Whether that means the name needs to be spelled correctly wound up being a topic that wasn't settled until the state's Supreme Court weighed in.

En route to the Supreme Court's ruling, a federal judge described Alaska's laws on the topic as "poorly drafted."

"Wisdom would suggest that the Alaska Legislature act to clarify it to avoid similar disputes in the future," U.S. District Court Ralph Beistline wrote in a decision dismissing Miller's case.

The Supreme Court's decision that turned against Miller was based mainly on prior Supreme Court decisions, which held that a voter's intent was paramount and that minor misspelling shouldn't stand in the way of that.

But there's a difference between having something written in statute and having something addressed in court decisions.

For one thing, a statute in a law book carries greater weight. A new court can overturn an old court's ruling, but to change a statute requires the Legislature to act.

For another, leaving the courts to decide something as important as what constitutes a legal vote leaves the state open to further lengthy and expensive court challenges.

We were always puzzled by why Miller chose to contest the election's results long after basic math suggested the battle was lost: Even if all of the ballots Miller had contested were thrown out, Murkowski still had enough votes to win handily.

But we don't fault Miller for asking the courts to weigh in on the question. Supreme Court decisions are generally based on a set of facts specific to each case. The facts of Miller's case surely differed from the cases that led to the relevant court precedents. So it makes sense, then, that he would at least attempt to see if the cases leading to the precedents establishing voter intent as the standard resembled his enough that those precedents also applied to his case. The courts are the proper venue for that.

But the challenge didn't come cheap. The court case cost the state more than $100,000. And the state has said that Miller will get a bill for part of that total.

Speaking before the state Senate, Sen. Linda Menard referred to the court cases that came in the wake of the November 2010 U.S. Senate election as a debacle.

We agree and hope that Senate Bill 31, of which Menard is a co-sponsor, will allow the state to avoid similar debacles in the future. The bill states that "the election board shall disregard any abbreviation, misspelling or other minor variation in the form of the name of a candidate."

Who is to say whether this language would have been enough to satisfy Miller or whether he would have sought out another avenue to challenge the election's results had such language been in place last November.

Still, we hope SB 31 passes because as Beistline said, state law — and Alaska voters — can only benefit from less ambiguity.

ALASKA STATE LEGISLATURE

SENATOR JOE THOMAS

Senate Bill 31:
An Act relating to the counting of write-in votes.

Sponsor Statement

"We start with the bedrock principle that the right of the citizens to cast their ballot and thus participate in the selection of those who control their government is one of the fundamental prerogatives of citizenship."

- Alaska Supreme Court, (Miller v. Treadwell)

Last fall, Alaskans reelected Lisa Murkowski to the United States Senate as a write-in candidate with nearly 100,000 votes statewide, something not witnessed by our nation in over fifty years. Because of the unique nature of write-in votes and confusion in state statute there was substantial debate over the validity of nearly 12,000 ballots. In the suit that followed, (Miller v. Treadwell), Joe Miller argued that these ballots should not be counted because the name written was not identical to the way Senator Murkowski's name appeared on her declaration of candidacy. Superior Court Judge William Carey and the Alaska Supreme Court both ruled against this argument, finding that judging the validity of a ballot based on the intent of the voter is paramount.

Much of this case centered on the interpretation of state statute regarding the counting of ballots. Each court, in their findings, including Federal District Judge Ralph Bieistline, found that AS 15.15.360 was badly worded and left open for legitimate debate. Senate Bill 31 looks to address this language by inserting a section that would place the intention of the voter above minor variations, mismarks or abbreviations.

Senate Bill 31 follows on over fifty years of consistent precedent in support of a voter's intent and enfranchisement. In strengthening this statute by inserting federally recognized language from the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act, SB 31 will reduce potential future litigation while strengthening the public's perception of Alaska's democratic process.

I urge you to join me in supporting Senate Bill 31.

Quotes of significance to Senate Bill 31 from the 2010 United States Senate Race Court Findings

"AS 15.15.360(a)(11) may not be well written, and it is clearly subject to different interpretations...AS 15.15.360, in general, is terse and somewhat unclear in comparison to the other state statutues. The statute, as Miller reveals, does lack the express language that most states have adopted which permits minor misspellings and errors." - Miller v. Campbell, pg. 15 Superior Court Judge William Carey

"While the issue may be moot, the public interest exception applies...this scenario is certainly susceptible to repetition any time a major write in effort for election to a public office in Alaska occurs." - Miller v. Campbell, pg. 8 Superior Court Judge William Carey

"We start with the bedrock principle that "the right of the citizens to cast their ballot and thus participate in the selection of those who control their government is one of the fundamental prerogatives of citizenship." - Alaska Supreme Court Miller v. Treadwell pg. 3

"In light of our strong and consistently applied policy of construing statutes in order to effectuate voter intent, we hold that abbreviations, misspellings or other minor variations in the form of the name of a candidate will be disregarded in determining the validity of the ballot, so long as the intention of the voter can be ascertained." - Alaska Supreme Court Miller v. Treadwell pg. 6

"Our interpretation of AS 15.15.360...is also consistent with the federally mandated standard for counting write in votes for those voters living or serving in uniform overseas. The Uniformed and Overseas citizens Absentee Voting Act provides that in counting the ballot of a uniformed voter or other voter who is overseas "any abbreviation, misspelling, or other minor variation in the form of the name of a candidate or political party shall be disregarded in determining the validity of the ballot if the intention of the voter can be ascertained." - Alaska Supreme Court Milier v. Treadwell pg. 7

"The Alaska Supreme Court did not make a finding clearly contrary to the face of the statute and its findings were entirely consistent with the State's past practices of making voter intent a priority. This is not to say that Miller's technical arguments are frivolous, for it is easy to understand his view as to the proper interpretation of AS 15.15.360 (a)(11). But it is just as easy to accept the interpretation given by the Alaska Supreme Court. What we have before us is a poorly drafted state statute. Wisdom would suggest that the Alaska Legislature act to clarify it to avoid similar disputes in the future." – Federal District Court Judge Ralph Bieistline pg. 7

Memorandum

TO: Senator Joe Thomas
FROM: Susan Warner, Legislative Analyst
DATE: January 21, 2011
RE: Legal History of Counting Write-in Votes in Alaska
LRS Report 11.113

You asked about the history in Alaska of write-in vote counting. You were particularly interested in legal precedents, and you asked for copies of pertinent decisions.

Within certain parameters defined by the U.S. Constitution, states have the authority to make their own election laws, and most states allow voters to write in the name of a candidate who is not listed on the ballot. Legal challenges occur most often in close races; courts then attempt to balance the constitutional right of citizens to elect the person of their choice against state laws that are designed to ensure efficient and orderly elections, among other things. The Alaska Supreme Court has consistently held that the right of citizens to select their government representatives is a fundamental prerogative of citizenship and should not be impaired or destroyed by "strained" statutory constructions.[1] As such, the Court in the most recent case (Miller v. Treadwell, 2010) held as follows:

> Voter intent is paramount, and any misspelling, abbreviation, or other minor variation in the form of the candidate's name on a write-in ballot does not invalidate a ballot so long as the intention of the voter can be ascertained.[2]

Alaska Voting Law

As you know, Alaska law does not allow write-in voting during primary elections, but provisions must be made for write-in voting on general election ballots. Alaska's rules for counting write-in ballots specify that a vote for a write-in candidate "shall be counted" if the oval is filled in and if the candidate's last name, or the candidate's name as it appears on the declaration of candidacy, is written in the space provided.[3] The law further specifies that the rules on counting ballots are, without exception, mandatory.

Miller v. Treadwell

Voter intent prevailed in litigation over the counting of write-in ballots in Alaska's 2010 U.S. Senate race. Joe Miller, the Republican senate candidate on the general ballot, argued that write-in votes for his opponent should not have been counted unless the candidate's name was spelled flawlessly. The Alaska Supreme Court ruled against Mr. Miller in Miller v. Treadwell, and the Court opinion begins with powerful language in support of voter enfranchisement. The Court proclaims that a citizen's right to vote is of profound importance; key to participatory democracy; and a polar, cardinal, and bedrock principle. The Court also notes that such longstanding principles have been consistently applied to election issues in Alaska over the past 50 years.

Mr. Miller had argued that Alaska statutory language excludes any vote that is not spelled perfectly. The Superior Court held that if the legislature intended a candidate's name to be spelled perfectly, legislators would have used words like exactly, precisely, or perfectly.[4] The Supreme Court agreed and held that Alaska's statutory language is meant to be inclusive rather than exclusive:

> It is designed to ensure that ballots are counted, not excluded. And this inclusiveness is consistent with the overarching purpose of an election: to ascertain the public will. . . . Voter intent is paramount, and any misspelling, abbreviation, or other minor variation in the form of the candidate's name on a write-in ballot does not invalidate a ballot so long as the intention of the voter can be ascertained.

Additionally, the Court noted that Alaskan voters arrive at their polling places with a variety of backgrounds and capabilities, including some being raised without English as their first language, and such issues should not take away a person's right to decide which candidate to elect:

> We must construe the statute's language in light of the purpose of preserving a voter's choice rather than ignoring it.

Legal Precedents

The decision reached in Miller v. Treadwell reflects the tendency for all U.S. courts to favor voter intent over ambiguous statutory language, but election scholar Richard Hasen asserts that the Alaska Supreme Court—even before Miller—appears to have gone the furthest in giving emphasis to voter intent.[5] Alaska's 1978 precedent-setting case, Carr v. Thomas, involved the question of counting certain ballots, and Alaska's highest court declared that the state would need "clear and unmistakable" statutory language to take away a citizen's right to have his or her voted counted.

Alaska courts have consistently emphasized the importance of voter intent. The decisions for the following Alaska cases are attached to this document:

- Willis v. Thomas, 600 P.2d 1079 (1979). The Alaska Supreme Court depended on a determination of voter intent in ruling on the results of a recount of ballots in Senate District F (Attachment D).

- Fischer v. Stout, 741 P.2d 217 (1987). The Alaska Supreme Court ruled on whether certain votes or classes of votes were properly counted or rejected in the 1986 race for Senate District H. The Court held that ballots marked with a pen rather than punched still showed clear voter intent and should be counted (Attachment E).

- Finkelstein v. Stout, 774 P.2d 786 (1989). The Alaska Supreme Court ruled on a ballot recount for Seat A in House District 13. The Court considered voter intent with regard to questioned signatures on absentee ballots (Attachment F).

- Edgmon v. Moses, 152 P.3d 1154 (2007). The Alaska Supreme Court ruled on the results of a recount in the District 37 Democratic primary. Considering ballot markings, the Court found that marks clearly intended as votes should be counted (Attachment G).

Addressing Irregular Write-in Votes in Other States

Although Alaska statute does not address the inevitable misspellings and illegibility of written-in names, many states attempt to clarify how such votes will be counted, and these rules always give primacy to voter intent. There are variations among states, but this directive, by its very nature, is subjective and gives vote-counters the authority to determine who a voter intended to elect. Here are examples from four states:

- California accepts a "reasonable facsimile" of a write-in candidate's name (Cal. Elec. Code § 15342).
- Nebraska will count a write-in vote without the first name of the candidate, and the write-in name must be "reasonably close to the proper spelling" (Neb. Rev. Stat. § 32-615).
- Delaware allows for a "misspelled or minor variation" of a write-in candidate (Del. Code Ann. Title 15, § 4972 (b)(8)).
- Washington election officials are required to "exercise all reasonable efforts to determine the voter's intent (WAC 434-262-160).

Some states provide further guidance on counting irregular write-in votes. Washington State has an extensive, pictorial booklet on how election officials are expected to count nearly every deviation from what might be considered a standard marking, including samples of acceptable and unacceptable write-in votes. Attachment H is the portion of the booklet that deals with write-in votes, and the entire document can be viewed at http://www.sos.wa.gov/_assets/elections/2009StatewideStandardsonWhatisaVote.pdf.

We hope this is helpful. If you have questions or need additional information, please let us know.

Our view: No doubt

State smart to review election, need for any changes in law

(01/03/11 19:17:26)

When federal Judge Ralph Beistline tossed Joe Miller's challenge to Alaska's U.S. Senate election, he granted that Alaska's law could be clearer about the primacy of voter intent.

He was right.

The requirement that a write-in candidate's name be written as it appears in its state-qualified form led to the arguments over spelling and how close voters had to be.

In addition, the state's decision to provide, at voters' request, lists of qualified write-in candidates prompted unsuccessful suits by both the Republican and Democratic parties.

While we disagreed with the Division of Elections on the latter point, state courts upheld their call. And the division ran a straight, fair election.

Lawmakers, however, should revisit the law to make clear that voter intent, not spelling, is the key test in deciding which write-in votes count, and to decide whether write-in lists either will or won't be provided at polling places in the future.

The division did well by Alaskans. But clarity in the law may help keep future elections out of court.

BOTTOM LINE: Election law should leave no room for doubt.

No 'spelling bee' election in Alaska

Ruth Walker | Christian Science Monitor | Dec 7, 2010

The 2010 elections, the gift that keeps on giving, have imparted new meaning to the phrase "all over but the shouting."

At this writing, Lisa Murkowski looks likely to be headed back to Washington as Alaska's senior senator and into the history books as the first candidate since Strom Thurmond in 1954 to win election to the Senate as a write-in. Her victory, if confirmed, as is now expected, will turn in part on a decision to honor ballots from voters who merely approximated the correct spelling of her name.

How should we feel about that? Are standards slipping irretrievably in the republic?

Her Democratic opponent has conceded defeat. But her Republican opponent, Joe Miller, whose own name was easier to spell and was, moreover, actually on the ballot, has had other ideas.

His campaign has challenged all ballots that fall short orthographically. State authorities, on the other hand, have been counting as valid all those who came close to spelling "Murkowski" right.

Alaskan law requires electoral officials to take into account "voter intent" when counting write-in votes. This standard is common across the country, it turns out. The Los Angeles Times quoted Richard Winger, editor of the election law journal Ballot Access News: "I am not aware of any state that says write-ins can't be counted unless the spelling is perfect."

As a copy editor, I'm with Mr. Miller. What kind of democracy can't spell its leaders' names right? As a student of language, though, I understand that spoken language came first, and that the written form of any word is an approximation of the spoken form; it's not the other way around. After all, there's a reason we call it "language" - from the Latin word for "tongue" - and not "scribblage," or something like that.

The case for a more generous interpretation of what counts as a valid vote for a write-in candidate starts with this primacy of spoken language.

Much of what we recognize as democracy began with spoken language, conversations, and debates in halls of assembly and the public square. Democracy was then furthered by written communication, especially after the development of the printing press.

More recently, speech has gained a boost from new forms of communication - from FDR's fireside chats to YouTube - that have let us hear, and hear repeatedly, what we otherwise might only have read.

Of course we need both modes: Writing - "print" - allows for rereading, for reflection and the consideration of nuance. Speech, especially live, in-person speech, provides immediacy and the expression of feelings.

Fix the law: Write-in ballot statute needs repair by Legislature

12.30.10 - 11:53 pm
Editorial

Federal Judge Ralph Beistline wrote in his Tuesday ruling dismissing Joe Miller's amended federal lawsuit in the U.S. Senate race that he can understand Mr. Miller's viewpoint regarding the wording of state election law.

Judge Beistline also said he can easily see the state's view when it comes to the law governing how a write-in candidate's name must appear on the ballot in order to be considered a valid vote.

The judge ultimately deferred to the Alaska Supreme Court, which ruled in Mr. Miller's state lawsuit that the name of Sen. Lisa Murkowski didn't have to be spelled correctly. Mr. Miller argued, in both state and federal court, that Alaska law required a precise spelling.

But Judge Beistline found the Alaska Supreme Court "did not make a finding clearly contrary to the face of the statute and its findings were entirely consistent with the state's past practice of making voter intent a priority."

But the judge, in his ruling, pointedly noted a problem:

"This is not to say that Miller's technical arguments are frivolous, for it is easy to understand his view …

"What we have before us is a poorly drafted state statute. Wisdom would suggest the Alaska Legislature act to clarify it to avoid similar disputes in the future. For now we have to work with what we have and that is what the Alaska Supreme Court has done."

Judge Beistline's message is clear and sound: The Legislature should clarify the law. It should do so this coming session while the subject is fresh.

Supreme Court takes reasonable approach in election challenge

by Dermot Cole / cole@newsminer.com

Dec 22, 2010 | 757 views | 0 | | 5 | |

FAIRBANKS — The Alaska Supreme Court said it relied on principles applied consistently during the past 50 years to reject Joe Miller's court case and approve the state's approach to counting ballots.

The decision Wednesday helps clear the way for Sen. Lisa Murkowski's re-election to be certified before the next Congress. Miller may pursue a federal court fight, however.

This unanimous ruling is not surprising, given the numerous decisions the court has made in contested elections over the years. The ruling also is reasonable.

The court declared that Miller is dead wrong in claiming state law requires the names of write-in candidates be spelled correctly.

"Our prior decisions clearly hold that a voter's intention is paramount," the four justices said. "In light of our strong and consistently applied policy of construing statutes in order to effectuate voter intent, we hold that abbreviations, misspellings or other minor variations in the form of the name of a candidate will be disregarded in determining the validity of the ballot, so long as the intention of the voter can be ascertained."

The court rejected Miller's argument that anything less than his point of view, supporting correct spelling, would threaten the integrity of the election process.

"But it is Miller's interpretation of the statute that would erode the integrity of the election system, because it would result in disenfranchisement of some voters and ultimately rejection of election results that constitute the will of the people," the judges said. "We have consistently construed election statutes in favor of voter enfranchisement."

The court also found its interpretation of state law is consistent with federal and state rules allowing misspellings on the federal write-in absentee ballot for military voters and civilians overseas.

"Miller's proposed construction of the statute would require us to impose a different, and more rigorous, voting standard on domestic Alaskans than on those who are serving in the military or living abroad," the court said.

Other states use the same approach as Alaska in counting ballots and "we see no basis for Miller to argue that the application of the standard in this election violates equal protection under either the state or federal constitution."

The portion of state law Miller said requires perfect spelling really applies to pseudonyms, the court said.

"The 'nickname' field allows a candidate to ensure that his or her pseudonym 'appears on the write-in declaration of candidacy' so that the write-in votes listing that pseudonym will count. Thus, the word 'appears' relates to a pseudonym's possible presence on the ballot, not the particular form of the vote and demonstrates that the statute is inclusive — it is designed to include, rather than exclude, votes."

Memorandum

To: Grier Hopkins, Aide to Senator Joe Thomas

From: Adrian LeCornu, Special Assistant AFN

Date: 1/26/2011

Re: Testimony in regards to SB 31

Attached to this is the Testimony of Ralph Anderson, Co-Chair of Alaska Federation of Natives. Alaska Federation of Natives is the largest Alaska Native group within the state of Alaska, representing over 190 villages and tribal councils, 11 non-profits and 12 of the largest corporations in the state.

While we do not take a position on SB 31, we do support the language within the bill and believe that it strikes the right tone. If this bill were to be merged with others or amended, we would like a chance to review the resulting bill to insure that the tone of this bill is not lost.

We would like to submit the attached document for the Alaska Senate State Affairs committee's consideration. We thank you for taking up this issue.

ALASKA FEDERATION OF NATIVES

Testimony of
Ralph Andersen, Co-Chair
Board of Directors
Alaska Federation of Natives

TESTMONY before State Affairs Committee, Senate Bill 31, 27th Alaska Legislature

For the record, my name is Ralph Andersen. I am Co-Chair of the Alaska Federation of Natives' Board of Directors. AFN is the largest and oldest statewide Alaska Native organization in Alaska. Its membership includes the 13 regional Native corporations, 12 regional non-profits that contract and run federal and state programs and over 200 villages and tribes throughout the State. Our organization represents about 100,000 Alaska Natives from all around this state.

I would like to preface my comments today by noting that the AFN Board has taken no formal position on this bill. With that being said, we do believe that a bill that addresses our concerns and the concerns of many Alaska residents should be moved along and passed. The events that prompted this bill were historic and are now well documented, not only politically, but also legally with the action of the Alaska Supreme Court.

Our belief has always been and will continue to be the enfranchisement of those we represent. We would hope that the committee would consider the demographics in Alaska, and especially those in rural Alaska. There are many diverse cultures in this State and many Alaska residents whose first language is not English. In parts of rural Alaska one primary Alaska Native language is spoken with a rudimentary knowledge and use of English. Members of the Committee should also consider the population dynamics of their own districts. In Anchorage, for example, you could find over 87 different languages spoken in homes, and not everyone has achieved total fluency of the English language.[i]

There are also questions around education, and the ability to read and write in English. Reading and writing for some is challenging, not to mention the additional challenges faced by those with learning disabilities. We want to avoid creating a law that disenfranchises people because of their education, being impaired or handicapped, and as a result unintentionally or mistakenly placing the wrong vote.

With these considerations, I am certain you understand that memorizing the exact correct spelling of candidates' names may be difficult, even for those with a good education. We support the language on Page 2, Line 27-29 of the bill that "In counting votes for a write-in candidate, the election board shall disregard any abbreviation, misspelling, or other minor variation in the form of the name of a candidate if the intention of the voter can be ascertained." We believe this language is affirmative on the rights of the voter. I thank you for allowing these comments to be included for the record.

Legislative changes would fix write-in problems, shake up partisan primary system

Legislative changes would fix write-in problems, shake up partisan primary system
By Ben Brown | For the Juneau Empire

The 2010 election cycle in Alaska was unlike anything ever seen before. Things in both the primary and general elections directly resulted from the way Alaska statutes governing elections are written, from the outcome of the primary election to the ultimate determination of general election results. Ambiguity in the Alaska Elections Act is a bad thing, creating controversy where it need not exist.

Rep. Tammie Wilson, R-North Pole, has introduced House Bill 70, and Sens. Joe Thomas (D-Fairbanks), Hollis French (D-Anchorage), Linda Menard (R-Wasilla), and Bill Wielechowski (D-Anchorage) Senate Bill 31, to add the following mandate to the list of rules about how ballots are counted:

"In counting votes for a write-in candidate, the election board shall disregard any abbreviation, misspelling, or other minor variation in the form of the name of a candidate if the intention of the voter can be ascertained."

This language follows what the Alaska Supreme Court has set as a fair and just standard for counting Alaskans' votes, erring on a voter's side when he or she has been unclear, but not so unclear as to have one's vote not count at all. This is inherently fair and reasonable, and should become law. I haven't heard what the total cost for the Division of Elections' work in conducting the write-in count was yet, but it will be a large sum of money, one that had to be spent because the ballots had to be counted. While any candidate had the right to challenge the legality and integrity of the methods put forward by the Division of Elections to count write-in ballots, the cost to all parties of litigating that challenge would have been completely unnecessary had the statute been clear. Yes, there was ample general precedent for discerning voter intent, but case law did not provide direct guidance on spelling a write-in candidate's name.

SB 31 will be heard Tuesday morning in the Senate State Affairs Committee, after which it will move to the Judiciary Committee. The positive fiscal impact of this bill may not be directly considered at any of these hearings, but it nevertheless one more reason it should pass. Clearing up this issue will save a lot of time and money. It is also an issue on which both sides of the aisle appear to agree, so I expect quick passage.

A much more complex and far-reaching piece of elections legislation is HB 77, introduced by Reps. Max Gruenberg (D-Anchorage), Sharon Cissna (D-Anchorage), and Scott Kawasaki (D-Fairbanks). HB 77 would make many significant changes to many components of the election laws, as evidenced by a simple reading of the title:

"An Act establishing a top two nonpartisan blanket primary election system for elective state executive and state and national legislative offices; changing appointment procedures relating to precinct watchers and members of precinct election boards election district absentee and questioned ballot counting boards, and the Alaska Public Offices Commission; requiring certain written notices to appear in election pamphlets and polling places; relating to declarations of candidacy and letters of intent; and amending the definition of 'political party.'"

HB 77 is 21 pages long, and will require much explanation as it moves through the legislative process. Easily the biggest change HB 77 would make — if ever enacted — would be the elimination of the closed Republican primary and a creation of a single, non-partisan top-two winner primary election. Right now the Division of Elections by law is to create a separate ballot for each political party but only the Republican party has this done. All other candidates are on a single other ballot, and members of other parties can only vote on this ballot. HB 77 would not only place Republicans, Democrats, Greens, Libertarians, and others on the same ballot, but would advance only the first- and second-place winners regardless of party. Two members of the same party could move forward to the general election. This is a vast change from our current system as there would never be more than two candidates in the general election (unless, of course, there were write-in candidates) and because the primary election would no longer determine the nominee of a political party.

Last August's Republican primary election turned out the way it did in no small part because it was a closed primary, and many voters were not able to vote for the candidate who ultimately won the U.S. Senate race. It would be possible to return to a unified primary election but not eliminate the process of moving a candidate from each party on to the general. It will be interesting to see how HB 77's more far-reaching approach is received by the Legislature, in addition to the myriad of other changes it would make.

If we don't fix elections law problems that exist, we have no one but ourselves to blame when costly problems flare up in the future. I am grateful that, while the Legislature is busy writing budgets and considering a universe of other issues, attention is being paid to crucial elections issues too.

About the Disability Law Center

The Disability Law Center of Alaska is a private non-profit, consumer-directed organization incorporated in 1977, and designated as the Statewide Protection and Advocacy agency to promote the legal and human rights of individuals with physical and/or mental disabilities.

Consumers may access our educational, administrative, and legal services through our four offices, located in Anchorage, Juneau, Bethel and Fairbanks. Services are prioritized through a public input process that occurs annually.

Our advocacy is geared toward improving the lives of individuals and toward creating systemic change for all Alaskans with disabilities in six life domains: health care, individual and community supports, education, transportation, employment and housing.

What is HAVA?

On October 29, 2002, the Help America Vote Act (HAVA) was signed into law. This law requires states to establish, expand and improve access to voting areas and increase voter participation by individuals with disabilities.

HAVA monies are used by states in collaboration with local governments to enhance accessibility to polling places for individuals with disabilities; provide outreach to the disability community about polling accessibility; and to train poll workers, elections officials and volunteers on methods to promote access and increase voter participation for individuals with disabilities.

What is PAVA?

HAVA has provided specific funds to Protection and Advocacy Systems to ensure that people with disabilities are able to fully participate in the voting process. With this money, Disability Law Center created PAVA – Protection and Advocacy for Voter Access. Access includes registering to vote, casting a vote, and accessing polling places. These funds allow PAVA to:

- Develop a disability awareness training for election officials to focus on how to support a person with a disability to vote privately and independently.
- Provide assistance to election officials in surveying polling places and recommending changes to achieve accessibility.
- Develop informational material for people with disabilities on rights in the voting process. This material will be used to educate people with disabilities about their voting rights.

Requirements to Vote

A person may register to vote if that person:

- Is a citizen of the United States
- Is at least 18 years old or will be 18 within 90 days of registering to vote
- Is a resident of Alaska
- Is not a convicted felon, unless unconditionally discharged
- Has not been deemed incompetent to vote
- Is not registered to vote in another state

A person is eligible to vote if that person:

- Is a citizen of the United States
- Is 18 years of age or older
- Has registered to vote in the proper election jurisdiction (neighborhood) at least 30 days prior to the election
- Is not a convicted felon

Sec. 15.15.360. Rules for counting ballots.

(a) The election board shall count ballots according to the following rules:

(1) A voter may mark a ballot only by filling in, making "X" marks, diagonal, horizontal, or vertical marks, solid marks, stars, circles, asterisks, checks, or plus signs that are clearly spaced in the oval opposite the name of the candidate, proposition, or question that the voter desires to designate.

(2) A failure to properly mark a ballot as to one or more candidates does not itself invalidate the entire ballot.

(3) If a voter marks fewer names than there are persons to be elected to the office, a vote shall be counted for each candidate properly marked.

(4) If a voter marks more names than there are persons to be elected to the office, the votes for candidates for that office may not be counted.

(5) The mark specified in (1) of this subsection shall be counted only if it is substantially inside the oval provided, or touching the oval so as to indicate clearly that the voter intended the particular oval to be designated.

(6) Improper marks on the ballot may not be counted and do not invalidate marks for candidates properly made.

(7) An erasure or correction invalidates only that section of the ballot in which it appears.

(8) A vote marked for the candidate for President or Vice-President of the United States is considered and counted as a vote for the election of the presidential electors.

(9) Write-in votes are not invalidated by writing in the name of a candidate whose name is printed on the ballot unless the election board determines, on the basis of other evidence, that the ballot was so marked for the purpose of identifying the ballot.

(10) In order to vote for a write-in candidate, the voter must write in the candidate's name in the space provided and fill in the oval opposite the candidate's name in accordance with (1) of this subsection.

(11) A vote for a write-in candidate, other than a write-in vote for governor and lieutenant governor, shall be counted if the oval is filled in for that candidate and if the name, as it appears on the write-in declaration of candidacy, of the candidate or the last name of the candidate is written in the space provided.

(12) If the write-in vote is for governor and lieutenant governor, the vote shall be counted if the oval is filled in and the names, as they appear on the write-in declaration of candidacy, of the candidates for governor and lieutenant governor or the last names of the candidates for governor and lieutenant governor, or the name, as it appears on the write-in declaration of candidacy, of the candidate for governor or the last name of the candidate for governor is written in the space provided.

(b) The rules set out in this section are mandatory and there are no exceptions to them. A ballot may not be counted unless marked in compliance with these rules.

Decisions -

Completely filled-in boxes are to be counted. Hickel v. Thomas, 588 P.2d 273 (Alaska 1978).

Punch-card ballots marked entirely by pen instead of punched are valid because they provide clear evidence of the voters' intent. Fischer v. Stout, 741 P.2d 217 (Alaska 1987).

Boxes completely filled in over prior mark are to be counted. Hickel v. Thomas, 588 P.2d 273 (Alaska 1978).

Ballots did not contain overvotes. - Two ballots were improperly categorized as containing overvotes where the voters had completely shaded the ovals for the candidate and all other races on the ballot, there was only a trace touching the edge of the oval next to the opponent's name, and thus, the voters had clearly intended to vote for only one candidate. Edgmon v. State, 152 P.3d 1154 (Alaska 2007).

Ballot was improperly categorized as containing overvotes where the voter had placed an "X" in the oval next to a candidate's name, the "X" was consistent with the votes cast on the remainder of the ballot, and thus, the line striking through the opponent's name and the oval next to it was not a vote for that candidate. Edgmon v. State, 152 P.3d 1154 (Alaska 2007).

Construction of "overvotes". - Reading subsections (a)(1) and (a)(5) of this section together, an overvote occurs if the voter has voted for two candidates with marks as defined by subsection (a)(1) that clearly indicate the voter's intent to vote for more than one candidate. Edgmon v. State, 152 P.3d 1154 (Alaska 2007).

Use of punch-card machine not required. - Neither this section nor former AS 15.20.730 (rules for counting punch-card ballots) require voters to use a punch-card machine if one is available, but only specify the manner of counting properly punched and hand-marked ballots. Fischer v. Stout, 741 P.2d 217 (Alaska 1987).

Former paragraph unconstitutional. - Former paragraph of this section, which was repealed in 1970, added to the qualifications established by U.S. Const., art. I, Sec. 3, and was therefore unconstitutional. Benesch v. Miller, 446 P.2d 400 (Alaska 1968).

The over-all effect of former paragraph of this section was that of adding to the qualifications established by U.S. Const., art. I, Sec. 3, the additional qualification that in order to be a candidate at the general election, the candidate must not have been defeated in the primary election for that office. Benesch v. Miller, 446 P.2d 400 (Alaska 1968).

PER CURIAM.

I. Introduction

This case presents several issues of constitutional and statutory interpretation that arise from the count of votes following the 2010 election for one of Alaska's two seats in the United States Senate. Two of the contestants for that seat — Joe Miller, the Republican nominee, and Senator Lisa Murkowski, running as a write-in candidate — are parties to the lawsuit. Without seeking a recount, Miller filed suit in superior court challenging several decisions of the Alaska Division of Elections in counting the votes. Murkowski intervened, challenging other vote-counting decisions of the Division. Superior Court Judge William B. Carey upheld the Division's actions. Miller appeals, and Murkowski cross-appeals.

II. Longstanding Alaska Election Principles

In resolving the questions presented by the parties, we are governed by a number of longstanding principles that we have consistently applied to election issues in Alaska over the past 50 years.

We start with the bedrock principle that "[t]he right of the citizen[s] to cast [their] ballot[s] and thus participate in the selection of those who control [their] government is one of the fundamental prerogatives of citizenship."[1] The right to vote "is fundamental to our concept of democratic government."[2] "[It] encompasses the [voter's] right to express [the voter's] opinion and is a way to declare [the voter's] full membership in the political community."[3] We articulated this principle over three decades ago in Carr v. Thomas, recognizing the profound importance of citizens' rights to select their leaders and noting that "[c]ourts are reluctant to permit a wholesale disfranchisement of qualified electors through no fault of their own."[4] In reviewing and interpreting election statutes, we have uniformly held that "[w]here any reasonable construction of [a] statute can be found which will avoid such a result, the courts should and will favor it."[5] We have applied this principle throughout the years because we recognize that the right to vote is key to participatory democracy. Guided by this polar principle, we declared in Edgmon v. State, Office of the Lieutenant Governor, Division of Elections that "the voter shall not be disenfranchised because of mere mistake, but [the

2 Dansereau v. Ulmer, 903 P.2d 555, 559 (Alaska 1995). The United States Supreme Court recognized the principle that voting is a fundamental right, emphasizing: "When the state legislature vests the right to vote for President in its people, the right to vote as the legislature has prescribed is fundamental; and one source of its fundamental nature lies in the equal weight accorded to each vote and the equal dignity owed to each voter." *Bush v. voter's] intention shall prevail."[6] Most recently, in State, Division of Elections v. Alaska Democratic Party, we noted that "[w]e have consistently emphasized the importance of voter intent because the opportunity to freely cast [one's] ballot is fundamental."[7]

It is in light of our consistent application of these cardinal principles that we examine the issues presented in this case.

III. Voter Intent Is Paramount, And Any Misspelling, Abbreviation, Or Other Minor Variation In The Form Of The Candidate's Name On A Write-In Ballot Does Not Invalidate A Ballot So Long As The Intention Of The Voter Can Be Ascertained.

Joe Miller seeks an interpretation of election statute AS 15.15.360 that would disqualify any write-in votes that misspell the candidate's name. We do not interpret the statute to require perfection in the manner that the candidate's name is written on the ballot. Our prior decisions clearly hold that a voter's intention is paramount.[8] In light of our strong and consistently applied policy of construing statutes in order to effectuate voter intent, we hold that abbreviations, misspellings, or other minor variations in the form of the name of a candidate will be disregarded in determining the validity of the ballot, so long as the intention of the voter can be ascertained.

Miller points to language in AS 15.15.360(a)(11) providing that "[a] vote for a write-in candidate . . . shall be counted if the oval is filled in for that candidate and if the name, as it appears on the write-in declaration of candidacy, of the candidate or the last name of the candidate is written in the space provided." He argues that this subsection, read in the context of other provisions of the statute, requires that a write-in candidate's name be written and spelled perfectly, even if the voter's intent to vote for a particular candidate can be readily ascertained. But when read as a whole, AS 15.15.360's purpose is inclusive, not exclusive; it is designed to ensure that ballots are counted, not excluded. And this inclusiveness is consistent with the overarching purpose of an election: "to ascertain the public will."[9]

Miller urges that only his interpretation of the statute will "preserv[e] the integrity of the electoral process as a whole." But it is Miller's interpretation of the statute that would erode the integrity of the election system, because it would result in disenfranchisement of some voters and ultimately rejection of election results that constitute the will of the people. We have consistently construed election statutes in favor of voter enfranchisement.

Turning to the language of subsection (a)(11), it is evident that it does not require exact spelling. We agree with the State that subsection (a)(11) concerns pseudonyms. The "nickname" field on the declaration of candidacy form supports this interpretation. If that field were not present, a candidate with a pseudonym might write only his or her legal name on the form, thus invalidating ballots with the candidate's pseudonym written in.[10] The "nickname" field allows a candidate to ensure that his or her pseudonym "appears on the write-in declaration of candidacy"[11] so that the write-in votes listing that pseudonym will count. Thus, the word "appears" relates to a pseudonym's possible presence on the ballot, not the particular form of the vote, and demonstrates that the statute is inclusive — it is designed to include, rather than exclude, votes.

[10] Compare AS 15.15.360(11) (requiring write-in vote to include "name, as it appears on the write-in declaration of candidacy, of the candidate or the last name of the candidate"), with AS 15.15.030(4) (allowing the Director, in placing names on the ballot, to "include in the candidate's name any nickname or familiar form of a proper name of the candidate").

As we have recognized, "a true democracy must seek to make each citizen's vote as meaningful as every other vote to ensure the equality of all people under the law."[12] In order to ensure that each citizen's vote is as meaningful as every other vote, we must interpret the election statute to preserve a voter's clear choice rather than to disenfranchise that voter. The State characterizes the standard urged by Miller as the "perfection standard," and we agree that such a standard would tend to disenfranchise many Alaskans on the basis of "technical errors."[13]

Alaskan voters arrive at their polling places with a vast array of backgrounds and capabilities. Some Alaskans were not raised with English as their first language. Some Alaskans who speak English do not write it as well. Some Alaskans have physical or learning disabilities that hinder their ability to write clearly or spell correctly. Yet none of these issues should take away a voter's right to decide which candidate to elect to govern. We must construe the statute's language in light of the

As we have consistently ruled, we remain "reluctant to permit a wholesale disfranchisement of qualified electors through no fault of their own, and '[w]here any reasonable construction of the statute can be found which will avoid such a result, [we] should and will favor it.' "[14]

Our interpretation of AS 15.15.360 permitting abbreviations, misspellings, or other minor variations in the form of the name of a write-in candidate so long as the intention of the voter can be ascertained is also consistent with the federally mandated standard for counting the write-in votes of those voters living or serving in uniform overseas. The Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act provides that in counting the ballot of a uniformed services voter or other voter who is overseas, "[a]ny abbreviation, misspelling, or other minor variation in the form of the name of a candidate or a political party shall be disregarded in determining the validity of the ballot, if the intention of the voter can be ascertained."[15] The Alaska Administrative Code incorporates this requirement into state law.[16] Miller's proposed construction of the statute would require us to impose a different, and more rigorous, voting standard on domestic Alaskans than on those who are serving in the military or living abroad. Our construction of AS 15.15.360 treats overseas and domestic Alaskan voters equally, ensures that each write-in vote is treated equally and counted in the same manner, and avoids valuing one person's vote over that of another.[17]

Finally, Miller suggests that our interpretation of AS 15.15.360 will lead to elections being decided by the unbridled discretion of election officials in determining voters' intent through visual inspection of write-in ballots. But Miller concedes that other states use the same standard for counting write-in ballots and that Congress has mandated that standard. We see no basis for Miller to argue that the application of the standard in this election violates equal protection under either the state or federal constitution. First, only one person, the Division's Director, made the initial determinations whether write-in ballots demonstrated voter intent for a particular candidate; this avoids any constitutional infirmities that might arise from different reviewers applying the standard differently.[18] Second, the initial election results are subject to the Director's review during a recount.[19] And, of course, the Director's final determinations are subject to judicial review.[20]

We affirm the decision of the superior court on this issue.

IV. The Manual Count Of Write-In Votes Complied With Alaska Law And Did Not Violate Miller's Right To Equal Protection.

Miller alleges that the Division's procedure to manually count the write-in votes violated 6 AAC 25.085. He argues that this regulation requires the Division to manually examine and count only the write-in ballots the optical scanners had first validated. Miller claims that his interpretation of 6 AAC 25.085 would best "facilitate fairness" under AS 15.15.030.

Neither this regulation nor the statute Miller cites requires a particular procedure for counting write-in votes. Alaska Statute 15.15.030 addresses ballot preparation. It directs that ballots must be prepared "to facilitate fairness, simplicity, and clarity in the voting procedure"; it does not apply to the method used to conduct a count of write-in votes. In addition, Miller's contention that the Division should have manually counted only those write-in ballots that were first validated by the optical scanner ignores the State's uncontested showing that the optical scanner neither sorts nor segregates ballots. The machine merely counts filled-in ovals indicating a vote for those candidates whose names appear on pre-printed ballots and for the "write-in" category. It is possible to quantify the number of ballots that an optical scanner deems invalid, but these ballots are not segregated by the machine. Because the optical scanner counted a sufficient number of ballots for the "write-in" category in this election, it was necessary for the Division to conduct a manual count of the write-in ballots to determine for which candidates the write-in ballots had been cast.[21]

Miller impliedly raises an equal protection argument under Bush v. Gore,[22] claiming that Division workers counted more write-in ballots than the optical scanner because they used a more lenient standard than the scanner.[23] But there is no factual dispute that the Division workers looked at every ballot cast in the election to segregate the total ballots cast for "write-in" candidates. In an affidavit to the superior court, Division Director Gail Fenumiai explained the three-step procedure as follows. First, "all the ballots cast in the election were sorted by 30 election board workers who worked in 15 teams of two." They sorted the ballots into five categories:

[23] The optical scanner detected 102,252 write-in votes. From all of the ballots cast in the election, the Division workers manually sorted out 103,805 ballots cast for a "write-in" candidate. From that total, the Division determined that 101,088 ballots were cast for Lisa Murkowski; 92,929 were unchallenged and 8,159 were challenged but counted.

> (1) ballots on which the oval was marked correctly next to a candidate's name that was printed on the ballot;
> (2) ballots on which no oval was marked for U.S. Senate, more than one oval was marked for that race, or a name was written in but the oval was unmarked;
> (3) ballots on which the write-in oval was marked and the written name was "Lisa Murkowski" or "Murkowski," spelled correctly, and the ballot was not challenged by any observer;
> (4) ballots on which the write-in oval was marked and the name written appeared to be a variation or misspelling of Lisa Murkowski or Murkowski; this category also included any ballot challenged by an observer in the sorting process;
> (5) ballots on which the write-in oval was marked and the name written in was not "Murkowski," "Lisa Murkowski," or a variation thereof.

Significantly, the candidates had observers present who could challenge the category into which every ballot was sorted. The Division instructed the workers who conducted the initial sort of the ballots not to proceed unless observers were present at the table from both the Miller and Murkowski campaigns.

After the ballots were sorted, the Director personally examined the ballots in category four — ballots on which ovals had been filled in but the handwritten name was a variation or misspelling of "Lisa Murkowski" and other ballots challenged during the sorting process — to determine voter intent.[24] The Director examined the ballots that were challenged because they contained misspellings of "Lisa Murkowski" or for any other reason. She permitted write-in ballots containing "minor misspellings and phonetic variations of 'Murkowski' to be counted for Lisa Murkowski when [she] determined that the voter clearly intended to vote for that candidate." The Director placed the ballots into one of two envelopes: "challenged counted" or "challenged not counted." If the Director's decision regarding voter intent was not challenged, the ballot was placed in category three (write-in, oval filled, Lisa Murkowski properly spelled, not challenged) or category five (write-in, oval filled, a candidate other than Murkowski), depending on whether the Director decided to count it for Murkowski.

The Director examined ballots in category two in which no oval was filled in for the U.S. Senate race, and those ballots were not counted for any candidate. This was true of ballots on which voters spelled "Lisa Murkowski" correctly but failed to fill in the oval. The Director also examined "over-voted ballots"[25] in category two to determine voter intent. As Director Fenumiai explained:

> 1) I did not count ballots that had no oval filled in for the U.S. Senate race, even if a name was written in.
> 2) If a ballot had two ovals filled in for the U.S. Senate race, I examined the ballot to see where the ovals appeared. If the voter had filled in the oval by the name of a candidate printed on the ballot and also by the write-in choice, I counted the ballot if the voter wrote in the name of the same candidate. This is how Joe Miller received many of his 20 write-in votes. I also counted ballots with two ovals marked

---

[24] The Director was the only person who made the final decision regarding voter intent. Given this protocol, we see no basis for any concern that inconsistent standards were used to determine the validity of ballots cast in this election.

[25] This refers to a ballot with more than one oval filled in.

when it was clear that the voter crossed out one of the ovals. I did this regardless of whether the voter expresses an intent to vote for a write-in candidate or for a candidate whose name was printed on the ballot. Otherwise, I did not add the ballot to the count.

3) The candidates' observers were able to challenge all of these determinations.

As a result of this process, each candidate's vote tally was increased. The write-in vote count yielded the following tallies:

Lisa Murkowski, unchallenged	92,929
Lisa Murkowski, challenged, counted	8,159
Total counted for Lisa Murkowski	101,088
Lisa Murkowski, challenged, not counted	2,016
Joe Miller	20
Scott McAdams	8
Other registered write-in candidates	53
Other miscellaneous names	620
Total write-in votes	103,805

The total number of write-in votes identified by the Division workers was 103,805 but the optical scanner detected 102,252. Miller claims that because the total write-in votes from the manual count — 103,805 — was higher than the number of write-in votes detected by the optical scanner, the workers must have applied "more lenient standards" that unfairly advantaged Murkowski. He claims that "it is unclear how many additional votes Joe Miller, or any other preprinted candidate, would have gained, had those same standards been applied to all the ballots in the election." But having carefully examined the record in this case, we conclude that the record does not support Miller's contention that ballots in category two were treated differently depending on whether they were cast for candidates whose names were pre-printed on the ballot. Observers working on Miller's behalf had the opportunity to challenge the sorting of every ballot cast in the election, and every category-two ballot was individually examined, as were the ballots in category four.[26] In addition, only one individual — the Director of the Division — looked at all of the ballots containing anomalies, including both over-votes and under-votes. We fail to see how having one person examine all overcount, undercount, and write-in ballots and all ballots challenged by either candidate is not a uniform standard. Finally, the Director's examination resulted in additional votes for both Miller and Democratic nominee Scott McAdams, as well as Murkowski. Because the Division applied the methodology described above to every precinct, we conclude that the Division's methodology gave all of the ballots — as well as all of the candidates — equal treatment.

For these reasons, we affirm the decision of the superior court on this issue.

[26] We observe that even if Miller had demonstrated that the Division was more lenient in the threshold it used to validate votes than the optical scanner, the difference he cites would not have changed the outcome of this election.

The optical scanners deemed a total of 2,882 votes for the U.S. Senate race to be invalid. But the Division shows that the number of votes rejected by the optical scanner that could have been cast in Miller's favor is much smaller. The Division begins with the total number of ballots cast in this election (258,746) and subtracts the total number of votes cast for candidates on the pre-printed ballot (153,579) and the total number of write-in votes it identified in its manual tally (103,805). The difference (258,746 - 257,384 = 1,362) is the Division's calculation of the number of votes rejected by the scanners that could have been cast in Miller's favor.

V. The Division's Vote-Counting Procedures Are Not Regulations.

Miller argues that the Division's write-in vote-counting methodology is a regulation, or set of regulations, that should have been enacted pursuant to the Administrative Procedure Act (APA).[27] We disagree.

The APA requires advance notice of a regulation before it can be applied in agency interactions with the public.[28] Common sense statutory interpretations by agencies do not require regulations.[29] By contrast, if a statutory interpretation is "expansive or unforeseeable," the agency may be required to promulgate its interpretation through a regulation.[30] The Division's statutory interpretations of AS 15.15.360 and 6 AAC 25.085 were common sense interpretations and were not required to be promulgated in regulations. We have previously noted that "[n]early every agency action is based, implicitly or explicitly, on an interpretation of a statute or regulation authorizing it to act. A requirement that each such interpretation be preceded by rulemaking would result in complete ossification of the regulatory state."[31] We decline to depart from our previous decisions, and conclude that the Division did not violate the APA. Accordingly, we affirm the decision of the superior court on this issue.

VI. We Affirm The Dismissal Of Miller's Claims For Invalidation Of Two Categories Of Votes: (1) Votes Allegedly Cast By Voters Whose Identities Had Not Been Confirmed, And (2) Write-In Votes Allegedly Cast By The Same Person(s) On Multiple Ballots.

A. Overview

This case comes to us under unusual circumstances. The election was held on November 2, 2010. Without seeking a statutorily available vote recount by the Division[32] or filing a lawsuit in state court to contest the election,[33] on November 9 Miller filed a federal court lawsuit. Miller sought declaratory and injunctive relief (1) stopping the Division from certifying the election results in favor of Murkowski, and (2) directing the Division to follow his interpretation of AS 15.15.360 by invalidating write-in votes "in which a candidate's name is misspelled or is not written on the ballot as it appears on the candidate's write-in declaration of candidacy." On November 19 the federal court issued an injunction against certification, conditioned on Miller's filing a state court lawsuit by November 22 to resolve the disputed interpretation of AS 15.15.360.

Miller filed suit in superior court on November 22, seeking not only declaratory and injunctive relief regarding the interpretation of AS 15.15.360, but also regarding: alleged disparate treatment of ballots, violation of other election statutes, the validity of the Division's write-in vote-counting methodology under the Administrative Procedure Act, the validity of classes of votes the Division counted, and the validity of the election results. Murkowski intervened in Miller's lawsuit, asking for declaratory and injunctive relief regarding the interpretation of election statutes, as well as challenging the validity of two classes of votes not counted by the Division. After expediting the proceedings, on December 10, 2010, Superior Court Judge William B.

Carey upheld all of the Division's disputed actions, treating some claims as pure declaratory judgment requests and treating other claims as an election contest under AS 15.20.540.

It may be that certain legal issues could properly be brought to us pre-election or during an election with appropriate requests for declaratory and even injunctive relief. But the legislature has created two specific legal proceedings for election challenges that would normally apply to many of the issues in this case — an election contest and a recount appeal.[34] And as we have noted, "an election contest and a recount appeal are distinct proceedings."[35]

An election contest is authorized by AS 15.20.540, which provides that "a contest of the election as a whole" is heard first by the superior court.[36] An election contestant must show "malconduct, fraud, or corruption on the part of an election official sufficient to change the result of the election" or "any corrupt practice as defined by law sufficient to change the results of the election."[37]

By contrast, AS 15.20.510 provides for a recount appeal directly to our court to challenge the Director's decisions to count or not count votes during a recount of an election for, among other offices, the United States Senate.[38] We have noted that

[37] AS 15.20.540.

[38] AS 15.20.510 provides, in relevant part: "A candidate . . . who requested a recount who has reason to believe an error has been made in the recount . . . involving (continued...)

"the inquiry in a recount appeal is whether specific votes or classes of votes were properly counted or rejected."[39] Our review comes only after the Director "review[s] all ballots . . . to determine which ballots, or part of ballots, were properly marked and which ballots are to be counted in the recount[.]"[40] Issues we have considered in a recount appeal "include the validity of punch cards and a variety of marks on ballots, the proper procedures for absentee voting and consequences for failure to follow those procedures, and registration requirements."[41]

With this legal framework in mind, we consider Miller's claims that two classes of votes should not be counted.

B. Multiple write-in ballots cast by the same person(s)

Miller alleged in his complaint that the Division accepted and counted as valid "write-in votes in which the candidate's name apparently was not written on the ballot by the voter" in violation of AS 15.15.360(a)(10), which provides that "the voter" must write in the candidate's name. In its summary judgment motion,[42] the State noted that under AS 15.15.240 voters "can delegate that authority [to vote] to others — election officials or friends or family members — if they need assistance in writing in the name of a candidate."[43] The State argued that Miller's claim was in the nature of an election contest and that he would have to present some evidence of both (1) improper conduct on the part of someone and (2) an indication that any such wrongful conduct was sufficient to affect the election's outcome.

[41] Cissna v. Stout, 931 P.2d 363, 367 (Alaska 1996). Miller's claim for declaratory judgment regarding the interpretation of AS 15.15.360 can easily be seen as in the nature of a recount appeal that should not be properly before us. Given the unusual circumstances of this case, we nonetheless chose to decide the legal issues raised regarding Alaska election statutes and regulations.

[42] Under Alaska Civil Rule 56(c), summary judgment may be granted without trial if there are no genuine issues of fact and a party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

Miller submitted affidavits from observers of the ballot count attesting that in some precincts many write-in ballots appeared to have been written in similar handwriting. He argued that this evidence was "sufficiently suspicious that it legitimately raises the specter of voter fraud or other electoral improprieties." (This argument reflects that he considered his claim to be an election contest claim under AS 15.20.540, because misconduct is not an element of a recount appeal.[44]) He also argued that this evidence was sufficient to entitle him to further time for discovery regarding the identity of the people who completed the ballots, whether voters had actually requested assistance, why only a few people apparently filled in many ballots, and the total number of ballots that might have been affected.[45]

The superior court denied Miller's request for discovery and granted the State's motion for summary judgment, noting that the admissible portions of Miller's

[43] AS 15.15.240 provides, in relevant part, that "[a] qualified voter needing assistance in voting may request an election official, a person, or not more than two persons of the voter's choice to assist."

[44] Willis, 600 P.2d at 1081 ("[I]n a recount appeal . . . [t]he concept of malconduct does not enter into the question[.]").

[45] Alaska Civil Rule 56(f) allows the superior court broad discretion to grant a party sufficient time to conduct discovery before opposing a summary judgment motion if the party is unable to marshal evidence in the time normally required to oppose the motion.

evidence did not create a genuine issue of material fact regarding misconduct by anyone, and that it was not even sufficient circumstantial evidence to warrant discovery before opposing the summary judgment motion. We agree.

Alaska Statute 15.15.240 allows any qualified voter to ask for assistance, including assistance in writing in the name of a write-in candidate. No reasonable inference of misconduct can arise from the mere fact that the handwriting on multiple ballots appears to be from a small number of people. And though we have interpreted Civil Rule 56(f) liberally to allow a litigant a meaningful opportunity to obtain evidence to present a case,[46] pure speculation cannot support a fishing expedition for evidence to oppose summary judgment in an election contest. We affirm the superior court's summary dismissal of this election contest claim.

C. Ballots cast by allegedly unidentified voters

Miller alleged in his complaint that the Division accepted and counted as valid ballots from voters who, "according to the official election registers from the precinct polling places, . . . neither showed proper identification nor were excused from showing such identification." He noted that Alaska law requires a voter to show identification before being allowed to vote, unless an election official waives that requirement because the voter is known to the official.[47]

In its motion for summary judgment, the State explained that although the voter registers contain spaces for election officials to specify how they verified each voter's identity, there is no statutory or regulatory requirement that the election officials actually fill in this information. Construing Miller's claim as an election contest, the State argued that Miller would have to produce some evidence both (1) that misconduct by election officials actually allowed unregistered persons to vote and (2) that the number of votes in question would affect the outcome of the election. Miller responded that he was not bringing an election contest on this issue, but rather was "contesting the validity of particular ballots." He argued that the failure of election officials to mark the register form for some voters was circumstantial evidence that "certain people may have voted without showing identification or being personally known to an election worker" and that he needed discovery to determine who they were.

The superior court treated this claim as an election contest, denied Miller's request for discovery, and granted summary judgment in favor of the State. The court noted that there is no requirement that election workers fill out the register, that the failure to fill out the register did not create a reasonable inference of misconduct by election officials, and that there was no legitimate basis for the requested discovery based solely on the failure to fill out some of the registers.

But Miller did not raise his claim as an election contest within the jurisdiction of the superior court. He instead raised a challenge to "the validity of particular ballots," which is in the nature of a recount appeal that would come directly to us. But he also did not ask for a recount and there is no recount decision about the validity of particular ballots for us to review. Miller cannot avoid the avenues established by the legislature to challenge elections: Miller asserted in the superior court that he did not bring an election contest, and he did not seek a recount by the Division. The only possible issue before us, then, is an issue not decided by the superior court: whether Miller is entitled to a judgment declaring that an entire class of ballots — those from voters for whom election officials did not mark on their registers how the officials verified the voters' identification — is invalid. He is not entitled to such a judgment.

We affirm the superior court's dismissal of the claim because there is no legal requirement that an election official mark the register form for identification verification and the failure to do so does not invalidate a vote.

VII. We Do Not Reach Questions Regarding Miller's Motion To Amend His Complaint To Add Claims About Alleged Voting By Felons.

During the summary judgment briefing, Miller raised a new claim that an unknown number of felons ineligible to vote had actually voted in the election. This claim was discussed at oral argument before the superior court on the summary judgment issues. Shortly after the oral argument, Miller sought leave to file an amended complaint setting out this claim. The superior court issued its order on summary judgment without ruling on the motion to amend. In light of the expedited nature of this case, we accepted Miller's appeal of the summary judgment ruling without waiting for a final judgment from the superior court.

We now decline to reach whether the superior court implicitly denied the motion to amend and whether it was error to do so. We will resolve all issues actually before us by way of this opinion, and we will return jurisdiction to the superior court to consider Miller's motion to amend. But we note the following.

If Miller intends to pursue his superior court claim about improper voting by felons, he must do so as an election contest under AS 15.20.540. He must allege and prove the necessary elements of an election contest claim, including the level of misconduct necessary to support the claim and that the votes in question are sufficient to change the result of the election. In light of our other rulings and the current voting tally, it appears to us that the number of votes in question would have to be in the tens of thousands to change the result of the election.[48] But it is difficult, at best, to quantify the number based on the record before us, and we leave that to the parties to resolve in the superior court should Miller decide to pursue this claim.

Finally, we note that an election contest does not bar certification of an election and that there are no remaining issues raised by Miller that would prevent this election from being certified. Under AS 15.20.560, if an election contest ultimately changes the result of an election, judgment will be so entered and a new certification will be issued.[49]

VIII. The Superior Court Did Not Err In Denying Murkowski's Motion for Summary Judgment On Her Claim That Write-In Ballots With Her Name But Lacking A Filled-In Oval Should Have Been Counted.

The Division did not count a number of ballots for Murkowski because the voters had not filled in the ovals next to the write-in line, even though the voters had written in Murkowski's name. Murkowski argues that these votes should have been counted for her.[50] We disagree. Alaska Statute 15.15.360(a)(10) states that "[i]n order to vote for a write-in candidate, the voter must write in the candidate's name in the space allowing ineligible felons to vote would not appear to bias any particular candidate, proportional reduction of votes would be the proper remedy if any ineligible felons were actually shown to have voted. See Hammond v. Hickel, 588 P.2d 256, 260 (Alaska 1978).

[49] AS 15.20.560 provides in relevant part that, at the conclusion of an election contest, "[t]he judge shall pronounce judgment on which candidate was elected .... The director shall issue a new election certificate to correctly reflect the judgment of the court."

[50] Like Miller's claim regarding the class of votes by allegedly unidentified voters, this claim is in the nature of an election recount appeal. Like Miller, Murkowski did not request a recount. We therefore consider this claim only as one for declaratory judgment with respect to the interpretation of AS 15.15.360's provisions regarding marking the ovals on ballots.

provided and fill in the oval opposite the candidate's name." (Emphasis added.) Although AS 15.15.360(a) does not address spelling, marks that validly "fill in the oval" are subject to the requirements of AS 15.15.360(a)(1) and (a)(5), which state:

> (1) A voter may mark a ballot only by filling in, making "X" marks, diagonal, horizontal, or vertical marks, solid marks, stars, circles, asterisks, checks, or plus signs that are clearly spaced in the oval opposite the name of the candidate, proposition, or question that the voter desires to designate.
> (5) The mark specified in (1) of this subsection shall be counted only if it is substantially inside the oval provided, or touching the oval so as to indicate clearly that the voter intended the particular oval to be designated.

In other words, the statute mandates that the write-in voter mark the oval in some fashion; a blank oval will invalidate the vote. Writing in the name but not marking the oval is not compliant with the statute. Murkowski is not entitled to declaratory judgment that AS 15.15.360 should be interpreted to excuse write-in voters from marking ovals as required by law.[51] Accordingly, we affirm the decision of the superior court on this issue.

IX. Conclusion

For the reasons set out above, we AFFIRM the decision of the superior court in all respects.

[51] Murkowski also argues that the Division erred by not counting a number of write-in votes for "Lisa M." and that the superior court erred by affirming the Division's determination. This claim is essentially a recount appeal that may only be brought to us after a recount by the Director, and is not an election contest within the jurisdiction of the superior court. As with Miller's claim about specific votes by allegedly unidentified voters, Murkowski's claim is not properly before us. To the extent she requests declaratory judgment regarding variations on write-in candidates' names, we have already addressed it.

There are no remaining issues raised by Miller that prevent this election from being certified.

January 27, 2011

Senator Hollis French, Chair
Senate Judiciary Committee
State Capitol, Room 417
Juneau, Alaska 99801

Dear Senator French:

I am writing to request a hearing on CS for SB 33(STA) "An Act relating to the disposition of remains of a member of the armed forces if the member dies while in a duty status."

CS for SB 33(STA) will place the State of Alaska in alignment with the Department of Defense Emergency Data Form (DD Form 93) and the Coast Guard Designation of Beneficiaries and Record of Emergency Data Form (CG-2020D), so that the authorized person designated to handle disposition of active duty service and guard member's remains is upheld.

CS for SB 33(STA) will honor the preferences chosen by armed forces members, guarantee that their remains are handled in the manner of their choosing, and ensure that family members avoid painful legal battles in the event of their death.

Included with this letter you will find:

1. Sponsor Statement
2. Current Version of the Bill (LSO188\D)
3. Sectional Summary
4. Fiscal Note
5. Two Statements of Support
6. USA4Military Website Notice of Support
7. 10 USC § 1481
8. Department of Defense Form 1300.18
9. Map of States Comporting with Department of Defense Rules on Disposition
10. DD Form 93

Additionally, Mark San Souci of the Under Deputy Secretary of Defense and Ric Davidge of Vietnam Veterans of America will provide testimonies using the Off-net line. Verdie Bowen of the Alaska

Department of Veterans Affairs will be on hand to answer additional questions. Thank you for your consideration of this request.

Sincerely,

Sponsor Statement: CS for SB 33(STA)
An Act relating to the disposition of remains of a member of the armed services if the member dies while in a duty status

The intent of the CS for Senate Bill 33(STA) is to ensure that active duty service members who make the ultimate sacrifice are properly honored by ensuring that their remains are disposed of by the person of their choosing.

The Department of Defense requires active duty service members, reservists and guard members to complete a Record of Emergency Data (DD Form 93) annually or prior to deployment. The Coast Guard follows the same procedures, but uses a different form, the Designation of Beneficiaries and Record of Emergency Data (CG-2020D). These forms identify the person authorized to direct disposition of a service member's remains in the event that service member is killed in the line of duty.

Senate Bill 33 will place the state in alignment with armed services procedures, so that the person designated to handle disposition of remains is not called into question. Without compliance with these procedures, the handling of the remains may be delayed, and the service member's wishes not honored.

Around twenty states have laws which comport with armed services rules on disposition. At least four other states, including Alaska, are pursuing laws to comport.

The CS for Senate Bill 33(STA) is supported by the Office of the Deputy Under Secretary of Defense.

Please join me in supporting this legislation to ensure the wishes of our service members are upheld and our fallen soldiers receive the proper burial they deserve.

A BILL

FOR AN ACT ENTITLED

"An Act relating to the disposition of remains of a member of the armed forces if the member dies while in a duty status."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 26.05 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 26.05.262. Disposition of remains of members of organized militia on duty status under Military Record of Emergency Data Form (DD Form 93). If a member of the organized militia who is in active state service has executed the United States Department of Defense Military Record of Emergency Data Form (DD Form 93), or its successor form, to serve as a record of emergency data and, on that form, has designated a person who is authorized to direct the disposition of the member's remains if the member dies while in a duty status as described in 10 U.S.C. 1481, notwithstanding any other provision of law, the person authorized to direct the disposition of remains on the executed form has the right to make the decisions concerning the disposition of the member's remains.

* Sec. 2. AS 26.10 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 26.10.065. Disposition of remains of state resident armed forces personnel on duty status. (a) Except as provided in (b) of this section, if a state resident who is a member of the armed forces has executed the United States Department of Defense Military Record of Emergency Data Form (DD Form 93), or its successor form, to serve as a record of emergency data and, on that form, has designated a person who is authorized to direct the disposition of the member's remains if the member dies while in a duty status as described in 10 U.S.C. 1481, notwithstanding any other provision of law, the person authorized to direct the disposition of remains on the executed form has the right to make the decisions concerning the disposition of the member's remains.

(b) If a state resident who is a member of the United States Coast Guard has executed the United States Coast Guard Designation of Beneficiaries and Record of Emergency Data Form (CG-2020D), or its successor form, to serve as a record of emergency data and, on that form, has designated a person who is authorized to direct the disposition of the member's remains if the member dies while in a duty status as described in 10 U.S.C. 1481, notwithstanding any other provision of law, the person authorized to direct the disposition of remains on the executed form has the right to make the decisions concerning the disposition of the member's remains.

MEMORANDUM January 27, 2011

SUBJECT: Sectional summary of proposed CSSB 33(STA) relating to the disposition of the remains of a member of the armed forces if the member dies while in a duty status
(Work Order No. 27-LS0188\D)

TO: Senator Bill Wielechowski
Attn: Michael Caulfield

FROM: Theresa Bannister
Legislative Counsel

You have requested a sectional summary of the above-described bill, which has not yet been read across. As a preliminary matter, note that a sectional summary of a bill should not be considered an authoritative interpretation of the bill and the bill itself is the best statement of its contents.

Section 1. Gives a person the right to make the decisions about the disposition of the remains of a member of the state's organized militia who is in active state service, if the person is authorized by the member on DD Form 93, a Department of Defense emergency data form, to dispose of the member's remains if the member dies while in a duty status under 10 U.S.C. 1481.

Section 2. In sec. 26.10.065(a), gives a person the right to make the decisions about the disposition of the remains of a member of the armed forces who is a state resident, if the person is authorized by the member on DD Form 93, a Department of Defense emergency data form, to dispose of the member's remains if the member dies while in a duty status under 10 U.S.C. 1481.

In sec. 26.10.065(b), gives a person the right to make the decisions about the disposition of the remains of a member of the Coast Guard who is a state resident, if the person is authorized by the member on CG-2020D, a Coast Guard emergency data form, to dispose of the member's remains if the member dies while in a duty status under 10 U.S.C. 1481.

If I may be of further assistance, please advise.

ALASKA VETERANS FOUNDATION

January 21, 2011

Senator Bill Wielechowski
Chairman
Senate Affairs Committee

REF: SB 33

One of the most frustrating and difficult problems we often face as the state's only statewide Veterans Foundation (501c3) representing about 80,000 veterans and their families, is when a veteran or service member dies or is killed in action and we can not find their family.

This happens more then you would think. It's really part of our culture now that many elderly veterans, as a result of divorce or estrangement, die without an ability to notify their next of kin. Just in December of last year we had a two tour Marine, Vietnam Veteran die at home alone and our best efforts and those of the US Department of Veterans Affairs as well as the Department of Defense were unable to find his ex-wife nor his son so that they could be involved in his internment at our National Cemetery.

We strongly support this bill, introduced by you on behalf of our active duty, guard, and reserves that makes it clear that the State of Alaska is in line with most other states in a process that provides for the disposition of service members remains.

We hope this bill becomes law this session, so that this year we can have a process recognized by the State to address this tragedy.

Chapter 904 - Anchorage, Alaska
"An Agenda of Service"

January 24, 2011

Senator Wielechowski
Prime Sponsor
SB33

Senator,

Just wanted to send you a note in support of SB33 and HB27 which you have shown leadership on.

We work with the Alaska Veterans Foundation, Inc. and our local hospitals to ensure that no veteran dies alone. It happens.

Although your bill will not directly address this challenge it does make it clear the process we in Alaska will follow when faced with the remains of a service member and/or in some cases veteran with no next of kin available.

Unfortunately this is a growing problem due to the number of our citizens who are estranged from their immediate family.

Again, thanks for being there in support of our military and veterans.

It is an honor,

Issue 9: During its first year of consideration (2010 legislative session), 21 states aligned state with Federal policies regarding the disposition of military members who die on active duty.

Comport State Laws with DoD Rules on Disposition

Issue: State laws on the disposition of human remains do not currently provide for the accommodation of the expressed, written wishes of service members through execution of the federally prescribed "Record of Emergency Data"

According to Section 564 of Public Law 109-163, effective January 2006, service members [as defined in Title 10, United States Code, Section 1481(a)(1) – (8)] must designate a person authorized to direct disposition of human remains (PADD). The law, Title 10, United States Code, Section 1482(c), specifies a list of possible designees, but does not stipulate any specific order.

States may not recognize the PADD as the legal designee because the state does not recognize the DD Form 93 (Record of Emergency Data) completed by service members to designate a PADD. The DD Form 93 restricts a services member to designating his or her "surviving spouse, blood relative of legal age, or adoptive relatives of the decedent. If neither of these three can be found, a person in loco parentis may be named."

Without a recognized agent, state statutes normally have a prescribed order of who is recognized as the next-of-kin designated to direct disposition, starting with a spouse, followed by adult children and parents. Because some state laws do not currently recognize the federal form as an acceptable one for service members, there have been several instances of civil actions between family members over the ultimate disposition of a fallen service member's remains.

Desired Outcome: Eliminate potential conflict with federal law, which may reduce the potential for family conflict at a time of bereavement, by states amending their laws on disposition of human remains to recognize the DD Form 93 as the authoritative written instrument for service members.

Progress: Ten states currently recognizes the DD 93 as the authoritative document for use by service members; however, we estimate nine states have statutes with sufficient latitude to allow for its use. The remaining states either do not provide for the designation of an agent, require use of a state specific form, or require a certain type of witnessing that might preclude the recognition of the DD Form 93. In order to add clarity for both family members and funeral directors, we believe statutes in all 50 states should include a statement recognizing the authority of the DD Form 93. The map below provides our current estimation of state flexibility for considering designations made on the DD Form 93.

- DD Form 93 (Record of Emergency Data)
- Public Law 109-163 Sec. 564
- Title 10 USC. Sec. 1481(a)(1-8)
- Title 10 USC. Sec. 1482(c)

Best Practice Examples:
The following are bills that were enacted in 2010 that provide for recognition of the DD Form 93:

Arizona HB 2400
Mississippi SB 2418
Maryland SB 408

10 USC § 1481. Recovery, care, and disposition of remains: decedents covered

(a) The Secretary concerned may provide for the recovery, care, and disposition of the remains of the following persons:

(1) Any Regular of an armed force under his jurisdiction who dies while on active duty.

(2) A member of a reserve component of an armed force who dies while—

(A) on active duty;

(B) performing inactive-duty training;

(C) performing authorized travel directly to or from active duty or inactive-duty training;

(D) remaining overnight immediately before the commencement of inactive-duty training, or remaining overnight, between successive periods of inactive-duty training, at or in the vicinity of the site of the inactive-duty training;

(E) hospitalized or undergoing treatment for an injury, illness, or disease incurred or aggravated while on active duty or performing inactive-duty training; or

(F) either—

(i) serving on funeral honors duty under section 12503 of this title or section 115 of title 32;

(ii) traveling directly to or from the place at which the member is to so serve; or

(iii) remaining overnight at or in the vicinity of that place before so serving, if the place is outside reasonable commuting distance from the member's residence.

[(3) Repealed. Pub. L. 99–661, div. A, title VI, § 604(e)(3)(B), Nov. 14, 1986, 100 Stat. 3877.]

(4) Any member of, or applicant for membership in, a reserve officers' training corps who dies while

(A) attending a training camp,

(B) on an authorized practice cruise,

(C) performing authorized travel to or from such a camp or cruise, or

(D) hospitalized or undergoing treatment at the expense of the United States for injury incurred, or disease contracted, while attending such a camp, while on such a cruise, or while performing that travel.

(5) Any accepted applicant for enlistment in an armed force under his jurisdiction.

(6) Any person who has been discharged from an enlistment in an armed force under his jurisdiction while a patient in a United States hospital, and who continues to be such a patient until the date of his death.

(7) A person who—

(A) dies as a retired member of an armed force under the Secretary's jurisdiction during a continuous hospitalization of the member as a patient in a United States hospital that began while the member was on active duty for a period of more than 30 days; or

(B) is not covered by subparagraph (A) and, while in a retired status by reason of eligibility to retire under chapter 61 of this title, dies during a continuous hospitalization of the person that began while the person was on active duty as a Regular of an armed force under the Secretary's jurisdiction.

(8) Any military prisoner who dies while in his custody.

Persons Authorized to Direct Disposition of Remains
DoDI 1300.18

E2.41*E2.42*. Person Authorized to Direct Disposition of Human Remains (PADD). A person, usually the PNOK (see E2.45*E2.46*.), who is authorized to direct disposition of human remains. For disposing of human remains, under the authority of Reference (l), the Secretary of the Military Department concerned is deemed to have such standing if no other such person is available. Service members will shall identify a PADD on their DD Form 93. (See instructions at Enclosure 7.) Absent the identification of a PADD by the Service member, then the PADD is recognized in the following order:

E2.41.1*E2.42.1*. Surviving spouse. The legal spouse is one who was married to the deceased as prescribed by civil law, was not divorced from the deceased and has not remarried at the time disposition of remains is to be made. The latter might apply in the case of a Service member who has been declared deceased, body not recovered at the time of the casualty incident, and whose remains are later recovered and identified. If the spouse has remarried at the time disposition is to be made, the right of disposition will go to the next person in order of priority, and the remarried spouse will take priority under paragraph E2.41.8*E2.42.8*.

E2.41.2*E2.42.2*. Children who have reached the age of majority in order of seniority (age).

E2.41.3*E2.42.3*. Parents in order of seniority (age) unless legal custody was granted to another person by reason of court decree or statutory provision. Step-parents, who have not adopted the Service member, serve in loco parentis and are not considered parents for PADD purposes.

E2.41.4*E2.42.4*. Blood or adoptive relative of the individual who was granted legal custody of the Service member by reason of a court decree or statutory provision. The person to whom custody was granted remains the PADD despite the fact that the individual had reached the age of majority at the time of death.

E2.41.5*E2.42.5*. Brothers or sisters of legal age in order of seniority (age). When the deceased person has full siblings, half-siblings, or step-siblings, the order of precedence is the full siblings then the half-siblings. Step-siblings are not eligible to direct disposition of remains. Adopted siblings are treated the same as full siblings when adopted by both of the deceased person's biological parents. Adopted siblings are considered as half-siblings when adopted by only one of the deceased person's biological parents.

E2.41.6*E2.42.6*. Grandparents in order of seniority (age).

Change 1, 8/14/09 ENCLOSURE 234 Dodo 1300.18, January 8, 2008

E2.41.7*E2.42.7*. Other adult blood relatives in order of relationship to the individual under the laws of the deceased's domicile. When two individuals are of equal relationship, priority will be determined by age.

E2.41.8*E2.42.8*. Remarried surviving spouse. The remarried surviving spouse is one who was not divorced from the deceased and has remarried at the time disposition of remains is to be made. The latter might apply in the case of a Service member who is declared deceased, body not recovered, and whose remains are later recovered and identified.

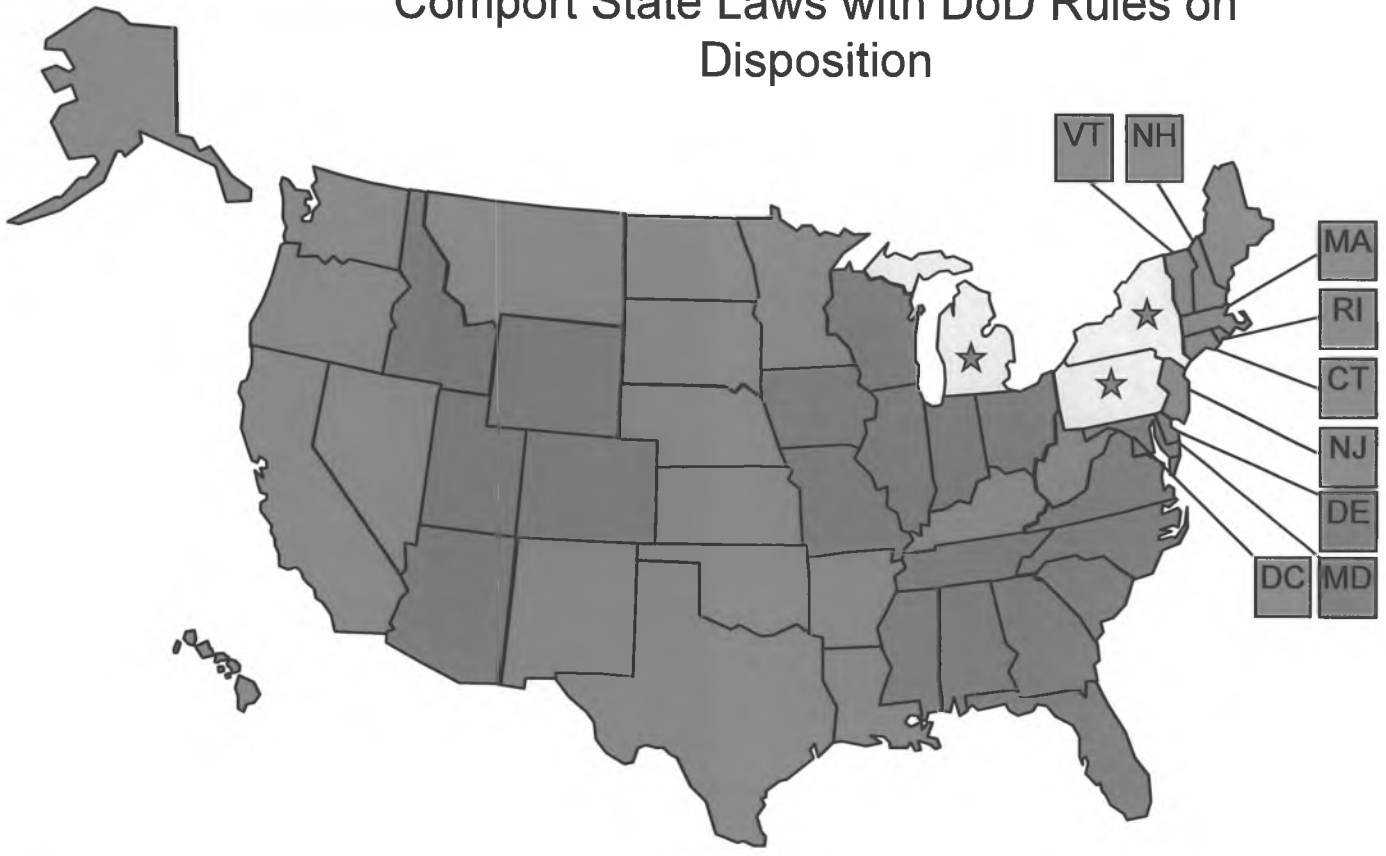
E2.41.9*E2.42.9*. Persons standing in loco parentis. Loco parentis means any person(s) or institution who acted in place of the member's parent(s) for a period of not less than 1 year at any time before the member joined the military. Seniority in age will control when the persons are of equal relationship.

E2.41.10*E2.42.10*. Legal representative of the estate may make disposition of remains when all efforts to identify or locate a person in categories (1) through (9) are unsuccessful. The legal representative must be properly appointed by a civil court having jurisdiction of the decedent's estate.

E2.41.11*E2.42.11*. When all known persons in categories (1) through (10) relinquish disposition authority or cannot be identified or located, then disposition of the remains will be made by the administrative determination of the Secretary of the Military Department concerned or their designee.

Comport State Laws with DoD Rules on Disposition



- Laws comport with the disposition instructions in Federal statutes and DoD rules
- ★ Legislation pursuing a favorable policy is filed.
- Actively pursuing favorable policy, but no legislation filed as yet.
- Policy not favorable, and Not currently considering favorable adjustments.

As of August 27, 2010

INSTRUCTIONS FOR PREPARING DD FORM 93

(See appropriate Service Directives for supplemental instructions for completion of this form at other than MEPS)

All entries explained below are for electronic or typewriter completion, except those specifically noted. If a computer or typewriter is not available, print in black or blue-black ink insuring a legible image on all copies. Include "Jr.," "Sr.," "III" or similar designation for each name, if applicable. When an address is entered, include the appropriate ZIP Code. If the member cannot provide a current address, indicate "unknown" in the appropriate item. Addresses shown as P.O. Box Numbers or RFD numbers should indicate in Item 14, "Continuations/Remarks", a street address or general guidance to reach the place of residence. In addition, the notation "See Item 14" should be included in the item pertaining to the particular next of kin or when the space for a particular item is insufficient. If the address for the person in the item has been shown in a preceding item, it is unnecessary to repeat the address; however, the name must be entered. Those items that are considered not applicable to civilians will be left blank.

ITEM 1. Enter full last name, first name, and middle initial.

ITEM 2. Enter social security number (SSN).

ITEM 3a. Service. Military: Mark X in appropriate block. Civilian: Mark two blocks as appropriate. Examples: an Army civilian would mark Army and either Civilian or Contractor; a DoD civilian, without affiliation to one of the Military Services, would mark DoD and then either Civilian or Contractor as appropriate.

ITEM 3b. Reporting Unit Code/Duty Station. See Service Directives.

ITEM 4a. Spouse Name. Enter last name (if different from Item 1), first name and middle initial on the line provided. If single, divorced, or widowed, mark appropriate block.

ITEM 4b. Address and Telephone Number. Enter the "actual" address and telephone number, not the mailing address. Include civilian title or military rank and service if applicable. If one of the blocks in 4a is marked, leave blank.

ITEM 5a-d. Children. Enter last name (only if different from Item 1) first name and middle initial, relationship, and date of birth of all children. If none, so state. Include illegitimate children if acknowledged by member or paternity/maternity has been judicially decreed. Relationship examples: son, daughter, stepson or daughter, adopted son or daughter or ward. Date of birth example: 19950704. For children not living with the member's current spouse, include address and name and relationship of person with whom residing in item 5d.

ITEM 6a. Father Name. Last name, first name and middle initial.

ITEM 6b. Address and Telephone Number of Father. If unknown or deceased, so state. Include civilian title or military rank and service if applicable. If other than natural father is listed, indicate relationship.

ITEM 7a. Mother Name. Last name, first name and middle initial.

ITEM 7b. Address and Telephone Number of Mother. If unknown or deceased, so state. Include civilian title or military rank and service if applicable. If other than natural mother is listed, indicate relationship.

ITEM 8. Persons Not to be Notified Due to Ill Health.
a. List relationship, e.g., "Mother," of person(s) listed in Items 4, 5, 6, or 7 who are not to be notified of a casualty due to ill health. If more than one child, specify, e.g., "daughter Susan." Otherwise, enter "None".
b. List relationship, e.g., "Father" or name and address of person(s) to be notified in lieu of person(s) listed in item 8a. If "None" is entered in Item 8a, leave blank.

ITEM 9a. This item will be used to record the name of the person or persons, if any, other than the member's primary next of kin or immediate family, to whom information on the whereabouts and status of the member shall be provided if the member is placed in a missing status. Reference 10 USC, Section 655. NOT APPLICABLE to civilians.

ITEM 9b. Address and telephone number of Designated Person(s). NOT APPLICABLE to civilians.

ITEM 10. Contracting Agency and Telephone Number (Contractors only). NOT APPLICABLE to military personnel. Civilian contractors will provide the name of their contracting agency and its telephone number. Example: XYZ Electric, (703) 555-5689. The telephone number should be to the company or corporation's personnel or human resources office.

ITEM 11a. Beneficiary(ies) for Death Gratuity (Military only). Enter first name(s), middle initial, and last name(s) of the person(s) to receive death gratuity pay. A member may designate one or more persons to receive all or a portion of the death gratuity pay. The designation of a person to receive a portion of the amount shall indicate the percentage of the amount, to be specified only in 10 percent increments, that the person may receive. If the member does not wish to designate a beneficiary for the payment of death gratuity, enter "None," or if the full amount is not designated, the payment or balance will be paid as follows:

(1) To the surviving spouse of the person, if any;
(2) To any surviving children of the person and the descendants of any deceased children by representation;
(3) To the surviving parents or the survivor of them;
(4) To the duly appointed executor or administrator of the estate of the person;
(5) If there are none of the above, to other next of kin of the person entitled under the laws of domicile of the person at the time of the person's death.

The member should make specific designations, as it expedites payment.

ITEM 11a. (Continued) Seek legal advice if naming a minor child as a beneficiary. If a member has a spouse but designates a person other than the spouse to receive all or a portion of the death gratuity pay, the Service concerned is required to provide notice of the designation to the spouse. NOT APPLICABLE to civilians.

Item 11b. Relationship. NOT APPLICABLE to civilians.

ITEM 11c. Enter beneficiary(ies) full mailing address and telephone number to include the ZIP Code. NOT APPLICABLE to civilians.

ITEM 11d. Show the percentage to be paid to each person. Enter 10%, 20%, 30%, up to 100% as appropriate. The sum shares must equal 100 percent. If no percent is indicated and more than one person is named, the money is paid in equal shares to the persons named. NOT APPLICABLE to civilians.

ITEM 12a. Beneficiary(ies) for Unpaid Pay/Allowance (Military only). Enter first name(s), middle initial, last name(s) and relationship of person to receive unpaid pay and allowances at the time of death. The member may indicate anyone to receive this payment. If the member designated two or more beneficiaries, state the percentage to be paid each in item 10c. If the member does not wish to designate a beneficiary, enter "By Law." The member is urged to designate a beneficiary for unpaid pay and allowances as payment will be made to the person in order of precedence by law (10 USC 2771) in the absence of a designation. Seek legal advice if naming a minor child as beneficiary. NOT APPLICABLE to civilians.

ITEM 12b. Enter beneficiary(ies) full mailing address and telephone number to include the ZIP Code. NOT APPLICABLE to civilians.

ITEM 12c. If the member designated two or more beneficiaries, state the percentage to be paid each in this section. The sum shares must equal 100 percent. NOT APPLICABLE to civilians.

ITEM 13a. Enter the name and relationship of the Person Authorized to Direct Disposition (PADD) of your remains should you become a casualty. Only the following persons may be named as a PADD: surviving spouse, blood relative of legal age, or adoptive relatives of the decedent. If neither of these three can be found, a person standing in loco parentis may be named. NOT APPLICABLE to civilians.

ITEM 13b. Address and telephone number of PADD. NOT APPLICABLE to civilians.

ITEM 14. Continuations/Remarks. Use this item for remarks or continuation of other items, if necessary. Prefix entry with the number of the item being continued; for example, 5/John J./son/ 19851220/321 Pecan Drive, Schertz TX 78151. Also use this item to list name, address, and relationship of other persons the member desires to be notified. Other dependents may also be listed. This block offers the greatest amount of flexibility for the member to record other important information not otherwise requested but considered extremely useful in the casualty notification and assistance process. Besides continuing information from other blocks on this form, the member may desire to include additional information such as: NOK language barriers, location or existence of a Will, additional private insurance information, other family member contact numbers, etc. If additional space is required, attach a supplemental sheet of standard bond paper with the information.

ITEM 15. Signature of Service Member/Civilian. Check and verify all entries and sign all copies in ink as follows: First name, middle initial, last name. Include rank, rate, or grade if applicable. May be electronically signed (see DoD Instruction 1300.18 for guidelines).

ITEM 16. Signature of Witness. Have a witness (disinterested person) sign all copies in ink as follows: First name, middle initial, last name. Include rank, rate, or grade as appropriate. A witness signature is not required for electronic versions of the DD Form 93 (see DoD Instruction 1300.18).

ITEM 17. Date the member or civilian signs the form. This item is an ink entry and must be completed on all copies.

SB 39 – U.S. Presidential Election Compact

If there is one bedrock rule in elections it is this: the person with the most votes is the winner. This legislation would guarantee the Presidency to the candidate who receives the most votes in the United States.

The concept of 'the person with the most votes wins' is simple, but it hasn't always worked out that way in our Presidential elections.

In 1876 Samuel Tilden received 254,000 more votes that Rutherford Hayes; however, Hayes won the Electoral College tally by one vote by having won a number of states by very small margins. In 1888 Grover Cleveland led in the popular vote over Benjamin Harrison, 48.6 percent to 47.8 percent, but Harrison won the Electoral College by a 233-168 margin, largely by virtue of his 1 percent win in Cleveland's home state of New York. In 2000 Al Gore won the popular vote by just over 500,000 votes but lost in the Electoral College to George Bush 266-271. In 2004 a shift of only 60,000 votes in Ohio from George Bush to John Kerry would have resulted in Kerry winning the Electoral College despite losing the popular vote by over 3 million votes.

SB 39 corrects this defect in our Presidential elections not by doing away with the Electoral College but by modifying how each state's electoral votes are cast. Currently the state's Electoral College votes are cast 100% in favor of the popular vote winner in the state. The bill would have Alaska join a compact made up of states that have pledged to cast their electoral votes in favor of the national popular vote winner. The compact would not go into effect until enough states have joined to put a majority of the Electoral College votes in the compact.

The choice of how to allocate our vote within the Electoral College was given to us by Article II, Section I of the US Constitution. The founding fathers of our country left the decision on how to select electors up to each individual state legislature. The US Supreme Court has written that "the appointment and mode of appointment of electors belong exclusively to the states under the constitution of the United States." McPherson v. Blacker, 146 U.S. 1 at 29 (1892).

Many believe that the current system causes candidates to focus on swing states, and swing state issues, instead of approaching the country as a whole. It is beyond dispute that under the current system candidates spend their campaign funds on just a few states. Here's an example of how this plays out in Alaska. During the final 40 days of the 2008 election, 99% of all media expenditures were made in 17 states. Alaska, needless to say, was not one of them.

In a close presidential election that decides our country's future, all states should be swing states. Every vote should count, and should be sought by every candidate. This bill will promote truly national presidential campaigns, and it will ensure that the person sent to occupy the most powerful office in the world is the one who got the most votes in the election.

MEMORANDUM January 27, 2011

SUBJECT: Sectional summary of SB 39 (Work Order No. 27-LS0372/A)

TO: Senator Hollis French
Attn: Andy Moderow

FROM: Alpheus Bullard
Legislative Counsel

You have requested a sectional summary of the above-described bill.

As a preliminary matter, note that a sectional summary of a bill should not be considered an authoritative interpretation of the bill and the bill itself is the best statement of its contents. If you would like an interpretation of the bill as it may apply to a particular set of circumstances, please advise.

Section 1. Ratifies an interstate compact to elect the President and Vice-President of the United States by national popular vote. Under the compact (and the bill), the presidential candidate who receives the most popular votes in all 50 states and the District of Columbia will win the presidency. Under the compact, all of the state's electoral votes would be awarded to the presidential candidate who receives the most popular votes in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. This compact would take effect only when enacted by states possessing a majority of the electoral votes, that is, enough electoral votes to elect a President, which is 270 of 538 electoral votes.

Sections 2 - 5. Conform statutes to the changes made by section one of the bill.

National Popular Election of the President

National Popular Vote!

www.NationalPopularVote.com

March 9, 2010

"Agreement Among the States to Elect the President by National Popular Vote"

The National Popular Vote bill would guarantee the Presidency to the candidate who receives the most popular votes in all 50 states (and the District of Columbia).

The bill has passed 29 legislative chambers in 19 states (AR, CA, CO, CT, DE, HI, IL, ME, MD, MA, MI, NV, NJ, NM, NC, OR, RI, VT, WA) and been endorsed by 1,825 state legislators.

The bill has been enacted by state legislatures representing 61 electoral votes — 23% of the 270 necessary to activate the law (Hawaii, Illinois, Maryland, New Jersey, and Washington).

The shortcomings of the current system stem from the winner-take-all rule (i.e., awarding all of a state's electoral votes to the candidate who receives the most popular votes in each state).

Because of the winner-take-all rule, a candidate can win the Presidency without winning the most popular votes nationwide. This has occurred in 4 of the nation's 56 presidential elections (and 1 in 7 of the non-landslide elections). A shift of fewer than 60,000 votes in Ohio in 2004 would have defeated President Bush despite his nationwide lead of 3,500,000 votes.

Another shortcoming of the winner-take-all rule is that presidential candidates have no reason to poll, visit, advertise, or organize in states where they are comfortably ahead or hopelessly behind. In 2008, candidates concentrated over two-thirds of their campaign visits and ad money in just six closely divided "battleground" states. A total of 98% went to just 15 states. In other words, voters in two thirds of the states were essentially spectators to the election.

The U.S. Constitution gives the states exclusive and plenary control over the manner of awarding their electoral votes. The winner-take-all rule is not in the Constitution. It was not the Founder's choice and was used by only 3 states in the nation's first presidential election in 1789. Maine and Nebraska currently award electoral votes by congressional district — a reminder that an amendment to the U.S. Constitution is not required to change the way the President is elected.

Under the National Popular Vote bill, all the electoral votes from the enacting states would be awarded, as a bloc, to the presidential candidate who receives the most popular votes in all 50 states (and DC). The bill would take effect only when enacted by states possessing a majority of the electoral votes — that is, enough electoral votes to elect a President (270 of 538). The bill would replace the current state-by-state system of awarding electoral votes with a system based on winning the most individual votes in all 50 states (and DC).

State polls show strong support for a national popular vote (AK–70%, AR–80%, CA–70%, CO–68%, CT–74%, DC–76%, DE–75%, ID–77%, IA–75%, KY–80%, ME–77%, MA–73%, MI–73%, MS–77%, MO–70%, NH–69%, NE–74%, NV–72%, NM–76%, NY–79%, NC–74%, OH–70%, OK–81%, PA–78%, RI–74%, SD–75%, UT–70%, VT–75%, VA–74%, WA–77%, WI–71%, and WV–81%). Support is strong in every partisan and demographic group.

The National Advisory Board of National Popular Vote includes former congressmen John Anderson (R–Illinois and later independent presidential candidate), John Buchanan (R–Alabama), Tom Campbell (R–California), and Tom Downey (D–New York) and former Senators Birch Bayh (D–Indiana), David Durenberger (R–Minnesota), and Jake Garn (R–Utah).

Additional information is available in our book Every Vote Equal: A State-Based Plan for Electing the President by National Popular Vote and at `www.NationalPopularVote.com`.

In summary, the National Popular Vote bill will guarantee that every voter in every state will be politically relevant in every presidential election and that every vote will be equal.

The New York Times

Drop Out of the College

New York Times Editorial
March 14, 2006

The Electoral College is an antidemocratic relic. Everyone who remembers 2000 knows that it can lead to the election of the candidate who loses the popular vote as president. But the Electoral College's other serious flaws are perhaps even more debilitating for a democracy. It focuses presidential elections on just a handful of battleground states, and pushes the rest of the nation's voters to the sidelines.

There is an innovative new proposal for states to take the lead in undoing the Electoral College. Legislatures across the country should get behind it.

Both parties should have reason to fear the college's perverse effects. In 2000, the Democrats lost out. But in 2004, a shift of 60,000 votes in Ohio would have elected John Kerry, even though he lost the national popular vote decisively.

Just as serious is the way the Electoral College distorts presidential campaigns. Candidates have no incentive to campaign in, or address the concerns of, states that reliably vote for a particular party. In recent years, the battleground in presidential elections has shrunk drastically. In 1960, 24 states, with 327 electoral votes, were battleground states, according to estimates by National Popular Vote, the bipartisan coalition making the new proposal. In 2004, only 13 states, with 159 electoral votes, were. As a result, campaigns and national priorities are stacked in favor of a few strategic states. Ethanol fuel, a pet issue of Iowa farmers, is discussed a lot. But issues of equal concern to states like Alabama, California, New York and Indiana are not.

The Electoral College discourages turnout because voters in two-thirds of the nation know well before Election Day who will win their states. It also discriminates among voters by weighing presidential votes unequally. A Wyoming voter has about four times as much impact on selecting that state's electors as a California voter does on selecting that state's.

The answer to all of these problems is direct election of the president. Past attempts to abolish the Electoral College by amending the Constitution have run into difficulty. But National Popular Vote, which includes several former members of Congress, is offering an ingenious solution that would not require a constitutional amendment. It proposes that states commit to casting their electoral votes for the winner of the national popular vote. These promises would become binding only when states representing a majority of the Electoral College signed on. Then any candidate who won the popular vote would be sure to win the White House.

The coalition is starting out by trying to have laws passed in Illinois and a few other states. Americans are rightly cautious about tinkering with mechanisms established by the Constitution. But throughout the nation's history, there have been a series of reforms affecting how elections are conducted, like the ones that gave blacks and women the vote and provided for the direct election of United States senators. Sidestepping the Electoral College would be in this worthy tradition of making American democracy more democratic.

The Fayetteville Observer

Our View: Electoral vote change would be good for the state and its people

The Fayette Observer Editorial
May 16, 2007

Four times since the framers met in Philadelphia in 1787, the presidency has gone to the candidate on the losing end of the popular vote. The republic still stands.

That's hardly a compelling argument for leaving things as they are. The Electoral College less than perfectly reflects the will of the people, and the threat of the "faithless elector" who tips an election the way his partisan bias dictates is real, if remote. Both threats would vanish if the election automatically went to the candidate for whom most registered voters pulled the lever.

This is the point at which the conversation normally would turn to amending the federal Constitution to abolish the Electoral College. But the state Senate has just passed a bill that would achieve a comparable effect by simple statute.

The bill provides that, if enough states join in to command a majority in the Electoral College, all of North Carolina's electoral votes will be awarded to the winner of the popular vote — not the statewide winner, but the one who wins nationwide. More than 40 states are already looking at substantially the same bill.

If it works as planned, the problem goes away, with no violence done to the Constitution.

Something else happens, too. North Carolina will less often find itself in political obscurity when the nation chooses its top leader.

During the 2000 election, one analyst noted that the candidates were focusing most of their time and effort on 11 swing states. Ironically, only three of those had more electoral votes than North Carolina, which was not one of the 11. If candidates understand that they have a real shot at our 15 electoral votes right up until the polls close on that fateful Tuesday in November, we are unlikely to be shrugged off or taken for granted again.

The arguments against it are no stronger than those for retaining the Electoral College in all its supreme majesty: (1) it's different; and (2) it means that North Carolina could end up giving its 15 votes to someone not favored by the majority of Tar Heel voters. The first argument lacks heft. The second would make perfect sense, but only if one could ignore the fact that presidential elections are held to enable individual Americans to put someone in the White House, not merely to express each state's collective pique or pleasure.

This is worth a try — for the sake of simplicity and fairness, and in the interest of raising our state's political profile.

The electoral college is an anachronism. The one person, one vote principle makes it illogical. The perceived political advantage for small-population states like ours is outweighed by our duty for equality for all Americans in choosing a President. Please share this with the members of your committee.

Greetings Senator French,

I am an Alaskan resident and registered voter, who would like to commend and support you in any way that I can with regards to your sponsorship of the Senate Bill 39, US Presidential Election Compact Bill.

I have read the bill and fully understand the effects this bill would have on the residents of Alaska. The opportunity for Alaska to join a compact made up of states that have pledged to cast their electoral votes in favor of the national popular vote winner is a commendable step towards making this great state a presence as much as the 17 states that are focused on at this time. In other words, to me, this bill will give way to a fair and balanced system to encourage and persuade Candidates to focus on all the people; rather than an esoteric group that may have all the power.

I feel this bill is a step into a higher rank of democracy and must be carried with the peoples voice as far as it can reach. I can not convey my passion for your support in this bill.

Having met you personally I feel confident in your endorsement of this bill and wish you all the luck in your pursuit of same.

With Best regards, I am

Subject: Support for SB 39 - National Popular Vote

Senator French and Members of the Senate Judiciary Committee:

I would like to take this opportunity to support SB 39 - U.S. Presidential Election Compact. As I'm sure you're aware there have been a variety of efforts to reform the U.S. presidential election process in order to address the growing unfairness to states (specifically low population and/or geographically distant states) resulting from pre and post Primary presidential campaign strategies.

These concerns have long led critics to debate the ongoing relevance of the Electoral College. While I recognize that this bill does not ultimately address that larger issue, it does provide a workable alternative to increase parity among states during a presidential campaign.

There are a host of reasons why this legislation is necessary and timely, and I'm certain the committee will have the opportunity to hear from more eloquent speakers with greater expertise than I, so I won't belabor my comments with excessive information you're likely to otherwise be provided.

I appreciate the opportunity to comment on this important legislation.

Re: Hearings on Koza Scheme to cast Alaska's electoral votes in contravention of the vote of the people of Alaska

Dear Ms. Smith,

Although I plan to phone in to give a statement before the Alask legislative hearing scheduled for 3:30 this Wednesday, I was hoping that you would forward this e-mail, along with its attachments to Senator Hollis French.

My name is Robert Hardaway, Professor of Law at the University of Denver Sturm College of Law. I am the author of a number of articles and books on the Electoral College, including "The Electoral College and the Constitution: The Case for preserving Federalism" (Praeger Press), and "Crisis at the Polls" (Greenwood Press). I have also attached an article I wrote for the Arkansas Democrat Gazette entitled "The Case for Preserving Federalism".

I have also attached a statement of professors who opposed a similar bill in the Colorado legislature, including a list of questions to pose to all those supporting a "Koza" type scheme under which a small minority of states could elect a president and in which a state legislature would be required to to ignore the vote of the people in their state in casting its state's electoral votes.

I will leave it to others to lay out the case against undermining the "Grand Compromise" enshrined in the U.S. Constitution to protect the small states, as well as the risks of electing a president with a small minority of the votes case which would occur if the federalist structure of our system of government were to be abolished by circumventing the amendment process.

Instead, I would simply point out that the Koza scheme set forth no national plan for conducting recounts. Instead, recounts would be left to each individual state to conduct under their own laws, with the result that even though the national popular vote might be very close, only some states would conduct a recount, while others not a party to the Koza scheme could be required under their own state laws to opt out of a recount entirely. The result in the case of a close national popular vote would be a catastrophe of unimaginable proportions.

If others are adamant about undermining federalism by abolishing the twin prongs of the Grand Compromise (which include both the Electoral College and the U.S. Senate), they should be encouraged to first work to abolish the Senate, and only then to abolish the second prong to which it is attached.

In order to preserve the separation of powers, the Framers did not want the president to be chosen by (and thereby beholden to) Congress, and thus established a secondary body modeled on a parliament whose only responsibility would be to elect the president. Just as in 1974 in Britain when Labor won the popular vote but did not form the government because it did not elect a majority of members to parliament, once every hudnred years or so the electoral vote does not jibe with the popular vote. That result every hundred years neither justifies the abolition of parliament in Great Britian or the abolishment of federalism in the U.S., and sweep away an electoral system that has been the envy of the world.

Nor after all the gains that minorities have won over the past half century should their rights be taken away through the abolition of federalism. As Vernon Jordan, president of the Urban League testified in 1979 congressional hearings: "Take away the Electoral College and the importance of being black melts away. Blacks, instead of being crucial to victory in major states, simply become 10% of the Electorate, with reduced impact."

Please feel free to call me 24/7 if you have any questions at 303-345-5220.

Respectfully submitted,

PROPOSED QUESTIONS TO BE CONSIDERED AND ANSWERED BY COLORADO SENATORS PRIOR TO VOTING ON HOUSE BILL 09-1299

(Submitted by undersigned Professors)

1. Given that the Colorado Constitution specifically provides that "the electors of the electoral college shall be chosen by direct vote of the people" [Section 20, Colorado Constitution, Schedule], will supporters of House Bill 1299 attach a rider to that bill amending the Colorado Constitution to permit the legislature to select electors other than those chosen by direct vote of the people of Colorado?

2.Inasmuch as the House Bill 1299 includes no provision for a national recount in presidential elections, and there currently exists no federal law provision for conducting recounts in close elections, how would the Colorado legislature allocate its electoral votes in close elections in which some, but not necessarily all states are independently conducting recounts according to their own state's laws and in which the "chief election official" of those states conducting recounts has not certified the popular vote of such state by the First Monday after the second Wednesday in December of an election year due to pending unresolved recounts and court challenges in those states?

Illustration: In 1960, media tabulators of the popular vote gave Kennedy a narrow popular vote margin; however, the Congressional Quarterly declared Nixon the popular vote winner by a relative handful of popular votes. To this day, historians can not determine the popular vote winner, since a recount of over 70 million votes in over 42,000 voting districts would have taken years and rendered a different result in each recount. Pierce and Longley's massive study of Americans elections has concluded that it was "impossible to determine what Kennedy's vote plurality—if it existed at all—really was. (Emphasis added)

Question 2A: In such a scenario, how would the Colorado legislature cast its electoral votes if it was a Koza member?

3. Inasmuch as federal law [Title 3, Sec. 3] provides that governor of each state is required to certify the electoral votes of his state, how should the Colorado legislature cast its electoral votes if the "chief election official" (as provided by the Koza scheme) asserts that candidate A has a popular vote lead as of the first Monday after the second Wednesday in December, but the governor asserts that candidate B is actually in the lead for the time being, or asserts that the popular vote can not be determined due to pending recounts in some but not necessarily all of the states?

4. If after a presidential election a Koza scheme member state decides to withdraw from the "compact" with other Koza members prior to the time permitted under the Koza scheme (either because it can not determine a popular vote winner in the other states, or its Supreme Court has declared the Koza scheme unconstitutional, or for any other reason), how would the other Koza member states enforce the compact against another state allegedly prematurely withdrawing from the compact?

5. If after a presidential election, members of the Colorado legislature believe that election fraud has occurred in other states, or that the closeness of the national popular vote justifies a national recount, how would Colorado go about forcing other non-Koza states to conduct a recount if such a recount would violate the election laws and provisions of those other states? How would it force Koza states to conduct such recounts?

6. Given that there is presently no national provision for a nationwide recount of popular votes, nor any federal law authorizing such a recount, how would a national recount of the popular vote in all the states be conducted in cases where the closeness of the popular vote justifies such a recount? (Note: some, but not all states provide for an automatic recount in elections in which the difference in the popular vote is below a certain percentage)

7. If the popular vote is so fractured that no one candidate has either a majority or plurality above 20% of the popular vote, what would be the procedure under the Koza scheme for a run-off in order to insure that a candidate receives either a majority or at least a substantial plurality of the popular vote?(note: virtually all countries using a popular vote method—such as Russia—at least provide for a run-off)

8. Given that the U.S. Constitution specifically and unambiguously prohibits the states from entering into "any agreement, or compact with another state" [ART I, Sec 10(3)], (with only narrowly drawn judicial exclusions relating to settlement of disputes on mundane matters such as water rights, etc.), and that the Supreme Court has NEVER approved compacts or conspiracies among the states to undermine federalism or reformulate the constitutional process for presidential elections, do the supporters of House Bill 1299 intend to attach a rider to that bill proposing an amendment to the U.S. Constitution to abolish the express prohibition of such compacts and conspiracies?

9. How would the legislature best explain to the people of Colorado that the legislature chose to overrule the people's choice of electors pledged to a particular candidate in elections in which, like in 1960, the popular vote can not be determined—all in violation of the Colorado Constitution?

If the above questions can not be adequately answered, the undersigned urge consideration of the following ten reasons to vote against HB 1299:

The proposed Compact among states to establish direct election of the President:

1. Violates Section 10 of Article I of the U.S. Constitution which specifically states that "no state shall, without the consent of Congress…enter into any Agreement or Compact with another state…"

2. Undermines American federalism, and constitute a cynical scheme to illegally subvert Section I, Article II of the "U.S. Constitution which guarantees to every state, not just a favored eleven, a number of electors "*equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress:…"

3. Cynically by-passes the established amending process set forth in Article V, including the approval of "two thirds of both houses…and the Legislatures of three fourths of the several states…" of any proposed amendment.

4. Diminishes the political influence of racial and ethnic minorities in the United States in presidential elections [Ref: testimony of Vernon Jordan, president of the National Urban League at 1979 Congressional Hearings: "Take away the Electoral College and the importance of being black melts away. Blacks, instead of being crucial to victory in major states, simply become 10% of the electorate, with reduced impact"]

5. Subverts the "Grand Compromise" entered into by the Founding Fathers at the Constitutional Convention as the basis for federalism and our national union, the two prongs of which were: 1) the equal representation of each state in the Senate along with popular representation in the House, and 2) a number of presidential electors based on the number of representatives to which they were entitled in both the Senate and the House [Ref: statement of Senator John F. Kennedy in 1956 in opposition to a Republican proposal to abolish the Electoral College: "It is not only the unit vote for the presidency we are talking about, but a whole solar system of governmental power. If it is proposed to change the balance of power of one of the elements of the solar system, it is necessary to consider the others." (In other words, abolishing the U.S. Senate).]

6. Results in the chronic election of candidates who are supported by only a minority of the popular electorate by weakening the two party system and encouraging encourage splinter parties, eventually generating into a prolonged run-off system under which two minor party candidates enjoying little overall popular support can win the presidency despite being opposed by the vast majority of the electorate.[Ref: note the 1993 Russian multi-party "popular" vote election in which the electorate came within a whisker of being presented with a "runoff" choice between Fascists and Communists, despite the fact that 80% of the electoral opposed both].

7. Compromises the intention of the Founding Fathers that national support for a presidential candidate be broad as well as deep. The need to create concurrent pluralities throughout the United States would be eliminated and replaced by a myopic focus on population centers largely found in coastal areas.

8. Dooms the United States to a destabilizing electoral crisis in every election in which the popular vote is close. When the electoral vote is close, as in 2000 (but which occurs only once every hundred years), the recount is isolated to one state. In a so-called "popular vote" election, a recount would be required in every one of 170,000 voting precincts and hamlets nationwide, enormously magnifying crises such as that endured in 2000. After the inevitable multiple lawsuits were filed, every recount would doubtlessly show a different result.

9. Wipes out the influence of "swing" states such as Colorado in the presidential election contest, as well as require Colorado to cast its electoral votes in direct opposition to the will expressed by the Colorado voters when the national popular vote plurality was different from that in Colorado.

10. Violates the Colorado Constitution (Schedule Provisions, Sec. 20) which mandates that "The general assembly shall provide that after the year eighteen hundred and seventy-six the electors of the electoral college shall be chosen by direct vote of the people."

For these reasons we urge the defeat of HB 1299.

The case for preserving federalism

BY ROBERT HARDAWAY
SPECIAL TO THE DEMOCRAT-GAZETTE

As the nation gets ready for another presidential election, there are an increasing number of calls for popular election of the president and the abolition of the Electoral College. Such calls are not new. Since 1787, there have been more than 700 bills and proposed constitutional amendments to reform or abolish the Electoral College. All have failed, and the reasons are both political and practical.

The U.S. Constitution itself almost failed to become the supreme law of the land because the small states adamantly refused to join a union in which the large states would dominate the small states in a national legislature. On the verge of dissolution, the Constitutional Convention of 1787 proposed a two-pronged compromise that ultimately saved the union: First, a lower house of the legislature would be elected based on population, while an upper house would guarantee equal representation of each state regardless of population; second, the president would be elected by electors chosen by each state and equal in number to the number of representatives elected by each state to Congress.

Indeed, so critical was this compromise to the establishment of a federal union that the small states insisted that its primary feature be enshrined as the only provision in the Constitution which could not be amended except by unanimous agreement of all the states. Thus under the Constitution, a single state can veto any proposed constitutional amendment to undermine federalism by calling for representation in the Senate based on "one man, one vote" rather than on equal representation of the states.

Nevertheless, if reformers are truly concerned about the fact that citizens of the smaller states have a disproportionate voice in Congress, the first step would be to abolish the U.S. Senate (the first prong of the grand compromise that united the union). The second step would be to abolish the Electoral College (the second prong of the grand compromise, which is inextricably bound up with the first.).

A young Sen. John Kennedy eloquently made this very point when in 1956 he opposed a Senate bill for popular election of the president, stating that "It is not only the unit vote for the presidency we are talking about, but a whole system of governmental power. If it is proposed to change the balance of power of one of the elements of the solar system, it is necessary to consider the others."

At the Constitutional Convention of 1787, only John Hamilton proposed abolishing the states and creating a centralized government rather than a federal system of government based on shared and delegated powers. His proposal was overwhelmingly defeated, as have 700 bills submitted since then to undermine federalism by abolishing the Electoral College.

Advocates of popular election often claim that no other democratic country would tolerate an election in which the popular vote winner is not elected. In fact, this occurs quite frequently in all countries with parliamentary systems. In England, for example, prime ministers are elected by members of Parliament. In 1974, the Labor Party lost the national popular vote by a healthy margin, but nevertheless won three more seats in Parliament, with the result that Labor was able to form the government. As far as can be determined, there was no rioting in the streets or "appeals to the United Nations."

Proposals for "popular election" are often based on an appeal to democratic principles. In fact, so-called "popular" elections rarely produce a leader approved by a majority of the people. Such elections inevitably require "runoffs" in which the two most organized parties often make the cutoff despite lacking widespread support. For example, in the popular election conducted in Russia in 1993, a runoff came within a whisker of presenting the electorate with a choice between a neo-fascist (who blamed the Jews for starting wars and advocated invading Alaska) but who received but 23 percent of the vote, and a hard-core communist who came within a percentage point of finishing second—despite the fact that over two-thirds of the electorate opposed both candidates.

The Founding Fathers understood that the legitimacy of a leader must be based on support of the people that is broad as well as deep. They foresaw the possibility that under a "popular" election system, a regional demagogue might gain overwhelming support in one region of the country, but be strongly opposed by the rest of the country. For example, a segregationist who ran for president in the 1950s might well have succeeded in getting 90 percent of the vote in the deep South and thus win the popular vote, even though he was opposed by majorities of the people in three-quarters of the remaining states. The Electoral College prevents such a result, and insures that a president have broad support across the entire country, not just overwhelming support in one region.

Over the last 200 years, we have become spoiled by the success of the Electoral College in providing the democratic infrastructure for the peaceful transfer of power. Without it, our two-party system would quickly degenerate into a multiplicity of small parties, with the result that minority presidents elected in "runoffs" would rule. In Italy, for example, governments rise and fall from month to month as contentious small parties ebb and flow.

We have also become accustomed to the definitive and speedy result. In 1960, an election based on the popular vote would have been too close to call for several months as recounts went on interminably in every state. Indeed, it has been estimated that the presidency would have been in limbo for as long as six months during a time of nuclear crisis and the Cold War. Fortunately, the Electoral College provided an instant winner in the form of an overwhelming victory for John Kennedy in the Electoral College despite the incredible closeness of the popular vote—thus saving the country from a destabilizing crisis.

True, once every 100 years on average, the vote in the Electoral College is so close that a recount in a single state can affect the election. Indeed, this occurred in 2000, as it did in 1876. But consider what would have happened in 2000 had the country adopted a popular election system. Instead of isolating the recount to one state (Florida), recounts would have been necessary in all 50 states, thus multiplying the national trauma. The country would have been lucky to have a president within the next year.

Minorities are also sure to oppose the abolition of the Electoral College. As Vernon Jordan, president of the Urban League, observed, "Take away the Electoral College and the importance of being black melts away. Blacks, instead of being crucial to victory in major states, simply become 10 percent of the total electorate, with reduced impact."

It is just possible that the founding fathers knew what they were doing when they devised an electoral system that over a period of two centuries has proved to be the envy of the world.

SB 39: An Act ratifying an interstate compact to elect the President and Vice-President of the United States by national popular vote
February 2011

Submitted By: Tara Ross
Author of Enlightened Democracy: The Case for the Electoral College

Overview

I urge you to vote against SB 39. It would create many new, logistical problems for our presidential election process. It would also essentially eliminate the Electoral College, an institution that protects less densely populated states such as Alaska and is critical to the success of our republican democracy.

Problems Created by SB 39. The National Popular Vote plan proposed by SB 39 contains many hidden problems. NPV awards the presidency to the winner of any plurality—even a very small one. Alaska could be required to cast its electoral votes for a candidate who did not qualify for the ballot in Alaska. Recounts would be controlled by 51 different standards (50 states plus D.C.), rather than one national standard. Chaos, litigation, and confusion would result. Some voters would be disenfranchised because their votes would be counted in different ways, depending on their state of residence.

Applying the Electoral College Today. The Electoral College provides many benefits that still serve Americans:

- The Benefits of Federalism. Presidential candidates must build national coalitions of voters. Historically speaking, the candidate who builds the broadest coalition will win. Thus, presidents are good representatives for all Americans; they do not merely represent one region, state, or special interest group.
- Moderation and Compromise. The Electoral College encourages Americans to work together, across state lines. A direct election system, by contrast, would result in multi-party presidential races, a fractured electorate, increasingly extremist third-party candidates, and constant recounts.
- Stability and Certainty in Elections. The Electoral College typically produces quick and undisputed outcomes. Any problems are isolated to one or a handful of states. Fraud is minimized because it is hard to predict where stolen votes will matter.

Conclusion. We must not allow the Electoral College to be eliminated through legislation such as SB 39. This important aspect of our Constitution continues to protect our freedom, just as it did when it was created in 1787.

SB 39: An Act ratifying an interstate compact to elect the President and Vice-President of the United States by national popular vote
February 2011

Submitted By: Tara Ross
Author of Enlightened Democracy: The Case for the Electoral College

Full Testimony

The bill before you, SB 39, represents the latest attempt to eliminate America's unique and successful presidential system. Abolishing the Electoral College would be unhealthy for the country and especially detrimental to less densely populated states such as Alaska. But eliminating the Electoral College through this roundabout manner, without going through a formal constitutional amendment process, carries its own special dangers.

Proponents claim the National Popular Vote plan outlined in SB 39 will ensure that all voters receive equal attention because each vote will be weighted equally. But the truth is the precise opposite. NPV will lessen the need of presidential candidates to obtain the support of voters in rural areas and in states such as Alaska.

Problems Created by NPV

The plan proposed by NPV is fraught with difficulties—some logistical, some philosophical. I will discuss these latter issues—arguments "for" and "against" the Electoral College—in a moment. But the logistical difficulties of changing the presidential election process without a constitutional amendment need to be fully explored.

The current presidential election process blends federalist and democratic principles. America holds 51 completely separate, purely democratic elections each presidential election year (one in each state, plus D.C.). Local election laws impact the manner in which each of these elections is held, but any differences among states' election codes don't matter. The unique laws of any particular state impact only voters within that state. The country holds 51 completely separate elections, and it achieves 51 different sets of results. Each state's single goal is to select a slate of electors that will represent it in the later, national election among the states. NPV would change this. America would still hold 51 separate elections, but NPV would attempt to derive one single result from these 51 elections. Suddenly, internal variances among states' processes—previously irrelevant—would matter a great deal. Seeking change through a constitutional amendment would avoid these problems. An amendment would help establish one set of national laws to govern one national election. Instead, consider just a few of the logistical problems that could occur with NPV in place:

First, note that NPV can't force states that have rejected NPV to participate in a run-off. Thus, it gives the presidency to the candidate winning any plurality, even a very small one. NPV is not looking for a majority winner. It is not even looking for a minimum plurality. As a practical and logistical matter, it can't. Thus, a candidate could win with only 15 or 20 percent of votes nationwide. But it gets worse. Under this scheme, Alaska could be forced to award its entire slate of electors to a candidate who was not on its own ballot. Imagine, for instance, that Ron Paul qualifies for the ballot in Texas and obtains a winning plurality solely from Texas voters. Paul did not bother to qualify for the ballot in a place like Alaska. Voters in that state did not have the chance to vote for—or against—him. Yet Alaska would still be forced to award its entire slate of electors to the choice of Texas voters. Alaska probably did not nominate a slate of electors for Paul because he was not on its ballot. NPV's compact offers a solution, but it is doubtful that voters in Alaska will like it. Paul would be entitled to personally appoint the three electors who will represent Alaska in the Electoral College vote. In all likelihood, he would select Texans to represent Alaska in the presidential election so that he would not be undermined by a "faithless" elector who was determined to vote for the choice of Alaska's voters.

There are other inconsistencies among states' ballots that would skew the election results. Some states allow felons to vote. Some states do not. States differ in their requirements for ballot qualification. Inevitably, Alaska would have to abide by national election results derived from policies with which it disagrees.

I wish I were done, but I am not. It gets even worse. States have different criteria for what does (or does not) trigger recounts within their borders. These differences could cause a whole host of problems. What if the national total is close—close enough to warrant a recount—but a recount can't be conducted because the margins in individual states were not close? Or perhaps recounts are conducted, but only in two or three states, each with a different idea of how to count a hanging chad. Perhaps a fourth state would see what is going on and choose to conduct a recount that its statutes previously deemed optional. Maybe this fourth state has a different definition of "hanging chad," and its sole goal is to counteract the efforts of the other states.

Such a state of affairs invites chaos, litigation, and confusion each and every election year. Some voters will be disenfranchised by the widely differing ideas of how to count a vote. What if such problems caused one state to pull out of the compact in violation of its terms? How would compliance be enforced? How much litigation would ensue before the presidential election could be resolved?

Formally eliminating the Electoral College through a constitutional amendment would be unhealthy for the country. But NPV's efforts to skirt the constitutional amendment process altogether would create added difficulties. These logistical nightmares could haunt the country each and every presidential election year.

The Benefits of the Electoral College

I do not mean to imply that the only problem with NPV is its logistical difficulties. Eliminating the Electoral College would do serious harm to a country as diverse as our own. The system provides our country with many great benefits that tend to remain unnoticed and thus unappreciated by most Americans.

The history of the Electoral College must be understood if its benefits are to be appreciated. The Founders sought to reconcile two seemingly irreconcilable goals: They wanted the people to govern themselves, but they also wanted to protect minority interests. A pure democracy would not accomplish this objective because it allows 51 percent of the people to rule the other 49 percent—all the time, without exception. If America were a pure democracy, imagine what could happen in the wake of an event like 9/11. A bare majority could enact any law it desired, even if that law were tyrannical, racist, or penalized some for their religious beliefs. The Founders thus did not create a pure democracy. Instead, their Constitution tempers its democratic aspects with republican and federalist characteristics. Safeguards such as the Senate (one state, one vote representation), supermajority requirements to amend the Constitution, and the Electoral College allow the majority to rule, but only while it acts reasonably. Minority political interests are protected.

The Electoral College provides three benefits that still protect Americans today.

The Benefits of Federalism

Electoral College opponents argue that presidential elections are undemocratic. They are wrong. America holds 51 purely democratic elections each presidential election year (each state, plus D.C.). Such a process combines democracy and federalism into one process. The result is that candidates can't win without nationwide support. Obama can't rely solely on big cities in California. Republicans can't rely solely on Texas. They must win simultaneous, concurrent majorities nationwide. They can't achieve those victories unless they reach out to a wide variety of voters. They will fail if they rely upon isolated pockets of support in one region or among voters in one special interest group.

Many dispute that our system creates national coalition-building, arguing that it instead causes a disproportionate focus on mid-sized "swing" states. These arguments appear true if we focus on one or a handful of election years in isolation. But if we look at the states' full histories of voting, we see that the identity of "swing" and "safe" states changes all the time. California is often viewed as irreversibly Democrat, but it voted for Republican candidate George H.W. Bush as recently as 1988. Texas used to be as undeniably Democrat as it is Republican today. States such as Georgia, Kentucky, and Louisiana all voted for Bill Clinton in the 1990s, but they were considered very safe Republican states in 2008.

Ultimately, the Electoral College ensures that the political parties must reach out to all the states. As a matter of history, no political party has ever been able to ignore any state for too long without feeling the ramifications at the polls.

Moderation and Compromise

The most likely consequence of a change to a direct popular vote is the breakdown of the two-party system. Today, third-party candidates do not receive much support. In a direct popular election, everything changes. A vote for Ross Perot or Ralph Nader is no longer "wasted," and the number of presidential candidates would increase. Voters would fracture their votes across many candidates. The result will be lower vote totals per candidate and an increased likelihood that two or more candidates will have close popular vote totals. Recounts would proliferate. Worse, extremist candidates could more easily sway an election, because no candidate is required to obtain majority support.

NPV proponents argue that the President should have the support of most Americans. But in real life, "most" Americans will never agree on their ideal candidate. Individuals' opinions differ too greatly. Given the general inability to obtain majority consensus (or even the consensus of a large plurality), the Electoral College provides the country with the next best alternative. Electing Presidents by states' electoral votes, rather than individuals' votes, creates a method of electing a President who is a good compromise candidate for most Americans, as represented by their states. The Electoral College requires moderation, compromise, and coalition-building from any candidate before he can be successful.

Stability and Certainty in Elections.

The Electoral College encourages stability and certainty in our political system. Events such as those that occurred in 2000 are rare. The Electoral College typically produces quick and undisputed election outcomes for two reasons: First, the system (along with the winner-take-all rule) tends to magnify the margin of victory, giving the victor a certain and demonstrable election outcome. Such certainty can't be provided by a direct popular election. Popular votes are often close, and these close votes can result in constant litigation and recounts. Second, the system controls the impact of fraud and error. In part, this is because it is difficult to predict where stolen votes will make a difference to the national outcome. But if one person can identify a problematic state (think Ohio in 2004), then, in all likelihood, everyone knows and that area is closely watched. It becomes harder to steal votes. To the degree that fraud and errors do occur, the Electoral College makes it possible to isolate the problem to one or a handful of states. The country is given a clear set of problems to resolve one way or another before moving on to a definitive election outcome.

Conclusion

The Electoral College is an important safeguard in our constitutional system of checks and balances, and it is critical to the success of our nation's republican democracy. I urge you to protect the Electoral College by voting "no" on SB 39.

Dear Senator:

I respectfully request that you include the enclosed testimony with regard to SB in the record of tomorrow's hearing. I hope to also be able to testify by phone

As my testimony indicates, I am in my professional life the director of an organization that is non-partisan but deeply concerned with the political health and welfare of our democracy. As an individual, I am a liberal. But in both capacities, I believe the prospect of a direct election for president presents a great danger to the broader values underlying our democratic process and it also presents serious practical problems.

I hope you have an opportunity to read this testimony and that you and your colleagues might think twice before moving in this direction.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely Yours,

Curtis Gans

My name is Curtis Gans. I am director of the Center for the Study for the American Electorate, a non-partisan, non-profit research and public policy development institution which I co-founded in 1976 and have been its executive director since that time. The primary mission of that institution has been to provide data and analysis about citizen participation in America's political life and to pursue bi-partisanly supported public policy initiatives aimed at enhancing voting and other forms of civic involvement. With respect the issues facing this hearing, I have testified twice before Congress on this issue, have written about it for more than one major publication, have been cited in a variety of publications and now am a mid-wife to a small bi-partisan study committee headed by former Reps. Mickey Edwards and Martin Frost looking for solutions to problems posed by the electoral college, solutions that do not include the direct election of the president.

I am grateful for the opportunity presented to express my considered views on this issue and thank both the elected officials and staff that made this testimony possible.

The question that is being raised by National Popular Vote and the campaign for direct elections for president is not whether our elections should be more democratic but rather what kind of democracy should the United States be.

The proponents of direct elections for president want to ensure: 1. That each citizen's vote to be equal to every other citizen's vote; 2. That the person who gets the greatest number of votes nationally becomes president, whether that vote count constitutes a majority of the American eligible citizens (a result never achieved by any candidate for president since 1824), a majority of those voting (achieved by about 60 percent of the persons elevated to the presidency) or only a plurality of those voting (a group that includes not only Al Gore but also Andrew Jackson, Abraham Lincoln, Woodrow Wilson, Harry S. Truman, John F. Kennedy, Richard Nixon, Bill Clinton and eight other presidents); and 3. That no minor party or independent candidate B a Ralph Nader, Ross Perot, John Anderson or George Wallace B can deny the person with the greatest number of citizen votes the presidency by denying him or her the electoral votes in one or more states..

Direct elections would accomplish all of these goals. The question is at what price.

The basic effect of moving from an electoral college system to direct elections would be to totally nationalize the election of American presidents with some major negative consequences, including but not limited to:

1. Manipulation: The central question in the creation of any system of election is its incentive structure -- what activities it encourages and what it does not. Arguably the worst thing that has happened in the modern era to the conduct of American politics is the coaxial cable and the free rein it has given political consultants to pollute our airwaves with attack ads every biennium -- driving up the cost of campaigns, driving voters both from the polls and increasingly from respect for political leadership or the political process as a whole.

While even with the electoral college increasingly the bulk of campaign resources are poured into televised political advertising, direct elections would insure that almost all monetary resources would be poured into such advertising. There would be virtually no incentive to try to mobilize constituencies, organize specific interests or devote any resources to such things as voter registration and education. The result of direct elections is that campaigns would be run on the basis of polling the gross number of likely voters across America and targeting television messages to their interests and views. Our election would, in essence, not be a contest between two putative Presidents, but rather between two would-be king-makers, the non-responsible and increasingly irresponsible consultants who generate the advertising -- in a race to the bottom to see who can do the better job of turning off the other's potential voters.

As a corollary to a national media campaign is that the rest of a candidate's political activities would be to alight in various places for brief periods to get free media attention. And it virtually certain that the places the candidates will alight will be those with the largest population and the greatest media reach. That does not, I think, include Alaska B unless a former governor is a nominee.

2. Grassroots engagement: The same incentives that would, under a direct election system, propel all campaign resources into television advertising would virtually eliminate the devotion of any resources to grassroots and citizen involvement. Under the electoral college, there is a strong incentive -- at least in some states -- for campaigns, interests and others to organize groups on the grassroots level because some of those groups may be determinative in winning state electoral votes. It is, for instance, in the Republican Party's interest to organize Christian conservatives in the south to offset the Democratic Party's advantage among African-Americans in the region.

But were the nation as a whole the only base of votes, it is unlikely that any campaign would find it cost-effective to devote any resources to organization and involvement. That, in turn, would undermine the already declining base of political participation and American pluralism.

3. Pluralism: The success of American democracy has rested, in part, on achieving a balance between the will and desires of the majority of Americans and recognizing the rights and needs of various minorities. The electoral college serves to protect the latter in national politics.

To take the most obvious example, the number of farmers in the United States has dwindled so precipitously that nationally they are no longer a serious numerical factor in electoral outcomes -- despite the fact that most of the food we have on our tables is due to their individual and collective effort. In a system of direct elections, their concerns could easily be ignored. But because their votes are critical to winning electoral votes in several mid-western and western states, their needs must be addressed, their views must be solicited, their allegiances must be competed for.

The needs and aspirations of America's African-American population could easily be ignored in a direct election. They comprise perhaps 12 percent of the eligible electorate. But, in several Southern states, they account for nearly a majority of eligible citizens, and they comprise a significant and, perhaps on occasion, pivotal minorities in several northern states. The electoral college ensures, in national elections, that their views must be taken into account.

Union members, Christian fundamentalists, Latinos, fiscal conservatives, rural denizens are but a few of the significant minorities whose views and needs might be ignored if campaigns were totally nationalized.

American governance -- and the durability of its laws --derives its strength, not from the one-time expression of a national will, but from the coalescence of disparate interests into consensus. Direct election promotes a national will. The electoral college is a primary instrument for forging coalition and consensus.

4. Participation: The undermining of both grassroots activity and pluralism -- mobilization and sub-party level engagement cannot but have a negative effect on participation. So too will the aggregation of votes solely on a national level.

In this age of intense polling, where the movement of national numbers in the Presidential horse-race is tracked more intensively and surely more publicly than the heartbeat and blood pressure of a patient in intensive care, it will become increasingly difficult for the citizen to see how his vote will make much difference in a national electorate in which the margins of victory are usually in the millions of votes. It is much more likely that a citizen will see, in most jurisdictions (the District of Columbia excepted), his or her vote making a difference in the hundreds or thousands (as in less than 1,000 in Florida in 2000) which determine the allocation of electoral votes in individual states. In a sense the existence of an electoral college enhances both the perception and reality of electoral competition, where direct elections acts in precisely the opposite direction.

In recent elections, because of the intense focus of campaign activity B including massive grassroots campaigns, coalition building in those states and effective person-to-person get out the vote campaigns B turnout in the "battleground states" has substantially exceeded that of the other states that have been neglected or get only a televised advertising campaign.

5. Federalism: There were times, particularly in the 1960's, when those who supported segregation of the races tended to use the cover of state's rights to mask their desire to keep African-Americans in their place, when the structure of American federalism -- the diffusion of power between the national government and the states and localities -- was called into question.

More recently, however, there is a bi- or multi-partisan consensus that the idea of states and localities might be a good one -- that the administration of many programs is better handled at levels closer to the citizenry, that the states do serve as innovators and laboratories for useful, productive and, particularly in the cases of welfare reform and crime control, better public policy solutions than the national government can formulate.

In national politics, the instrumentality which forces consideration of federalism is the electoral college. By mandating the gathering of votes by states, it forces the engagement of state leaders and party organizations and elevates concern about state and local issues. We sacrifice that, I believe, to the detriment of the welfare of American democracy.

6. Recounts: While the situation may not occur often, but likely might have occurred both in the 1960 and 200 elections, a very close election B with disputes over the validity of votes and the bona fides of some casting ballots B might call for a recount as occurred in Florida in 2000 and might have occurred in Illinois and Texas in 1960 but for the grace, then, of Richard Nixon. But if such a recount were needed, one would need a recount of all the ballots cast in the nation, a process that would make the 37-days of recounts, contention and court decisions in Florida in 2000 seem like a pleasant walk in the park.

Supporters of direct elections usually cite polls to buttress their position -- polls which show a majority of Americans supporting direct elections. But I would venture to say that none of those polls raise the consequences of direct elections in the questions that are asked. Were the public asked not only whether they desired direct elections, but whether they desired direct elections even if it meant campaigns only run on television, erosion of grassroots activity and pluralism, declining voter participation and the erosion of federalism, the results might be very different.

Our founding fathers may not have had the best reasons for adopting an indirect system for the election of Presidents. But American democracy has survived, prospered, grown and strengthened under this means of electing our presidents and despite the fact that a handful of winners of a plurality of the national vote were not elevated to the presidency. It is not at all clear whether it would prosper equally in a direct election system.

The electoral college system of electing presidents is not without its flaws, the two most prominent of which are the limited number of states in which the presidency is contested and the profoundly inequitable procedure for decided elections in which neither candidate gets a majority of electoral votes.

Under the present electoral college system and with the exception of Maine and Nebraska, the winner of the popular vote in each state B whether the margin of victory is one vote or 1 million B gets all the electoral votes of that state. So, in states where, by demography and history, one party is assured of victory and the other of defeat, both parties abandon those states in favor of states where there is competition and the electoral votes at stake may determine the electoral college outcome. So, in many recent elections as few as 12 states have been in play. But the problem is not the electoral college per se, but the winner-take-all aspect of the current way electors are chosen.

If instead of either direct elections or winner-take-all, states were to adopt either a proportional allocation of electors based on the popular vote outcome or the Maine-Nebraska system whereby the winner of states overall popular vote gets two electors (the standard based on U.S. Senate representation which is identical in all states) and the balance are given the popular vote winner in each congressional district, there would be an incentive to campaign in virtually every state, to engage in grassroots and coalition building activity, to enhance turnout and, probably but not certainly, achieve an electoral college result closer to that of the national popular vote than under the present system.

The current method of resolving elections in which no candidate achieves a majority of the popular vote is an abomination. Under the present Constitutionally-mandated system, the House of Representatives with each state casting one vote will elect the new president. That, in turn, means that Wyoming with 350,000 eligible voters will have the same clout as California with 24 million. That needs to be radically changed.

States have the power to choose how their electors are selected so they can choose proportionality or the Maine-Nebraska system, but it will take a constitutional amendment to change the method of resolving inconclusive electoral college results. Both, however, are worth doing.

To return to where this testimony started, do we want democracy by plebescite or do we want a democracy which is more complex and more complete.

In sum, I hope you reject SB.39, maintain the modest advantage of small states like Alaska, Connecticut, Vermont and Wyoming, among others in the election of presidents, and keep (and later perhaps improve) a system that has served the nation well and preserved certain essential underpinnings of a healthy American democracy.

Thank you again.

AMERICAN LEGISLATIVE EXCHANGE COUNCIL

Testimony of Courtney O'Brien
Director of the Public Safety and Elections Task Force

On behalf of the American Legislative Exchange Council
Submitted to the Alaska Senate

February 23, 2011

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee:

Thank you for allowing the American Legislative Exchange Council (ALEC) to submit testimony regarding SB 39 and the current effort to replace the Electoral College with a National Popular Vote. My name is Courtney O'Brien, and I am the Director of the Public Safety and Elections Task Force at ALEC in Washington, D.C., which is the nation's largest, nonpartisan membership association of state legislators.

The idea of the National Popular Vote is a problematic one on several fronts. A National Popular Vote would undermine our historical government structure, jeopardize federalism, and would be less efficient than the current system.

The Founders created the Electoral College to ensure a balance is maintained between large and small states and among different interest groups in the country. This is one of the foundational principles of federalism. This system ensures an elected executive has support in different regions and among different groups, and thus protects minority interests.

Furthermore, SB 39 would have Alaska join the constitutionally questionable interstate compact known as the "Agreement among the States to Elect the President by National Popular Vote." This interstate compact is an end-run around the Constitution. The appropriate way to change the nation's voting system would be to amend the U.S. Constitution, but the inventors of this compact know this will be difficult because Congress has previously rejected more than 1,000 amendments to alter the Electoral College.

The Electoral College, not a National Popular Vote, has worked for America throughout our history and is clearly the best option moving forward. Our membership of almost 2,000 state legislators has passed a Resolution in Support of the Electoral College and a Resolution in Opposition to the National Popular Vote. Both are submitted with this testimony.

Mr. Chairman, I thank you for allowing me to submit testimony on this important matter. If you should have any questions, please feel free to contact me at 202-742-8504, or at cobrien@alec.org. Thank you.

AMERICAN LEGISLATIVE EXCHANGE COUNCIL

Resolution in Opposition to the National Popular Vote Interstate Compact

Summary

This resolution calls on the State of (insert state) to oppose the plan popularly known as National Popular Vote. The National Popular Vote scheme threatens freedom, representation, and the identity of the United States as a confederation of distinct governing bodies who act according to the wishes of the majority of their citizens. The National Popular Vote scheme would undermine state authority and give some states power over the voice of others. It would render minority groups voiceless and empower densely populated and ideologically homogenous regions as well as radical fringe groups.

Model Resolution

{Title, enacting clause, etc.}

WHEREAS, the plan known as National Popular Vote claims to create a national system for conducting presidential elections, yet fails to create national standards for ballot access; and

WHEREAS, the plan known as National Popular Vote claims to create a national system for conducting presidential elections, yet fails to create national standards for voter qualifications; and

WHEREAS, the plan known as National Popular Vote claims to create a national system for conducting presidential elections, yet fails to create national standards for requiring a recount of ballots within a state; and

WHEREAS, the plan known as National Popular Vote claims to create a national system for conducting presidential elections, yet fails to establish any rule to require a national recount where the national result is within a small margin even if the result in no individual state is within a margin that requires a recount in the state; and

WHEREAS, the plan known as National Popular Vote claims to create a national system for conducting presidential elections, yet fails to create national standards for recounting ballots; and

WHEREAS, the plan known as National Popular Vote claims to use an interstate compact rather than a constitutional amendment to enact a change that most Americans believe requires such an amendment and should at least be the subject of national discussion and deliberation; and

WHEREAS, the plan known as National Popular Vote has no majority requirement, but would allow a candidate with a plurality – however small – to become President.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that the State of (insert state) opposes the plan know as National Popular Vote or any other proposal to manipulate the Electoral College for the purpose of creating a national presidential vote through an interstate compact.

Adopted by the Criminal Justice Task Force at the Annual Meeting, August 2007. Approved by the ALEC Board of Directors September 2007.

AMERICAN LEGISLATIVE EXCHANGE COUNCIL

Resolution in Support of the Electoral College

Summary

This resolution calls on the State of (insert state) to recognize the current Electoral College system as the best way to elect the President of the United States. The current Electoral College system respects small states, rural areas, and the principle of federalism. Furthermore, this resolution calls on the State of (insert state) to defeat any multi-state compact legislation that would cause (insert state)'s electoral votes to be awarded based on the results of the national popular vote.

Model Resolution

{Title, enacting clause, etc.}

WHEREAS, the Founding Fathers rejected having the President of the United States elected by a national popular vote and instead chose the Electoral College system; and

WHEREAS, the current Electoral College system encourages presidential candidates to campaign in large metropolitan areas and also in rural areas and small states; and

WHEREAS, the current Electoral College system ensures that the winning Presidential candidate has support from multiple regions of the country; and

WHEREAS, the current Electoral College system respects the Founders' strong belief that individual states should have a vital role in electing the President of the United States; and

WHEREAS, the National Popular Vote Interstate Compact diminishes the importance of individual states in presidential elections; and

WHEREAS, the current Electoral College system respects the separation of and balance of power and authority between the States and the Federal government; and

WHEREAS, the current Electoral College system ensures that (insert state)'s electoral votes are awarded based on how the majority of the State's citizens vote;

WHEREAS, under the National Popular Vote Interstate Compact, (insert states)'s electoral votes could be awarded to a candidate that the majority of the State's citizens did not vote for; and

WHEREAS, the current Electoral College system is better suited to handle recounts because they happen at the state level, which is more manageable than if they were to happen at the national level as they might if the National Popular Vote Interstate Compact were adopted; and

WHEREAS, the current Electoral College system creates a needed balance between agrarian and industrial interests; and

WHEREAS, the current Electoral College system best preserves our two-party system and prevents the fracture of America's political structure; and

WHEREAS, the United States Congress has rejected over 1000 amendments to the Constitution to change the Electoral College, including amendments to change to a popular vote system; and

WHEREAS, the constitutionality of the National Popular Vote Interstate Compact is questionable because Article I, Section 10 of the Constitution states that no state, without the consent of Congress, may "enter into any Agreement or Compact with another State."

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that the State of (insert state) endorses its current Electoral College system as the best way to elect the President of the United States.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the State of (insert state) shall defeat any legislation that creates a multi-state compact for the purpose of dismantling its current Electoral College System.

Adopted by the Criminal Justice Task Force at the Annual Meeting, August 2007. Approved by the ALEC Board of Directors September 2007.

Senator French:

I am sorry that I can neither be in attendance nor call in to speak to the Judiciary Committee about S B 39 on Wednesday, February 23rd at 1:30 PM. My patient commitments preclude this. I ask your indulgence to consider my written testimony.

The issue of the national popular vote is of sufficient importance and value to me to warrant my written message to you about SB 39 that provides for election of the President and Vice-President of the United States by a national popular vote.

As you know, over our history in America the President and Vice-President have been elected in a variety of ways. This makes for fascinating reading! These election modalities have included election by state governors, by Congress, by state legislatures, by electors, and by national popular vote. The Constitutional Convention never agreed on a method of choosing the President and Vice-President. The matter was turned over to each of the states. This is an important concept.

The US Constitution states in Article II, Section 1, Clause 2 that, "Each state shall appoint, in such Manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a Number of Electors, equal to the whole Numbers of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress..."

Our US Constitution permits that Alaska can decide how we wish to elect the President and Vice-President of the United States. Is the current method adequate to represent that each vote in Alaska is equal for this critical selection?

The Electoral College is in place and needs to continue to be an integral part of our electoral process. What we need to do is to develop a renewal of the imperative that the President and Vice-President be elected by a single vote of every voting citizen of America. The current system does not provide this and each vote in Alaska is not equal to all other votes.

The interstate compact provisions of S B 39 provides for a mechanism to elect the President and Vice-President by national popular vote – just as we elect our Assembly Members, School Board Members, Mayors, State and Congressional senators and representatives, and Governors. Why would we want not to do this?

I respectfully ask that you consider and vote affirmatively for S B 39. This legislation can move our State and our Country toward "Participatory Democracy" wherein our single and individual votes genuinely count to elect our President and Vice-President.

There is much to be learned in an open and reasoned discussion on this issue. Please continue with your discussions, considerations and debates on this issue. The election of the President and Vice-President is profoundly important and must become the "will of the people". This simply means that "each vote is equal" and must count.

Please let me know if I can answer questions or provide additional information.

The electoral college is an anachronism. The one person, one vote principle makes it illogical. The perceived political advantage for small-population states like ours is outweighed by our duty for equality for all Americans in choosing a President. Please share this with the members of your committee.

Greetings Senator French,

I am an Alaskan resident and registered voter, who would like to commend and support you in any way that I can with regards to your sponsorship of the Senate Bill 39, US Presidential Election Compact Bill.

I have read the bill and fully understand the effects this bill would have on the residents of Alaska. The opportunity for Alaska to join a compact made up of states that have pledged to cast their electoral votes in favor of the national popular vote winner is a commendable step towards making this great state a presence as much as the 17 states that are focused on at this time. In other words, to me, this bill will give way to a fair and balanced system to encourage and persuade Candidates to focus on all the people; rather than an esoteric group that may have all the power.

I feel this bill is a step into a higher rank of democracy and must be carried with the peoples voice as far as it can reach. I can not convey my passion for your support in this bill.

Having met you personally I feel confident in your endorsement of this bill and wish you all the luck in your pursuit of same.

With Best regards, I am

Senator French and Members of the Senate Judiciary Committee:

I would like to take this opportunity to support SB 39 - U.S. Presidential Election Compact. As I'm sure you're aware there have been a variety of efforts to reform the U.S. presidential election process in order to address the growing unfairness to states (specifically low population and/or geographically distant states) resulting from pre and post Primary presidential campaign strategies.

These concerns have long led critics to debate the ongoing relevance of the Electoral College. While I recognize that this bill does not ultimately address that larger issue, it does provide a workable alternative to increase parity among states during a presidential campaign.

There are a host of reasons why this legislation is necessary and timely, and I'm certain the committee will have the opportunity to hear from more eloquent speakers with greater expertise than I, so I won't belabor my comments with excessive information you're likely to otherwise be provided.

I appreciate the opportunity to comment on this important legislation.

Re: Senate Bill 39
ACLU Statement of Support

Chair French, Vice-Chair Wielechowski:

Thank you for the opportunity to submit written testimony in support of Senate Bill 39, the National Popular Vote Compact.

As you know, the American Civil Liberties Union of Alaska represents thousands of members and activists throughout the state who seek to preserve and expand individual freedoms and civil liberties guaranteed under the United States and Alaska Constitutions. In that regard, we would like to advise the Committee of our SUPPORT of SB 39, and we thank Senator French for introducing this Bill.

National Popular Vote Compact

The National Popular Vote compact provides that state election officials in all states participating in the plan would award their Electoral College votes to the presidential candidate who receives the largest number of popular votes in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. This compact would not go into effect until enacted by states collectively possessing a majority of the electoral vote – 270 of the 538 electoral votes.

Today, all states choose their Electors by direct statewide election (except Maine and Nebraska, which select two Electors by a statewide popular vote and the remainder by the popular vote in each Congressional district).

Under the National Popular Vote compact, the Electors would be selected based on a nationwide popular vote.

The National Popular Vote Furthers Core Principles of Democracy

Ensuring the Candidate with the Most Votes Wins. The compact would eliminate the possibility that a candidate who received the most popular votes, but did not receive the requisite 270 Electoral College votes needed to win, could lose the election.

This has happened four times in American history: in 1824 (Adams-Jackson), 1876 (Hayes-Tilden), 1888 (Harrison-Cleveland), and 2000 (Bush-Gore).

Furthering the Principle of One Person, One Vote. By ensuring that each vote cast has an equal impact on the outcome of the Presidential Election, National Popular Vote gives each citizen equal power in the election, regardless of the state in which the voter lives. Instead of voters in a few swing states deciding the outcome, candidates will need to speak to – and listen to – all citizens throughout the country equally.

National Popular Vote Compact is Constitutional

Article II, Section 1 of the Constitution provides that: "Each State shall appoint, in such Manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a Number of Electors . . . ." Thus, the states have inherent power to select their Electors as they see fit, provided that some other provision of the Constitution, such as the Fourteenth or Fifteenth Amendments, is not violated.

The Supreme Court has held that states have exclusive power over the appointment and mode of appointment of electors under the Constitution. Therefore, exercising this state power in no way infringes on any area of supremacy of the United States, as there is no federal power to award electoral votes.

Conclusion

As of November 2009, five states had enacted the National Popular Vote compact: Hawaii, Illinois, Maryland, New Jersey, and Washington. That amounts to 61 (23%) of the 270 electoral votes needed to activate the compact.

The ACLU of Alaska, along with the National ACLU and its more than 500,000 members, support our State joining this group and adding the voices of Alaskans to those Americans who believe that our President should be elected by all Americans.

Thank you again for permitting us to share our support for SB 39. Please feel free to contact the undersigned should you require any additional information.

Dear Senator Thomas:

During the March 10th Senate Finance Committee hearing on SB 58 you asked for the percentage of Anchorage Child in Need of Aid cases that have had a contested issue and are now before a superior court judge rather than a standing master. There are currently 686 active CINA cases in the Anchorage Superior Court, 56 percent, or 388 cases, are being handled by a superior court judge and not a master.

I hope this answers your question; please let me know if you would like any additional information.

Dear Senator Hoffman:

During the Senate Finance Committee hearing on SB 58 on Thursday, March 10th you asked for a three-year average of case filings per judge in both the superior and district courts for each court location. The attached spreadsheet shows the cases per judge for each of the last three fiscal years and a three-year average for each court location and for both superior and district courts. [1]

I hope this answers your questions. Please let me know if you would like additional information.

DETAILED SUMMARY
SB 58

The Alaska Supreme Court is asking for two new superior court judges in Anchorage. The judges will be assigned to civil cases.

The additional judges are needed, in part, because Anchorage superior court judges have the highest caseloads in the state.[1] But also, they are needed because of the amount of work that goes into two categories of cases that has increased significantly over the past few years.

CINA CASES

The first of those case-types is Child in Need of Aid cases. The increased amount of time Anchorage judges are spending on CINA cases is the result of the court system changing the way it handles CINA cases so that families are better served.

Prior CINA practice was to have standing masters preside over all phases of a case with the exception of contested hearings. If a hearing was contested it would be assigned to a superior court judge who would resolve the contested issue and then return the case to the standing master. Although that practice saved superior court time, it led to other problems.

A family was shuffled back and forth between the master and the superior court judge and the judge who made the final decisions did not know the family very well.

The new practice begins the same as the old; a CINA case starts with a master until there is a contested issue. However, once that occurs, the case is permanently assigned to a superior court judge; it does not return to the master.

Having a single judge permanently assigned to the case is a better model in a number of ways, one of which is that it eliminates shuffling the family back and forth between a standing master and the judge.

Another is that the superior court judge with the final decision-making authority in all CINA cases (the standing master makes recommendations to the superior court judge who makes the final decisions) has a much better understanding of the case.

The judge knows the family and the family knows the judge. As social workers and lawyers know, the better you know the family the more details you learn about the issues that brought them into the CINA system.

Having a single judge for the life of the case significantly improves the whole dynamic of the case, leads to better decisions and is a more humane way to treat families. But, it takes more judicial time.

Another important change that takes more judicial time but benefits families is the introduction of more status hearings.

Families will receive a list of things that they need to do in order to get their children back. They must accomplish those things by a certain date. However, the list of things they need to accomplish can be long and overwhelming.

They may have to:

- Get an evaluation and treatment for substance abuse
- Enroll in parenting classes and or anger management classes
- Find safe and sober housing
- Separate from an abusive partner who is endangering the kids
- Find employment

More and more often judges are trying to break down the lists into manageable segments. Judges schedule frequent status hearings to help keep the families on track and focused so that they are successful.

As legislators you know better than most that deadlines drive behavior. (Things get pretty busy around here just prior to adjournment.) This is equally true for those in court. A court hearing in six months does not impart the same sense of urgency as a hearing in two weeks.

The CINA statutes encourage reunification, and we believe that frequent status hearings increase the likelihood of that result.

But this approach takes more judicial time.

UNREPRESENTED LITIGANTS

In addition to CINA cases, another prime driver behind the current workload is the prevalence of unrepresented litigants in domestic relations cases.

For centuries the courts have been the sole domain of attorneys. That is still largely true, but our society no longer considers this as acceptable.

Although we do not have historical statistics that track these cases, Alaska judges, like judges from across the country, have seen a significant increase in unrepresented litigants over the past several years.

What we know from current data is that when first filed about 33% of the cases have attorneys for both parties, 29% have an attorney for only one party and in 38% of the cases neither party has an attorney. If the only issue is custody (in cases where an unmarried couple have a child), then in 83% of the cases at least one party will be without counsel.

The percentage of unrepresented litigants increases significantly once litigants are filing motions after the initial decree is entered. Most of these post-decree motions relate to child custody disputes.

Judges cite a list of time-consuming challenges that arise when counsel is absent from one side or both sides.

- arguments unrelated to the relevant legal issues, and
- delay stemming from the failure to submit needed information.
- Frequent motion practice,

Although it is difficult to quantify poor presentations and preparation, we do tract motions. Those tell a good part of the story. For example, from FY 2007 through FY 2010 we saw a 21.5% increase in domestic relations cases and a 34% increase in motions filed in those cases. And the first half of FY 11 shows another 5.5% increase in cases and another 23% increase in motions. The motions are largely filed by unrepresented litigants.

However, even though these litigants take more time, their cases are as important as those where the parties have lawyers and the judiciary is committed to ensuring that they too can meaningfully access the court.

But this approach does mean more work for judges.

ALTERNATIVES

Recognizing, however, that adding new judges is the most expensive way to address workload problems, the court system is developing other ways to deal with these cases.

In his State of the Judiciary address, Chief Justice Carpeneti talked about several of our current projects to better handle family law cases with unrepresented litigants.

He talked about putting instructional videos on the Internet, and a program that uses volunteer attorneys to help in the early settlement of family law cases. He noted that these settlement efforts have been successful a remarkable 70% of the time.

Our Child Custody and Visitation Mediation Program has been both popular and successful as has our use of retired judges to give unrepresented parties a reality check on the nature of their case and the likely outcome.

The court system is using these efforts and others to better manage these cases. And better management means two things (1) the litigants better served with a process that is more appropriate for their case; and (2) more efficient use of judicial resources.

We are asking for two new judges for the Anchorage civil bench; but they could use three and they would still have the highest caseloads in the state. However, it is our plan to use and further develop the alternatives discussed by the Chief Justice to not only make up the one-judge difference, but to help reduce the need for additional civil judge requests in the future.

But today, two new judges are needed because, together, the high caseload in Anchorage and the increased work on CINA cases and family law cases with unrepresented litigants has led to a workload that is not sustainable.

Thank you for hearing this bill. I would be happy to try and answer any questions you may have.

SB 58 Testimony Bullet Points

- Busiest judges (687 cases per judge vs. next busiest at 570 cases per judge)
- Unsustainable workloads
- Two reasons

  1. CINA (Child in Need of Aid cases)

  2. Unrepresented litigants

Child in Need ot Aid cases

- Former practice

  Shuffling between standing master and superior court judge

- Current practice

  One contested issue and it stays forever with judge

  More statue hearings to help families be successful and to reunite parents with their children

- CINA cases are not a race to terminate parental rights. The judges need to spend more of the time available working to reunify families, not tear them apart.

Unrepresented Litigants

- Increasing number of unrepresented litigants (66% of family law cases have at least one unrepresented party and that percentage increases as the cases proceed through the process)
- These cases take extra time because

Lots of motions
Trouble focusing on the legally relevant issues
Delays stemming from incomplete information (especially financial information)

- These cases are just as important as cases where counsel is present

Alternatives

- Using staff to better manage cases
- Using staff to calculate child support
- Using judges to help settle family law cases
- Use of volunteer attorneys and mediators

Conclusion

- Very busy judges with high caseloads
- Very important cases involved
- Working hard to find alternatives
- Even with those alternatives, however, we need these additional judges.

Dear Senator McGuire:

In both the Senate Judiciary Committee and the Senate Finance Committee hearings on SB 58 you expressed concern about the limited number of women judges in Alaska, particularly the limited number of women superior court judges. In response to your concerns Larry Cohn (Executive Director, Alaska Judicial Council) provided you with a brief history of the number of women who apply for judgeships and the number of women the Council forwards to the governor for possible appointment. In order to supplement the information provided by Mr. Cohn I am attaching a list of all the women judges who are currently serving in Alaska. Confirming your concerns, of the 40 superior court judges in Alaska, only 5 are women.

I included magistrates in my list because, though they are hired directly by the court system and not part of the judicial selection process that goes through the Council and the governor, they are judges and hear thousands of cases each year.

Sincerely,

Doug Wooliver

The Honorable Hollis French
Chair, Senate Judiciary Committee
Alaska State Legislature
State Capitol
Juneau, Alaska 99801-1182

Dear Senator French:

The Alaska Supreme Court respectfully requests that the Senate Judiciary Committee schedule SB 58 for a committee hearing. The bill creates two new superior court judge positions in Anchorage. The judges will handle civil cases.

Additional judges are needed because Anchorage superior court judges are the busiest in the state and a combination of more time being devoted to Child in Need of Aid cases and an ever-increasing number of unrepresented litigants has created a workload that is unsustainable.

Adding two new judges will not completely solve this problem, but it will provide some relief as the court works to develop alternative ways to manage the workload.

A fiscal note and sponsor statement are attached. Thank you for considering this request.

Sincerely,

Sponsor Statement
SB 58

The Alaska Supreme Court is asking for two new superior court judges in Anchorage. The judges will be assigned to civil cases.

Additional judges are needed because Anchorage superior court judges have the highest caseloads in the state and a combination of devoting more time to Child in Need of Aid (CINA) cases and an ever-increasing number of domestic relations cases where the parties choose to litigate their case without the assistance of attorneys has created a workload that is unsustainable.

Although some of the additional work comes from an increase in case filings, much is the result of improved practices that better meet the needs of those who come to court. This is particularly true with CINA cases.

One change that has impacted workload involves how CINA cases are assigned to judges. Prior practice was to have standing masters (specialists who hear cases and make recommendations to judges) preside over all phases of a case with the exception of contested hearings. If a hearing was contested it would be assigned to an available superior court judge who would resolve the contested issue and then return the case to the standing master. Although that practice saved superior court time, it led to other problems as the family was shuffled back and forth between judges.

The new practice begins the same as the old; a CINA case starts with a master until there is a contested issue. However, once that occurs the case is permanently assigned to a superior court judge; it does not return to the master. This eliminates the judge-shuffling and allows the judge and the family to get to know each other. All parties agree that familiarity improves both the process and the outcome for the families. However, this model results in superior court judges spending more of their time on these cases.

In addition to CINA cases, another prime driver behind the current workload is the prevalence of unrepresented litigants in domestic relations cases. Although we do not have historical statistics that track these cases, Alaska judges, like judges from across the country, have seen a significant increase over the past several years.

Judges cite a list of time-consuming challenges that arise when counsel is absent from one side or both sides. Frequent motion practice, arguments unrelated to the relevant legal issues, delays stemming from the failure to submit needed information and judicial time spent calculating child support awards are some of those challenges. However, even though these litigants take more time, their cases are as important as those where the parties have lawyers and the judiciary is committed to ensuring that they too can meaningfully access the court.

Adding two new judges will not significantly reduce the workload of the Anchorage superior court (Anchorage superior court judges will still be the busiest superior court judges in the state), but it will provide some relief as the court works to develop alternative ways to manage that workload. Thank you for considering this request.

Analysis

This bill adds two new civil judges in Anchorage. Currently a significant portion of cases before the Anchorage judges are CINA (child in need of aid) cases. The addition of two new judges would increase the capacity of the court system to handle CINA cases, but would require an additional attorney in the Anchorage Child Protection Section to utilize the improved capacity to reduce delays inherent in the current system. To the extent the judges increase the capacity of the court system to process criminal cases, the criminal division of the department would similarly experience increased workloads. The Child Protection Section would need at least 1 FTE attorney position and a .5 support position to meet the increased demand on time and resources.

Analysis

This bill will create two new Superior Court judge positions in the Third Judicial District. The agency has been advised that these two judges will be handling Anchorage Child in Need of Aid (CINA) matters. Currently, there are ten Anchorage Superior Court judges handling CINA matters. The addition of two new Superior Court judges will considerably increase the number of CINA cases heard on a weekly basis.

The Office of Public Advocacy currently has five full time staff attorneys in Anchorage who represent parents in CINA matters. These attorneys are within a staff section with a total of eight attorneys and two support staff (one law office assistant and one paralegal). The addition of two more judges will greatly increase the demands on these attorneys and staff to prepare for and appear in court for CINA matters. In order to adequately address the increased demands on the agency, the agency will need one additional attorney and one additional law office assistant.

Analysis

This bill provides for two new superior court judges in Anchorage. These positions are expected to handle a civil caseload of Child in Need of Aid (CINA) matters. The additional judicial positions are expected to increase weekly court room appearances and will increase the workload associated with all civil cases as the Agency attempts to prepare its cases in a timely manner to meet the demand of increased court hearings.

The civil division has six attorneys who are required to appear before the current ten superior court judges handling CINA matters. The Agency anticipates the need for a single attorney position in the civil division with the additional support of a law office assistant to meet the anticipated workload increase.

Analysis

This bill amends AS 22.10.120 by increasing superior court judges by two to a new total of 42. The new positions are to be located in Anchorage to handle Child in Need of Aid (CINA) cases and domestic relations cases. It is the department's understanding is that there will be an additional two court rooms added in Anchorage.

This legislation will cause a significant increase in the workload and the demands of the departments Court Service Officers (CSO). In order to adequately address the increased demand for CSO, the department will need one additional CSO.

MEMORANDUM February 17, 2011

SUBJECT: Sectional Summary of the 2011 Revisor's Bill
(CSSB 61(STA) - Work Order No. 27-LS0152\I)

TO: Senator Hollis French
Chair of the Senate Judiciary Committee
Attn: Cindy Smith

FROM: Kathryn L. Kurtz KK
Assistant Revisor

The following is a sectional summary of the 2011 revisor's bill. The bill is prepared under AS 01.05.036, which provides, in part, that the revisor of statutes

> . . . shall prepare for submission to the legislature legislation for the correction or removal of the deficiencies, conflicts, or obsolete provisions, or to otherwise improve the form or substance of any portion of the statute law of this state.

To assist the reader in understanding the bill, I have summarized the contents by listing sections that have similar purposes or effects.

Sections that delete, repeal, or update obsolete provisions: Sections 1, 3 - 4, 10 - 12, 15, 17 -19, 36 - 37, 41, and 45 amend provisions that have become obsolete.

Sections that correct errors or oversights: Sections 5, 13, 16, and 20 - 22 correct errors or oversights.

Sections that improve the form or substance of the law: Sections 2, 6 - 9, 14, 23 - 35, 38 - 40, and 42 - 44 propose amendments to improve the form or substance of the statutory law of Alaska.

Section 1. Changes a reference in AS 03.22.050 from "United States Soil Conservation Service" to "United States Department of Agriculture Natural Resources Conservation Service" to reflect the renaming of the service in 1994.

Section 2. Defines "department" for purposes of AS 08.02 as the Department of Commerce, Community, and Economic Development (DCCED). The term "department" is used but not defined in AS 08.02.010 and 08.02.050.

In AS 08.02.010, the effect of adding the definition will be to clarify that it is DCCED and not some other department that is responsible for enforcing compliance with professional designation requirements outlined in that section if there is a violation by a person who is not regulated by a board. Currently, only three of the affected professional groups are not regulated by boards: acupuncturists (AS 08.06), audiologists and speech pathologists (AS 08.11), and dietitians and nutritionists (AS 08.38). Chapters AS 08.06, AS 08.11, and AS 08.38 each define "department" as DCCED, so the addition of the definition in AS 08.02 is consistent with existing law.

For AS 08.02.050, the legislature's intent was explicit in the title of the Act enacting the section: "Authorizing the Department of Community and Economic Development to issue permits to certain agencies. . . ." Ch. 62, SLA 2002 (emphasis added).

Section 3. Changes two references to the "American Standards Association" in AS 08.40.120 to "American National Standards Institute" to reflect the current name of that organization.

Section 4. Amends AS 08.42.060(a) to change a reference to "Conference of Funeral Services Examining Boards" to "International Conference of Funeral Service Examining Boards" to reflect the change in that organization's name.

Section 5. Redesignates the last clause of AS 08.86.180(b)(4) as paragraph (b)(5), to correct an error in ch. 26, SLA 2010 (which showed two paragraphs designated (4), that were then combined into one editorially).

Section 6. Amends AS 09.20.050(a) in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 7. Amends AS 09.20.050(c) in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 8. Amends AS 09.20.080(b) in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 9. Changes "math" to "mathematics" in AS 14.07.020(a)(16)(B) to conform to the usage found elsewhere in the Alaska Statutes.

Section 10. Removes the requirement in AS 14.40.809(b) that the University of Alaska Board of Regents enter into a reciprocal agreement with Sheldon Jackson College. Sheldon Jackson College closed in 2007. Also changes "to annually report" to "to report annually" to remove the split infinitive.

Section 11. Amends AS 14.42.015(a) to remove Sheldon Jackson College from the selection process for the member of the Alaska Commission on Postsecondary Education representing private higher education. Sheldon Jackson College closed in 2007.

Section 12. Amends AS 14.42.015(d) to remove Sheldon Jackson College students from the selection process for the postsecondary student member of the Alaska Commission on Postsecondary Education. Sheldon Jackson College closed in 2007.

Section 13. Corrects a typographical error in Executive Order 114 in a cross-reference in AS 16.20.070. Until Executive Order 114, AS 16.20.070 correctly referred to AS 16.20.050 and 16.20.060, and not to AS 16.05.060.

Section 14. Amends AS 18.56.855(j) in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 15. Deletes obsolete date reference in AS 21.09.210(e).

Section 16. Corrects an erroneous paragraph reference in AS 21.22.065(j)(2). This should have been changed in 1992 when paragraphs were added to AS 21.22.220 by ch. 67, SLA 1992.

Section 17. Deletes reference in AS 21.34.900(6) to AS 21.34.210, which has been repealed. This corrects an error in ch. 67, SLA 1992 (which repealed and reenacted AS 21.34.900(6) and repealed AS 21.34.210).

Section 18. Deletes obsolete date reference in AS 21.39.040(k)(2).

Section 19. Deletes obsolete date reference in AS 21.40.010.

Section 20. Changes a reference in AS 21.45.300(k) from "(1) of this section" to "(l) of this section" to correct an error in ch. 28, SLA 1984. Subsections in the Alaska Statutes are lettered, not numbered.

Section 21. Changes a reference in AS 21.45.300(m) from "(3) of this paragraph" to "(3) of this subsection" to correct an error in ch. 28, SLA 1984. In the Alaska Statutes, paragraphs are numbered subparts of lettered subsections. Also changes "shall not" to "may not" to conform to the drafting manual's style for imposing a prohibition.

Section 22. Deletes a reference in AS 21.96.070(f) to AS 14.03.126, which has been repealed, and inserts instead the text of the definition from former AS 14.03.126.

Section 23. Amends AS 22.15.100(10) in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 24. Amends AS 22.15.250 in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 25. Amends AS 22.20.037(a) in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 26. Amends AS 22.20.037(c) in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 27. Amends AS 22.20.037(d) in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 28. Amends AS 22.20.300 in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 29. Amends AS 22.20.310 in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 30. Amends AS 22.20.320 in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 31. Amends AS 22.20.430 in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 32. Amends AS 22.25.090(f) in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 33. Amends AS 24.08.330(a) in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 34. Amends AS 33.05.030(b) in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 35 Amends AS 36.30.030 in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 36. Changes a reference in AS 38.07.010 from "United States Soil Conservation Service" to "United States Department of Agriculture Natural Resources Conservation Service" to reflect the renaming of the service in 1994.

Section 37. Changes a reference in AS 38.07.050 from "United States Soil Conservation Service" to "United States Department of Agriculture Natural Resources Conservation Service" to reflect the renaming of the service in 1994.

Section 38. Changes "cropped" to "crop" in AS 38.07.060, a definitions section, to match the usage in AS 38.07.020(b). The word "cropped" is not used in the chapter to which the definitions apply.

Section 39. Amends AS 39.35.680(22) in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 40. Amends AS 40.25.123(c) in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 41. Deletes obsolete date reference in AS 42.04.080(b).

Section 42. Changes a reference in AS 42.06.430(7)(A) from "49 U.S.C. 1-1240 (Interstate Commerce Act)" to "Interstate Commerce Act." The enacting law, sec. 5, ch. 6, FSSLA 1973, simply referred to "pipelines subject to the Interstate Commerce Act or the Natural Gas Act", without offering specific numbered citations to federal statutes. The specific U.S.C. references were apparently added editorially. Since then, the U.S.C. sections that comprised the Interstate Commerce Act have been revised, renumbered, and in some cases, repealed, so the spanned reference to the previous location of those sections is no longer useful.

Section 43. Amends AS 43.55.023(a)(2) to insert the word "and" between subparagraphs (A) and (B). This change is suggested at the request of the Department of Law. Although "and" can be inferred from the structure and content of the paragraph, and "or" would not make sense in this context, adding the word "and" is consistent with usage elsewhere in the section (for example, in subsection (l)(2)) and is intended to facilitate ease of use.

Section 44. Amends AS 44.37.025(c) in an effort to create uniformity among statutory references to the administrative director of the Alaska Court System.

Section 45. Amends a reference to federal law in AS 45.68.120(a). The cite to 26 U.S.C. 6033(a)(2)(A) was correct when enacted. However, that paragraph was renumbered in 2006 as 26 U.S.C. 6033(a)(3)(A). The text of the provision did not change.

Section 46. Provides an immediate effective date.

Dear Senator French:

The Department of Law would appreciate scheduling of the above bill for a hearing in your committee, at your earliest convenience. The bill makes technical improvements in Alaska law.

We have reviewed the bill and have found no legal concerns.

SPONSOR STATEMENT for Senate Bill 62

"An Act allowing appropriations to the civil legal services fund from court filing fees."

This bill is designed to help fund civil legal services for low-income Alaskans. Senate Bill 62 will provide a mechanism for funding the Alaska Legal Services Corporation (ALSC), by allowing the legislature to appropriate up to 25 percent of filing fees paid to the Alaska Court System during the previous fiscal year into the Civil Legal Services Fund.

The Alaska Legal Services Corporation was established in 1966 to address the civil legal aid needs of low-income Alaskans. ALSC is not a state agency, but is instead a nonprofit charitable 501(c)(3) whose funding comes from a variety of state, federal, and private sources. Over the last several years ALSC funding has dwindled, from $4.2 million as of 1987 to less than $3.1 million as of 2010, while it struggles to serve a growing number of poverty-level applicants. Appropriations from the State of Alaska that were once as high as $1.2 million in FY84 are currently at $350,000. Senate Bill 62 aims to correct this lack of funding and helps ensure civil legal representation for Alaska's most needy population.

Alaska Legal Services Corporation

Serving Alaska Communities and Families for over 40 years

Who we are:

- Alaska Legal Services Corporation (ALSC) is a private, non-profit law firm that provides free legal services to seniors and low-income Alaskans.

Our Mission:

- To provide meaningful access to justice in resolving civil legal problems for low-income clients, thus promoting family stability and reducing the legal consequences of poverty.

Who We Serve:

- Alaskans below 125% of the Alaska poverty ceiling
- Seniors --- over 600 per year
- Children --- nearly 1/2 of those assisted have children in their households
- Domestic Violence Victims --- over 400 cases per year
- Rural residents --- 38% of all clients served resided in rural communities
- Veterans---preventing homelessness and assuring access to healthcare

Community Need:

- An estimated 88,000 Alaskans live below the poverty ceiling. At present, there is only one ALSC attorney for every 4,000 Alaskans living in poverty.
- In 2009, ALSC received over 3,400 inquiries and 2,834 applications for legal help.
- We turned away over 500 families that could have been helped if we had the resources.
- Many more did not apply, knowing our resource limitations.

Providing Statewide Access To Justice With Offices In:

Anchorage	Bethel	Dillingham	Fairbanks	Juneau
Kenai	Ketchikan	Kotzebue	Nome	Palmer

Strong Local Support:

- Nearly all of our offices enjoy local financial support. Each office sets its own case acceptance priorities based on local needs.

Our Services:

Legal Advice and Counseling	Court Representation	Advocacy
Community Legal Clinics	On-line Self-Help	Pro Bono program

Alaska Legal Services Corporation

Access to Justice for Alaskans in Need

Alaska Legal Services Corporation

Serving Victims of Domestic Violence

Who we are:

- ALSC is a non-profit civil legal aid agency, providing free legal services to Alaska's poor. We are by far the largest provider of legal services to domestic violence victims in Alaska. We served over 400 families experiencing domestic violence last year alone. Children were present in 80% of these households.
- ALSC has provided legal assistance, including representation to domestic violence victims, for over 40 years, with a particular emphasis on service delivery in Alaska's rural areas.

Community need:

- In 2009, ALSC saw a 15% increase in requests for assistance from victims of abuse. Our ability to help is limited by available resources, forcing us to turn away over 500 families each year.
- The Governor's initiative funds stronger criminal efforts but relies on pro bono efforts to increase civil representation. The lack of dedicated funding for increased civil representation is a weak link in this initiative.

What we do:

- ALSC attorneys provide advice and/or representation aimed at increasing victims' safety and long term stability by keeping or securing housing, obtaining orders of protection and assisting with income maintenance issues such as securing child support and public benefits.

Why we do what we do:

- Alaska's rates of domestic violence and sexual assault are among the highest in the nation. A 2003 study seeking to explain a decline in domestic violence found the provision of civil legal services to victims significantly lowers the incidence of abuse and was the only service designed to help victims having this impact.
- Domestic Violence is the number one precursor to child abuse and neglect. Services to victims also protect children.
- Legal services address practical matters that make leaving abusive relationships a realistic alternative.

Dear Senator McGuire,

The Governor's Council on Disabilities and Special Education supports Senate Bill 62, "An Act allowing appropriations to the civil legal services fund from court filing fees." As we understand it, this bill will provide a funding mechanism for the Alaska Legal Services Corporation. ALSC is an important entity in so much as they provide legal representation for low income Alaskans, many of whom are persons with disabilities.

The Council is particularly supportive of the work of the Alaska Legal Services Corporation around the issue of domestic violence victims, especially in light of alarming statistics around victimization of persons with disabilities. For instance, reports and studies show:

- Persons with a disability had an age-adjusted rate of rape or sexual assault that was more than twice the rate for persons without a disability (2007 Bureau of Justice Report, Crime Against Persons with Disabilities)
- Persons with a cognitive functioning disability had a higher risk of violent victimization than persons with any other type of disability (2007 Justice Report
- 85% of women with disabilities will experience domestic violence (Feuetstein, 1997)
- More than 90% of people with developmental disabilities will experience physical or sexual abuse at some point in their lives (Valenti-Hein &Schwartz, 1995)
- 97-99% of abusers are known and trusted by the victim who has developmental disabilities (Baladerian, 1991)

While these statistics are alarming, the reality is the Alaska Legal Services Corporation is unable to keep pace with its growing caseload without additional financial support. In 2009 they received over 3,400 inquiries and 2,834 applications for legal help, yet had to turn away over 500 families for lack of resources. SB 62 provides an effective and reasonable approach to funding this severely underfunded agency. Please support the passage of SB62.

Sincerely,

Millie Ryan e/s

Subject: SB 62

Good morning Cindy. I will be in Anchorage on Monday and will not be able to attend the Judiciary hearing on SB 62. I though I would explain why we have a zero fiscal note on the bill. All filing fees collected by the court system (and all other monies collected by the court as well) are deposited in the state's general fund and are not retained by or otherwise earmarked for the court. They are just general fund dollars like any other and if the legislature elects to identify some percentage of them for a particular purpose then they are allocating money that does not "belong" to us. This is similar to the way youth courts are now funded with a percentage of court fines collected. Again, those are just general fund dollars that are not in some way "ours." Hope this helps. Doug

Re: SB 62 – Civil Legal Services Fund

Dear Senator McGuire,

On behalf of the Alaska Mental Health Board and Advisory Board on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse, I would like to express our appreciation of your support for legal services for Alaska's indigent and vulnerable citizens. For individuals experiencing mental health and substance use disorders, the non-profit public interest firms are often the only source of legal assistance. Ensuring these firms' ability to serve their clients ensures that Alaskans with disabilities and families affected by substance abuse are able to access the legal system when in need.

Alaska Legal Services, the Disability Law Center, and the Alaska Network on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault all provide services imperative to the health and safety of vulnerable Alaskans. Without the high quality services offered by their lawyers, paralegals, advocates and staff, many seniors, victims of violence and people experiencing disabilities would be left alone and without recourse when faced with unfair or unjust treatment.

The Boards' appreciate your advocacy on behalf of these agencies, but more importantly, on behalf of their clients and the entire justice system in Alaska.

Sincerely,

J. Kate Burkhart
Executive Director

The TRUST

The Alaska Mental Health Trust Authority

February 7, 2011

Senator Lesil McGuire
State Capitol room 125
Juneau, AK 99801

Dear Senator McGuire,

The Alaska Mental Health Trust Authority is pleased to support SB62: "An Act allowing appropriations to the civil legal services fund from court filing fees." This bill will assist Alaska Legal Services in providing legal representation for low income Alaskans, a great number of which are beneficiaries of The Trust.

Legal representation for Trust beneficiaries is a critical need given the high percentage of beneficiaries who end up in the Correctional system (estimated 42% of the total correctional population), who are in danger of eviction from their homes without adequate legal representation, and who experience domestic violence. In 2009, Alaska Legal Services saw an increase of 15% in requests for assistance from victims of abuse. It is estimated that 40% of those served by Alaska Legal Services are Trust beneficiaries.

This bill will assist low-income members of all Trust beneficiary groups statewide who have critical legal needs affecting their safety, stability and self-sufficiency. This bill will provide legal assistance that will address factors such as safety, economic stability and self-sufficiency, all of which directly impact beneficiaries' ability to keep and maintain suitable housing. Several studies have documented the connection between homelessness and domestic violence. Legal assistance to beneficiaries facing abuse could obtain protective orders to stop the violence as well as the legal right to residence.

Alaska Legal Services is the only statewide comprehensive civil legal services provider. At present, there is only one ALSC attorney for every 4,000 Alaskans living in poverty. There is an overwhelming need throughout the state for the services provided by Alaska Legal Services. Increasing access to services and quality of life among Trust beneficiaries is a high priority of the Trust. This bill would make it possible for more Trust beneficiaries, as well as other Alaskans and their families, to access legal services that can improve their quality of life. Please support the passage of SB62.

Sincerely,

Jeff Jessee

STATE OF ALASKA
2011 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

BILL NO. SB062

Analysis

This bill would provide an additional source for the civil legal services fund established in AS 37.05.590: an amount from the general fund that is up to 25 percent of the filing fees received by the Alaska Court System during the previous fiscal year.

There is no anticipated fiscal impact to Department of Law.

Sec. 11.61.123. Indecent viewing or photography.

(a) A person commits the crime of indecent viewing or photography if, in the state, the person knowingly views, or produces a picture of, the private exposure of the genitals, anus, or female breast of another person and the view or production is without the knowledge or consent of

(1) the parent or guardian of the person viewed, or who is shown in the picture, if the person who is viewed or shown is under 16 years of age; and

(2) the person viewed or shown in the picture, if the person viewed or shown is at least 13 years of age.

(b) Each viewing of a person, and each production of a picture of a person, whose genitals, anus, or female breast are viewed or are shown in a picture constitutes a separate violation of this section.

(c) This section does not apply to viewing or photography conducted by a law enforcement agency for a law enforcement purpose.

(d) In a prosecution under this section, it is an affirmative defense that the viewing or photography was conducted as a security surveillance system, notice of the viewing or photography was posted, and any viewing or use of pictures produced is done only in the interest of crime prevention or prosecution.

(e) In this section,

(1) "picture" means a film, photograph, negative, slide, book, newspaper, or magazine, whether in print, electronic, magnetic, or digital format; and

(2) "private exposure" means that a person has exposed the person's body or part of the body in a place, and under circumstances, that the person reasonably believed would not result in the person's body or body parts being (A) viewed by the defendant; or (B) produced in a picture; "private exposure" does not include the exposure of a person's body or body parts in a law enforcement facility, correctional facility, designated treatment facility, or a juvenile detention facility; in this paragraph, "correctional facility" has the meaning given in AS 33.30.901, "designated treatment facility" has the meaning given in AS 47.30.915, and "juvenile detention facility" has the meaning given in AS 47.12.990.

(f) Indecent viewing or photography is a

(1) class C felony if the person viewed or shown in a picture was, at the time of the viewing or production of the picture, a minor;

(2) class A misdemeanor if the person viewed or shown in a picture was, at the time of the viewing or production of the picture, an adult.

History -

(Sec. 1 ch 29 SLA 1995; am Sec. 5 ch 33 SLA 1999)

Revisors Notes -

Subsection (f) was enacted as (c) and subsections (c)-(e) were enacted as (d)-(f), respectively. Relettered in 1995.

Amendment Notes -

The 1999 amendment, effective May 28, 1999, made a section reference substitution at the end of paragraph (e)(2).

Editors Notes -

Under Sec. 2, ch. 29, SLA 1995, this section "applies to all offenses committed on or after August 13, 1995."

Collateral Refs -

Criminal prosecution of video or photographic voyeurism. 120 ALR5th 337.

Decisions -

Consent as defense. - Defendant did not claim that he obtained permission for photography from the wrong person because of a reasonable mistake concerning his victims' ages, so no issue of consent was presented. Knutsen v. State, 101 P.3d 1065 (Alaska Ct. App. 2004).

Culpable mental state. - When a defendant obtains permission as required under this section, but the state asserts that, because of the victim's age, someone else's permission was required, the state is obliged to prove that the defendant acted recklessly and with a culpable mental state regarding the victim's age. Knutsen v. State, 101 P.3d 1065 (Alaska Ct. App. 2004).

Sec. 11.61.125. Distribution of child pornography.

(a) A person commits the crime of distribution of child pornography if the person distributes in this state or advertises, promotes, solicits, or offers to distribute in this state any material that is proscribed under AS 11.61.127.

(b) This section does not apply to acts that are an integral part of the exhibition or performance of a motion picture if the acts are performed within the scope of employment by a motion picture operator or projectionist employed by the owner or manager of a theater or other place for the showing of motion pictures, unless the motion picture operator or projectionist

(1) has a financial interest in the theater or place in which employed; or

(2) causes the performance or motion picture to be performed or exhibited without the consent of the manager or owner of the theater or other place of showing.

(c) The possession of 100 or more films, audio, video, electronic, or electromagnetic recordings, photographs, negatives, slides, books, newspapers, magazines, or other materials, including a combination of these items totaling 100 or more, is prima facie evidence of distribution and intent to distribute under (a) of this section.

(d) In this section, "distribution" includes the following, whether or not for monetary or other consideration: delivering, selling, renting, leasing, lending, giving, circulating, exhibiting, presenting, providing, exchanging, placing on a computer network or computer system, and providing billing collection, or other ancillary services for or otherwise supporting these activities.

(e) Distribution of child pornography is a

(1) class B felony; or

(2) class A felony if the person has been previously convicted of distribution of child pornography in this jurisdiction or a similar crime in this or another jurisdiction.

Sec. 11.61.127. Possession of child pornography.

(a) A person commits the crime of possession of child pornography if the person knowingly possesses or knowingly accesses on a computer with intent to view any material that visually depicts conduct described in AS 11.41.455(a) knowing that the production of the material involved the use of a child under 18 years of age who engaged in the conduct or a depiction of a part of an actual child under 18 years of age who, by manipulation, creation, or modification, appears to be engaged in the conduct.

(b) This section does not apply to persons providing plethysmograph assessments in the course of a sex offender treatment program that meets the minimum standards under AS 33.30.011(5).

(c) Each film, audio, video, electronic, or electromagnetic recording, photograph, negative, slide, book, newspaper, magazine, or other material that visually or aurally depicts conduct described in AS 11.41.455(a) that is possessed or accessed in violation of (a) of this section is a separate violation of this section.

(d) In a prosecution under (a) of this section, it is an affirmative defense that the person

(1) possessed or accessed fewer than three depictions described in (a) of this section; and

(2) without allowing any person other than a law enforcement agency to view the depictions, either took reasonable steps to destroy the depictions, or reported the matter to a law enforcement agency and allowed the agency access to the depictions.

(e) In a prosecution under (a) of this section, the prosecution is not required to prove the identity of a minor depicted or that the defendant knew the identity of a minor depicted.

(f) In this section, "computer" has the meaning given in AS 11.46.990.

(g) Possession of child pornography is a class C felony.

Sec. 11.61.128. Distribution of indecent material to minors.

(a) A person commits the crime of distribution of indecent material to minors if

(1) the person, being 18 years of age or older, knowingly distributes to another person any material that depicts the following actual or simulated conduct:

(A) sexual penetration;

(B) the lewd touching of a person's genitals, anus, or female breast;

(C) masturbation;

(D) bestiality;

(E) the lewd exhibition of a person's genitals, anus, or female breast; or

(F) sexual masochism or sadism;

(2) the material is harmful to minors; and

(3) either

(A) the other person is a child under 16 years of age; or

(B) the person believes that the other person is a child under 16 years of age.

(b) In this section, it is not a defense that the victim was not actually under 16 years of age.

(c) In this section, "harmful to minors" means

(1) the average individual, applying contemporary community standards, would find that the material, taken as a whole, appeals to the prurient interest in sex for persons under 16 years of age;

(2) a reasonable person would find that the material, taken as a whole, lacks serious literary, artistic, educational, political, or scientific value for persons under 16 years of age; and

(3) the material depicts actual or simulated conduct in a way that is patently offensive to the prevailing standards in the adult community as a whole with respect to what is suitable for persons under 16 years of age.

(d) Except as provided in (e) of this section, distribution of indecent material to minors is a class C felony.

(e) Distribution of indecent material to minors is a class B felony if the defendant was, at the time of the offense, required to register as a sex offender or child kidnapper under AS 12.63 or a similar law of another jurisdiction.

Sec. 11.61.129. Forfeiture of property used in indecent viewing or photography or child pornography.

(a) Property used to aid a violation of AS 11.61.123 - 11.61.128 or to aid the solicitation of, attempt to commit, or conspiracy to commit a violation of AS 11.61.123 - 11.61.128 may be forfeited to the state upon the conviction of the offender.

(b) In this section, "property" has the meaning given in AS 11.41.468.

Sec. 11.41.452. Online enticement of a minor.

(a) A person commits the crime of online enticement of a minor if the person, being 18 years of age or older, knowingly uses a computer to communicate with another person to entice, solicit, or encourage the person to engage in an act described in AS 11.41.455(a)(1) - (7) and

(1) the other person is a child under 16 years of age; or

(2) the person believes that the other person is a child under 16 years of age.

(b) In a prosecution under (a)(2) of this section, it is not a defense that the person enticed, solicited, or encouraged was not actually a child under 16 years of age.

(c) In a prosecution under this section, it is not necessary for the prosecution to show that the act described in AS 11.41.455(a)(1) - (7) was actually committed.

(d) Except as provided in (e) of this section, online enticement is a class C felony.

(e) Online enticement is a class B felony if the defendant was, at the time of the offense, required to register as a sex offender or child kidnapper under AS 12.63 or a similar law of another jurisdiction.

History -

(Sec. 1 ch 97 SLA 2005)

Effective Date Notes -

Section 1, ch. 97, SLA 2005, which enacted this section, took effect on November 28, 2005.

Editors Notes -

Section 5, ch. 96, SLA 2005, provides that this section applies "to offenses occurring on or after November 28, 2005."

Sec. 11.41.455. Unlawful exploitation of a minor.

(a) A person commits the crime of unlawful exploitation of a minor if, in the state and with the intent of producing a live performance, film, audio, video, electronic, or electromagnetic recording, photograph, negative, slide, book, newspaper, magazine, or other material that visually or aurally depicts the conduct listed in (1) - (7) of this subsection, the person knowingly induces or employs a child under 18 years of age to engage in, or photographs, films, records, or televises a child under 18 years of age engaged in, the following actual or simulated conduct:

(1) sexual penetration;

(2) the lewd touching of another person's genitals, anus, or breast;

(3) the lewd touching by another person of the child's genitals, anus, or breast;

(4) masturbation;

(5) bestiality;

(6) the lewd exhibition of the child's genitals; or

(7) sexual masochism or sadism.

(b) A parent, legal guardian, or person having custody or control of a child under 18 years of age commits the crime of unlawful exploitation of a minor if, in the state, the person permits the child to engage in conduct described in (a) of this section knowing that the conduct is intended to be used in producing a live performance, film, audio, video, electronic, or electromagnetic recording, photograph, negative, slide, book, newspaper, magazine, or other material that visually or aurally depicts the conduct.

(c) Unlawful exploitation of a minor is a

(1) class B felony; or

(2) class A felony if the person has been previously convicted of unlawful exploitation of a minor in this jurisdiction or a similar crime in this or another jurisdiction.

(d) In this section, "audio recording" means a nonbook prerecorded item without a visual component, and includes a record, tape, cassette, and compact disc.

For crime of distribution of child pornography, see AS 11.61.125.

Amendment Notes -

The 2000 amendment, effective May 23, 2000, inserted ", video, electronic, or electromagnetic" and "or aurally" in subsections (a) and (b) and deleted "printed" preceding "material" near the end of subsection (b).

The 2004 amendment, effective September 27, 2004, added paragraph (c)(2) and made related changes.

Decisions -

"Live performance". - This section covers private, noncommercial live performances; however, "live performance" does not include the situation in which a single adult requests a child to display his or her genitals to that adult in private. Braun v. State, 911 P.2d 1075 (Alaska Ct. App. 1996).

Statutory construction. - Defendant's interpretation of this section under the rule of lenity, alleging that it was absurd that he was permitted to have sex with someone between the ages of 16 and 18, yet he was prohibited from photographing someone between those ages, was not persuasive; the relevant provisions simply refer to a child under 18 years of age, and do not distinguish between child pornography produced or possessed for private purposes and that intended for distribution. State v. Parker, 147 P.3d 690 (Alaska 2006).

AS 11.61.127(a) forbids the possession of pornographic material that is generated by the conduct prohibited by AS 11.41.455(a), pornography that was generated by the use of a child under the age of 18; the government had to prove that defendant knew that this child pornography was in their possession and that defendant acted knowingly with respect to the circumstance that the pornography was generated illegally. Ferrick v. State, 217 P.3d 418 (Alaska Ct. App. 2009).

Joinder of offenses. - Where defendant was charged with sexual abuse of a minor, unlawful exploitation of a minor, distribution of child pornography, and possession of child pornography stemming from his sexual involvement with his girlfriend's minor daughter, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to sever the sexual abuse charges from the pornography charges because all charges stemmed from defendant's inappropriate relationship with the young girl and were connected. Ogletree v. State, - P.3d - (Alaska Ct. App. Aug. 19, 2009).

Solicitation of crime. - Where defendant was charged with soliciting the crime of unlawful exploitation of a minor based on his asking victims to take off their clothes and let him photograph them, defendant's argument that he did not "solicit" the crime because the victims could not be guilty of the intended crime was foreclosed by the provision of AS 11.31.110 that it is no defense that the person solicited could not be guilty of the crime that is the object of the solicitation. Braun v. State, 911 P.2d 1075 (Alaska Ct. App. 1996).

Defendant's convictions for soliciting the crime of unlawful exploitation of a minor which were based on his asking victims to take off their clothes and let him photograph them were erroneous since defendant did not ask anyone else to engage in the prohibited conduct, i.e., inducing a child to engage in one of the sexual activities prohibited by this section, and thus he did not commit the crime of solicitation. Braun v. State, 911 P.2d 1075 (Alaska Ct. App. 1996).

Aggravating factors. - Where the superior court found an aggravating factor at the defendant's original sentencing, he faced a sentence more severe than the four-year presumptive term for second felony offenders at the time of his sentencing for exploitation of a minor. Harris v. State, 980 P.2d 482 (Alaska Ct. App. 1999).

Conviction and sentence upheld. - See Depp v. State, 686 P.2d 712 (Alaska Ct. App. 1984).

Withdrawal of plea bargain denied. - Where defendant pleaded no contest to three felonies as part of a plea bargain, his decision to plead no contest was not materially influenced by his mistaken understanding concerning the consequences of winning a suppression motion; trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to withdraw his plea. Parker v. State, 90 P.3d 194 (Alaska Ct. App. 2004).

"Least serious" mitigator held inapplicable. - Defendant's alleged lack of intent to distribute pornographic photographs and videos of children, purportedly evidenced by his concealment of them in a locked briefcase in a closet in his house, even if proven by clear and convincing evidence, did not mandate a "least serious" mitigator. State v. Parker, 147 P.3d 690 (Alaska 2006).

Applied in Qualle v. State, 652 P.2d 481 (Alaska Ct. App. 1982); Harris v. State, 790 P.2d 1379 (Alaska Ct. App. 1990); Parker v. State, 151 P.3d 478 (Alaska Ct. App. 2006).

Cited in Lawrence v. State, 764 P.2d 318 (Alaska Ct. App. 1988); Scroggins v. State, 951 P.2d 442 (Alaska Ct. App. 1998); Labrake v. State, 152 P.3d 474 (Alaska Ct. App. 2007).

Sec. 11.41.270. Stalking in the second degree.

(a) A person commits the crime of stalking in the second degree if the person knowingly engages in a course of conduct that recklessly places another person in fear of death or physical injury, or in fear of the death or physical injury of a family member.

(b) In this section,

(1) "course of conduct" means repeated acts of nonconsensual contact involving the victim or a family member;

(2) "family member" means a

(A) spouse, child, grandchild, parent, grandparent, sibling, uncle, aunt, nephew, or niece, of the victim, whether related by blood, marriage, or adoption;

(B) person who lives, or has previously lived, in a spousal relationship with the victim;

(C) person who lives in the same household as the victim; or

(D) person who is a former spouse of the victim or is or has been in a dating, courtship, or engagement relationship with the victim;

(3) "nonconsensual contact" means any contact with another person that is initiated or continued without that person's consent, that is beyond the scope of the consent provided by that person, or that is in disregard of that person's expressed desire that the contact be avoided or discontinued; "nonconsensual contact" includes

(A) following or appearing within the sight of that person;

(B) approaching or confronting that person in a public place or on private property;

(C) appearing at the workplace or residence of that person;

(D) entering onto or remaining on property owned, leased, or occupied by that person;

(E) contacting that person by telephone;

(F) sending mail or electronic communications to that person;

(G) placing an object on, or delivering an object to, property owned, leased, or occupied by that person;

(4) "victim" means a person who is the target of a course of conduct.

(c) Stalking in the second degree is a class A misdemeanor.

History -

(Sec. 1 ch 40 SLA 1993)

History Reports -

For Senate letter of intent in connection with the enactment of this section, see 1993 Senate Journal 1026 - 1027.

Decisions -

Constitutionality. - The potential due process and overbreadth problems in the definition of stalking do not require invalidation of the stalking statutes; rather, those problems should be resolved on a case-by-case basis. Petersen v. State, 930 P.2d 414 (Alaska Ct. App. 1996).

Sufficiency of evidence. - Grand jury evidence was sufficient for indictment for first-degree stalking, under AS 11.41.260, where there was a protective order in place against defendant who nevertheless made ongoing contact with victim, including numerous hang-up calls to the victim and victim's boyfriend, paging the victim when she attended one of her boyfriend's musical performances, and slashing tires on her and her boyfriend's cars. Kenison v. State, 107 P.3d 335 (Alaska Ct. App. 2005).

Construction of "contact". - Inclusion within AS 18.66.100(c)(2) of the phrase "or otherwise communicating" immediately after "contacting" strongly suggests that nonphysical contact must involve some element of direct or indirect communication and does not merely mean coming within view; further, "nonconsensual contact" in this section is not all that is needed for a crime to take place; the contact must also be "repeated," so that it is a course of conduct, and it must place the protected person in fear, and the need for these additional requirements to make stalking a crime argues against a construction that makes merely appearing in the sight of a protected person, without more, a crime. Cooper v. Cooper, 144 P.3d 451 (Alaska 2006).

Stalking of ex-wife as domestic violence. - Ex-husband's threatening communications to his ex-wife constituted stalking; these acts by the ex-husband were sufficient support for the issuance of a protective order under AS 18.66.990(3)(A) because stalking in the second degree is a crime involving domestic violence when committed against a former spouse. McComas v. Kirn, 105 P.3d 1130 (Alaska 2005).

Legitimate nonconsensual contacts and telephone calls not prohibited. - The stalking statutes do not prohibit telephone calls or other nonconsensual contact made for a legitimate purpose, even when the defendant knows that the person contacted may or will unreasonably perceive the contact as threatening. Petersen v. State, 930 P.2d 414 (Alaska Ct. App. 1996).

Husband admitted to having been at a mall at a time when his wife, who had sought a protective order against the husband, was also there, but he denied having seen his wife. Only knowing contact was required, but the superior court's error was harmless in holding that contact must be intentional because there was no conduct that amounted to"contacting" within the meaning of AS 18.66.100(c)(2); being in the mere presence of the husband's wife did not mean the husband was "contacting" his wife; the meaning of "contacting" had a normal meaning, and a nonphysical "contact" did not mean merely coming within view. Cooper v. Cooper, 144 P.3d 451 (Alaska 2006).

Subject: SB 72 Statistics

Hello Cindy. I was unable to attend your Monday hearing on SB 72 (the governor's crime bill), but I did listen to the recording of the hearing. During that hearing the committee wondered how many cases would be impacted by the increased penalties reflected in sections 3, 4 and 5 of the bill. I asked our data people how many times those offenses were charged in FY 10. There were 4 cases of online enticement under AS 11.41.452(d) (section 3) and 1 case under AS 11.41.452(e) (section 4). There were 7 cases filed under AS 11.41.455, (section 5 of the bill), though I can't tell from the numbers I received if any were under the provision that already makes these a class A felony.

Although whenever we compare case numbers with others in the criminal justice system we invariably end up with slightly different numbers, our numbers seem consistent with those included in the Department of Corrections fiscal note (an average of five cases per year for these three case types). If the committee's question is whether there are a lot of these case or just a few, I think the answer is just a few.

Re: Senate Bill 72
ACLU Review of Constitutional Issues

Chair French, Vice-Chair Wielechowski:

Thank you for the opportunity to submit written testimony with respect to Senate Bill 72.

The American Civil Liberties Union of Alaska represents thousands of members and activists throughout the State of Alaska who seek to preserve and expand individual freedoms and civil liberties guaranteed under the United States and Alaska Constitutions. In that respect, we wish to advise you of constitutional issues with the Bill.

As you may know, the ACLU of Alaska Foundation is currently representing several Alaska bookstores and others in American Booksellers Foundation for Free Expression (ABFFE) v. Burns. The federal court has already granted a preliminary injunction, on First Amendment grounds, against AS 11.61.128(a).

Section 9 of S.B. 72 would narrow AS 11.61.128(a) to only criminalize the distribution of material "harmful to minors" by an adult if the recipient is under 16 years old and the adult is reckless regarding the recipient's age or the adult believes the recipient is less than 16 years old. The legislation would also add a knowledge requirement as to the content being sent to the minor.

This bill is an improvement on AS 11.61.128(a) which was enjoined October 21, but even with these changes the law would still violate the First Amendment and the Commerce Clause of the US Constitution. We welcome the opportunity to work with the Attorney General and this Committee to amend Section 9 to make it constitutionally sound. We believe that modest changes to the bill would cure the constitutional problems in Section 9 while still providing law enforcement with the means to protect minors from adults looking to prey on them.

Please feel free to contact the undersigned should you require any additional information. We are happy to reply to any questions that may arise, or to answer informally any questions which Members of the Committee may have.

Thank you again for the opportunity to share our thoughts.

Sincerely,

Jeffrey Mittman
Executive Director

Analysis

This bill expands the crime of stalking by adding to the definition of nonconsensual contact, monitoring the victim with a GPS device and using or installing a device to record or photograph events concerning the victim. It also increases penalties for unlawful exploitation of a minor, online enticement of a minor, and provides for the prosecution of offenders from out of state. Finally, this bill adopts new offenses to include: sending explicit images of a minor, and misconduct involving confidential information.

Passage of this legislation will have no fiscal impact on the department.

Analysis

This bill amends the law relating to stalking by adding to the definition of nonconsensual conduct methods of contacting people with modern technology such as global positioning systems. It makes a clarifying amendment to AS 11.51.100, which prohibits endangering the welfare of a minor. It adopts new statutes to prohibit sending an explicit image of a minor and misconduct involving confidential information. It also increases the penalties for the crimes of online enticement of a minor and unlawful exploitation of a minor. The bill makes it clear that the commissioner of corrections may, in his or her discretion, provide supervised probation to a person on probation for conviction of a misdemeanor.

Although the bill would adopt new crimes we believe that they can be prosecuted with current resources.

FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA BILL NO. SB 72
2011 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Analysis

DOC averages two new incarcerations per year for the crime of enticement of a minor. This bill would increase the penalty for this crime from a Class C felony to a Class B felony. This change has the potential to increase mandays by 10,220 in FY12 thru FY17. Applying the current cost of care ($136.44 per day), the increase of cost could be in the range of $0.0 to $1,394.44 to DOC.

DOC averages two incarcerations per year for the crime of online enticement of a minor. This bill increases the penalty for this crime from a Class B felony to a Class A felony if the defendant was, at the time of the offense, a registered or required to register as a sex offender or child kidnapper. This would increase the penalty three years. Applying the current daily cost of care ($136.44 per day), this could potentially increase costs in the range of $0.0 to $747.00 to DOC.

DOC averages one new incarceration per year for the crime of unlawful exploitation of a minor. This bill would increase the penalty for this crime from a Class B felony to a Class A felony. This would increase the penalty three years. This has the potential to increase mandays by 5,475 beginning in FY12 thru FY17. Applying the current daily cost of care ($136.44 per day) could potentially add costs in the range of $0.0 to $747.00 to DOC.
Other provisions that the department is unable to quantify at this time but will closely monitor for potential fiscal impact are as follows:
- Adding Monitoring a Person with a Global Positioning Device or Similar Technology Means
- Adding Child Kidnapper to 2(A) under AS12.63
- Adding Sending and Explicit Image of a Minor in the Degree and Second Degree to Statute
- Adding Crimes Involving Minors Committed Out of State, Specifically Online Enticement to Statute
- Adding Online Enticement of a Minor to Statute

Re: Senate Bill 72 -- relating to stalking and child exploitation

Dear Senator French:

I am writing to request that you schedule Senate Bill 72 for a hearing in the House Judiciary Committee at your earliest convenience. SB 72 is a bill that builds on and refines legislation adopted by the legislature in the past several years to address the serious problems of sexual exploitation and domestic violence.

The bill expands the crime of stalking to prohibit placing a person in fear of death or physical injury using technology such as global position devices or devices that invade, record or photograph events in private places like the home or office. It also addresses the issue of young people sending explicit images of themselves to others in a way that seeks to protect the young person.

A sectional analysis is attached that describes each provision of the bill. Thank you for your consideration of this request.

Sincerely,

JOHN J. BURNS
ATTORNEY GENERAL

Deputy Attorney General

SB 72
STALKING AND EXPLOITATION OF A MINOR
Sectional Analysis (Revised)

Sections 1 and 2 expand the crime of stalking by amending the definition of "nonconsensual contact". Stalking prohibits a person from engaging in a course of conduct that places another in fear of death or physical injury. "Course of conduct" is defined as repeated acts of nonconsensual conduct. The bill adds two ways that a defendant may contact a victim that is beyond the victim's consent. First, it includes following or monitoring the victim with a global positioning device. Second, it includes installing or attempting to install a device for observing, recording, or photographing events in the home, workplace, or vehicle of the victim, or on the victim's personal telephone or computer.

Section 3 raises the classification of the crime of online enticement of a minor for a person who is not required to register as a sex offender or child kidnapper from a class C felony to a class B felony. This change, in addition to the amendments to AS 12.55.125(i) in the bill, would be to raise the penalty from a range of zero to two years for a first offense (maximum term of five years) to a range of five to 15 years for a first offense (maximum term of 99 years). Also refer to section 12 of this analysis.

Section 4 raises the classification of the crime of online enticement of a minor for a person who is required to register as a sex offender or child kidnapper from a class B felony to a class A felony. This change, in addition to the amendments to AS 12.55.125(i) in the bill, would be to raise the penalty from a range of one to three years (maximum term of 10 years) to a range of 15 to 30 years for a first offense (maximum term of 99 years). Also refer to section 12 of this analysis.

Section 5 raises the classification of the crime of unlawful exploitation of a minor from a class B felony to a class A felony for all offenders. Under current law the offense is a class A felony if the person has previously been convicted of unlawful exploitation of a minor, and it is a class B felony for other offenders. This change, in addition to the amendments to AS 12.55.125(i) in the bill, would be to raise the penalty from a range of two to 12 years or five to 15 years (depending on whether it is a first or second offense) to a range of 15 to 30 years for a first offense. Also refer to section 12 of this analysis.

Section 6 amends the crime of endangering the welfare of a child in the first degree by prohibiting a parent or guardian from leaving a child under 16 years of age with a person who is required to register as a child kidnapper. The law currently prohibits this conduct if the parent or guardian leaves a child with a person required to register as a sex offender.

Section 7 adopts a new crime – sending an explicit image of a minor. It would prohibit publishing or distributing an image of a minor's genitals, anus, or female breast if the minor is under 16 years of age and the publication or distribution was without the consent of the parent or guardian of the minor. The conduct would not apply to a minor under 16 years of age who publishes or distributes the minor's own image. The prohibited conduct would be a class B misdemeanor (maximum term of imprisonment 90 days) if the person publishes the image to one or two others; a class A misdemeanor (maximum term of imprisonment one year) if the person publishes the image to three or more others; and a class C felony (maximum term of imprisonment five years) if the person publishes the image on the Internet.

Section 8 makes a conforming amendment to AS 11.61.120(a)(6), harassment in the second degree, to make it clear that the new crimes of sending an explicit image of a minor in Section 7 are not included in the crime of harassment in the second degree.

Section 9 makes two amendments to the crime of distribution of indecent material to minors; first, to clarify that the person must know that the material distributed depicts the prohibited conduct; and second to clarify that if the minor to whom the material is sent is under 16 years of age, the defendant must be reckless as to that circumstance.

Section 10 adopts two new crimes – misconduct involving confidential information in the first and second degrees. The second degree offense prohibits a person from obtaining the confidential information about another person without legal authority or consent to do so. This conduct would be a class B misdemeanor (maximum term of imprisonment 90 days).

Misconduct involving confidential information in the first degree would prohibit a person from violating the second degree prohibition and using the confidential information to commit a crime or to obtain a benefit to which a person is not entitled, or injure or deprive another person of a benefit. This conduct would be a class A misdemeanor (maximum term of imprisonment one year).

Section 11 clarifies that a person may be prosecuted for online enticement of a minor and for sending an explicit image of a minor if the minor whose image is published, or with whom the person communicated, was in this state, even if the defendant was in another jurisdiction at the time he or she committed the prohibited acts.

Section 12 amends AS 12.55.125(i) (terms of imprisonment for persons who commit sex offenses) by conforming the terms of imprisonment for persons who commit unlawful exploitation of a minor or online enticement of a minor to the correct level in accord with the changes in Sections 3 – 5 of the bill.

Section 13 clarifies the law by stating that while the Commissioner of Corrections provides probation officers to the superior court for the active supervision of person on probation for felony offenses, the Commissioner may, at his or her discretion, also provide probation officers for the active supervision of persons released for misdemeanor offenses.

Sections 14 and 15 include the applicability and effective date provisions.

SB 72
STALKING AND EXPLOITATION OF A MINOR
Sectional Analysis

Sections 1 and 2 expand the crime of stalking by amending the definition of "nonconsensual contact". Stalking prohibits a person from engaging in a course of conduct that places another in fear of death or physical injury. "Course of conduct" is defined as repeated acts of nonconsensual conduct. The bill adds two ways that a defendant may contact a victim that is beyond the victim's consent. First, it includes following or monitoring the victim with a global positioning device. Second, it includes installing or attempting to install a device for observing, recording, or photographing events in the home, workplace, or vehicle of the victim, or on the victim's personal telephone or computer.

Section 3 raises the classification of the crime of online enticement of a minor for a person who is not required to register as a sex offender or child kidnapper from a class C felony (maximum term of imprisonment five years) to a class B felony (maximum term of imprisonment 10 years).

Section 4 raises the classification of the crime of online enticement of a minor for a person who is required to register as a sex offender or child kidnapper from a class B felony (maximum term of imprisonment 10 years) to a class A felony (maximum term of imprisonment 20 years).

Section 5 raises the classification of the crime of unlawful exploitation of a minor from a class B felony (maximum term of imprisonment 10 years) to a class A felony (maximum term of imprisonment 20 years).

Section 6 amends the crime of endangering the welfare of a child in the first degree by prohibiting a parent or guardian from leaving a child under 16 years of age with a person who is required to register as a child kidnapper. The law currently prohibits this conduct if the parent or guardian leaves a child with a person required to register as a sex offender.

Section 7 adopts a new crime – sending an explicit image of a minor. It would prohibit publishing or distributing an image of a minor's genitals, anus, or female breast if the minor is under 16 years of age and the publication or distribution was without the consent of the parent or guardian of the minor. The conduct would not apply to a minor under 16 years of age who publishes or distributes the minor's own image. The prohibited conduct would be a class B misdemeanor (maximum term of imprisonment 90 days) if the person publishes the image to one or two others; a class A misdemeanor (maximum term of imprisonment one year) if the person publishes the image to three or more others; and a class C felony (maximum term of imprisonment five years) if the person publishes the image on the Internet.

Section 8 makes a conforming amendment to AS 11.61.120(a)(6), harassment in the second degree, to make it clear that the new crimes of sending an explicit image of a minor in Section 7 are not included in the crime of harassment in the second degree.

Section 9 makes two amendments to the crime of distribution of indecent material to minors; first, to clarify that the person must know that the material distributed depicts the prohibited conduct; and second to clarify that if the minor to whom the material is sent is under 16 years of age, the defendant must be reckless as to that circumstance.

Section 10 adopts two new crimes – misconduct involving confidential information in the first and second degrees. The second degree offense prohibits a person from obtaining the confidential information about another person without legal authority or consent to do so. This conduct would be a class B misdemeanor (maximum term of imprisonment 90 days).

Misconduct involving confidential information in the first degree would prohibit a person from violating the second degree prohibition and using the confidential information to commit a crime or to obtain a benefit to which a person is not entitled, or injure or deprive another person of a benefit. This conduct would be a class A misdemeanor (maximum term of imprisonment one year).

Section 11 clarifies that a person may be prosecuted for online enticement of a minor and for sending an explicit image of a minor if the minor whose image is published, or with whom the person communicated, was in this state, even if the defendant was in another jurisdiction at the time he or she committed the prohibited acts.

Section 12 amends AS 12.55.125(i) (terms of imprisonment for persons who commit sex offenses) by conforming the terms of imprisonment for persons who commit unlawful exploitation of a minor or online enticement of a minor to the correct level in accord with the changes in Sections 3 – 5 of the bill.

Section 13 clarifies the law by stating that while the Commissioner of Corrections provides probation officers to the superior court for the active supervision of person on probation for felony offenses, the Commissioner may, at his or her discretion, also provide probation officers for the active supervision of persons released for misdemeanor offenses.

Sections 14 and 15 include the applicability and effective date provisions.

FISCAL NOTE #1

STATE OF ALASKA
2011 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Analysis

This bill expands the crime of stalking by adding to the definition of nonconsensual contact, monitoring the victim with a GPS device and using or installing a device to record or photograph events concerning the victim. It also increases penalties for unlawful exploitation of a minor, online enticement of a minor, and provides for the prosecution of offenders from out of state. Finally, this bill adopts new offenses to include: sending explicit images of a minor, and misconduct involving confidential information.

Passage of this legislation will have no fiscal impact on the department.

FISCAL NOTE #2

STATE OF ALASKA
2011 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Analysis

This bill amends the law relating to stalking by adding to the definition of nonconsensual conduct methods of contacting people with modern technology such as global positioning systems. It makes a clarifying amendment to AS 11.51.100, which prohibits endangering the welfare of a minor. It adopts new statutes to prohibit sending an explicit image of a minor and misconduct involving confidential information. It also increases the penalties for the crimes of online enticement of a minor and unlawful exploitation of a minor. The bill makes it clear that the commissioner of corrections may, in his or her discretion, provide supervised probation to a person on probation for conviction of a misdemeanor.

Although the bill would adopt new crimes we believe that they can be prosecuted with current resources.

FISCAL NOTE #3

STATE OF ALASKA
2011 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Analysis

This bill expands the definition of "nonconsensual contact" under stalking; creates a new crime for sending an explicit image of a minor without the consent of the minor's parent; and creates new crimes for obtaining confidential information of another person.

The bill also provides for the prosecution of an out of state individual for online enticement of a minor if the communications involve an individual in the State of Alaska. Finally, the bill specifically permits the Department of Corrections to provide active supervision to a person placed on probation for a misdemeanor offense.

Expanding the definition of nonconsensual contact, creating additional crimes, and providing for supervised misdemeanor probation will likely result in an increase in cases assigned to the Public Defender Agency. It is not possible to reliably predict the number of cases that will be assigned to the Agency, however. The Agency, therefore, submits an indeterminate fiscal note.

FISCAL NOTE #4

STATE OF ALASKA BILL NO. SB 72
2011 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Analysis

DOC averages two new incarcerations per year for the crime of enticement of a minor. This bill would increase the penalty for this crime from a Class C felony to a Class B felony. This change has the potential to increase mandays by 10,220 in FY12 thru FY17. Applying the current cost of care ($134.21 per day), the increase of cost could be in the range of $0.0 to $1,371.60 to DOC.

DOC averages two incarcerations per year for the crime of online enticement of a minor. This bill increases the penalty for this crime from a Class B felony to a Class A felony if the defendant was, at the time of the offense, a registered or required to register as a sex offender or child kidnapper. This would increase the penalty three years. Applying the current daily cost of care ($134.21 per day), this could potentially increase costs in the range of $0.0 to $734.80 to DOC.

DOC averages one new incarceration per year for the crime of unlawful exploitation of a minor. This bill would increase the penalty for this crime from a Class B felony to a Class A felony. This would increase the penalty three years. This has the potential to increase mandays by 5,475 beginning in FY12 thru FY17. Applying the current daily cost of care ($134.21 per day) could potentially add costs in the range of $0.0 to $734.80 to DOC.

Other provisions that the department is unable to quantify at this time but will closely monitor for potential fiscal impact are as follows:

- Adding Monitoring a Person with a Global Positioning Device or Similar Technology Means
- Adding Child Kidnapper to 2(A) under AS12.63
- Adding Sending and Explicit Image of a Minor in the Degree and Second Degree to Statute
- Adding Crimes Involving Minors Committed Out of State, Specifically Online Enticement to Statute
- Adding Online Enticement of a Minor to Statute

A BILL

FOR AN ACT ENTITLED

"An Act relating to liability of certain limited liability organizations holding liquor licenses; and relating to accidents involving the vehicle of a person under the influence of alcoholic beverages."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

 Section 1. AS 04.21.035 is amended to read:

Sec. 04.21.035. Responsibility of partners of a limited liability partnership or foreign limited liability partnership [ORGANIZATION MEMBERS]. Notwithstanding any other provision of [AS 10.50 OR] AS 32.06, a partner [MEMBER] of a limited liability partnership or a foreign limited liability partnership [ORGANIZATION] holding a license under this title is not relieved of the obligation or the liability otherwise imposed upon a holder of a liquor license under this title solely because the license is held by a limited liability partnership or a foreign limited liability partnership [ORGANIZATION].

 Sec. 2. AS 09.65 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 09.65.315. Damages resulting from driving the vehicle of a person under the influence of an alcoholic beverage. (a) A person is not liable beyond the limits of any applicable insurance policy purchased by or on behalf of the owner of the vehicle, or the taxicab or limousine company or the company's owner, agents, or employees, for damages resulting from a motor vehicle accident if the person was driving a vehicle involved in the accident and

(1) before the accident, started driving the vehicle involved in the accident from or near licensed premises;

(2) is, at the time of the accident, a person employed in the course and scope of employment to or under contract to drive a taxicab or limousine, a taxicab or limousine owner, a holder of a taxicab or limousine permit issued by a municipality, or an owner or employee of a company that dispatches taxicabs or limousines;

(3) was not under the influence of an alcoholic beverage, inhalant, or controlled substance at the time of the accident;

(4) was driving the vehicle to the motor vehicle owner's residence or designated residential location at the request of the motor vehicle owner or operator or a law enforcement officer; and

(5) was driving the vehicle because the motor vehicle owner or operator was under the influence of an alcoholic beverage or reasonably believed to be under the influence of an alcoholic beverage.

(b) A person licensed under AS 04.11.080 - 04.11.255, or an agent or employee of the person, is not liable for damages resulting from a motor vehicle accident described under (a) of this section. A person or entity that participates in making arrangements for transportation of a vehicle under (a) of this section is not liable for damages resulting from a motor vehicle accident described in (a) of this section.

(c) This section does not

(1) preclude liability for civil damages as a result of gross negligence or reckless or intentional misconduct;

(2) limit the ability of a person to recover damages under any applicable uninsured or underinsured motor vehicle insurance coverage; or

(3) limit the ability of a person to recover damages under any applicable liability insurance coverage purchased by or on behalf of the person being transported under (a) of this section.

(d) A motor vehicle owner is considered to have given consent to another person to drive the owner's motor vehicle if the other person is involved in an accident and the provisions of (a) of this section apply to the other person.

(e) In this section,

(1) "controlled substance" has the meaning given in AS 28.33.190;

(2) "inhalant" has the meaning given to the phrase "hazardous volatile material or substance" in AS 47.37.270;

(3) "licensed premises" has the meaning given in AS 04.21.080.

 Sec. 3. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

APPLICABILITY. Section 2 of this Act applies to a civil action that accrues on or after the effective date of this Act.

Insert ", or the taxicab or limousine company or the company's owner, agents, or employees,"

Sec. 28.20.010 Declaration of Purpose. The legislature is concerned over the rising toll of motor vehicle accidents and the suffering and loss inflicted by them. The legislature determines that it is a matter of grave concern that motorists be financially responsible for their negligent acts so that innocent victims of motor vehicle accidents may be recompensed for the injury and financial loss inflicted upon them. The legislature finds and declares that the public interest can best be served by the requirements that the operator of a motor vehicle involved in an accident respond for damages and show proof of financial ability to respond for damages in future accidents as a prerequisite to the person's exercise of the privilege of operating a motor vehicle in the state.

Statistics

In 2008 in Anchorage there were 2,777 DUI arrests, out of this amount 453 resulted in accidents. In 2008 there were 16 total fatalities of which 8 resulted in an alcohol related fatality.

In 2008, Alaska experienced 62 fatalities of which 17 resulted in alcohol related fatal crashes.

In 2009, in Anchorage there were 2,604 DUI arrests of which 324 had resulted in accidents.

According to the Anchorage Police Department, in 2009 there were 17 fatal accidents of which 7 were alcohol related. This number is down from 2008 by 4% and our plan is to continue to assist our police department in taking this percentage down every year. Not everyone will participate in the program, but we hope that with every ride taken a life could be saved.

In 2009, Alaska experienced 64 fatalities of which 20 were alcohol related crashes.

ANCHORAGE CHARR
TAVERN, HOTEL, RESTAURANT & RETAILERS ASSOCIATION

off the road

About the program - "Off the Road" is a unique program because we can provide a safe mode of transportation for the patron and their vehicle. There are other programs in Alaska but they will not compare to the "Off the Road". This service can be requested by the patron or by the determination of the on premise liquor licensed establishment to limit liabilities and to protect the general public.

Although we try to encourage those who choose to drink alcohol to do so responsibly, we recognize that some people are going to choose to drink to the point of intoxication. Even those who make provisions for alternative rides may have those plans thwarted -- a designated driver may lapse into drinking, a bus may be missed, and so forth. The programs administrators assume that it is the nature of safety nets to catch more than the minimum. With the philosophy that it is better to accept some limited amount of abuse (such as using the service when other sage ways home may exist) rather than risk excluding any legitimate use, servers are instructed never to turn down an Off the Road request. Our thinking is that the risk of denying a legitimate ride far outweighs the risk of allowing a certain amount of abuse.

Everyone, regardless of socio-economic level, is a potential victim of a drunk driver. Therefore everyone in our community will benefit from this program – not only the potential drunk driver, but also every person who may be a victim of that drunk driver. Another basic principal of the program is to remove all physical and psychological barriers to its use. The ride home is completely free and confidential. Since the program started in 2005, there have not been any accidents proving that it is safer to have a sober professional licensed chauffeur transport the patron's vehicle home by not taking the risk of having the patron drive their vehicle.

The information required on the Off the Road voucher is minimal but necessary for responsible operation of the program. The person initiating the call for the ride must complete basic information on the voucher such as the date and time, establishment name, location of the rides origination, the authorizing person's name and signature, the full name of the rider and the exact destination. The safe ride driver will ask the patron if they are covered with insurance or if they have insurance; the drivers will complete the driver's information part of the voucher. The remaining voucher information will be completed by the personnel at the participating establishments. Vouchers must be completely filled out.

In 2008 in Anchorage there were 2,777 DUI arrests out of this amount 453 resulted in accidents. In 2008 there were 16 total fatalities of which 8 resulted in an alcohol related fatality.

In 2008, Alaska experienced 62 fatalities of which 17 resulted in alcohol related fatal crashes.

In 2009, in Anchorage there were 2,604 DUI arrests of which 324 resulted in accidents. In 2009 there were 17 fatal accidents of which 7 were alcohol related. According to the Anchorage Police Department this number is down from 2008 by 4% and our plan is to continue to assist our police department in taking this percentage down every year. Not everyone will participate in the program, but we hope that with every ride taken a life could be saved.

In 2009, Alaska experienced 64 fatalities of which 20 resulted in alcohol related crashes.
In collaboration with the Anchorage Police Department and the Alaska Highway Safety Office ultimately would help reduce the amount of alcohol related fatalities by finding new and strategic measures to fight against impaired driving in general. We would like to see alcohol related DUI's reduced 1% by the end of 2010 and as of this writing, we can say that alcohol related accidents reduced by 4%. According to the Anchorage Police Department alcohol is no longer the main reason for DUI arrests. DUI arrests have increased because the amount of drug use (prescription and illegal) is on the rise in youth as well as adults. Even enough cough syrup while operating a vehicle can be classified as a DUI. We strongly believe through the power of education, we can help our citizens make the right choice. Conducting program awareness classes in the military bases will help partner our efforts in reducing drunken driving.

The overall result would be a reduction of drunk drivers which will benefit the community at large.

According to the Alaska Highway Safety Office in the State of Alaska in 2008, 17 out of 62 fatalities were alcohol related for a rate of 31%. Our motto "one ride taken can result in one life saved".

Currently there are 63 participating establishments. Since 2005 when the program began, over 821 individual rides have taken place and over 2379 vouchers have been sold.

Although the safe ride is free to the patron, program participants purchase ten vouchers at time at $10 each to support the program. Not all establishments use the vouchers for the complete safe ride; some establishment s use the vouchers when a patron is in need of a ride home without a vehicle; the only down side is that the voucher is used but not counted as an "off the road" ride.

In order to be able to maintain a ridership level that is not abused or under-utilized vouchers are assigned as they are purchased to each individual establishment. Vouchers are recorded on a spreadsheet as they are used and returned to us by the safe ride company. The patrons' information is confidential and kept for informational purpose only.

SPONSOR STATEMENT
CS SENATE BILL NO. 78

Senate Bill 78 comprises of two sections. The first seeks to treat members of limited liability companies ("LLC") in the same manner as shareholders of corporations for liability purposes under Alaska liquor laws. It seeks to reflect the fact that LLC's are more similar to and used in the business world as alternatives to corporations and are less commonly used as alternatives to sole proprietorships or general partnerships, which pass on general liability to their owners. As it is currently written, AS 04.21.035 provides that a member of a limited liability company ("LLC") or a partner of a limited liability partnership that holds a license under Title 4, governing alcoholic beverages, is not relieved of the liability imposed upon a liquor license holder solely because the license is held by a LLC or a limited liability partnership.

However, businesses have recognized the greater flexibility in internal governance matters afforded by the LLC structure and have increasingly turned to LLC's as a preferred form of entity for doing business. Businesses consciously choose LLC's to have greater management and efficiency without sacrificing the limited liability protection from business creditors afforded to owners of corporations. Therefore SB 78 seeks to provide equal treatment to LLCs in the liquor liability context as they are treated in the business world generally.

The committee substitute adds two sections which simply provide a limitation of liability for a taxi or limousine driver who gets in an accident while driving another person's vehicle from a licensed premise. These sections were originally passed in 2004 by a vote of 39-0 in the House and 20-0 in the Senate but had a sunset date of 2007, a fact that was overlooked. This language would correct that oversight and the CS language mirrors the original legislation.

Everyone is a potential victim of a drunk driver. Therefore everyone will benefit from this program – not only the potential drunk driver, but also every person who may be a victim of that drunk driver. Another basic principal of the program is to remove all physical and psychological barriers to its use. The ride home is completely free to the intoxicated person and confidential.

There are 63 participating establishments in the Anchorage Bowl. Since 2005 when the program began, over 821 individual rides have taken place and over 2379 vouchers have been sold.

Summary of Changes
Between SB 78\M and CS for SB 78\B

This document is an identification of the changes between W.O. 27-LS0282\M and W.O. 27-LS0282\B.

The CS for SB 22 adds new language in the title of SB 78. It adds "; and relating to accidents involving the vehicle of a person under the influence of alcoholic beverages."

The CS adds Section 2, which adds a new section to AS 09.65 that relates to damages resulting from driving the vehicle of a person under the influence of an alcoholic beverage. Section 09.65.315 (a) gives five conditions under which a person is not liable beyond the limits of any applicable insurance policy purchased by or on behalf of the owner of the vehicle for damages resulting from a motor vehicle accident.

Section 09.65.315(b) states that the taxicab company, drivers and the person who makes arrangements for transportation are not liable for damages resulting from a motor vehicle accident if they meet described under Section 09.65.315(a).

Section 09.65.315(c) outlines that this statute would not preclude liability for civil damages in cases of gross negligence, reckless or intentional misconduct. It also does not limit the ability of a person to recover damages under any applicable uninsured or underinsured motor vehicle insurance coverage or under any applicable liability insurance coverage purchased by or on behalf of the person being transported.

Section 09.65.315(d) defines what is considered consent to another person to drive the owner's motor vehicle.

Section 09.65.315(e) points to where the definitions of "controlled substance", "inhalant" and "licensed premises" can be found in Alaska Statutes.

The CS adds Section 3, which dictates that Section 2 applies to a civil action that accrues on or after the effective date of this Act.

A BILL

FOR AN ACT ENTITLED

"An Act relating to liability of certain limited liability organizations holding liquor licenses; and relating to accidents involving the vehicle of a person under the influence of alcoholic beverages."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

 Section 1. AS 04.21.035 is amended to read:

Sec. 04.21.035. Responsibility of partners of a limited liability partnership or foreign limited liability partnership [ORGANIZATION MEMBERS]. Notwithstanding any other provision of [AS 10.50 OR] AS 32.06, a partner [MEMBER] of a limited liability partnership or a foreign limited liability partnership [ORGANIZATION] holding a license under this title is not relieved of the obligation or the liability otherwise imposed upon a holder of a liquor license under this title solely because the license is held by a limited liability partnership or a foreign limited liability partnership [ORGANIZATION].

 Sec. 2. AS 09.65 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 09.65.315. Damages resulting from driving the vehicle of a person under the influence of an alcoholic beverage. (a) A person is not liable beyond the limits of any applicable insurance policy purchased by or on behalf of the owner of the vehicle for damages resulting from a motor vehicle accident if the person was driving a vehicle involved in the accident and

(1) before the accident, started driving the vehicle involved in the accident from or near licensed premises;

(2) is, at the time of the accident, a person employed in the course and scope of employment to or under contract to drive a taxicab or limousine, a taxicab or limousine owner, a holder of a taxicab or limousine permit issued by a municipality, or an owner or employee of a company that dispatches taxicabs or limousines;

(3) was not under the influence of an alcoholic beverage, inhalant, or controlled substance at the time of the accident;

(4) was driving the vehicle to the motor vehicle owner's residence or designated residential location at the request of the motor vehicle owner or operator or a law enforcement officer; and

(5) was driving the vehicle because the motor vehicle owner or operator was under the influence of an alcoholic beverage or reasonably believed to be under the influence of an alcoholic beverage.

(b) A person licensed under AS 04.11.080 - 04.11.255, or an agent or employee of the person, is not liable for damages resulting from a motor vehicle accident described under (a) of this section. A person or entity that participates in making arrangements for transportation of a vehicle under (a) of this section is not liable for damages resulting from a motor vehicle accident described in (a) of this section.

(c) This section does not

(1) preclude liability for civil damages as a result of gross negligence or reckless or intentional misconduct;

(2) limit the ability of a person to recover damages under any applicable uninsured or underinsured motor vehicle insurance coverage; or

(3) limit the ability of a person to recover damages under any applicable liability insurance coverage purchased by or on behalf of the person being transported under (a) of this section.

(d) A motor vehicle owner is considered to have given consent to another person to drive the owner's motor vehicle if the other person is involved in an accident and the provisions of (a) of this section apply to the other person.

(e) In this section,

(1) "controlled substance" has the meaning given in AS 28.33.190;

(2) "inhalant" has the meaning given to the phrase "hazardous volatile material or substance" in AS 47.37.270;

(3) "licensed premises" has the meaning given in AS 04.21.080.

 Sec. 3. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

APPLICABILITY. Section 2 of this Act applies to a civil action that accrues on or after the effective date of this Act.

SPONSOR STATEMENT
SENATE BILL NO. 78

Senate Bill 78 seeks to treat members of limited liability companies ("LLC") in the same manner as shareholders of corporations for liability purposes under Alaska liquor laws. As it is currently written, AS 04.21.035 provides that a member of a limited liability company ("LLC") or a partner of a limited liability partnership that holds a license under Title 4, governing alcoholic beverages, is not relieved of the liability imposed upon a liquor license holder solely because the license is held by a LLC or a limited liability partnership.

SB 78 seeks to change current statute to reflect the fact that presently, persons engaged in businesses commonly use LLC's instead of corporations while leaving intact the limited liability of the LLC members for all other business purposes. In general, LLC members have limited liability protection from LLC creditors, just like shareholders of corporations do from corporation creditors. However, AS 04.21.035 takes away that limited liability protection with respect to holding a liquor license and in liquor related businesses. To avoid that result under the current statutes, the owner of a liquor business holding a liquor license seeking limited liability protection has to do business through a corporate entity.

Businesses have recognized the greater flexibility in internal governance matters afforded by the LLC structure and have increasingly turned to LLC's as a preferred form of entity for doing business. Businesses consciously choose LLC's to have greater management and efficiency without sacrificing the limited liability protection from business creditors afforded to owners of corporations. LLC's are routinely used in Alaska (as well as the rest of the United States) as limited liability protection entities in place of corporations. Therefore SB 78 seeks to provide equal treatment to LLCs in the liquor liability context as they are treated in the business world generally.

If passed, SB 78 will help to encourage business development by reflecting the fact that LLC's are more similar to and used in the business world as alternatives to corporations and are less commonly used as alternatives to sole proprietorships or general partnerships, which pass on general liability to their owners.

FISCAL NOTE

STATE OF ALASKA BILL NO. SB 78
2011 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Analysis

SB 78 provides members of limited liability companies ("LLC") the same protections as shareholders of corporations for liability purposes under Alaska liquor laws.

Currently AS 04.21.035 provides that a member of a limited liability company ("LLC") or a partner of a limited liability partnership that holds a license under Title 4 is not relieved of the liability imposed upon a liquor license holder solely because the license is held by a LLC or a limited liability partnership.

Passage of this legislation will not have a fiscal impact on the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

ALYESKA RESORT
ALASKA

February 14, 2011

VIA EXPRESS COURIER

The Honorable Dennis Egan
Chair
Senate Labor & Commerce Committee
State Capitol, Room 150
Juneau, Alaska 99801

Re: Letter of Support for SB 78

Dear Senator Egan:

Alyeska Resort supports passage of Senate Bill 78, which would treat members of limited liability companies in the same manner as shareholders of corporations for liability purposes under Alaska liquor laws by eliminating the pass through exposure that members of limited liability companies now have under AS 04.21.035.

Summary of AS 04.21.035

Alaska Statute 04.21.035 provides that a member of a limited liability company ("LLC") or a partner of a limited liability partnership that holds a license under Title 4, which governs alcoholic beverages, is not relieved of the liability imposed upon a liquor license holder solely because the license is held by an LLC or a limited liability partnership.

Why AS 04.21.035 Is Unworkable

AS 04.21AS 04.21.035 does not recognize the realities of doing business today in the LLC format, unfairly penalizes those who choose to do business as an LLC rather than a corporation in the alcohol business, and causes unnecessary expense. AS 04.21.035 frustrates business development because it does not reflect the fact that LLC's are more similar to and used in the business world as alternatives to corporations, which do not pass general liability to their owners, than similar to and used as alternatives to sole proprietorships or general partnerships, which do pass general liability to their owners. Owners of businesses elect to use the simplified entity form of an LLC over a corporation while retaining the limited liability protection for the LLC's members. The owners of these businesses, however, cannot realize the benefits of using an LLC instead of a corporation without subjecting themselves to liability under AS 04.21.035.

LLC members typically have limited liability protection from LLC creditors, just like shareholders of corporations do from corporation creditors. Under AS 10.50.265 in the Alaska Revised Limited Liability Company Act, a member of an LLC "is not liable, solely by reason of being a member…for a liability of the company to a third party, whether the liability arises in contract, tort or another form, or for the acts or omissions of another member, manager, agent or employee of the company to a third party." AS 04.21.035 takes away that limited liability protection with respect to the holding of a liquor license and in liquor related businesses. To avoid that result under the current statutes, the owner of a liquor business holding a liquor license seeking limited liability protection must do business through a corporate entity.

Businesses consciously choose LLC's to have greater management and efficiency without sacrificing the limited liability protection from business creditors afforded to owners of corporations. LLC's are routinely used in Alaska (as well as the rest of the United States) as limited liability protection entities in place of corporations. There is no reason to treat LLC's differently in the liquor liability context than they are treated in the business world generally.

Why AS 04.21.035 Should Be Changed

At the time that AS 04.21.035 was enacted in 1999, the LLC statute in Alaska was relatively new (enacted in 1994) and LLC's were not as well understood and as commonly used by the general business community as they are now. Apparently, in 1999, someone thought in the licensed liquor business LLC's should be treated more like sole proprietorships or general partnerships with unlimited liability for their owners. However, now that LLC's are better understood and more commonly used in place of corporations as limited liability vehicles for doing business, the time has come to place LLC's on equal footing with corporations in the liquor business context. When we met with the Executive Director and staff of the Alaska Alcoholic Beverage Control Board ("ABC") and explained the reasons for changing the statute, the ABC Executive Director and staff understood the reason for the requested change and voiced no opposition to the amendment.

Additionally, we are aware of other corporations that hold liquor licenses and would prefer to hold the liquor licenses as LLC's but will not do so until AS 04.21.035 is amended.

Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions.

Very truly yours,

J. Randall Call

Additional Information

CORPORATIONS	GENERAL PARTNERSHIPS
Owned by shareholders; Requires directors and officers; Requires Articles of Incorporation and Bylaws. Sub-S Corporations can be used only in limited circumstances and are not available for certain shareholders. All non-Sub-S Corporations are C-Corporations. Limited liability for owners—no personal liability for shareholders generally for acts of corporation. Officers and Directors maintain fiduciary obligations to run corporations in accordance with applicable laws. Prior to the creation of Limited Liability Companies, which are now authorized by statute in all 50 States*, Sub-S Corporations were used as the corporation of choice for investors. In approximately 1994, Alaska followed the majority of other States in allowing Limited Liability Companies in Alaska.	Owned by partners. No limited liability for owners—all partners are individually liable for acts of partnership. Profits are divided among the partners. LIMITED PARTNERSHIPS At least one general partner which is liable for debts of the Limited Partnership, limited partners are not liable for debts of the Limited Partnership. General Partners in a General Partnership or a Limited Partnership are responsible for the debts of the entity. Prior to the creation of Limited Liability Companies, Limited Partnerships were used as an alternative to Sub-S Corporations for investors, where the Sub-S Corporation was not available to the investment entity. In approximately 2000, Alaska followed the majority of other States in allowing Limited Liability Partnerships in Alaska. A Limited Liability Partnership must start out as a general partnership and be subsequently converted to a Limited Liability Partnership.

SENATE BILL 78

PURPOSE OF SENATE BILL 78

Senate Bill 78 deletes the "pass through liability" to members of Limited Liability Companies with respect to liquor license issues imposed by AS 04.21.035, while retaining the current "pass through liability" for limited liability and foreign limited liability partnerships. This modification will make Alaska Law substantively more consistent with other States, including Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada, Idaho and Utah with respect to pass through liability for members of Limited Liability Companies.

BACKGROUND OF LLCs.

Starting with the pioneering state of Wyoming in 1977, and ending with the action of the Hawaii legislature in 1996, every state has, during those twenty years, passed laws creating a new type of legal entity called a "limited liability company" (or LLC). These entities, which resemble (and are usually taxed as) partnerships, offer the advantages of limited liability, like corporations. While it has long been possible for partnerships to offer limited liability to their LIMITED partners, a limited partnership always had to have at least one GENERAL partner, who was fully liable for the debts of the business.

In addition, all 50 states and D.C. have now adopted a similar type of entity, the limited liability partnership (LLP) or registered limited liability partnership (RLLP). The LLP (or an RLLP) is simply a garden variety partnership that registers with the state and pays a specified fee, in order to become an LLP or RLLP and to have limited liability conferred upon the partnership, which is generally quite similar to an LLC, except that it may be operated like a regular partnership, for the most part.

However, LLPs are mostly used for professional firms, and in some states (New York and California and, until recently, Nevada) only professional firms may set up LLPs. For professionals, the LLP offers only somewhat limited protection from liability, in that a professional who is a partner in an LLP remains personally liable for his or her own malpractice or gross negligence, or such misdeeds committed by employees of the LLP who operate under that partner's direction. (The same is generally true of professional corporations or professional LLCs.) But in most states, other, non-professional businesses may also operate as LLPs, and generally obtain more liability protection than professional LLPs.

SUBJECT: Proposed amendments to AS 04.21.035
(Work Order No. 27-LS0282\M)

TO: Senator Lesil McGuire
Attn: Esther Tempel

FROM: Doug Gardner
Director

Currently, AS 04.21.035 is an exception to the protections against individual liability offered to partners of properly registered and maintained LLPs and to members of properly registered and maintained LLCs. In other words, partners of LLPs and LLCs--notwithstanding the fact that they have complied with AS 10.50 (LLCs) or AS 32.06 (LLPs)--are not relieved of the obligation or the liability otherwise imposed upon a liquor license holder under Title 4.

LLCs and LLPs are two approaches that have been used throughout the U.S. in recent years to combine the federal tax benefits of partnerships with the non-liability of the shareholders of corporations.[1] Both LLCs and LLPs are being used to capture the traditional non-liability of shareholders of corporations. Currently, Title 4 treats LLCs differently than how LLCs are treated elsewhere in Alaska law. SB 78 deletes reference to LLCs from AS 04.21.035, thereby allowing members of LLCs to rely on AS 10.50.265 for purposes of liability when the LLC holds a liquor license under Title 4, and allows LLCs to be treated consistently in Alaska law. By removing LLCs from AS 04.21.035 and leaving LLPs in the statute, a person who wants to manage liability under AS 04.21 would be able to form as an LLC rather than as an LLP as long as all the LLC requirements in AS 10.50 are met.

[1] LLCs can elect for federal tax purposes the pass-through taxation of partnerships, where the partner is taxed on partnership income, but the partnership itself is not. In general (there are exceptions), a corporation is taxed on corporate income, and the shareholders are taxed on their dividends.

Changes in Senate Judiciary Committee to Senate Bill 82

The Senate Judiciary Committee adopted an amendment requested by the Department of Law. It provides:

* conforming amendments (to changes made by last year's House Bill 126) which permit the Department, a guardian, parent or custodian acting on behalf of a child to apply for custody to the age of 21 in one-year periods, if the extensions are in the best interests of the child and the child consents to it.

* a requirement that when custody of a child in the care of the department is due to expire, the department will file notice with the court 30 days before the date of release and provide that notice to all parties -- including the child -- if the child is 16 years of age or older unless all parties have agreed to a shorter notice period.

A BILL

FOR AN ACT ENTITLED

"An Act relating to the procedures and jurisdiction of the Department of Health and Social Services for the care of children who are in state custody; relating to court jurisdiction and findings pertaining to children who are in state custody; and modifying the licensing requirements for foster care."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

 Section 1. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

SHORT TITLE. This Act may be known as the Alaska Foster Family Protection Act.

 Sec. 2. AS 47.10.080(l) is amended to read:

(l) Within 12 months after the date a child enters foster care as calculated under AS 47.10.088(f), the court shall hold a permanency hearing. The hearing and permanent plan developed in the hearing are governed by the following provisions:

(1) the persons entitled to be heard under AS 47.10.070 or under (f) of this section are also entitled to be heard at the hearing held under this subsection;

(2) when establishing the permanent plan for the child, the court shall make appropriate written findings, including findings related to whether

(A) and when the child should be returned to the parent or guardian;

(B) the child should be placed for adoption or legal guardianship and whether a petition for termination of parental rights should be filed by the department; and

(C) there is a compelling reason that the most appropriate placement for the child is [SHOULD BE PLACED] in another planned, permanent living arrangement and the department has recommended the arrangement under AS 47.14.100(p); the findings under this paragraph must include the steps that [AND WHAT STEPS] are necessary to achieve the new arrangement;

(3) if the court is unable to make a finding required under (2) of this subsection, the court shall hold another hearing within a reasonable period of time;

(4) in addition to the findings required by (2) of this subsection, the court shall also make appropriate written findings related to

(A) whether the department has made the reasonable efforts required under AS 47.10.086 to offer appropriate family support services to remedy the parent's or guardian's conduct or conditions in the home that made the child a child in need of aid under this chapter;

(B) whether the parent or guardian has made substantial progress to remedy the parent's or guardian's conduct or conditions in the home that made the child a child in need of aid under this chapter;

(C) if the permanent plan is for the child to remain in out-of-home-care, whether the child's out-of-home placement continues to be appropriate and in the best interests of the child; and

(D) whether the department has made reasonable efforts to finalize the permanent plan for the child;

(5) the court shall hold a hearing to review the permanent plan at least annually until successful implementation of the plan; if the plan approved by the court changes after the hearing, the department shall promptly apply to the court for another permanency hearing, and the court shall conduct the hearing within 30 days after application by the department.

 Sec. 3. AS 47.10.080 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(w) The court shall recognize a presumption that maintenance of a sibling relationship, including with a sibling who is related by blood, marriage, or adoption through one parent, is in a child's best interest.

 Sec. 4. AS 47.10.100 is amended to read:

Sec. 47.10.100. Retention of jurisdiction over child [MINOR]. (a) The court retains jurisdiction over the case and may at any time stay execution, modify, set aside, revoke, or enlarge a judgment or order, or grant a new hearing, in the exercise of its power of protection over the child [MINOR] and for the child's [MINOR'S] best interest, for a period of time not to exceed two years or in any event extend past the day the child reaches [MINOR BECOMES] 19 years of age, unless sooner discharged by the court, except that the department may apply for and the court may grant an additional one-year period of custody or supervision past [AGE] 19 years of age and additional one-year periods of custody that do not extend beyond the person's 21st birthday if continued custody or supervision is in the best interests of the person and the person consents to it. An application for any of these purposes may be made by the parent, guardian, or custodian acting in behalf of the child [MINOR], or the court may, on its own motion, and after reasonable notice to interested parties and the appropriate department, take action that it considers appropriate.

(b) If the court determines at a hearing authorized by (a) of this section that the department has complied with the requirements for release of a child under AS 47.14.100(q) and that it is in [FOR] the best interests of the child [MINOR] to be released to the child's own custody, or to the care or custody of the child's [MINOR'S] parent, guardian, or custodian, it shall [MAY] enter an order to that effect and the child [MINOR] is discharged from the control of the department.

(c) If a child [MINOR] is adjudicated a child in need of aid before the child's [MINOR'S] 18th birthday, the court may retain jurisdiction over the child [MINOR] after the child's [MINOR'S] 18th birthday for the purpose of supervising the child

[MINOR], but the court's jurisdiction over the minor under this chapter never extends beyond the child's [MINOR'S] 19th birthday, except that the department may apply for and the court may grant an additional one-year period of custody or supervision past [AGE] 19 years of age and additional one-year periods of custody that do not extend beyond the person's 21st birthday if continued custody or supervision is in the best interests of the person and the person consents to it. The department may retain jurisdiction over a child [BETWEEN THE CHILD'S 18TH AND 19TH BIRTHDAYS FOR THE PURPOSE OF SUPERVISING THE CHILD,] if the child has been placed in the custody or under the supervision of the department before the child's 18th birthday, except that the department may apply for and the court may grant an additional one-year period of custody or supervision past [AGE] 19 years of age and additional one-year periods of custody that do not extend beyond the person's 21st birthday if continued custody or supervision is in the best interests of the person and the person consents to it.

* Sec. 5. AS 47.14.100(m) is amended to read:

(m) Prima facie evidence of good cause not to place a child with an adult family member or family friend under AS 47.10.088(i) or under (e) of this section includes the failure to meet the requirements for a foster care license under AS 47.32 and regulations adopted under AS 47.32, taking into account a waiver, variance, or exemption allowed under AS 47.32.030(a)(3) and 47.32.032. Prima facie evidence of good cause not to place a child with an adult family member or adult family friend does not include poverty or inadequate or crowded housing. If the department denies a request for placement with an adult family member or a family friend, the department shall inform the adult family member or family friend of the basis for the denial and the right to request a hearing to review the decision. A non-party adult family member or family friend requesting a review hearing under AS 47.10.088(i) or under (e) of this section is not eligible for publicly appointed legal counsel.

* Sec. 6. AS 47.14.100 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(o) Except as provided in (p) and (q) of this section, the department shall continue to search for a suitable adoptive or permanent legal guardianship for a child who is in the custody of the state and who is under 18 years of age.

(p) The department may recommend to the court another planned permanent living arrangement for a child who is in state custody only if

(1) the child is 16 years of age or older;

(2) the department has unsuccessfully made intensive efforts to find a permanent placement for the child; and

(3) the department, after considering reunification, adoption, legal guardianship, or permanent placement with a fit and willing relative, determines that there is a compelling reason that the most appropriate permanency plan for the child is placement in another planned permanent living arrangement, and the department documents for the court the compelling reason for the alternate plan.

(q) The department may release from state custody a child who has been committed to the custody of the department, before the custody is ordered to end, only if

(1) the child, if the child is over 16 years of age and available, and the guardian ad litem are notified not less than 30 days before a motion for release is filed unless the parties agree to a shorter notice period;

(2) the department files a motion with the court for release of state custody that describes the reasons the release is in the best interest of the child; and

(3) a court makes a written finding that release from state custody is in the best interest of the child.

(r) When custody of a child who has been committed to the custody of the department is due to expire, the department shall file a notice of release with the court 30 days before the date of release unless the parties agree to a shorter notice period and distribute the notice to the parties, including the child if the child is 16 years of age or older and available.

(s) The department shall make reasonable efforts to place siblings in the same placement if the siblings are residing in the same home when taken into the custody of the department. If siblings are not placed together after reasonable efforts have been made, the case supervisor for the division with responsibility over the custody of children shall document in the file the efforts that were made and the reason separating the siblings for placement purposes is in the best interest of the children. In this subsection, "sibling" means two or more persons who are related by blood, adoption, or marriage as a child of one or both parents.

(t) As used in (p) of this section, "compelling reason" may include circumstances in which

(1) the child has specifically requested that emancipation be established;

(2) a parent and child have a significant bond, but the parent is unable to care for the child because of an emotional or physical disability, and the child's foster parents have committed to raising the child to the age of majority and to facilitating visitation with the disabled parent.

(u) In this section, "another planned permanent living arrangement" means a permanent living arrangement for a child who is committed to the custody of the department under AS 47.10.080(c)(1) that is an alternative to permanent placement with an adult family member, and to reunification, adoption, and legal guardianship.

* Sec. 7. AS 47.32 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 47.32.032. Foster care license; variance. (a) The department shall streamline the application and licensing paperwork necessary for a person to be approved as a foster parent or relative placement to the extent consistent with federal law.

(b) The department shall approve a variance of the applicable building code requirements for licensure of a foster care home to the extent permitted by federal law if an applicant does not meet the requirements at the time of inspection and

(1) the home design and construction is consistent with homes located in the community; and

(2) the home is otherwise a safe environment for a child.

Reletter the following subsections accordingly.

Explanation for revisions on page 3, lines 16-18 and page 4, lines 3-5 and 10-12:

Each line allows for "additional periods of supervision past age 19 that do not extend beyond the person's 21st birthday." This language needs to be amended as it is in conflict with AS 47.10.080(c)(2) which allows for only one additional period of supervision beyond the child's 19th birthday.

If section 4 in HB 33 passes as written, without also amending AS 47.10.080(c)(2)(B), there would be a conflict between AS 47.10.080(c)(2) and AS 47.10.100, as amended, since AS 47.10.100 would allow supervision until the 21st birthday and AS 47.10.080(c)(2) would allow supervision only until the 20th birthday.

This revision fixes this conflict by distinguishing between supervision (up until the 20th birthday) and custody (up until the 21st birthday).

Explanation for revisions on page 5, lines 10-11 and line 15:

The bill now says: "Unless the child, department, and guardian ad litem agree to a release from custody without a motion and with less than 30 days' notice, …". If OCS seeks to release custody prior to the time custody ends per court order, it is seeking to modify the court order. This bill would allow the parties to agree to modify a court order without court action, but only the court can modify its earlier order. This could be fixed by just removing the words "without a motion." However, I think adding the words "unless the parties agree to a shorter notice period" to the end of line 15 is a cleaner way to say this.

Explanation for revisions on page 5, line 12:

This section allows a child under 19 years of age to be notified before the state seeks to release custody, but shouldn't it also apply to the over 19- under 21 group? Don't they want advance notice too? If they do, this revision would allow all children to receive advance notice.

Explanation for revisions on page 5, line 13 and the new (r):

There are two ways to release a child from state custody: (1) custody automatically lapses because the time the court ordered custody to end has arrived; and (2) OCS seeks to release custody prior to the time the court ordered custody to end. This bill requires a motion to be filed in either situation. It is bad policy to ask the court for permission to release custody when custody automatically lapses because (1) it uses judicial resources unnecessarily; (2) it incorrectly suggests that the court has the power not to extend custody (only OCS or the GAL can file a petition to extend custody). A better solution is to require OCS to file a notice of release when custody automatically lapses (the new proposed (r)) and a motion to release when custody before custody is set to end. Such a revision would still accomplish the purpose of this bill (to warn an older child that custody is ending).

Explanation for revisions on page 5, line 14:

As we heard during public testimony from the youth foster care advocate in Anchorage (I didn't catch her name), the point of subsection (q) is to avoid a young adult being released to their own care with no warning that state custody is ending. This bill now requires notice to all children under 19, but I propose to limit notice to 16 or older.

Here's why: OCS would never release custody of a child under age 18 to his/her self (unless in the rare case that a 16+-year-old is emancipated, but that child would already be involved since the child is the petitioner in emancipation cases). It serves no purpose to notify a young child – for example, a 2-year-old – prior to OCS filing a motion to release that child to their parents. Giving notice to the child's GAL, who represents the child's best interests, should be sufficient for children under age 16.

RE: Request for Hearing - SB82 – Foster Care Licensing/State Custody "An Act relating to the procedures and jurisdiction of the Department of Health and Social Services for the care of children who are in state custody; relating to court jurisdiction and findings pertaining to children who are in state custody; and modifying the licensing requirements for foster care."

Senator French,

You currently have in your possession SB82 – Foster Care Licensing/State Custody. SB82 mirrors HB33, a bill that was originally introduced by Representative Les Gara. I was asked to introduce legislation that mirrored HB33 in an effort to get this important bill moving and hopefully passed.

SB82 modifies various provisions in Title 47, making small but very significant changes that prioritize the needs of youth in foster care. This legislation addresses permanent planning for children in custody under "Another Planned Permanent Living Arrangement (APPLA);" modifies licensing procedures; outlines court requirements for release or termination of custody by the courts; outlines "compelling reason" standards for youth with APPLA permanency goals; and provides a provision to support placement of siblings into the same foster home.

This legislation is supported by the department and carries a zero fiscal note. I would greatly appreciate your consideration in scheduling this important bill for hearing as soon as possible. Please let me know if you have any questions.

Thank you.

Senate Bill 82 "An Act relating to the procedures and jurisdiction of the Department of Health and Social Services for the care of children who are in state custody; relating to court jurisdiction and findings pertaining to children who are in state custody; and modifying the licensing requirements for foster care."

SPONSOR STATEMENT

Senate Bill 82 modifies various provisions in Title 47 by making small, but very significant changes that better prioritize the needs of foster children. This legislation seeks to:

1. Achieve Permanency for Older Children in Foster Care – Permanency for children in OCS custody is best achieved through reunification with the child's parent, or failing that option, through adoption or guardianship. If these three options are not available, another form of permanency is through APPLA ("Another Planned Permanent Living Arrangement"). This bill seeks to make sure the APPLA option is not chosen unnecessarily by providing guidelines for both OCS and the court as to when APPLA should be used.
2. Presumption to Keep Siblings Together – Although OCS attempts to keep siblings together when they enter foster care, this bill creates a statutory presumption that siblings be placed in the same home when possible and when such a placement is in the siblings' best interest. When the children cannot be in the same home, this bill requires an OCS supervisor to document in the file the efforts made and the reason for the separation.
3. Early Release of Custody - When OCS files a motion to release a child from state custody before the custody order expires, this bill requires OCS and the court to take extra steps to ensure the child and Guardian ad Litem have ample notice of the motion and that the release is in the child's best interest.
4. Foster Home Licensing Variance Process - If a potential foster home cannot meet the building codes required to be a licensed foster home, this bill allows a variance to be granted if the home is consistent with construction of other homes in the community and is otherwise a safe environment for the child.
5. Streamlining Application Process for Foster Parents
   This bill requires that paperwork required for foster parent licensing be streamlined as much as possible.
6. Housekeeping – The bill includes some minor changes to a statute to make it consistent with last year's legislation to extend foster care to age 21.

FISCAL NOTE #1

STATE OF ALASKA BILL NO. CSSSSB 82(HSS)
2011 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Analysis:

SSB082 has zero fiscal impact on DHSS. This bill addresses permanent planning for children in custody under "Another Planned, Permanent Living Arrangement (APPLA)"; modifies licensing procedures; outlines court requirements for release or termination of custody by the courts; outlines "compelling reason" standards for youth with APPLA permanency goals; provides a provision to support placement of siblings into the same foster home; and establishes a requirement that the Department will enroll children 6 years of age and younger into a "reading enhancement program" where available. No additional costs are anticipated.

Subject: Another Planned Permanent Living Arrangement

Following is information on state legislation around Another Permanent Planned Living Arrangement as a permanency goal for children in foster care. Also, below is information on states that allow for the reinstatement of parental rights (a strategy states may use to reduce the use of APPLA as a permanency option).

- State Legislation

New York:

2005 N.Y. Laws, SB 5805, Chap. 3: Specifies the required contents of permanency hearing reports to the court. Describes acceptable permanency goals. Provides that the permanency goal of "another planned permanent living arrangement" must include a significant connection to an adult who is willing to be a permanency resource for the child.

2007 N.Y. Laws, SB 4551, Chap. 327: Clarifies that the plan of "another planned permanent living arrangement" must include documentation of the child's significant connection to an adult who is willing to be a permanency resource for the child.

Alabama:

Section 12-15-315 of the Alabama Code: States that if the juvenile court determines the permanent plan shall be placement in another planned permanent living arrangement, the Department of Human Resources must document to the juvenile court a compelling reason for determining that it would not be in the best interests of the child to return home, be placed for adoption with no identified resource or with the current foster parent, or be permanently placed with a relative, with a transfer of legal and physical custody to the relative or with a transfer of physical custody to the relative but with the Department of Human Resources retaining legal custody, be placed with a kinship guardian, or be placed in adult custodial care.

Connecticut:

Sec. 4. Section 46b-129 of the Connecticut Code: Orders that at a permanency hearing the court shall approve a permanency plan that is in the best interests of the child or youth and takes into consideration the child's or youth's need for permanency. Another Planned living arrangement can be ordered by the court, provided the Commissioner of Children and Families has documented a compelling reason why it would not be in the best interest of the child or youth for the permanency plan to include a different permanency goal. (Sec. 4. Section 46b-129 of the 2010 supplement to the general statutes)

West Virginia:

Section 49-6-5 of West Virginia Code: Orders that a child may be placed in another planned permanent living arrangement, but only in cases where the department has documented to the circuit court a compelling reason for determining that it would not be in the best interests of the child to follow one of the other permanency options. (Section 49-6-5. Disposition of neglected or abused children)

- Reinstatement of Parental Rights

Several states have also passed legislation that allows for the reinstatement of parental rights following termination of parental rights. The laws were developed in response to children who were aging out of the foster care system and re-establishing ties with parents and family members.

Legislation for Reinstatement following Termination of Parental Rights

State	Statute or Code	Who Can File Motion or Petition	Who Must Be Notified

RE: SB 82: Stability and Opportunity for Foster Youth

Dear Senator Davis,

Alaska Association of Homes for Children (AAHC) thanks you for introducing legislation to improve the service delivery of foster care. Several agencies within our association provide foster care and many of the youth we serve benefit from this critical service.

Unfortunately, we all have witnessed children on long waiting lists for a viable foster care placement for various reasons. The intent of SB 82 provides concrete solutions to streamline the process for foster parents, develop resources for children, and reinforce the goals related to permanency planning.

Placing children in rural areas poses additional challenges related to numerous licensing issues. It can be extremely difficult finding foster homes that meet state licensing requirements. Licensing variances for homes failing to meet specific codes when indicated would provide opportunities for families to open up their homes to provide care for foster children.

Foster care provides for a very cost effective way of helping children. Allowing more families to commit to the many Alaskan children waiting for a quality home creates a win win opportunity for all. AAHC truly appreciates your continued efforts to assist with the foster care system in Alaska.

The provisions within your bill would provide a wise investment in the health and wellbeing of Alaska's children.

Thank you,

Brad Ohs
AAHC President

Re: Support for HB 33

Dear Representative Gara,

On behalf of the Alaska Mental Health Board and the Advisory Board on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse, I would like to express our thanks and appreciation for the commitment that you and your co-sponsors have made to improving the lives of Alaskan children in foster care. HB 33 continues that process of system improvement, and we support the small but very significant changes that better prioritize the needs of foster children.

Being removed from your home, even when that home is not a safe or healthy environment, is traumatic. Being removed from your home and then separated from your brothers and sisters compounds the initial harm caused by abuse or neglect exponentially. While we know this from research and study, the Boards recognized fully the devastating effect this separation has on foster children when we heard from youth involved in the 2011 Youth Policy Summit. No child should have to beg, plead and fight for years to see a brother or sister, and yet we heard how this is the case for far too many youth who grow up in foster care.

HB 33 also prioritizes family connections as an important source of strength, support and resiliency for children and youth who experience abuse or neglect by making family placements easier in rural Alaska. Too often children in rural Alaska are placed with foster parents in urban communities rather than with relatives in villages, with the justification that the rural homes fail to meet foster care licensing standards. How can an aunt in a village where no one has running water ever hope to care for a niece or nephew who is in need, if there is no reasonableness standard in determining a safe physical environment for placement? HB 33 provides that element of reason to family placement decisions.

We are grateful for your continued advocacy for Alaska's children and are glad to be able to support HB 33.

Sincerely,

J. Kate Burkhart

Juneau, Alaska 99801-1182

Dear Representative Gara:
The National Association of Social Workers (NASW) – Alaska Chapter, a membership organization that represents over 500 social workers across the State of Alaska, supports The Alaska Foster Family Protection Act.

The mission of NASW is to enhance the effective functioning and well-being of individuals, families, and communities through its work and through its advocacy. The Alaska Foster Family Projection act upholds this mission by ensuring that Alaska's most vulnerable children can more easily transition into safe and permanent homes. The increase in the number of rural foster care placements is especially crucial so youth in rural Alaska can continue to live in their home communities. Research demonstrates that youth from rural communities, and specifically Alaska Native youth, have more promising futures when they are able to maintain connection with their communities and tribes.

Thank you for your consistent attention to child welfare issues in Alaska. We look forward to working with you on behalf of children and families in our state.

Sincerely,

Meg Loomis, MSW

RE: HB 33: Stability and Opportunity for Foster Youth

Dear Representative Gara,

The members of the Alaska Behavioral Health Association would like to inform you of their support for this legislation. It's intent is consistent with the goals and values of the members that provide services in our state and also provides opportunities to expand a system that is currently incapable of meeting the needs of youth.

Our providers have experienced tremendous difficulties in placing children and youth back in their home communities when a foster home is required due to the home situation of the biological parents. Frequently, homes may be available but they don't meet the more ridged codes and standards that govern construction in metropolitan areas. While no one would ever want a child placed in an unsafe environment, we are aware that minor code violations can be prohibitively expensive to repair and a foster home can be lost.

We hear reports from providers that it often takes up to six months or more from the time a family begins the application process and they are finally able to accept a child in their home. We appreciate the careful attention to ensure that a child is placed in a safe environment; however, redundancy and over-attention can become a barrier rather than a safe guard.

Thank you for your commitment to foster children and working to make their lives better.

Sincerely,

RE: HB 33: Stability and Opportunity for Foster Youth

Dear Representative Gara:

This letter is to inform you of the strong support the Administration and Board of Directors have for the above-mentioned bill. It's intent is consistent with the goals and values of the Treatment Foster Care Program operated by Alaska Children's Services and provides opportunities to expand a system that is currently incapable of meeting the needs of youth.

We are particularly appreciative of the section regarding permanency placement. As you have stated the ultimate goal in foster care is to place a child in a good, stable, permanent home through adoption, guardianship, or reunification. Frequently, however, in our haste to find a child a bed or a roof over their head, we lose sight of this goal. By adding additional oversight to the permanency planning process, this goal can be reached.

Alaska Children's Services has experienced tremendous difficulties in placing children and youth back in their home communities when a foster home is required due to the home situation of the biological parents. Frequently, homes may be available but don't meet the more rigid codes and standards that govern construction in metropolitan areas. While no one would ever want to place a child in an unsafe environment, we are aware that minor code violations can be prohibitively expensive to repair and a foster home can be lost.

Alaska Children's Services has three full-time professional staff who comprise the treatment foster care licensing department. They report that it frequently takes up to six months or more from the time a family begins the application process and they are finally able to accept a child in their home. We appreciate the careful attention to ensure that a child is placed in a safe environment; however, redundancy and over-attention can become a barrier rather than a safeguard.

Overall, thank you very much for your continued commitment to one of our most vulnerable populations, our foster children, and please advise if there is more we can do to support this legislation.

Alaska State Legislature

Dear Representative Gara:

I am writing in support of HB33, the legislation you have proposed relating to foster care in Alaska. Denali Family Services (DFS) is a community mental health agency that provides therapeutic foster care to many children in the custody of the State / Office of Children's Services. DFS is also a child placement agency and in that role, processes foster home applications and licenses foster home in cooperation with OCS (i.e., the license is still a State foster care license). As an agency licensing foster homes, we support using the variance for homes in rural communities as long as the home is a safe environment and there are adequate ways to exit the home in case of a fire.

Denali Family Services serves many adolescents who are moving from care to independence and I am especially pleased to see the language changes that will make extending foster care to age 21 easily accessible for youth who want to take advantage of that opportunity. For youth who do not have a support system in place, those additional three years can make a huge difference in their maturity and readiness to survive on their own.

With regard to the application process for foster parents, DFS has significantly reduced our paperwork requirements in the last two years. In addition, effective this fiscal year, DFS will be utilizing a new foster parent training curricula (Presley Ridge). This curricula offers foster care providers in-depth, specialized training and OCS has agreed that DFS' foster parents who complete the Presley Ridge training will not have to take the OCS CORE training. This change will provide foster parents with more specialized training while maintaining the total hours at a number (per year) that is manageable.

On behalf of Denali Family Services, I am writing in support of HB33. Should you need additional information, please feel free to contact me at 907-222-2322.

Senator Bettye Davis
State Capital Room 30
Juneau, AK 99801

Dear Senator Davis,

Thank you for introducing SB 82, a bill focused on improving Alaska's foster care program and protecting children to the best of our ability. Covenant House Alaska (CHA) serves Alaska's homeless and at-risk youth through our Crisis Center, Transitional Living Programs, Healthcare and Educational/Employment Support. CHA appreciates your commitment to keeping Alaska's youth as safe and healthy as possible.

SB 82 enacts the following changes to protect foster care youth:

> (1) SB 82 requires the department to seek permanency for all youth and, if positive permanency plans are unsuccessful, imposes substantive and procedural protections around planning for youth to be placed in another planned permanent living arrangement;
> (2) SB 82 simplifies the application process to become a foster home and allows the department to waive strict compliance with building code requirements for foster and relative placements if the placement is in the child's best interest and is otherwise preferable and safe; and
> (3) SB 82 requires the department to make all reasonable efforts to place siblings together.

All of the changes listed above evince strong policy underpinnings. Specific to CHA's population of homeless and runaway youth, the provisions regarding waiving strict building code compliance for relatives' homes and placing siblings together are particularly noteworthy. Research indicates that foster care youth who are placed with siblings in the home of a relative or family friend, usually in a familiar community, tend to run away less frequently.

These statutory changes may be viewed as measures targeted to prevent youth homelessness. And, just as important, if a youth comes to Covenant House from the foster care system who qualifies for extended court supervision, it appears that this legislation would allow CHA to work with the department to continue to provide services for the youth.

Thank you for your efforts at protecting Alaska's vulnerable children. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can answer any questions or provide further feedback on SB 82.

<TARGET><BILL>SB 86</BILL><SUBJECT>SB 86 (FILE 1)</SUBJECT><COMM>SJUD27</COMM></TARGET>

ISSUES FOR SB86

(from the committee hearing and from subsequent discussions with sponsors)

1. Ex-parte Orders for protection of financial assets [language on page 3 at Section 5]:

   Language needs to be tightened up to ensure that the vulnerable adult is notified of all ex-parte hearing requests. We should consider an exception for when telling the vulnerable adult is tantamount to telling the bad actor (e.g., someone who is their principal caretaker) but still require that some rationale be filed with the court for its review. The departments argue that this would not "happen very often" but the fact is that under this provision a large number of 3rd parties can potentially file for an emergency ex-parte order – the state, the person's attorney, a person "interested in the estate, affairs, or welfare of the person", etc. So, it is entirely possible that adult daughter files for protection against her adult brother, and mom or dad never knows it without some provision to ensure they do). It would also not hurt to look at tightening hat list a little, in my opinion, but we should at least make sure that the vulnerable adult is always noticed on the request for a hearing. Scott has provided some suggested language, attached.

   At page 4, there was a question as to the standard of evidence for 72 hour hearings. I believe Kelly had said she thought it it was "clear and convincing", but they later reported it is "preponderance of evidence" – this is the same as it is for other exparte orders, but we should probably just clarify it in the committee record.

2. "Undue influence" [throughout the bill starting at page 8] – The department provided an excellent chart showing that as of 1996, 18 states had laws that recognized undue influence in their vulnerable adult statutes. The committee got copies earlier and will get them again today as table copies. Some states use this only in regard to financial exploitation, others use it in the general statutes. This bill proposes the latter, so it could cover other issues where undue influence can come into play – no changes here that I could see, but it may be worthwhile to put this in the record.

3. Reporting law changes:

   A. . [At page 8, section 13].The issue of "may" give name and address" and later mandatory reporter "shall" seems to be because while we are amending the list of mandatory reporters there is a later provision for non-mandatory reporters in law (not replicated in this bill) and many voluntary reporters do not want to give their names and contacts

B. [section 16, starting on pg 8].The issue as to whether the peace officers new duty to report within 24 hours now falls within the "B" misdo penalty was unclear, and did not get any clearer in subsequent conversations. I asked whether there was --- to put it bluntly - any way to make a report after hours or any point to doing so - and found they have a toll free reporting line, so a police officer, given access to phones, could make a call, but it is answered only during work hours, so wouldn't acted on until the next day. So my thought is, we should ensure that no one is in B misdo land for failing to make a call on a weekend when no one will hear it until Monday anyway.

I asked them if OCS has 24 hour reporting at this point, but didn't get an answer yet. I think the house is looking at language "24 hours or at the earliest opportunity" or words to that effect.

C. [section 18, at page 9]. The provision for reckless reporting is a public policy call. This provision for actual damages "suffered by the person who is the subject" of the report does not exist in other reporting laws to my knowledge - I asked them to check the child abuse reporting statutes, as I did not see it there. They did not find it during the meeting, but may have after they left - I didn't hear one way or the other. Actual damages for reputation can be pretty hefty. On the one hand, we certainly don't want people making allegations in reckless disregard of the truth. On the other hand, the reason we have these laws at all is to require some people to report and to encourage everyone else to do so. There is a provision already in law that gives immunity to people for good faith reporting, but I am not sure what the point of this provision is. I don't think we are exactly being overwhelmed with false reports of elder abuse so that we need to take action to discourage them by explicitly stating it within reporting law.

D. We need to look at an effective date provision for the new reporting requirements - the law takes effect immediately as written, but new reporters and new requirements should need some implementation time.

4. Investigations and access to financial and medical records {Section 25, starting at page 11]:

(a) You had asked why the department would use an ex-parte order rather than a subpoena. I believe from our discussions that the Department has come to agree with you on this point, and is making this change.

(b) I brought up the concern that much of the material being sought has its own confidentiality protections, and asked what OPA and the departments planned to do to ensure that the material continued to be protected or was properly returned or disposed of - they were of the opinion that their files were also confidential and therefore it would not be a problem. I think we should at least make them talk about this on the record. I don't know if they came to an agreement on new language with the house committee on this or not but I know it came up there as well.

Other odds and ends:

5. Fiduciary duty [page 18, line 22]: Scott has proposed replacement language for the definition of "fiduciary duty" which he can explain. It is in his letter, attached.

6. We have general agreement to update the reporting terms that had been in the revisor's bill (this is just changing language to be consistent through the statutes).

7. We should ask them to tell us about any other issues they are aware of, and any other amendment language they'd like us to consider (trying to get as much of the house amendment language in front of us as possible). I had been waiting for that bill but it is still in subcommittee as far as I last heard).

Issue of fraud as separate standard...in testimony the DOL said that if a person who was competent AND a victim of fraud did not want intervention that would not be dispositve. Can we walk through that?

Is there circumstances under which the vulnerable adult could be the(unnotified) respondent in an ex-parte order? MEMORANDUM March 2, 2011

SUBJECT: "Elderly Persons and Disabled Adults" vs. "Vulnerable Adults": Inconsistent terminology in AS 08.29.200(b)(2), AS 08.63.200(b)(2), and AS 47.24 (SB 61, Work Order No. 27-LS0152\B, and SB 86, Work Order No. 27-GS1722\A)

TO: Senator Hollis French
Chair of the Senate Judiciary Committee
Attn: Cindy Smith

FROM: Kathryn L. Kurtz pp for KK
Assistant Revisor

You inquired about the section removed from SB 61 in the Senate State Affairs Committee, and whether it might fit into SB 86. Section 3 of SB 61 substituted the term "vulnerable adult" for "elderly person or disabled adult" in AS 08.29.200(b) to conform that section to the terminology used in AS 47.24.010. It was removed from the bill out of concern that it might involve a substantive change to the law better handled in a substantive bill rather than a bill revising statutes. SB 86 addresses the subject of protection of vulnerable adults, and I believe the changes to AS 08 suggested in the enclosed amendment would fit within that subject.

Background

In the course of reviewing the Alaska Statutes, one of our drafting attorneys noted a discrepancy between the language of AS 08.29.200(b)(2) and AS 47.24. AS 08.29.200 relates to the confidentiality of communications between a licensed professional counselor and a client. Notwithstanding the general requirement of confidentiality, licensed professional counselors are required under this statute to report "incidents of . . . harm or assaults suffered by an elderly person or disabled adult as required by AS 47.24." AS 08.29.200(b)(2). Although AS 47.24 used to address the protection of "elderly persons and disabled adults," AS 47.24, since 1994, has instead used the term "vulnerable adults."

A related issue is presented in AS 08.63.200(b)(2), which imposes a duty on marital and family therapists to report "harm or assaults suffered by an elderly person or disabled adult as required by AS 47.24." AS 47.24.010 requires licensed professional counselors[1] and marital and family therapists who believe that a vulnerable adult "suffers from abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect" to report that belief to the Department of Health and Social Services.

The Issue

The problem we see in AS 08.29.200(b)(2) and AS 08.63.200(b)(2) is that they refer to a duty imposed under AS 47.24, but they use different terminology than AS 47.24 ("elderly person or disabled adult" vs. "vulnerable adult"). This raises a question as to whether the reporting duty in these two sections is the same as that imposed in AS 47.24 or somehow different in scope.

[1] AS 47.24.010(a)(2) specifically requires reporting by:

> (2) a mental health professional as defined in AS 47.30.915(11) and including a marital and family therapist licensed under AS 08.63;

AS 47.30.915(11) defines mental health professional to include licensed professional counselors:

> (11) "mental health professional" means a psychiatrist or physician who is licensed by the State Medical Board to practice in this state or is employed by the federal government; a clinical psychologist licensed by the state Board of Psychologist and Psychological Associate Examiners; a psychological associate trained in clinical psychology and licensed by the Board of Psychologist and Psychological Associate Examiners; a registered nurse with a master's degree in psychiatric nursing, licensed by the State Board of Nursing; a marital and family therapist licensed by the Board of Marital and Family Therapy; a professional counselor licensed by the Board of Professional Counselors; a clinical social worker licensed by the Board of Social Work Examiners; and a person who
> (A) has a master's degree in the field of mental health;
> (B) has at least 12 months of post-masters working experience in the field of mental illness; and
> (C) is working under the supervision of a type of licensee listed in this paragraph;

(emphasis added).

History

AS 47.24 was amended in 1994, by ch. 103, SLA 1994. Prior to the 1994 amendment, AS 47.24.010 required mental health professionals[2] and marital and family therapists to report harm to elderly persons. "Elderly person" was defined as "a resident of Alaska who is 65 years of age or older." Former AS 47.24.100(6). A separate statute, former AS 47.24.110, required mental health professionals and marital and family therapists to report when they had reasonable cause to believe a disabled adult had been a victim of assault or sexual assault. The term "disabled adult" was defined for purposes of this section as "a person 18 years of age or older who has a physical or mental disability, or physical or mental impairment, as defined in AS 18.80.300."

AS 18.80.300 defines "physical or mental disability" as:

> (14) "physical or mental disability" means
> (A) a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities;
> (B) a history of, or a misclassification as having, a mental or physical impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities;
> (C) having
> (i) a physical or mental impairment that does not substantially limit a person's major life activities but that is treated by the person as constituting such a limitation;
> (ii) a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits a person's major life activities only as a result of the attitudes of others toward the impairment; or
> (iii) none of the impairments defined in this paragraph but being treated by others as having such an impairment; or > (D) a condition that may require the use of a prosthesis, special equipment for mobility, or service animal;

AS 18.80.300 defines "physical or mental impairment" as:

> (15) "physical or mental impairment" means
> (A) physiological disorder or condition, cosmetic disfigurement, or anatomical loss affecting one or more of the following body systems: neurological, musculoskeletal, special sense organs, respiratory including

[2] In 2002, marital and family therapists and licensed professional counselors were added to the definition of "mental health professional" in AS 47.30.915(11), which is incorporated into AS 47.24.010(a)(2), establishing the duty to report harm to vulnerable adults. Sec. 1, ch. 73, SLA 2002. Marital and family therapists have been expressly included in AS 47.24.010(a)(2) since 1992. Sec. 10, ch. 129, SLA 1992.

> speech organs, cardiovascular, reproductive, digestive, genito-urinary, hemic and lymphatic, skin, and endocrine;
> (B) mental or psychological disorder, including mental retardation, organic brain syndrome, emotional or mental illness, and specific learning disabilities;

The term "vulnerable adult," which replaced "elderly person" and "disabled adult" in AS 47.24 is defined in AS 47.24.900(16) as:

> (16) "vulnerable adult" means a person 18 years of age or older who, because of physical or mental impairment, is unable to meet the person's own needs or to seek help without assistance.

This definition is similar to the definition of "disabled adult" but substantially narrower than the definition of "elderly person" previously used in AS 47.24.

Legal Analysis

AS 08.63.200(b)(2), enacted in 1992, which cites AS 47.24, was not changed in 1994 to reflect the shift in terminology from "elderly persons and disabled adults" to "vulnerable adults" made in AS 47.24 by ch. 129, SLA 1994. It appears that the failure to include a conforming amendment to AS 08.63.200(b)(2) in the 1994 Act was an oversight.

This apparent oversight was carried over into AS 08.29.200(b)(2). That paragraph was enacted in sec. 1, ch. 75, SLA 1998 (HCS CSSB 331(FIN)), an act regulating licensed professional counselors. Committee proceedings relating to SB 331 indicate that those statutes were specifically modeled on the statutes regulating marital and family therapists. This explains why AS 08.29.200(b)(2) does not match what was in AS 47.24 in 1998, when AS 08.29.200(b) was enacted: it was modeled on AS 08.63.200(b)(2), which contained an oversight.

I have spoken with the attorney who was drafting in this area at the time these statutes were enacted, and she believes that this explanation reflects what occurred.

The meaning of the existing AS 08.29.200(b)(2) and AS 08.63.200(b)(2) is not clear; because the terminology ("elderly persons and disabled adults") does not match that used in the statutes cited (AS 47.24, which refers to "vulnerable adults"), it is not clear whether the duty to report imposed in AS 08.63.200(b)(2) and AS 08.29.200(b)(2) is the same as that imposed in AS 47.24.010 or a broader duty (particularly as it relates to elderly persons).

However, both sections refer to AS 47.24, so the plain language suggests that the duty is the same as that imposed in AS 47.24. This interpretation would be consistent with treatment of the issue in the statutes regulating psychologists in AS 08.86.200(b)[3] and licensed social workers in AS 08.95.900(b)[4].

Conclusion

The current statutes are not clear. If it is the legislature's intent that the reporting requirements imposed on licensed professional counselors under AS 08.29.200(b)(2) and marital and family therapists under AS 08.63.200(b)(2) line up with the reporting requirements imposed on those professionals under AS 47.24, then the terminology should be made consistent with that in AS 47.24 by replacing "elderly person or disabled adult" with "vulnerable adult." As an added refinement, the reference to AS 47.24 might be changed to AS 47.24.010, which is the section that actually establishes the reporting requirement in AS 47.24. These are the changes included in the enclosed amendment. If the reporting requirements are meant to be different, then the meaning of "elderly person or disabled adult" should be clarified and the reference to AS 47.24 deleted.

If I can be of any further assistance, please let me know.

[3] This statute was amended in sec. 1, ch. 129, SLA 1994 to refer to "abuse of a vulnerable adult" rather than "elder abuse." This was the only conforming amendment to AS 08 made in that chapter.

[4] This duty to report was added to AS 08.95.900 in sec. 16, ch. 118, SLA 1998.

Effect of amendments. — The 2009 amendment, effective June 21, 2009, in (a)(1), added "acid" following "deoxyribonucleic", and made a stylistic change.

Effective dates. — Section 16, ch. 88, SLA 2003 makes this section effective July 1, 2003.

Sec. 11.56.765. Failure to report a violent crime committed against a child. (a) A person, other than the victim, commits the crime of failure to report a violent crime committed against a child if the person

(1) witnesses what the person knows or reasonably should know is

(A) the murder or attempted murder of a child by another;

(B) the kidnapping or attempted kidnapping of a child by another;

(C) the sexual penetration or attempted sexual penetration by another

(i) of a child without consent of the child;

(ii) of a child that is mentally incapable;

(iii) of a child that is incapacitated; or

(iv) of a child that is unaware that a sexual act is being committed; or

(D) the assault of a child by another causing serious physical injury to the child;

(2) knows or reasonably should know that the child is under 16 years of age; and

(3) does not in a timely manner report that crime to a peace officer or law enforcement agency.

(b) In a prosecution under this section, it is an affirmative defense that the defendant

(1) did not report in a timely manner because the defendant reasonably believed that doing so would have exposed the defendant or others to a substantial risk of physical injury; or

(2) acted to stop the commission of the crime and stopped

(A) the commission of the crime; or

(B) the completion of the crime being attempted.

(c) In this section,

(1) "incapacitated" has the meaning given in AS 11.41.470;

(2) "mentally incapable" has the meaning given in AS 11.41.470;

(3) "sexual act" has the meaning given in AS 11.41.470;

(4) "without consent" has the meaning given in AS 11.41.470.

(d) Failure to report a violent crime committed against a child is a class A misdemeanor. (§ 1 ch 62 SLA 1999)

Sec. 11.56.767. Failure to report a violent crime committed against an adult. (a) A person, other than the victim, commits the offense of failure to report a violent crime committed against an adult if the person, under circumstances not requiring the person to report as required by AS 11.56.765,

(1) witnesses what the person knows or reasonably should know is

(A) the murder or attempted murder of a person by another;

(B) the kidnapping or attempted kidnapping of a person by another; or

(C) the sexual penetration or attempted sexual penetration by another

(i) of a person without consent of the person;

(ii) of a person who is mentally incapable;

(iii) of a person who is incapacitated; or

(iv) of a person who is unaware that a sexual act is being committed; and

(2) does not, as soon as reasonably practicable, report that crime to a peace officer or law enforcement agency.

(b) In a prosecution under this section, it is an affirmative defense that the defendant

(1) did not report as soon as reasonably practicable because the defendant reasonably believed that

(A) doing so would have exposed the defendant or others to a substantial risk of physical injury; or

(B) effective assistance was already being provided by another person; or

Re: SB 86

Dear Senator French and Members of the Senate Judiciary Committee:

The Disability Law Center is the state-designated Protection and Advocacy organization for Alaska. Thank you very much for the opportunity to comment on SB 86, a bill which would make it possible for more people to be subject to conservatorships and which would create a system for ex parte restraining orders, brought by a person or by someone interested in the person's welfare, against people who might have defrauded the person needing assistance.

This is to endorse the general principles behind SB 86, but to encourage you to do more to protect the rights of those persons who would be newly subject to conservatorships and who would be newly protected by protective orders. The system envisioned by SB 86 would place some significant additional restrictions on these people's liberty interests and, in the case of ex parte protective orders, would give people needing protection only a delayed opportunity to be heard. It would also make it possible for a person to have a conservatorship imposed on him or her, and to have a protective order put in place restricting other people from contacting him or her, simply because that person had been a victim of fraud – regardless of whether the person was generally competent to handle business matters. We'd suggest adding to proposed AS 13.26.209 an opportunity for the person to be protected to seek modification or termination of any ex parte protective order on three days' notice, as is now possible with ex parte domestic violence restraining orders; and to add a provision ensuring that counsel for the person to be protected is appointed immediately in cases involving either temporary conservatorships or ex parte protective orders. Language amending proposed AS 13.26.207 and proposed AS 13.26.209 is attached.

Thank you very much, again, for the opportunity to comment.

 Sec. 7. AS 13.26 is amended by adding new sections to read:

Sec. 13.26.207. Temporary conservators. (a) If, during the pendency of an initial petition for conservatorship, it appears that the respondent is in need of a protective order to protect the respondent against waste or dissipation of funds or property, or to obtain funds that are needed for the immediate support, care, and welfare of the respondent or ersons entitled to be supported by the respondent, and the respondent is not capable of protecting the respondent's funds or property or obtaining the funds that are needed to support the respondent or persons whom the respondent is required to support, the petitioner may request the appointment of a temporary conservator to authorize the protection or to obtain the necessary funds. The request shall state the reasons and factual basis for the request. The petitioner shall immediately file the request with the court and serve copies on the respondent and the respondent's attorney. The court shall conduct a hearing within 72 hours after the filing. If an attorney has not already been appointed for the respondent, the court shall appoint a lawyer to represent the person at or before the hearing.

(b) If the court determines that a temporary conservator should be appointed, it shall make the appointment and grant to the temporary conservator only the authority that is least restrictive upon the liberty of the respondent and that enables the temporary conservator to provide the protection or authority necessary to protect the respondent from waste or dissipation of funds or property or to obtain the funds necessary for support.

(c) The temporary conservatorship expires at the time of the appointment of a full or partial conservator or upon the dismissal of the petition for conservatorship.

Sec. 13.26.209. Ex parte protective orders; forms for petitions and orders; fees. (a) A person who is allowed to file a petition for a protective order under AS 13.26.180(a) may file a petition for an ex parte protective order against another person. If the court finds that the petition establishes probable cause that the respondent is financially defrauding the petitioner or a person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition, and that because of the fraud there has been, or is an immediate threat of, a waste or dissipation of the proposed protected person's funds or other property, the court shall ex parte and without notice to the respondent issue a protective order. The petitioner shall certify to the court in writing any effort that the petitioner made to provide notice to the respondent. The court shall cause a copy of the protective order to be served on the respondent.

(b) An ex parte protective order under this section may

(1) grant any protection described in AS 13.26.200;

(2) supersede an existing power of attorney;

(3) prohibit the respondent from having any direct or indirect contact with the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition; and

(4) prohibit the respondent from taking any act with respect to the funds or other property of the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition.

(c) An ex parte protective order expires 20 days after it is issued, at the end of a six-month extension if granted by the court under (d) of this section, or upon the appointment of a temporary or permanent conservator or dismissal of the petition for the ex parte order. If the petitioner is someone other than the person for whose benefit the petition was filed, the court shall appoint a lawyer to represent the person for whose benefit the petition was filed. If the petitioner is someone other than the person for whose benefit the petition was filed, the person for whose benefit the petition was filed may request modification of the ex parte protective order; the court shall schedule a hearing on three days' notice or such shorter notice as the court may prescribe, and shall hear and rule on the request in an expeditious manner.

(d) Upon application filed with the court before the expiration of the 20-day ex parte protective order, the court shall schedule a hearing on whether to extend the protective order for up to six months. The court shall provide at least 10 days' notice to the respondent of the hearing and the respondent's right to appear and be heard. If the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the respondent has committed fraud against the petitioner or the person for whose benefit the petition was filed, regardless of whether the respondent appears at the hearing, the court may extend the ex parte protective order for up to six months.

(e) A protective order issued under this section is in addition to any other civil or criminal remedy.

(f) A third party shall comply with a protective order issued under this section. A third party who does not comply with a protective order granted under this section may be liable in a civil action to the protected person or the protected person's heirs, assigns, or estate for a civil penalty not to exceed $1,000, plus the actual damages, costs, and fees associated with the failure to comply with the protective order. A third person who does not comply with a protective order granted under this section may also be criminally liable under AS 11.56.740 for violating a protective order.

(g) The Alaska Court System, after consulting with the Department of Health and Social Services, the office of public advocacy, the office of elder fraud and assistance, the long-term care ombudsman, and other interested persons and organizations, shall prepare forms for petitions, protective orders, and instructions for their use by a person seeking a protective order under this section. The forms must conform to the Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure and Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, except that information on the forms may be filled in by legible handwriting. The office of the clerk of each superior and district court shall make available to the public the forms a person seeking a protective order under this section may need and instructions for the use of the forms. The clerk shall provide assistance in completing and filing the forms.

(h) Filing fees may not be charged for a petition under this section.

Re: SB 86 "Protection of vulnerable adults"

Dear Senators:

The Office of the Long Term Care Ombudsman investigates and resolves complaints made by, or on behalf of, older Alaskans in long term care facilities. In the first seven months of FY 2011, our office received 13 complaints alleging financial exploitation of seniors in assisted living or nursing homes. These cases can involve a family member or caregiver

- exerting undue influence over a senior's decision-making to access bank accounts.
- charging the senior for services and goods he or she did not receive.
- failing to provide a senior with needed care, so as to save the "family" inheritance, or
- forcing a senior to sign over deeds on houses or land.

While 13 cases may not seem significant, even a few instances of exploitation of seniors can lead to hundreds of thousands of dollars in lost assets.

The frustrating thing about these cases is that the exploitation happens so quickly that the State cannot step in fast enough to preserve the seniors' assets. Not only is it wrong for seniors to be taken advantage of in this way, but once the seniors' assets are gone, Medicaid or General Relief pick up the cost of the care. The State is essentially footing the bill for these losses.

I support SB 86, especially the provisions for financial protective orders, emergency conservatorships, and the addition of "undue influence" as a reportable harm. I hope you will give your support to this bill and protect our older Alaskans from financial predators.

Sincerely,

Diana Weber

RE: HB 150/SB 86– Sister States' Laws
On Ex Parte Protective Orders

Three sister states—California, Oregon and Washington State—permit ex parte relief from financial exploitation. Following is a brief summary of each state's applicable statutes and court procedures.

A. California

Question 1: Does California law permit ex parte filings for financial protective orders for elders/vulnerable adults?

Answer 1: Yes.

Discussion: California authorizes ex parte protective orders pursuant to California Welfare and Institutions Code, §15657.03. Protective orders are permitted for any "elder or dependent adult who has suffered abuse, including financial abuse. The statute treats financial abuse as a form of domestic violence.

The key legal requirements or restrictions are:

- At the "ex parte" hearing temporary orders may be issued by the Court which last until the next "Order to Show Cause" hearing which must be held no more than 21 days from the date the order is issued.
- No order may be granted on an ex parte basis unless it appears from facts shown in the application for the order (or by attached affidavit) that "great or irreparable injury would result to the applicant before the matter can be heard on notice.
- Absent a showing of exceptional circumstances, the applicant must notify all parties no later than 10:00 a.m. of the court day before the ex parte appearance.
- The court must act on the ex parte application--either issuing or denying the requested order--on the same day the application is submitted.
- An appearance by the responding party as a prerequisite to granting the requested order. If the responding party (personally or through counsel) fails to appear at the hearing (or to file an answer/responsive declaration), the requested relief may be entered by default. The ex parte order may issue only if the court finds that:
  - Reasonable grounds have been asserted to believe there is an immediate and present danger of domestic violence (which includes financial abuse); and
  - An emergency protective order is necessary to prevent the occurrence or reoccurrence of domestic violence (which includes financial abuse).

Question 2: Does California law permit third-parties to petition for ex parte protective order for an elder/vulnerable adult?

Answer 2: incapacitated/disabled adults may petition through third-party representative

Discussion: Petitioners unable to petition in person for ex parte relief due to incapacity or disability may, through an attorney or third-party representative, move the court to have a guardian ad litem appointed to represent the incapacitated/disabled adult for purposes of the ex parte relief petition. If a guardian or conservator is already in place for the adult then that person may also apply in that capacity.

B. Oregon

Question 1: Does Oregon law permit ex parte filings for financial protective orders for elders/vulnerable adults?

Answer 1: Yes.

Discussion: Oregon law allows ex parte protection orders for financial abuse or threats of financial abuse of elders and vulnerable adults occurring not more than 180 days prior to the date the petition is filed. Abuse is defined as wrongful taking or appropriating money or property of an elder or subjecting the victim to threats of such abuse. Third-parties, such as social workers, elder fraud investigators, peace officers and direct witnesses may testify in addition to the petitioner him or herself.

An ex parte order must be limited to the relief court considers necessary to prevent or remedy the wrongful taking or appropriation of the money or property of the person. Relief can include: directing the respondent to refrain from exercising control over the money or property of the person; requiring the respondent to return custody or control of the money or property of the person to the person; requiring the respondent to follow the instructions of the guardian or conservator of the person; or prohibiting the respondent from transferring the money or property of the elderly person or person with a disability to any person other than the elderly person or person with a disability.

The ex parte relief is limited to preventing or staying an immediate or urgent exploitation or threatened exploitation. If the victim wishes to have a third-party gain control and management of the victim's financial accounts or property then the victim may petition for a formal, noticed protective proceeding to address the need for expanded or long-term relief.

Question 2: Does Oregon law permit third-parties to petition for ex parte protective order for an elder/vulnerable adult?

Answer 2: Limited.

Discussion: Oregon law allows the elderly or disabled petitioner to apply for relief through a third-party representative including guardian ad litem, guardian or conservator. It appears that the victim may not use the ex parte procedure to seek relief against the victim's guardian or conservator—to obtain that kind of relief the formal, noticed protective proceeding and/or petition to review guardianship/conservatorship is available.

Oregon does address the possibility of a third-party representative filing an ex parte petition ("restraining order") on behalf of a victim where the victim may not agree that he or she actually needs relief. Thus, if a guardian or guardian ad litem files a petition on behalf of an elderly person or a person with a disability, the elderly person or person with a disability retains the right to be represented by independent counsel; have access to personal records; file objections to the restraining order; request a hearing; and present evidence and cross-examine witnesses at any hearing. Notice must be personally served on the elderly person or person with a disability. Personal service must be made not later than 72 hours after the court issues a restraining order.

C. Washington State

Question 1: Does Washington State law permit ex parte filings for financial protective orders for elders/vulnerable adults?

Answer 1: Yes.

Discussion: The court may order relief as it deems necessary for the protection of the vulnerable adult, including, but not limited to restraining the respondent from committing acts of abandonment, abuse, neglect, or financial exploitation against the vulnerable adult and requiring an accounting by respondent of the disposition of the vulnerable adult's income or other resources.

A petition must be supported by an affidavit made under oath, or a declaration signed under penalty of perjury, stating the specific facts and circumstances which demonstrate the need for the relief sought.

Washington State law allows the court to issue a "temporary protection order" without written notice to either or both the respondent and vulnerable adult if it clearly appears from specific facts shown by affidavit or declaration that immediate and irreparable injury, loss, or damage would result to the vulnerable adult before the respondent and vulnerable adult can be served and heard.

A temporary protection order can also be granted upon satisfactory showing to the court that the respondent and vulnerable adult cannot be served with notice, what efforts were made to serve them, and the reasons why prior notice should not be required.

Question 2: Does Washington State law permit third-parties to petition for ex parte protective order for an elder/vulnerable adult?

Answer 2: Yes.

Discussion: Washington State law specifically provides that a vulnerable adult, or an interested person on behalf of the vulnerable adult, may seek relief from financial exploitation, by filing a petition for an order for protection in superior court. A petition can be filed by the victim, a legal guardian, a legal fiduciary, the Department of Social and Health Services, or, as stated, an "interested person" on behalf of a vulnerable adult. The petition must explain why the petitioner qualifies as an interested person.

Where the elder/vulnerable adult is not him or herself the petitioner then the elder/vulnerable adult must be provided with notice of the petition. The notice form must include language explaining to the vulnerable adult the purpose and nature of the petition and that the vulnerable adult has the right to participate in the hearing and to either support or object to the petition.

Washington State law also specifically permits the Department of Social and Health Services to seek protective relief from abuse, including financial abuse, for a vulnerable adult, who lacks capacity.

Washington State law includes safeguard provisions when the petitioner is not the vulnerable adult him or herself. When a petition is filed by a third-party notice of the petition and hearing must be personally served upon the vulnerable adult not later than six days before the hearing along with the standard notice form.

The vulnerable adult for whom protection is sought may advise the court at the hearing that he or she does not want all or part of the protection sought in the petition. The court may dismiss the petition or the provisions that the vulnerable adult objects to and any protection order issued or the court may take additional testimony or evidence, or order additional evidentiary hearings to determine whether the vulnerable adult is unable, due to incapacity, undue influence, or duress, to protect his or her person or estate in connection with the issues raised in the petition or order. If an additional evidentiary hearing is order the court may issue a temporary order for protection of the vulnerable adult pending a decision after the evidentiary hearing.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Good morning all. Attached is a set of forms as used by the California Superior Court (in this case, for Santa Clara County) for petitioning for relief under that state's ex parte financial protective order laws.
This is informational at this point but I thought it might be helpful to Doug and the court system folks, particularly, to see how that process is formatted by a sister state. Please let me know if you have any questions. Scott Sterling, OPA, Office of Elder Fraud and Assistance.

Cindy, I agree with Scott about the CS from HJUD including provisions that will address questions raised by you and at the SJUD work session. There is one legal question you had that may not be addressed in the HJUD CS, and that is whether, in sec. 18(j), "actual damages" includes reputational damages – it does. "Actual damages" is commonly understood to mean all compensatory damages.

Cindy, below are the exact places I think amendments that change the span cite from AS 13.26.165 – 13.26.209 to AS 13.26.207 – 13.26.209 are necessary, following our discussion in SJUD today.

1) p. 2, lines 18 and 23.
2) p. 6, lines 11, 31
3) p. 7, lines 3, 4, 8, 16
4) p. 8, lines 16, 23

A committee member asked about the reference to AS 13.26.185 on p. 6, line 16, to which I replied that that reference was appropriate. I was incorrect. The beginning of that paragraph (2) should be deleted, as follow: (2) [a protective order, after notice and a hearing under AS 13.26.185, or]. It should begin with the sentence on line 17, as follows: "(2) a temporary protective order, after notice and a hearing under AS 13.26.208, the court...." The reference to .185 is no longer needed since we are amending out the references to AS 13.26.165, because .185 only applies to .165 protective orders. We make that part clear in sec. 9 of the bill.

That's it. Please let me know what else I can do to move this forward.

FROM: Scott A. Sterling, Supervising Attorney

TO: Cindy Smith, Office of Senator Hollis French

RE: SB 86 – Changes For Consideration

Sorry this is not in legislative drafting format but following are some proposed changes to certain sections of SB 86 concerning (1) how to ensure that the adult is always given notice of ex parte proceedings, (2) how to ensure that third-parties receive sufficient notice of ex parte orders and (3) a more legally sound definition of fiduciary duty. Please note that these and numerous other changes will likely be considered and incorporated into the final HJUD HB 150 CS. For SB 86 purposes these changes are referenced to the sections of that bill.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

1. At page 4, line 21, SB 86 after the sentence ending with the words "protective order" add "A third-party filing for an ex parte order under this section on behalf of a proposed protected person shall certify to the court in writing that a copy of the petition has been actually served upon the proposed protected person or the proposed protected person's legal representative or certify the reasons why providing such service would cause immediate threat of harm to the best interests of the proposed protected person. The court shall cause a copy of any order, including any order setting a hearing on the application for ex parte relief, to be served upon the proposed protected person or legal representative. A proposed protected person filing for ex parte relief under this section either in person or through counsel of record is exempt from the requirements of this section.

2. At page 5, line 16, SB 86 replace current subsection (f) with the following: "(f) A third party who has received actual or legal notice of a protective order issued under this section shall comply with that order. Actual and legal notice of a protective order issued under this section is effective upon the third-party receiving a copy of the order by means of delivery, mail or fax transmission at the nearest residence or place of business of the third-party.

   Actual and legal notice of a protective order issued under this section is also effective upon all persons upon that order being recorded with the State Recorder.

3. At page 18, line 22, SB 86 replace the existing (18) with:

   (18) "fiduciary duty" means the duty of a third-party who stands in a position of trust or confidence with another person, including a vulnerable adult, to act with due regard for the benefit and interests of that person.

AND TO: HB 150/SB 86 Working Group & Legislative Staff

RE: HB 150/SB 86– Sister States' Laws
On Ex Parte Protective Orders

Three sister states—California, Oregon and Washington State—permit ex parte relief from financial exploitation. Following is a brief summary of each state's applicable statutes and court procedures.

A. California

Question 1: Does California law permit ex parte filings for financial protective orders for elders/vulnerable adults?

Answer 1: Yes.

Discussion: California authorizes ex parte protective orders pursuant to California Welfare and Institutions Code, §15657.03. Protective orders are permitted for any "elder or dependent adult who has suffered abuse, including financial abuse. The statute treats financial abuse as a form of domestic violence.

The key legal requirements or restrictions are:

- At the "ex parte" hearing temporary orders may be issued by the Court which last until the next "Order to Show Cause" hearing which must be held no more than 21 days from the date the order is issued.
- No order may be granted on an ex parte basis unless it appears from facts shown in the application for the order (or by attached affidavit) that "great or irreparable injury would result to the applicant before the matter can be heard on notice.
- Absent a showing of exceptional circumstances, the applicant must notify all parties no later than 10:00 a.m. of the court day before the ex parte appearance.
- The court must act on the ex parte application--either issuing or denying the requested order--on the same day the application is submitted.
- An appearance by the responding party as a prerequisite to granting the requested order. If the responding party (personally or through counsel) fails to appear at the hearing (or to file an answer/responsive declaration), the requested relief may be entered by default. The ex parte order may issue only if the court finds that:
  - Reasonable grounds have been asserted to believe there is an immediate and present danger of domestic violence (which includes financial abuse); and
  - An emergency protective order is necessary to prevent the occurrence or reoccurrence of domestic violence (which includes financial abuse).

Question 2: Does California law permit third-parties to petition for ex parte protective order for an elder/vulnerable adult?

Answer 2: Incapacitated/disabled adults may petition through third-party representative

Discussion: Petitioners unable to petition in person for ex parte relief due to incapacity or disability may, through an attorney or third-party representative, move the court to have a guardian ad litem appointed to represent the incapacitated/disabled adult for purposes of the ex parte relief petition. If a guardian or conservator is already in place for the adult then that person may also apply in that capacity.

B. Oregon

Question 1: Does Oregon law permit ex parte filings for financial protective orders for elders/vulnerable adults?

Answer 1: Yes.

Discussion: Oregon law allows ex parte protection orders for financial abuse or threats of financial abuse of elders and vulnerable adults occurring not more than 180 days prior to the date the petition is filed. Abuse is defined as wrongful taking or appropriating money or property of an elder or subjecting the victim to threats of such abuse. Third-parties, such as social workers, elder fraud investigators, peace officers and direct witnesses may testify in addition to the petitioner him or herself.

An ex parte order must be limited to the relief court considers necessary to prevent or remedy the wrongful taking or appropriation of the money or property of the person. Relief can include: directing the respondent to refrain from exercising control over the money or property of the person; requiring the respondent to return custody or control of the money or property of the person to the person; requiring the respondent to follow the instructions of the guardian or conservator of the person; or prohibiting the respondent from transferring the money or property of the elderly person or person with a disability to any person other than the elderly person or person with a disability.

The ex parte relief is limited to preventing or staying an immediate or urgent exploitation or threatened exploitation. If the victim wishes to have a third-party gain control and management of the victim's financial accounts or property then the victim may petition for a formal, noticed protective proceeding to address the need for expanded or long-term relief.

Question 2: Does Oregon law permit third-parties to petition for ex parte protective order for an elder/vulnerable adult?

Answer 2: Limited.

Discussion: Oregon law allows the elderly or disabled petitioner to apply for relief through a third-party representative including guardian ad litem, guardian or conservator. It appears that the victim may not use the ex parte procedure to seek relief against the victim's guardian or conservator—to obtain that kind of relief the formal, noticed protective proceeding and/or petition to review guardianship/conservatorship is available.

Oregon does address the possibility of a third-party representative filing an ex parte petition ("restraining order") on behalf of a victim where the victim may not agree that he or she actually needs relief. Thus, if a guardian or guardian ad litem files a petition on behalf of an elderly person or a person with a disability, the elderly person or person with a disability retains the right to be represented by independent counsel; have access to personal records; file objections to the restraining order; request a hearing; and present evidence and cross-examine witnesses at any hearing. Notice must be personally served on the elderly person or person with a disability. Personal service must be made not later than 72 hours after the court issues a restraining order.

C. Washington State

Question 1: Does Washington State law permit ex parte filings for financial protective orders for elders/vulnerable adults?

Answer 1: Yes.

Discussion: The court may order relief as it deems necessary for the protection of the vulnerable adult, including, but not limited to restraining the respondent from committing acts of abandonment, abuse, neglect, or financial exploitation against the vulnerable adult and requiring an accounting by respondent of the disposition of the vulnerable adult's income or other resources.

A petition must be supported by an affidavit made under oath, or a declaration signed under penalty of perjury, stating the specific facts and circumstances which demonstrate the need for the relief sought.

Washington State law allows the court to issue a "temporary protection order" without written notice to either or both the respondent and vulnerable adult if it clearly appears from specific facts shown by affidavit or declaration that immediate and irreparable injury, loss, or damage would result to the vulnerable adult before the respondent and vulnerable adult can be served and heard.

A temporary protection order can also be granted upon satisfactory showing to the court that the respondent and vulnerable adult cannot be served with notice, what efforts were made to serve them, and the reasons why prior notice should not be required.

Question 2: Does Washington State law permit third-parties to petition for ex parte protective order for an elder/vulnerable adult?

Answer 2: Yes.

Discussion: Washington State law specifically provides that a vulnerable adult, or an interested person on behalf of the vulnerable adult, may seek relief from financial exploitation, by filing a petition for an order for protection in superior court. A petition can be filed by the victim, a legal guardian, a legal fiduciary, the Department of Social and Health Services, or, as stated, an "interested person" on behalf of a vulnerable adult. The petition must explain why the petitioner qualifies as an interested person.

Where the elder/vulnerable adult is not him or herself the petitioner then the elder/vulnerable adult must be provided with notice of the petition. The notice form must include language explaining to the vulnerable adult the purpose and nature of the petition and that the vulnerable adult has the right to participate in the hearing and to either support or object to the petition.

Washington State law also specifically permits the Department of Social and Health Services to seek protective relief from abuse, including financial abuse, for a vulnerable adult, who lacks capacity.

Washington State law includes safeguard provisions when the petitioner is not the vulnerable adult him or herself. When a petition is filed by a third-party notice of the petition and hearing must be personally served upon the vulnerable adult not later than six days before the hearing along with the standard notice form.

The vulnerable adult for whom protection is sought may advise the court at the hearing that he or she does not want all or part of the protection sought in the petition. The court may dismiss the petition or the provisions that the vulnerable adult objects to and any protection order issued or the court may take additional testimony or evidence, or order additional evidentiary hearings to determine whether the vulnerable adult is unable, due to incapacity, undue influence, or duress, to protect his or her person or estate in connection with the issues raised in the petition or order. If an additional evidentiary hearing is order the court may issue a temporary order for protection of the vulnerable adult pending a decision after the evidentiary hearing.

Re: SB 86

Dear Senator French and Members of the Senate Judiciary Committee:

The Disability Law Center is the state-designated Protection and Advocacy organization for Alaska. Thank you very much for the opportunity to comment on SB 86, a bill which would make it possible for more people to be subject to conservatorships and which would create a system for ex parte restraining orders, brought by a person or by someone interested in the person's welfare, against people who might have defrauded the person needing assistance.

This is to endorse the general principles behind SB 86, but to encourage you to do more to protect the rights of those persons who would be newly subject to conservatorships and who would be newly protected by protective orders. The system envisioned by SB 86 would place some significant additional restrictions on these people's liberty interests and, in the case of ex parte protective orders, would give people needing protection only a delayed opportunity to be heard. It would also make it possible for a person to have a conservatorship imposed on him or her, and to have a protective order put in place restricting other people from contacting him or her, simply because that person had been a victim of fraud – regardless of whether the person was generally competent to handle business matters. We'd suggest adding to proposed AS 13.26.209 an opportunity for the person to be protected to seek modification or termination of any ex parte protective order on three days' notice, as is now possible with ex parte domestic violence restraining orders; and to add a provision ensuring that counsel for the person to be protected is appointed immediately in cases involving either temporary conservatorships or ex parte protective orders. Language amending proposed AS 13.26.207 and proposed AS 13.26.209 is attached.

Thank you very much, again, for the opportunity to comment.

Sincerely,

Mark Regan

 Sec. 7. AS 13.26 is amended by adding new sections to read:

Sec. 13.26.207. Temporary conservators. (a) If, during the pendency of an initial petition for conservatorship, it appears that the respondent is in need of a protective order to protect the respondent against waste or dissipation of funds or property, or to obtain funds that are needed for the immediate support, care, and welfare of the respondent or ersons entitled to be supported by the respondent, and the respondent is not capable of protecting the respondent's funds or property or obtaining the funds that are needed to support the respondent or persons whom the respondent is required to support, the petitioner may request the appointment of a temporary conservator to authorize the protection or to obtain the necessary funds. The request shall state the reasons and factual basis for the request. The petitioner shall immediately file the request with the court and serve copies on the respondent and the respondent's attorney. The court shall conduct a hearing within 72 hours after the filing. If an attorney has not already been appointed for the respondent, the court shall appoint a lawyer to represent the person at or before the hearing.

(b) If the court determines that a temporary conservator should be appointed, it shall make the appointment and grant to the temporary conservator only the authority that is least restrictive upon the liberty of the respondent and that enables the temporary conservator to provide the protection or authority necessary to protect the respondent from waste or dissipation of funds or property or to obtain the funds necessary for support.

(c) The temporary conservatorship expires at the time of the appointment of a full or partial conservator or upon the dismissal of the petition for conservatorship.

Sec. 13.26.209. Ex parte protective orders; forms for petitions and orders; fees. (a) A person who is allowed to file a petition for a protective order under AS 13.26.180(a) may file a petition for an ex parte protective order against another person. If the court finds that the petition establishes probable cause that the respondent is financially defrauding the petitioner or a person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition, and that because of the fraud there has been, or is an immediate threat of, a waste or dissipation of the proposed protected person's funds or other property, the court shall ex parte and without notice to the respondent issue a protective order. The petitioner shall certify to the court in writing any effort that the petitioner made to provide notice to the respondent. The court shall cause a copy of the protective order to be served on the respondent.

(b) An ex parte protective order under this section may

(1) grant any protection described in AS 13.26.200;

(2) supersede an existing power of attorney;

(3) prohibit the respondent from having any direct or indirect contact with the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition; and

(4) prohibit the respondent from taking any act with respect to the funds or other property of the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition.

(c) An ex parte protective order expires 20 days after it is issued, at the end of a six-month extension if granted by the court under (d) of this section, or upon the appointment of a temporary or permanent conservator or dismissal of the petition for the ex parte order. If the petitioner is someone other than the person for whose benefit the petition was filed, the court shall appoint a lawyer to represent the person for whose benefit the petition was filed. If the petitioner is someone other than the person for whose benefit the petition was filed, the person for whose benefit the petition was filed may request modification of the ex parte protective order; the court shall schedule a hearing on three days' notice or such shorter notice as the court may prescribe, and shall hear and rule on the request in an expeditious manner.

(d) Upon application filed with the court before the expiration of the 20-day ex parte protective order, the court shall schedule a hearing on whether to extend the protective order for up to six months. The court shall provide at least 10 days' notice to the respondent of the hearing and the respondent's right to appear and be heard. If the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the respondent has committed fraud against the petitioner or the person for whose benefit the petition was filed, regardless of whether the respondent appears at the hearing, the court may extend the ex parte protective order for up to six months.

(e) A protective order issued under this section is in addition to any other civil or criminal remedy.

(f) A third party shall comply with a protective order issued under this section. A third party who does not comply with a protective order granted under this section may be liable in a civil action to the protected person or the protected person's heirs, assigns, or estate for a civil penalty not to exceed $1,000, plus the actual damages, costs, and fees associated with the failure to comply with the protective order. A third person who does not comply with a protective order granted under this section may also be criminally liable under AS 11.56.740 for violating a protective order.

(g) The Alaska Court System, after consulting with the Department of Health and Social Services, the office of public advocacy, the office of elder fraud and assistance, the long-term care ombudsman, and other interested persons and organizations, shall prepare forms for petitions, protective orders, and instructions for their use by a person seeking a protective order under this section. The forms must conform to the Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure and Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, except that information on the forms may be filled in by legible handwriting. The office of the clerk of each superior and district court shall make available to the public the forms a person seeking a protective order under this section may need and instructions for the use of the forms. The clerk shall provide assistance in completing and filing the forms.

(h) Filing fees may not be charged for a petition under this section.

MEMORANDUM

FROM: Scott A. Sterling, Supervising Attorney
Office of Elder Fraud & Assistance
Anchorage, Alaska

TO: Rachel Levitt, Acting Director, OPA

AND TO: HB 150/SB 86 Working Group & Legislative Staff

RE: HB 150/SB 86– Sister States' Laws
On Ex Parte Protective Orders

Three sister states—California, Oregon and Washington State—permit ex parte relief from financial exploitation. Following is a brief summary of each state's applicable statutes and court procedures.

A. California

Question 1: Does California law permit ex parte filings for financial protective orders for elders/vulnerable adults?

Answer 1: Yes.

Discussion: California authorizes ex parte protective orders pursuant to California Welfare and Institutions Code, §15657.03. Protective orders are permitted for any "elder or dependent adult who has suffered abuse, including financial abuse. The statute treats financial abuse as a form of domestic violence.

The key legal requirements or restrictions are:

- At the "ex parte" hearing temporary orders may be issued by the Court which last until the next "Order to Show Cause" hearing which must be held no more than 21 days from the date the order is issued.
- No order may be granted on an ex parte basis unless it appears from facts shown in the application for the order (or by attached affidavit) that "great or irreparable injury would result to the applicant before the matter can be heard on notice.
- Absent a showing of exceptional circumstances, the applicant must notify all parties no later than 10:00 a.m. of the court day before the ex parte appearance.
- The court must act on the ex parte application--either issuing or denying the requested order--on the same day the application is submitted.
- An appearance by the responding party as a prerequisite to granting the requested order. If the responding party (personally or through counsel) fails to appear at the hearing (or to file an answer/responsive declaration), the requested relief may be entered by default. The ex parte order may issue only if the court finds that:
  - Reasonable grounds have been asserted to believe there is an immediate and present danger of domestic violence (which includes financial abuse); and
  - An emergency protective order is necessary to prevent the occurrence or reoccurrence of domestic violence (which includes financial abuse).

Question 2: Does California law permit third-parties to petition for ex parte protective order for an elder/vulnerable adult?

Answer 2: Incapacitated/disabled adults may petition through third-party representative

Discussion: Petitioners unable to petition in person for ex parte relief due to incapacity or disability may, through an attorney or third-party representative, move the court to have a guardian ad litem appointed to represent the incapacitated/disabled adult for purposes of the ex parte relief petition. If a guardian or conservator is already in place for the adult then that person may also apply in that capacity.

B. Oregon

Question 1: Does Oregon law permit ex parte filings for financial protective orders for elders/vulnerable adults?

Answer 1: Yes.

Discussion: Oregon law allows ex parte protection orders for financial abuse or threats of financial abuse of elders and vulnerable adults occurring not more than 180 days prior to the date the petition is filed. Abuse is defined as wrongful taking or appropriating money or property of an elder or subjecting the victim to threats of such abuse. Third-parties, such as social workers, elder fraud investigators, peace officers and direct witnesses may testify in addition to the petitioner him or herself.

An ex parte order must be limited to the relief court considers necessary to prevent or remedy the wrongful taking or appropriation of the money or property of the person. Relief can include: directing the respondent to refrain from exercising control over the money or property of the person; requiring the respondent to return custody or control of the money or property of the person to the person; requiring the respondent to follow the instructions of the guardian or conservator of the person; or prohibiting the respondent from transferring the money or property of the elderly person or person with a disability to any person other than the elderly person or person with a disability.

The ex parte relief is limited to preventing or staying an immediate or urgent exploitation or threatened exploitation. If the victim wishes to have a third-party gain control and management of the victim's financial accounts or property then the victim may petition for a formal, noticed protective proceeding to address the need for expanded or long-term relief.

Question 2: Does Oregon law permit third-parties to petition for ex parte protective order for an elder/vulnerable adult?

Answer 2: Limited.

Discussion: Oregon law allows the elderly or disabled petitioner to apply for relief through a third-party representative including guardian ad litem, guardian or conservator. It appears that the victim may not use the ex parte procedure to seek relief against the victim's guardian or conservator—to obtain that kind of relief the formal, noticed protective proceeding and/or petition to review guardianship/conservatorship is available.

Oregon does address the possibility of a third-party representative filing an ex parte petition ("restraining order") on behalf of a victim where the victim may not agree that he or she actually needs relief. Thus, if a guardian or guardian ad litem files a petition on behalf of an elderly person or a person with a disability, the elderly person or person with a disability retains the right to be represented by independent counsel; have access to personal records; file objections to the restraining order; request a hearing; and present evidence and cross-examine witnesses at any hearing. Notice must be personally served on the elderly person or person with a disability. Personal service must be made not later than 72 hours after the court issues a restraining order.

C. Washington State

Question 1: Does Washington State law permit ex parte filings for financial protective orders for elders/vulnerable adults?

Answer 1: Yes.

Discussion: The court may order relief as it deems necessary for the protection of the vulnerable adult, including, but not limited to restraining the respondent from committing acts of abandonment, abuse, neglect, or financial exploitation against the vulnerable adult and requiring an accounting by respondent of the disposition of the vulnerable adult's income or other resources.

A petition must be supported by an affidavit made under oath, or a declaration signed under penalty of perjury, stating the specific facts and circumstances which demonstrate the need for the relief sought.

Washington State law allows the court to issue a "temporary protection order" without written notice to either or both the respondent and vulnerable adult if it clearly appears from specific facts shown by affidavit or declaration that immediate and irreparable injury, loss, or damage would result to the vulnerable adult before the respondent and vulnerable adult can be served and heard.

A temporary protection order can also be granted upon satisfactory showing to the court that the respondent and vulnerable adult cannot be served with notice, what efforts were made to serve them, and the reasons why prior notice should not be required.

Question 2: Does Washington State law permit third-parties to petition for ex parte protective order for an elder/vulnerable adult?

Answer 2: Yes.

Discussion: Washington State law specifically provides that a vulnerable adult, or an interested person on behalf of the vulnerable adult, may seek relief from financial exploitation, by filing a petition for an order for protection in superior court. A petition can be filed by the victim, a legal guardian, a legal fiduciary, the Department of Social and Health Services, or, as stated, an "interested person" on behalf of a vulnerable adult. The petition must explain why the petitioner qualifies as an interested person.

Where the elder/vulnerable adult is not him or herself the petitioner then the elder/vulnerable adult must be provided with notice of the petition. The notice form must include language explaining to the vulnerable adult the purpose and nature of the petition and that the vulnerable adult has the right to participate in the hearing and to either support or object to the petition.

Washington State law also specifically permits the Department of Social and Health Services to seek protective relief from abuse, including financial abuse, for a vulnerable adult, who lacks capacity.

Washington State law includes safeguard provisions when the petitioner is not the vulnerable adult him or herself. When a petition is filed by a third-party notice of the petition and hearing must be personally served upon the vulnerable adult not later than six days before the hearing along with the standard notice form.

The vulnerable adult for whom protection is sought may advise the court at the hearing that he or she does not want all or part of the protection sought in the petition. The court may dismiss the petition or the provisions that the vulnerable adult objects to and any protection order issued or the court may take additional testimony or evidence, or order additional evidentiary hearings to determine whether the vulnerable adult is unable, due to incapacity, undue influence, or duress, to protect his or her person or estate in connection with the issues raised in the petition or order. If an additional evidentiary hearing is order the court may issue a temporary order for protection of the vulnerable adult pending a decision after the evidentiary hearing.

This chart contains the following three columns:

1. State. This chart only includes states that have provisions on undue influence.

2. Context. The second column identifies the context(s) of the state's provision(s). The context reflects the fact that undue influence is recognized as a method for committing financial or sexual exploitation and not usually defined as a form of elder abuse, or even as a crime. Some state provisions, however, refer to physical abuse rather than sexual abuse, just as some state definitions of the types of elder abuse include sexual abuse within the definition of physical abuse. To gain a better understanding of the state definitions about types of abuse, see the Types of Abuse Defined in Adult Protective Services Statutes charts available online at http://www.abanet.org/aging/about/elderabuse.shtml. The context column follows the terminology used in the statutory provision. To provide this context, the APS provisions on undue influence are either:
    a. Part of a broader definition of financial exploitation or of sexual or physical abuse/exploitation,
    b. Included as a distinct definition that makes clear that the context relates to one or more types of abuse, or
    c. Part of a general definition that does not clearly reference financial exploitation or physical or sexual abuse/exploitation.

3. Statutory Provision(s) and Citation(s). The pertinent statutory provision(s) and citation(s) are presented in this column. They are copied verbatim from the state laws. If undue influence is part of a broad provision, such as a definition of financial exploitation, then all relevant parts of the provision are provided for context. If a state's law contains multiple provisions, they are separated by a line and a citation is provided for each.

III. If You Find an Error

We strived to be consistent in our interpretation and categorization of the statutes. Despite our best efforts, we may have made errors. It is also possible that APS or other professionals interpret a statute differently than we did or there are state regulations or policies that lead to a different interpretation. Additionally, state laws may have changed since December 31, 2006. If you think we erred or your state has a regulation or policy that leads to a different interpretation, please contact Lori Stiegel of the American Bar Association Commission on Law and Aging at lstiegel@staff.abanet.org or 202-662-8692.

The chart addresses the adult protective services (APS) laws for each state, the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. This explanation and the chart refer to these jurisdictions generically as "state" or "states."

Unless otherwise indicated, this explanation (1) uses the term "abuse" generally to include abuse, neglect, and exploitation, and (2) uses "elder abuse" to include elder abuse and adult abuse.

CAUTION: This chart is based only on the state APS laws; APS regulations were not reviewed. It is important to recognize that there may be other state laws or regulations or federal laws or regulations that address the issue covered by this chart. For example, there may be criminal laws on financial or sexual exploitation or laws related to wills or other financial and property matters that include provisions on undue influence. Additionally, there may be court decisions that define undue influence in the context of elder abuse or other matters.

NOTE: A few states have multiple laws. Some of those states have separate elder protective services (EPS) laws and APS laws, and those laws are designated in the chart by following the state abbreviation with "EPS" or "APS". Some states have more than one APS law, and those laws are designated in the chart by following the state abbreviation with #1 or #2. Unless otherwise indicated in this explanation or the chart, both APS and EPS laws will generally be referred to as APS laws.

I. Why We Developed This Chart

Awareness is growing of undue influence and the role that it may play in cases involving elder abuse. As a result, state and federal legislative staff, other policy makers, program administrators, practitioners, educators, researchers, reporters, victims and their family members, and others often want to know how many states have laws on undue influence and what those laws say. The "Undue Influence: Context, Provisions, and Citations in Adult Protective Services Laws, by State" chart offers that information.

II. Detailed Explanation of the "Undue Influence: Context, Provisions, and Citations in Adult Protective Services Laws, by State" Chart

Undue influence is usually not defined as a form of elder abuse, or even as a crime. It is, instead, recognized as a process or method used to commit financial or sexual exploitation. (YWCA of Omaha. (2006). Undue Influence: The Criminal Justice Response. Omaha, Neb.: Author.)[3]

RE: SB 86 – Changes For Consideration

Sorry this is not in legislative drafting format but following are some proposed changes to certain sections of SB 86 concerning (1) how to ensure that the adult is always given notice of ex parte proceedings, (2) how to ensure that third-parties receive sufficient notice of ex parte orders and (3) a more legally sound definition of fiduciary duty. Please note that these and numerous other changes will likely be considered and incorporated into the final HJUD HB 150 CS. For SB 86 purposes these changes are referenced to the sections of that bill.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Notice

1. At page 4, line 21, SB 86 after the sentence ending with the words "protective order" add "A third-party filing for an ex parte order under this section on behalf of a proposed protected person shall certify to the court in writing that a copy of the petition has been actually served upon the proposed protected person or the proposed protected person's legal representative or certify the reasons why providing such service would cause immediate threat of harm to the best interests of the proposed protected person. The court shall cause a copy of any order, including any order setting a hearing on the application for ex parte relief, to be served upon the proposed protected person or legal representative. A proposed protected person filing for ex parte relief under this section either in person or through counsel of record is exempt from the requirements of this section.

2. At page 5, line 16, SB 86 replace current subsection (f) with the following:
"(f) A third party who has received actual or legal notice of a protective order issued under this section shall comply with that order. Actual and legal notice of a protective order issued under this section is effective upon the third-party receiving a copy of the order by means of delivery, mail or fax transmission at the nearest residence or place of business of the third-party.

What about damages?

Actual and legal notice of a protective order issued under this section is also effective upon all persons upon that order being recorded with the State Recorder.

3. At page 18, line 22, SB 86 replace the existing (18) with:

(18) "fiduciary duty" means the duty of a third-party (person) who stands in a position of trust or confidence with another person, including a vulnerable adult, to act with due regard for the benefit and interests of that person.

Blacks: a duty to act for someone else's benefit, while subordinating one's personal interests to that of the other person. It is the highest standard

AND TO: HB 150/SB 86 Working Group & Legislative Staff

RE: HB 150/SB 86– Sister States' Laws
On Ex Parte Protective Orders

Three sister states—California, Oregon and Washington State—permit ex parte relief from financial exploitation. Following is a brief summary of each state's applicable statutes and court procedures.

A. California

Question 1: Does California law permit ex parte filings for financial protective orders for elders/vulnerable adults?

Answer 1: Yes.

Discussion: California authorizes ex parte protective orders pursuant to California Welfare and Institutions Code, §15657.03. Protective orders are permitted for any "elder or dependent adult who has suffered abuse, including financial abuse. The statute treats financial abuse as a form of domestic violence.

The key legal requirements or restrictions are:

- At the "ex parte" hearing temporary orders may be issued by the Court which last until the next "Order to Show Cause" hearing which must be held no more than 21 days from the date the order is issued.
- No order may be granted on an ex parte basis unless it appears from facts shown in the application for the order (or by attached affidavit) that "great or irreparable injury would result to the applicant before the matter can be heard on notice.
- Absent a showing of exceptional circumstances, the applicant must notify all parties no later than 10:00 a.m. of the court day before the ex parte appearance.
- The court must act on the ex parte application--either issuing or denying the requested order--on the same day the application is submitted.
- An appearance by the responding party as a prerequisite to granting the requested order. If the responding party (personally or through counsel) fails to appear at the hearing (or to file an answer/responsive declaration), the requested relief may be entered by default. The ex parte order may issue only if the court finds that:
  - Reasonable grounds have been asserted to believe there is an immediate and present danger of domestic violence (which includes financial abuse); and
  - An emergency protective order is necessary to prevent the occurrence or reoccurrence of domestic violence (which includes financial abuse).

Question 2: Does California law permit third-parties to petition for ex parte protective order for an elder/vulnerable adult?

Answer 2: Incapacitated/disabled adults may petition through third-party representative

Discussion: Petitioners unable to petition in person for ex parte relief due to incapacity or disability may, through an attorney or third-party representative, move the court to have a guardian ad litem appointed to represent the incapacitated/disabled adult for purposes of the ex parte relief petition. If a guardian or conservator is already in place for the adult then that person may also apply in that capacity.

B. Oregon

Question 1: Does Oregon law permit ex parte filings for financial protective orders for elders/vulnerable adults?

Answer 1: Yes.

Discussion: Oregon law allows ex parte protection orders for financial abuse or threats of financial abuse of elders and vulnerable adults occurring not more than 180 days prior to the date the petition is filed. Abuse is defined as wrongful taking or appropriating money or property of an elder or subjecting the victim to threats of such abuse. Third-parties, such as social workers, elder fraud investigators, peace officers and direct witnesses may testify in addition to the petitioner him or herself.

An ex parte order must be limited to the relief court considers necessary to prevent or remedy the wrongful taking or appropriation of the money or property of the person. Relief can include: directing the respondent to refrain from exercising control over the money or property of the person; requiring the respondent to return custody or control of the money or property of the person to the person; requiring the respondent to follow the instructions of the guardian or conservator of the person; or prohibiting the respondent from transferring the money or property of the elderly person or person with a disability to any person other than the elderly person or person with a disability.

The ex parte relief is limited to preventing or staying an immediate or urgent exploitation or threatened exploitation. If the victim wishes to have a third-party gain control and management of the victim's financial accounts or property then the victim may petition for a formal, noticed protective proceeding to address the need for expanded or long-term relief.

Question 2: Does Oregon law permit third-parties to petition for ex parte protective order for an elder/vulnerable adult?

Answer 2: Limited.

Discussion: Oregon law allows the elderly or disabled petitioner to apply for relief through a third-party representative including guardian ad litem, guardian or conservator. It appears that the victim may not use the ex parte procedure to seek relief against the victim's guardian or conservator—to obtain that kind of relief the formal, noticed protective proceeding and/or petition to review guardianship/conservatorship is available.

Oregon does address the possibility of a third-party representative filing an ex parte petition ("restraining order") on behalf of a victim where the victim may not agree that he or she actually needs relief. Thus, if a guardian or guardian ad litem files a petition on behalf of an elderly person or a person with a disability, the elderly person or person with a disability retains the right to be represented by independent counsel; have access to personal records; file objections to the restraining order; request a hearing; and present evidence and cross-examine witnesses at any hearing. Notice must be personally served on the elderly person or person with a disability. Personal service must be made not later than 72 hours after the court issues a restraining order.

C. Washington State

Question 1: Does Washington State law permit ex parte filings for financial protective orders for elders/vulnerable adults?

Answer 1: Yes.

Discussion: The court may order relief as it deems necessary for the protection of the vulnerable adult, including, but not limited to restraining the respondent from committing acts of abandonment, abuse, neglect, or financial exploitation against the vulnerable adult and requiring an accounting by respondent of the disposition of the vulnerable adult's income or other resources.

A petition must be supported by an affidavit made under oath, or a declaration signed under penalty of perjury, stating the specific facts and circumstances which demonstrate the need for the relief sought.

Washington State law allows the court to issue a "temporary protection order" without written notice to either or both the respondent and vulnerable adult if it clearly appears from specific facts shown by affidavit or declaration that immediate and irreparable injury, loss, or damage would result to the vulnerable adult before the respondent and vulnerable adult can be served and heard.

A temporary protection order can also be granted upon satisfactory showing to the court that the respondent and vulnerable adult cannot be served with notice, what efforts were made to serve them, and the reasons why prior notice should not be required.

Question 2: Does Washington State law permit third-parties to petition for ex parte protective order for an elder/vulnerable adult?

Answer 2: Yes.

Discussion: Washington State law specifically provides that a vulnerable adult, or an interested person on behalf of the vulnerable adult, may seek relief from financial exploitation, by filing a petition for an order for protection in superior court. A petition can be filed by the victim, a legal guardian, a legal fiduciary, the Department of Social and Health Services, or, as stated, an "interested person" on behalf of a vulnerable adult. The petition must explain why the petitioner qualifies as an interested person.

Where the elder/vulnerable adult is not him or herself the petitioner then the elder/vulnerable adult must be provided with notice of the petition. The notice form must include language explaining to the vulnerable adult the purpose and nature of the petition and that the vulnerable adult has the right to participate in the hearing and to either support or object to the petition.

Washington State law also specifically permits the Department of Social and Health Services to seek protective relief from abuse, including financial abuse, for a vulnerable adult, who lacks capacity.

Washington State law includes safeguard provisions when the petitioner is not the vulnerable adult him or herself. When a petition is filed by a third-party notice of the petition and hearing must be personally served upon the vulnerable adult not later than six days before the hearing along with the standard notice form.

The vulnerable adult for whom protection is sought may advise the court at the hearing that he or she does not want all or part of the protection sought in the petition. The court may dismiss the petition or the provisions that the vulnerable adult objects to and any protection order issued or the court may take additional testimony or evidence, or order additional evidentiary hearings to determine whether the vulnerable adult is unable, due to incapacity, undue influence, or duress, to protect his or her person or estate in connection with the issues raised in the petition or order. If an additional evidentiary hearing is order the court may issue a temporary order for protection of the vulnerable adult pending a decision after the evidentiary hearing.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Re: SB 86 "Protection of vulnerable adults"

Dear Senators:

The Office of the Long Term Care Ombudsman investigates and resolves complaints made by, or on behalf of, older Alaskans in long term care facilities. In the first seven months of FY 2011, our office received 13 complaints alleging financial exploitation of seniors in assisted living or nursing homes. These cases can involve a family member or caregiver

- exerting undue influence over a senior's decision-making to access bank accounts.
- charging the senior for services and goods he or she did not receive.
- failing to provide a senior with needed care, so as to save the "family" inheritance, or
- forcing a senior to sign over deeds on houses or land.

While 13 cases may not seem significant, even a few instances of exploitation of seniors can lead to hundreds of thousands of dollars in lost assets.

The frustrating thing about these cases is that the exploitation happens so quickly that the State cannot step in fast enough to preserve the seniors' assets. Not only is it wrong for seniors to be taken advantage of in this way, but once the seniors' assets are gone, Medicaid or General Relief pick up the cost of the care. The State is essentially footing the bill for these losses.

I support SB 86, especially the provisions for financial protective orders, emergency conservatorships, and the addition of "undue influence" as a reportable harm. I hope you will give your support to this bill and protect our older Alaskans from financial predators.

Sincerely,

Diana Weber

Civil protection orders are intended to protect a victim from abuse. If granted a civil protection order, the courts can order that the abusive person (respondent) not contact the victim (petitioner) in person, by phone, e-mail, text message or through a third party. A civil protection order can order a respondent to not come within 100 yards of the petitioner, their home and workplace, as well as other locations.

There are many types of civil protection orders. The Family Abuse Prevention Act (FAPA) restraining orders can prohibit contact by an abusive intimate partner, ex-partner, parent, child or other family member. The Elderly Persons and Persons with Disability Abuse Prevention Act (EPPDAPA), also known as an Elder Abuse order, can prohibit contact by an abusive family member, partner, ex-partner, child or caretaker.

Stalking Civil Protection Orders, also known as stalking orders, prohibit a person from stalking another person. This order does not require the petitioner and respondent to be intimate partners, ex-partners or family members. Juveniles are also eligible to obtain a civil stalking order against another juvenile or an adult and a restraining order in certain circumstances.

To apply for a Protection Order, please contact the Domestic Violence Resource Center's Protective Order Advocacy Program at (503) 846-3020.

Violations of Protective Orders
Violations of protective orders should be reported to the police. Violations of both restraining orders and stalking orders are mandatory arrest situations for police. Violations usually result in probation and mandated treatment. An offender may be sentenced to jail for any violation. A civil stalking order violation can be a felony under certain circumstances which could result in a prison sentence.

Civil Matters

§ 124.015[1]

Hearing upon request of respondent

- relief
- settlement
- effect of proceedings

(1) The court shall hold a hearing within 21 days following the request, and may cancel or change any order issued under ORS 124.020 (Ex parte hearing) if the respondent, elderly person or person with a disability requests a hearing pursuant to ORS 124.020 (Ex parte hearing) (9).

(2) In addition to the relief granted under ORS 124.020 (Ex parte hearing), the court, in a hearing held pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, may:

(a) Require either party to move from any residence whose title or right to occupy such premises is held jointly by the parties; and

(b) Assess against any party reasonable attorney fees and such costs as may be incurred in the hearing.

(3) (a) If the respondent is represented by an attorney, time for the hearing may be extended for up to five days at the request of the petitioner or guardian petitioner so that the petitioner or guardian petitioner may seek representation.

(b) If the elderly person or person with a disability is represented by an attorney, time for the hearing may be extended for up to five days at the request of the respondent or guardian petitioner so that the respondent or guardian petitioner may seek representation.

(4) The court may approve any consent agreement to bring about a cessation of abuse of the parties. However, the court may not approve a term in a consent agreement that provides for restraint of a party to the agreement unless the other party petitioned for and was granted an order under ORS 124.010 (Petition for relief). An order or consent agreement made under this section may be amended at any time and shall continue in effect for a period of one year from the date of the order issued under ORS 124.020 (Ex parte hearing).

(5) An order or agreement made under ORS 124.005 (Definitions for ORS 124.005 to 124.040) to 124.040 (Short title) or ORS 133.310 (Authority of peace officer to arrest without warrant) and 133.381 (Procedure in arrests for violation of certain restraining orders) may not in any manner affect title to any real property.

(6) No undertaking shall be required in any proceeding under ORS 124.005 (Definitions for ORS 124.005 to 124.040) to 124.040 (Short title).

(7) Any proceeding under ORS 124.005 (Definitions for ORS 124.005 to 124.040) to 124.040 (Short title) shall be in addition to and not in lieu of any other available civil or criminal remedies.

(8) Notwithstanding any right or remedy established in ORS chapter 90 or ORS 105.105 (Entry to be lawful and peaceable only) to 105.168 (Minor as party in proceedings pertaining to residential dwellings), a petitioner or guardian petitioner may enforce an order issued under ORS 124.005 (Definitions for ORS 124.005 to 124.040) to 124.040 (Short title). [1995 c.666 §§5,5a; 2003 c.257 §3a; 2005 c.671 §9; 2007 c.70 §26]

§ 124.012[1]

Filing of petitions

• where contempt proceedings must be conducted

A petition under ORS 124.010 (Petition for relief) may be filed only in a county in which the petitioner or respondent resides. Any contempt proceedings for violation of a restraining order issued under ORS 124.005 (Definitions for ORS 124.005 to 124.040) to 124.040 (Short title) must be conducted by the court that issued the order, or by the circuit court for a county in which a violation of the restraining order occurs. If contempt proceedings are initiated in the circuit court for a county in which a violation of the restraining order occurs, the person initiating the contempt proceedings shall file with the court a copy of the restraining order, certified by the clerk of the court that issued the order. Upon filing of the certified copy of the restraining order, the court shall enforce the order as though that court had issued the order. [2003 c.289 §4]

§ 33.045[1]
Types of sanctions

(1) A court may impose either remedial or punitive sanctions for contempt.

(2) Confinement may be remedial or punitive. The sanction is:

(a) Remedial if it continues or accumulates until the defendant complies with the court's order or judgment.

(b) Punitive if it is for a definite period that will not be reduced even if the defendant complies with the court's order or judgment.

(3) A fine may be remedial or punitive. A fine is:

(a) Punitive if it is for a past contempt.

(b) Remedial if it is for continuing contempt and the fine accumulates until the defendant complies with the court's judgment or order or if the fine may be partially or entirely forgiven when the defendant complies with the court's judgment or order.

(4) Any sanction requiring payment of amounts to one of the parties to a proceeding is remedial.

(5) Any sanction imposed by a court for contempt is in addition to any civil remedy or criminal sanction that may be available as a result of the conduct constituting contempt. In any civil or criminal proceedings arising out of the conduct constituting contempt, the court shall take into consideration any contempt sanctions previously imposed for the same act. INTRODUCTION

In response to concerns regarding the abuse of the elderly and persons with disabilities the 1995 Oregon Legislature enacted specific legislation to restrain such abuse. The legislation has been amended and expanded since its enactment. While similar to provisions regarding the Family Abuse Prevention Act (FAPA), the Elderly Persons and Persons With Disabilities Abuse Prevention Act (EPPWDAPA) has some key distinctions meant to deal with specific concerns and circumstances regarding the abuse of the elderly and persons with disabilities. These differences include the type of alleged abuse that is actionable, potential remedies to address such abuse, and the role of agents who can appear in these actions on behalf of an elderly person or a person with a disability.

Under EPPWDAPA actions that can fall under the definition of abuse are expanded and the court has greater remedial powers to address such abuse. Under FAPA, abuse is generally defined in terms of attempting, threatening, or using force to physically injure or coerce a victim. The definition of abuse under EPPWDAPA is expanded to include not only physical violence but can also include the wrongful taking of property, neglect or failure to provide care or services, abandonment, derogatory conduct that causes emotional harm, and even the mailing of sweepstakes promotions. To remedy such claims of abuse the court can not only restrain the respondent from further contact with the victim, but can also order the respondent to return money and property to the petitioner, divest control of property, and follow instructions given by a guardian or conservator for the elderly person or the person with a disability.

EPPWDAPA allows this protection to be requested and put in place without the victim appearing personally before the court. Many times the victim may be too physically or mentally incapacitated to be able to appear and advocate for themselves. Other times the alleged victim may not want the protection of the court for a variety of reasons, including their support for the alleged abuser. In these instances the law specifically allows a guardian or guardian ad litem to apply for the relief without the presence of the alleged victim. The alleged victim is only required to be informed of the proceeding by written notice. In the absence an objection from the alleged victim, it is possible that he or she may never directly address the court except through a guardian or guardian ad litem.

The Elderly Persons and Persons With Disabilities Abuse Prevention Act is a powerful legal tool to attempt to address abuse of the elderly and people with disabilities. With the increasing numbers of elderly persons and persons with disabilities in our society, applying this specialized legal protection may unfortunately become more commonplace. A full understanding of the law and the circumstances regarding these potential victims is essential in addressing these issues. This bench guide is an attempt to aid the courts in this understanding.

I. THE PETITION

A. Venue

ORS 124.012

An Elderly Persons and Persons with Disabilities Abuse Prevention Act (EPPWDAPA) petition may be filed only in a county where the petitioner or the respondent resides.

ORS 124.005(9) and (3), ORS 124.020(5)

1. Caveat: "Petitioner" and "guardian petitioner" are separately defined. When filling out forms, a "guardian petitioner shall provide information about the (elderly) person (or person with a disability)," "rather than information about the petitioner." The statute is not clear, therefore, whether the relevant residence is that of the guardian petitioner, or the residence of the elderly person or person with a disability.

B. Definitions

ORS 124.010

An elderly person or a person or with a disability (or a "guardian petitioner" on behalf of such a person) may seek relief under EPPWDAPA when:

1. Background.

   a. The elderly person or person with a disability has been the victim of "abuse," as defined in ORS 124.005(1) within the preceding 180 days; and

   b. The elderly person or person with a disability is "in immediate and present danger of further abuse by the abuser."

2. Specific Definitions.

   a. Elderly Person.

ORS 124.005(2)

Under EPPWDAPA, an "elderly person" is "a person 65 years of age or older who is not subject to ORS 441.640 to ORS 441.665."

ORS 441.640 to ORS 441.685

These statutes deal with the requirement to report abuse of a resident of a long term care facility. The only persons who seem technically to "be subject to" ORS 441.640 to ORS 441.685 are persons who are required to make reports. This plain reading of the statute results in what is apparently the correct result. i.e. despite the restrictions that initially appear to restrict the court from granting relief under EPPWDAPA simply because a victim is a resident of a nursing home or other long term care facility, a close reading of the statutes in question appears to render this restriction a nullity. Any other interpretation would have the inconsistent result of allowing a person with a disability who lives in a long term care facility to avail herself or himself of the protections of ORS 124.005 et seq, while restricting elderly residents of the same facility from receiving the same protections.

b. Person With A Disability.

A "person with a disability" is a person who

ORS 124.005(8)(a);
ORS 410.040(7)(b)

I) Meets the criteria in ORS 410.040(7)(b) by being a person with a mental or physical disability who is:

i) mentally retarded, developmentally disabled, or mentally or emotionally disturbed and resides in or needs placement in a residential program administered by the Department of Human Services; or

ii) an alcohol or drug abuser and resides in or needs placement in a residential program administered by the Department of Human Services; or

iii) Otherwise has a physical or mental disability; or

ORS 124.005(8)(b);
ORS 410.715

II) Suffers brain injury caused by extrinsic forces which results in the person suffering a loss of cognitive, psychological, social, behavioral or physiological function for a sufficient time to affect that person's ability to perform activities of daily living.

c. Guardian Petitioner.

ORS 124.005(3)

A guardian petitioner is a guardian or a guardian ad litem for an elderly person or a person with a disability who files a petition under ORS 124.005 to ORS 124.040 on behalf of the person.

ORS 124.010(7)

Note: The elderly person or person with a disability retains rights to be represented, have access to records, file objections, request a hearing, and present evidence and cross examine witnesses if a guardian petitioner files an EPPWDAPA petition.

d. Abuse.

Unlike the Family Abuse Prevention Act (FAPA), the EPPWDAPA does not limit "abuse" to that between family or household members. "Abuse" under the EPPWDAPA means any of the following:

ORS 124.005(1)(a)

I) Any physical injury caused by other than accidental means or that appears inconsistent with the explanation given of the injury;

ORS 124.005(1)(b)

II) Neglect that leads to physical harm through withholding services necessary to maintain health and well-being;

ORS 124.005(1)(c)

III) Abandonment, including deserting or willfully forsaking an elderly person or a person with a disability, or withdrawing or neglecting duties and obligations that a care giver or other person owes an elderly person or a person with a disability;

ORS 124.005(1)(d)

IV) Willfully inflicting physical pain or injury;

ORS 124.005(1)(e)

V) Using derogatory or inappropriate names, phrases or profanity, ridicule, harassment, coercion, threats, cursing, intimidation, or inappropriate sexual comments or conduct of such a nature as to threaten significant physical or emotional harm to the elderly person or person with a disability;

(Note the potential for use of the EPPWDAPA process by participants in a domestic situation, particularly relating to dissolution of marriage or separation, involving persons over 65 years of age, or persons with a disability, who may seek to gain advantages where the situation does not rise to a level where relief could be granted under FAPA. See also ORS 124.010(4) requiring disclosure of any such pending proceedings.)

ORS 124.005(1)(f)

VI) Causing any sweepstakes promotion to be mailed to an elderly person or a person with a disability who spent more than $500 in the preceding year on sweepstakes, provided that the elderly person or person with a disability represented to the court that the person felt the need for the court's assistance to prevent the person from incurring further expense;

ORS 124.005(1)(g)

VII) Wrongfully taking or appropriating money or property, or knowingly subjecting an elderly person or a person with a disability, to alarm by conveying a threat to wrongfully take or appropriate property of the person, which threat would reasonably be expected to cause the person to believe that the threat would be carried out; or

Church v. Woods, 190 Or. App. 112, 77 P3d 1150, 2003

This case discusses "wrongful" and "taking" in the context of a similar statute, ORS 124.100, which relates to civil actions for abuse of vulnerable persons. Of particular note is the court's discussion of "improper motive" and "improper means" as they relate the concept "wrongful;" as well as the court's discussion of what constitutes a taking, especially as regards joint ownership, right of survivorship, etc. regarding both real and personal property, and regarding both tangible and intangible property.

ORS 124.005(1)(h)

VIII) Sexual contact with a nonconsenting elderly person or person with a disability considered incapable of consenting to a sexual act as described in ORS 163.315 (statutory rape), and as defined in ORS 163.305 (definitions).

e. Immediate and Present Danger.

ORS 124.020(4)

"Immediate and present danger of further abuse by the abuser" includes but is not limited to situations in which the respondent has recently threatened the elderly person or person with a disability with additional abuse.

ORS 124.005

f. Other Defined Terms.

Other terms specially defined for the purposes of EPPWDAPA include:

I. "Interfere" (to hinder or impede);

II. "Intimidate" (to compel or deter conduct by a threat);

III. "Menace" (to act in a threatening manner);

IV. "Molest" (to annoy, disturb or persecute with hostile intent or injurious effect);

V. "Sweepstakes" (a procedure for awarding a prize based on chance; or in which a person is required to purchase, pay something of value, or make a donation as a condition of winning a prize or receiving or obtaining information about a prize; or which is advertized in a way to create a reasonable impression that such a payment, purchase or donation is a condition of winning or receiving information about a prize; and

VII. "Sweepstakes promotion" (an offer to participate in a sweepstakes).

C. Limitations - Persons Against Whom a Petition May NOT Be Filed

ORS 124.010(8)

An elderly person or a person with a disability may not file a petition under ORS 124.005 to 124.040 against a guardian or a conservator of the person.

Note: Although an elderly person or a person with a disability cannot file an EPPWDAPA against their guardian or conservator, the statute is silent as to whether a guardian petitioner may file an EPPWDAPA petition against a guardian or a conservator of an elderly person or a person with a disability.

D. Time Frames

ORS 124.010(1)

An EPPWDAPA petition must allege both of two different time frames:

ORS 124.010(1)

1. That the prior abuse occurred within the 180 days preceding the filing of the EPPWDAPA petition.

ORS 124.010(6)

   a. Note: Time when the respondent is incarcerated, or has a principal residence more than 100 miles from the principal residence of the elderly person or person with a disability, is not counted as part of this 180-day period.

ORS 124.010(1)

2. That petitioner is in immediate and present danger of further abuse from respondent.

ORS 124.020(4)

   a. Immediate and present danger includes situations in which the respondent has recently threatened further abuse.

E. Requirement to Disclose Other Actions

ORS 124.010(4)

An EPPWDAPA petition must disclose the existence of any of the following pending between the parties:

1. Any other EPPWDAPA proceedings; or

2. Any "Abuse Prevention Act" proceedings; or

3. Any marital annulment, dissolution or separation proceedings; or

4. Any protective proceedings under ORS Chapter 125 (including guardianships and conservatorships).

F. Moving Does Not Affect Rights

ORS 124.010(3)

The right to petition for relief under EPPWDAPA is not affected if the elderly person or a person with a disability has left the residence or household to avoid abuse.

G. Amendments to Petition

1. Amendments of Petitioner Permitted.

   Nothing in ORS ch. 124 prohibits petitioner from amending the EPPWDAPA petition after filing and before hearing.

ORS 124.020(9)(c)

2. Amendments of Objector Permitted.

   The contested hearing that is set following service on the respondent and/or the elderly person or person with a disability is not limited to issues raised in the request for hearing form.

ORS 124.020(9)(c)

   a. However, if the respondent or the elderly person or person with a disability seeks to raise such an issue the Petitioner of Guardian Petitioner is entitled to a reasonable continuance.

H. Burden and Standard of Proof

ORS 124.010(2)

1. Burden of Proof.

   The petitioner or guardian petitioner has the burden of proof for all claims made under ORS 124.005 to 124.040.

ORS 124.010(2)

2. Standard of Proof.

   The standard of proof is a preponderance of the evidence for all claims made under ORS 124.005 to 124.040.

I. Notice to Elderly Person or Person with a Disability

ORS 124.024(1) and (2)

1. Copies of Documents and Statement of Rights.

   If an EPPWDAPA petition is filed by a guardian petitioner, that person must give notice to the elderly person or the person with a disability or the petition, order, and related forms described in ORS 124.020(6), and must also serve on that person a notice that contains a statement of that person's rights to contact and retain counsel, have access to personal records, file objections, request a hearing, and present evidence and cross examine witnesses.

ORS 124.024(3)

2. Form of Notice.

Notice must be similar to that provided to a respondent.

ORS 124.024(3)

3. Objection Form To Be Included.

The notice must contain an objection form that the elderly person or person with a disability can mail to the court.

ORS 124.024(4)

4. Personal Services Required Within 72 Hours.

This notice must be personally served on the elderly person or person with a disability not later than 72 hours after the court issues a restraining order under ORS 124.020.

The statute is not clear what the result is if such service is not completed within 72 hours.

ORS 124.024(4)

5. Proof of Service Before Contested Hearing.

This notice must be personally served on the elderly person or person and proof of service thereof filed in the proceeding before a contested hearing can be held pursuant to ORS 124.015.

The statute is not clear as to the result when a petition filed by a guardian petitioner, if service on the elderly person or person with a disability is not obtained, but the respondent requests a hearing, and the 21 day period within which the hearing must be held runs.

J. Clerk's Duties

The court clerk has several duties under EPPWDAPA.

1. Information.

ORS 124.010(5)

The court clerk must give the elderly person information provided by the Department of Human Resources about local adult protective services, domestic violence shelters, and local legal services available.

2. Forms, Instructions.

ORS 124.020(9)(a)

The clerk must make available an instruction brochure and forms for the petition, order, and related forms. The forms must be in substantially the form prescribed by statute.

(Note that OSCA Legal Counsel has developed standard forms and instructions, which OSCA updates as needed to reflect new legislation and case law, and comments from judges and court staff who review the updates.)

3. Copies.

ORS 124.020(7)(a)

If the court allows the petition, the clerk of the court must provide, without charge, the number of certified true copies of the petition and order necessary to effect service on the respondent. The court clerk must also deliver a true copy of the petition and order to the county sheriff for service, unless the court finds service is unnecessary because respondent appeared in person in court.

4. Notify Petitioner if Documents Returned by Sheriff.

ORS 124.020(8)(a)

If the sheriff returns the order and petition to the court, because they are incomplete, the Clerk shall notify the Petitioner or Guardian Petitioner.

5. If Service Not Achieved by Sheriff.

ORS 124.020(8)(b)

If the sheriff cannot achieve service, the sheriff shall notify the petitioner or guardian petitioner, and if that person does not respond within 10 days, the sheriff shall file a return to the clerk showing service was not completed.

6. Provide Hearing Request Form, and Give Notice of Hearing.

ORS 124.020(9)(a)

The respondent, or the elderly person or the person with a disability, may request a court hearing upon any relief granted within 30 days after being served with an EPPWDAPA restraining order or notice thereof. The clerk shall provide a hearing request form in substantially the form provided in statute. The clerk shall also notify the petitioner or guardian petitioner of the time and date of the hearing, and shall provide a copy of the request for hearing.

7. Deliver Proof of Service To Sheriff.

ORS 124.030(1)

The clerk, or any other person serving a restraining order including a security amount and an expiration date, shall deliver to the sheriff a true copy of the proof of service and a true copy of the Petition and a true copy of the Order.

8. Deliver Notice of Early Termination.

ORS 124.030(3)

When an EPPWDAPA restraining order is terminated before the expiration date, the clerk shall deliver a true copy of the termination order upon the sheriff.

K. No Filing, Service, or Hearing Fees

ORS 124.020(7)(d)

The court cannot charge filing, service, or hearing fees. The sheriff cannot charge service fees.

II. Uncontested, Immediate Hearing

A. Ex Parte Hearing Required

ORS 124.020(1)

An EPPWDAPA petitioner is entitled to an ex parte hearing, in person or by telephone, on the same day that the petition is filed or the next judicial day.

B. Testimony May Establish Required Showing

ORS 124.020(3)

1. Who May Testify To Meet Requirement.

EPPWDAPA explicitly provides that the required showing may be made by testimony of the elderly person or person with a disability, a guardian or a guardian ad litem of the person, witnesses to the abuse, or adult protective services workers who have conducted an investigation.

ORS 124.020(1)

2. Under EPPWDAPA there must be a showing that:

   a. The elderly person or a person with a disability;

   b. Has been the victim of abuse;

   c. Committed by the respondent;

   d. Within 180 days preceding the filing of the petition; and that

   e. There is an immediate and present danger of further abuse to the person.

f. Note that many of these terms are defined and discussed above, and that their statutory definitions may be different from the more common meanings of some of these terms.

ORS 124.020(5)

3. Error in Order Form.

Forms printed in accordance with statute, including the pre-printed form for the Order, contain errors, in that they fail to clarify that "petitioner" should often be interpreted as "elderly person or person with a disability." Although there is a statutory correction (ORS 124.020(5)) in this regard for forms to be filled out by the petitioner or guardian petitioner, there is no such statutory correction for the form of the Order. The court should, nonetheless, make this substitution where common sense dictates, as, for example, in the section requiring a finding that there has been abuse of "the petitioner."

ORS 124.010(4).

4 Intersection of FAPA and EPPWDAPA Processes.

Note also the discussion above regarding the potential use of the EPPWDAPA process by persons who may be seeking advantages in dissolution proceedings, as also discussed above, and the requirement that any such proceedings which are pending be reported to the court per ORS 124.010(4).

C. Burden and Standard of Proof

ORS 124.010(2)

As outlined above, the petitioner or guardian petitioner has the burden of proof in this and all hearings under EPPWDAPA, with the standard of a preponderance of the evidence.

III. Relief

A. Mandatory (Not Discretionary) Relief

ORS 124.020(1)

At the initial hearing the court must order the following relief if petitioner or guardian petitioner requests it, and the court finds that:

ORS 124.010(1);

- respondent abused the elderly person or

also see benchguide above at section (I)(B)(2)(d)

person with a disability within the preceding 180 days; and

ORS 124.010;
also see benchguide above at section (I)(B)(2)(d)

- the elderly person or person with a disability is in immediate and present danger of further abuse by respondent.

Note: When a guardian petitioner files a petition, and appears at the ex parte hearing, the elderly person or person with a disability may or may not be present at this ex parte hearing. However, issues may not be raised at this ex parte hearing regarding an objection to the requested relief or regarding other wishes of the elderly person or person with a disability. Such issues are to be addressed through the objection hearing process under ORS 124.020 as set forth below in section IV. Relief requested by a guardian petitioner, if legally appropriate, is to be granted by the court at this ex parte hearing, as the court is without discretion in many of these matters if the specific relief is requested by the guardian petitioner, although the guardian petitioner may have discretion as to whether to request such relief.

1. Restraint from further abuse

ORS 124.020(1)(c)

Order that the respondent be restrained from doing the following to the elderly person or person with a disability:

ORS 124.020(1)(c); 124.005(1)

a. Abusing, defined in ORS 124.005(1);

ORS 124.020(1)(c); 124.005(5)

b. Intimidating, defined as compelling or deterring conduct by a threat;

ORS 124.020(1)(c); 124.005(7)

c. Molesting, defined as annoying, disturbing, or persecuting with hostile intent or injurious effect;

ORS 124.020(1)(c); 124.005(4)

d. Interfering with, defined as interposing in a way that hinders or impedes;

ORS 124.020(1)(c); 124.005(6)

e. Menacing, defined as acting in a threatening manner;

ORS 124.020(1)(c)

f. Attempting to abuse, intimidate, molest, interfere with or menace the elderly person or person with a disability;

ORS 124.020(1)(e)(A);
ORS 124.005(1)(f)

g. Mailing any sweepstakes promotion to the elderly person or person with a disability, effective not less than 150 days after entry of the order.

2. Restraint from Entry Onto Specified Premises

ORS 124.020(1)(d)

If requested by petitioner or guardian petitioner, order that respondent be restrained from entering, or attempting to enter, any premises if the court deems it necessary to prevent respondent from abusing, intimidating, molesting, interfering with or menacing the elderly person or person with a disability.

3. Ouster

ORS 124.020(1)(a)

If requested by petitioner or guardian petitioner, order respondent to move out of the residence of the elderly person or person with a disability if:

a. the residence is solely in name of the elderly person or person with a disability; or

b. the elderly person or person with a disability and the respondent jointly own or rent the residence; or

c. the respondent is married to the elderly person or person with a disability.

4. Police "Standby" for Essential Personal Property

ORS 124.020(1)(b);

If requested by petitioner or guardian petitioner, order that a peace officer accompany the party moving from the residence of the elderly person or person with a disability to remove essential personal effects.

ORS 124.025(1)&(2)

a. The "standby" time is not required to exceed 20 minutes

b. The peace officer may temporarily interrupt the removal of property at any time.

c. Police "standby" is available on only one occasion.

ORS 124.020

d. Essential person effects include, but are not limited to: clothing, toiletries, medications, Social Security cards, birth certificates, identification and tools of the trade.

ORS 107.718(d)

Note: The statute does not define essential personal effects but see ORS 107.718(d) which deals with FAPA restraining orders and lists the above items as essential personal property.

5. Security Amount

ORS 124.030(4)

Specify the amount of the bond for violation of the restraining order. Although the statutory form specifies a default bond amount at $5,000, the court may impose a higher or lower security amount.

6. Notice to Respondent

ORS 124.020(6), See Form - Notice to Respondent

Notice of respondent's right to request a hearing must accompany order in order to comply with the statute.

7. Notice to Elderly Person or Person With a Disability

ORS 124.024(1)

Guardian petitioners must give notice of petition, order, and related forms described in ORS 124.020(6) to the elderly person or person with a disability named in the petition.

ORS 124.024(4)

Such notice must be provided within seventy-two hours after the court issues a restraining order under ORS 124.020.

8. Sweepstakes Promotions

In addition to restraining the respondent from mailing any sweepstakes promotion to the elderly person or person with a disability, the court can order the respondent to:

ORS 124.020(1)(e)

a. Remove the elderly person or person with a disability from the sweepstakes mailing list (within 150 days of the date the order is entered); or place the elderly person or person with a disability on a list of persons to whom the promotions may not be mailed; and

b. Immediately refund any payment received in any form from the elderly person or person with a disability after the court order is entered.

B. Discretionary Relief

1. Authority to Order the Return of Wrongfully Appropriated Money or Property

ORS 124.020(2)(a)

If the court finds that the elderly person or person with a disability has been the victim of abuse as defined in ORS 124.005(1)(g) the court may order only that relief which the court considers necessary to prevent or remedy the wrongful taking or appropriation of the money or property of the elderly person or person with a disability, including but not limited to the relief which is set forth below at III.B.1.a through d.

ORS 124.005 (1)(g)

Note: ORS 124.005(1)(g): includes the following as one definition of abuse. "Wrongfully taking or appropriating money or property, or knowingly subjecting an elderly person or person with disabilities to alarm by conveying a threat to wrongfully take or appropriate money or property, which threat reasonably would be expected to cause the elderly person or person with a disabilities to believe that the threat will be carried out."

Church v. Woods, 190 Or. App. 112, 118-9, 77 P.3d 1150 (2003)

Note: see Church v. Woods, 190 Or. App. 112, 118-9, 77 P.3d 1150 (2003) (internal citations omitted.) defining wrongfully: "[Wrongfully's] ordinary meaning is full of wrong: INJURIOUS, UNJUST, UNFAIR." More specifically, it has a well-understood meaning in the law of torts with regard to interference with legal interests. Conduct generally is "wrongful" if it is carried out in pursuit of an improper motive or by improper means. "Improper means" must be independently wrongful by reason of statutory or common law, beyond the mere fact of the injury complained of. Improper means, for example, include violence, threats, intimidation, deceit, misrepresentation, bribery, unfounded litigation, defamation and disparaging falsehood. The use of undue influence also constitutes an "improper means," in that it involves the procurement of an unfair advantage. That dual meaning of the word "wrongful," focusing alternatively on the defendant's motives or the means by which property was taken, is sensible in the context of ORS 124.110(1)(a). Accordingly, we adopt it."

ORS 124.020(2)(a)(A)

a. Directing the respondent to refrain from exercising control over the money or property of the elderly person or person with a disability;

ORS 124.020(2)(a)(B)

b. Requiring the respondent to return custody or control of the money or property of the elderly person or person with a disability to him or her;

ORS 124.020(2)(a)(C)

c. Requiring the respondent to follow the instructions of the guardian or conservator of the elderly person or person with a disability; or

ORS 124.020(2)(a)(D)

d. Prohibiting the respondent from transferring the money or property of the elderly person or person with a disability to any person other than the elderly person or person with a disability.

Note: The statutory order form does not list the above options as possible relief and therefore a pro se petitioner may not know to write them in the "other relief" requested section of the form. The court should inquire if petitioner wants to include any of these options when executing an order where petitioner has alleged the money or property has been wrongfully appropriated.

ORS 133.310(3)

Note: As noted below there are other consequences to ordering the return of property. At the ex parte hearing the respondent has had no opportunity to contest ownership of the allegedly wrongfully obtained property. ORS 133.310(3) requires a peace office to arrest and take into custody a person without a warrant when the officer has probable cause to believe that person has been served with a restraining order and has violated that order. A respondent in possession of allegedly wrongfully obtained property would therefore be subject to mandatory arrest.

C. Additional Discretionary Relief

ORS 124.020(1)(f)

The court may order any additional relief it considers necessary to provide for the safety and welfare of the elderly person or person with a disability.

D. Limits on Relief

The court may not use a restraining order issued under ORS 124.005 to 124.040 to:

ORS 124.020(2)(b)(A)

1. Allow any person other than the elderly person or person with a disability to assume responsibility for managing any money or property of the elderly person or person with a disability;

ORS 124.020(2)(b)(B)

2. Provide relief that is more appropriately obtained in a protective proceeding filed under ORS chapter 125 (Protective Proceedings).

    a. This includes, but is not limited to, giving control or management of the financial accounts or property of the elderly person or person with a disability for any purpose other than necessary to prevent or remedy the wrongful taking or appropriation of money described in 124.005(1)(g).

E. Entry Into Law Enforcement Data System

ORS 124.030 (1)

1. When a EPPWDAPA restraining order is issued and the person to be restrained has actual notice thereof, the clerk of the court shall deliver:

    a. a true copy of the affidavit of proof of service,

    b. a copy of the petition, and

    c. a true copy of the order to a county sheriff.

2. Upon receipt of the order the county sheriff shall entered the order into the Law Enforcement Data System (LEDS), which gives notice to all law enforcement agencies of the order. The order will be fully enforceable in any county in the state.

F. Duration of Relief

ORS 124.020(1)

1. Order remains in effect for a period of one year; or

2. Until the order is withdrawn or amended, whichever is sooner.

G. Dismissal

1. By Written Order

ORS 124.030(2)

The court may dismiss a restraining order at any time, but only by written order.

EPPWDAPA provides no specific standard or guidance for dismissal of restraining orders, and court practices vary considerably. ORCP 54(A)(1) permits dismissal without court order upon filing of a notice by the plaintiff.

2. Notarized Signature Required

ORS 124.030(2)

A restraining order entered under ORS 124.020 can be terminated upon a motion for dismissal by the petitioner or guardian petitioner, only if the motion is notarized.

H. Renewals

1. For Good Cause Shown

ORS 124.035

The court may renew an EPPWDAPA order for "good cause shown" regardless of whether there has been further abuse.

2. Due process may require notice to respondent and an opportunity for a hearing on the renewal.

I. Early Termination

ORS 124.030(3)

When the order is terminated before it expires, the clerk of the court must deliver a true copy of the termination order to the sheriff with whom the original order was filed. The sheriff must then remove the original order from the Law Enforcement Data System.

IV. The Contested Hearing Process

Either the respondent or the elderly person or person with a disability (in a case brought by a guardian petitioner) may request a hearing to object to the order or to its particular provisions.

A. Contested Hearing Requests

1. Timing

ORS 124.020(9)(a)

The respondent or the elderly person or person with a disability must request the hearing within 30 days after the restraining order is served on the person who requests the hearing

2. Forms

ORS 124.020(9)(a)

The clerk must make the hearing request form available substantially in the form provided in ORS 124.020(6).

B. Scheduling the Contested Hearing

ORS 124.015(1)

1. The court must hold the hearing within 21 days of the hearing request.

Strother and Strother, 130 Or App 624, 630, 883 P2d 249 (1994), rev den 320 Or 508 (1995)

However if respondent or the elderly person or person with a disability causes or contributes to the delay, the 21-day rule may not apply. Per Strother and Strother, 130 Or App 624, 630, 883 P2d 249 (1994), rev den 320 Or 508 (1995), if the delay is attributable to the person requesting the hearing, the hearing may be postponed beyond 21 days in an appropriate circumstance.

ORS 124.015(3)

2. If respondent or the elderly person or person with a disability is represented by counsel and another party so requests, the court may extend the time for hearing up to five (5) days, to allow other parties to seek representation.

C. Contested Hearing Notice Requirements

ORS 124.020(9)(b)

The clerk of the court shall notify all parties of a scheduled contested hearing, and the petitioner or guardian petitioner shall give the clerk sufficient information to allow such notification.

D. Settlement

ORS 124.015(4)

1. The court can approve any consent agreement to bring about a cessation of the abuse.

ORS 124.015(4)

2. However, the settlement cannot provide for restraint of a party unless the other party petitioned for and was granted an order under ORS 124.010.

ORS 124.015(4)

3. Thus, the settlement cannot provide for mutual restraint unless both parties petitioned for and received orders under ORS 124.010.

ORS 124.020(2)(b)(A)

4. In addition, the court cannot use a restraining order under ORS 124.005 to 124.040 to allow a person other than the elderly person or the person with a disability to assume responsibility for managing the money or property of the person.

ORS 124.020(2)(b)(B)

5. Nor can the court use a restraining order under ORS 124.005 to 124.040 to grant relief that is more appropriately filed under ORS chapter 125 (protective proceedings, including guardianships and conservatorships).

E. Subject Matter of Contested Hearing

ORS 124.020(9)(c)

1. The EPPWDAPA hearing is not limited to issues that respondent raised in the request for hearing.

ORS 124.020(9)(c)

2. The EPWPDAPA hearing may include testimony from witnesses to the abuse and from adult protective services workers.

   Although not specified in ORS 124.020(9), other witnesses may, of course, also testify, as may be appropriate.

ORS 124.020(9)(c)

3. If the respondent, elderly person, or person with a disability seeks to raise an issue at the hearing not previously raised in the request form, the petitioner or guardian petitioner is entitled to a reasonable continuance to prepare a response.

F. Contested Hearing Procedures

1. EPPWDAPA does not specify what takes place at the hearing.

ORS 124.020(9)(d)

2. The court, during the hearing, must exercise its discretion to protect the elderly person or person with a disability from traumatic confrontation with respondent.

ORS 124.020(9)(c)

3. The EPPWDAPA contested hearing may be held in person or by phone.

ORS 45.400

4. Nothing in EPPWDAPA specifically overrides ORS 45.400 relating to telephone testimony, which requires 30 days prior written notice of telephone testimony, but which allows shorter notice if good cause is shown.

ORS 45.400(3)

5. ORS 45.400 contains significant restrictions setting forth situations when telephone testimony is not allowed.

G. Evidentiary Issues

ORS 40.015(2)

1. The Oregon Evidence Code applies to EPPWDAPA hearings.

ORS 124.010(2)

2. The burden of proof is on the petitioner or guardian petitioner to prove a claim by a preponderance of evidence.

H. Available Relief

ORS 124.015(1)

1. The court may cancel or change any order issued under ORS 124.020.

ORS 124.015(2)

2. ORS 124.015 provides relief that is "in addition to the relief granted under ORS 124.020." See Section III., above, for relief available under ORS 124.020. In addition to that relief, under ORS 124.015, the court may also order any of the following:

ORS 124.015(2)(a)

a. Require either party to move from any residence whose title or right to occupy is held jointly by the parties.

> As with many other situations, although the statute speaks of "either party" in this circumstance, this appears to be a function of the fact that the statute was not comprehensively revised when it was changed to allow for petitions by guardian petitioners. When this portion of the statute was written, the only "parties" were the respondent and the elderly person or person with a disability.

ORS 124.015(2)(b)

b. The court may assess against any party reasonable attorney fees and costs incurred in the hearing.

ORS 124.015(4)

c. The court may approve a consent agreement to bring about a cessation of abuse. There are significant restrictions on the content of settlement agreements and restraining orders that are available, however, despite the initial impression given by the first sentence of ORS 124.015(4). See section IV.D., above.

ORS 124.030(4)

d. The court can increase the security amount that was set at the ex-parte hearing for violation of the order.

V. Foreign Restraining Orders

ORS 24.190

See FAPA Benchguide for a discussion of the general statutory provisions regarding foreign restraining orders and their effect.

VI. Contempt—Remedial and Punitive Sanctions

A. Enforcement

ORS 124.015(8)

Notwithstanding ORS chapter 90 (Landlord and Tenant Law) and ORS sections 105.105 to 105.168 (FED statute), a petitioner may enforce an order issued under EPPWDAPA.

B. Contempt Proceedings

As under FAPA, EPPWDAPA restraining orders are enforced through ORS chapter 33 contempt proceedings.

1. See FAPA Benchguide on contempt procedures and remedial and punitive sanctions.

ORS 166.293(3)(a)

2. Note that ORS 166.293(3)(a) (providing the court authority to revoke a concealed weapons permit) does not apply when an EPPWDAPA order is violated.

ORS 124.030(4)

3 Pending a contempt hearing for violation of an EPPWDAPA restraining order, a person arrested and taken into custody pursuant to ORS 133.310 may be released as provided in ORS 135.230 to 135.290.

California

§ 15610.07

(a) An elder or dependent adult who has suffered abuse as defined in Section 15610.07 may seek protective orders as provided in this section.

(b) For the purposes of this section, "protective order" means an order that includes any of the following restraining orders, whether issued ex parte, after notice and hearing, or in a judgment:

(1) An order enjoining a party from abusing, intimidating, molesting, attacking, striking, stalking, threatening, sexually assaulting, battering, harassing, telephoning, including, but not limited to, annoying telephone calls as described in Section 653m of the Penal Code, destroying personal property, contacting, either directly or indirectly, by mail or otherwise, or coming within a specified distance of, or disturbing the peace of the petitioner, and, in the discretion of the court, on a showing of good cause, of other named family or household members or a conservator, if any, of the petitioner.

(2) An order excluding a party from the petitioner's residence or dwelling, except that this order shall not be issued if legal or equitable title to, or lease of, the residence or dwelling is in the sole name of the party to be excluded, or is in the name of the party to be excluded and any other party besides the petitioner.

(3) An order enjoining a party from specified behavior that the court determines is necessary to effectuate orders described in paragraph (1) or (2).

(c) An order may be issued under this section, with or without notice, to restrain any person for the purpose of preventing a recurrence of abuse, if an affidavit shows, to the satisfaction of the court, reasonable proof of a past act or acts of abuse of the petitioning elder or dependent adult.

(d) (1) Upon filing a petition for protective orders under this section, the petitioner may obtain a temporary restraining order in accordance with Section 527 of the Code of Civil Procedure, except to the extent this section provides a rule that is inconsistent. The temporary restraining order may include any of the protective orders described in subdivision (b). However, the court may issue an ex parte order excluding a party from the petitioner's residence or dwelling only on a showing of all of the following:

(A) Facts sufficient for the court to ascertain that the party who will stay in the dwelling has a right under color of law to possession of the premises.

(B) That the party to be excluded has assaulted or threatens to assault the petitioner, other named family or household member of the petitioner, or conservator of the petitioner.

(C) That physical or emotional harm would otherwise result to the petitioner, other named family or household member of the petitioner, or conservator of the petitioner.

(2) If a temporary restraining order is granted without notice, the matter shall be made returnable on an order requiring cause to be shown why a permanent order should not be granted, on the earliest day that the business of the court will permit, but not later than 20 days or, if good cause appears to the court, 25 days from the date the temporary restraining order is granted, unless the order is otherwise modified or terminated by the court.

(e) The court may issue, upon notice and a hearing, any of the orders set forth in subdivision (b). The court may issue, after notice and hearing, an order excluding a person from a residence or dwelling if the court finds that physical or emotional harm would otherwise result to the petitioner, other named family or household member of the petitioner, or conservator of the petitioner.

(f) In the discretion of the court, an order issued after notice and a hearing under this section may have a duration of not more than three years, subject to termination or modification by further order of the court either on written stipulation filed with the court or on the motion of a party. These orders may be renewed upon the request of a party, either for three years or permanently, without a showing of any further abuse since the issuance of the original order, subject to termination or modification by further order of the court either on written stipulation filed with the court or on the motion of a party. The failure to state the expiration date on the face of the form creates an order with a duration of three years from the date of issuance.

(g) Upon the filing of a petition for protective orders under this section, the respondent shall be personally served with a copy of the petition, notice of the hearing or order to show cause, temporary restraining order, if any, and any affidavits in support of the petition. Service shall be made at least five days before the hearing. The court may, on motion of the petitioner or on its own motion, shorten the time for service on the respondent.

(h) The court may, upon the filing of an affidavit by the applicant that the respondent could not be served within the time required by statute, reissue an order previously issued and dissolved by the court for failure to serve the respondent. The reissued order shall be made returnable on the earliest day that the business of the court will permit, but not later than 20 days or, if good cause appears to the court, 25 days from the date of reissuance. The reissued order shall state on its face the date of expiration of the order.

(i) (1) If a person named in an order issued under this section, after a hearing, has not been served personally with the order but has received actual notice of the existence and substance of the order through personal appearance in court to hear the terms of the order from the court, no additional proof of service is required for enforcement of the order.

(2) If the person named in a temporary restraining order is personally served with the order and notice of hearing with respect to a restraining order or protective order based thereon, but the person does not appear at the hearing, either personally or by counsel, and the terms and conditions of the restraining order or protective order are identical to the temporary restraining order,

California

§ 15610.07

(a) An elder or dependent adult who has suffered abuse as defined in Section 15610.07 may seek protective orders as provided in this section.

(b) For the purposes of this section, "protective order" means an order that includes any of the following restraining orders, whether issued ex parte, after notice and hearing, or in a judgment:

(1) An order enjoining a party from abusing, intimidating, molesting, attacking, striking, stalking, threatening, sexually assaulting, battering, harassing, telephoning, including, but not limited to, annoying telephone calls as described in Section 653m of the Penal Code, destroying personal property, contacting, either directly or indirectly, by mail or otherwise, or coming within a specified distance of, or disturbing the peace of the petitioner, and, in the discretion of the court, on a showing of good cause, of other named family or household members or a conservator, if any, of the petitioner.

(2) An order excluding a party from the petitioner's residence or dwelling, except that this order shall not be issued if legal or equitable title to, or lease of, the residence or dwelling is in the sole name of the party to be excluded, or is in the name of the party to be excluded and any other party besides the petitioner.

(3) An order enjoining a party from specified behavior that the court determines is necessary to effectuate orders described in paragraph (1) or (2).

(c) An order may be issued under this section, with or without notice, to restrain any person for the purpose of preventing a recurrence of abuse, if an affidavit shows, to the satisfaction of the court, reasonable proof of a past act or acts of abuse of the petitioning elder or dependent adult.

(d) (1) Upon filing a petition for protective orders under this section, the petitioner may obtain a temporary restraining order in accordance with Section 527 of the Code of Civil Procedure, except to the extent this section provides a rule that is inconsistent. The temporary restraining order may include any of the protective orders described in subdivision (b). However, the court may issue an ex parte order excluding a party from the petitioner's residence or dwelling only on a showing of all of the following:

(A) Facts sufficient for the court to ascertain that the party who will stay in the dwelling has a right under color of law to possession of the premises.

(B) That the party to be excluded has assaulted or threatens to assault the petitioner, other named family or household member of the petitioner, or conservator of the petitioner.

(C) That physical or emotional harm would otherwise result to the petitioner, other named family or household member of the petitioner, or conservator of the petitioner.

(2) If a temporary restraining order is granted without notice, the matter shall be made returnable on an order requiring cause to be shown why a permanent order should not be granted, on the earliest day that the business of the court will permit, but not later than 20 days or, if good cause appears to the court, 25 days from the date the temporary restraining order is granted, unless the order is otherwise modified or terminated by the court.

(e) The court may issue, upon notice and a hearing, any of the orders set forth in subdivision (b). The court may issue, after notice and hearing, an order excluding a person from a residence or dwelling if the court finds that physical or emotional harm would otherwise result to the petitioner, other named family or household member of the petitioner, or conservator of the petitioner.

(f) In the discretion of the court, an order issued after notice and a hearing under this section may have a duration of not more than three years, subject to termination or modification by further order of the court either on written stipulation filed with the court or on the motion of a party. These orders may be renewed upon the request of a party, either for three years or permanently, without a showing of any further abuse since the issuance of the original order, subject to termination or modification by further order of the court either on written stipulation filed with the court or on the motion of a party. The failure to state the expiration date on the face of the form creates an order with a duration of three years from the date of issuance.

(g) Upon the filing of a petition for protective orders under this section, the respondent shall be personally served with a copy of the petition, notice of the hearing or order to show cause, temporary restraining order, if any, and any affidavits in support of the petition. Service shall be made at least five days before the hearing. The court may, on motion of the petitioner or on its own motion, shorten the time for service on the respondent.

(h) The court may, upon the filing of an affidavit by the applicant that the respondent could not be served within the time required by statute, reissue an order previously issued and dissolved by the court for failure to serve the respondent. The reissued order shall be made returnable on the earliest day that the business of the court will permit, but not later than 20 days or, if good cause appears to the court, 25 days from the date of reissuance. The reissued order shall state on its face the date of expiration of the order.

(i) (1) If a person named in an order issued under this section, after a hearing, has not been served personally with the order but has received actual notice of the existence and substance of the order through personal appearance in court to hear the terms of the order from the court, no additional proof of service is required for enforcement of the order.

(2) If the person named in a temporary restraining order is personally served with the order and notice of hearing with respect to a restraining order or protective order based thereon, but the person does not appear at the hearing, either personally or by counsel, and the terms and conditions of the restraining order or protective order are identical to the temporary restraining order, except for the duration of the order, then the restraining order or protective order may be served on the person by first-class mail sent to that person at the most current address for the person available to the court.

(3) The judicial form for orders issued pursuant to this subdivision shall contain a statement in substantially the following form:

"NO ADDITIONAL PROOF OF SERVICE IS REQUIRED IF THE FACE OF THIS FORM INDICATES THAT BOTH PARTIES WERE PERSONALLY PRESENT AT THE HEARING WHERE THE ORDER WAS ISSUED. IF YOU HAVE BEEN PERSONALLY SERVED WITH A TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER OR EMERGENCY PROTECTIVE ORDER AND NOTICE OF HEARING, BUT YOU DO NOT APPEAR AT THE HEARING EITHER IN PERSON OR BY COUNSEL, AND A RESTRAINING ORDER OR PROTECTIVE ORDER IS ISSUED AT THE HEARING THAT DOES NOT DIFFER FROM THE PRIOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER OR EMERGENCY PROTECTIVE ORDER, A COPY OF THE ORDER WILL BE SERVED UPON YOU BY MAIL AT THE FOLLOWING ADDRESS _____. IF THAT ADDRESS IS NOT CORRECT OR YOU WISH TO VERIFY THAT THE TEMPORARY OR EMERGENCY ORDER WAS MADE PERMANENT WITHOUT SUBSTANTIVE CHANGE, CALL THE CLERK OF THE COURT AT _____."

(j) (1) The court shall order the petitioner or the attorney for the petitioner to deliver, or the clerk of the court to mail, a copy of an order issued under this section, or a reissuance, extension, modification, or termination of the order, and any subsequent proof of service, by the close of the business day on which the order, reissuance, extension, modification, or termination was made, to each local law enforcement agency designated by the petitioner or the attorney for the petitioner having jurisdiction over the residence of the petitioner, and to any additional law enforcement agencies within the court's discretion as are requested by the petitioner. Each appropriate law enforcement agency shall make available information as to the existence and current status of these orders to law enforcement officers responding to the scene of reported abuse.

(2) An order issued under this section shall, on request of the petitioner, be served on the respondent, whether or not the respondent has been taken into custody, by any law enforcement officer who is present at the scene of reported abuse involving the parties to the proceeding. The petitioner shall provide the officer with an endorsed copy of the order and a proof of service, which the officer shall complete and send to the issuing court.

(3) Upon receiving information at the scene of an incident of abuse that a protective order has been issued under this section, or that a person who has been taken into custody is the respondent to that order, if the protected person cannot produce an endorsed copy of the order, a law enforcement officer shall immediately attempt to verify the existence of the order.

(4) If the law enforcement officer determines that a protective order has been issued, but not served, the officer shall immediately notify the respondent of the terms of the order and where a written copy of the order can be obtained, and the officer shall at that time also enforce the order. The law enforcement officer's verbal notice of the terms of the order shall constitute service of the order and is sufficient notice for the purposes of this section and for the purposes of Section 273.6 of the Penal Code.

(k) Nothing in this section shall preclude either party from representation by private counsel or from appearing on the party's own behalf.

(l) There is no filing fee for a petition, response, or paper seeking the reissuance, modification, or enforcement of a protective order filed in a proceeding brought pursuant to this section.

(m) Pursuant to paragraph (4) of subdivision (b) of Section 6103.2 of the Government Code, a petitioner shall not be required to pay a fee for law enforcement to serve an order issued under this chapter.

(n) The prevailing party in any action brought under this section may be awarded court costs and attorney's fees, if any.

(o) (1) An order issued pursuant to this section shall prohibit the person subject to it from owning, possessing, purchasing, receiving, or attempting to purchase or receive, a firearm.

(2) Paragraph (1) shall not apply to a case consisting solely of financial abuse unaccompanied by force, threat, harassment, intimidation, or any other form of abuse.

(3) The court shall order a person subject to a protective order issued under this section to relinquish any firearms he or she owns or possesses pursuant to Section 527.9 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

(4) Every person who owns, possesses, purchases, or receives, or attempts to purchase or receive a firearm while the protective order is in effect is punishable pursuant to subdivision (g) of Section 12021 of the Penal Code.

(p) Any willful disobedience of any temporary restraining order or restraining order after hearing granted under this section is punishable pursuant to Section 273.6 of the Penal Code.

(q) This section does not apply to any action or proceeding covered by Title 1.6C (commencing with Section 1788) of Part 4 of Division 3 of the Civil Code, by Chapter 3 (commencing with Section 525) of Title 7 of Part 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure, or by Division 10 (commencing with Section 6200) of the Family Code. Nothing in this section shall preclude a petitioner's right to use other existing civil remedies.

(r) The Judicial Council shall promulgate forms and instructions therefor, rules for service of process, scheduling of hearings, and any other matters required by this section. The petition and response forms shall be simple and concise.

(s) This section shall become operative on January 1, 2010.

§ 273.6 Penal Code

"Abuse of an elder or a dependent adult" means either of the following:

(a) Physical abuse, neglect, financial abuse, abandonment, isolation, abduction, or other treatment with resulting physical harm or pain or mental suffering.

(b) The deprivation by a care custodian of goods or services that are necessary to avoid physical harm or mental suffering.

(a) Any intentional and knowing violation of a protective order, as defined in Section 6218 of the Family Code, or of an order issued pursuant to Section 527.6, 527.8, or 527.85 of the Code of Civil Procedure, or Section 15657.03 of the Welfare and Institutions Code, is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars ($1,000), or by imprisonment in a county jail for not more than one year, or by both that fine and imprisonment.

(b) In the event of a violation of subdivision (a) that results in physical injury, the person shall be punished by a fine of not more than two thousand dollars ($2,000), or by imprisonment in a county jail for not less than 30 days nor more than one year, or by both that fine and imprisonment. However, if the person is imprisoned in a county jail for at least 48 hours, the court may, in the interest of justice and for reasons stated on the record, reduce or eliminate the 30-day minimum imprisonment required by this subdivision. In determining whether to reduce or eliminate the minimum imprisonment pursuant to this subdivision, the court shall consider the seriousness of the facts before the court, whether there are additional allegations of a violation of the order during the pendency of the case before the court, the probability of future violations, the safety of the victim, and whether the defendant has successfully completed or is making progress with counseling.

(c) Subdivisions (a) and (b) shall apply to the following court orders:

(1) Any order issued pursuant to Section 6320 or 6389 of the Family Code.

(2) An order excluding one party from the family dwelling or from the dwelling of the other.

(3) An order enjoining a party from specified behavior that the court determined was necessary to effectuate the order described in subdivision (a).

(4) Any order issued by another state that is recognized under Part 5 (commencing with Section 6400) of Division 10 of the Family Code.

(d) A subsequent conviction for a violation of an order described in subdivision (a), occurring within seven years of a prior conviction for a violation of an order described in subdivision (a) and involving an act of violence or "a credible threat" of violence, as defined in subdivision (c) of Section 139, is punishable by imprisonment in a county jail not to exceed one year, or in the state prison.

(e) In the event of a subsequent conviction for a violation of an order described in subdivision (a) for an act occurring within one year of a prior conviction for a violation of an order described in subdivision (a) that results in physical injury to a victim, the person shall be punished by a fine of not more than two thousand dollars ($2,000), or by imprisonment in a county jail for not less than six months nor more than one year, by both that fine and imprisonment, or by imprisonment in the state prison. However, if the person is imprisoned in a county jail for at least 30 days, the court may, in the interest of justice and for reasons stated in the record, reduce or eliminate the six-month minimum imprisonment required by this subdivision. In determining whether to reduce or eliminate the minimum imprisonment pursuant to this subdivision, the court shall consider the seriousness of the facts before the court, whether there are additional allegations of a violation of the order during the pendency of the case before the court, the probability of future violations, the safety of the victim, and whether the defendant has successfully completed or is making progress with counseling.

(f) The prosecuting agency of each county shall have the primary responsibility for the enforcement of orders described in subdivisions (a), (b), (d), and (e).

(g) (1) Every person who owns, possesses, purchases, or receives a firearm knowing he or she is prohibited from doing so by the provisions of a protective order as defined in Section 136.2 of this code, Section 6218 of the Family Code, or Section 527.6 or 527.8 of the Code of Civil Procedure, or Section 15657.03 of the Welfare and Institutions Code, shall be punished under subdivision (g) of Section 12021.

(2) Every person subject to a protective order described in paragraph (1) shall not be prosecuted under this section for owning, possessing, purchasing, or receiving a firearm to the extent that firearm is granted an exemption pursuant to subdivision (f) of Section 527.9 of the Code of Civil Procedure, or subdivision (h) of Section 6389 of the Family Code.

(h) If probation is granted upon conviction of a violation of subdivision (a), (b), (c), (d), or (e), the court shall impose probation consistent with Section 1203.097, and the conditions of probation may include, in lieu of a fine, one or both of the following requirements:

(1) That the defendant make payments to a battered women's shelter or to a shelter for abused elder persons or dependent adults, up to a maximum of five thousand dollars ($5,000), pursuant to Section 1203.097.

(2) That the defendant reimburse the victim for reasonable costs of counseling and other reasonable expenses that the court finds are the direct result of the defendant's offense.

(i) For any order to pay a fine, make payments to a battered women's shelter, or pay restitution as a condition of probation under subdivision (e), the court shall make a determination of the defendant's ability to pay. In no event shall any order to make payments to a battered women's shelter be made if it would impair the ability of the defendant to pay direct restitution to the victim or court-ordered child support. Where the injury to a married person is caused in whole or in part by the criminal acts of his or her spouse in violation of this section, the community property may not be used to discharge the liability of the offending spouse for restitution to the injured spouse, required by Section 1203.04, as operative on or before August 2, 1995, or Section 1202.4, or to a shelter for costs with regard to the injured spouse and dependents, required by this section, until all separate property of the offending spouse is exhausted.

The Elder Abuse Act does not specify the standard of review to apply when reviewing protective orders granted under section 15657.03. That statute, includes the following language: "An order may be issued under this section, with or without notice, to restrain any person for the purpose of preventing a recurrence of abuse, if an affidavit shows, to the satisfaction of the court, reasonable proof of a past act or acts of abuse of the petitioning elder or dependent adult." (§ 15657.03, subd. (c), italics added.) The "to the satisfaction of the court" language is identical to language in the DVPA.[2] In Quintana v. Guijosa (2003) 107 Cal.App.4th 1077, 1079, 132 Cal.Rptr.2d 538, the appellate court concluded issuance or failure to issue a protective order under the DVPA is reviewed for abuse of discretion. A protective order under the DVPA is also reviewed to determine whether the trial court's findings are supported by substantial evidence. (Sabbah v. Sabbah (2007) 151 Cal.App.4th 818, 822-823, 60 Cal.Rptr.3d 175.) Similarly, injunctions issued under Code of Civil Procedure sections 527.6 and 527.8, which prohibit civil harassment, are reviewed to determine whether the necessary factual findings are supported by substantial evidence. (USS-Posco Industries v. Edwards (2003) 111 Cal.App.4th 436, 444, 4 Cal.Rptr.3d 54; Schild v. Rubin (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 755, 762, 283 Cal.Rptr. 533.)

In our interpretation of the Elder Abuse Act, and in consideration of analogous statutory language and cases interpreting that language, we hold the issuance of a protective order under the Elder Abuse Act is reviewed for abuse of direction, and the factual findings necessary to support such a protective order are reviewed under the substantial evidence test.

Warnings and Notices to the Restrained Person in (2)

You Cannot Have Guns or Firearms

(17) If the court orders, you cannot own, have, possess, buy or try to buy, receive or try to receive, or otherwise get a gun while this Order is in effect. If you do, you can go to jail and pay a $1,000 fine. You must sell to a licensed gun dealer or turn in to police any guns or firearms that you have or control in accordance with item (10) above. The court will require proof that you did so. If you do not obey this order, you can be charged with a crime.

(18) After You Have Been Served With a Restraining Order

- Obey all the orders.
- If you want to respond, fill out Form EA-110 and file it with the court clerk. You do not have to pay any fee to file your response.
- Serve Form EA-110 on the person in (1) or that person's attorney by the date listed in (15) of this form. You cannot serve the person in (1). The person who serves the person in (1) should complete and sign a Proof of Service. Form EA-141 may be used for this purpose. You should take the completed form back to the court clerk before the hearing date or bring it with you to the hearing.
- In addition to the response, you may file and serve declarations signed by you and other persons who have personal knowledge of the facts. Form MC-030, Declaration, is available from the clerk's office at the court shown on page 1 of this form. If you do not know how to prepare a declaration, you should see a lawyer. After you have filed the response with the clerk of the court, a copy must be delivered personally or by mail to the person in (2) or to his or her lawyer.
- If you wish to oppose the request for orders, in addition to filing a response, you should be present at the hearing. If you have any witnesses, they must also go to the hearing.
- At the hearing, tell the judge if you agree or disagree with the orders requested.
- Even if you do not go to the hearing, the judge can make the restraining orders last for 3 years.

This is a Court Order.

(19) Notice Regarding Nonappearance at Hearing and Service of Order

If you have been personally served with a temporary restraining order and notice of hearing, but you do not appear at the hearing either in person or by a lawyer, and a restraining order that does not differ from the previous or temporary restraining order is issued at the hearing, a copy of the order will be served on you by mail at the following address (insert the address of the person in (2)):

If that address is not correct or you wish to verify that the temporary order was made permanent without substantive change, contact the clerk of the court.

If both you and the person in (1) are personally present at the hearing where the order is issued, no additional proof of service will be required.

Instructions for Law Enforcement Agencies

(20) This order is effective when made. It is enforceable anywhere in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, all tribal lands, and all U.S. territories and shall be enforced as if it were an order of that jurisdiction by any law enforcement agency that has received the order, is shown a copy of the order, or has verified its existence on the California Law Enforcement Telecommunications System (CLETS). If the law enforcement agency has not received proof of service on the restrained person, and the restrained person was not present at the court hearing, the agency shall advise the restrained person of the terms of the order and then shall enforce it. Violations of this order are subject to criminal penalties.

You Cannot Have Guns or Firearms

If the court orders, you cannot own, have, possess, buy or try to buy, receive or try to receive, or otherwise get a gun while this Order is in effect. If you do, you can go to jail and pay a $1,000 fine. You must sell to a licensed gun dealer or turn in to police any guns or firearms that you have or control in accordance with 10 above. The court will require proof that you did so. If you do not obey this Order, you can be charged with a crime.

Instructions for Law Enforcement Agencies

This Order is effective when made. It is enforceable anywhere in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, all tribal lands, and all U.S. territories and shall be enforced as if it were an Order of that jurisdiction by any law enforcement agency that has received the Order, is shown a copy of the Order, or has verified its existence on the California Law Enforcement Telecommunications System (CLETS). If the law enforcement agency has not received proof of service on the restrained person, and the restrained person was not present at the court hearing, the agency shall advise the restrained person of the terms of the Order and then shall enforce it. Violations of this restraining order are subject to criminal penalties.

EA-150-INFO Can a Restraining Order to Prevent Elder or Dependent Adult Abuse Help Me?

What is a Restraining Order?

It is a court order that helps protect people from being abused.

Can I get a Restraining Order?

If you are a person 65 years or older or a dependent adult, you can ask for a restraining order if you have been:

- Physically abused
- Financially abused
- Mentally or emotionally abused
- Neglected
- Abandoned or abducted
- Isolated, or
- Deprived by a caregiver of goods or services you needed to avoid harm or suffering

How will the order help me?

The court can order a person to:

- Not abuse, harass, hit, or threaten you
- Not contact or go near you, and
- Not have a gun

What if I am deaf?

If you are deaf, contact the clerk at least 5 days before the hearing. Ask for an interpreter or other accommodation. (See information on Requests for Accommodations below.)

What forms do I need to get the order?

Fill out Forms EA-100 and EA-120. Then file them with the court clerk. If you need to add attachments, you may use form MC-020. Also, complete confidential Form-EA-102 and give it to the clerk.

Where can I get these forms?

You can get the forms at any court, self-help center, or county law library or on the Web at www.courtinfo.ca.gov/forms.

How soon can I get the order?

If you ask for a temporary restraining order, the court will decide within 24 hours whether or not to make the order. Sometimes the court decides sooner.

How long does the order last?

If the court makes a temporary order, it will last until your hearing date. At that time, the court will decide to continue or cancel the order. The order could last for up to 3 years.

How will the person to be restrained know about the order?

Someone over 18 years of age—not you or anyone else protected by the order— must "serve" (give) the person to be restrained a copy of the order. For help with service, see or ask the court clerk for Form EA-142-INFO.

What if the restrained person does not obey the order?

Call the police. The restrained person can be arrested and charged with a crime.

How much does it cost?

There is no fee for filing the request for a restraining order.

You do not need to pay a fee for service of the order. A sheriff or marshal will serve the order for free. Or you may arrange for service by a registered process server or a private party and pay any fee that is charged.

The court can make the person who loses the case pay all the court fees and the lawyer's fees for the other party.

Requests for Accommodations

Assistive listening systems, computer-assisted real-time captioning, or sign language interpreter services are available if you ask at least 5 days before the hearing. Contact the clerk's office or go to www.courtinfo.ca.gov/forms for Request for Accommodations by Persons With Disabilities and Response (Form MC-410). (Civil Code, § 54.8.)

EA-150-INFO Can a Restraining Order to Prevent Elder or Dependent Adult Abuse Help Me?

Do I have to go to court?

Yes. Go to court on the date the clerk gives you.

Do I need a lawyer?

No. But it is a good idea. Ask the court clerk about free and low-cost legal services and self-help centers in your county.

Do I need to bring a witness to the court hearing?

No. But it helps to have proof of the abuse. You can bring:

- A written statement from witnesses made under oath
- Witnesses
- Photos
- Medical or police reports
- Damaged property
- Threatening letters, e-mails, or telephone messages

The court may or may not let witnesses speak at the hearing. So, if possible, you should bring written statements from witnesses signed under penalty of perjury to the hearing. (You can use Form MC-030 for this.)

Will I see the restrained person at the court hearing?

If the person comes to the hearing, yes. But that person does not have the right to speak to you. If you are afraid, tell the court officer.

Can I bring someone with me to court?

Yes. You can bring someone to sit with you during the hearing. But that person cannot speak for you in court. Only you or your lawyer (if you have one) can speak for you.

What if I don't speak English?

When you file your papers, ask the clerk if a court interpreter is available. You may have to pay a fee for the interpreter. If the interpreter is not available for your court date, bring someone to interpret for you. You cannot ask a child under 18 to interpret for you.

What is a Restraining Order?

It is a court order.

What does the order do?

The court can order you to:

- Not contact the person who asked for the order
- Not take any action to obtain that person's address or location
- Stay away from that person and the person's home and workplace
- Not have any guns while the order is in effect

Who can ask for a Restraining Order?

- Deprived by a caregiver of goods or services necessary to live on

How long does the order last?

If the court makes a temporary order, it will last until your hearing date. At that time, the court will decide to continue or cancel the order. The order could last for up to 3 years.

What if I don't obey the order?

The police can arrest you. You can go to jail and pay a fine.

What if I don't agree with what the order says?

You still must obey the order until the hearing.

If you disagree with the orders the person is asking for, fill out Form EA-110 before your hearing date, serve it, and file it with the court. If you need to add attachments, you may use form MC-020.

Do I have to serve the other person with a copy of my answer?

Yes. Someone—other than yourself—must mail a copy of your completed Form EA-110 to the person who asked for the order (or that person's lawyer). (This is called "service.")

The person who serves the form by mail should fill out Form EA-141, Proof of Service by Mail. Make a copy of the proof of service and file it with the court clerk.

Should I go to the court hearing?

Yes. Go to court on the date listed on Form EA-120. If you do not go to court, the judge can make orders without hearing from you.

Civil, Criminal and Administration Remedies in Cases of Abuse, Neglect and Financial Exploitation of the Elderly

by Martha L. Ridgway
Ridgway, Romeo & Vincent, LLC
Posted by permission

Introduction

As with other professionals who work with senior citizens, lawyers have observed a shocking increase in the incidents of abuse, neglect and financial exploitation of the elderly.

Cases are brought to our attention from many different sources: the elder himself or herself, a concerned family member, friends and neighbors, social workers, adult protection workers, medical personnel, financial institutions, senior centers and programs, clergy and even other lawyers. When faced with a case of abuse, neglect or financial exploitation of an elder, the attorney can recommend and pursue a number of legal options. This paper will review the statistical realities of the aging population; define the terms abuse, neglect and financial exploitation; identify who the most common perpetrators are; analyze why our elders are mistreated; examine what characteristics make the elderly particularly vulnerable; and address the legal remedies available to the elder and how he or she can fight back.

Statistical Analysis of the Aging Population

It is no secret that our population is rapidly aging. With more elders, there are more people to victimize and greater opportunities to abuse, neglect and financially exploit.

Consider how the following statistics affect the incidents of abuse, neglect and financial exploitation of the elderly.

By the year 2030, there will be 70 million older persons, which is more than twice the number in 1990, and which will represent 20% of the population. Shockingly, two-thirds of all people who have ever lived longer than 65 years are alive today.

Of great significance is the fact that the older population is getting older, with those age 85 and over representing the fastest growing segment of the elder population.

The fact that women typically outlive men represents another factor in the increase in abuse, neglect and financial exploitation. After age 60, women increasingly outnumber men. Significantly, older men are nearly twice as likely to be married (77%) than are older women (43%). Not surprisingly, there are nearly five times as many widows as there are widowers.

Why is this country experiencing such an "age boom?" First, people are living longer.

The life expectancy in 1900 was only 47. People who reach age 65 now have an average life expectancy of an additional 17.3 years.

Second, the "baby boomers," those born between 1946 and 1964, are aging. The most rapid increases in age are expected to occur between 2010 and 2030, when this generation reaches age 65.

Financial factors also contribute to abuse, neglect and financial exploitation of the elderly.

Medical considerations constitute another factor in abuse, neglect and financial exploitation of the elderly. Most older persons have at least one chronic condition. The most frequently occurring conditions per 100 elderly in 1993 were arthritis (49), hypertension (35), heart disease and hearing impairments (31 each), orthopedic impairments (18), cataracts and sinusitis (15 each), and diabetes, tinnitus and visual impairments (10 each).

Approximately 85% of people age 65 and older are farsighted. As people age, they lose night and peripheral vision. Approximately 70% of men and 30% of women age 65 and older have some degree of hearing loss. Nationally, approximately 10 to 15% of individuals age 65 and over will develop a major depression, which represents the most common form of mental illness experienced by older adults. In 1990, 1.6 million Americans age 65 or older (5%) lived in nursing homes. This percentage increased dramatically with age, ranging from 1% for persons 65-74 years, to 6% for persons 75-84, to 24% for persons 85 and older.

Statistics concerning the incidents of elder abuse, neglect and financial exploitation are scant at best. It has been estimated that as many as 10% of older adults are victimized by elder abuse. However, only one in eight abuse incidents is actually reported. Many of us who work with the elderly suspect that abuse, neglect and financial exploitation are far more prevalent, to the point of representing a national crisis and scandal.

Defining the Terms Abuse, Neglect and Financial Exploitation of the Elderly

Definitions of abuse, neglect and financial exploitation are found in Colorado law in the Protective Services for Adults at Risk of Mistreatment or Self-Neglect Act, C.R.S. □□ 26-3.1-102-106, and in other sources such as the American Association of Retired Person's publication Domestic Mistreatment of the Elderly -- Towards Prevention, written by Richard L. Douglass, M.P.H., Ph.D., in 1987.

A. Abuse

Abuse generally falls into two categories: physical abuse and psychological abuse.

The definition of abuse under Colorado law is:

...infliction of physical pain or injury, as demonstrated by, but not limited to, substantial or multiple skin bruising, bleeding, malnutrition, dehydration, burns, bone fractures, poisoning, subdural hematoma, soft tissue swelling, or suffocation; ... unreasonable confinement or restraint; or ... nonconsensual sexual conduct or contact classified as a crime under the 'Colorado Criminal Code' of an at-risk adult. (C.R.S. □□ 18-6.5-101-106.)

The definition of an at-risk adult under Colorado law is: an individual eighteen years of age or older who is susceptible to mistreatment ... or self-neglect ... because the individual is unable to perform or obtain services necessary for the individual's health, safety, or welfare or lacks sufficient understanding or capacity to make or communicate responsible decisions concerning the individual's person or affairs.

Dr. Douglass defines physical abuse as "the infliction of physical pain or injury, or physical coercion (confinement against one's will)." Examples include "slapping, bruising, sexually molesting, cutting, lacerating, burning, physically restraining, pushing, shoving."

According to Dr. Douglass, psychological abuse is "the infliction of mental anguish." Examples include "demeaning, name calling, treating as a child, insulting, ignoring,frightening, humiliating, intimidating, threatening, isolation."

B. Neglect

Pursuant to Colorado law, neglect occurs when ...adequate food, clothing, shelter, psychological care, physical care, medical care, or supervision is not secured for the at-risk adult or is not provided by a caretaker in a timely manner and with the degree of care that a reasonable person in the same situation would exercise...."

C.R.S.□ 26-3.1-101(4)(b).

In Domestic Mistreatment of the Elderly -- Towards Prevention, neglect is divided into two categories: (1) passive neglect, which is defined as "the unintentional failure to fulfill a caretaking obligation; there is no conscious or willful attempt to inflict physical or emotional distress on the older person." Examples include "non-provision of food or health-related services because of the caregiver's infirmity, laziness, or inadequate skills, knowledge, or understanding of the necessity of prescribed or other essential services."

(2) Active neglect, which is defined as "the intentional failure to fulfill a caretaking obligation, including a conscious and willful attempt to inflict physical or emotional stress or injury on the older person." Examples include "deliberate abandonment, deliberate denial of food or health-related services, depriving of dentures or eyeglasses."

Another category of neglect is self-neglect, in which the elder fails to properly care for himself or herself.

C. Financial Exploitation

Colorado law defines exploitation as
...the illegal or improper use of an at-risk adult or the at-risk adult's resources for another person's profit or advantage.

Dr. Douglass includes in his definition of "material (financial) abuse" the "illegal, or unethical exploitation and/or use of funds, property, or other assets belonging to the older person."

Another interesting and somewhat unusual definition of financial exploitation is found in the Journal of Legal Medicine in an article entitled, "The Physician's Role in Detecting and Reporting Elder Abuse," written in 1982 by Palinesar and Cobb. The authors state:

Financial abuse typically occurs in one of two forms. It may be the misuse of the elderly person's funds by another person, usually a caretaker or close relative; or, a caretaker may withhold medical attention or refrain from making necessary expenditures for the elderly person's benefit in order to conserve funds for inheritance.

Examples of financial exploitation include stealing property and money, using the elder's money and/or credit cards, transferring title to assets, for example, the home or financial accounts, cashing in CDs, money markets, life insurance policies, etc.

Identifying the Most Common Perpetrators of Abuse, Neglect and Financial Exploitation

Unfortunately, nearly anyone can be a perpetrator of abuse, neglect or financial exploitation of the elderly, either through ignorance, inexperience, failure to act or intentional acts. Well meaning caregivers, weary from the demands of catering to an elder, may forget to administer medication. Or, in a moment of extreme stress, a daughter may handle her elderly father too roughly and curse at him for soiling himself. Or, while running errands for an elder, a friend may buy a few items for himself and pay for it with the elder's funds, justifying it because, after all, he, the friend, has done so much for the elder.

Those who are perpetrators of abuse, neglect and financial exploitation of the elderly tend to fall into specific categories. These include the following:

1. Spouse caregivers;

2. Adult child or other family member caregivers;

3. Caregivers who are unrelated to the elder;

4. Those serving as a fiduciary for the elder, e.g., guardians, conservators,trustees, agents under a power of attorney and personal representatives;

5. Medical facilities and personnel, including hospitals, nursing homes, assisted living facilities and board and care homes;

6. Financial facilities and personnel, including stock brokers, insurance agents and accountants;

7. Others in a position of trust, e.g., lawyers and those who offer to "help" the elder with paying bills, depositing money, filing health insurance claims, etc.; and

8. Strangers perpetrating various "scams," notably telephone fraud.

Why Are Our Elders Mistreated?

In analyzing the problem of elder abuse, neglect and financial exploitation, it is important to identify why senior citizens are particularly vulnerable to mistreatment. In April 1990, the Subcommittee on Health and Long-Term Care of the Select Committee on Aging of the House of Representatives issued a report entitled Elder Abuse: A Decade of Shame and Inaction. The report addressed the primary reasons for mistreatment of the elderly as follows.

1. Retaliation. If the adult child was abused by the elder during childhood, mistreatment may be used to seek revenge. Additionally, unresolved conflicts between the adult child and the elder can lead to retaliation.

2. Violence as a Way of Life. A family history of violence or the mere fact that there is widespread acceptance of violence in this country may lead to mistreatment.

3. Unresolved Conflict. This can occur between elders and their adult children and between elderly spouses.

4. Lack of Close Family Ties. If an elder and the adult child have had an emotionally distant relationship, resentment may occur when the adult child suddenly has to care for the elderly parent. Additionally, lack of close family ties often leads elders to seek non-relative caregivers, who may not feel the same sense of responsibility as a family member.

5. Lack of Financial Resources. This can be a factor for both the elder and the adult child caregiver. The elder may have limited financial resources and, therefore, must rely on the caregiver to supplement some of the expenses. The caregiver may resent having to pay for the elder's care, particularly if it negatively affects the family's resources. Additionally, women are working in much greater numbers and having to sacrifice a job or career to care for an elder can lead to tremendous resentment and stress. Finally, elders who have limited resources are often forced to seek inappropriate caregivers who, themselves, may have financial problems.

6. Resentment of Dependency. A caregiver can become overwhelmed at the amount of time and effort caring for an elder requires. The caregiver's loss of independence can lead to frustration, anger and resentment.

7. Increased Life Expectancy. Because elders are living longer, they are becoming more frail, they require more care and the number of years spent providing care are increased.

8. History of Mental Problems. This is particularly a problem when the caregiver, often an adult child, has mental problems. The elder becomes a target when the caregiver strikes out.

9. Unemployment. When the primary income-producing member of the family is unemployed, intra-family violence increases not only toward the spouse and children, but also toward the dependent elder.

10. History of Alcohol and Drug Abuse. As with mental problems, caregivers who abuse alcohol and drugs tend to be more violent or prone to exploit others.

11. Environmental Conditions. All kinds of environmental conditions, such as living in a crowded home, can lead to violence.

In addition to the above factors, it is this author's observation that greed is a tremendous influence, primarily in circumstances constituting financial exploitation of the elderly. Greed is an emotion that affects relatives and non-related individuals alike. The opportunity to benefit financially is often too great a temptation to resist. In many family circumstances, rationalizations for financially exploiting a relative abound. Examples include, "Mama always loved me best" and "I've sacrificed for Mama by providing care for her, therefore I am entitled." Additionally, hostility between family members, primarily siblings, results in a race to see who can get his or her hands on the elder's resources first.

Characteristics That Make Elders Particularly Vulnerable

The report Elder Abuse: A Decade of Shame and Inaction identifies the factors that make elders particularly vulnerable to abuse, neglect and financial exploitation.

1. Female. There are more older women than men, which makes being female a risk factor. Additionally, women are more likely to be targets of sexual abuse.

2. Advanced Age. The older the person is, the higher risk he or she has of being abused. Physical and mental impairments may affect the elder's ability to resist abuse.

3. Dependent. The more dependent an elder is, whether physically, emotionally, or financially, the more likely he or she is to be a victim.

4. Problem Drinker. Elders who abuse alcohol are at higher risk of being victims, especially if they have difficulty caring for themselves.

5. Intergenerational Conflict. When long-standing conflicts between parents and adult children are unresolved, the elder is at greater risk of being victimized.

6. Internalizing the Blame. An elderly person who blames himself or herself for a particular situation is more vulnerable and less likely to acknowledge that abuse is the fault of the abuser, not of the elder.

7. Isolation. Loneliness can lead elders to trust an apparently "friendly" individual bent on exploitation. Because the elder is isolated from others, it is less likely that victimization will be detected by third parties.

8. Provocative Behavior. Elders who are demanding, ungrateful, uncooperative or abusive themselves are often more likely to be victims themselves.

Fighting Back: Legal Remedies Available to the Elderly Victims of Abuse, Neglect and Financial Exploitation

There are three categories of legal remedies for the victim of elder abuse, neglect and financial exploitation: (1) criminal, (2) civil and (3) administrative. Although the focus of this paper is on civil and administrative remedies, criminal remedies will be discussed briefly.

A. Criminal Remedies

A criminal case is brought on behalf of the public at large ("the people") by the District Attorney or the Attorney General for violations of state criminal law, and by the U.S. Attorney for violations of federal law. The State of Colorado or the United States are the plaintiff in criminal cases and the perpetrator of abuse, neglect or financial exploitation is the defendant. The victim is not a party to the case, but rather is a witness. It is generally in the discretion of the District or U.S. Attorney to file a criminal case.

Prosecuting cases involving elder abuse, neglect and financial exploitation can be difficult: the victim is often a poor witness, whether from fear, confusion, diminished capacity, memory failure or frailty. Conversely, the defendant is often a better witness and can raise defenses such as the impairment of the elder's memory, claims that the elder made a gift,the elder entered into a contract, etc.

Colorado's Criminal Code contains a section entitled Wrongs to At-risk Adults, C.R.

S. □□ 18-6.5-101-106, which specifically targets abuse, neglect and exploitation cases.

Additionally, provisions in the Criminal Code provide stiffer sentences for defendants who commit crimes against an elderly person or a person with a disability. It is also a crime to violate a civil restraining order.

B. Civil Remedies

In a civil case, a victim of abuse, neglect or financial exploitation, or someone on his or her behalf such as a guardian or conservator, can sue the perpetrator directly for monetary damages. The victim is the plaintiff and the perpetrator is the defendant. As a part of a civil case, a victim can also sue for injunctive relief. An injunction is a court order which directs someone to perform a specific act or to refrain from performing a specific act.

Thus, for example, an elder could sue a perpetrator for money damages for injuries sustained from an assault and battery and, at the same time, ask the court to issue an injunction prohibiting the perpetrator from having any contact with the victim.

As with criminal cases, bringing a civil case can be difficult. For example, the elderly victim may be a poor witness, statutes of limitations may have expired before the elder seeks help, pursuing a lawsuit can be costly and there may be a long delay before a court date.

However, Colorado law provides for an earlier trial date when a party suffers from an illness or condition which raises a medical doubt of survival beyond one year or if the person is age 70 or older and can prove to the court that he has a meritorious claim and a substantial interest in the case.

Another civil remedy is a restraining order, which can be issued separately from and independent of a civil suit. A restraining order is a court order that restrains a person from taking certain actions.

A third civil remedy is to seek the appointment of a guardian and/or a conservator or other protective arrangement on behalf of an elder under the Colorado Probate Code.

1. Civil Suits

There are a number of legal theories under which a victim of elder abuse, neglect or financial exploitation can sue the perpetrator. The following is representative only and is not intended to be an exclusive list of legal theories.

1. Assault is the willful attempt or threat to inflict injury on a person, and any display of force that would cause the victim to fear or expect immediate bodily harm. An assault can be committed without actually touching, striking or harming the victim. An example is shaking a fist in the elder's face in a threatening manner.

2. Battery is the willful physical contact of a person which causes bodily injury or is offensive. This can include punching, hitting or rough handling.

3. Intentional infliction of emotional distress is engaging in conduct for the purpose of causing severe emotional distress on another person or knowing that certain conduct will have that result. An example is threatening to put an elder in the nursing home if he does not "behave."

4. False imprisonment is the intentional restriction of a victim's freedom of movement. This can include the use of physical restraints, removal of the elder's means of transportation (e.g., cane or wheelchair) or locking the elder in a room.

5. Duress is coercing a person to do something against his or her free will, such as forcing an elder to sign a check payable to the perpetrator.

6. Negligence is the failure to use the care that a reasonably prudent person would use under similar circumstances, which results in harm to the victim. An example is failure to administer medication in a timely manner.

7. Conversion is the civil equivalent to theft. Conversion means that a person takes control over the property of another with the intent to deprive the victim of the property, such as stealing money or personal property.

8. Fraud and deception is the making of a false representation of a material fact to another, when the person making the representation knows that the representation is false and knows that the victim will act on it, thereby causing damage to the victim.

Examples include telephone scams, sweepstakes, requests to send money to "win."

9. Breach of fiduciary duty. A fiduciary is a person or entity who, as the result of a particular undertaking, has a duty to act primarily for the benefit of another in matters connected with the undertaking. This duty is often referred to as a fiduciary duty. An example of a fiduciary is a conservator or a stockbroker. When a person breaches a fiduciary duty, the victim incurs damages, such as loss of property or money. An example is self-dealing or using the elder's funds or property.

10. Unjust enrichment occurs when a person benefits unjustly, at the expense of another, and it is unfair for the defendant to retain the benefit. An example is an informal promise to provide care to an elder, being paid in advance, and the caregiver not providing the care.

11. Breach of contract. When a person enters into a contract with another, and fails to perform under the terms of the contract, the defendant has breached the contract.

An example is a written agreement to provide care to an elder, being paid in advance, and the caregiver not providing the care.

12. Constructive trust. When a person acquires the property of another by abusing a confidential relationship that exists between the two people, the court can remedy this abuse by imposing a constructive trust on the property. This means that the defendant no longer owns the property, but that it is held for the benefit of the plaintiff. For example, an adult daughter convinces her elderly mother to deed the home to the daughter without paying the mother. If the mother sues the daughter, the court could hold the property in trust for the benefit of the mother.

13. Other legal remedies. Malpractice (medical, accountant, legal and other professionals), violations of securities laws, etc., are also available to the elderly plaintiff.

2. Restraining Orders

Under Colorado law, C.R.S. □ 14-4-102, in cases of domestic abuse, a temporary and permanent restraining order can be entered by a municipal, county or district court in order to prevent such abuse. The restraining order can prohibit a person from threatening, molesting, injuring or contacting the party seeking the restraining order. Unfortunately, this statute does not address psychological abuse.

Another provision of Colorado law, C.R.S. □ 13-6-107, addresses restraining orders to prevent emotional abuse of the elderly. Elderly is defined as age sixty years or more. A temporary or permanent restraining order to prevent emotional abuse of the elderly may include restraining a party from repeated acts which constitute verbal threats or assaults; from repeated acts which constitute verbal harassment; from repeated acts which result in the inappropriate use or the threat of inappropriate use of medications upon a person; from repeated acts which result in the inappropriate use of physical or chemical restraints; and from repeated acts which result in the misuse of power or authority granted to a person through a power of attorney or by a court in a guardianship or conservatorship proceeding which results in unreasonable confinement or restriction of the liberty of an elderly person.

As discussed above, violation of a restraining order constitutes a criminal offense. Additionally, a person who violates a restraining order can be held in contempt of court.

3. Guardianship, Conservatorship and Other Protective Arrangements

The Colorado Probate Code, C.R.S. □□ 15-14-101 et. seq., provides that an elder or someone on his or her behalf can petition the court to appoint a guardian and/or a conservator or to enter a protective order for the benefit of the elder. A guardian is a person or institution appointed by the court to make decisions concerning the person of someone who is incapacitated. For example, a guardian decides where the person will reside, what kind of medical treatment will be administered, etc. A conservator is a person or institution appointed by the court to manage the estate and affairs of a person who is unable to manage his or her property and affairs effectively. Instead of appointing a conservator, the court can issue a protective order, authorizing, directing or ratifying any transaction necessary or desirable to achieve any security, service or care arrangement meeting the foreseeable needs of the person in need of protection. An example of a protective arrangement is a court order permitting the sale of the elder's home. A probate court also has broad powers to order an accounting of all funds expended on behalf of the protected person.

C. Administrative Remedies

One of the most important administrative remedies available to a victim of elder abuse, neglect or financial exploitation is a law entitled Protective Services for Adults at Risk of Mistreatment or Self-Neglect Act. C.R.S. □□ 26-3.1-201 et. seq. This law "urges" (but does not require) professionals and others who are in a position to detect abuse, neglect and financial exploitation of an elder to report to the county Department of Social Services or, during non-business hours, to law enforcement agencies, when they have "observed the mistreatment or self-neglect of an at-risk adult." The statute designates those who are "urged" to report in the following general categories: medical personnel (including hospital and nursing home personnel engaged in the admission of patients); mental health professionals; social workers; dentists; law enforcement officials; court appointed guardians and conservators; fire protection personnel; pharmacists; community centered board staff; financial institution personnel; state and local long-term care ombudsmen; and personnel, volunteers or consultants for any licensed care facility, agency, home or governing board.

Additionally, "any other person may report such known or suspected mistreatment or self-neglect of an at-risk adult." Once the Department has received a report, it is immediately required to "make a thorough investigation." A written report must be made within 48 hours. If it is determined that an at-risk adult is being mistreated or self-neglected, or is at risk thereof, the Department can immediately provide protective services if the adult consents. If the adult does not consent, the Department can file for the appointment of a guardian and/or a conservator for the adult. However, any protective services sought must constitute "the least restrictive intervention."

A victim of abuse, neglect or financial exploitation can also file a complaint against an entity or a person who is regulated by an administrative agency. For example, nursing homes must comply with the regulations of the Colorado Department of Health. Insurance companies are governed by the regulations of the Colorado Commissioner of Insurance. Stock brokerages must comply with the regulations of the Colorado Commissioner of Securities and the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. If the administrative agency determines that a potential violation of its regulations has occurred, it can conduct an investigation and take action against the wrongdoer.

Conclusion

As professionals working with the elderly, it is incumbent upon all of us to recognize the signs of elder abuse, neglect and financial exploitation, to identify the victims and to assist them in pursuing their legal rights under the law.

(1) Whenever an order is granted under this chapter, chapter 7.90, 10.99, 26.09, 26.10, 26.26, or 74.34 RCW, or there is a valid foreign protection order as defined in RCW 26.52.020, and the respondent or person to be restrained knows of the order, a violation of the restraint provisions, or of a provision excluding the person from a residence, workplace, school, or day care, or of a provision prohibiting a person from knowingly coming within, or knowingly remaining within, a specified distance of a location, or of a provision of a foreign protection order specifically indicating that a violation will be a crime, for which an arrest is required under RCW 10.31.100(2) (a) or (b), is a gross misdemeanor except as provided in subsections (4) and (5) of this section. Upon conviction, and in addition to any other penalties provided by law, the court may require that the respondent submit to electronic monitoring. The court shall specify who shall provide the electronic monitoring services, and the terms under which the monitoring shall be performed. The order also may include a requirement that the respondent pay the costs of the monitoring. The court shall consider the ability of the convicted person to pay for electronic monitoring.

(2) A peace officer shall arrest without a warrant and take into custody a person whom the peace officer has probable cause to believe has violated an order issued under this chapter, chapter 7.90, 10.99, 26.09, 26.10, 26.26, or 74.34 RCW, or a valid foreign protection order as defined in RCW 26.52.020, that restrains the person or excludes the person from a residence, workplace, school, or day care, or prohibits the person from knowingly coming within, or knowingly remaining within, a specified distance of a location, if the person restrained knows of the order. Presence of the order in the law enforcement computer-based criminal intelligence information system is not the only means of establishing knowledge of the order.

(3) A violation of an order issued under this chapter, chapter 7.90, 10.99, 26.09, 26.10, 26.26, or 74.34 RCW, or of a valid foreign protection order as defined in RCW 26.52.020, shall also constitute contempt of court, and is subject to the penalties prescribed by law.

(4) Any assault that is a violation of an order issued under this chapter, chapter 7.90, 10.99, 26.09, 26.10, 26.26, or 74.34 RCW, or of a valid foreign protection order as defined in RCW 26.52.020, and that does not amount to assault in the first or second degree under RCW 9A.36.011 or 9A.36.021 is a class C felony, and any conduct in violation of such an order that is reckless and creates a substantial risk of death or serious physical injury to another person is a class C felony.

(5) A violation of a court order issued under this chapter, chapter 7.90, 10.99, 26.09, 26.10, 26.26, or 74.34 RCW, or of a valid foreign protection order as defined in RCW 26.52.020, is a class C felony if the offender has at least two previous convictions for violating the provisions of an order issued under this chapter, chapter 7.90, 10.99, 26.09, 26.10, 26.26, or 74.34 RCW, or a valid foreign protection order as defined in RCW 26.52.020. The previous convictions may involve the same victim or other victims specifically protected by the orders the offender violated.

(6) Upon the filing of an affidavit by the petitioner or any peace officer alleging that the respondent has violated an order granted under this chapter, chapter 7.90, 10.99, 26.09, 26.10, 26.26, or 74.34 RCW, or a valid foreign protection order as defined in RCW 26.52.020, the court may issue an order to the respondent, requiring the respondent to appear and show cause within fourteen days why the respondent should not be found in contempt of court and punished accordingly. The hearing may be held in the court of any county or municipality in which the petitioner or respondent temporarily or permanently resides at the time of the alleged violation.

The National Committee for the Prevention of Elder Abuse (NCPEA)

The NCPEA is an association of researchers, practitioners, educators, and advocates dedicated to protecting the safety, security, and dignity of America's most vulnerable citizens. Established in 1988 to achieve a clearer understanding of abuse and provide direction and leadership to prevent it, the Committee is one of six partners that make up the National Center on Elder Abuse, which is funded by Congress to serve as the nation's clearinghouse on information and materials on abuse and neglect. The mission of NCPEA is to prevent abuse, neglect, and exploitation of older persons and adults with disabilities through research, advocacy, public and professional awareness, interdisciplinary exchange, and coalition building. www.preventelderabuse.org

Center for Gerontology at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University

Established in 1977-78, the Center for Gerontology serves as the organizational unit and focal point for aging-related research and education activities at Virginia Tech. The Center focuses primarily on three streams of coordinated research that enhance the quality of life of older adults: Family Gerontology, Health and Aging, and Elder Rights. www.gerontology.vt.edu

Executive Summary

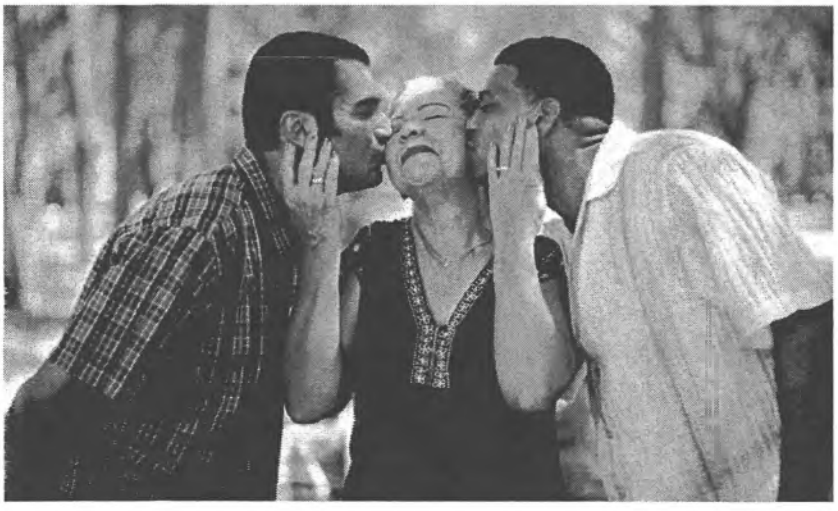
This study from the MetLife Mature Market Institute (MMI), the National Committee for the Prevention of Elder Abuse, and the Center for Gerontology at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University provides a comprehensive understanding about the extent and implications of elder financial abuse in all its various manifestations—personal, institutional, and societal. Through an extensive review of available information on elder abuse, this research enhances the understanding of the complexities surrounding elder financial abuse, the current magnitude of the issue, reasons why this issue is likely to grow, and some recommendations of ways to potentially mitigate this complex and devastating crime.

While difficult to present any comprehensive or consensus definition of elder financial abuse, this study considers elder financial abuse as "the unauthorized use or illegal taking of funds or property of people aged 60 and older." It is perpetrated by those who gain, and then violate, the trust of an older person. They can be as close as a family member, neighbor, or friend, or as distant as an invisible voice on the telephone or an e-mail from the other side of the globe.

Key Findings:

- While underreported, the annual financial loss by victims of elder financial abuse is estimated to be at least $2.6 billion dollars
- Elders' vulnerabilities and larger net worth make them a prime target for financial abuse
- The increased aging of the population, social changes, and technology advances will lead to a dramatic increase in the opportunity for a growing level of elder financial abuse
- The perpetrators of elder financial abuse are typically not strangers and most are people who have gained the trust of the older individual, including business and service professionals and family members
- The victims of elder financial abuse come from all walks of life, and this type of abuse affects elders regardless of gender, race, or ethnicity

2009 Met-Life Study



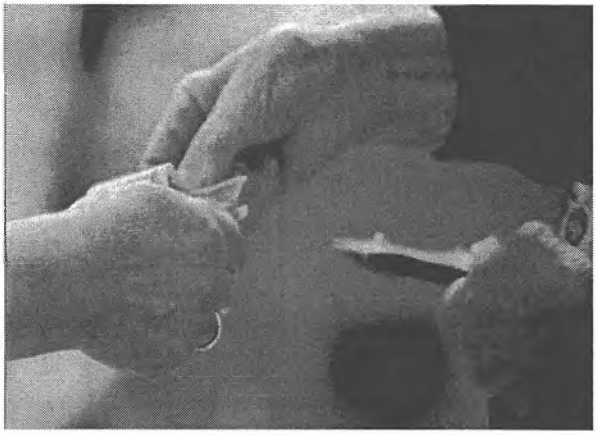
With good reason, financial elder abuse has been characterized by some experts as "the crime of the 21st Century."[1]

–J.F. Wasik, Journalist

Background

It is as old a tale as Shakespeare's King Lear and as current as the Internet. It involves older people losing a few precious dollars for everyday living to their entire life savings. It involves millions in increased costs to Medicare and Medicaid because of fraud and the costs of caring for impoverished victims. Based on the research in this study, it robs America's seniors of more than $2.6 billion a year. The 2004 national Survey of State Adult Protective Services revealed that victims range in estimated numbers from a low of 100,000 to a high of one million a year. These numbers will undoubtedly grow as the number and economic value of seniors continue to grow.[2]

Elder financial abuse is commonly linked with other forms of abuse and neglect and threatens the health, dignity, and economic security of millions of older Americans.[3-5]



It is estimated to cost Americans tens of billions of dollars annually in health care, social services, investigative and legal costs, and lost income and assets.[6] Elder financial abuse is a problem in every community and among all social strata. It is underrecognized, underreported, and underprosecuted.

The Quad-City Times

Thursday, April 3, 2008

A three-time convicted 70-year-old man told an elderly couple who befriended him that he needed money to receive an inheritance from a deceased family member in England. He showed the couple a document indicating the money was there, and even had someone call them to verify.

The perpetrator visited the couple three days in a row. Each time, the wife signed a check to him. The first was for $11,000. The second was for $5,050. The third was for $3,350. During the fourth visit, about a week later, the swindler accompanied them to a bank, where the couple took out savings and borrowed against a line of credit to give him $17,200. The couple's son learned of the transactions and called the authorities.

The swindler had been previously arrested for securities fraud for taking $300 payments from undercover officers while promising them multi-million-dollar returns on their investments. At that time, he was sentenced to five years in state prison. For his latest crime perpetrated against the elderly couple, he will spend up to ten years in prison.

Methodology

From April through June 2008, leading researchers from the National Committee for the Prevention of Elder Abuse (NCPEA), Dr. Pamela Teaster, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University (Virginia Tech), and Dr. Karen Roberto, reviewed all Newsfeed articles from the Administration on Aging's National Center on Elder Abuse (NCEA), collected by the National Association of Adult Protective Services (NAPSA), which tracks media reports daily of elder abuse through Google and Yahoo Alerts (a process that scans billions of Web pages).

This was the first large-scale analysis using this untapped data resource on elder financial abuse on a national basis. The scans identified 357 articles on elder financial abuse of any type from a total of 1,007 articles cited. Of these articles, 266 (75%) reported specific instances of elder financial abuse, victims, and/or perpetrators and formed the basis for additional analysis.

The NCEA's Newsfeed proved to be a valuable resource. Not only did it put a face on the information reported in the primary literature, but most importantly, it provided real-time information on elder financial abuse. Unlike information taken solely from crime statistics or social services reports, which provide only one piece of the puzzle, the Newsfeed captured information from numerous reporting sources. For each of the 266 articles specifically on elder financial abuse, the researchers also collected information on:

- Victim's age, gender
- Perpetrator's age, gender, relationship to victim
- Type of financial abuse
- Frequency of abuse
- Location of abuse
- Amount stolen
- Outcome of each incident

The researchers also searched 12 electronic databases that index academic journals containing primary literature on elder abuse from 1998 through June 2008 (see Appendix A on page 35). The search compiled 168 unduplicated articles from journals in the social science, medical, and legal disciplines. At the same time, the researchers conducted a database search of organizational and trade magazines to determine attention given to elder financial abuse by business and private-sector professionals (e.g., bankers, financial planners, insurance agents) who frequently interact with older adults. The search of trade publications published from 2005 to 2008 resulted in 110 unduplicated articles that addressed the issue of elder financial abuse.

As a final source of information, the researchers gathered information about community programs designed to address elder financial abuse. Data on nine specific programs came from the primary literature and the Promising Practice database maintained by the NCEA. Collectively, information from these three sources provided the most up-to-date information available on elder financial abuse and informed our recommendations for continued research and practice on this topic of national importance.

Major Findings

In just the three-month period surveyed, the Newsfeed media reports revealed approximately $396,654,700 in losses from all forms of elder financial abuse. Annualized, this estimates that more than $1.5 billion in losses is reported. However, the actual amount involved is really much higher, as no dollar figure was provided in nearly 40% of the articles. Estimating that the unreported losses are equivalent, the annual loss by victims of elder financial abuse is estimated to be at least $2.6 billion.

Of the 266 articles concerning specific elder financial abuse, business- and industry-related elder financial abuse resulted in the highest losses to victims, followed by Medicare and Medicaid fraud (and that was perpetrated by family, friends, or strangers). The overall dollar amount reported as being taken by families, friends, and strangers was $13,927,600; losses from Medicare and Medicaid fraud totaled $121,388,500, and business and industry fraud totaled $250,152,700.

However, families, friends, neighbors, and caregivers were most frequently involved as perpetrators of elder financial abuse, followed by businesses of varying kinds, and then strangers. Families, friends, neighbors, and caregivers were involved in 55% of the articles; persons not known to the elder and others in 21%; financial professionals of varying types in 18%; and Medicare/Medicaid fraud in 7%.

Furthermore, medical care and other service costs for elder abuse victims are estimated at more than $13 million annually.

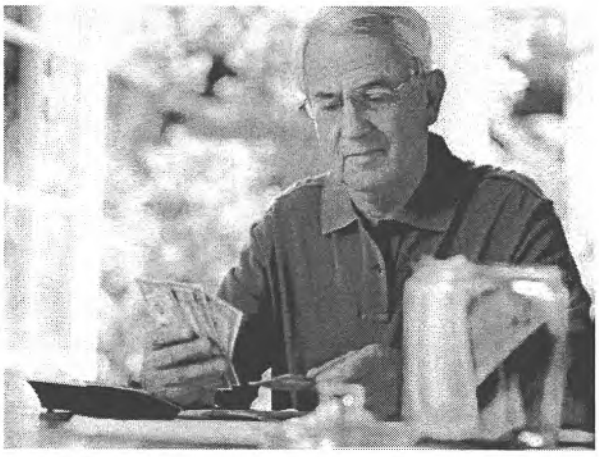
Even more than the economic loss, the human costs suffered by victims when taken advantage of by families, friends, and trusted strangers are immeasurable. Simply put, a victim of any kind of elder financial abuse is never the same after it occurs.

What Is Elder Financial Abuse?

According to the National Center on Elder Abuse, elder financial abuse is the illegal taking, misuse, or concealment of funds, property, or assets of a vulnerable elder at risk for harm by another due to changes in physical functioning, mental functioning, or both.

The terminology used in the 2006 Older Americans Act is exploitation, defined as "...the fraudulent or otherwise illegal, unauthorized, or improper act or process of an individual, including a caregiver or fiduciary, that uses the resources of an older individual for monetary or personal benefit, profit, or gain, or that results in depriving an older individual of rightful access to, or use of, benefits, resources, belongings, or assets."

For every known case of elder financial abuse, it is estimated that four to five cases may go unreported.[7] Elder financial abuse is also called financial exploitation, misappropriation of funds, and fiduciary, economic, or material abuse. It encompasses a broad range of misconduct,



Herald-Tribune

May 16, 2008

An individual physician is responsible for more than $11 million in medical (Medicare/Medicaid) fraud. He performed unnecessary surgeries on 865 older adults aged 65 and older after reportedly diagnosing them with cancer.

In one case, the doctor diagnosed a piece of chewing gum as a cancerous growth when the patient's biopsy tissue was lost.

Despite a finding that tissue slides in his office were not indicative of cancer, he diagnosed virtually every patient who came into his office with cancer, and would perform surgery, removing four or more layers of skin. This allowed him to charge Medicare and Medicaid higher amounts.

including, but not limited to, fraud, scams, undue influence by family members and trusted others, and illegal viatical settlements; abuse of powers of attorney and guardianship; identity theft; Internet "phishing;" failure to fulfill contracted health care services; and Medicare and Medicaid fraud (See Appendix B on page 36 for a Glossary of Terms).

Elder financial abuse is regarded as the third most commonly substantiated type of elder abuse, following neglect and emotional/psychological abuse.[8] It occurs in community or institutional settings, accounting for 30%–50% of all forms of elder abuse,[9] and the problem appears to be growing.

Experts and advocates have decried that inadequacies in its definition frustrate attempts to discover, remedy, or prevent the problem as well as to define its causes and its scope. In addition, the justice and social services systems are often inadequately staffed and funded to address elder financial abuse. Even seasoned professionals have difficulty determining whether elder financial abuse actually occurred or if an elder willingly and knowingly made a poor financial decision. Generally regarded as an issue under state jurisdiction, most states mention financial exploitation in their statutes. However, what constitutes exploitation, who is covered, and who is accountable vary as widely as the solutions for the problem.

Who Experiences Elder Financial Abuse?

Reports from Adult Protective Services (APS) nationally suggest that the "typical" victim of elder financial abuse is between the ages of 70 and 89, white, female, frail, and cognitively impaired.[10] She is trusting of others and may be lonely or isolated. However, professional and trade journals, as well as newspaper articles describing the financial abuse victimization used in this study often yielded descriptions of victims with very diverse profiles (see Table 1 below). Age breakdown does not necessarily coincide with the number of perpetrators because information was not always provided for both elements.

Specific age was not provided in many cases. General age descriptions included Elderly (94); Senior (14); Older (1); NH/ALF Resident (3); Retirees (1); Estate (1). In some cases gender

Aging Women: Prime Targets for Elder Financial Abuse

Some sources indicated that women experience elder financial abuse more than men. Since women tend to live longer than men, there are a greater number of older women than older men in the population. In 2006, there were 21.6 million women age 65+ and 15.7 million men age 65+, or a sex ratio of 138 women for every 100 men. The number of females to males increases with age, ranging from 114 for the 65 to 69 age group to a high of 213 for persons 85 and over.[11]

Though certainly not for all, as age advances, some older women experience cognitive decline and increases in instances of chronic disease. Decreased cognitive functioning, in turn, affects their decision-making capacity, leaving them potentially susceptible to people looking to defraud or deceive them.

For example, women in need of some caregiving may experience theft of their valuables or cash by their paid caregiver. The caregiver may intercept the woman's mail, obtain credit card numbers and bank information, and use this information to commit identity theft.

Some women who experience financial abuse may be lonely due to the death of a spouse or partner. When the partner dies, an older woman may become responsible for household finances for the first time in years or the first time ever. Women unaccustomed to home maintenance may trust a "professional" for home repairs that were never intended to be done or were intended to be done shoddily.

They also may have predictable patterns in their finances and daily routine, such as when and where they go shopping and when monthly checks arrive. Thus, observant perpetrators of financial abuse can predict when an older woman

STLToday.com (St. Charles, LA)

May 30, 2008

An 85-year-old woman was being cared for by a home health aide (age 40). Between August 2005 and March 2008, the aide "borrowed" $80,000, giving different reasons for the loan each time. It was discovered that she had used the money to gamble. She is charged with financial exploitation of the elderly.

Palm Beach Post

May 28, 2008

Imagine being the man whose primary goal in his last year of life was to face in court the woman who had stolen more than $200,000 from him. Sadly, this elderly man died a month after the perpetrator was arrested, and because his wife suffers from dementia, she was unable to testify.

Between October 2006 and her arrest in late 2007, the female caregiver for this man and his wife convinced them that the poor care she was providing was all that was keeping them out of a nursing home. She effectively isolated them from friends and family, and in February 2007, prior to his being admitted to the hospital, the caregiver arranged for the elderly man and his wife, who had dementia, to sign over one-third interest in their home.

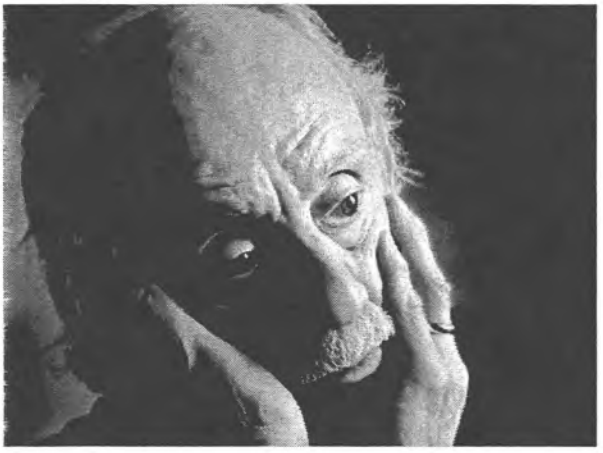
Within two months, she had also gotten them to sign a power of attorney and was posing as their stepdaughter. By the time she was arrested, she had taken out a $150,000 mortgage against the home and run up more than $75,000 in additional credit card debt in the name of the couple (ID theft).

The female caregiver, whose age was not provided, was sentenced to 15 years in prison for elderly exploitation.

will have money on hand or be going to the bank and become the target for a variety of con games and scams.

Women who have not been in a position to make financial decisions may be more trusting in the advice of others, particularly if they are new at seeking financial advice. Women with cognitive problems may be easily influenced by others, especially if that influence increases in intensity and becomes a "hard sell."

Vulnerability to undue influence could lead to a woman changing the beneficiary of a trust or will. It could also induce an agent into changing a power of attorney document. In these situations, she would forfeit her legal rights to another person. Even if this were discovered and reversed, it may prove difficult to impossible to ever recover any assets transferred to the unscrupulous individual.



Embedded in roles as mother and caregiver, women may unwittingly contribute to the dependency of a troubled child who may be posturing to care for them. They may give funds to an errant child who is dependent on the woman for funds for general living, for drugs, or for alcohol. They may enable an adult child who believes that he or she is entitled to the woman's funds. "She would want me to have it" is a common excuse. Women often don't report the financial abuse to protect their children from prosecution.

Aging Men: From "Sweetheart" to Victim

Like older women, older men also experience losses of spouses and friends as they age. Such losses may leave them alone and lonely to the point that they may become unwitting victims of people who seek to befriend them—with the intention of creating a coercive relationship through which he or she gains financially at the expense and lasting emotional anguish of the elderly man.

One type of elder financial abuse that older men seem to be more susceptible to than women is a "Sweetheart Scam" (although women can fall prey to this form of abuse as well). In these cases, an older man experiences the loneliness accompanying the loss of a spouse or partner, and may also be depressed and possibly experiencing some cognitive and physical decline.

The deceased partner may have fulfilled a caregiving role for the man, and so he feels this loss intensely. His adult children want to help him, but they may have other family responsibilities, living some distance away, or also coping with the loss.

A woman, often younger, "befriends" the older man. Filling the void of loneliness, she may insert herself more and more into the man's life and decision-making. In such a scam, the esteem of the man becomes measured in the ways he lavishes attention on her, the attention manifesting itself in multiple and escalating expenditures for expensive gifts, automobiles, clothes, paying off debt, and signing over wills, trusts, or other legal authority to this new "friend."

Men may tend to be more risk-taking in making financial investments than women, and so they may be prone to being vulnerable to "professionals" or family members who seek to invest their money by promising unrealistically high returns.[12]

Such financial fraud may take the form of faulty insurance policies, refinancing a home loan, investments in stocks and bonds, and unrealistically rapid investment returns. Telemarketers may involve a man in paying for goods and services never rendered or rendered inadequately. Men are often enticed to provide personal information, thus making it possible for thieves to commit identity theft via the telephone, the front door, or the Internet.

Elder Financial Abuse—An Equal Opportunity Crime Against Elders

Marilyn Moon,[13-14] a researcher with extensive work on elder abuse among persons of different races and ethnicities, indicated that there are differences in how financial abuse is viewed among different ethnic groups.

For example, while African-Americans and Caucasians might regard that taking money from an elder "because she would want me to" or "because I am going to get it all anyway" as unacceptable, while in other cultures, such as that of Korean-Americans, it may be regarded as culturally acceptable. Findings from research to date are mixed and require further study in order to establish definitive trends regarding the extent of elder financial abuse among different cultures.

Prevalence of Elder Financial Abuse

Both researchers and practitioners acknowledge that estimates of elder financial abuse represent only the most overt cases, thus significantly underestimating the incidence of financial abuse of elders living in the community. Even less definitive information is available about the prevalence of financial abuse in residential long-term care settings.

Estimates of the occurrence of elder financial abuse vary considerably. The source of information about this abuse is one reason for the variation, as some estimates are predicated on anecdotal information of what people are seeing and reporting at best, while others are founded on a "sentinel approach" (i.e., purposefully selected reporters) to estimating the size of the problem. For example, the 1996 National Incidence Study conducted by the National Center on Elder Abuse found that elder financial abuse constituted 30.2% of 70,942 substantiated cases of elder abuse.[15] According to reports from the Santa Clara County Financial Abuse Specialist Team (FAST) in California, there may be as many as five million elders financially abused yearly.[16] Reports to authorities of its occurrence range from one report for every four or five cases to one report in 100 instances.

The Perpetrators of Elder Financial Abuse

In the review of NAPSA/NCEA Newsfeeds from April 2008 through June 2008, the media reported a total dollar value of elder financial abuse of approximately $396,654,700, with the largest percentage of cases involving close associates of the victim—families, friends, caregivers, and neighbors—as the perpetrator of the abuse, accounting collectively for almost 40% of reported cases. The largest single category included a variety of financial professionals, attorneys, and fiduciary agents.

Elder Financial Abuse by Family Members

Family members, even more so than strangers, financially exploit their elderly relatives. Although there is no definitive estimate of the number of older adults who experience financial abuse by family members, community service providers and other professionals agree that cases actually reported to authorities represent only the very "tip of the iceberg." Like King Lear, when people in their later years encounter health problems that diminish their physical or cognitive capacities, they usually first turn to family members for assistance and support.

In most situations, family members nobly assume their caregiving role; but in others, family members—sons, daughters, grandchildren, nieces, and nephews—take advantage of the elders' dependencies and become perpetrators of financial abuse. Approximately 60% of substantiated Adult Protective Services (APS) cases of financial abuse involve an adult child, compared to 47% for all other forms of abuse.[17]

The elder's grandchildren and other relatives are almost equally as likely to be perpetrators of financial abuse (9.2% and 9.7%, respectively). In the primary literature, male and female relatives are equally likely to be financial abusers of older adults. However, the media-reported instances revealed that elder financial abuse was 2.5 times more likely to be committed by sons than daughters. Overall, 45 incidents (16.9%) of elder financial abuse described in the media involved immediate relatives. Family perpetrators often misuse their powers of attorney to steal money from bank accounts, obtain credit cards to make unauthorized purchases, and embezzle large sums of money by refinancing the elder's home, among other examples of financial abuse.[18]

It is unknown what factors contribute to the likelihood of family members financially exploiting their elderly relatives, as no rigorous research has been done. Scholars and practitioners speculate that, like perpetrators of other types of elder abuse, family members who exploit their elders are dependent upon them for their own survival (e.g., shelter and finances) and their actions may be influenced by problems with alcohol, drug abuse, and gambling, and many may suffer from antisocial behavior disorders.

Tensions and inequalities between the elder and family member, perhaps stemming from the relative's dependency and mental health issues, enhance the likelihood of financial abuse. For example, an unemployed adult child living in the home of a parent might be more likely to exploit the elder than an adult child with a steady income and their own place of residence, or one generation abused another and then the "abuser role" is reversed.[19]

American Bar Association

ABANet

An American Bar Association report noted an ongoing case where a mother gave her son her power of attorney. The mother then sold her home, moved in with the son, and gave the proceeds to her son to build an addition to the son's house where she could live. The son subsequently claimed that the contractors he paid did not do the work on the house. The son then dropped the mother off at a local hospital and refused to bring her home.

After staying in the hospital for about two and a half months, a nursing home was finally located for placement for her. However, because the mother is now impoverished after giving her assets to her son, Medicaid is taking the position that the transfers to the son were disqualifying for Medicaid coverage eligibility purposes, and the placement may very well become disrupted.

Kansas City Star

June 4, 2008

A case was reported of a 72-year-old woman who was found dead, and whose daughter is charged in her murder. She had moved in with her 55-year-old daughter in 2006, at which time she had more than $40,000 in the bank. At the time her daughter was arrested, there were no funds in the bank, and the conditions under which the older woman had been living made it clear that the money had not been spent on her care. For example, the older woman broke her leg. Her daughter, who is a nurse, treated it by dosing her mother with antibiotics and corn starch, and wrapped the leg in a diaper and taped it, rather than get proper care for the injury.

Some family members also feel a sense of entitlement and believe that they have a right to the money and material goods their parents or older relatives have accumulated. They often start with small crimes, such as stealing jewelry and blank checks, before moving on to larger items or coercing elders to sign over the deeds to their homes, change their wills, or liquidate their assets. They feel justified in taking "advance" control over assets that they perceive to be "almost" or "rightfully" theirs.[20] Relatives may believe they are entitled to "reimbursement" for providing care for the elder, or/and may even take preemptive steps to secure assets to prevent their presumed inheritance from being exhausted to pay for the elder's care and medical bills.

Businesses as Perpetrators of Elder Financial Abuse

Another type of elder financial abuse is often referred to as "commercial" elder abuse. Elderly people can be an easy mark because of their often trusting nature and because swindlers operate under the guise of the trustworthiness of a business as well as a personal trust relationship.[21] Commercial organizations as perpetrators run the gamut of blue-collar crimes, but several types are noteworthy. The research literature has barely quantified this problem, thus much that we know is case-by-case or highly anecdotal in nature.

While elder financial abuse runs the gamut of types and varieties, some common kinds of commercial theft, fraud, and embezzlement include:

- Life and health insurance misrepresentation or theft (single perpetrators or a sophisticated group or ring)
- Predatory lending:
  - False investment claims
  - "Get rich quick" schemes
  - Credit card bailouts
  - Home loan bailouts

- False sales and promises related to annuities, stocks, and bonds
- False banking practices, including account draining or siphoning
- Property purchasing scams
- High-pressure telephone solicitations, especially for charities
- Magazine and book publishers' solicitations
- Internet scams:
  - Social networks
  - E-mail
  - Medications
  - Assistive devices/medical equipment
  - Clothing
  - Make-up and age-reduction remedies
  - Property and information solicitation
- Identity theft, misrepresentation by various industries, claiming must-have information for verification purposes

While the largest number of cases reported involved family, friends, and caregivers, the aggregate dollar amounts lost through commercial elder abuse was the highest. This is typically the case since investment scams and similar forms of financial abuse involve larger sums of money and often hundreds of victims. We have only to look at the headlines of high profile "Ponzi" schemes where many elderly and non-elderly wealthy victims as well as institutions collectively lose millions of dollars to fraud.

The illegal attempts by various industries involving individual perpetrators or sometimes teams and involving aspects of fraud and abuse listed on pages 14 and 15 are growing in their intricacy to defraud older adults. These forms of commercial elder abuse are increasing in number, perhaps due to greater vigilance in recognition and reporting. More importantly, they are growing in their complexity, potentially resulting in forms of elder financial abuse that will become more difficult to detect and prevent. Combating these varied types of elder financial abuse will take trained investigators and advocates greater time, savvy, and cunning than the ever-proliferating perpetrators. For this reason, specialized legal units, such as those profiled later in this study and those in NCEA's Promising Practices Database,[22] have been established in some larger metropolitan areas.

Elder Financial Abuse by Acquaintances and Strangers[23]

A large proportion of perpetrators are unrelated to their elderly victims. As noted in the primary literature[24] and as is further evident in the Newsfeeds reviewed, perpetrators of elder

A 68-year-old man with experience in owning a business and making investments was allegedly scammed out of $26,500 by a man who promised him a $500 a week return on his money. Mr. J had hoped to supplement his and his wife's Social Security income with that money. When Mr. J requested a formal written proposal, the alleged perpetrator was unable to provide one.

Mr. J then requested that his money be returned. This resulted in getting "every excuse in the book" from the alleged perpetrator, but no check. Finally an attorney was retained, a check was provided, but it bounced. Mr. J still has not received his $26,500, nor has he received a $500 a week return on it.

financial abuse include neighbors, apartment managers, home health aides, ministers, those with power of attorney, and guardians.

They initially extended helping hands to the elders and gradually are overcome by greed; contractors and handymen who ripped off the elders with bogus charges; phony financial planners and professional con artists who provided "free" services for elders to gain their trust and then defrauded them later; and others who befriended the elders to take advantage of them.

One trait perpetrators of elder financial abuse have in common is that they exhibit excellent persuasion skills. They are very good at cultivating relationships and convincing older adults that they are worthy of their trust and money. In general, perpetrators are not bound by conventional norms or business ethics, and rationalize their criminal and abusive behavior.

The Sarasota Herald Tribune (June 12, 2008) estimated that since 2000, southwest Florida elders alone have lost at least $350 million to swindlers. Individuals involved in exploiting older adults may use "undue influence"—the substitution of one person's will for the true desires of another.[25] In these cases, the perpetrator uses his or her role and power to exploit the trust, dependency, or fear to gain psychological control over the older adult's decision-making, usually for financial gain. Some are career professionals in the business of defrauding others, while others are initially in a position of trust who apparently are overcome by greed. They encourage their elderly victims to make an immediate decision or commitment to purchase products or services, which effectively limits the opportunity for consultation with others.

As the elderly population grows, so too does their presence on the Internet. The Federal Trade Commission reported that in 2004, elders who filed complaints about Internet fraud each lost an average of $1,280 to individuals and businesses operating Internet scams.[26] Common Internet scams used with older adults are "phishing" and identity theft. Using carefully crafted e-mail messages that appear to be from legitimate and reputable banks, companies, and government agencies, the perpetrators often use scare tactics such as threats of account closures to lure in their elderly victims.

As the newest demographic to venture in cyberspace, older adults are generally least educated about the dangers and intricacies of phishing and other fraudulent practices.[27-28]

"Elder financial abuse is a crime growing in intensity and, especially now, with the plummeting economy, elders will be unable to recover from such losses."

–Pamela Teaster, President, National Committee for the Prevention of Elder Abuse

Growing Problem of Elder Financial Abuse

Although elder financial abuse has been poorly understood, there are some compelling reasons to believe its occurrence has increased over the past ten years[29] due to the following:

More Elders in the Population Means More Potential for Elder Financial Abuse

The population of elders generally is increasing, as ours is an aging society. In 1900, adults aged 60 and older constituted about 6% of the population.[30] In 2006, elders aged 60 and older comprised almost 17% of the population.[31] By 2030, elders 60 years of age and older will comprise nearly 25% of the U.S. population.[32]

Older Americans Have the Lion's Share of the Money, and Therefore Are the Obvious Target for Predators Looking for Financial Gains

The older population owns the largest proportion of wealth in the U.S. People over 50 years of age control at least 70% of the net worth of the nation's households.[33] Many elders do not realize the value of their assets, such as their homes that may have appreciated markedly since purchased decades ago.

Diminished Cognitive Abilities Create Greater Vulnerability to Elder Financial Abuse

While the aging population overall is growing, the oldest-old (those aged 85+) are the fastest growing segment of the older population. For many, with advanced age come changes in physical and mental functioning. For those with decreased abilities, decision-making capacity may be compromised, and they thus may fall prey to elder financial abuse without fully understanding the situation. To illustrate, the prevalence of dementia in those 75 and older is 16%,[34] and for those 80 and older, it is 30%. Changes in cognitive abilities make elders dependent on others for help. These "helpers" may have access to homes and assets, and may exercise significant influence over the elder.

Changes in Families Alter Responsibility and Oversight for Providing Care, Which Increases the Potential for Elder Financial Abuse

Families still provide the bulk of care for elders, although they look far different than they did in previous generations. More than half of women (59% in 2007[35]) are in the workforce and are thus unable to be the sole providers of care for elders in their homes. The family structure, and thus perceptions of who is responsible to provide care, are altered due to divorce, alternate living arrangements, and step-families. There are approximately 3.3 million long-distance caregivers and their number is expected to double over the next 15 years.[36] Non-family members, paid and unpaid, are providing more care as well.

- Recognizing Diversity Within and Across Cultures Is Necessary for Implementing Effective Prevention, Investigation, and Intervention Efforts

Due to a rapidly increasing population of different races and ethnicities, perceptions of the problem are as different as its remedies.

For example, what one culture considers elder financial abuse may not be the belief of another, which also affects when it is acceptable and who is acceptable to involve in intervention strategies.

- Artful and Designing Ways to Financially Abuse Elders Are Increasingly Varied

Technologies such as the Internet are opening up new and "creative" ways to financially abuse elders. Increasingly, an elder's identity is universally available to others through online purchases, Internet dating, and virtual social networks. Systems to address the problem have not caught up with its growing variety and complexity, such as the growing instances of Internet-based fraud of older consumers.[37]

Houston Chronicle

June 9, 2008

More than 80 older adults of various ages were the victims of securities fraud perpetrated by an attorney over an extended period of time. The amount of money involved was over $10 million, and the attorney asked for probation at his sentencing hearing. He was sentenced to 20 years in prison.

Restitution for a portion of the amount taken was realized by selling his assets, and victims were reimbursed on a pro-rata basis. When he has completed his sentence, he must pay nearly $4 million additional in restitution.

"The older population owns the largest proportion of wealth in the U.S. People over 50 years of age control at least 70% of the net worth of the nation's households."

Aging and Susceptibility to Elder Financial Abuse

There are several reasons why members of the aging population are tempting targets to perpetrators of elder financial abuse. First, the majority of older adults, from the fittest to the frailest, are homeowners. They are often "home alone" within the fast-paced, multi-generational communities in which they live, exposing them to unscrupulous vendors, scam artists, and telemarketers who prey upon innocent individuals who are eager to live out their lives in familiar and comfortable surroundings.

For example, the tendency of fraudulent telephone salespersons to prey on older adults is high, with more than 50% of victims of telemarketing scams being age 50 or older. Elders, who often end up on the "mooch list" of crooked telemarketers, frequently are victimized over and over again. By one FBI estimate,[38] scam artists are bilking older adults out of more than $500 million per year.

The accumulated wealth of the current generation of elders also places them at risk for abuse. They usually have income from Social Security and employer pensions, IRA, or 401(k) savings investments, and, if they are widows/widowers, the proceeds of their late spouse's life insurance. They worry that they will outlive their money and be forced to rely on their children for financial support.

These exploitative phony investment schemes are aware of these fears and often troll for elders with financial means by visiting churches, country clubs, or senior centers. They develop a relationship with them to win their confidence by performing legitimate services, such as tax preparation or financial planning, before pitching a fraudulent investment. Common sense dictates that individuals with great financial resources are highly attractive to family members and others seeking to take large sums of money.

Nevertheless, people with limited means are also at risk of elder financial abuse. The National Elder Abuse Incidence study[39] found that nearly one-half (46%) of elder victims of financial abuse had incomes between $5,000 and $9,999, while just under a third (30%) were those whose incomes fell between $10,000 and $14,999.

Anyone can be a victim of elder financial abuse, but older adults who are socially isolated are also especially vulnerable because they are less likely and able to seek advice before making an important financial decision. In addition, because the sales solicitation itself addresses a need for social interaction on the part of the elderly victim, they may feel obligated to be friendly or compliant in return.

If the older adult appears hesitant to engage in the transaction, the perpetrators have an endless supply of rebuttals for any excuse the victim offers, and can have an aggressive style that intimidates them into complying. These tactics are effective primarily because of their appeal to natural human desires to feel special, to find a bargain, and to please someone else.

Balancing Autonomy and Protection: Understanding the Complexities of Elder Financial Abuse

All adults have the inherent autonomy and freedom to make decisions regarding their personal affairs, resources, care, and services that others might not choose for them. By the same token, elders have the right to be free from abuse, neglect, and financial exploitation. This often delicate balance challenges both identification of potential abuse and successful prevention and prosecution when it does occur.

Scholars, practitioners, and policymakers are all grappling with often complex legal, financial, medical, and familial issues surrounding elder financial abuse. As a result, information about, and documentation of, the problem and practices to prevent and alleviate such abuse are scattered across multiple disciplines and sources. The resulting absence of a comprehensive knowledge base impedes the development of preventive practices, interventions, and policies that strive to eliminate elder financial abuse and maximize individual autonomy and quality of life of older adults.

The Tip of the Iceberg: Why Victims Do Not Report

A significant reason for the underestimation of the occurrence of elder financial abuse is the victims themselves do not report elder financial abuse for a variety of reasons. Among the multitude of reasons uncovered, the victims:

- Do not want government interference in their personal lives
- Do not want their adult child or other family member going to jail or facing public embarrassment
- Feel responsible for what has happened
- Do not realize that they have been financially abused
- Believe financial abuse is a consequence of "doing business" or taking risks
- Fear that they will be placed in a nursing home or other facility
- Do not think anyone will really help them, even if they expose the abuse
- Worry that the perpetrator might harm them even more
- Think resolution will come too late to be of any good
- Believe they will lose even more money to costs of pursuing the financial abuse

Financial and other professionals who deal with elders generally feel a responsibility to help protect their elderly clients from harm or abuse of any kind. However, they often fail to get involved when they suspect elder financial abuse because they:

- Do not know if they are mandated reporters in some states
- Do not want to compromise professional relationships (confidentiality vs. mandatory reporting)
- Are not clear who their client is (older adult or their family members)
- Are not able to determine the actual mental capacity of their older clients, a determination that affects decisions made by them and on their behalf
- Want to avoid adverse publicity to themselves and their organizations
- Do not understand business ethics and practices in relation to elder financial abuse
- Do not want to incriminate a fellow professional
- Want to avoid involvement in a criminal investigation and potential lawsuit

Identifying the Problem: Leading Signs of Elder Financial Abuse

Certain warning signs indicate if older adults are experiencing financial abuse.

- Unusual degree of fear or submissiveness to caregiver

  Example: An elder cowers in front of a caregiver or begins trembling or crying when the caregiver discusses finances.

- Isolation from family, friends, community, and other stable relationships

  Example: The older person is never alone or permitted to discuss finances without the caregiver also present.

- Signs of intimidation and threat by another

  Example: The older person never looks at people directly or averts their gaze.

- Withdrawn behavior or disheveled appearance

  Example: The older person tries to avoid talking with others, especially when asked to respond to something specific.

- Missed appointments, uncharacteristic nonpayment for services

  Example: The older person, previously prompt and reliable, does not show up for medical appointments or "forgets" to pay bills.

- Anxiety about personal finances

  Example: The older person worries a lot about how she will ever pay a bill or have enough to eat.

- Lack of knowledge about financial status

  Example: The older person seems unaware of his money.

- New "best friends"

  Example: The older person seems surprisingly or unseemly close and attentive to someone he has just met.

- Missing belongings or property

  Example: Glasses, clothes, dentures, money, or all of these are gone. The elder is dismissed as "forgetful."

- Significant changes in spending patterns

  Example: The older adult purchases an expensive car even though she has not driven in the past year.

- Makes sudden changes regarding financial management

  Example: Power of attorney for financial matters is suddenly changed from a long-time friend to a new person—family member or stranger.

In addition to the behaviors of the elders, there are also notable signs exhibited by family members or others who befriend older adults and engage in elder financial abuse. For example, they frequently:

- Develop a close bond and exert influence over the older person's decisions
- Make false promises or withhold information from the older person
- Show excessive interest in the older person's assets
- Demonstrate excessive control of the older person
- Suddenly acquire expensive possessions
- Control phone use and prevent others from accessing the older person
- Exhibit defensiveness or hostility during appointments or on the phone
- Are reluctant to leave the side of the older person during appointments

Recognizing these warning signs can be a very effective tool in early intervention and prevention of further financial abuse.

"One trait perpetrators of elder financial abuse have in common is that they exhibit excellent persuasion skills. They are very good at cultivating relationships and convincing older adults that they are worthy of their trust and money. In general, perpetrators are not bound by conventional norms or business ethics, and rationalize their criminal and abusive behavior."

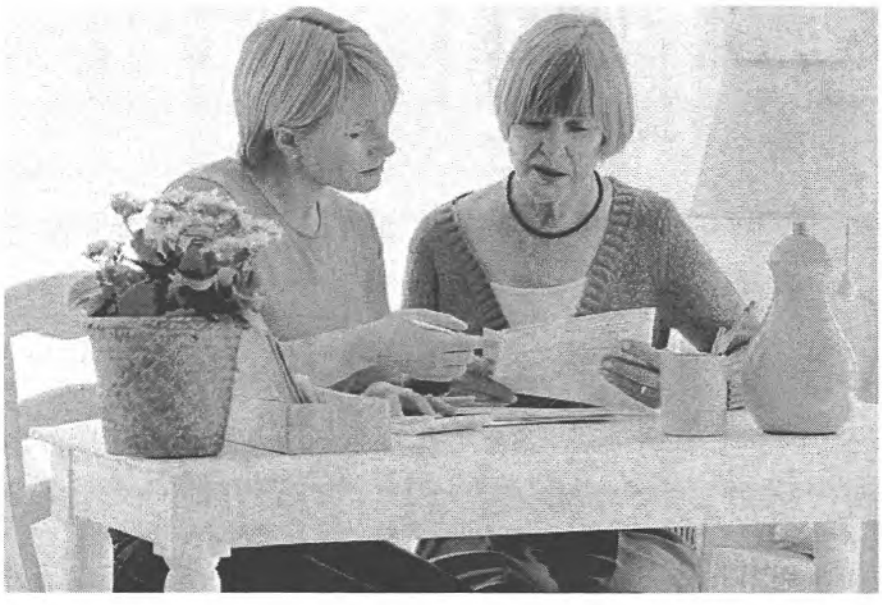
Lasting Impact of Elder Financial Abuse

Perhaps elder financial abuse has received limited attention, both in the popular press and in the research literature, because it is not regarded as visible, life-threatening, or newsworthy as is the physical or sexual abuse of elders. Still, elder financial abuse affects elders and their families in significant and long-lasting ways by putting enormous emotional duress on the elder, increasing their risk of depression, decreasing their quality of life, and increasing unnecessary institutionalization.[40]

A National Institute of Justice study revealed that 20% of victims suffered financial or credit problems, with 14% subsequently suffering health effects.[41] Some scholars contend that the impact of elder financial abuse has the same effect as being a victim of a violent crime, reporting that at least one victim likened this kind of abuse to being raped. If restitution is offered for elder financial abuse, it may come too late to be of any help to an elder, who may well have passed away before any ever reaches him or her.

Elder financial abuse can impact an elder by eradicating nearly all of his or her financial resources. Unlike younger people, an older adult will have little to no ability to recoup these losses over time. Also, even if the courts order restitution, it may take years to receive it, and the victim may well pass away before it ever reaches him or her. Victims may even be murdered by perpetrators who just want their funds and see them as an easy mark.

Loss of finances limits choices in health care and other services. They may be unable to afford needed medications. Restricted choices can reduce or completely destroy an elder's independence. Moreover, such losses can result in shame, guilt, or general mistrust escalating into paranoia or depression. Untreated or undetected depression can cause death by passive or active suicide.[42-43]



Addressing Elder Financial Abuse

Industry and Professional Efforts

Analysis of articles in the trade journals reviewed in this research indicated that the financial industry is also regulating and sanctioning itself, as well as educating its own members and older adults about recognizing and preventing elder financial abuse. Industry professionals and organizations who are taking a lead role include:

- Attorneys, especially attorneys specializing in elder law (24 articles)
- Government entities, including the Securities Exchange Commission, Federal Trade Commission, the U.S. Postal Service, and other federal state regulators (25 articles)
- Financial institutions, including banks, insurance companies, credit unions, and investment firms (21 articles)
- Financial professionals, such as CPAs, financial advisors, and brokers (11 articles)
- Health care facilities, including nursing homes (10 articles)

Financial services companies have been working closely with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), Financial Industry Regulatory Authority (FINRA), and the North American Securities Administration Association (NASAA). In 2008, financial services companies and agencies participated in the third annual "Seniors Summit" to further examine and refine how financial services companies and regulators can coordinate efforts to protect older consumers from investment fraud and financial abuse.

These include collaborative efforts to expand consumer and professional education, improved corporate policies and procedures, and more focused compliance policies and monitoring.[44]

Because the investment, banking, and insurance industries are highly regulated, considerable attention and resources are focused on compliance with regulatory and ethical considerations in dealing with consumers. In 2005, the securities industry alone was estimated to have spent $25.5 billion on staffing, training, and policies and procedures for compliance with fiduciary and regulatory mandates.[45]

Within the insurance industry, a 2006 survey found that 62% of companies were anticipating changes and improvements to their compliance programs. Their efforts included strengthening and/or adding to their monitoring and surveillance efforts (39%); enhancing their training and communication programs (28%); and adding staff (11%). Other activities include strengthening the company-wide compliance culture, product suitability guidelines, and better defining compliance issues throughout the organization.[46]

Governmental Efforts

The U.S. Senate Special Aging Committee addressed elder financial abuse through a series of Committee hearings held between June 2001 and May 2006. Testimony was provided by federal and state agency officials, criminal justice representatives, state attorneys general, representatives from the financial sector, consumer organizations, academic institutions, and victims and perpetrators of elder financial abuse.

According to U.S. Senate sources[47] and the National Elder Abuse Incidence Study,[48] only 16% of all elder abuse cases are reported and 30% of all reported cases involve financial abuse, a number close to the incidence of news reports involving elder financial abuse found in this study.

The U.S. Senate Committee on Aging[49] reported that nearly 40% of America's seniors rank fear of fraud ahead of their concern for health care and the crisis attendant to it and even higher than terrorism. In all, Americans in general are estimated to lose $40 billion per year to telemarketing fraud and over $50 billion to identity theft.

Additionally, a 2002 press release from the U.S. Special Committee on Aging cited Privacy Rights Clearinghouse estimates that over 700,000 Americans are victims of identity theft each year, with several thousand being elders. Reported incidents among those aged 60 years and older skyrocketed by 218% from 1,821 victims to 5,802 victims between 2000 and 2001.

As recently as February 2008, the Senate Committee on Finance held hearings regarding marketing by Medicare Advantage private plans, with observations that the sale of Medicare benefits by private plans "has been aggressive at best" and at other times "abusive or downright fraudulent."

A National Association of Insurance Commissioners survey of states revealed 39 states with complaints about misrepresentations by insurance agents or companies marketing Medicare products and 22 states reporting fraudulent activity. Other testimony included reports of "hard sell" techniques, inaccurate statements, and misrepresentation on the part of salespeople regarding private Medicare Advantage plans.

One of the most important actions related to elder financial abuse is the Elder Justice Act (EJA), the first federal effort to address this issue. First introduced in the 108th Congress in 2002, its purpose is to increase awareness and knowledge of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation at the national level, train individuals from various disciplines on these issues, combat elder abuse, and prosecute cases of elder abuse where appropriate. The Act was reintroduced in 2005 and again in 2007. If passed, the EJA will be the first bill to specifically state that it is the right of older adults to be free of abuse, neglect, and exploitation. It will provide federal resources that would work against elder abuse and prevent other older individuals from such abuses in the future.

The 2007 EJA (S. 1070) makes provisions for an Elder Justice Coordinating Council to coordinate various activities related to elder justice at federal, state, and community levels and for both private and not-for-profit entities; secures federal funding for Adult Protective Services and long-term funding for research; provides grants to establish and operate stationary and mobile forensic centers; and creates safer long-term care settings.

Other efforts at the federal level include White House Conferences on Aging (WHCoA) and the Older Americans Act (OAA). At the most recent WHCoA, held in 2005, elder abuse gained considerable visibility, with a recommendation that stressed the creation of a national strategy for the promotion of elder justice through the prevention and prosecution of elder abuse.

Title VII of the Act provides statutory authority and funds distributed by formulas allocated to states to prevent elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation.

Finally, at the federal level, the National Center on Elder Abuse is the premier national resource on elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation. The National Committee for the Prevention of Elder Abuse is one of its partner organizations and focuses on research, advocacy, and education related to preventing and intervening in elder abuse.

States Respond to Elder Financial Abuse

A tool to fight elder financial abuse is State Medicaid Fraud Control Units (MFCUs), whose mission is to investigate and prosecute Medicaid provider fraud and patient abuse and neglect. Most Units are located in Offices of State Attorneys General. In fiscal year 2007, MFCUs recovered more than $1.1 billion in court-ordered restitution, fines, civil settlements and penalties, and obtained 1,205 convictions.[50]

Examples of Promising Local Practices

- One of the first efforts to specifically address elder financial abuse was through the establishment of a Financial Abuse Specialist Team (FAST). Begun in 1993 in Los Angeles, FAST provides expert consultation and training to protective services and other practitioners in cases of elder financial abuse. The team includes members from social services, law enforcement, elder law attorneys, health care professionals and banks. Since 1993, other FASTs have proliferated, both in California and in other states.
- Part of the NCEA's mission is to disseminate information on promising practices related to elder abuse. At this time, the latest iteration of this database includes at least nine programs on elder financial abuse.
- Representing combinations of industry and social services is AARP ElderWatch in Colorado. Founded in 2002, it is a training program for recognizing financial exploitation of elders. The program includes a Web site; a complaint call center that alerts law enforcement, seniors, and banks of financial scams; and a pocket guide for law enforcement on elder abuse. Members include AARP, Attorneys General, Better Business Bureaus, Sheriffs, and TeleSynthesis, Inc.
- In Delaware, at least two programs specifically address elder financial abuse. The Delaware Money Management Program offers money management services to help low-income seniors and adults with physical disabilities who have difficulty budgeting, paying routine bills, and keeping track of financial matters. Its membership includes AARP and the Delaware Division of Services for the Aging and Adults with Physical Disabilities. Another program in Delaware is the Delaware Elder Abuse and Exploitation Project, a law enforcement project utilizing multi-dimensional inter-agency cooperation to prevent and prosecute crimes against elders.
- Missourians Stopping Adult Financial Exploitation (MOSAFE) has developed training packages for frontline financial institution personnel, building on a training package from the Oregon Bankers Association. Materials educate staff to recognize and report possible financial exploitation of vulnerable adults. Its membership includes AARP, the Attorney General, Banker's Association, Alliance of AAAs, Association of Public Administrators, Credit Union Association, Independent Bankers Association, Lt. Governor, Police Chiefs Association, and the Sheriff's Association.
- Harry and Jeanette Weinberg Center for Elder Abuse Prevention at the Hebrew Home for the Aged at Riverdale (in New York State) is the first comprehensive elder abuse shelter in the United States. Using the Home's full continuum of care and staff expertise, community network, and collaborative affiliations, the Center uses a coordinated system of crisis intervention, residential and community based services, training, and community awareness programs to provide a wide range of services for victims of elder abuse and neglect. The Center has successfully developed a methodology for identifying and intervening in financial abuse of older adults.

  The Hebrew Home has found that financial abuse occurs in over 60% of the legitimate elder abuse cases it has investigated. Even in cases where there is no physical abuse, financial abuse is the single most common form of abuse to occur.

Preventing Elder Financial Abuse

Any person—elders, family members, or professionals—who suspects that financial abuse of an elder has occurred should report it. One of the challenges in describing and documenting financial abuse stems from the variability in terminology between disciplines and the laws in different states. But, when in doubt, it is always better to err on the side of caution and report suspected financial abuse to the appropriate agencies such as Adult Protective Services, a law enforcement agency, or compliance department of the financial institution. Reports can be made confidentially and the reporting person is protected from civil and criminal liability.

Successful prevention of elder financial abuse involves multiple strategies. There are a variety of actions individuals, family members, financial service professionals, businesses, and organizations can do to help protect elders from getting tangled in the web of elder financial abuse.

Older adults themselves can take several precautions to avoid falling prey to financial abuse. Such actions include:

- Stay Organized

Keep belongings neat; keep track of possessions; open and send your own mail; direct deposit Social Security and other checks; complete and sign your own checks whenever possible; use an answering machine to screen calls and do not provide personal information over the telephone.

- Stay Informed

Consult with an attorney about future plans, including a power of attorney; consult with an attorney about caregiving arrangements; review your will; know where to go if you suspect abuse; ask for help from police, from employees at a bank, from Adult Protective Services, if needed.

- Stay Alert

Do not leave items of value out in the open; do not sign any document unless someone you trust reviews it; do not be left out of decisions about your finances.

Families, particularly those who find themselves in a caregiving role, also need to be aware of situations that place their older loved ones at risk for financial abuse. Family members should periodically inquire about their older family members' financial resources and perceived limitations that may stem from their financial situation. They also need to keep an eye out for such things as:

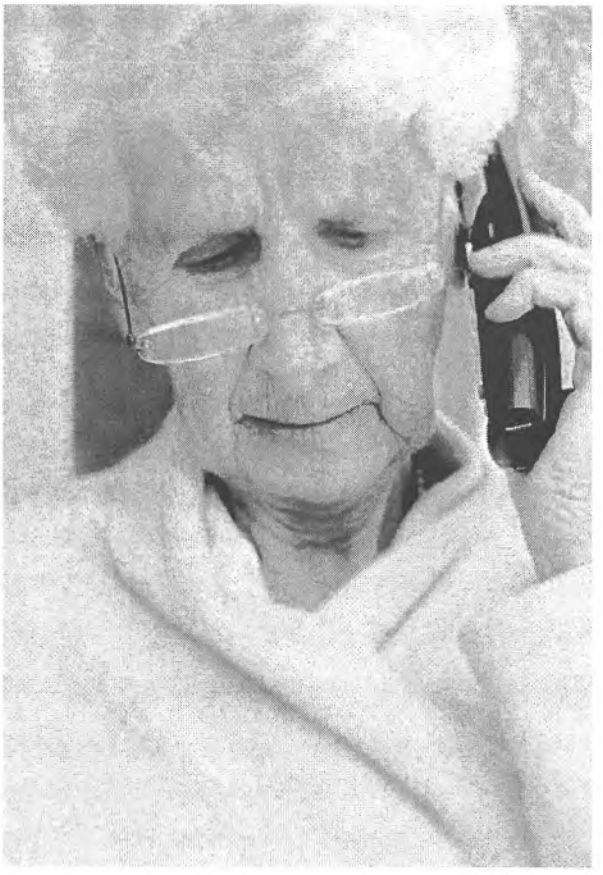
- Unusual worry about finances or fear of an individual
- Unexplained trembling or crying
- Changes in communication patterns
- Any abrupt change in behavior
- Overpayment for goods and services
- Unnecessary services or household repairs
- A set of "out-of-sync" check numbers
- Increased ATM activity
- Unusual cash withdrawals from a financial account in a short period of time
- Missing belongings from the home or room in a facility
- Excessive time spent on the Internet
- A signature that seems forged, unusual, or suspicious
- An unexplained reduction in bank accounts
- An increase in the number and amount of credit card accounts

- An abrupt or unexplained change in the power of attorney, will, or other legal or financial documents
- Sudden transfer of assets to a family member or someone outside the family

Financial service and other professionals, such as bankers and lawyers, are well positioned to contribute to the prevention of elder financial abuse by:

- Educating clients about their rights and about types of consumer fraud and scams
- Describing how family members, with the help of legal counsel, can explore options such as financial conservatorship for clients who are frail, mentally ill, or cognitively impaired
- Encouraging clients or family members to discuss with legal counsel the option to assign financial guardian or power of attorney, as needed
- If children are of concern, educating clients about the option to assign responsibility to an outside person
- Generating media attention on the issue of elder financial abuse and its prevention
- Staying apprised of current trends in elder financial abuse and techniques for stopping it
- Training appropriate personnel in techniques for interviewing older customers
- Seeking assistance from other disciplines (social services, medical/nursing personnel, government agencies)
- Reporting suspected cases of elder financial abuse to local authorities or to their institution's compliance department

Note that some of these steps may not be appropriate for all professionals, and that elder financial abuse situations vary and must be evaluated on a case-by-case basis.



"Some [perpetrators of elderly financial abuse] are career professionals in the business of defrauding others, while others are initially in a position of trust who apparently are overcome by greed. They encourage their elderly victims to make an immediate decision or commitment to purchase products or services, which effectively limits the opportunity for consultation with others."

Summary

The Scope of the Problem Is Larger Than We Realize

Elder financial abuse is involved in at least 20%–30% of all reported elder abuse.[51] Based on this research study, as well as the work and experience of experts, advocates, and law enforcement agencies, we believe that this number is a significant underestimate, since cases involving only elder financial abuse were likely to go unreported.

Elder Financial Abuse Has Short- and Long-Term Impact

Anecdotal information suggests that the impact of elder financial abuse is hugely demoralizing. It not only affects the elder who is financially abused, but it reaches far beyond its immediate victim, affecting health care and health care costs, living situations, filings for bankruptcy, and costs for its recuperation passed along in service industries.

It may even exacerbate or cause mental and physical illness, including an untimely death for the victim. Media coverage of high profile financial fraud in 2008–2009 reinforces the fact that elder financial abuse can affect those who are or were financially well off, and we can surmise that such abuse has an even more severe impact on the lives of those without financial means.

Elder Financial Abuse Is a Companion to Other Forms of Abuse

This form of abuse is often tied to other forms and may be the precursor to those forms. If that is so, stopping elder financial abuse would prevent or reduce other and equally insidious forms from occurring.

Elder Financial Abuse Exists in Many Races and Ethnicities

Elder financial abuse is submerged in various races and ethnicities. A rising population of elders, with the fastest growing being Hispanic elders, necessitates additional attention, so that a better understanding emerges of how elders in other cultures view the problem.

Generational Differences in Elder Financial Abuse Patterns Are Evolving

The "World War II Generation" is quickly passing away and giving rise to new generations of elders, especially the Baby Boomer generation. With this demographic surge of "new elders" comes new ways of approaching elder finances—widespread use of credit cards, investments, travel, and, above all, information available at unprecedented speeds through the Internet. New methods of dissemination also provide a fertile ground for increasing opportunities for individuals and industries to defraud.

Organizations and families have their own views about their entitlement to the money of past generations. For example, when adult children live in a parent's home, they may think they are due money from a parent, just because they help them in some way, not because the older adult has given them permission to have money. Often, children make the "assumption" that Mom or Dad would "want me to enjoy it now."

The Number of Potential Older Adult Victims Is Growing Rapidly

Advances in health care have allowed populations with particularly vulnerable adults to live longer, a circumstance often accompanied by those who seek to capitalize upon their vulnerability. If someone is having trouble making decisions, he or she could easily become confused when information is presented by a con artist very quickly and with pressure to make a quick decision. An older person, often trusting, might then agree to participate in a sales arrangement that later turns out to be bogus.

Implications

A Multidisciplinary Strategy for Addressing Elder Financial Abuse Holds Great Promise

While law enforcement teams and anti-fraud advocates hold promise and are increasing, it is critical to know both how they work and what they are able to accomplish. Critical information gaps exist beyond a team's own self-reporting. For instance, are they really effective in addressing the problem, and is this approach the best solution to problem resolution?

Bringing multiple disciplines together to bear on the problem of elder financial abuse can be an expensive strategy to resolve the issue. It remains to be seen what are the best ways to maximize a group of assembled experts to deal with elder financial abuse. Cost/benefit analysis on the effectiveness of multidisciplinary teams is also needed.

The Right Kind of Training Is Needed for Both Businesses and the Public Sector

Both the public and private sectors stand to benefit from understanding the problem: banks, insurance, investments, loans, legal, just to name a few. The banking industry has made particularly progressive efforts in this arena (e.g., Massachusetts Bank Reporting Project; Oregon Bankers Association—Elder Financial Abuse Prevention Project). Banks often deal with older customers on a regular basis and get to know them well. They are able to track "unusual" activity in accounts and are in a prime position to work to prevent or intervene in such instances.

A winning approach to addressing the problem is to finally and fully understand the nature and scope of the problem and test intervention strategies to determine what works in the widest context as well as to replicate those approaches that are most effective in preventing and responding to financial abuse. Professionals from all service sectors can be made more aware of the impending signs of elder financial abuse. The challenge is to balance their responsibility to protect the safety of the elders they serve with the elders' right to self-determination.

Better Understand the "Environment" of Elder Financial Abuse

Elder financial abuse is a problem in every community and among all social strata. It is underrecognized, underreported, and underprosecuted. In the financial services sector, a better understanding of the "environment" of elder financial abuse would be productive in better prevention and reporting. A deeper understanding and industry experiences with both compliance efforts and training programs will enhance efforts to better address the problem.

Reinforce Ethical Practices Through Education

Community groups, faith communities, and schools are excellent forums for inculcating these ethical values and making them known. Strategies for discussions about financial decisions are often difficult, but are just as important as discussions about health care decisions. These institutions are valuable community resources which can be engaged as prevention and reporting sources at the local level.

Capture Scope, Effects, and the Cost of the Problem to Adequately Address and Prevent It

It is worth additional effort to understand the breadth and depth of the elder financial abuse problem. Without a unified approach to the problem, we will at best simply chip away at this costly waste of funds and lives. Elder financial abuse, made even more important in our present uncertain economic environment, amplifies the need to understand its scope and effects.

Appendix B: Elder Financial Abuse—A Glossary of Terms[1]

- ELDER ABUSE—An act or omission which results in harm or threatened harm to the health or welfare of an elderly person. Abuse includes intentional infliction of physical or mental injury, sexual abuse, or withholding of necessary food, clothing, and medical care to treat the physical and mental health needs of an elderly person by one having the care, custody, or responsibility of an elder person.
- EXPLOITATION—Exploitation of elderly persons can be referred to as financial abuse, material abuse, fiduciary abuse, financial exploitation, financial mistreatment or maltreatment, and economic victimization.
- FIDUCIARY MISAPPROPRIATIONS—Intentional, illegal use of the property or funds of another person for one's own use or other unauthorized purpose, particularly by a public official, a trustee of a trust, an executor or administrator of a dead person's estate, or by any person with a responsibility to care for and protect another's assets (a fiduciary duty).
- FINANCIAL ABUSE—A form of financial exploitation that involves wrongful acquisitions of money and valuable objects belonging to an elderly person by friends, relatives, or caretakers; a situation in which a person, including but not limited to, who has care or custody of or who stands in a position of trust, of an elder or dependent adult, takes, secretes, or appropriates their money or property, to any wrongful use, or with the intent to defraud; the illegal or improper use of an older person's funds, property, or resources.
- FRAUD—Deception made for personal or economic gain. Fraud can be committed through many methods, including mail, phone, infomercials, and the Internet.
  - Advance Fee Scheme: Occurs when a person pays money to someone in anticipation of receiving something of greater value, such as a loan, contract, investment, or gift, and then receives little or nothing in return.
  - Check Fraud: A criminal act that involves making the unlawful use of one or more checks or checking accounts in order to illegally acquire or borrow funds that do not exist within the account balance or account-holder's legal ownership.
  - Identity Fraud or Identity Theft: Stealing money or getting other benefits by pretending to be someone else.
  - Insurance Fraud: Any act committed with the intent to falsely obtain payment from an insurer.
  - Investment Fraud: Purchasing or making sales decisions on the basis of false information, frequently resulting in losses (e.g., Ponzi scheme).
  - Medicare Fraud: Manufacturers bill Medicare for merchandise or service that was not needed or was not ordered. Includes:
    - Medical Equipment Fraud: Equipment manufacturers offer "free" products to individuals. Insurers are then charged for products that were not needed and/or may not have been delivered.

- "Rolling Lab" Schemes: Unnecessary and sometimes fake tests are given to individuals at health clubs, retirement homes, or shopping malls and billed to insurance companies or Medicare.
- Services Not Performed: Customers or providers bill insurers for services never rendered by changing bills or submitting fake ones.

- Mortgage Fraud: A broad variety of actions where the intent is to materially misrepresent information on a mortgage loan application, in order to obtain the loan and defraud a financial institution.
- Telemarketing Fraud: Offenders call elders at home, using high-pressure tactics to solicit money for fraudulent investments, insurance policies, travel packages, charities, and sweepstakes.

Internet PHISHING—Attempting to acquire sensitive information such as usernames, passwords, Social Security numbers, and credit card details by masquerading as a trustworthy entity in an electronic communication.

MATERIAL ABUSE—Material victimization of elders by both relatives and non-relatives. The misuse of an elder's money or property, including deception, diverting income, mismanagement of funds, and taking money or possessions against a person's will.

PREDATORY LENDING—Dishonest financial institution willfully misleads or deceives the consumer.

SCAM—A fraudulent or deceptive act or operation; an attempt to swindle a person by gaining his or her confidence. Common scams involving elders include:

- Lottery Scams or Sweepstakes: Scammers contact elderly victims online or through the mail and may even send checks or money orders to them. They then ask that some portion of the money be wired back.
- Repair and Contracting Scams: Use high pressure tactics to sell unneeded and overpriced contracts for "home improvements."
- Sweetheart Scams: Typically involves a stranger ingratiating himself or herself to an elderly person, winning the affections of that person, and then taking over the older person's estate or financial affairs.

UNDUE INFLUENCE—Takes place when one person uses his or her role and power to exploit the trust, dependency, or fear of another to gain psychological control over the weaker person's decision-making, usually for financial gain.

VIATICAL SETTLEMENTS—Sale or transfer of a life insurance death benefit by a terminally ill insured person to another person or company prior to the policyholder's death. Viatical scam operators urge people to liquidate their life insurance without explaining the implications or with the promise of high returns.

[1] Note: There is an inconsistent use of terms in both the primary and trade literature. When used in a legal context, the meaning of terms may differ from state to state.

Article 04. PROTECTION OF PROPERTY OF PERSONS UNDER DISABILITY AND MINORS

Sec. 13.26.165. Protective proceedings.

Upon petition and after notice and hearing in accordance with the provisions of AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.315, the court may appoint a conservator or make other protective order for cause as follows:

(1) appointment of a conservator or other protective order may be made in relation to the estate and affairs of a minor if the court determines that a minor owns money or property that requires management or protection which cannot otherwise be provided, has or may have business affairs which may be jeopardized or prevented by the status of being a minor, or that funds are needed for the minor's support and education and that protection is necessary or desirable to obtain or provide funds;

(2) appointment of a conservator or other protective order may be made in relation to the estate and affairs of a person if the court determines that

(A) the person is unable to manage the person's property and affairs effectively for reasons such as mental illness, mental deficiency, physical illness or disability, advanced age, chronic use of drugs, chronic intoxication, confinement, detention by a foreign power, or disappearance; and

(B) the person has property which will be wasted or dissipated unless proper management is provided, or that funds are needed for the support, care and welfare of the person or those entitled to be supported by the person and that protection is necessary or desirable to obtain or provide funds.

History -

(Sec. 1 ch 78 SLA 1972)

Decisions -

Assessment of need for conservatorship. - Since a special conservatorship cannot be reconciled with a requirement that a conservatorship candidate be found wholly incapable of making any rational decision, the need for a conservator must be assessed in the context of the person's incapacity and the specific matters for which management or protection may be required. In the Matter of S.H., 987 P.2d 735 (Alaska 1999).

Where doctors provided considerable evidence of a conservatorship candidate's inability to make litigation decisions, even assuming mental illness did not describe his condition, the incapacity documented to the superior court satisfied the statute, and the court did not commit clear error in accepting the evidence as clear and convincing proof of the candidate's inability to manage his property and affairs effectively. In the Matter of S.H., 987 P.2d 735 (Alaska 1999).

Evidence supported a protective appointment for the father under AS 13.26.165(2)(A) and (B), where substantial evidence demonstrated the father's inability to prioritize his finances, and other evidence, including the father's own testimony, reinforced the daughter's evidence that the father was in need of a conservator; the evidence presented supported the finding that the father abused alcohol and his capacity to perform routine activities could be relevant in evaluating whether appointment of a conservator was appropriate. Farmer v. Farmer, 230 P.3d 689 (Alaska 2010).

Appointment in workers' compensation proceeding. - Appointment of a guardian for an employee in a complex workers' compensation proceeding was appropriate where the employee suffered a serious brain injury that rendered him unable to understand a compromise and release agreement settling his claims with his employer. Gunter v. Kathy-O-Estates, 87 P.3d 65 (Alaska 2004).

Adequacy of findings. - Court did not fail to make the finding required where the evidence showed that the superior court adopted the findings of the probate master. This section does not require the court to find that the father's assets would be wasted unless he was ordered to vacate his home or that obtaining funds for his care mandated his removal. Farmer v. Farmer, 230 P.3d 689 (Alaska 2010).

Length of inability. - This statute does not express or imply a requirement of long term inability, but only specifies that property be in danger of waste or dissipation. In the Matter of S.H., 987 P.2d 735 (Alaska 1999).

Sec. 13.26.170. Protective proceedings; jurisdiction of affairs of protected persons.

Except as otherwise provided under AS 13.27.110, after the service of notice in a proceeding seeking the appointment of a conservator or other protective order and until termination of the proceeding, the court in which the petition is filed has exclusive jurisdiction to determine

(1) the need for a conservator or other protective order until the proceedings are terminated; and

(2) how the estate of the protected person that is subject to the laws of this state shall be managed, expended, or distributed to or for the use of the protected person or any of the person's dependents.

History -

(Sec. 1 ch 78 SLA 1972; am Sec. 21 ch 53 SLA 2008)

Amendment Notes -

The 2008 amendment, effective September 2, 2008, added "Except as otherwise provided under AS 13.27.110" at the beginning of the section, deleted the former paragraph (1) designation preceding "exclusive jurisdiction" and added the current paragraph (1) designation, deleted "Exclusive jurisdiction to determine" at the beginning of paragraph (2), deleted former paragraph (3), which related to concurrent jurisdiction, and made related and stylistic changes.

Sec. 13.26.175. Venue.

Venue for proceedings under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.315 is

(1) in the place in this state where the person to be protected resides whether or not a guardian has been appointed in another place; or

(2) if the person to be protected does not reside in this state, in any place where the person has property.

History -

(Sec. 1 ch 78 SLA 1972)

Sec. 13.26.180. Original petition for appointment or protective order.

(a) The person to be protected, any person who is interested in the estate, affairs or welfare of the person to be protected, including a parent, guardian, or custodian, or any person who would be adversely affected by lack of effective management of the property and affairs of the person to be protected, may petition for the appointment of a conservator or for other appropriate protective order.

(b) The petition must set out to the extent known, the interest of the petitioner; the name, age, residence and address of the person to be protected; the name and address of the person's guardian, if any; the name and address of the person's nearest relative known to the petitioner; a general statement of the person's property with an estimate of its value, including any compensation, insurance, pension or allowance to which the person is entitled; and the reason why appointment of a conservator or other protective order is necessary. If the appointment of a conservator is requested, the petition also must set out the name and address of the person whose appointment is sought and the basis of priority for appointment.

History -

(Sec. 1 ch 78 SLA 1972)

Sec. 13.26.185. Notice.

(a) On a petition for appointment of a conservator or other protective order, the person to be protected and the person's spouse or, if none, the person's parents, must be served personally, by certified mail, or by any other method authorized by court rule with notice of the proceedings at least 14 days before the date of hearing if they can be found within the state, or, if they cannot be found within the state, they must be given notice in accordance with AS 13.06.110. Waiver by the person to be protected is not effective unless the person to be protected attends the hearing or, unless minority is the reason for the proceeding, waiver is confirmed in an interview with the visitor.

(b) Notice of a petition for appointment of a conservator or other initial protective order, and of any subsequent hearing, must be given to any person who has filed a request for notice under AS 13.26.190 and to interested persons and other persons as the court may direct. Except as otherwise provided in (a) of this section, notice shall be given in accordance with AS 13.06.110.

History -

(Sec. 1 ch 78 SLA 1972; am Sec. 22 ch 53 SLA 2008)

Amendment Notes -

The 2008 amendment, effective September 2, 2008, inserted "by certified mail, or by any other method authorized by court rule" in the first sentence of subsection (a).

Sec. 13.26.190. Protective proceedings; request for notice; interested person.

Any interested person who desires to be notified before any order is made in a protective proceeding may file with the registrar a request for notice subsequent to payment of any fee required by statute or court rule. The clerk shall mail a copy of the demand to the conservator if one has been appointed. A request is not effective unless it contains a statement showing the interest of the person making it and the person's address, or that of the person's attorney, and is effective only as to matters occurring after the filing. Any governmental agency paying or planning to pay benefits to the person to be protected is an interested person in protective proceedings.

History -

(Sec. 1 ch 78 SLA 1972)

Sec. 13.26.195. Procedure concerning hearing and order on original petition.

(a) Upon receipt of a petition for appointment of a conservator or other protective order because of minority, the court shall set a date for hearing on the matters alleged in the petition. If, at any time in the proceeding, the court determines that the interests of the minor are or may be inadequately represented, it may appoint an attorney to represent the minor, giving consideration to the choice of the minor if 14 years of age or older. A lawyer appointed by the court to represent a minor has the powers and duties of a guardian ad litem.

(b) Upon receipt of a petition for appointment of a conservator or other protective order for reasons other than minority, the court shall set a date for hearing. Unless the person to be protected has counsel of the person's own choice, the court must appoint a lawyer to represent the person. If the alleged disability is mental illness, mental deficiency, physical illness or disability, advanced age, chronic use of drugs, or chronic intoxication, the court may direct that the person to be protected be examined by a physician designated by the court, preferably a physician who is not connected with any institution in which the person is a patient or is detained. The court may send a visitor to interview the person to be protected. The visitor may be a guardian ad litem or an officer or employee of the court.

(c) After hearing, upon finding that a basis for the appointment of a conservator or other protective order has been established, the court shall make an appointment or other appropriate protective order.

(d) The court shall investigate alternatives to a conservator and the use of a special conservator as provided in AS 13.26.205(c). A conservator may be appointed only if a less restrictive protective order or the services of a special conservator are not adequate to protect the estate of the protected person. The court shall, to the extent possible, consult with the protected person in determining what action should be taken.

History -

(Sec. 1 ch 78 SLA 1972; am Sec. 15 ch 83 SLA 1981; am Sec. 20 ch 84 SLA 2004)

Revisors Notes -

Reorganized in 1972.

Decisions -

Discretion of court. - Trial court did not abuse its discretion by mandating that the father vacate his home in light of the evidence that the father interfered with the daughter's efforts to sell the home. Evidence of the father's inability to attend to his financial obligations supported both the grant of authority to assist the father with his housing, and the post-sale management of the father's money. Farmer v. Farmer, 230 P.3d 689 (Alaska 2010).

Sec. 13.26.200. Permissible court orders.

The court has the following powers which may be exercised directly or through a conservator in respect to the estate and affairs of protected persons:

(1) while a petition for appointment of a conservator or other protective order is pending and after preliminary hearing and without notice to others, the court has power to preserve and apply the property of the person to be protected as may be required for the person's benefit or the benefit of the person's dependents;

(2) after hearing and upon determining that a basis for an appointment or other protective order exists with respect to a minor without other disability, the court has all those powers over the estate and affairs of the minor which are or might be necessary for the best interests of the minor, the minor's family and members of the minor's household;

(3) after hearing and upon determining that a basis for an appointment or other protective order exists with respect to a person for reasons other than minority, the court has, for the benefit of the person and members of the person's household, all the powers over the person's estate and affairs which the person could exercise if present and not under disability, except the power to make a will; these powers include, but are not limited to, power to make gifts, to convey or release contingent and expectant interests in property including marital property rights and any right of survivorship incident to joint tenancy or tenancy by the entirety, to exercise or release powers as trustee, personal representative, custodian for minors, conservator, or donee of a power of appointment, to enter into contracts, to create revocable or irrevocable trusts of property of the estate which may extend beyond the person's disability or life, to exercise options of the disabled person to purchase securities or other property, to exercise rights to elect options and change beneficiaries under insurance and annuity policies and to surrender the policies for their cash value, to exercise the right to an elective share in the estate of a deceased spouse, and to renounce any interest by testate or intestate succession or by inter vivos transfer;

(4) the court may exercise, or direct the exercise of its authority to exercise or release powers of appointment of which the protected person is donee, to renounce interests, to make gifts in trust or otherwise exceeding 20 percent of any year's income of the estate, or to change beneficiaries under insurance and annuity policies, only if satisfied, after notice and hearing, that it is in the best interests of the protected person, and that the protected person either is incapable of consenting or has consented to the proposed exercise of power;

(5) an order made pursuant to this section determining that a basis for appointment of a conservator or other protective order exists, has no effect on the capacity of the protected person.

History -

(Sec. 1 ch 78 SLA 1972)

Sec. 13.26.205. Protective arrangements and single transactions authorized.

(a) If it is established in a proper proceeding that a basis exists as described in AS 13.26.165 for affecting the property and affairs of a person the court, without appointing a conservator, may authorize, direct, or ratify any transaction necessary or desirable to achieve any security, service, or care arrangement meeting the foreseeable needs of the protected person. Protective arrangements include, but are not limited to, payment, delivery, deposit, or retention of funds or property, sale, mortgage, lease, or other transfer of property, entry into an annuity contract, a contract for life care, a deposit contract, a contract for training and education, or addition to or establishment of a suitable trust.

(b) When it has been established in a proper proceeding that a basis exists as described in AS 13.26.165 for affecting the property and affairs of a person the court, without appointing a conservator, may authorize, direct, or ratify any contract, trust, or other transaction relating to the protected person's financial affairs or involving the person's estate if the court determines that the transaction is in the best interests of the protected person.

(c) Before approving a protective arrangement or other transaction under this section, the court shall consider the interests of creditors and dependents of the protected person and, in view of the protected person's disability, whether the protected person needs the continuing protection of a conservator. If only certain powers need be given to the conservator or the services of a conservator are needed only for a limited number of transactions, a special conservator may be appointed. The court may appoint a special conservator to assist in the accomplishment of any protective arrangement or other transaction authorized under this section who shall have the authority conferred by the order and serve until discharged by order after report to the court of all matters carried out under the order of appointment.

History -

(Sec. 1 ch 78 SLA 1972; am Sec. 16 ch 83 SLA 1981)

Decisions -

Assessment of need for conservatorship. - Since a special conservatorship cannot be reconciled with a requirement that a conservatorship candidate be found wholly incapable of making any rational decision, the need for a conservator must be assessed in the context of the person's incapacity and the specific matters for which management or protection may be required. In the Matter of S.H., 987 P.2d 735 (Alaska 1999).

Sec. 13.26.210. Who may be appointed conservator; priorities.

(a) The court may appoint a competent person, including a private professional conservator, private professional full guardian under AS 08.26.020, or the public guardian, as the conservator of the estate of a protected person.

(b) The court may not appoint a person to be a conservator of a protected person if the person

(1) provides, or is likely to provide during the conservatorship, substantial services to the protected person in a professional or business capacity, other than in the capacity of conservator;

(2) is or is likely to become, during the conservatorship, a creditor of the protected person, other than in the capacity of conservator;

(3) is likely to have, during the conservatorship, interests that may conflict with those of the protected person; or

(4) is employed by a person who would be disqualified under (1) - (3) of this subsection.

(c) A person may be appointed as the conservator of a protected person even if (b) of this section applies if the person is the spouse, adult child, parent, or sibling of the protected person and if the court determines that the potential conflict of interest is not substantial and that the appointment would clearly be in the best interests of the protected person.

(d) Subject to (e) and (f) of this section, qualified persons have priority for appointment in the following order:

(1) an individual or qualified conservator nominated by the protected person if the protected person is 14 or more years of age and had, in the opinion of the court, sufficient mental capacity to make an informed choice;

(2) the spouse of the protected person;

(3) an adult child or a parent of the protected person;

(4) a relative of the protected person with whom the protected person has resided for more than six months during the year before the filing of the petition;

(5) a relative or friend of the protected person who has demonstrated a sincere and longstanding interest in the welfare of the protected person;

(6) a private professional conservator;

(7) the public guardian.

(e) When more than one person has equal priority under (d) of this section, the court shall select the person it considers to be the best qualified.

(f) When in the best interest of the protected person, a court may decline to appoint a person who has priority under (d) of this section as conservator of the protected person and may appoint as conservator a person who has a lower priority than another person or who does not have a priority. If the court appoints a person with a lower priority under (d) of this section than another person, the court shall make appropriate written findings related to why the best interests of the respondent require appointment of the person with a lower priority.

(g) In addition to any other requirement of this section, when appointing a relative or friend of the protected person as the conservator of the protected person, the court shall require that the proposed conservator complete one hour of mandatory education on the basics of conservatorship before the appointment or within 30 days after the appointment. If the person is appointed based on the person's agreement to complete the mandatory education and the person fails to complete the mandatory education within the 30 days, the court shall remove the conservator and appoint a successor.

History -

Amendment Notes -

The 2005 amendment, effective June 25, 2005, near the beginning of subsection (g) substituted "protected person" for "incapacitated person" and made a stylistic change.

The 2008 amendment, effective September 2, 2008, inserted "conservator, private professional full" and "under AS 08.26.020" in subsection (a), and added the last sentence of subsection (f).

Decisions -

Sec. 13.26.215. Bond.

(a) The court may require a conservator to furnish a bond conditioned upon faithful discharge of all duties of the trust according to law, with sureties as it shall specify. Unless otherwise directed, the bond shall be in the amount of the aggregate capital value of the property of the estate in the conservator's control plus one year's estimated income minus the value of securities deposited under arrangements requiring an order of the court for their removal and the value of any land which the fiduciary, by express limitation of power, lacks power to sell or convey without court authorization. The court in place of sureties on a bond, may accept other security for the performance of the bond, including a pledge of securities or a mortgage of land.

(b) If the public guardian is appointed as a conservator, the court may not require a bond under this section.

(c) If the court requires a conservator to provide a bond under this section and the conservator is financially unable to provide the bond, the court may order the cost of the bond to be paid from court funds.

Decisions -

Written bond contemplated. - A written bond with explicit provisions is contemplated by this section, a bond that would even be enforced in the absence of a provided penalty. White v. White Co., 4 Alaska 317 (1911).

Conservator liability. - Public conservator was not shielded by absolute quasi-judicial immunity in ward's suit claiming that conservator's employees had intentionally or negligently withheld funds. Trapp v. State, 53 P.3d 1128 (Alaska 2002).

Sec. 13.26.220. Terms and requirements of bonds.

(a) The following requirements and provisions apply to any bond required under AS 13.26.215:

(1) unless otherwise provided by the terms of the approved bond, sureties are jointly and severally liable with the conservator and with each other;

(2) by executing an approved bond of a conservator, the surety consents to the jurisdiction of the court which issued letters to the primary obligor in any proceeding pertaining to the fiduciary duties of the conservator and naming the surety as a party defendant; notice of any proceeding shall be delivered to the surety or mailed by registered or certified mail to the surety at the address as listed with the court where the bond is filed and to the surety's address as then known to the petitioner;

(3) on petition of a successor conservator or any interested person, a proceeding may be initiated against a surety for breach of the obligation of the bond of the conservator;

(4) the bond of the conservator is not void after the first recovery but may be proceeded against from time to time until the whole penalty is exhausted.

(b) A proceeding may not be commenced against the surety on any matter as to which an action or proceeding against the primary obligor is barred by adjudication or limitation.

Conservator liability. - Public conservator was not shielded by absolute quasi-judicial immunity in ward's suit claiming that conservator's employees had intentionally or negligently withheld funds. Trapp v. State, 53 P.3d 1128 (Alaska 2002).

Sec. 13.26.225. Acceptance of appointment; consent to jurisdiction; notice.

By accepting appointment, a conservator submits personally to the jurisdiction of the court in any proceeding relating to the estate that may be instituted by any interested person. Notice of any proceeding shall be delivered to the conservator, or mailed by registered or certified mail to the conservator at the address as listed in the petition for appointment or as thereafter reported to the court and to the conservator's address as then known to the petitioner.

Decisions -

Costs charged to estate. - Since, where the purpose of the conservatorship is to protect the client's property, it is logical that normally the cost of that conservatorship be charged against the estate thus preserved, the court erred in imposing the costs on the client's law firm. In the Matter of S.H., 987 P.2d 735 (Alaska 1999).

Sec. 13.26.235. Death, resignation, or removal of conservator.

The court may remove a conservator for good cause, upon notice and hearing, or accept the resignation of a conservator. After death, resignation, or removal, the court may appoint another conservator. A conservator so appointed succeeds to the title and powers of the conservator's predecessor.

History -

Decisions -

Grounds for removal. - This section provides simply that conservators may be removed "for good cause." It does not elaborate further and does not list specific grounds for removal. H.C.S. v. Cmty. Advocacy Project of Alaska, Inc., 42 P.3d 1093 (Alaska 2002).

Sec. 13.26.240. Petitions for orders subsequent to appointment.

(a) Any person interested in the welfare of a person for whom a conservator has been appointed may file a petition in the appointing court for an order

(1) requiring bond or security or additional bond or security, or reducing bond;

(2) requiring an accounting for the administration of the trust;

(3) directing distribution;

(4) removing the conservator and appointing a temporary or successor conservator; or

(5) granting other appropriate relief.

(b) A conservator may petition the appointing court for instructions concerning the fiduciary responsibility of the conservator.

(c) Upon notice and hearing, the court may give appropriate instructions or make any appropriate order.

Sec. 13.26.250. Inventory, implementation report, and records.

Within 90 days after distribution of the order of appointment, every conservator shall prepare and file with the appointing court a conservator implementation report and a complete inventory of the estate of the protected person together with an oath or affirmation that it is complete and accurate so far as the conservator is informed. The conservator shall provide a copy of it to the protected person if the protected person can be located, has attained the age of 14 years, and has sufficient mental capacity to understand these matters, and to any parent or guardian with whom the protected person resides. The conservator shall keep suitable records of the administration and exhibit them on request of any interested person.

History -

(Sec. 1 ch 78 SLA 1972; am Sec. 22 ch 84 SLA 2004)

Editors Notes -

Section 32(c), ch. 84, SLA 2004, provides that this section "as amended by sec. 22 of this Act, has the effect of changing Rule 17(e), Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure, by changing when a report is due and by adding additional material to be included in the report."

Sec. 13.26.255. Accounts.

A conservator shall submit a report to the court at least every year. In addition, a conservator shall account to the court for administration of the trust upon resignation or removal and at other times as the court may direct. On termination of the protected person's minority or disability, a conservator may account to the court or to the former protected person or the protected person's personal representative. Subject to appeal or vacation within the time permitted, an order, made upon notice and hearing, allowing an intermediate account of a conservator, adjudicates as to the conservator's liabilities concerning the matters considered in connection with it; and an order, made upon notice and hearing, allowing a final account, adjudicates as to all previously unsettled liabilities of the conservator to the protected person or the protected person's successors relating to the conservatorship. In connection with any account, the court may require a conservator to submit to a physical check of the estate in the conservator's control, to be made in any manner the court may specify.

Sec. 13.26.257. Visitor reports.

(a) The initial visitor report of a visitor appointed under AS 13.26.195(b) must include

(1) the results and analyses of medical and other tests and examinations performed that describe the proposed protected person's mental, emotional, physical, and educational condition, adaptive behavior, and social skills, and that specify the data on which the description is based;

(2) recommendations regarding the types and extent of assistance, if any, necessary to meet the essential requirements for managing the property and affairs of the proposed protected person;

(3) an evaluation of the proposed protected person's need for mental health treatment and whether there is a substantial probability that available treatment will significantly improve the proposed protected person's mental condition;

(4) an evaluation of the proposed protected person's need for educational or vocational assistance and whether the assistance can be made available to the protected person;

(5) an evaluation of the probability that the incapacity may significantly lessen, and the type of services or treatment that will facilitate improvement in the condition or skills of the proposed protected person;

(6) a list of the names and addresses of all individuals who examined, interviewed, or investigated the proposed protected person, and the names and addresses of all persons contacted in preparation of the visitor report;

(7) a summary of the information that

(A) was supplied by the person described in (6) of this subsection; and

(B) supports the conclusions of the visitor report;

(8) a description of the alternatives to conservatorship that were considered and not recommended and an explanation of why they are not feasible to meet the needs of the proposed protected person;

(9) a specification of the financial resources of the proposed protected person, the proposed protected person's entitlements to insurance benefits, and publicly operated or sponsored health, mental health, and welfare assistance that might be employed in the provision of services to the proposed protected person; and

(10) if conservatorship is recommended, a conservatorship outline that identifies

(A) potential conservators;

(B) the specific services necessary and available to protect the proposed protected person from serious damage to the proposed protected person's property and affairs;

(C) the means by which the services described in (B) of this paragraph may be financed;

(D) the specific, least restrictive authority needed by the conservator to provide the services described in (B) of this paragraph.

(b) In addition to any initial visitor report provided under (a) of this section, every third year, the court may appoint a visitor to file a report reviewing the conservatorship during the period since the last visitor report, if any.

(c) In addition to the reports under (a) and (b) of this section, at any time during a conservatorship, a court may appoint a visitor to file a report reviewing the conservatorship during the period since the last visitor report, if any.

(d) A visitor report provided under (b) or (c) of this section must include

(1) the name and address of the protected person and the conservator;

(2) the services being provided to the protected person by or through the conservator;

(3) the significant actions taken by the conservator during the reporting period in regard to the protected person;

(4) a financial accounting of the estate that has been subject to the possession or control of the conservator;

(5) a list of the number and nature of the contacts between the conservator and the protected person if the protected person does not reside with the conservator;

(6) any other information requested by the court or necessary or desirable in the opinion of the visitor.

Sec. 13.26.260. Conservators; title by appointment.

The appointment of a conservator vests in the conservator title as trustee to all property of the protected person, presently held or thereafter acquired, including title to any property theretofore held for the protected person by custodians or attorneys-in-fact. The appointment of a conservator is not a transfer or alienation within the meaning of general provisions of any federal or state statute or regulation, insurance policy, pension plan, contract, will or trust instrument, imposing restrictions upon or penalties for transfer or alienation by the protected person of any rights or interest, but this section does not restrict the ability of persons to make specific provision by contract or dispositive instrument relating to a conservator.

(Sec. 1 ch 78 SLA 1972)

Sec. 13.26.265. Recording of conservator's letters.

Letters of conservatorship are evidence of transfer of all assets of a protected person to the conservator. An order terminating a conservatorship is evidence of transfer of all assets of the estate from the conservator to the protected person, or the protected person's successors. Subject to the requirements of general statutes governing the recordation of documents of title to land or other property, letters of conservatorship, and orders terminating conservatorships, may be recorded to give record notice of title as between the conservator and the protected person.

Sec. 13.26.270. Sale, encumbrance, or transaction involving conflict of interest voidable.

Any sale or encumbrance to a conservator, the conservator's spouse, agent, or attorney, or any corporation or trust in which the conservator has a substantial beneficial interest, or any transaction which is affected by a substantial conflict of interest is voidable unless the transaction is approved by the court after notice to interested persons and others as directed by the court.

Sec. 13.26.275. Persons dealing with conservators; protection.

A person who in good faith either assists a conservator or deals with the conservator for value in any transaction other than those requiring a court order as provided in AS 13.26.200, is protected as if the conservator properly exercised the power. The fact that a person knowingly deals with a conservator does not alone require the person to inquire into the existence of a power or the propriety of its exercise, except that restrictions on powers of conservators which are endorsed on letters as provided in AS 13.26.290 are effective as to third persons. A person is not bound to see to the proper application of estate assets paid or delivered to a conservator. The protection here expressed extends to instances in which some procedural irregularity or jurisdictional defect occurred in proceedings leading to the issuance of letters. The protection here expressed is not by substitution for that provided by comparable provisions of the laws relating to commercial transactions and laws simplifying transfers of securities by fiduciaries.

Sec. 13.26.280. Powers of conservator in administration.

(a) A conservator has all of the powers conferred herein and any additional powers conferred by law on trustees in this state. In addition, a conservator of the estate of an unmarried minor, as to whom no one has parental rights, has the duties and powers of a guardian of a minor described in AS 13.26.070 until the minor attains the age of 18 or marries, but the parental rights so conferred on a conservator do not preclude appointment of a guardian as provided by AS 13.26.030 - 13.26.085.

(b) A conservator has power without court authorization or confirmation, to invest and reinvest funds of the estate as would a trustee.

(c) A conservator, acting reasonably in efforts to accomplish the purpose for which the conservator was appointed, may act, without court authorization or confirmation, to

(1) collect, hold and retain assets of the estate including land in another state, until, in the conservator's judgment, disposition of the assets should be made, and the assets may be retained even though they include an asset in which the conservator is personally interested;

(2) receive additions to the estate;

(3) continue or participate in the operation of any business or other enterprise;

(4) acquire an undivided interest in an estate asset in which the conservator, in any fiduciary capacity, holds an undivided interest;

(5) invest and reinvest estate assets in accordance with (b) of this section;

(6) deposit estate funds in a bank including a bank operated by the conservator;

(7) acquire or dispose of an estate asset including land in another state for cash or on credit, at public or private sale; and to manage, develop, improve, exchange, partition, change the character of, or abandon an estate asset;

(8) make ordinary or extraordinary repairs or alterations in buildings or other structures, to demolish any improvements, to raze existing or erect new party walls or buildings;

(9) subdivide, develop, or dedicate land to public use; to make or obtain the vacation of plats and adjust boundaries; to adjust differences in valuation on exchange or to partition by giving or receiving considerations; and to dedicate easements to public use without consideration;

(10) enter for any purpose into a lease as lessor or lessee with or without option to purchase or renew for a term within or extending beyond the term of the conservatorship;

(11) enter into a lease or arrangement for exploration and removal of minerals or other natural resources or enter into a pooling or unitization agreement;

(12) grant an option involving disposition of an estate asset, to take an option for the acquisition of any asset;

(13) vote a security, in person or by general or limited proxy;

(14) pay calls, assessments, and any other sums chargeable or accruing against or on account of securities;

(15) sell or exercise stock subscription or conversion rights; to consent, directly or through a committee or other agent, to the reorganization, consolidation, merger, dissolution, or liquidation of a corporation or other business enterprise;

(16) hold a security in the name of a nominee or in other form without disclosure of the conservatorship so that title to the security may pass by delivery, but the conservator is liable for any act of the nominee in connection with the stock so held;

(17) insure the assets of the estate against damage or loss, and the conservator against liability with respect to third persons;

(18) borrow money to be repaid from estate assets or otherwise; to advance money for the protection of the estate or the protected person, and for all expenses, losses, and liability sustained in the administration of the estate or because of the holding or ownership of any estate assets, and the conservator has a lien on the estate as against the protected person from advances so made;

(19) pay or contest any claim; to settle a claim by or against the estate or the protected person by compromise, arbitration, or otherwise; and to release, in whole or in part, any claim belonging to the estate to the extent that the claim is uncollectible;

(20) pay taxes, assessments, compensation of the conservator, and other expenses incurred in the collection, care, administration, and protection of the estate;

(21) allocate items of income or expense to either estate income or principal, as provided by law, including creation of reserves out of income for depreciation, obsolescence, or amortization, or for depletion in mineral or timber properties;

(22) pay any sum distributable to a protected person or the protected person's dependent, without liability to the conservator, by paying the sum to the distributee or by paying the sum for the use of the distributee either to the distributee's guardian or if none, to a relative or other person with custody of the distributee's person;

(23) employ persons, including attorneys, auditors, investment advisors, or agents, even though they are associated with the conservator to advise or assist the conservator in the performance of administrative duties; to act upon their recommendation without independent investigation; and instead of acting personally, to employ one or more agents to perform any act of administration, whether or not discretionary;

(24) prosecute or defend actions, claims or proceedings in any jurisdiction for the protection of estate assets and of the conservator in the performance of duties; and

(25) execute and deliver all instruments which will accomplish or facilitate the exercise of the powers vested in the conservator.

Authority to settle lawsuits. - This section gives a conservator authority to settle a lawsuit. In the Matter of S.H., 987 P.2d 735 (Alaska 1999).

Guardian appointed for an employee in a workers' compensation claim had the authority to dismiss the employee's action to overturn a compromise and release agreement settling the employee's workers' compensation claim with his employer. Gunter v. Kathy-O-Estates, 87 P.3d 65 (Alaska 2004).

Sec. 13.26.285. Distributive duties and powers of conservator.

(a) A conservator may expend or distribute income or principal of the estate without court authorization or confirmation for the support, education, care, or benefit of the protected person and the protected person's dependents in accordance with the following principles:

(1) the conservator is to consider recommendations relating to the appropriate standard of support, education, and benefit for the protected person made by a parent or guardian, if any; the conservator may not be surcharged for sums paid to persons or organizations actually furnishing support, education, or care to the protected person pursuant to the recommendations of a parent or guardian of the protected person unless the conservator knows that the parent or guardian is deriving personal financial benefit therefrom, including relief from any personal duty of support, or unless the recommendations are clearly not in the best interests of the protected person;

(2) the conservator is to expend or distribute sums reasonably necessary for the support, education, care, or benefit of the protected person with due regard to

(A) the size of the estate, the probable duration of the conservatorship, and the likelihood that the protected person, at some future time, may be fully able to manage the protected person's affairs and the estate which has been conserved;

(B) the accustomed standard of living of the protected person and members of the protected person's household;

(C) other funds or sources used for the support of the protected person;

(3) the conservator may expend funds of the estate for the support of persons legally dependent on the protected person and others who are members of the protected person's household who are unable to support themselves and who are in need of support;

(4) funds expended under this subsection may be paid by the conservator to any person, including the protected person to reimburse for expenditures which the conservator might have made, or in advance for services to be rendered to the protected person when it is reasonable to expect that they will be performed and where advance payments are customary or reasonably necessary under the circumstances.

(b) If the estate is ample to provide for the purposes implicit in the distributions authorized by (a) of this section, a conservator for a protected person other than a minor has power to make gifts to charity and other objects as the protected person might have been expected to make, in amounts which do not exceed in total for any year 20 percent of the income from the estate.

(c) When a minor who has not been adjudged disabled under AS 13.26.165(2) attains majority, the conservator, after meeting all prior claims and expenses of administration, shall pay over and distribute all funds and properties to the former protected person as soon as possible.

(d) When the conservator is satisfied that a protected person's disability (other than minority) has ceased, the conservator, after meeting all prior claims and expenses of administration, shall pay over and distribute all funds and properties to the formerly protected person as soon as possible.

(e) If a protected person dies, the conservator shall deliver to the court for safekeeping any will of the deceased protected person that may have come into the conservator's possession and inform the executor or a beneficiary named in the will that the will has been so delivered. Once a conservator knows that the protected person has died, the conservator may not exercise authority over the protected person's affairs and estate except to pay reasonable burial expenses and to preserve, account for, and transfer control of assets to a personal representative, a temporary property custodian appointed by the court, or a person authorized to take custody of personal property by affidavit under AS 13.16.680. If, after 40 days from the death of the protected person, no other person has been appointed personal representative and no application or petition for appointment is before the court, the conservator may apply to exercise the powers and duties of a personal representative in order to proceed with administering and distributing the decedent's estate without additional or further appointment. Upon application for an order granting the powers of a personal representative to a conservator, after notice to any person demanding notice under AS 13.16.070 and to any person nominated executor in any will of which the applicant is aware, the court may order the conferral of the power upon determining that there is no objection, and endorse the letters of the conservator to note that the formerly protected person is deceased and that the conservator has acquired all of the powers and duties of a personal representative. The making and entry of an order under this section has the effect of an order of appointment of a personal representative as provided in AS 13.16.115 and 13.16.245 - 13.16.655 except that estate in the name of the conservator, after administration, may be distributed to the decedent's successors without prior retransfer to the conservator as personal representative.

Sec. 13.26.290. Enlargement or limitation of powers of conservator.

Subject to the restrictions in AS 13.26.200(4), the court may confer on a conservator at the time of appointment or later, in addition to the powers conferred by AS 13.26.280 and 13.26.285, any power which the court itself could exercise under AS 13.26.200(2) and (3). The court may, at the time of appointment or later, limit the powers of a conservator otherwise conferred by AS 13.26.280 and 13.26.285 or previously conferred by the court, and may at any time relieve the conservator of any limitation. If the court limits any power conferred on the conservator by AS 13.26.280 and 13.26.285, the limitation shall be endorsed upon the letters of appointment.

In investing the estate, and in selecting assets of the estate for distribution under AS 13.26.285(a) and (b), in utilizing powers of revocation or withdrawal available for the support of the protected person, and exercisable by the conservator or the court, the conservator and the court should take into account any known estate plan of the protected person, including a will, any revocable trust of which the protected person is settlor, and any contract, transfer, or joint ownership arrangement with provisions for payment or transfer of benefits or interests at death to another or others which the protected person may have originated. The conservator may examine the will of the protected person.

Sec. 13.26.300. Claims against estate and protected person; enforcement.

(a) Subject to AS 13.26.285(e), a conservator shall pay from the estate all just claims against the estate and against the protected person arising before or after the conservatorship was established upon their presentation and allowance. A claim is considered presented on the first to occur of receipt of the written statement of claim by the conservator or the filing of the claim with the court. A presented claim is allowed if it is not disallowed by written statement mailed by the conservator to the claimant within 60 days after its presentation. The presentation of a claim tolls any statute of limitations relating to the claim until 30 days after its disallowance. A claim may be presented by either of the following methods:

(1) the claimant may deliver or mail to the conservator a written statement of the claim indicating its basis, the name and address of the claimant, and the amount claimed;

(2) the claimant may file a written statement of the claim, in the form prescribed by rule, with the clerk of the court and deliver or mail a copy of the statement to the conservator.

(b) A claimant whose claim has not been paid may petition the court for determination of the claim at any time before it is barred by the applicable statute of limitation, and, upon due proof, procure an order for its allowance and payment from the estate. If a proceeding is pending against a protected person at the time of appointment of a conservator or is initiated against the protected person thereafter, the moving party must give notice of the proceeding to the conservator if the outcome is to constitute a claim against the estate.

(c) If it appears that the estate in a conservatorship is likely to be exhausted before all existing claims are paid, preference is to be given to prior claims for the care, maintenance, and education of the protected person or the protected person's dependents and existing claims for expenses of administration.

The 2008 amendment, effective September 2, 2008, added "Subject to AS 13.26.285(e)" at the beginning of subsection (a), and deleted "but before the protected person dies" following "was established" in the first sentence of that subsection.

Sec. 13.26.305. Individual liability of conservator.

(a) Unless otherwise provided in the contract, a conservator is not individually liable on a contract properly entered into in a fiduciary capacity in the course of administration of the estate unless the conservator fails to reveal the representative capacity and identify the estate in the contract.

(b) The conservator is individually liable for obligations arising from ownership or control of property of the estate or for torts committed in the course of administration of the estate only if personally at fault.

(c) Claims based on contracts entered into by a conservator in a fiduciary capacity, on obligations arising from ownership or control of the estate, or on torts committed in the course of administration of the estate may be asserted against the estate by proceeding against the conservator in the fiduciary capacity, whether or not the conservator is individually liable for them.

(d) Any question of liability between the estate and the conservator individually may be determined in a proceeding for accounting, surcharge, or indemnification, or other appropriate proceeding or action.

Sec. 13.26.310. Termination of proceeding.

The protected person, the protected person's personal representative, the conservator, or any other interested person may petition the court to terminate the conservatorship. A protected person seeking termination is entitled to the same rights and procedures as in an original proceeding for a protective order. The court, upon determining after notice and hearing that the minority or disability of the protected person has ceased, may terminate the conservatorship. Upon termination, title to assets of the estate passes to the former protected person or to the person's successors subject to provision in the order for expenses of administration or to conveyances from the conservator to the former protected person or the person's successors, to evidence the transfer.

Sec. 47.24.010. Reports of harm.

(a) Except as provided in (e) and (f) of this section, the following persons who, in the performance of their professional duties, have reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult suffers from abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect shall, not later than 24 hours after first having cause for the belief, report the belief to the department's central information and referral service for vulnerable adults:

(1) a physician or other licensed health care provider;

(2) a mental health professional as defined in AS 47.30.915(11) and including a marital and family therapist licensed under AS 08.63;

(3) a pharmacist;

(4) an administrator of a nursing home, residential care or health care facility;

(5) a guardian or conservator;

(6) a police officer;

(7) a village public safety officer;

(8) a village health aide;

(9) a social worker;

(10) a member of the clergy;

(11) a staff employee of a project funded by the Department of Administration for the provision of services to older Alaskans, the Department of Health and Social Services, or the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault;

(12) an employee of a personal care or home health aide program;

(13) an emergency medical technician or a mobile intensive care paramedic;

(14) a caregiver of the vulnerable adult;

(15) a certified nurse aide.

(b) A report made under this section may include the name and address of the reporting person and must include

(1) the name and address of the vulnerable adult;

(2) information relating to the nature and extent of the abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect;

(3) other information that the reporting person believes might be helpful in an investigation of the case or in providing protection for the vulnerable adult.

(c) The department or its designees shall report to the Department of Law any person required by (a) of this section to report who fails to comply with this section. A person listed in (a) of this section who, because of the circumstances, should have had reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult suffers from abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect but who knowingly fails to comply with this section is guilty of a class B misdemeanor. If a person convicted under this section is a member of a profession or occupation that is licensed, certified, or regulated by the state, the court shall notify the appropriate licensing, certifying, or regulating entity of the conviction.

(d) This section does not prohibit a person listed in (a) of this section, or any other person, from reporting cases of abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult that have come to the person's attention.

(e) If a person making a report under this section believes that immediate action is necessary to protect the vulnerable adult from imminent risk of serious physical harm due to abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect and the reporting person cannot immediately contact the department's central information and referral service for vulnerable adults, the reporting person may make the report to a police officer or a village public safety officer. The police officer or village public safety officer shall take immediate action to protect the vulnerable adult and shall, at the earliest opportunity, notify the department. A person may not bring an action for damages against a police officer, village public safety officer, the state, or a political subdivision of the state based on a decision under this subsection to take or not to take immediate action to protect a vulnerable adult. If a decision is made under this subsection to take immediate action to protect a vulnerable adult, a person may not bring an action for damages based on the protective actions taken unless the protective actions were performed with gross negligence or intentional misconduct; damages awarded in the action may include only direct economic compensatory damages for personal injury.

(f) A person listed in (a) of this section who reports to the long term care ombudsman under AS 47.62.015, or to the Department of Health and Social Services, that a vulnerable adult has been exploited, abused, or neglected in an out-of-home care facility is considered to have met the duty to report under (a) of this section.

(a) If a report received under AS 47.24.010 regards the abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult who is 60 years of age or older that is alleged to have been committed by or to have resulted from the negligence of the staff or a volunteer of an out-of-home care facility, including a facility licensed under AS 47.32, in which the vulnerable adult resides, the department shall transfer the report for investigation to the long term care ombudsman under AS 47.62.015.

(b) The department shall investigate a report received under AS 47.24.010 regarding the abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult who is less than 60 years of age that is alleged to have been committed by or to have resulted from the negligence of the staff or a volunteer of an out-of-home care facility in which the vulnerable adult resides.

(c) Upon receipt of a report under (a) or (b) of this section, the long term care ombudsman and the department shall

(1) conduct an investigation as appropriate under AS 47.62.015 or this title, respectively;

(2) coordinate and cooperate in their responses to and investigations of the report if their jurisdictions overlap;

(3) provide the results of their actions or investigations to the central information and referral service of the department within 60 days after the receipt of the report.

(d) If the long term care ombudsman receives directly a report regarding the abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult in an out-of-home care facility, the ombudsman shall provide the report, and the results of the ombudsman's actions or investigations regarding the report, to the central information and referral service of the department. The department may investigate the report as described in AS 47.24.015 if the department determines that action is appropriate.

(e) After the results of an investigation by the long term care ombudsman are provided to the department under (c) or (d) of this section, the department may make a final determination as described in AS 47.24.015(b), based on the investigation results provided, regarding services to be offered to the vulnerable adult.

(f) If an investigation conducted by an agency under this section shows reasonable cause to believe that a certified nurse aide has committed abuse, neglect, or misappropriation of property, the agency shall report the matter to the Board of Nursing.

Amendment Notes -

The 2003 amendment, effective July 1, 2003, rewrote subsections (a)-(e) to reflect the transfer of functions to the Department of Health and Social Services.

The 2005 amendment, effective July 2, 2005, updated a section reference in subsection (a).

Decisions -

No private right of action. - Nothing in this section or in AS 47.24.015(a) creates a private right of action for elder abuse. Superior court did not err in granting summary judgment with respect to the prisoner's claim for failure to report elder abuse. Hymes v. DeRamus, 222 P.3d 874 (Alaska 2010).

Sec. 47.24.015. Action on reports.

(a) Upon the department's receipt of a report under AS 47.24.010 that is not transferred under AS 47.24.013, the department, or its designee, shall promptly initiate an investigation to determine whether the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report suffers from abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect. The department, or its designee, shall conduct a face-to-face interview with the subject of the report unless that person is unconscious or the department, or its designee, has determined that a face-to-face interview could further endanger the vulnerable adult.

(b) After the department conducts an investigation under (a) of this section, the department shall prepare a written report of the investigation, including findings, recommendations, and a determination of whether and what kind of supportive or protective services are needed by and are to be offered to the vulnerable adult. After the department's designee conducts an investigation under (a) of this section, the designee shall prepare a written report of the investigation, including findings, recommendations, and a proposed determination of whether and what kind of supportive or protective services are to be offered to the vulnerable adult. The department shall prepare, and attach to the designee's report, a final determination regarding services to be offered to the vulnerable adult.

(c) The department, or its designee, shall immediately terminate an investigation under this section upon the request of the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report made under AS 47.24.010. However, the department or its designee may not terminate the investigation if the investigation to that point has resulted in probable cause to believe that the vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and the request is made personally by the vulnerable adult and the vulnerable adult is not competent to make the request on the adult's own behalf, or the request is made by the vulnerable adult's guardian, attorney-in-fact, or surrogate decision maker and that person is the alleged perpetrator of the abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult and is being investigated under this chapter. If the department has probable cause to believe that the vulnerable adult is in need of protective services,

(1) the department may petition the court as set out in AS 47.24.019;

(2) the department or its designee may refer the report made to the department under AS 47.24.010 to a police officer for criminal investigation; or

(3) in cases involving fraud, the department or its designee may refer the report made to the department under AS 47.24.010 to the office of public advocacy for investigation; in this paragraph, "fraud" has the meaning given in AS 44.21.415.

(d) Upon request, a person who made a report to the department under AS 47.24.010 regarding a vulnerable adult shall be notified of the status of the investigation conducted under (a) of this section regarding that vulnerable adult.

(e) A person may not bring an action for damages based on a decision under this section to offer or not to offer protective services to a vulnerable adult.

(f) A person may not bring an action for damages based on the provision of protective services under this section unless the action is based on gross negligence or intentional misconduct. The damages awarded in an action under this section may include only direct economic compensatory damages for personal injury.

(g) If an investigation under this section shows reasonable cause to believe that a certified nurse aide has committed abuse, neglect, or misappropriation of property, the department shall report the matter to the Board of Nursing.

Amendment Notes -

The 2006 amendment, effective September 13, 2006, added paragraph (c)(3), and made related changes.

Decisions -

No private right of action. - Nothing in AS 47.24.013(a) or this section creates a private right of action for elder abuse. Superior court did not err in granting summary judgment with respect to the prisoner's claim for failure to report elder abuse. Hymes v. DeRamus, 222 P.3d 874 (Alaska 2010).

Sec. 47.24.016. Surrogate decision makers for vulnerable adults.

(a) If the department determines under AS 47.24.015 that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services, but the department cannot obtain the vulnerable adult's consent to receive the services because the vulnerable adult is unable to consent or lacks decision making capacity, and has no guardian or attorney-in-fact to serve as the vulnerable adult's surrogate decision maker, the department may select from the following list, in the order of priority listed, an individual who is willing to be the vulnerable adult's surrogate decision maker for the purpose of deciding whether to consent to the vulnerable adult's receipt of protective services:

(1) the vulnerable adult's spouse, unless

(A) the vulnerable adult and the spouse have separate domiciles; or

(B) the vulnerable adult or the spouse have initiated divorce or dissolution proceedings;

(2) an individual who lives with the vulnerable adult in a spousal relationship or as a domestic partner and who is 18 years of age or older;

(3) a son or daughter of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older;

(4) a parent of the vulnerable adult;

(5) a brother or sister of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older; or

(6) a close friend or relative of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older.

(b) An individual from the list in (a) of this section may not be selected as a surrogate decision maker if

(1) the department determines that individual does not possess decision making capacity; or

(2) there are allegations that individual is a perpetrator of the abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult.

(c) If the department intends to select a surrogate decision maker from a priority level in the list in (a) of this section and there is more than one individual at that priority level who is willing to be the surrogate decision maker, those individuals

(1) may select from amongst themselves, by majority vote, an individual to serve as the surrogate decision maker; or

(2) as a group may serve as the surrogate decision maker and reach decisions by consensus.

(d) The department may not continue to provide protective services to a vulnerable adult based on the consent of a surrogate decision maker serving under this section if the department determines that the vulnerable adult has become able to consent or has regained decision making capacity since the surrogate's consent was given. The department may continue protective services to a vulnerable adult who has become able to consent or has regained decision making capacity only if the vulnerable adult consents.

(Sec. 8 ch 129 SLA 1994)

Decisions -

Husband not entitled to automatically assume the role of his wife's surrogate decision maker. - Dismissal of the husband's action alleging that he suffered emotional distress caused by the medical center's release of his wife to her daughter was appropriate, in part because a spouse was not entitled to automatically assume the role of a surrogate decision maker when the health department had not sought the spouse's consent for services. Even if the husband had been acting as his wife's agent, he would have formed a contract between the wife and the medical center that the wife could have enforced, not the husband. Clemensen v. Providence Alaska Med. Ctr., 203 P.3d 1148 (Alaska 2009).

Sec. 47.24.017. Delivery of protective services for vulnerable adults.

(a) If the department determines under AS 47.24.015 that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and either the vulnerable adult, the vulnerable adult's guardian or attorney-in-fact, or a surrogate decision maker selected under AS 47.24.016 consents to receipt of the protective services, and to the extent that resources are available, the department shall ensure that the protective services for the vulnerable adult are provided by the department or its designee within 10 working days after the department received the report under AS 47.24.010 regarding the abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of the vulnerable adult. However, if circumstances beyond the control of the department or the department's designee make it impossible to provide the protective services within the 10 working days, the department shall ensure that the services are provided as soon as possible after that time.

(b) Notwithstanding (a) of this section, if the department determines that an emergency situation exists that necessitates provision of protective services to a vulnerable adult, the department may provide the necessary protective services in a manner determined by the department to be the most appropriate in light of the emergency situation, regardless of whether the vulnerable adult or any other person has consented to receipt of the services.

(c) To the extent practicable, protective services provided under this section shall be delivered in a culturally relevant manner that protects the vulnerable adult's right to the least restrictive environment and maximizes that person's own decision making capabilities.

(d) If the protective services under this section include the placement of a vulnerable adult in an assisted living home at the state's expense, the minimum daily reimbursement rate to the assisted living home for the vulnerable adult is $70. The department may, under its regulations, provide for a daily rate higher than $70 if the additional care provided to the vulnerable adult in the assisted living home justifies the additional reimbursement. In this subsection, "assisted living home" means an assisted living home licensed under AS 47.32.

Amendment Notes -

The 2005 amendment, effective July 2, 2005, updated a section reference in subsection (d).

Sec. 47.24.019. Petitioning court for certain protective services.

(a) If, after investigation under AS 47.24.015, the department has reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and is an incapacitated person, the department may petition the court under AS 13.26 for appointment of a guardian or temporary guardian, or for a change of guardian, for the vulnerable adult for the purpose of deciding whether to consent to the receipt of protective services for the vulnerable adult.

(b) If, after an investigation under AS 47.24.015, the department has reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult is mentally ill and as a result either is likely to cause serious harm to self or others or is gravely disabled, the department may petition the court under AS 47.30.700 to initiate an involuntary commitment proceeding.

(c) If a vulnerable adult who has consented to receive protective services, or on whose behalf consent to receive protective services has been given, is prevented by a caregiver, guardian, attorney-in-fact, or surrogate decision maker from receiving those services, the department may petition the superior court for an injunction restraining the caregiver, guardian, attorney-in-fact, or surrogate decision maker from interfering with the provision of protective services to the vulnerable adult.

(a) Investigation reports and reports of the abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult filed under this chapter are confidential and are not subject to public inspection and copying under AS 40.25.110 - 40.25.125. However, in accordance with this chapter and regulations adopted under this chapter, investigation reports may be used by appropriate agencies or individuals inside and outside the state, in connection with investigations or judicial proceedings involving the abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult.

(b) The department shall disclose a report of the abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult if the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report or the vulnerable adult's guardian, attorney-in-fact, or surrogate decision maker consents in writing. The department may not disclose a report of the abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult to the vulnerable adult's guardian, attorney-in-fact, or surrogate decision maker if that person is an alleged perpetrator of the abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult and is being investigated under this chapter. The department shall, upon request, disclose the number of verified reports of abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult that occurred at an institution that provides care for vulnerable adults or that were the result of actions or inactions of a public home care provider.

Sec. 47.24.120. Immunity from liability; retaliation prohibited.

(a) A person who in good faith makes a report under AS 47.24.010, regardless of whether the person is required to do so, is immune from civil or criminal liability that might otherwise be incurred or imposed for making the report.

(b) An employer or supervisor of a person who in good faith makes a report under AS 47.24.010 may not discharge, demote, transfer, reduce pay or benefits or work privileges of, prepare a negative work performance evaluation of, or take other detrimental action against the person because the person made the report. The person making the report may bring a civil action for compensatory and punitive damages against an employer or supervisor who violates this subsection. In the civil action there is a rebuttable presumption that the detrimental action by the employer or supervisor was retaliatory if it was taken within 90 days after the report was made.

Sec. 47.24.130. Treatment through spiritual means.

This chapter may not be construed to mean that a person is abused, neglected, self-neglected, vulnerable, unable to consent, abandoned, exploited, or in need of emergency or protective services for the sole reason that the person relies on or is being furnished treatment by spiritual means through prayer alone in accordance with the tenets and practices of a church or religious denomination of which the person is a member or adherent, provided that the person consents to the treatment through spiritual means only and the treatment is administered by an accredited practitioner of the church or religious denomination. In this section, "church or religious denomination" has the meaning given to "religious organization" in AS 05.15.690.

History -

(Sec. 13 ch 129 SLA 1994)

Revisors Notes -

In 1999, "AS 05.15.690" was substituted for "AS 05.15.210" to reflect the 1994 renumbering of AS 05.15.210.

Sec. 47.24.900. Definitions.

In this chapter,

(1) "abandonment" means desertion of a vulnerable adult by a caregiver;

(2) "abuse" means

(A) the wilful, intentional, or reckless nonaccidental, and nontherapeutic infliction of physical pain, injury, or mental distress; or

(B) sexual assault under AS 11.41.410 or 11.41.420;

(3) "caregiver" means

(A) a person who is providing care to a vulnerable adult as a result of a family relationship, or who has assumed responsibility for the care of a vulnerable adult voluntarily, by contract, or by court order; or

(B) an employee of an out-of-home care facility who provides care to one or more vulnerable adults;

(4) "decision making capacity" means the ability to understand and appreciate the nature and consequences of a decision and the ability to reach and communicate an informed decision;

(5) "department" means the Department of Health and Social Services;

(6) "designee" means another state agency or a community-based program, individual, or provider of supportive services that has been licensed, or authorized by agreement with the department, to provide one or more services to vulnerable adults;

(7) "exploitation" means unjust or improper use of another person or another person's resources for one's own profit or advantage;

(8) "incapacitated person" means a person whose ability to receive and evaluate information or to communicate decisions is impaired to the extent that the person lacks the ability to provide or arrange for the essential requirements for the person's physical health or safety without court-ordered assistance;

(9) "neglect" means the intentional failure by a caregiver to provide essential care or services necessary to maintain the physical and mental health of the vulnerable adult;

(10) "police officer" has the meaning given in AS 18.65.290;

(11) "protective services" means services that are intended to prevent or alleviate harm resulting from abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect and that are provided to a vulnerable adult in need of protection; "protective services" includes protective placement;

(12) "public home care provider" has the meaning given in AS 47.05.017(c);

(13) "self-neglect" means an act or omission by a vulnerable adult that results, or could result in the deprivation of essential services necessary to maintain minimal mental, emotional, or physical health and safety;

(14) "supportive services" means the range of services delivered by public and private organizations and individuals that assist the elderly and vulnerable adults with their social, health, educational, recreational, transportation, housing, nutritional, financial, legal, or other needs;

(15) "unable to consent" means refusal to, or inability to, accept services because

(A) the person is an incapacitated person or apparently is an incapacitated person;

(B) of coercion by or fear of reprisal from the perpetrator of abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect;

(C) of dependency on the perpetrator of abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect for services, care, or support; or

(D) of an inability to perceive that refusal to consent results in an imminent and substantial danger of death or irreparable harm to self or others;

(16) "vulnerable adult" means a person 18 years of age or older who, because of physical or mental impairment, is unable to meet the person's own needs or to seek help without assistance.

History -

(Sec. 13 ch 129 SLA 1994; am E.O. No. 108 Sec. 15 (2003))

Revisors Notes -

Paragraph (12) was enacted as AS 47.24.100(13). Renumbered in 1994.

Amendment Notes -

The 2003 amendment, effective July 1, 2003, substituted "Department of Health and Social Services" for "Department of Administration" in the definition of "department."

CS FOR SENATE BILL NO. 86(JUD)

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

TWENTY-SEVENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

BY THE SENATE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

Offered:
Referred:

Sponsor(s): SENATE RULES COMMITTEE BY REQUEST OF THE GOVERNOR

A BILL

FOR AN ACT ENTITLED

"An Act relating to the protection of property of persons under disability and minors; relating to the crime of violating a protective order concerning certain vulnerable persons; relating to aggravating factors at sentencing for offenses concerning a victim 65 years or older; relating to the protection of vulnerable adults; making conforming amendments; amending Rules 12(h) and 45(a), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 77, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 17, Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure, and Rule 9, Alaska Rules of Administration; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

 Section 1. AS 08.29.200(b) is amended to read:

(b) Notwithstanding (a) of this section, a person licensed under this chapter shall report incidents of

(1) child abuse or neglect as required by AS 47.17;

(2) harm or assaults suffered by a vulnerable [AN ELDERLY

PERSON OR DISABLED] adult as required by AS 47.24.

 Sec. 2. AS 08.63.200(b) is amended to read:

(b) Notwithstanding (a) of this section, a person licensed under this chapter shall report incidents of

(1) child abuse or neglect as required by AS 47.17;

(2) harm or assaults suffered by a vulnerable [AN ELDERLY PERSON OR DISABLED] adult as required by AS 47.24.

 Sec. 3. AS 11.56.740(a) is amended to read:

(a) A person commits the crime of violating a protective order if the person is subject to a protective order

(1) issued or filed under AS 18.66 and containing a provision listed in AS 18.66.100(c)(1) - (7) and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act with reckless disregard that the act violates or would violate a provision of the protective order; [OR]

(2) issued under AS 18.65.850, 18.65.855, or 18.65.860 and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act that violates or would violate a provision listed in AS 18.65.850(c)(1) - (3); or

(3) issued under AS 13.26.207 - 13.26.209 and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act with reckless disregard that the act violates or would violate a provision of the protective order.

 Sec. 4. AS 11.56.740(c) is amended to read:

(c) In this section, "protective order" means an order issued or filed under AS 13.26.207 - 13.26.209, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.870, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180.

 Sec. 5. AS 12.55.155(c) is amended by adding a new paragraph to read:

(35) the defendant knowingly directed the conduct constituting the offense at a victim because that person was 65 years of age or older.

 Sec. 6. AS 13.26.165 is amended to read:

Sec. 13.26.165. Protective proceedings. Upon petition and after notice and hearing in accordance with the provisions of AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.315, the court may appoint a conservator or issue another [MAKE OTHER] protective order for cause as follows:

(1) appointment of a conservator or other protective order may be made in relation to the estate and affairs of a minor if the court determines that

(A) a minor owns money or property that requires management or protection that [WHICH] cannot otherwise be provided;

(B) the minor [,] has or may have business affairs that [WHICH] may be jeopardized or prevented by the status of being a minor; [,] or

(C) [THAT] funds are needed for the minor's support and education and [THAT] protection is necessary or desirable to obtain or provide funds;

(2) appointment of a conservator or other protective order may be made in relation to the estate and affairs of a person if the court determines that

(A) the person is unable to manage the person's property and affairs effectively for reasons such as mental illness, mental deficiency, physical illness or disability, advanced age, chronic use of drugs, chronic intoxication, fraud, confinement, detention by a foreign power, or disappearance; and

(B) the person has property that [WHICH] will be wasted or dissipated unless proper management is provided, or that funds are needed for the support, care, and welfare of the person or those entitled to be supported by the person and [THAT] protection is necessary or desirable to obtain or provide funds.

 Sec. 7. AS 13.26.180(a) is amended to read:

(a) The person to be protected, a person's attorney or other legal representative, any person who is interested in the estate, affairs, or welfare of the person to be protected, including a parent, guardian, [OR] custodian, or caregiver, the Department of Health and Social Services, or any person who would be adversely affected by lack of effective management of the property and affairs of the person to be protected, may petition for the appointment of a conservator or for other appropriate protective order.

 Sec. 8. AS 13.26.180 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(c) The petition may include a request for temporary conservatorship as provided in AS 13.26.206 if it appears that the respondent's property is likely to be wasted or dissipated during the pendency of the conservatorship proceeding. A request for temporary conservatorship must specify the facts that cause the petitioner to believe that a temporary conservatorship is necessary.

* Sec. 9. AS 13.26.185 is amended by adding a subsection to read:

(c) This section does not apply to a petition or order for an ex parte protective order filed under AS 13.26.207 or a temporary protective order filed under AS 13.26.208.

* Sec. 10. AS 13.26 is amended by adding new sections to read:

Sec. 13.26.206. Temporary conservators. (a) If, during the pendency of an initial petition for conservatorship, it appears that the respondent is in need of a protective order to protect the respondent against waste or dissipation of funds or property, or to obtain funds that are needed for the immediate support, care, and welfare of the respondent or persons entitled to be supported by the respondent, and the respondent is not capable of protecting the respondent's funds or property or obtaining the funds that are needed to support the respondent or persons whom the respondent is required to support, the petitioner may request the appointment of a temporary conservator to authorize the protection or to obtain the necessary funds. The request must state the reasons and factual basis for the request. The petitioner shall immediately file the request with the court and serve copies on the respondent and the respondent's attorney and other persons as ordered by the court. The court shall appoint an attorney for a respondent who is unrepresented to be at the hearing and conduct a hearing within 72 hours after the filing.

(b) If the court determines that a temporary conservator should be appointed, it shall make the appointment and grant to the temporary conservator only the authority that is least restrictive upon the liberty of the respondent and that enables the temporary conservator to provide the protection or authority necessary to protect the respondent from waste or dissipation of funds or property or to obtain the funds necessary for support.

(c) The temporary conservatorship expires at the time of the appointment of a full or partial conservator or on the dismissal of the petition for conservatorship.

Sec. 13.26.207. Ex parte protective orders. (a) A person who is allowed to file a petition for a protective order under AS 13.26.180(a) may file a petition for an ex parte protective order against a person other than the protected person. A petition filed on behalf of a protected person by a person other than the protected person must be accompanied by proof of service of the petition on the protected person or the person's attorney unless service would cause an immediate threat of harm to the best interests of the protected person and the petition includes a written explanation of the harm. If the court finds that the petition establishes probable cause that the respondent is financially defrauding the petitioner or a person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition and that, because of the fraud, there has been or is an immediate threat of a waste or dissipation of the proposed protected person's funds or other property, the court shall ex parte and without notice to the respondent issue a protective order. The petitioner shall certify to the court in writing any effort that the petitioner made to provide notice to the respondent.

(b) An ex parte protective order under this section may

(1) grant any protection described in AS 13.26.200;

(2) supersede an existing power of attorney;

(3) prohibit the respondent from having any direct or indirect contact with the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition; and

(4) prohibit the respondent from taking any act with respect to the funds or other property of the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition.

(c) An ex parte protective order expires 20 days after it is issued, unless dissolved earlier by the court at the request of the petitioner or respondent and after notice and, if requested, a hearing, or on the earlier appointment of a temporary or permanent conservator.

Sec. 13.26.208. Temporary protective orders; conversions. On application filed with the court before the expiration of a 20-day ex parte protective order issued under AS 13.26.207, the court shall schedule a hearing on whether to convert the protective order to a temporary order effective for up to six months. The court shall provide to the protected person and the respondent at least 10 days' notice of the hearing and the respondent's right to appear and be heard. If the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the respondent has committed fraud against the petitioner or the person for whose benefit the petition was filed, regardless of whether the respondent appears at the hearing, the court may convert the ex parte protective order to a temporary protective order effective for up to six months.

Sec. 13.26.209. Protective orders; modification; third-party compliance; forms; fees. (a) The petitioner, respondent, or protected person, if the protected person is a vulnerable adult, may request modification of a protective order issued under AS 13.26.207 - 13.26.209. Except as provided in (b) of this section, if a request is made for modification of

(1) an ex parte protective order issued under AS 13.26.207, the court shall schedule a hearing on three days' notice or on shorter notice as the court may prescribe; or

(2) a temporary protective order, after notice and hearing under AS 13.26.208, the court shall schedule a hearing within 20 days after the date the request is made, except that, if the court finds that the request is meritless on its face, the court may deny the request without a hearing.

(b) If a request for a modification is made under this section and the respondent raises an issue not raised by the petitioner, the court may allow the petitioner additional time to respond.

(c) If the court modifies a protective order, the court shall issue a modified order and shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the order is understood by the petitioner, the respondent, and the protected person who are present at the hearing.

(d) The court shall cause a copy of a protective order, any related orders, and a scheduling order, if any, to be served on the respondent and the protected person and have a protective order and any related order delivered to the appropriate local law enforcement agency for expedited entry in the central registry under AS 18.65.540.

(e) A protective order issued under AS 13.26.207 - 13.26.209 is in addition to any other civil or criminal remedy.

(f) A third party that has received actual or legal notice of a protective order issued under AS 13.26.207 - 13.26.209 shall comply with the order. A third party who does not comply with a protective order granted under AS 13.26.207 - 13.26.209 may be liable in a civil action to the protected person or the protected person's heirs, assigns, or estate for a civil penalty not to exceed $1,000, plus the actual damages, costs, and fees associated with the failure to comply with the protective order. A third party who does not comply with a protective order granted under AS 13.26.207 - 13.26.209 may also be criminally liable under AS 11.56.740 for violating a protective order. As used in this section, "actual or legal notice" means delivery by mail or facsimile at the most recently known place of residence or business of the third party.

(g) The Alaska Court System, after consulting with the Department of Health and Social Services, the office of public advocacy, the office of elder fraud and assistance, the long term care ombudsman, and other interested persons and organizations, shall prepare forms for petitions and protective orders and instructions for use of the forms by a person seeking a protective order under AS 13.26.207 - 13.26.209. The forms must conform to the Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure and Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, except that information on the forms may be filled in by legible handwriting. The office of the clerk of each superior and district court shall make available to the public the forms a person seeking a protective order may need and instructions for the use of the forms. The clerk shall provide assistance in completing and filing the forms.

(h) Filing fees may not be charged for a petition under AS 13.26.207, for an application under AS 13.26.208, or for a request for modification of a protective order under AS 13.26.209(a).

* Sec. 11. AS 13.26 is amended by adding a new section to article 4 to read:

Sec. 13.26.324. Definitions. In AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.324, unless the context requires otherwise, "fraud" means

(1) robbery, extortion, and coercion under AS 11.41.500 - 11.41.530;

(2) offenses against property under AS 11.46.100 - 11.46.740; or

(3) exploitation of another person or another person's resources for personal profit or advantage if no significant benefit accrues to the person who is exploited.

 Sec. 12. AS 18.65.530(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except as provided in (b) or (c) of this section, a peace officer, with or without a warrant, shall arrest a person if the officer has probable cause to believe the person has, either in or outside the presence of the officer, within the previous 12 hours,

(1) committed domestic violence, except an offense under AS 11.41.100 - 11.41.130, whether the crime is a felony or a misdemeanor;

(2) committed the crime of violating a protective order in violation of AS 11.56.740(a)(1) or (2) [AS 11.56.740];

(3) violated a condition of release imposed under AS 12.30.016(e) or (f) or 12.30.027.

 Sec. 13. AS 18.65.540(a) is amended to read:

(a) The Department of Public Safety shall maintain a central registry of protective orders issued by or filed with a court of this state under AS 13.26.207 - 13.26.209, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.870, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180. The registry must include, for each protective order, the names of the petitioner and respondent, their dates of birth, and the conditions and duration of the order. The registry shall retain a record of the protective order after it has expired.

 Sec. 14. AS 18.65.540(b) is amended to read:

(b) A peace officer receiving a protective order from a court under AS 13.26.207, 13.26.208, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.855, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180, a modified order issued under AS 13.26.209, AS 18.65.860, or AS 18.66.120, or an order dismissing a protective order shall [, MUST] take reasonable steps to ensure that the order, modified order, or dismissal is entered into the central registry within 24 hours after being received.

 Sec. 15. AS 44.21.415(g) is amended to read:

(g) In this section,

(1) "fraud" means

(A) robbery, extortion, and coercion under AS 11.41.500 - 11.41.530;

(B) [THEFT AND RELATED] offenses against property under AS 11.46.100 - 11.46.740; or

(C) exploitation of another person or another person's resources for personal profit or advantage with no significant benefit accruing to the person who is exploited;

(2) "older Alaskan" means a person residing in the state who is 60 years of age or older.

 Sec. 16. AS 47.24.010(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except as provided in (e) and (f) of this section, the following persons who, in the performance of their professional duties, have reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect shall, not later than 24 hours after first having cause for the belief, report the belief to the department's central information and referral service for vulnerable adults in the office of the department that handles adult protective services:

(1) a physician or other licensed health care provider;

(2) a mental health professional as defined in AS 47.30.915(11) and including a marital and family therapist licensed under AS 08.63;

(3) a pharmacist;

(4) an administrator or employee of a nursing home, residential care, or health care facility;

(5) a guardian or conservator;

(6) a police officer;

(7) a village public safety officer;

(8) a village health aide;

(9) a social worker;

(10) a member of the clergy;

(11) a staff employee of a project funded by the Department of Administration for the provision of services to older Alaskans, the Department of Health and Social Services, or the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault;

(12) an employee of a personal care or home health aide program;

(13) an emergency medical technician or a mobile intensive care paramedic;

(14) a caregiver of the vulnerable adult;

(15) a certified nurse aide;

(16) an educator or administrative staff member of a public or private educational institution.

 Sec. 17. AS 47.24.010(b) is amended to read:

(b) A report made under this section may include the name and address of the reporting person and must include

(1) the name and contact information [ADDRESS] of the vulnerable adult;

(2) information relating to the nature and extent of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect;

(3) other information that the reporting person believes might be helpful in an investigation of the case or in providing protection for the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 18. AS 47.24.010(c) is amended to read:

(c) The department or its designees shall report to the Department of Law any person required by (a) of this section to report who fails to comply with this section. A person listed in (a) of this section who, because of the circumstances, should have had reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect but who knowingly fails to comply with this section is guilty of a class B misdemeanor. If a person convicted under this section is a member of a profession or occupation that is licensed, certified, or regulated by the state, the court shall notify the appropriate licensing, certifying, or regulating entity of the conviction.

 Sec. 19. AS 47.24.010(d) is amended to read:

(d) This section does not prohibit a person listed in (a) of this section, or any other person, from reporting cases of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult that have come to the person's attention in the person's nonoccupational capacity. This section does not prohibit any other person from reporting a harm under this section.

 Sec. 20. AS 47.24.010(e) is amended to read:

(e) If a person making a report under this section believes that immediate action is necessary to protect the vulnerable adult from imminent risk of serious physical harm due to undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect and the reporting person cannot immediately contact the department's central information and referral service for vulnerable adults, the reporting person shall [MAY] make the report to a police officer or a village public safety officer. The police officer or village public safety officer shall take immediate action to protect the vulnerable adult and shall, within 24 hours after receiving the report of harm [AT THE EARLIEST OPPORTUNITY], notify the department. A person may not bring an action for damages against a police officer, a village public safety officer, the state, or a political subdivision of the state based on a decision under this subsection to take or not to take immediate action to protect a vulnerable adult. If a decision is made under this subsection to take immediate action to protect a vulnerable adult, a person may not bring an action for damages based on the protective actions taken unless the protective actions were performed with gross negligence or intentional misconduct; damages awarded in the action may include only direct economic compensatory damages for personal injury.

 Sec. 21. AS 47.24.010(f) is amended to read:

(f) A person listed in (a) of this section who reports to the long term care ombudsman under AS 47.62.015, or to the Department of Health and Social Services, that a vulnerable adult has been unduly influenced, abandoned, exploited, abused, or neglected in an out-of-home care facility is considered to have met the duty to report under (a) of this section.

 Sec. 22. AS 47.24.010 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(i) A person required to report under this section who makes the report to the person's job supervisor or to another individual working for the entity that employs the person is not relieved of the obligation to make the report to the department as required under (a) of this section.

(j) A person who recklessly makes a false report under this section is civilly liable for actual damages suffered by the person who is the subject of the report.

 Sec. 23. AS 47.24.013(a) is amended to read:

(a) If a report received under AS 47.24.010 pertains to [REGARDS] the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult who is 60 years of age or older that is alleged to have been committed by or to have resulted from the negligence of the staff or a volunteer of an out-of-home care facility, including a facility licensed under AS 47.32, in which the vulnerable adult resides, the department shall transfer the report for investigation to the long term care ombudsman under AS 47.62.015.

 Sec. 24. AS 47.24.013(b) is amended to read:

(b) The department shall investigate a report received under AS 47.24.010 regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult who is less than 60 years of age that is alleged to have been committed by or to have resulted from the negligence of the staff or a volunteer of an out-of-home care facility in which the vulnerable adult resides.

 Sec. 25. AS 47.24.013(c) is amended to read:

(c) Upon receipt of a report under (a) or (b) of this section, the long term care ombudsman and the department shall

(1) conduct an investigation as appropriate under AS 47.62.015 or this title, respectively;

(2) coordinate and cooperate in their responses to and investigations of the report if their jurisdictions overlap;

(3) provide the results of their actions or investigations to the central information and referral service of the office of the department that handles adult protective services within 60 days after the receipt of the report.

 Sec. 26. AS 47.24.013(d) is amended to read:

(d) If the long term care ombudsman receives directly a report regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult in an out-of-home care facility, the ombudsman shall provide the report, and the results of the ombudsman's actions or investigations regarding the report, to the central information and referral service of the office of the department that handles adult protective services. The department may investigate the report as described in AS 47.24.015 if the department determines that action is appropriate.

 Sec. 27. AS 47.24.015(a) is amended to read:

(a) Upon the department's receipt of a report under AS 47.24.010 that is not transferred under AS 47.24.013, the department, or its designee, shall promptly initiate an investigation to determine whether the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect. The department, or its designee, shall conduct a face-to-face interview with the subject of the report unless that person is unconscious or the department, or its designee, has determined that a face-to-face interview could further endanger the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 28. AS 47.24.015(c) is amended to read:

(c) The department [,] or its designee [,] shall immediately terminate an investigation under this section upon the request of the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report made under AS 47.24.010. However, the department or its designee may not terminate the investigation if the investigation to that point has resulted in probable cause to believe that the vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and the request is made personally by the vulnerable adult and the vulnerable adult is not competent to make the request on the adult's own behalf, or the request is made by the vulnerable adult's guardian, attorney-in-fact, or surrogate decision maker and that person is the alleged perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult and is being investigated under this chapter. If the department has probable cause to believe that the vulnerable adult is in need of protective services,

(1) the department may petition the court as set out in AS 47.24.019;

(2) the department or its designee may refer the report made to the department under AS 47.24.010 to a police officer for criminal investigation; or

(3) in cases involving fraud, the department or its designee may refer the report made to the department under AS 47.24.010 to the office of public advocacy for investigation; in this paragraph, "fraud" has the meaning given in AS 13.26.324 [AS 44.21.415].

* Sec. 29. AS 47.24.015 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(h) In conducting an investigation under this section, the department may issue subpoenas, conduct interviews, and examine any health care or financial records related to a vulnerable adult. The department may seek a court order to enforce a subpoena.

(i) A person may not interfere with the department in the performance of its investigation under this section, including interfering with the department's access to the vulnerable adult.

(j) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the office of the department that handles adult protective services shall have access to any information compiled or retained by other divisions in the department, regardless of the nature of the information or whether the information is considered confidential, to assist in administering the provisions of this chapter.

(k) The department may audiotape or videotape an interview of a vulnerable adult if the adult has the capacity to consent and gives that consent. The department shall document the consent in its investigative file. The department may not audiotape or videotape an interview of a vulnerable adult who lacks the capacity to consent.

(l) The department shall provide for the training of investigators who investigate reports of harm under this section. Training must include instruction in federal, state, and local laws and policies of the department related to vulnerable adults, and in investigative techniques. The department may require other appropriate training.

(m) In this section, "financial records" include financial records related to the vulnerable adult that are maintained by any person.

* Sec. 30. AS 47.24.016(a) is amended to read:

(a) If the department determines under AS 47.24.015 that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services, but the department cannot obtain the vulnerable adult's consent to receive the services because the vulnerable adult is unable to consent or lacks decision making capacity, and has no guardian, conservator, [OR] attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate for health care decisions under AS 13.52.030 to serve as the vulnerable adult's surrogate decision maker, the department may select from the following list, in the order of priority listed, an individual who is willing to be the vulnerable adult's surrogate decision maker for the purpose of deciding whether to consent to the vulnerable adult's receipt of protective services:

(1) the vulnerable adult's spouse, unless

[(A) THE VULNERABLE ADULT AND THE SPOUSE HAVE SEPARATE DOMICILES; OR

(B)] the vulnerable adult or the spouse have initiated divorce, [OR] dissolution, or legal separation proceedings;

(2) an individual who lives with the vulnerable adult in a spousal relationship or as a domestic partner and who is 18 years of age or older;

(3) a son or daughter of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older;

(4) a parent of the vulnerable adult;

(5) a brother or sister of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older; or

(6) a close friend or relative of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older.

 Sec. 31. AS 47.24.016(b) is amended to read:

(b) An individual from the list in (a) of this section may not be selected as a surrogate decision maker if

(1) the department determines that individual does not possess decision making capacity; or

(2) there are allegations that individual is a perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 32. AS 47.24.016(d) is amended to read:

(d) The department may not continue to provide protective services to a vulnerable adult based on the consent of a surrogate decision maker serving under this section or AS 13.52.030 if the department determines that the vulnerable adult has become able to consent or has regained decision making capacity since the surrogate's consent was given. The department may continue protective services to a vulnerable adult who has become able to consent or has regained decision making capacity only if the vulnerable adult consents.

* Sec. 33. AS 47.24.017(a) is amended to read:

(a) If the department determines under AS 47.24.015 that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and [EITHER] the vulnerable adult, the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, [OR] attorney-in-fact, trustee, [OR] a surrogate decision maker selected under AS 47.24.016, or a surrogate for health care decisions under AS 13.52.030 consents to receipt of the protective services, and to the extent that resources are available, the department shall ensure that the protective services for the vulnerable adult are provided by the department, or its designee, within 10 working days after the department received the report under AS 47.24.010 regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of the vulnerable adult. However, if circumstances beyond the control of the department or the department's designee make it impossible to provide the protective services within the 10 working days, the department shall ensure that the services are provided as soon as possible after that time.

* Sec. 34. AS 47.24.019(c) is amended to read:

(c) If a vulnerable adult who has consented to receive protective services, or on whose behalf consent to receive protective services has been given, is prevented by any person [A CAREGIVER, GUARDIAN, ATTORNEY-IN-FACT, OR SURROGATE DECISION MAKER] from receiving those services, the department may petition the superior court for an injunction restraining the person [CAREGIVER, GUARDIAN, ATTORNEY-IN-FACT, OR SURROGATE DECISION MAKER] from interfering with the provision of protective services to the vulnerable adult.

* Sec. 35. AS 47.24.050 is amended to read:

Sec. 47.24.050. Confidentiality of reports. (a) Investigation reports and reports of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult filed under this chapter are confidential and are not subject to public inspection and copying under AS 40.25.110 - 40.25.125. However, under [IN ACCORDANCE WITH] this chapter and regulations adopted under this chapter, investigation reports may be used by appropriate agencies or individuals inside and outside the state, in connection with investigations or judicial proceedings involving the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult.

(b) The department shall disclose a report of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult if the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report or the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate decision maker consents in writing. The department may not disclose a report of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult to the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate decision maker if that person is an alleged perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult and is being investigated under this chapter. The department shall, upon request, disclose the number of verified reports of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult that occurred at an institution that provides care for vulnerable adults or that were the result of actions or inactions of a public home care provider.

 Sec. 36. AS 47.24.130 is amended to read:

Sec. 47.24.130. Treatment through spiritual means. This chapter may not be construed to mean that a person is unduly influenced, abused, neglected, self-neglected, vulnerable, unable to consent, abandoned, exploited, or in need of emergency or protective services for the sole reason that the person relies on or is being furnished treatment by spiritual means through prayer alone under [IN ACCORDANCE WITH] the tenets and practices of a church or religious denomination of which the person is a member or adherent, if [PROVIDED THAT] the person consents to the treatment through spiritual means only and the treatment is administered by an accredited practitioner of the church or religious denomination. In this section, "church or religious denomination" has the meaning given to "religious organization" in AS 05.15.690.

 Sec. 37. AS 47.24.900(2) is amended to read:

(2) "abuse" means

(A) the [WILFUL,] intentional, knowing, or reckless nonaccidental [,] and nontherapeutic infliction of physical pain, injury, [OR] mental or emotional distress, or fear, including coercion and intimidation; or

(B) sexual assault under AS 11.41.410 or 11.41.420;

 Sec. 38. AS 47.24.900(3) is amended to read:

(3) "caregiver" means

(A) a person who is providing care to a vulnerable adult as a result of a family relationship, or who has assumed some or all responsibility for the care of a vulnerable adult voluntarily, by contract, as an employee of a business that provides care in an adult's home, or by court order; or

(B) an employee of an out-of-home care facility who provides care to one or more vulnerable adults;

 Sec. 39. AS 47.24.900(4) is amended to read:

(4) "decision making capacity" means the ability to understand and appreciate the nature and consequences of a decision and the ability to reach and communicate an informed decision; in this paragraph, "informed decision" includes a decision made by the vulnerable adult that is free from undue influence;

 Sec. 40. AS 47.24.900(7) is amended to read:

(7) "exploitation"

(A) means unjust or improper use of another person or another person's resources for one's own profit or advantage, with or without the person's consent; and

(B) includes acts by a person who stands in a position of trust or confidence with a vulnerable adult or who knows or should know that the vulnerable adult lacks the capacity to consent that involve obtaining profit or advantage through undue influence, deception, fraud, intimidation, or breach of fiduciary duty; in this paragraph, "fraud" has the meaning given in AS 13.26.324(1) and (2);

 Sec. 41. AS 47.24.900(9) is amended to read:

(9) "neglect" means the intentional, knowing, or reckless failure by a caregiver to provide essential care or services or access to essential care or services or to carry out a prescribed treatment plan necessary to maintain the physical and mental health of the vulnerable adult when the vulnerable adult is unable to provide or obtain the essential care or services or to carry out the prescribed treatment plan on the vulnerable adult's own behalf; in this paragraph, "essential care or services" includes food, clothing, shelter, medical care, and supervision;

 Sec. 42. AS 47.24.900(11) is amended to read:

(11) "protective services" means services that are intended to prevent or alleviate harm resulting from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect and that are provided to a vulnerable adult in need of protection; in this paragraph, "services" ["PROTECTIVE SERVICES"] includes

(A) protective placement;

(B) applying for or obtaining public benefits;

(C) obtaining health care services and supplies;

(D) staying financial transactions;

(E) petitioning for a protective order under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209;

(F) assisting with personal hygiene;

(G) obtaining food and clothing;

(H) protection from physical and emotional abuse;

(I) obtaining representative payee services; and

(J) coordinating protective services;

 Sec. 43. AS 47.24.900(15) is amended to read:

(15) "unable to consent" means refusal to, or inability to, accept services because

(A) the person is an incapacitated person or apparently is an incapacitated person;

(B) of coercion by or fear of reprisal from the perpetrator of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect;

(C) of dependency on the perpetrator of undue influence,

abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect for services, care, or support; or

(D) of an inability to perceive that refusal to consent results in an imminent and substantial danger of loss, waste, or dissipation of income or assets, eviction, physical or mental harm to self or others, or death [OR IRREPARABLE HARM TO SELF OR OTHERS];

 Sec. 44. AS 47.24.900(16) is amended to read:

(16) "vulnerable adult" means a person 18 years of age or older who, because of incapacity, mental illness, mental deficiency, physical illness or disability, advanced age, chronic use of drugs, chronic intoxication, fraud, confinement, or disappearance [PHYSICAL OR MENTAL IMPAIRMENT], is unable to meet the person's own needs or to seek help without assistance.

 Sec. 45. AS 47.24.900 is amended by adding new paragraphs to read:

(17) "deception" means creating, reinforcing, or failing to correct a false impression or preventing another person from acquiring information that would affect the person's judgment regarding a transaction;

(18) "fiduciary duty" means the duty of a third party who stands in a position of trust or confidence with another person, including a vulnerable adult, to act with due regard for the benefit and interest of that person;

(19) "financial institution" means an institution subject to state or federal banking or financial regulations, including

(A) a broker-dealer;

(B) a commercial bank;

(C) a savings bank;

(D) a credit union;

(E) a premium finance company;

(F) a small loan company;

(G) a bank holding company;

(H) a financial holding company;

(O) an investment adviser;

(20) "person who stands in a position of trust or confidence" means a person who

(A) is a relative by blood or marriage;

(B) is a joint tenant or tenant in common;

(C) has a legal or fiduciary relationship; or

(D) is a person who has been entrusted with or has assumed responsibility for the use or management of the vulnerable adult's assets or income;

(21) "undue influence" means the use by a person who stands in a position of trust or confidence of the person's role, relationship, or authority to wrongfully exploit the trust, dependency, or fear of a vulnerable adult to gain control over the decision making of the vulnerable adult, including decision making related to finances, property, residence, and health care.

 Sec. 46. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

DIRECT COURT RULE AMENDMENT. Rule 12(h), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, is amended to read:

(h) Continuance of Trial. A motion for continuance of a trial date will be granted by the court only for cause shown. In deciding whether to grant the motion, the court shall consider the victim's circumstances and the effect the delay would have on the victim, particularly a victim of advanced age or extreme youth. The court shall place its findings on the record. The presiding judge of a judicial district may require that a visiting or pro tem judge obtain approval from the presiding judge before granting any continuance of trial.

 Sec. 47. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

DIRECT COURT RULE AMENDMENT. Rule 45(a), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, is amended to read:

(a) Priorities in Scheduling Criminal Cases. The court shall provide for placing criminal proceedings upon appropriate calendars. Preference shall be given to criminal proceedings and the trial of defendants in custody shall be given preference over other criminal cases. The court shall consider the circumstances of the victim, particularly a victim of advanced age or extreme youth, in setting the trial date. Trial dates in criminal cases in the superior court shall be set at the time of arraignment, and if a trial date is thereafter vacated, the trial shall be immediately set for a date certain.

 Sec. 48. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

INDIRECT COURT RULE AMENDMENTS. (a) AS 13.26.207, 13.26.208, and 13.26.209(a) - (g), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, have the effect of amending Rule 17, Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure, relating to conservatorships and protective proceedings, by allowing ex parte and temporary orders and modifications of orders to be issued related to protecting the assets of a person otherwise subject to AS 13.26.165 from financial exploitation.

(b) AS 13.26.209(h), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, has the effect of amending Rule 9, Alaska Rules of Administration, by requiring that filing fees may not be charged for a petition for an ex parte protective order under AS 13.26.207 for an application for a temporary order under AS 13.26.208, or for modification of a protective order under AS 13.26.209(a), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act.

(c) AS 13.26.206, enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, has the effect of amending Rule 77, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, by requiring a hearing within 72 hours of the filing of a petition for the appointment of a temporary conservator.

(d) AS 13.26.208, enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, has the effect of amending Rule 77, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, by providing for a hearing on an application for a temporary protective order on 10 days' notice.

(e) AS 13.26.209(a) and (b), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, have the effect of amending Rule 77, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, by providing for a hearing on a request for modification of a protective order on 20 days' notice and for modification of an ex parte protective order on three days' notice.

 Sec. 49. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

APPLICABILITY. Sections 3 - 5, 46, and 47 of this Act apply to offenses committed on or after the effective date of secs. 3 - 5 of this Act.

 Sec. 50. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

REVISOR'S INSTRUCTIONS. The revisor of statutes is instructed to change the catch line of

(1) AS 47.24.010 from "Reports of harm" to "Persons required to report; reports of harm";

(2) AS 47.24.013 from "Reports of abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of vulnerable adults in out-of-home care facilities" to "Reports of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of vulnerable adults in out-of-home care facilities."

 Sec. 51. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

CONDITIONAL EFFECT. (a) AS 13.26.207 and 13.26.209(a) - (g), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, take effect only if sec. 48(a) of this Act receives the two-thirds vote of each house required by art. IV, sec. 15, Constitution of the State of Alaska.

(b) AS 13.26.209(h), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, takes effect only if sec. 48(b) of this Act receives the two-thirds vote of each house required by art. IV, sec. 15, Constitution of the State of Alaska.

(c) AS 13.26.206, enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, takes effect only if sec. 48(c) of this Act receives the two-thirds vote of each house required by art. IV, sec. 15, Constitution of the State of Alaska.

(d) AS 13.26.208, enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, takes effect only if sec. 48(a) and (d) of this Act receive the two-thirds vote of each house required by art. IV, sec. 15, Constitution of the State of Alaska.

(e) AS 13.26.209(a) and (b), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, take effect only if sec. 48(e) of this Act receive the two-thirds vote of each house required by art. IV, sec. 15, Constitution of the State of Alaska.

* Sec. 52. Sections 16 and 20 of this Act take effect September 1, 2011.

* Sec. 53. Except as provided in sec. 52 of this Act, this Act takes effect July 1, 2011.

RE: new CS for SB86 Protection of Vulnerable Adults/Minors (GS1722\B)

Please prepare a new CS for SB 86 Protection of Vulnerable Adults/Minors with the following changes to the \B version.

1. In section 13.26.209 (starting on page 5), having to do with protective orders, there is some confusion in the original drafting by the Department of Law that needs to be cleared up. The section addresses both ex-parte orders, which are orders at which the respondent may be excluded from notice requirements, and also 6 month protective orders, which require that all parties receive notice and have the opportunity to be present. The bill as drafted has not separated references to the two different orders and in fact is referring to them inaccurately at times as "a six-month extension" of the ex-parte order. Please look at this section and separate out and correct references to these two different orders. It may be useful to look at domestic violence restraining orders for formatting.

   Also in this section, in the current (c) on page 5, and also in reference to the 6-month protective order, pleas add language that states expiration dates followed by the "unless dissolved earlier by the court".

2. On page 10, at line 24, delete the language "at the earliest opportunity" and reinstate the commas if appropriate.

3. Restrict Section 52 on page 22 to apply to sections 16 and 20 only.

CS FOR SENATE BILL NO. 86(JUD)

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

TWENTY-SEVENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

BY THE SENATE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

Offered:
Referred:

Sponsor(s): SENATE RULES COMMITTEE BY REQUEST OF THE GOVERNOR

A BILL

FOR AN ACT ENTITLED

"An Act relating to the protection of property of persons under disability and minors; relating to the crime of violating a protective order concerning certain vulnerable persons; relating to aggravating factors at sentencing for offenses concerning a victim 65 years or older; relating to the protection of vulnerable adults; making conforming amendments; amending Rules 12(h) and 45(a), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 77, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 17, Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure, and Rule 9, Alaska Rules of Administration; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

 Section 1. AS 08.29.200(b) is amended to read:

(b) Notwithstanding (a) of this section, a person licensed under this chapter shall report incidents of

(1) child abuse or neglect as required by AS 47.17;

(2) harm or assaults suffered by a vulnerable [AN ELDERLY

PERSON OR DISABLED] adult as required by AS 47.24.

 Sec. 2. AS 08.63.200(b) is amended to read:

(b) Notwithstanding (a) of this section, a person licensed under this chapter shall report incidents of

(1) child abuse or neglect as required by AS 47.17;

(2) harm or assaults suffered by a vulnerable [AN ELDERLY PERSON OR DISABLED] adult as required by AS 47.24.

 Sec. 3. AS 11.56.740(a) is amended to read:

(a) A person commits the crime of violating a protective order if the person is subject to a protective order

(1) issued or filed under AS 18.66 and containing a provision listed in AS 18.66.100(c)(1) - (7) and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act with reckless disregard that the act violates or would violate a provision of the protective order; [OR]

(2) issued under AS 18.65.850, 18.65.855, or 18.65.860 and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act that violates or would violate a provision listed in AS 18.65.850(c)(1) - (3); or

(3) issued under AS 13.26.180 or 13.26.209 and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act with reckless disregard that the act violates or would violate a provision of the protective order.

 Sec. 4. AS 11.56.740(c) is amended to read:

(c) In this section, "protective order" means an order issued or filed under AS 13.26.180, 13.26.209, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.870, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180.

 Sec. 5. AS 12.55.155(c) is amended by adding a new paragraph to read:

(35) the defendant knowingly directed the conduct constituting the offense at a victim because that person was 65 years of age or older.

 Sec. 6. AS 13.26.165 is amended to read:

Sec. 13.26.165. Protective proceedings. Upon petition and after notice and hearing in accordance with the provisions of AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.315, the court may appoint a conservator or issue another [MAKE OTHER] protective order for cause as follows:

(1) appointment of a conservator or other protective order may be made in relation to the estate and affairs of a minor if the court determines that

(A) a minor owns money or property that requires management or protection that [WHICH] cannot otherwise be provided;

(B) the minor [,] has or may have business affairs that [WHICH] may be jeopardized or prevented by the status of being a minor; [,] or

(C) [THAT] funds are needed for the minor's support and education and [THAT] protection is necessary or desirable to obtain or provide funds;

(2) appointment of a conservator or other protective order may be made in relation to the estate and affairs of a person if the court determines that

(A) the person is unable to manage the person's property and affairs effectively for reasons such as mental illness, mental deficiency, physical illness or disability, advanced age, chronic use of drugs, chronic intoxication, fraud, confinement, detention by a foreign power, or disappearance; and

(B) the person has property that [WHICH] will be wasted or dissipated unless proper management is provided, or that funds are needed for the support, care, and welfare of the person or those entitled to be supported by the person and [THAT] protection is necessary or desirable to obtain or provide funds.

 Sec. 7. AS 13.26.180(a) is amended to read:

(a) The person to be protected, a person's attorney or other legal representative, any person who is interested in the estate, affairs, or welfare of the person to be protected, including a parent, guardian, [OR] custodian, or caregiver, the Department of Health and Social Services, or any person who would be adversely affected by lack of effective management of the property and affairs of the person to be protected, may petition for the appointment of a conservator or for other appropriate protective order.

 Sec. 8. AS 13.26.180 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(c) The petition may include a request for temporary conservatorship as provided in AS 13.26.207 if it appears that the respondent's property is likely to be wasted or dissipated during the pendency of the conservatorship proceeding. A request for temporary conservatorship must specify the facts that cause the petitioner to believe that a temporary conservatorship is necessary.

* Sec. 9. AS 13.26.185 is amended by adding a subsection to read:

(c) This section does not apply to a petition or order for an ex parte protective order filed under AS 13.26.209.

* Sec. 10. AS 13.26 is amended by adding new sections to read:

Sec. 13.26.207. Temporary conservators. (a) If, during the pendency of an initial petition for conservatorship, it appears that the respondent is in need of a protective order to protect the respondent against waste or dissipation of funds or property, or to obtain funds that are needed for the immediate support, care, and welfare of the respondent or persons entitled to be supported by the respondent, and the respondent is not capable of protecting the respondent's funds or property or obtaining the funds that are needed to support the respondent or persons whom the respondent is required to support, the petitioner may request the appointment of a temporary conservator to authorize the protection or to obtain the necessary funds. The request must state the reasons and factual basis for the request. The petitioner shall immediately file the request with the court and serve copies on the respondent and the respondent's attorney and other persons as ordered by the court. The court shall appoint an attorney for a respondent who is unrepresented to be at the hearing and conduct a hearing within 72 hours after the filing.

(b) If the court determines that a temporary conservator should be appointed, it shall make the appointment and grant to the temporary conservator only the authority that is least restrictive upon the liberty of the respondent and that enables the temporary conservator to provide the protection or authority necessary to protect the respondent from waste or dissipation of funds or property or to obtain the funds necessary for support.

(c) The temporary conservatorship expires at the time of the appointment of a full or partial conservator or on the dismissal of the petition for conservatorship.

Sec. 13.26.209. Ex parte protective orders; modification; forms for petitions and orders; fees. (a) A person who is allowed to file a petition for a protective order under AS 13.26.180(a) may file a petition for an ex parte protective order against another person. A petition filed on behalf of a protected person by another person must be accompanied by proof of service of the petition on the protected person or the person's attorney unless service would cause an immediate threat of harm to the best interests of the protected person and the petition includes a written explanation of the harm. If the court finds that the petition establishes probable cause that the respondent is financially defrauding the petitioner or a person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition and that, because of the fraud, there has been or is an immediate threat of a waste or dissipation of the proposed protected person's funds or other property, the court shall ex parte and without notice to the respondent issue a protective order. The petitioner shall certify to the court in writing any effort that the petitioner made to provide notice to the respondent. The court shall cause a copy of the protective order, any related orders, and a scheduling order, if any, to be served on the respondent and the protected person.

(b) An ex parte protective order under this section may

(1) grant any protection described in AS 13.26.200;

(2) supersede an existing power of attorney;

(3) prohibit the respondent from having any direct or indirect contact with the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition; and

(4) prohibit the respondent from taking any act with respect to the funds or other property of the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition.

(c) An ex parte protective order expires 20 days after it is issued, at the end of a six-month extension if granted by the court under (d) of this section, ~~or~~ on the appointment of a temporary or permanent conservator or dismissal of the petition for the ex parte order. "unless dissolved . . . "

(d) On application filed with the court before the expiration of the 20-day ex parte protective order, the court shall schedule a hearing on whether to extend the protective order for up to six months. The court shall provide to the protected person and the respondent at least 10 days' notice of the hearing and the respondent's right to appear and be heard. If the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the respondent has committed fraud against the petitioner or the person for whose benefit the petition was filed, regardless of whether the respondent appears at the hearing, the court may extend the ~~ex parte~~ protective order for up to six months.

(e) The petitioner, respondent, or protected person, if the protected person is a vulnerable adult, may request modification of a protective order issued under this section. If a request is made for modification of a protective order, the court shall schedule a hearing on three days' notice or on shorter notice as the court may prescribe. If the court modifies a protective order under this section, the court shall issue a modified order and shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the order is understood by the petitioner, the respondent, and the protected person, if the protected person is a vulnerable adult, if present at the hearing.

(f) A protective order issued under this section is in addition to any other civil or criminal remedy.

(g) A third party that has received actual or legal notice of a protective order issued under this section shall comply with the order. A third party who does not comply with a protective order granted under this section may be liable in a civil action to the protected person or the protected person's heirs, assigns, or estate for a civil penalty not to exceed $1,000, plus the actual damages, costs, and fees associated with the failure to comply with the protective order. A third party who does not comply with a protective order granted under this section may also be criminally liable under AS 11.56.740 for violating a protective order. As used in this section, "actual or legal notice" means delivery by mail or facsimile at the most recently known place of residence or business of the third party.

(h) The Alaska Court System, after consulting with the Department of Health and Social Services, the office of public advocacy, the office of elder fraud and assistance, the long term care ombudsman, and other interested persons and organizations, shall prepare forms for petitions and protective orders and instructions for use of the forms by a person seeking a protective order under this section. The forms must conform to the Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure and Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, except that information on the forms may be filled in by legible handwriting. The office of the clerk of each superior and district court shall make available to the public the forms a person seeking a protective order under this section may need and instructions for the use of the forms. The clerk shall provide assistance in completing and filing the forms.

(i) Filing fees may not be charged for a petition under this section.

* Sec. 11. AS 13.26 is amended by adding a new section to article 4 to read:

Sec. 13.26.324. Definitions. In AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.324, unless the context requires otherwise, "fraud" means

(1) robbery, extortion, and coercion under AS 11.41.500 - 11.41.530;

(2) offenses against property under AS 11.46.100 - 11.46.740; or

(3) exploitation of another person or another person's resources for personal profit or advantage if no significant benefit accrues to the person who is exploited.

* Sec. 12. AS 18.65.530(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except as provided in (b) or (c) of this section, a peace officer, with or without a warrant, shall arrest a person if the officer has probable cause to believe the person has, either in or outside the presence of the officer, within the previous 12 hours,

(1) committed domestic violence, except an offense under AS 11.41.100 - 11.41.130, whether the crime is a felony or a misdemeanor;

(2) committed the crime of violating a protective order in violation of AS 11.56.740(a)(1) or (2) [AS 11.56.740];

(3) violated a condition of release imposed under AS 12.30.016(e) or (f) or 12.30.027.

* Sec. 13. AS 18.65.540(a) is amended to read:

(a) The Department of Public Safety shall maintain a central registry of protective orders issued by or filed with a court of this state under AS 13.26.180, 13.26.209, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.870, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180. The registry must include, for each protective order, the names of the petitioner and respondent, their dates of birth, and the conditions and duration of the order. The registry shall retain a record of the protective order after it has expired.

* Sec. 14. AS 18.65.540(b) is amended to read:

(b) A peace officer receiving a protective order from a court under AS 13.26.180, 13.26.209, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.855, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180, a modified order issued under AS 18.65.860 or AS 18.66.120, or an order dismissing a protective order shall [, MUST] take reasonable steps to ensure that the order, modified order, or dismissal is entered into the central registry within 24 hours after being received.

* Sec. 15. AS 44.21.415(g) is amended to read:

(g) In this section,

(1) "fraud" means

(A) robbery, extortion, and coercion under AS 11.41.500 - 11.41.530;

(B) [THEFT AND RELATED] offenses against property under AS 11.46.100 - 11.46.740; or

(C) exploitation of another person or another person's resources for personal profit or advantage with no significant benefit accruing to the person who is exploited;

(2) "older Alaskan" means a person residing in the state who is 60 years of age or older.

* Sec. 16. AS 47.24.010(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except as provided in (e) and (f) of this section, the following persons who, in the performance of their professional duties, have reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect shall, not later than 24 hours after first having cause for the belief, report the belief to the department's central information and referral service for vulnerable adults in the office of the department that handles adult protective services:

(1) a physician or other licensed health care provider;

(2) a mental health professional as defined in AS 47.30.915(11) and including a marital and family therapist licensed under AS 08.63;

(3) a pharmacist;

(4) an administrator or employee of a nursing home, residential care, or health care facility;

(5) a guardian or conservator;

(6) a police officer;

(7) a village public safety officer;

(8) a village health aide;

(9) a social worker;

(10) a member of the clergy;

(11) a staff employee of a project funded by the Department of Administration for the provision of services to older Alaskans, the Department of Health and Social Services, or the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault;

(12) an employee of a personal care or home health aide program;

(13) an emergency medical technician or a mobile intensive care paramedic;

(14) a caregiver of the vulnerable adult;

(15) a certified nurse aide;

(16) an educator or administrative staff member of a public or private educational institution.

 Sec. 17. AS 47.24.010(b) is amended to read:

(b) A report made under this section may include the name and address of the reporting person and must include

(1) the name and contact information [ADDRESS] of the vulnerable adult;

(2) information relating to the nature and extent of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect;

(3) other information that the reporting person believes might be helpful in an investigation of the case or in providing protection for the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 18. AS 47.24.010(c) is amended to read:

(c) The department or its designees shall report to the Department of Law any person required by (a) of this section to report who fails to comply with this section. A person listed in (a) of this section who, because of the circumstances, should have had reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect but who knowingly fails to comply with this section is guilty of a class B misdemeanor. If a person convicted under this section is a member of a profession or occupation that is licensed, certified, or regulated by the state, the court shall notify the appropriate licensing, certifying, or regulating entity of the conviction.

 Sec. 19. AS 47.24.010(d) is amended to read:

(d) This section does not prohibit a person listed in (a) of this section, or any other person, from reporting cases of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult that have come to the person's attention in the person's nonoccupational capacity. This section does not prohibit any other person from reporting a harm under this section.

 Sec. 20. AS 47.24.010(e) is amended to read:

(e) If a person making a report under this section believes that immediate action is necessary to protect the vulnerable adult from imminent risk of serious physical harm due to undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect and the reporting person cannot immediately contact the department's central information and referral service for vulnerable adults, the reporting person shall [MAY] make the report to a police officer or a village public safety officer. The police officer or village public safety officer shall take immediate action to protect the vulnerable adult and shall [,] at the earliest opportunity within 24 hours after receiving the report of harm [,] notify the department. A person may not bring an action for damages against a police officer, a village public safety officer, the state, or a political subdivision of the state based on a decision under this subsection to take or not to take immediate action to protect a vulnerable adult. If a decision is made under this subsection to take immediate action to protect a vulnerable adult, a person may not bring an action for damages based on the protective actions taken unless the protective actions were performed with gross negligence or intentional misconduct; damages awarded in the action may include only direct economic compensatory damages for personal injury.

* Sec. 21. AS 47.24.010(f) is amended to read:

(f) A person listed in (a) of this section who reports to the long term care ombudsman under AS 47.62.015, or to the Department of Health and Social Services, that a vulnerable adult has been unduly influenced, abandoned, exploited, abused, or neglected in an out-of-home care facility is considered to have met the duty to report under (a) of this section.

* Sec. 22. AS 47.24.010 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(i) A person required to report under this section who makes the report to the person's job supervisor or to another individual working for the entity that employs the person is not relieved of the obligation to make the report to the department as required under (a) of this section.

(j) A person who recklessly makes a false report under this section is civilly liable for actual damages suffered by the person who is the subject of the report.

* Sec. 23. AS 47.24.013(a) is amended to read:

(a) If a report received under AS 47.24.010 pertains to [REGARDS] the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult who is 60 years of age or older that is alleged to have been committed by or to have resulted from the negligence of the staff or a volunteer of an out-of-home care facility, including a facility licensed under AS 47.32, in which the vulnerable adult resides, the department shall transfer the report for investigation to the long term care ombudsman under AS 47.62.015.

* Sec. 24. AS 47.24.013(b) is amended to read:

(b) The department shall investigate a report received under AS 47.24.010 regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult who is less than 60 years of age that is alleged to have been committed by or to have resulted from the negligence of the staff or a volunteer of an out-of-home care facility in which the vulnerable adult resides.

* Sec. 25. AS 47.24.013(c) is amended to read:

(c) Upon receipt of a report under (a) or (b) of this section, the long term care ombudsman and the department shall

(1) conduct an investigation as appropriate under AS 47.62.015 or this title, respectively;

(2) coordinate and cooperate in their responses to and investigations of the report if their jurisdictions overlap;

(3) provide the results of their actions or investigations to the central information and referral service of the office of the department that handles adult protective services within 60 days after the receipt of the report.

* Sec. 26. AS 47.24.013(d) is amended to read:

(d) If the long term care ombudsman receives directly a report regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult in an out-of-home care facility, the ombudsman shall provide the report, and the results of the ombudsman's actions or investigations regarding the report, to the central information and referral service of the office of the department that handles adult protective services. The department may investigate the report as described in AS 47.24.015 if the department determines that action is appropriate.

* Sec. 27. AS 47.24.015(a) is amended to read:

(a) Upon the department's receipt of a report under AS 47.24.010 that is not transferred under AS 47.24.013, the department, or its designee, shall promptly initiate an investigation to determine whether the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect. The department, or its designee, shall conduct a face-to-face interview with the subject of the report unless that person is unconscious or the department, or its designee, has determined that a face-to-face interview could further endanger the vulnerable adult.

* Sec. 28. AS 47.24.015(c) is amended to read:

(c) The department [,] or its designee [,] shall immediately terminate an investigation under this section upon the request of the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report made under AS 47.24.010. However, the department or its designee may not terminate the investigation if the investigation to that point has resulted in probable cause to believe that the vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and the request is made personally by the vulnerable adult and the vulnerable adult is not competent to make the request on the adult's own behalf, or the request is made by the vulnerable adult's guardian, attorney-in-fact, or surrogate decision maker and that person is the alleged perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult and is being investigated under this chapter. If the department has probable cause to believe that the vulnerable adult is in need of protective services,

(1) the department may petition the court as set out in AS 47.24.019;

(2) the department or its designee may refer the report made to the department under AS 47.24.010 to a police officer for criminal investigation; or

(3) in cases involving fraud, the department or its designee may refer the report made to the department under AS 47.24.010 to the office of public advocacy for investigation; in this paragraph, "fraud" has the meaning given in AS 13.26.324 [AS 44.21.415].

 Sec. 29. AS 47.24.015 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(h) In conducting an investigation under this section, the department may issue subpoenas, conduct interviews, and examine any health care or financial records related to a vulnerable adult. The department may seek a court order to enforce a subpoena.

(i) A person may not interfere with the department in the performance of its investigation under this section, including interfering with the department's access to the vulnerable adult.

(j) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the office of the department that handles adult protective services shall have access to any information compiled or retained by other divisions in the department, regardless of the nature of the information or whether the information is considered confidential, to assist in administering the provisions of this chapter.

(k) The department may audiotape or videotape an interview of a vulnerable adult if the adult has the capacity to consent and gives that consent. The department shall document the consent in its investigative file. The department may not audiotape or videotape an interview of a vulnerable adult who lacks the capacity to consent.

(l) The department shall provide for the training of investigators who investigate reports of harm under this section. Training must include instruction in federal, state, and local laws and policies of the department related to vulnerable adults, and in investigative techniques. The department may require other appropriate training.

(m) In this section, "financial records" include financial records related to the vulnerable adult that are maintained by any person.

 Sec. 30. AS 47.24.016(a) is amended to read:

(a) If the department determines under AS 47.24.015 that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services, but the department cannot obtain the vulnerable adult's consent to receive the services because the vulnerable adult is unable to consent or lacks decision making capacity, and has no guardian, conservator, [OR] attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate for health care decisions under AS 13.52.030 to serve as the vulnerable adult's surrogate decision maker, the department may select from the following list, in the order of priority listed, an individual who is willing to be the vulnerable adult's surrogate decision maker for the purpose of deciding whether to consent to the vulnerable adult's receipt of protective services:

(1) the vulnerable adult's spouse, unless

[(A) THE VULNERABLE ADULT AND THE SPOUSE HAVE SEPARATE DOMICILES; OR

(B)] the vulnerable adult or the spouse have initiated divorce, [OR] dissolution, or legal separation proceedings;

(2) an individual who lives with the vulnerable adult in a spousal relationship or as a domestic partner and who is 18 years of age or older;

(3) a son or daughter of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older;

(4) a parent of the vulnerable adult;

(5) a brother or sister of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older; or

(6) a close friend or relative of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older.

* Sec. 31. AS 47.24.016(b) is amended to read:

(b) An individual from the list in (a) of this section may not be selected as a surrogate decision maker if

(1) the department determines that individual does not possess decision making capacity; or

(2) there are allegations that individual is a perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult.

* Sec. 32. AS 47.24.016(d) is amended to read:

(d) The department may not continue to provide protective services to a vulnerable adult based on the consent of a surrogate decision maker serving under this section or AS 13.52.030 if the department determines that the vulnerable adult has become able to consent or has regained decision making capacity since the surrogate's consent was given. The department may continue protective services to a vulnerable adult who has become able to consent or has regained decision making capacity only if the vulnerable adult consents.

* Sec. 33. AS 47.24.017(a) is amended to read:

(a) If the department determines under AS 47.24.015 that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and [EITHER] the vulnerable adult, the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, [OR] attorney-in-fact, trustee, [OR] a surrogate decision maker selected under AS 47.24.016, or a surrogate for health care decisions under AS 13.52.030 consents to receipt of the protective services, and to the extent that resources are available, the department shall ensure that the protective services for the vulnerable adult are provided by the department, or its designee, within 10 working days after the department received the report under AS 47.24.010 regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of the vulnerable adult. However, if circumstances beyond the control of the department or the department's designee make it impossible to provide the protective services within the 10 working days, the department shall ensure that the services are provided as soon as possible after that time.

* Sec. 34. AS 47.24.019(c) is amended to read:

(c) If a vulnerable adult who has consented to receive protective services, or on whose behalf consent to receive protective services has been given, is prevented by any person [A CAREGIVER, GUARDIAN, ATTORNEY-IN-FACT, OR SURROGATE DECISION MAKER] from receiving those services, the department may petition the superior court for an injunction restraining the person [CAREGIVER, GUARDIAN, ATTORNEY-IN-FACT, OR SURROGATE DECISION MAKER] from interfering with the provision of protective services to the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 35. AS 47.24.050 is amended to read:

Sec. 47.24.050. Confidentiality of reports. (a) Investigation reports and reports of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult filed under this chapter are confidential and are not subject to public inspection and copying under AS 40.25.110 - 40.25.125. However, under [IN ACCORDANCE WITH] this chapter and regulations adopted under this chapter, investigation reports may be used by appropriate agencies or individuals inside and outside the state, in connection with investigations or judicial proceedings involving the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult.

(b) The department shall disclose a report of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult if the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report or the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate decision maker consents in writing. The department may not disclose a report of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult to the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate decision maker if that person is an alleged perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult and is being investigated under this chapter. The department shall, upon request, disclose the number of verified reports of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult that occurred at an institution that provides care for vulnerable adults or that were the result of actions or inactions of a public home care provider.

* Sec. 36. AS 47.24.130 is amended to read:

Sec. 47.24.130. Treatment through spiritual means. This chapter may not be construed to mean that a person is unduly influenced, abused, neglected, self-neglected, vulnerable, unable to consent, abandoned, exploited, or in need of emergency or protective services for the sole reason that the person relies on or is being furnished treatment by spiritual means through prayer alone under [IN ACCORDANCE WITH] the tenets and practices of a church or religious denomination of which the person is a member or adherent, if [PROVIDED THAT] the person consents to the treatment through spiritual means only and the treatment is administered by an accredited practitioner of the church or religious denomination. In this section, "church or religious denomination" has the meaning given to "religious organization" in AS 05.15.690.

* Sec. 37. AS 47.24.900(2) is amended to read:

(2) "abuse" means

(A) the [WILFUL,] intentional, knowing, or reckless nonaccidental [,] and nontherapeutic infliction of physical pain, injury, [OR] mental or emotional distress, or fear, including coercion and intimidation; or

(B) sexual assault under AS 11.41.410 or 11.41.420;

* Sec. 38. AS 47.24.900(3) is amended to read:

(3) "caregiver" means

(A) a person who is providing care to a vulnerable adult as a result of a family relationship, or who has assumed some or all responsibility for the care of a vulnerable adult voluntarily, by contract, as an employee of a business that provides care in an adult's home, or by court order; or

(B) an employee of an out-of-home care facility who provides care to one or more vulnerable adults;

* Sec. 39. AS 47.24.900(4) is amended to read:

(4) "decision making capacity" means the ability to understand and appreciate the nature and consequences of a decision and the ability to reach and communicate an informed decision; in this paragraph, "informed decision" includes a decision made by the vulnerable adult that is free from undue influence;

* Sec. 40. AS 47.24.900(7) is amended to read:

(7) "exploitation"

(A) means unjust or improper use of another person or another person's resources for one's own profit or advantage, with or without the person's consent; and

(B) includes acts by a person who stands in a position of trust or confidence with a vulnerable adult or who knows or should know that the vulnerable adult lacks the capacity to consent that involve obtaining profit or advantage through undue influence, deception, fraud, intimidation, or breach of fiduciary duty; in this paragraph, "fraud" has the meaning given in AS 13.26.324(1) and (2);

* Sec. 41. AS 47.24.900(9) is amended to read:

(9) "neglect" means the intentional, knowing, or reckless failure by a caregiver to provide essential care or services or access to essential care or services or to carry out a prescribed treatment plan necessary to maintain the physical and mental health of the vulnerable adult when the vulnerable adult is unable to provide or obtain the essential care or services or to carry out the prescribed treatment plan on the vulnerable adult's own behalf; in this paragraph, "essential care or services" includes food, clothing, shelter, medical care, and supervision;

* Sec. 42. AS 47.24.900(11) is amended to read:

(11) "protective services" means services that are intended to prevent or alleviate harm resulting from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect and that are provided to a vulnerable adult in need of protection; in this paragraph, "services" ["PROTECTIVE SERVICES"] includes

(A) protective placement;

(B) applying for or obtaining public benefits;

(C) obtaining health care services and supplies;

(D) staying financial transactions;

(E) petitioning for an ex parte protective order under

AS 13.26.209:

(F) assisting with personal hygiene;

(G) obtaining food and clothing;

(H) protection from physical and emotional abuse;

(I) obtaining representative payee services; and

(J) coordinating protective services;

 Sec. 43. AS 47.24.900(15) is amended to read:

(15) "unable to consent" means refusal to, or inability to, accept services because

(A) the person is an incapacitated person or apparently is an incapacitated person;

(B) of coercion by or fear of reprisal from the perpetrator of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect;

(C) of dependency on the perpetrator of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect for services, care, or support; or

(D) of an inability to perceive that refusal to consent results in an imminent and substantial danger of loss, waste, or dissipation of income or assets, eviction, physical or mental harm to self or others, or death [OR IRREPARABLE HARM TO SELF OR OTHERS];

 Sec. 44. AS 47.24.900(16) is amended to read:

(16) "vulnerable adult" means a person 18 years of age or older who, because of incapacity, mental illness, mental deficiency, physical illness or disability, advanced age, chronic use of drugs, chronic intoxication, fraud, confinement, or disappearance [PHYSICAL OR MENTAL IMPAIRMENT], is unable to meet the person's own needs or to seek help without assistance.

 Sec. 45. AS 47.24.900 is amended by adding new paragraphs to read:

(17) "deception" means creating, reinforcing, or failing to correct a false impression or preventing another person from acquiring information that would affect the person's judgment regarding a transaction;

(18) "fiduciary duty" means the duty of a third party who stands in a position of trust or confidence with another person, including a vulnerable adult, to act with due regard for the benefit and interest of that person;

(19) "financial institution" means an institution subject to state or federal banking or financial regulations, including

(A) a broker-dealer;

(B) a commercial bank;

(C) a savings bank;

(D) a credit union;

(E) a premium finance company;

(F) a small loan company;

(G) a bank holding company;

(H) a financial holding company;

(I) a trust company;

(J) a savings and loan association;

(K) a deferred deposit advance licensee;

(L) an investment bank;

(M) an insurance company subject to regulation by AS 21;

(N) a licensee subject to regulation by AS 21; and

(20) "person who stands in a position of trust or confidence" means a person who

(A) is a relative by blood or marriage;

(B) is a joint tenant or tenant in common;

(C) has a legal or fiduciary relationship; or

(D) is a person who has been entrusted with or has assumed responsibility for the use or management of the vulnerable adult's assets or income;

(21) "undue influence" means the use by a person who stands in a position of trust or confidence of the person's role, relationship, or authority to wrongfully exploit the trust, dependency, or fear of a vulnerable adult to gain control over the decision making of the vulnerable adult, including decision making related to finances, property, residence, and health care.

 Sec. 46. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

DIRECT COURT RULE AMENDMENT. Rule 12(h), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, is amended to read:

(h) Continuance of Trial. A motion for continuance of a trial date will be granted by the court only for cause shown. In deciding whether to grant the motion, the court shall consider the victim's circumstances and the effect the delay would have on the victim, particularly a victim of advanced age or extreme youth. The court shall place its findings on the record. The presiding judge of a judicial district may require that a visiting or pro tem judge obtain approval from the presiding judge before granting any continuance of trial.

 Sec. 47. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

DIRECT COURT RULE AMENDMENT. Rule 45(a), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, is amended to read:

(a) Priorities in Scheduling Criminal Cases. The court shall provide for placing criminal proceedings upon appropriate calendars. Preference shall be given to criminal proceedings and the trial of defendants in custody shall be given preference over other criminal cases. The court shall consider the circumstances of the victim, particularly a victim of advanced age or extreme youth, in setting the trial date. Trial dates in criminal cases in the superior court shall be set at the time of arraignment, and if a trial date is thereafter vacated, the trial shall be immediately set for a date certain.

 Sec. 48. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

INDIRECT COURT RULE AMENDMENTS. (a) AS 13.26.209(a) - (h), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, have the effect of amending Rule 17, Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure, relating to conservatorships and protective proceedings, by allowing ex parte orders to be issued related to protecting the assets of a person otherwise subject to AS 13.26.165 from financial exploitation.

(b) AS 13.26.209(i), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, has the effect of amending Rule 9,

Alaska Rules of Administration, by requiring that filing fees may not be charged for a petition for an ex parte protective order under AS 13.26.209(a), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act.

(c) AS 13.26.207, enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, has the effect of amending Rule 77, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, by requiring a hearing within 72 hours of the filing of a petition for the appointment of a temporary conservator.

 Sec. 49. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

APPLICABILITY. Sections 3 - 5, 46, and 47 of this Act apply to offenses committed on or after the effective date of this Act.

 Sec. 50. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

REVISOR'S INSTRUCTIONS. The revisor of statutes is instructed to change the catch line of

(1) AS 47.24.010 from "Reports of harm" to "Persons required to report; reports of harm";

(2) AS 47.24.013 from "Reports of abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of vulnerable adults in out-of-home care facilities" to "Reports of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of vulnerable adults in out-of-home care facilities."

 Sec. 51. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

CONDITIONAL EFFECT. (a) AS 13.26.209(a) - (h), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, take effect only if sec. 48(a) of this Act receives the two-thirds vote of each house required by art. IV, sec. 15, Constitution of the State of Alaska.

(b) AS 13.26.209(i), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, takes effect only if sec. 48(b) of this Act receives the two-thirds vote of each house required by art. IV, sec. 15, Constitution of the State of Alaska.

 Sec. 52. Sections 16 - 28 of this Act take effect September 1, 2011.

 Sec. 53. Except as provided in sec. 52 of this Act, this Act takes effect July 1, 2011.

MEMORANDUM

Changes to CSSB86 (JUD) from Version "B" to Version "X":

Protective Orders: Page 2, and Pages 5 through 8:
Provisions regarding ex parte protective orders, 6-month protective orders and permanent protective orders are restructured into separate sections and the sections are renumbered. Permanent protective orders (already in statute) are referenced and amended in AS 13.26.165 (page 2). Ex-parte order provisions are now in 13.26.207(page 5); temporary protective order provisions (6-month orders) are in 13.26.208 (pages 5-6), while modifications, compliance, and forms and fees provisions are in 13.26.209 (pages 6-7). Definitions are listed in 13.26.324 (pages 7-8).

Please note that language in Section 13.26.209 (page 6) dealing with modifications was redrafted to follow similar provisions for modifications in domestic violence protective order statues.

Conforming amendments have been made throughout the bill to these newly renumbered sections as necessary.

Reporting requirements: on Page 11, at lines 11-12:
The phrase "at the earliest opportunity" has been deleted to provide a clear deadline, since failure to report for police officers and village public safety officers is a chargeable offense under section 18 of this bill.

Effective Dates: Section 52, on page 24, at line 3:
The September effective date applies only to sections 16 and 20 of the bill (new reporters and new police reporting requirements), per the committee's discussion.

CS FOR SENATE BILL NO. 86(JUD)

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

TWENTY-SEVENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

BY THE SENATE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

Offered:
Referred:

Sponsor(s): SENATE RULES COMMITTEE BY REQUEST OF THE GOVERNOR

A BILL

FOR AN ACT ENTITLED

"An Act relating to the protection of property of persons under disability and minors; relating to the crime of violating a protective order concerning certain vulnerable persons; relating to aggravating factors at sentencing for offenses concerning a victim 65 years or older; relating to the protection of vulnerable adults; making conforming amendments; amending Rules 12(h) and 45(a), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 77, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 17, Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure, and Rule 9, Alaska Rules of Administration; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

 Section 1. AS 08.29.200(b) is amended to read:

(b) Notwithstanding (a) of this section, a person licensed under this chapter shall report incidents of

(1) child abuse or neglect as required by AS 47.17;

(2) harm or assaults suffered by a vulnerable [AN ELDERLY

PERSON OR DISABLED] adult as required by AS 47.24.

 Sec. 2. AS 08.63.200(b) is amended to read:

(b) Notwithstanding (a) of this section, a person licensed under this chapter shall report incidents of

(1) child abuse or neglect as required by AS 47.17;

(2) harm or assaults suffered by a vulnerable [AN ELDERLY PERSON OR DISABLED] adult as required by AS 47.24.

 Sec. 3. AS 11.56.740(a) is amended to read:

(a) A person commits the crime of violating a protective order if the person is subject to a protective order

(1) issued or filed under AS 18.66 and containing a provision listed in AS 18.66.100(c)(1) - (7) and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act with reckless disregard that the act violates or would violate a provision of the protective order; [OR]

(2) issued under AS 18.65.850, 18.65.855, or 18.65.860 and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act that violates or would violate a provision listed in AS 18.65.850(c)(1) - (3); or

(3) issued under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act with reckless disregard that the act violates or would violate a provision of the protective order.

 Sec. 4. AS 11.56.740(c) is amended to read:

(c) In this section, "protective order" means an order issued or filed under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.870, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180.

 Sec. 5. AS 12.55.155(c) is amended by adding a new paragraph to read:

(35) the defendant knowingly directed the conduct constituting the offense at a victim because that person was 65 years of age or older.

 Sec. 6. AS 13.26.165 is amended to read:

Sec. 13.26.165. Protective proceedings. Upon petition and after notice and hearing in accordance with the provisions of AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.315, the court may appoint a conservator or issue another [MAKE OTHER] protective order for cause as follows:

(1) appointment of a conservator or other protective order may be made in relation to the estate and affairs of a minor if the court determines that

(A) a minor owns money or property that requires management or protection that [WHICH] cannot otherwise be provided;

(B) the minor [,] has or may have business affairs that [WHICH] may be jeopardized or prevented by the status of being a minor; [,] or

(C) [THAT] funds are needed for the minor's support and education and [THAT] protection is necessary or desirable to obtain or provide funds;

(2) appointment of a conservator or other protective order may be made in relation to the estate and affairs of a person if the court determines that

(A) the person is unable to manage the person's property and affairs effectively for reasons such as mental illness, mental deficiency, physical illness or disability, advanced age, chronic use of drugs, chronic intoxication, fraud, confinement, detention by a foreign power, or disappearance; and

(B) the person has property that [WHICH] will be wasted or dissipated unless proper management is provided, or that funds are needed for the support, care, and welfare of the person or those entitled to be supported by the person and [THAT] protection is necessary or desirable to obtain or provide funds.

 Sec. 7. AS 13.26.180(a) is amended to read:

(a) The person to be protected, a person's attorney or other legal representative, any person who is interested in the estate, affairs, or welfare of the person to be protected, including a parent, guardian, [OR] custodian, or caregiver, the Department of Health and Social Services, or any person who would be adversely affected by lack of effective management of the property and affairs of the person to be protected, may petition for the appointment of a conservator or for other appropriate protective order.

 Sec. 8. AS 13.26.180 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(c) The petition may include a request for temporary conservatorship as provided in AS 13.26.206 if it appears that the respondent's property is likely to be wasted or dissipated during the pendency of the conservatorship proceeding. A request for temporary conservatorship must specify the facts that cause the petitioner to believe that a temporary conservatorship is necessary.

* Sec. 9. AS 13.26.185 is amended by adding a subsection to read:

(c) This section does not apply to a petition or order for an ex parte protective order filed under AS 13.26.207 or a temporary protective order filed under AS 13.26.208.

* Sec. 10. AS 13.26 is amended by adding new sections to read:

Sec. 13.26.206. Temporary conservators. (a) If, during the pendency of an initial petition for conservatorship, it appears that the respondent is in need of a protective order to protect the respondent against waste or dissipation of funds or property, or to obtain funds that are needed for the immediate support, care, and welfare of the respondent or persons entitled to be supported by the respondent, and the respondent is not capable of protecting the respondent's funds or property or obtaining the funds that are needed to support the respondent or persons whom the respondent is required to support, the petitioner may request the appointment of a temporary conservator to authorize the protection or to obtain the necessary funds. The request must state the reasons and factual basis for the request. The petitioner shall immediately file the request with the court and serve copies on the respondent and the respondent's attorney and other persons as ordered by the court. The court shall appoint an attorney for a respondent who is unrepresented to be at the hearing and conduct a hearing within 72 hours after the filing.

(b) If the court determines that a temporary conservator should be appointed, it shall make the appointment and grant to the temporary conservator only the authority that is least restrictive upon the liberty of the respondent and that enables the temporary conservator to provide the protection or authority necessary to protect the respondent from waste or dissipation of funds or property or to obtain the funds necessary for support.

(c) The temporary conservatorship expires at the time of the appointment of a full or partial conservator or on the dismissal of the petition for conservatorship.

Sec. 13.26.207. Ex parte protective orders. (a) A person who is allowed to file a petition for a protective order under AS 13.26.180(a) may file a petition for an ex parte protective order against a person other than the protected person. A petition filed on behalf of a protected person by a person other than the protected person must be accompanied by proof of service of the petition on the protected person or the person's attorney unless service would cause an immediate threat of harm to the best interests of the protected person and the petition includes a written explanation of the harm. If the court finds that the petition establishes probable cause that the respondent is financially defrauding the petitioner or a person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition and that, because of the fraud, there has been or is an immediate threat of a waste or dissipation of the proposed protected person's funds or other property, the court shall ex parte and without notice to the respondent issue a protective order. The petitioner shall certify to the court in writing any effort that the petitioner made to provide notice to the respondent.

(b) An ex parte protective order under this section may

(1) grant any protection described in AS 13.26.200;

(2) supersede an existing power of attorney;

(3) prohibit the respondent from having any direct or indirect contact with the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition; and

(4) prohibit the respondent from taking any act with respect to the funds or other property of the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition.

(c) An ex parte protective order expires 20 days after it is issued, unless dissolved earlier by the court at the request of the petitioner or respondent and after notice and, if requested, a hearing, or on the earlier appointment of a temporary or permanent conservator.

Sec. 13.26.208. Temporary protective orders; conversions. On application filed with the court before the expiration of a 20-day ex parte protective order issued under AS 13.26.207, the court shall schedule a hearing on whether to convert the protective order to a temporary order effective for up to six months. The court shall provide to the protected person and the respondent at least 10 days' notice of the hearing and the respondent's right to appear and be heard. If the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the respondent has committed fraud against the petitioner or the person for whose benefit the petition was filed, regardless of whether the respondent appears at the hearing, the court may convert the ex parte protective order to a temporary protective order effective for up to six months.

Sec. 13.26.209. Protective orders; modification; third-party compliance; forms; fees. (a) The petitioner, respondent, or protected person, if the protected person is a vulnerable adult, may request modification of a protective order issued under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209. Except as provided in (b) of this section, if a request is made for modification of

(1) an ex parte protective order issued under AS 13.26.207, the court shall schedule a hearing on three days' notice or on shorter notice as the court may prescribe; or

(2) a protective order, after notice and hearing under AS 13.26.185, or a temporary protective order, after notice and hearing under AS 13.26.208, the court shall schedule a hearing within 20 days after the date the request is made, except that, if the court finds that the request is meritless on its face, the court may deny the request without a hearing.

(b) If a request for a modification is made under this section and the respondent raises an issue not raised by the petitioner, the court may allow the petitioner additional time to respond.

(c) If the court modifies a protective order, the court shall issue a modified order and shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the order is understood by the petitioner, the respondent, and the protected person who are present at the hearing.

(d) The court shall cause a copy of a protective order, any related orders, and a scheduling order, if any, to be served on the respondent and the protected person and have a protective order and any related order delivered to the appropriate local law enforcement agency for expedited entry in the central registry under AS 18.65.540.

(e) A protective order issued under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 is in addition to any other civil or criminal remedy.

(f) A third party that has received actual or legal notice of a protective order issued under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 shall comply with the order. A third party who does not comply with a protective order granted under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 may be liable in a civil action to the protected person or the protected person's heirs, assigns, or estate for a civil penalty not to exceed $1,000, plus the actual damages, costs, and fees associated with the failure to comply with the protective order. A third party who does not comply with a protective order granted under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 may also be criminally liable under AS 11.56.740 for violating a protective order. As used in this section, "actual or legal notice" means delivery by mail or facsimile at the most recently known place of residence or business of the third party.

(g) The Alaska Court System, after consulting with the Department of Health and Social Services, the office of public advocacy, the office of elder fraud and assistance, the long term care ombudsman, and other interested persons and organizations, shall prepare forms for petitions and protective orders and instructions for use of the forms by a person seeking a protective order under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209. The forms must conform to the Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure and Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, except that information on the forms may be filled in by legible handwriting. The office of the clerk of each superior and district court shall make available to the public the forms a person seeking a protective order may need and instructions for the use of the forms. The clerk shall provide assistance in completing and filing the forms.

(h) Filing fees may not be charged for a petition under AS 13.26.207, for an application under AS 13.26.208, or for a request for modification of a protective order under AS 13.26.209(a).

* Sec. 11. AS 13.26 is amended by adding a new section to article 4 to read:

Sec. 13.26.324. Definitions. In AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.324, unless the context requires otherwise, "fraud" means

(1) robbery, extortion, and coercion under AS 11.41.500 - 11.41.530;

(2) offenses against property under AS 11.46.100 - 11.46.740; or

(3) exploitation of another person or another person's resources for personal profit or advantage if no significant benefit accrues to the person who is exploited.

 Sec. 12. AS 18.65.530(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except as provided in (b) or (c) of this section, a peace officer, with or without a warrant, shall arrest a person if the officer has probable cause to believe the person has, either in or outside the presence of the officer, within the previous 12 hours,

(1) committed domestic violence, except an offense under AS 11.41.100 - 11.41.130, whether the crime is a felony or a misdemeanor;

(2) committed the crime of violating a protective order in violation of AS 11.56.740(a)(1) or (2) [AS 11.56.740];

(3) violated a condition of release imposed under AS 12.30.016(e) or (f) or 12.30.027.

 Sec. 13. AS 18.65.540(a) is amended to read:

(a) The Department of Public Safety shall maintain a central registry of protective orders issued by or filed with a court of this state under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.870, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180. The registry must include, for each protective order, the names of the petitioner and respondent, their dates of birth, and the conditions and duration of the order. The registry shall retain a record of the protective order after it has expired.

 Sec. 14. AS 18.65.540(b) is amended to read:

(b) A peace officer receiving a protective order from a court under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.208, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.855, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180, a modified order issued under AS 13.26.209, AS 18.65.860, or AS 18.66.120, or an order dismissing a protective order shall [, MUST] take reasonable steps to ensure that the order, modified order, or dismissal is entered into the central registry within 24 hours after being received.

 Sec. 15. AS 44.21.415(g) is amended to read:

(g) In this section,

(1) "fraud" means

(A) robbery, extortion, and coercion under AS 11.41.500 -

11.41.530;

(B) [THEFT AND RELATED] offenses against property under AS 11.46.100 - 11.46.740; or

(C) exploitation of another person or another person's resources for personal profit or advantage with no significant benefit accruing to the person who is exploited;

(2) "older Alaskan" means a person residing in the state who is 60 years of age or older.

* Sec. 16. AS 47.24.010(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except as provided in (e) and (f) of this section, the following persons who, in the performance of their professional duties, have reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect shall, not later than 24 hours after first having cause for the belief, report the belief to the department's central information and referral service for vulnerable adults in the office of the department that handles adult protective services:

(1) a physician or other licensed health care provider;

(2) a mental health professional as defined in AS 47.30.915(11) and including a marital and family therapist licensed under AS 08.63;

(3) a pharmacist;

(4) an administrator or employee of a nursing home, residential care, or health care facility;

(5) a guardian or conservator;

(6) a police officer;

(7) a village public safety officer;

(8) a village health aide;

(9) a social worker;

(10) a member of the clergy;

(11) a staff employee of a project funded by the Department of Administration for the provision of services to older Alaskans, the Department of Health and Social Services, or the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault;

(12) an employee of a personal care or home health aide program;

(13) an emergency medical technician or a mobile intensive care paramedic;

(14) a caregiver of the vulnerable adult;

(15) a certified nurse aide;

(16) an educator or administrative staff member of a public or private educational institution.

* Sec. 17. AS 47.24.010(b) is amended to read:

(b) A report made under this section may include the name and address of the reporting person and must include

(1) the name and contact information [ADDRESS] of the vulnerable adult;

(2) information relating to the nature and extent of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect;

(3) other information that the reporting person believes might be helpful in an investigation of the case or in providing protection for the vulnerable adult.

* Sec. 18. AS 47.24.010(c) is amended to read:

(c) The department or its designees shall report to the Department of Law any person required by (a) of this section to report who fails to comply with this section. A person listed in (a) of this section who, because of the circumstances, should have had reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect but who knowingly fails to comply with this section is guilty of a class B misdemeanor. If a person convicted under this section is a member of a profession or occupation that is licensed, certified, or regulated by the state, the court shall notify the appropriate licensing, certifying, or regulating entity of the conviction.

* Sec. 19. AS 47.24.010(d) is amended to read:

(d) This section does not prohibit a person listed in (a) of this section, or any other person, from reporting cases of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult that have come to the person's attention in the person's nonoccupational capacity. This section does not prohibit any other person from reporting a harm under this section.

 Sec. 20. AS 47.24.010(e) is amended to read:

(e) If a person making a report under this section believes that immediate action is necessary to protect the vulnerable adult from imminent risk of serious physical harm due to undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect and the reporting person cannot immediately contact the department's central information and referral service for vulnerable adults, the reporting person shall [MAY] make the report to a police officer or a village public safety officer. The police officer or village public safety officer shall take immediate action to protect the vulnerable adult and shall, within 24 hours after receiving the report of harm [AT THE EARLIEST OPPORTUNITY], notify the department. A person may not bring an action for damages against a police officer, a village public safety officer, the state, or a political subdivision of the state based on a decision under this subsection to take or not to take immediate action to protect a vulnerable adult. If a decision is made under this subsection to take immediate action to protect a vulnerable adult, a person may not bring an action for damages based on the protective actions taken unless the protective actions were performed with gross negligence or intentional misconduct; damages awarded in the action may include only direct economic compensatory damages for personal injury.

 Sec. 21. AS 47.24.010(f) is amended to read:

(f) A person listed in (a) of this section who reports to the long term care ombudsman under AS 47.62.015, or to the Department of Health and Social Services, that a vulnerable adult has been unduly influenced, abandoned, exploited, abused, or neglected in an out-of-home care facility is considered to have met the duty to report under (a) of this section.

 Sec. 22. AS 47.24.010 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(i) A person required to report under this section who makes the report to the person's job supervisor or to another individual working for the entity that employs the person is not relieved of the obligation to make the report to the department as required under (a) of this section.

(j) A person who recklessly makes a false report under this section is civilly liable for actual damages suffered by the person who is the subject of the report.

* Sec. 23. AS 47.24.013(a) is amended to read:

(a) If a report received under AS 47.24.010 pertains to [REGARDS] the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult who is 60 years of age or older that is alleged to have been committed by or to have resulted from the negligence of the staff or a volunteer of an out-of-home care facility, including a facility licensed under AS 47.32, in which the vulnerable adult resides, the department shall transfer the report for investigation to the long term care ombudsman under AS 47.62.015.

* Sec. 24. AS 47.24.013(b) is amended to read:

(b) The department shall investigate a report received under AS 47.24.010 regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult who is less than 60 years of age that is alleged to have been committed by or to have resulted from the negligence of the staff or a volunteer of an out-of-home care facility in which the vulnerable adult resides.

* Sec. 25. AS 47.24.013(c) is amended to read:

(c) Upon receipt of a report under (a) or (b) of this section, the long term care ombudsman and the department shall

(1) conduct an investigation as appropriate under AS 47.62.015 or this title, respectively;

(2) coordinate and cooperate in their responses to and investigations of the report if their jurisdictions overlap;

(3) provide the results of their actions or investigations to the central information and referral service of the office of the department that handles adult protective services within 60 days after the receipt of the report.

* Sec. 26. AS 47.24.013(d) is amended to read:

(d) If the long term care ombudsman receives directly a report regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult in an out-of-home care facility, the ombudsman shall provide the report, and the results of the ombudsman's actions or investigations regarding the report, to the central information and referral service of the office of the department that handles adult protective services. The department may investigate the report as described in AS 47.24.015 if the department determines that action is appropriate.

 Sec. 27. AS 47.24.015(a) is amended to read:

(a) Upon the department's receipt of a report under AS 47.24.010 that is not transferred under AS 47.24.013, the department, or its designee, shall promptly initiate an investigation to determine whether the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect. The department, or its designee, shall conduct a face-to-face interview with the subject of the report unless that person is unconscious or the department, or its designee, has determined that a face-to-face interview could further endanger the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 28. AS 47.24.015(c) is amended to read:

(c) The department [,] or its designee [,] shall immediately terminate an investigation under this section upon the request of the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report made under AS 47.24.010. However, the department or its designee may not terminate the investigation if the investigation to that point has resulted in probable cause to believe that the vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and the request is made personally by the vulnerable adult and the vulnerable adult is not competent to make the request on the adult's own behalf, or the request is made by the vulnerable adult's guardian, attorney-in-fact, or surrogate decision maker and that person is the alleged perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult and is being investigated under this chapter. If the department has probable cause to believe that the vulnerable adult is in need of protective services,

(1) the department may petition the court as set out in AS 47.24.019;

(2) the department or its designee may refer the report made to the department under AS 47.24.010 to a police officer for criminal investigation; or

(3) in cases involving fraud, the department or its designee may refer the report made to the department under AS 47.24.010 to the office of public advocacy for investigation; in this paragraph, "fraud" has the meaning given in AS 13.26.324

[AS 44.21.415].

* Sec. 29. AS 47.24.015 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(h) In conducting an investigation under this section, the department may issue subpoenas, conduct interviews, and examine any health care or financial records related to a vulnerable adult. The department may seek a court order to enforce a subpoena.

(i) A person may not interfere with the department in the performance of its investigation under this section, including interfering with the department's access to the vulnerable adult.

(j) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the office of the department that handles adult protective services shall have access to any information compiled or retained by other divisions in the department, regardless of the nature of the information or whether the information is considered confidential, to assist in administering the provisions of this chapter.

(k) The department may audiotape or videotape an interview of a vulnerable adult if the adult has the capacity to consent and gives that consent. The department shall document the consent in its investigative file. The department may not audiotape or videotape an interview of a vulnerable adult who lacks the capacity to consent.

(l) The department shall provide for the training of investigators who investigate reports of harm under this section. Training must include instruction in federal, state, and local laws and policies of the department related to vulnerable adults, and in investigative techniques. The department may require other appropriate training.

(m) In this section, "financial records" include financial records related to the vulnerable adult that are maintained by any person.

* Sec. 30. AS 47.24.016(a) is amended to read:

(a) If the department determines under AS 47.24.015 that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services, but the department cannot obtain the vulnerable adult's consent to receive the services because the vulnerable adult is unable to consent or lacks decision making capacity, and has no guardian, conservator, [OR] attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate for health care decisions under AS 13.52.030 to serve as the vulnerable adult's surrogate decision maker, the department may select from the following list, in the order of priority listed, an individual who is willing to be the vulnerable adult's surrogate decision maker for the purpose of deciding whether to consent to the vulnerable adult's receipt of protective services:

(1) the vulnerable adult's spouse, unless

[(A) THE VULNERABLE ADULT AND THE SPOUSE HAVE SEPARATE DOMICILES; OR

(B)] the vulnerable adult or the spouse have initiated divorce, [OR] dissolution, or legal separation proceedings;

(2) an individual who lives with the vulnerable adult in a spousal relationship or as a domestic partner and who is 18 years of age or older;

(3) a son or daughter of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older;

(4) a parent of the vulnerable adult;

(5) a brother or sister of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older; or

(6) a close friend or relative of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older.

 Sec. 31. AS 47.24.016(b) is amended to read:

(b) An individual from the list in (a) of this section may not be selected as a surrogate decision maker if

(1) the department determines that individual does not possess decision making capacity; or

(2) there are allegations that individual is a perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 32. AS 47.24.016(d) is amended to read:

(d) The department may not continue to provide protective services to a vulnerable adult based on the consent of a surrogate decision maker serving under this section or AS 13.52.030 if the department determines that the vulnerable adult has become able to consent or has regained decision making capacity since the surrogate's consent was given. The department may continue protective services to a vulnerable adult who has become able to consent or has regained decision making capacity only if the vulnerable adult consents.

 Sec. 33. AS 47.24.017(a) is amended to read:

(a) If the department determines under AS 47.24.015 that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and [EITHER] the vulnerable adult, the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, [OR] attorney-in-fact, trustee, [OR] a surrogate decision maker selected under AS 47.24.016, or a surrogate for health care decisions under AS 13.52.030 consents to receipt of the protective services, and to the extent that resources are available, the department shall ensure that the protective services for the vulnerable adult are provided by the department, or its designee, within 10 working days after the department received the report under AS 47.24.010 regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of the vulnerable adult. However, if circumstances beyond the control of the department or the department's designee make it impossible to provide the protective services within the 10 working days, the department shall ensure that the services are provided as soon as possible after that time.

 Sec. 34. AS 47.24.019(c) is amended to read:

(c) If a vulnerable adult who has consented to receive protective services, or on whose behalf consent to receive protective services has been given, is prevented by any person [A CAREGIVER, GUARDIAN, ATTORNEY-IN-FACT, OR SURROGATE DECISION MAKER] from receiving those services, the department may petition the superior court for an injunction restraining the person [CAREGIVER, GUARDIAN, ATTORNEY-IN-FACT, OR SURROGATE DECISION MAKER] from interfering with the provision of protective services to the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 35. AS 47.24.050 is amended to read:

Sec. 47.24.050. Confidentiality of reports. (a) Investigation reports and reports of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult filed under this chapter are confidential and are not subject to public inspection and copying under AS 40.25.110 - 40.25.125. However, under [IN ACCORDANCE WITH] this chapter and regulations adopted under this chapter, investigation reports may be used by appropriate agencies or individuals inside and outside the state, in connection with investigations or judicial proceedings involving the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult.

(b) The department shall disclose a report of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult if the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report or the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate decision maker consents in writing. The department may not disclose a report of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult to the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate decision maker if that person is an alleged perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult and is being investigated under this chapter. The department shall, upon request, disclose the number of verified reports of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult that occurred at an institution that provides care for vulnerable adults or that were the result of actions or inactions of a public home care provider.

* Sec. 36. AS 47.24.130 is amended to read:

Sec. 47.24.130. Treatment through spiritual means. This chapter may not be construed to mean that a person is unduly influenced, abused, neglected, self-neglected, vulnerable, unable to consent, abandoned, exploited, or in need of emergency or protective services for the sole reason that the person relies on or is being furnished treatment by spiritual means through prayer alone under [IN ACCORDANCE WITH] the tenets and practices of a church or religious denomination of which the person is a member or adherent, if [PROVIDED THAT] the person consents to the treatment through spiritual means only and the treatment is administered by an accredited practitioner of the church or religious denomination. In this section, "church or religious denomination" has the meaning given to "religious organization" in AS 05.15.690.

* Sec. 37. AS 47.24.900(2) is amended to read:

(2) "abuse" means

(A) the [WILFUL,] intentional, knowing, or reckless nonaccidental [,] and nontherapeutic infliction of physical pain, injury, [OR] mental or emotional distress, or fear, including coercion and intimidation; or

(B) sexual assault under AS 11.41.410 or 11.41.420;

 Sec. 38. AS 47.24.900(3) is amended to read:

(3) "caregiver" means

(A) a person who is providing care to a vulnerable adult as a result of a family relationship, or who has assumed some or all responsibility for the care of a vulnerable adult voluntarily, by contract, as an employee of a business that provides care in an adult's home, or by court order; or

(B) an employee of an out-of-home care facility who provides care to one or more vulnerable adults;

 Sec. 39. AS 47.24.900(4) is amended to read:

(4) "decision making capacity" means the ability to understand and appreciate the nature and consequences of a decision and the ability to reach and communicate an informed decision; in this paragraph, "informed decision" includes a decision made by the vulnerable adult that is free from undue influence;

 Sec. 40. AS 47.24.900(7) is amended to read:

(7) "exploitation"

(A) means unjust or improper use of another person or another person's resources for one's own profit or advantage, with or without the person's consent; and

(B) includes acts by a person who stands in a position of trust or confidence with a vulnerable adult or who knows or should know that the vulnerable adult lacks the capacity to consent that involve obtaining profit or advantage through undue influence, deception, fraud, intimidation, or breach of fiduciary duty; in this paragraph, "fraud" has the meaning given in AS 13.26.324(1) and (2);

 Sec. 41. AS 47.24.900(9) is amended to read:

(9) "neglect" means the intentional, knowing, or reckless failure by a caregiver to provide essential care or services or access to essential care or services or to carry out a prescribed treatment plan necessary to maintain the physical and mental health of the vulnerable adult when the vulnerable adult is unable to provide or obtain the essential care or services or to carry out the prescribed treatment plan on the vulnerable adult's own behalf; in this paragraph, "essential care or services" includes food, clothing, shelter, medical care, and supervision;

 Sec. 42. AS 47.24.900(11) is amended to read:

(11) "protective services" means services that are intended to prevent or alleviate harm resulting from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect and that are provided to a vulnerable adult in need of protection; in this paragraph, "services" ["PROTECTIVE SERVICES"] includes

(A) protective placement;

(B) applying for or obtaining public benefits;

CS FOR SENATE BILL NO. 86(JUD)

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

TWENTY-SEVENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

BY THE SENATE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

Offered:
Referred:

Sponsor(s): SENATE RULES COMMITTEE BY REQUEST OF THE GOVERNOR

A BILL

FOR AN ACT ENTITLED

"An Act relating to the protection of property of persons under disability and minors; relating to the crime of violating a protective order concerning certain vulnerable persons; relating to aggravating factors at sentencing for offenses concerning a victim 65 years or older; relating to the protection of vulnerable adults; making conforming amendments; amending Rules 12(h) and 45(a), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 77, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 17, Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure, and Rule 9, Alaska Rules of Administration; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

 Section 1. AS 08.29.200(b) is amended to read:

(b) Notwithstanding (a) of this section, a person licensed under this chapter shall report incidents of

(1) child abuse or neglect as required by AS 47.17;

(2) harm or assaults suffered by a vulnerable [AN ELDERLY

PERSON OR DISABLED] adult as required by AS 47.24.

 Sec. 2. AS 08.63.200(b) is amended to read:

(b) Notwithstanding (a) of this section, a person licensed under this chapter shall report incidents of

(1) child abuse or neglect as required by AS 47.17;

(2) harm or assaults suffered by a vulnerable [AN ELDERLY PERSON OR DISABLED] adult as required by AS 47.24.

 Sec. 3. AS 11.56.740(a) is amended to read:

(a) A person commits the crime of violating a protective order if the person is subject to a protective order

(1) issued or filed under AS 18.66 and containing a provision listed in AS 18.66.100(c)(1) - (7) and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act with reckless disregard that the act violates or would violate a provision of the protective order; [OR]

(2) issued under AS 18.65.850, 18.65.855, or 18.65.860 and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act that violates or would violate a provision listed in AS 18.65.850(c)(1) - (3); or

(3) issued under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act with reckless disregard that the act violates or would violate a provision of the protective order.

 Sec. 4. AS 11.56.740(c) is amended to read:

(c) In this section, "protective order" means an order issued or filed under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.870, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180.

 Sec. 5. AS 12.55.155(c) is amended by adding a new paragraph to read:

(35) the defendant knowingly directed the conduct constituting the offense at a victim because that person was 65 years of age or older.

 Sec. 6. AS 13.26.165 is amended to read:

Sec. 13.26.165. Protective proceedings. Upon petition and after notice and hearing in accordance with the provisions of AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.315, the court may appoint a conservator or issue another [MAKE OTHER] protective order for cause as follows:

(1) appointment of a conservator or other protective order may be made in relation to the estate and affairs of a minor if the court determines that

(A) a minor owns money or property that requires management or protection that [WHICH] cannot otherwise be provided;

(B) the minor [,] has or may have business affairs that [WHICH] may be jeopardized or prevented by the status of being a minor; [,] or

(C) [THAT] funds are needed for the minor's support and education and [THAT] protection is necessary or desirable to obtain or provide funds;

(2) appointment of a conservator or other protective order may be made in relation to the estate and affairs of a person if the court determines that

(A) the person is unable to manage the person's property and affairs effectively for reasons such as mental illness, mental deficiency, physical illness or disability, advanced age, chronic use of drugs, chronic intoxication, fraud, confinement, detention by a foreign power, or disappearance; and

(B) the person has property that [WHICH] will be wasted or dissipated unless proper management is provided, or that funds are needed for the support, care, and welfare of the person or those entitled to be supported by the person and [THAT] protection is necessary or desirable to obtain or provide funds.

 Sec. 7. AS 13.26.180(a) is amended to read:

(a) The person to be protected, a person's attorney or other legal representative, any person who is interested in the estate, affairs, or welfare of the person to be protected, including a parent, guardian, [OR] custodian, or caregiver, the Department of Health and Social Services, or any person who would be adversely affected by lack of effective management of the property and affairs of the person to be protected, may petition for the appointment of a conservator or for other appropriate protective order.

 Sec. 8. AS 13.26.180 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(c) The petition may include a request for temporary conservatorship as provided in AS 13.26.206 if it appears that the respondent's property is likely to be wasted or dissipated during the pendency of the conservatorship proceeding. A request for temporary conservatorship must specify the facts that cause the petitioner to believe that a temporary conservatorship is necessary.

* Sec. 9. AS 13.26.185 is amended by adding a subsection to read:

(c) This section does not apply to a petition or order for an ex parte protective order filed under AS 13.26.207 or a temporary protective order filed under AS 13.26.208.

* Sec. 10. AS 13.26 is amended by adding new sections to read:

Sec. 13.26.206. Temporary conservators. (a) If, during the pendency of an initial petition for conservatorship, it appears that the respondent is in need of a protective order to protect the respondent against waste or dissipation of funds or property, or to obtain funds that are needed for the immediate support, care, and welfare of the respondent or persons entitled to be supported by the respondent, and the respondent is not capable of protecting the respondent's funds or property or obtaining the funds that are needed to support the respondent or persons whom the respondent is required to support, the petitioner may request the appointment of a temporary conservator to authorize the protection or to obtain the necessary funds. The request must state the reasons and factual basis for the request. The petitioner shall immediately file the request with the court and serve copies on the respondent and the respondent's attorney and other persons as ordered by the court. The court shall appoint an attorney for a respondent who is unrepresented to be at the hearing and conduct a hearing within 72 hours after the filing.

(b) If the court determines that a temporary conservator should be appointed, it shall make the appointment and grant to the temporary conservator only the authority that is least restrictive upon the liberty of the respondent and that enables the temporary conservator to provide the protection or authority necessary to protect the respondent from waste or dissipation of funds or property or to obtain the funds necessary for support.

(c) The temporary conservatorship expires at the time of the appointment of a full or partial conservator or on the dismissal of the petition for conservatorship.

Sec. 13.26.207. Ex parte protective orders. (a) A person who is allowed to file a petition for a protective order under AS 13.26.180(a) may file a petition for an ex parte protective order against a person other than the protected person. A petition filed on behalf of a protected person by a person other than the protected person must be accompanied by proof of service of the petition on the protected person or the person's attorney unless service would cause an immediate threat of harm to the best interests of the protected person and the petition includes a written explanation of the harm. If the court finds that the petition establishes probable cause that the respondent is financially defrauding the petitioner or a person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition and that, because of the fraud, there has been or is an immediate threat of a waste or dissipation of the proposed protected person's funds or other property, the court shall ex parte and without notice to the respondent issue a protective order. The petitioner shall certify to the court in writing any effort that the petitioner made to provide notice to the respondent.

(b) An ex parte protective order under this section may

(1) grant any protection described in AS 13.26.200;

(2) supersede an existing power of attorney;

(3) prohibit the respondent from having any direct or indirect contact with the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition; and

(4) prohibit the respondent from taking any act with respect to the funds or other property of the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition.

(c) An ex parte protective order expires 20 days after it is issued, unless dissolved earlier by the court at the request of the petitioner or respondent and after notice and, if requested, a hearing, or on the earlier appointment of a temporary or permanent conservator.

Sec. 13.26.208. Temporary protective orders; conversions. On application filed with the court before the expiration of a 20-day ex parte protective order issued under AS 13.26.207, the court shall schedule a hearing on whether to convert the protective order to a temporary order effective for up to six months. The court shall provide to the protected person and the respondent at least 10 days' notice of the hearing and the respondent's right to appear and be heard. If the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the respondent has committed fraud against the petitioner or the person for whose benefit the petition was filed, regardless of whether the respondent appears at the hearing, the court may convert the ex parte protective order to a temporary protective order effective for up to six months.

Sec. 13.26.209. Protective orders; modification; third-party compliance; forms; fees. (a) The petitioner, respondent, or protected person, if the protected person is a vulnerable adult, may request modification of a protective order issued under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209. Except as provided in (b) of this section, if a request is made for modification of

(1) a protective order, the court shall schedule a hearing on three days' notice or on shorter notice as the court may prescribe; or

(2) a protective order, after notice and hearing under AS 13.26.185, or a temporary protective order, after notice and hearing under AS 13.26.208, the court shall schedule a hearing within 20 days after the date the request is made, except that, if the court finds that the request is meritless on its face, the court may deny the request without a hearing.

(b) If a request for a modification is made under this section and the respondent raises an issue not raised by the petitioner, the court may allow the petitioner additional time to respond.

(c) If the court modifies a protective order, the court shall issue a modified order and shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the order is understood by the petitioner, the respondent, and the protected person who are present at the hearing.

(d) The court shall cause a copy of a protective order, any related orders, and a scheduling order, if any, to be served on the respondent and the protected person and have a protective order and any related order delivered to the appropriate local law enforcement agency for expedited entry in the central registry under AS 18.65.540.

(e) A protective order issued under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 is in addition to any other civil or criminal remedy.

(f) A third party that has received actual or legal notice of a protective order issued under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 shall comply with the order. A third party who does not comply with a protective order granted under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 may be liable in a civil action to the protected person or the protected person's heirs, assigns, or estate for a civil penalty not to exceed $1,000, plus the actual damages, costs, and fees associated with the failure to comply with the protective order. A third party who does not comply with a protective order granted under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 may also be criminally liable under AS 11.56.740 for violating a protective order. As used in this section, "actual or legal notice" means delivery by mail or facsimile at the most recently known place of residence or business of the third party.

(g) The Alaska Court System, after consulting with the Department of Health and Social Services, the office of public advocacy, the office of elder fraud and assistance, the long term care ombudsman, and other interested persons and organizations, shall prepare forms for petitions and protective orders and instructions for use of the forms by a person seeking a protective order under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209. The forms must conform to the Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure and Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, except that information on the forms may be filled in by legible handwriting. The office of the clerk of each superior and district court shall make available to the public the forms a person seeking a protective order may need and instructions for the use of the forms. The clerk shall provide assistance in completing and filing the forms.

(h) Filing fees may not be charged for a petition under AS 13.26.207, for an application under AS 13.26.208, or for a request for modification of a protective order under AS 13.26.209(a).

 Sec. 11. AS 13.26 is amended by adding a new section to article 4 to read:

Sec. 13.26.324. Definitions. In AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.324, unless the context requires otherwise, "fraud" means

(1) robbery, extortion, and coercion under AS 11.41.500 - 11.41.530;

(2) offenses against property under AS 11.46.100 - 11.46.740; or

(3) exploitation of another person or another person's resources for personal profit or advantage if no significant benefit accrues to the person who is exploited.

 Sec. 12. AS 18.65.530(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except as provided in (b) or (c) of this section, a peace officer, with or without a warrant, shall arrest a person if the officer has probable cause to believe the person has, either in or outside the presence of the officer, within the previous 12 hours,

(1) committed domestic violence, except an offense under AS 11.41.100 - 11.41.130, whether the crime is a felony or a misdemeanor;

(2) committed the crime of violating a protective order in violation of AS 11.56.740(a)(1) or (2) [AS 11.56.740];

(3) violated a condition of release imposed under AS 12.30.016(e) or (f) or 12.30.027.

 Sec. 13. AS 18.65.540(a) is amended to read:

(a) The Department of Public Safety shall maintain a central registry of protective orders issued by or filed with a court of this state under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.870, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180. The registry must include, for each protective order, the names of the petitioner and respondent, their dates of birth, and the conditions and duration of the order. The registry shall retain a record of the protective order after it has expired.

 Sec. 14. AS 18.65.540(b) is amended to read:

(b) A peace officer receiving a protective order from a court under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.208, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.855, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180, a modified order issued under AS 13.26.209, AS 18.65.860, or AS 18.66.120, or an order dismissing a protective order shall [, MUST] take reasonable steps to ensure that the order, modified order, or dismissal is entered into the central registry within 24 hours after being received.

 Sec. 15. AS 44.21.415(g) is amended to read:

(g) In this section,

(1) "fraud" means

(A) robbery, extortion, and coercion under AS 11.41.500 - 11.41.530;

(B) [THEFT AND RELATED] offenses against property under AS 11.46.100 - 11.46.740; or

(C) exploitation of another person or another person's resources for personal profit or advantage with no significant benefit accruing to the person who is exploited;

(2) "older Alaskan" means a person residing in the state who is 60 years of age or older.

 Sec. 16. AS 47.24.010(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except as provided in (e) and (f) of this section, the following persons who, in the performance of their professional duties, have reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect shall, not later than 24 hours after first having cause for the belief, report the belief to the department's central information and referral service for vulnerable adults in the office of the department that handles adult protective services:

(1) a physician or other licensed health care provider;

(2) a mental health professional as defined in AS 47.30.915(11) and including a marital and family therapist licensed under AS 08.63;

(3) a pharmacist;

(4) an administrator or employee of a nursing home, residential care, or health care facility;

(5) a guardian or conservator;

(6) a police officer;

(7) a village public safety officer;

(8) a village health aide;

(9) a social worker;

(10) a member of the clergy;

(11) a staff employee of a project funded by the Department of Administration for the provision of services to older Alaskans, the Department of Health and Social Services, or the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault;

(12) an employee of a personal care or home health aide program;

(13) an emergency medical technician or a mobile intensive care paramedic;

(14) a caregiver of the vulnerable adult;

(15) a certified nurse aide;

(16) an educator or administrative staff member of a public or private educational institution.

 Sec. 17. AS 47.24.010(b) is amended to read:

(b) A report made under this section may include the name and address of the reporting person and must include

(1) the name and contact information [ADDRESS] of the vulnerable adult;

(2) information relating to the nature and extent of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect;

(3) other information that the reporting person believes might be helpful in an investigation of the case or in providing protection for the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 18. AS 47.24.010(c) is amended to read:

(c) The department or its designees shall report to the Department of Law any person required by (a) of this section to report who fails to comply with this section. A person listed in (a) of this section who, because of the circumstances, should have had reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect but who knowingly fails to comply with this section is guilty of a class B misdemeanor. If a person convicted under this section is a member of a profession or occupation that is licensed, certified, or regulated by the state, the court shall notify the appropriate licensing, certifying, or regulating entity of the conviction.

 Sec. 19. AS 47.24.010(d) is amended to read:

(d) This section does not prohibit a person listed in (a) of this section, or any other person, from reporting cases of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult that have come to the person's attention in the person's nonoccupational capacity. This section does not prohibit any other person from reporting a harm under this section.

* Sec. 20. AS 47.24.010(e) is amended to read:

(e) If a person making a report under this section believes that immediate action is necessary to protect the vulnerable adult from imminent risk of serious physical harm due to undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect and the reporting person cannot immediately contact the department's central information and referral service for vulnerable adults, the reporting person shall [MAY] make the report to a police officer or a village public safety officer. The police officer or village public safety officer shall take immediate action to protect the vulnerable adult and shall, within 24 hours after receiving the report of harm [AT THE EARLIEST OPPORTUNITY], notify the department. A person may not bring an action for damages against a police officer, a village public safety officer, the state, or a political subdivision of the state based on a decision under this subsection to take or not to take immediate action to protect a vulnerable adult. If a decision is made under this subsection to take immediate action to protect a vulnerable adult, a person may not bring an action for damages based on the protective actions taken unless the protective actions were performed with gross negligence or intentional misconduct; damages awarded in the action may include only direct economic compensatory damages for personal injury.

* Sec. 21. AS 47.24.010(f) is amended to read:

(f) A person listed in (a) of this section who reports to the long term care ombudsman under AS 47.62.015, or to the Department of Health and Social Services, that a vulnerable adult has been unduly influenced, abandoned, exploited, abused, or neglected in an out-of-home care facility is considered to have met the duty to report under (a) of this section.

* Sec. 22. AS 47.24.010 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(i) A person required to report under this section who makes the report to the person's job supervisor or to another individual working for the entity that employs the person is not relieved of the obligation to make the report to the department as required under (a) of this section.

(j) A person who recklessly makes a false report under this section is civilly liable for actual damages suffered by the person who is the subject of the report.

* Sec. 23. AS 47.24.013(a) is amended to read:

(a) If a report received under AS 47.24.010 pertains to [REGARDS] the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult who is 60 years of age or older that is alleged to have been committed by or to have resulted from the negligence of the staff or a volunteer of an out-of-home care facility, including a facility licensed under AS 47.32, in which the vulnerable adult resides, the department shall transfer the report for investigation to the long term care ombudsman under AS 47.62.015.

* Sec. 24. AS 47.24.013(b) is amended to read:

(b) The department shall investigate a report received under AS 47.24.010 regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult who is less than 60 years of age that is alleged to have been committed by or to have resulted from the negligence of the staff or a volunteer of an out-of-home care facility in which the vulnerable adult resides.

* Sec. 25. AS 47.24.013(c) is amended to read:

(c) Upon receipt of a report under (a) or (b) of this section, the long term care ombudsman and the department shall

(1) conduct an investigation as appropriate under AS 47.62.015 or this title, respectively;

(2) coordinate and cooperate in their responses to and investigations of the report if their jurisdictions overlap;

(3) provide the results of their actions or investigations to the central information and referral service of the office of the department that handles adult protective services within 60 days after the receipt of the report.

* Sec. 26. AS 47.24.013(d) is amended to read:

(d) If the long term care ombudsman receives directly a report regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult in an out-of-home care facility, the ombudsman shall provide the report, and the results of the ombudsman's actions or investigations regarding the report, to the central information and referral service of the office of the department that handles adult protective services. The department may investigate the report as described in AS 47.24.015 if the department determines that action is appropriate.

 Sec. 27. AS 47.24.015(a) is amended to read:

(a) Upon the department's receipt of a report under AS 47.24.010 that is not transferred under AS 47.24.013, the department, or its designee, shall promptly initiate an investigation to determine whether the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect. The department, or its designee, shall conduct a face-to-face interview with the subject of the report unless that person is unconscious or the department, or its designee, has determined that a face-to-face interview could further endanger the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 28. AS 47.24.015(c) is amended to read:

(c) The department [,] or its designee [,] shall immediately terminate an investigation under this section upon the request of the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report made under AS 47.24.010. However, the department or its designee may not terminate the investigation if the investigation to that point has resulted in probable cause to believe that the vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and the request is made personally by the vulnerable adult and the vulnerable adult is not competent to make the request on the adult's own behalf, or the request is made by the vulnerable adult's guardian, attorney-in-fact, or surrogate decision maker and that person is the alleged perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult and is being investigated under this chapter. If the department has probable cause to believe that the vulnerable adult is in need of protective services,

(1) the department may petition the court as set out in AS 47.24.019;

(2) the department or its designee may refer the report made to the department under AS 47.24.010 to a police officer for criminal investigation; or

(3) in cases involving fraud, the department or its designee may refer the report made to the department under AS 47.24.010 to the office of public advocacy for investigation; in this paragraph, "fraud" has the meaning given in AS 13.26.324 [AS 44.21.415].

* Sec. 29. AS 47.24.015 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(h) In conducting an investigation under this section, the department may issue subpoenas, conduct interviews, and examine any health care or financial records related to a vulnerable adult. The department may seek a court order to enforce a subpoena.

(i) A person may not interfere with the department in the performance of its investigation under this section, including interfering with the department's access to the vulnerable adult.

(j) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the office of the department that handles adult protective services shall have access to any information compiled or retained by other divisions in the department, regardless of the nature of the information or whether the information is considered confidential, to assist in administering the provisions of this chapter.

(k) The department may audiotape or videotape an interview of a vulnerable adult if the adult has the capacity to consent and gives that consent. The department shall document the consent in its investigative file. The department may not audiotape or videotape an interview of a vulnerable adult who lacks the capacity to consent.

(l) The department shall provide for the training of investigators who investigate reports of harm under this section. Training must include instruction in federal, state, and local laws and policies of the department related to vulnerable adults, and in investigative techniques. The department may require other appropriate training.

(m) In this section, "financial records" include financial records related to the vulnerable adult that are maintained by any person.

* Sec. 30. AS 47.24.016(a) is amended to read:

(a) If the department determines under AS 47.24.015 that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services, but the department cannot obtain the vulnerable adult's consent to receive the services because the vulnerable adult is unable to consent or lacks decision making capacity, and has no guardian, conservator, [OR] attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate for health care decisions under AS 13.52.030 to serve as the vulnerable adult's surrogate decision maker, the department may select from the following list, in the order of priority listed, an individual who is willing to be the vulnerable adult's surrogate decision maker for the purpose of deciding whether to consent to the vulnerable adult's receipt of protective services:

(1) the vulnerable adult's spouse, unless

[(A) THE VULNERABLE ADULT AND THE SPOUSE HAVE SEPARATE DOMICILES; OR

(B)] the vulnerable adult or the spouse have initiated divorce, [OR] dissolution, or legal separation proceedings;

(2) an individual who lives with the vulnerable adult in a spousal relationship or as a domestic partner and who is 18 years of age or older;

(3) a son or daughter of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older;

(4) a parent of the vulnerable adult;

(5) a brother or sister of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older; or

(6) a close friend or relative of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older.

 Sec. 31. AS 47.24.016(b) is amended to read:

(b) An individual from the list in (a) of this section may not be selected as a surrogate decision maker if

(1) the department determines that individual does not possess decision making capacity; or

(2) there are allegations that individual is a perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 32. AS 47.24.016(d) is amended to read:

(d) The department may not continue to provide protective services to a vulnerable adult based on the consent of a surrogate decision maker serving under this section or AS 13.52.030 if the department determines that the vulnerable adult has become able to consent or has regained decision making capacity since the surrogate's consent was given. The department may continue protective services to a vulnerable adult who has become able to consent or has regained decision making capacity only if the vulnerable adult consents.

* Sec. 33. AS 47.24.017(a) is amended to read:

(a) If the department determines under AS 47.24.015 that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and [EITHER] the vulnerable adult, the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, [OR] attorney-in-fact, trustee, [OR] a surrogate decision maker selected under AS 47.24.016, or a surrogate for health care decisions under AS 13.52.030 consents to receipt of the protective services, and to the extent that resources are available, the department shall ensure that the protective services for the vulnerable adult are provided by the department, or its designee, within 10 working days after the department received the report under AS 47.24.010 regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of the vulnerable adult. However, if circumstances beyond the control of the department or the department's designee make it impossible to provide the protective services within the 10 working days, the department shall ensure that the services are provided as soon as possible after that time.

* Sec. 34. AS 47.24.019(c) is amended to read:

(c) If a vulnerable adult who has consented to receive protective services, or on whose behalf consent to receive protective services has been given, is prevented by any person [A CAREGIVER, GUARDIAN, ATTORNEY-IN-FACT, OR SURROGATE DECISION MAKER] from receiving those services, the department may petition the superior court for an injunction restraining the person [CAREGIVER, GUARDIAN, ATTORNEY-IN-FACT, OR SURROGATE DECISION MAKER] from interfering with the provision of protective services to the vulnerable adult.

* Sec. 35. AS 47.24.050 is amended to read:

Sec. 47.24.050. Confidentiality of reports. (a) Investigation reports and reports of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult filed under this chapter are confidential and are not subject to public inspection and copying under AS 40.25.110 - 40.25.125. However, under [IN ACCORDANCE WITH] this chapter and regulations adopted under this chapter, investigation reports may be used by appropriate agencies or individuals inside and outside the state, in connection with investigations or judicial proceedings involving the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult.

(b) The department shall disclose a report of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult if the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report or the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate decision maker consents in writing. The department may not disclose a report of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult to the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate decision maker if that person is an alleged perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult and is being investigated under this chapter. The department shall, upon request, disclose the number of verified reports of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult that occurred at an institution that provides care for vulnerable adults or that were the result of actions or inactions of a public home care provider.

* Sec. 36. AS 47.24.130 is amended to read:

Sec. 47.24.130. Treatment through spiritual means. This chapter may not be construed to mean that a person is unduly influenced, abused, neglected, self-neglected, vulnerable, unable to consent, abandoned, exploited, or in need of emergency or protective services for the sole reason that the person relies on or is being furnished treatment by spiritual means through prayer alone under [IN ACCORDANCE WITH] the tenets and practices of a church or religious denomination of which the person is a member or adherent, if [PROVIDED THAT] the person consents to the treatment through spiritual means only and the treatment is administered by an accredited practitioner of the church or religious denomination. In this section, "church or religious denomination" has the meaning given to "religious organization" in AS 05.15.690.

* Sec. 37. AS 47.24.900(2) is amended to read:

(2) "abuse" means

(A) the [WILFUL,] intentional, knowing, or reckless nonaccidental [,] and nontherapeutic infliction of physical pain, injury, [OR] mental or emotional distress, or fear, including coercion and intimidation; or

(B) sexual assault under AS 11.41.410 or 11.41.420;

 Sec. 38. AS 47.24.900(3) is amended to read:

(3) "caregiver" means

(A) a person who is providing care to a vulnerable adult as a result of a family relationship, or who has assumed some or all responsibility for the care of a vulnerable adult voluntarily, by contract, as an employee of a business that provides care in an adult's home, or by court order; or

(B) an employee of an out-of-home care facility who provides care to one or more vulnerable adults;

 Sec. 39. AS 47.24.900(4) is amended to read:

(4) "decision making capacity" means the ability to understand and appreciate the nature and consequences of a decision and the ability to reach and communicate an informed decision; in this paragraph, "informed decision" includes a decision made by the vulnerable adult that is free from undue influence;

 Sec. 40. AS 47.24.900(7) is amended to read:

(7) "exploitation"

(A) means unjust or improper use of another person or another person's resources for one's own profit or advantage, with or without the person's consent; and

(B) includes acts by a person who stands in a position of trust or confidence with a vulnerable adult or who knows or should know that the vulnerable adult lacks the capacity to consent that involve obtaining profit or advantage through undue influence, deception, fraud, intimidation, or breach of fiduciary duty; in this paragraph, "fraud" has the meaning given in AS 13.26.324(1) and (2);

 Sec. 41. AS 47.24.900(9) is amended to read:

(9) "neglect" means the intentional, knowing, or reckless failure by a caregiver to provide essential care or services or access to essential care or services or to carry out a prescribed treatment plan necessary to maintain the physical and mental health of the vulnerable adult when the vulnerable adult is unable to provide or obtain the essential care or services or to carry out the prescribed treatment plan on the vulnerable adult's own behalf; in this paragraph, "essential care or services" includes food, clothing, shelter, medical care, and supervision;

 Sec. 42. AS 47.24.900(11) is amended to read:

(11) "protective services" means services that are intended to prevent or alleviate harm resulting from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect and that are provided to a vulnerable adult in need of protection; in this paragraph, "services" ["PROTECTIVE SERVICES"] includes

(A) protective placement;

(B) applying for or obtaining public benefits;

(C) obtaining health care services and supplies;

(D) staying financial transactions;

(E) petitioning for a protective order under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209;

(F) assisting with personal hygiene;

(G) obtaining food and clothing;

(H) protection from physical and emotional abuse;

(I) obtaining representative payee services; and

(J) coordinating protective services;

 Sec. 43. AS 47.24.900(15) is amended to read:

(15) "unable to consent" means refusal to, or inability to, accept services because

(A) the person is an incapacitated person or apparently is an incapacitated person;

(B) of coercion by or fear of reprisal from the perpetrator of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect;

(C) of dependency on the perpetrator of undue influence,

abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect for services, care, or support; or

(D) of an inability to perceive that refusal to consent results in an imminent and substantial danger of loss, waste, or dissipation of income or assets, eviction, physical or mental harm to self or others, or death [OR IRREPARABLE HARM TO SELF OR OTHERS];

 Sec. 44. AS 47.24.900(16) is amended to read:

(16) "vulnerable adult" means a person 18 years of age or older who, because of incapacity, mental illness, mental deficiency, physical illness or disability, advanced age, chronic use of drugs, chronic intoxication, fraud, confinement, or disappearance [PHYSICAL OR MENTAL IMPAIRMENT], is unable to meet the person's own needs or to seek help without assistance.

 Sec. 45. AS 47.24.900 is amended by adding new paragraphs to read:

(17) "deception" means creating, reinforcing, or failing to correct a false impression or preventing another person from acquiring information that would affect the person's judgment regarding a transaction;

(18) "fiduciary duty" means the duty of a third party who stands in a position of trust or confidence with another person, including a vulnerable adult, to act with due regard for the benefit and interest of that person;

(19) "financial institution" means an institution subject to state or federal banking or financial regulations, including

(A) a broker-dealer;

(B) a commercial bank;

(C) a savings bank;

(D) a credit union;

(E) a premium finance company;

(F) a small loan company;

(G) a bank holding company;

(H) a financial holding company;

(I) a trust company;

(J) a savings and loan association;

(K) a deferred deposit advance licensee;

(L) an investment bank;

(M) an insurance company subject to regulation by AS 21;

(N) a licensee subject to regulation by AS 21; and

(20) "person who stands in a position of trust or confidence" means a person who

(A) is a relative by blood or marriage;

(B) is a joint tenant or tenant in common;

(C) has a legal or fiduciary relationship; or

(D) is a person who has been entrusted with or has assumed responsibility for the use or management of the vulnerable adult's assets or income;

(21) "undue influence" means the use by a person who stands in a position of trust or confidence of the person's role, relationship, or authority to wrongfully exploit the trust, dependency, or fear of a vulnerable adult to gain control over the decision making of the vulnerable adult, including decision making related to finances, property, residence, and health care.

 Sec. 46. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

DIRECT COURT RULE AMENDMENT. Rule 12(h), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, is amended to read:

(h) Continuance of Trial. A motion for continuance of a trial date will be granted by the court only for cause shown. In deciding whether to grant the motion, the court shall consider the victim's circumstances and the effect the delay would have on the victim, particularly a victim of advanced age or extreme youth. The court shall place its findings on the record. The presiding judge of a judicial district may require that a visiting or pro tem judge obtain approval from the presiding judge before granting any continuance of trial.

 Sec. 47. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

DIRECT COURT RULE AMENDMENT. Rule 45(a), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, is amended to read:

(a) Priorities in Scheduling Criminal Cases. The court shall provide for placing criminal proceedings upon appropriate calendars. Preference shall be given to criminal proceedings and the trial of defendants in custody shall be given preference over other criminal cases. The court shall consider the circumstances of the victim, particularly a victim of advanced age or extreme youth, in setting the trial date. Trial dates in criminal cases in the superior court shall be set at the time of arraignment, and if a trial date is thereafter vacated, the trial shall be immediately set for a date certain.

 Sec. 48. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

INDIRECT COURT RULE AMENDMENTS. (a) AS 13.26.207, 13.26.208, and 13.26.209(a) - (g), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, have the effect of amending Rule 17, Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure, relating to conservatorships and protective proceedings, by allowing ex parte and temporary orders and modifications of orders to be issued related to protecting the assets of a person otherwise subject to AS 13.26.165 from financial exploitation.

(b) AS 13.26.209(h), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, has the effect of amending Rule 9, Alaska Rules of Administration, by requiring that filing fees may not be charged for a petition for an ex parte protective order under AS 13.26.207 for an application for a temporary order under AS 13.26.208, or for modification of a protective order under AS 13.26.209(a), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act.

(c) AS 13.26.206, enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, has the effect of amending Rule 77, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, by requiring a hearing within 72 hours of the filing of a petition for the appointment of a temporary conservator.

(d) AS 13.26.208, enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, has the effect of amending Rule 77, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, by providing for a hearing on an application for a temporary protective order on 10 days' notice.

(e) AS 13.26.209(a) and (b), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, have the effect of amending Rule 77, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, by providing for a hearing on a request for modification of a protective order on 20 days' notice and for modification of an ex parte protective order on three days' notice.

 Sec. 49. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

APPLICABILITY. Sections 3 - 5, 46, and 47 of this Act apply to offenses committed on or after the effective date of secs. 3 - 5 of this Act.

 Sec. 50. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

REVISOR'S INSTRUCTIONS. The revisor of statutes is instructed to change the catch line of

(1) AS 47.24.010 from "Reports of harm" to "Persons required to report; reports of harm";

(2) AS 47.24.013 from "Reports of abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of vulnerable adults in out-of-home care facilities" to "Reports of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of vulnerable adults in out-of-home care facilities."

 Sec. 51. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

CONDITIONAL EFFECT. (a) AS 13.26.207 and 13.26.209(a) - (g), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, take effect only if sec. 48(a) of this Act receives the two-thirds vote of each house required by art. IV, sec. 15, Constitution of the State of Alaska.

(b) AS 13.26.209(h), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, takes effect only if sec. 48(b) of this Act receives the two-thirds vote of each house required by art. IV, sec. 15, Constitution of the State of Alaska.

(c) AS 13.26.206, enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, takes effect only if sec. 48(c) of this Act receives the two-thirds vote of each house required by art. IV, sec. 15, Constitution of the State of Alaska.

(d) AS 13.26.208, enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, takes effect only if sec. 48(a) and (d) of this Act receive the two-thirds vote of each house required by art. IV, sec. 15, Constitution of the State of Alaska.

(1) issued or filed under AS 18.66 and containing a provision listed in AS 18.66.100(c)(1) - (7) and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act with reckless disregard that the act violates or would violate a provision of the protective order; [OR]

(2) issued under AS 18.65.850, 18.65.855, or 18.65.860 and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act that violates or would violate a provision listed in AS 18.65.850(c)(1) - (3); or

(3) issued under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act with reckless disregard that the act violates or would violate a provision of the protective order.

 Sec. 4. AS 11.56.740(c) is amended to read:

(c) In this section, "protective order" means an order issued or filed under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.870, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180.

 Sec. 5. AS 12.55.155(c) is amended by adding a new paragraph to read:

(35) the defendant knowingly directed the conduct constituting the offense at a victim because that person was 65 years of age or older.

 Sec. 6. AS 13.26.165 is amended to read:

Sec. 13.26.165. Protective proceedings. Upon petition and after notice and hearing in accordance with the provisions of AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.315, the court may appoint a conservator or issue another [MAKE OTHER] protective order for cause as follows:

(1) appointment of a conservator or other protective order may be made in relation to the estate and affairs of a minor if the court determines that

(A) a minor owns money or property that requires management or protection that [WHICH] cannot otherwise be provided;

(B) the minor [,] has or may have business affairs that [WHICH] may be jeopardized or prevented by the status of being a minor; [,] or

(C) [THAT] funds are needed for the minor's support and education and [THAT] protection is necessary or desirable to obtain or provide funds;

(2) appointment of a conservator or other protective order may be made in relation to the estate and affairs of a person if the court determines that

(A) the person is unable to manage the person's property and affairs effectively for reasons such as mental illness, mental deficiency, physical illness or disability, advanced age, chronic use of drugs, chronic intoxication, fraud, confinement, detention by a foreign power, or disappearance; and

(B) the person has property that [WHICH] will be wasted or dissipated unless proper management is provided, or that funds are needed for the support, care, and welfare of the person or those entitled to be supported by the person and [THAT] protection is necessary or desirable to obtain or provide funds.

 Sec. 7. AS 13.26.180(a) is amended to read:

(a) The person to be protected, a person's attorney or other legal representative, any person who is interested in the estate, affairs, or welfare of the person to be protected, including a parent, guardian, [OR] custodian, or caregiver, the Department of Health and Social Services, or any person who would be adversely affected by lack of effective management of the property and affairs of the person to be protected, may petition for the appointment of a conservator or for other appropriate protective order.

 Sec. 8. AS 13.26.180 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(c) The petition may include a request for temporary conservatorship as provided in AS 13.26.206 if it appears that the respondent's property is likely to be wasted or dissipated during the pendency of the conservatorship proceeding. A request for temporary conservatorship must specify the facts that cause the petitioner to believe that a temporary conservatorship is necessary.

* Sec. 9. AS 13.26.185 is amended by adding a subsection to read:

(c) This section does not apply to a petition or order for an ex parte protective order filed under AS 13.26.207 or a temporary protective order filed under AS 13.26.208.

* Sec. 10. AS 13.26 is amended by adding new sections to read:

Sec. 13.26.206. Temporary conservators. (a) If, during the pendency of an initial petition for conservatorship, it appears that the respondent is in need of a protective order to protect the respondent against waste or dissipation of funds or property, or to obtain funds that are needed for the immediate support, care, and welfare of the respondent or persons entitled to be supported by the respondent, and the respondent is not capable of protecting the respondent's funds or property or obtaining the funds that are needed to support the respondent or persons whom the respondent is required to support, the petitioner may request the appointment of a temporary conservator to authorize the protection or to obtain the necessary funds. The request must state the reasons and factual basis for the request. The petitioner shall immediately file the request with the court and serve copies on the respondent and the respondent's attorney and other persons as ordered by the court. The court shall appoint an attorney for a respondent who is unrepresented to be at the hearing and conduct a hearing within 72 hours after the filing.

(b) If the court determines that a temporary conservator should be appointed, it shall make the appointment and grant to the temporary conservator only the authority that is least restrictive upon the liberty of the respondent and that enables the temporary conservator to provide the protection or authority necessary to protect the respondent from waste or dissipation of funds or property or to obtain the funds necessary for support.

(c) The temporary conservatorship expires at the time of the appointment of a full or partial conservator or on the dismissal of the petition for conservatorship.

Sec. 13.26.207. Ex parte protective orders. (a) A person who is allowed to file a petition for a protective order under AS 13.26.180(a) may file a petition for an ex parte protective order against a person other than the protected person. A petition filed on behalf of a protected person by a person other than the protected person must be accompanied by proof of service of the petition on the protected person or the person's attorney unless service would cause an immediate threat of harm to the best interests of the protected person and the petition includes a written explanation of the harm. If the court finds that the petition establishes probable cause that the respondent is financially defrauding the petitioner or a person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition and that, because of the fraud, there has been or is an immediate threat of a waste or dissipation of the proposed protected person's funds or other property, the court shall ex parte and without notice to the respondent issue a protective order. The petitioner shall certify to the court in writing any effort that the petitioner made to provide notice to the respondent.

(b) An ex parte protective order under this section may

(1) grant any protection described in AS 13.26.200;

(2) supersede an existing power of attorney;

(3) prohibit the respondent from having any direct or indirect contact with the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition; and

(4) prohibit the respondent from taking any act with respect to the funds or other property of the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition.

(c) An ex parte protective order expires 20 days after it is issued, unless dissolved earlier by the court at the request of the petitioner or respondent and after notice and, if requested, a hearing, or on the earlier appointment of a temporary or permanent conservator.

Sec. 13.26.208. Temporary protective orders; conversions. On application filed with the court before the expiration of a 20-day ex parte protective order issued under AS 13.26.207, the court shall schedule a hearing on whether to convert the protective order to a temporary order effective for up to six months. The court shall provide to the protected person and the respondent at least 10 days' notice of the hearing and the respondent's right to appear and be heard. If the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the respondent has committed fraud against the petitioner or the person for whose benefit the petition was filed, regardless of whether the respondent appears at the hearing, the court may convert the ex parte protective order to a temporary protective order effective for up to six months.

Sec. 13.26.209. Protective orders; modification; third-party compliance; forms; fees. (a) The petitioner, respondent, or protected person, if the protected person is a vulnerable adult, may request modification of a protective order issued under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209. If a request is made for modification of a protective order, the court shall schedule a hearing on three days' notice or on shorter notice as the court may prescribe. If the court modifies a protective order, the court shall issue a modified order and shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the order is understood by the petitioner, the respondent, and the protected person who are present at the hearing.

(b) The court shall cause a copy of a protective order, any related orders, and a scheduling order, if any, to be served on the respondent and the protected person.

(c) A protective order issued under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 is in addition to any other civil or criminal remedy.

(d) A third party that has received actual or legal notice of a protective order issued under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 shall comply with the order. A third party who does not comply with a protective order granted under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 may be liable in a civil action to the protected person or the protected person's heirs, assigns, or estate for a civil penalty not to exceed $1,000, plus the actual damages, costs, and fees associated with the failure to comply with the protective order. A third party who does not comply with a protective order granted under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 may also be criminally liable under AS 11.56.740 for violating a protective order. As used in this section, "actual or legal notice" means delivery by mail or facsimile at the most recently known place of residence or business of the third party.

(e) The Alaska Court System, after consulting with the Department of Health and Social Services, the office of public advocacy, the office of elder fraud and assistance, the long term care ombudsman, and other interested persons and organizations, shall prepare forms for petitions and protective orders and instructions for use of the forms by a person seeking a protective order under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209. The forms must conform to the Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure and Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, except that information on the forms may be filled in by legible handwriting. The office of the clerk of each superior and district court shall make available to the public the forms a person seeking a protective order may need and instructions for the use of the forms. The clerk shall provide assistance in completing and filing the forms.

(f) Filing fees may not be charged for a petition under AS 13.26.207, for an application under AS 13.26.208, or for a request for modification of a protective order under AS 13.26.209(a).

* Sec. 11. AS 13.26 is amended by adding a new section to article 4 to read:

Sec. 13.26.324. Definitions. In AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.324, unless the context requires otherwise, "fraud" means

(1) robbery, extortion, and coercion under AS 11.41.500 - 11.41.530;

(2) offenses against property under AS 11.46.100 - 11.46.740; or

(3) exploitation of another person or another person's resources for personal profit or advantage if no significant benefit accrues to the person who is exploited.

* Sec. 12. AS 18.65.530(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except as provided in (b) or (c) of this section, a peace officer, with or without a warrant, shall arrest a person if the officer has probable cause to believe the person has, either in or outside the presence of the officer, within the previous 12 hours,

(1) committed domestic violence, except an offense under AS 11.41.100 - 11.41.130, whether the crime is a felony or a misdemeanor;

(2) committed the crime of violating a protective order in violation of AS 11.56.740(a)(1) or (2) [AS 11.56.740];

(3) violated a condition of release imposed under AS 12.30.016(e) or (f) or 12.30.027.

 Sec. 13. AS 18.65.540(a) is amended to read:

(a) The Department of Public Safety shall maintain a central registry of protective orders issued by or filed with a court of this state under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.870, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180. The registry must include, for each protective order, the names of the petitioner and respondent, their dates of birth, and the conditions and duration of the order. The registry shall retain a record of the protective order after it has expired.

 Sec. 14. AS 18.65.540(b) is amended to read:

(b) A peace officer receiving a protective order from a court under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.208. AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.855, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180, a modified order issued under AS 13.26.209, AS 18.65.860, or AS 18.66.120, or an order dismissing a protective order shall [, MUST] take reasonable steps to ensure that the order, modified order, or dismissal is entered into the central registry within 24 hours after being received.

 Sec. 15. AS 44.21.415(g) is amended to read:

(g) In this section,

(1) "fraud" means

(A) robbery, extortion, and coercion under AS 11.41.500 - 11.41.530;

(B) [THEFT AND RELATED] offenses against property under AS 11.46.100 - 11.46.740; or

(C) exploitation of another person or another person's resources for personal profit or advantage with no significant benefit accruing to the person who is exploited;

(2) "older Alaskan" means a person residing in the state who is 60 years of age or older.

 Sec. 16. AS 47.24.010(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except as provided in (e) and (f) of this section, the following persons who, in the performance of their professional duties, have reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect shall, not later than 24 hours after first having cause for the belief, report the belief to the department's central information and referral service for vulnerable adults in the office of the department that handles adult protective services:

(1) a physician or other licensed health care provider;

(2) a mental health professional as defined in AS 47.30.915(11) and including a marital and family therapist licensed under AS 08.63;

(3) a pharmacist;

(4) an administrator or employee of a nursing home, residential care, or health care facility;

(5) a guardian or conservator;

(6) a police officer;

(7) a village public safety officer;

(8) a village health aide;

(9) a social worker;

(10) a member of the clergy;

(11) a staff employee of a project funded by the Department of Administration for the provision of services to older Alaskans, the Department of Health and Social Services, or the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault;

(12) an employee of a personal care or home health aide program;

(13) an emergency medical technician or a mobile intensive care paramedic;

(14) a caregiver of the vulnerable adult;

(15) a certified nurse aide;

(16) an educator or administrative staff member of a public or private educational institution.

* Sec. 17. AS 47.24.010(b) is amended to read:

(b) A report made under this section may include the name and address of the reporting person and must include

(1) the name and contact information [ADDRESS] of the vulnerable adult;

(2) information relating to the nature and extent of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect;

(3) other information that the reporting person believes might be helpful in an investigation of the case or in providing protection for the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 18. AS 47.24.010(c) is amended to read:

(c) The department or its designees shall report to the Department of Law any person required by (a) of this section to report who fails to comply with this section. A person listed in (a) of this section who, because of the circumstances, should have had reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect but who knowingly fails to comply with this section is guilty of a class B misdemeanor. If a person convicted under this section is a member of a profession or occupation that is licensed, certified, or regulated by the state, the court shall notify the appropriate licensing, certifying, or regulating entity of the conviction.

 Sec. 19. AS 47.24.010(d) is amended to read:

(d) This section does not prohibit a person listed in (a) of this section, or any other person, from reporting cases of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult that have come to the person's attention in the person's nonoccupational capacity. This section does not prohibit any other person from reporting a harm under this section.

 Sec. 20. AS 47.24.010(e) is amended to read:

(e) If a person making a report under this section believes that immediate action is necessary to protect the vulnerable adult from imminent risk of serious physical harm due to undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect and the reporting person cannot immediately contact the department's central information and referral service for vulnerable adults, the reporting person shall [MAY] make the report to a police officer or a village public safety officer. The police officer or village public safety officer shall take immediate action to protect the vulnerable adult and shall, within 24 hours after receiving the report of harm [AT THE EARLIEST OPPORTUNITY], notify the department. A person may not bring an action for damages against a police officer, a village public safety officer, the state, or a political subdivision of the state based on a decision under this subsection to take or not to take immediate action to protect a vulnerable adult. If a decision is made under this subsection to take immediate action to protect a vulnerable adult, a person may not bring an action for damages based on the protective actions taken unless the protective actions were performed with gross negligence or intentional misconduct; damages awarded in the action may include only direct economic compensatory damages for personal injury.

* Sec. 21. AS 47.24.010(f) is amended to read:

(f) A person listed in (a) of this section who reports to the long term care ombudsman under AS 47.62.015, or to the Department of Health and Social Services, that a vulnerable adult has been unduly influenced, abandoned, exploited, abused, or neglected in an out-of-home care facility is considered to have met the duty to report under (a) of this section.

* Sec. 22. AS 47.24.010 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(i) A person required to report under this section who makes the report to the person's job supervisor or to another individual working for the entity that employs the person is not relieved of the obligation to make the report to the department as required under (a) of this section.

(j) A person who recklessly makes a false report under this section is civilly liable for actual damages suffered by the person who is the subject of the report.

* Sec. 23. AS 47.24.013(a) is amended to read:

(a) If a report received under AS 47.24.010 pertains to [REGARDS] the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult who is 60 years of age or older that is alleged to have been committed by or to have resulted from the negligence of the staff or a volunteer of an out-of-home care facility, including a facility licensed under AS 47.32, in which the vulnerable adult resides, the department shall transfer the report for investigation to the long term care ombudsman under AS 47.62.015.

* Sec. 24. AS 47.24.013(b) is amended to read:

(b) The department shall investigate a report received under AS 47.24.010 regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult who is less than 60 years of age that is alleged to have been committed by or to have resulted from the negligence of the staff or a volunteer of an out-of-home care facility in which the vulnerable adult resides.

 Sec. 25. AS 47.24.013(c) is amended to read:

(c) Upon receipt of a report under (a) or (b) of this section, the long term care ombudsman and the department shall

(1) conduct an investigation as appropriate under AS 47.62.015 or this title, respectively;

(2) coordinate and cooperate in their responses to and investigations of the report if their jurisdictions overlap;

(3) provide the results of their actions or investigations to the central information and referral service of the office of the department that handles adult protective services within 60 days after the receipt of the report.

 Sec. 26. AS 47.24.013(d) is amended to read:

(d) If the long term care ombudsman receives directly a report regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult in an out-of-home care facility, the ombudsman shall provide the report, and the results of the ombudsman's actions or investigations regarding the report, to the central information and referral service of the office of the department that handles adult protective services. The department may investigate the report as described in AS 47.24.015 if the department determines that action is appropriate.

 Sec. 27. AS 47.24.015(a) is amended to read:

(a) Upon the department's receipt of a report under AS 47.24.010 that is not transferred under AS 47.24.013, the department, or its designee, shall promptly initiate an investigation to determine whether the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect. The department, or its designee, shall conduct a face-to-face interview with the subject of the report unless that person is unconscious or the department, or its designee, has determined that a face-to-face interview could further endanger the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 28. AS 47.24.015(c) is amended to read:

(c) The department [,] or its designee [,] shall immediately terminate an investigation under this section upon the request of the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report made under AS 47.24.010. However, the department or its designee may not terminate the investigation if the investigation to that point has resulted in probable cause to believe that the vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and the request is made personally by the vulnerable adult and the vulnerable adult is not competent to make the request on the adult's own behalf, or the request is made by the vulnerable adult's guardian, attorney-in-fact, or surrogate decision maker and that person is the alleged perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult and is being investigated under this chapter. If the department has probable cause to believe that the vulnerable adult is in need of protective services,

(1) the department may petition the court as set out in AS 47.24.019;

(2) the department or its designee may refer the report made to the department under AS 47.24.010 to a police officer for criminal investigation; or

(3) in cases involving fraud, the department or its designee may refer the report made to the department under AS 47.24.010 to the office of public advocacy for investigation; in this paragraph, "fraud" has the meaning given in AS 13.26.324 [AS 44.21.415].

* Sec. 29. AS 47.24.015 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(h) In conducting an investigation under this section, the department may issue subpoenas, conduct interviews, and examine any health care or financial records related to a vulnerable adult. The department may seek a court order to enforce a subpoena.

(i) A person may not interfere with the department in the performance of its investigation under this section, including interfering with the department's access to the vulnerable adult.

(j) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the office of the department that handles adult protective services shall have access to any information compiled or retained by other divisions in the department, regardless of the nature of the information or whether the information is considered confidential, to assist in administering the provisions of this chapter.

(k) The department may audiotape or videotape an interview of a vulnerable adult if the adult has the capacity to consent and gives that consent. The department shall document the consent in its investigative file. The department may not audiotape or videotape an interview of a vulnerable adult who lacks the capacity to consent.

(l) The department shall provide for the training of investigators who investigate reports of harm under this section. Training must include instruction in federal, state, and local laws and policies of the department related to vulnerable adults, and in investigative techniques. The department may require other appropriate training.

(m) In this section, "financial records" include financial records related to the vulnerable adult that are maintained by any person.

 Sec. 30. AS 47.24.016(a) is amended to read:

(a) If the department determines under AS 47.24.015 that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services, but the department cannot obtain the vulnerable adult's consent to receive the services because the vulnerable adult is unable to consent or lacks decision making capacity, and has no guardian, conservator, [OR] attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate for health care decisions under AS 13.52.030 to serve as the vulnerable adult's surrogate decision maker, the department may select from the following list, in the order of priority listed, an individual who is willing to be the vulnerable adult's surrogate decision maker for the purpose of deciding whether to consent to the vulnerable adult's receipt of protective services:

(1) the vulnerable adult's spouse, unless

[(A) THE VULNERABLE ADULT AND THE SPOUSE HAVE SEPARATE DOMICILES; OR

(B)] the vulnerable adult or the spouse have initiated divorce, [OR] dissolution, or legal separation proceedings;

(2) an individual who lives with the vulnerable adult in a spousal relationship or as a domestic partner and who is 18 years of age or older;

(3) a son or daughter of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older;

(4) a parent of the vulnerable adult;

(5) a brother or sister of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older; or

(6) a close friend or relative of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older.

* Sec. 31. AS 47.24.016(b) is amended to read:

(b) An individual from the list in (a) of this section may not be selected as a surrogate decision maker if

(1) the department determines that individual does not possess decision making capacity; or

(2) there are allegations that individual is a perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult.

* Sec. 32. AS 47.24.016(d) is amended to read:

(d) The department may not continue to provide protective services to a vulnerable adult based on the consent of a surrogate decision maker serving under this section or AS 13.52.030 if the department determines that the vulnerable adult has become able to consent or has regained decision making capacity since the surrogate's consent was given. The department may continue protective services to a vulnerable adult who has become able to consent or has regained decision making capacity only if the vulnerable adult consents.

* Sec. 33. AS 47.24.017(a) is amended to read:

(a) If the department determines under AS 47.24.015 that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and [EITHER] the vulnerable adult, the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, [OR] attorney-in-fact, trustee, [OR] a surrogate decision maker selected under AS 47.24.016, or a surrogate for health care decisions under AS 13.52.030 consents to receipt of the protective services, and to the extent that resources are available, the department shall ensure that the protective services for the vulnerable adult are provided by the department, or its designee, within 10 working days after the department received the report under AS 47.24.010 regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of the vulnerable adult. However, if circumstances beyond the control of the department or the department's designee make it impossible to provide the protective services within the 10 working days, the department shall ensure that the services are provided as soon as possible after that time.

 Sec. 34. AS 47.24.019(c) is amended to read:

(c) If a vulnerable adult who has consented to receive protective services, or on whose behalf consent to receive protective services has been given, is prevented by any person [A CAREGIVER, GUARDIAN, ATTORNEY-IN-FACT, OR SURROGATE DECISION MAKER] from receiving those services, the department may petition the superior court for an injunction restraining the person [CAREGIVER, GUARDIAN, ATTORNEY-IN-FACT, OR SURROGATE DECISION MAKER] from interfering with the provision of protective services to the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 35. AS 47.24.050 is amended to read:

Sec. 47.24.050. Confidentiality of reports. (a) Investigation reports and reports of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult filed under this chapter are confidential and are not subject to public inspection and copying under AS 40.25.110 - 40.25.125. However, under [IN ACCORDANCE WITH] this chapter and regulations adopted under this chapter, investigation reports may be used by appropriate agencies or individuals inside and outside the state, in connection with investigations or judicial proceedings involving the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult.

(b) The department shall disclose a report of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult if the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report or the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate decision maker consents in writing. The department may not disclose a report of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult to the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate decision maker if that person is an alleged perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult and is being investigated under this chapter. The department shall, upon request, disclose the number of verified reports of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult that occurred at an institution that provides care for vulnerable adults or that were the result of actions or inactions of a public home care provider.

* Sec. 36. AS 47.24.130 is amended to read:

Sec. 47.24.130. Treatment through spiritual means. This chapter may not be construed to mean that a person is unduly influenced, abused, neglected, self-neglected, vulnerable, unable to consent, abandoned, exploited, or in need of emergency or protective services for the sole reason that the person relies on or is being furnished treatment by spiritual means through prayer alone under [IN ACCORDANCE WITH] the tenets and practices of a church or religious denomination of which the person is a member or adherent, if [PROVIDED THAT] the person consents to the treatment through spiritual means only and the treatment is administered by an accredited practitioner of the church or religious denomination. In this section, "church or religious denomination" has the meaning given to "religious organization" in AS 05.15.690.

* Sec. 37. AS 47.24.900(2) is amended to read:

(2) "abuse" means

(A) the [WILFUL,] intentional, knowing, or reckless nonaccidental [,] and nontherapeutic infliction of physical pain, injury, [OR] mental or emotional distress, or fear, including coercion and intimidation; or

(B) sexual assault under AS 11.41.410 or 11.41.420;

* Sec. 38. AS 47.24.900(3) is amended to read:

(3) "caregiver" means

(A) a person who is providing care to a vulnerable adult as a result of a family relationship, or who has assumed some or all responsibility for the care of a vulnerable adult voluntarily, by contract, as an employee of a business that provides care in an adult's home, or by court order; or

(B) an employee of an out-of-home care facility who provides care to one or more vulnerable adults;

* Sec. 39. AS 47.24.900(4) is amended to read:

(4) "decision making capacity" means the ability to understand and appreciate the nature and consequences of a decision and the ability to reach and communicate an informed decision; in this paragraph, "informed decision" includes a decision made by the vulnerable adult that is free from undue influence;

* Sec. 40. AS 47.24.900(7) is amended to read:

(7) "exploitation"

(A) means unjust or improper use of another person or another person's resources for one's own profit or advantage, with or without the person's consent; and

(B) includes acts by a person who stands in a position of trust or confidence with a vulnerable adult or who knows or should know that the vulnerable adult lacks the capacity to consent that involve obtaining profit or advantage through undue influence, deception, fraud, intimidation, or breach of fiduciary duty; in this paragraph, "fraud" has the meaning given in AS 13.26.324(1) and (2);

* Sec. 41. AS 47.24.900(9) is amended to read:

(M) an insurance company subject to regulation by AS 21;

(N) a licensee subject to regulation by AS 21; and

(O) an investment adviser;

(20) "person who stands in a position of trust or confidence" means a person who

(A) is a relative by blood or marriage;

(B) is a joint tenant or tenant in common;

(C) has a legal or fiduciary relationship; or

(D) is a person who has been entrusted with or has assumed responsibility for the use or management of the vulnerable adult's assets or income;

(21) "undue influence" means the use by a person who stands in a position of trust or confidence of the person's role, relationship, or authority to wrongfully exploit the trust, dependency, or fear of a vulnerable adult to gain control over the decision making of the vulnerable adult, including decision making related to finances, property, residence, and health care.

 Sec. 46. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

DIRECT COURT RULE AMENDMENT. Rule 12(h), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, is amended to read:

(h) Continuance of Trial. A motion for continuance of a trial date will be granted by the court only for cause shown. In deciding whether to grant the motion, the court shall consider the victim's circumstances and the effect the delay would have on the victim, particularly a victim of advanced age or extreme youth. The court shall place its findings on the record. The presiding judge of a judicial district may require that a visiting or pro tem judge obtain approval from the presiding judge before granting any continuance of trial.

 Sec. 47. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

DIRECT COURT RULE AMENDMENT. Rule 45(a), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, is amended to read:

(a) Priorities in Scheduling Criminal Cases. The court shall provide for placing criminal proceedings upon appropriate calendars. Preference shall be given to criminal proceedings and the trial of defendants in custody shall be given preference over other criminal cases. The court shall consider the circumstances of the victim, particularly a victim of advanced age or extreme youth, in setting the trial date. Trial dates in criminal cases in the superior court shall be set at the time of arraignment, and if a trial date is thereafter vacated, the trial shall be immediately set for a date certain.

 Sec. 48. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

INDIRECT COURT RULE AMENDMENTS. (a) AS 13.26.207, 13.26.208, and 13.26.209(a) - (e), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, have the effect of amending Rule 17, Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure, relating to conservatorships and protective proceedings, by allowing ex parte and temporary orders and modifications of orders to be issued related to protecting the assets of a person otherwise subject to AS 13.26.165 from financial exploitation.

(b) AS 13.26.209(f), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, has the effect of amending Rule 9, Alaska Rules of Administration, by requiring that filing fees may not be charged for a petition for an ex parte protective order under AS 13.26.207 for an application for a temporary order under AS 13.26.208, or for modification of a protective order under AS 13.26.209(a), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act.

(c) AS 13.26.206, enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, has the effect of amending Rule 77, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, by requiring a hearing within 72 hours of the filing of a petition for the appointment of a temporary conservator.

(d) AS 13.26.208, enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, has the effect of amending Rule 77, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, by providing for a hearing on an application for a temporary protective order on 10 days' notice.

* Sec. 49. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

APPLICABILITY. Sections 3 - 5, 46, and 47 of this Act apply to offenses committed on or after the effective date of secs. 3 - 5 of this Act.

* Sec. 50. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

REVISOR'S INSTRUCTIONS. The revisor of statutes is instructed to change the catch line of

(1) AS 47.24.010 from "Reports of harm" to "Persons required to report; reports of harm";

(2) AS 47.24.013 from "Reports of abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of vulnerable adults in out-of-home care facilities" to "Reports of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of vulnerable adults in out-of-home care facilities."

* Sec. 51. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

CONDITIONAL EFFECT. (a) AS 13.26.207 and 13.26.209(a) - (e), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, take effect only if sec. 48(a) of this Act receives the two-thirds vote of each house required by art. IV, sec. 15, Constitution of the State of Alaska.

(b) AS 13.26.209(f), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, takes effect only if sec. 48(b) of this Act receives the two-thirds vote of each house required by art. IV, sec. 15, Constitution of the State of Alaska.

(c) AS 13.26.206, enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, takes effect only if sec. 48(c) of this Act receives the two-thirds vote of each house required by art. IV, sec. 15, Constitution of the State of Alaska.

(d) AS 13.26.208, enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, takes effect only if sec. 48(a) and (d) of this Act receive the two-thirds vote of each house required by art. IV, sec. 15, Constitution of the State of Alaska.

* Sec. 52. Sections 16 and 20 of this Act take effect September 1, 2011.

* Sec. 53. Except as provided in sec. 52 of this Act, this Act takes effect July 1, 2011.

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

TWENTY-SEVENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

BY THE SENATE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

Offered:
Referred:

Sponsor(s): SENATE RULES COMMITTEE BY REQUEST OF THE GOVERNOR

A BILL

FOR AN ACT ENTITLED

"An Act relating to the protection of property of persons under disability and minors; relating to the crime of violating a protective order concerning certain vulnerable persons; relating to aggravating factors at sentencing for offenses concerning a victim 65 years or older; relating to the protection of vulnerable adults; making conforming amendments; amending Rules 12(h) and 45(a), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 77, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 17, Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure, and Rule 9, Alaska Rules of Administration; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

 Section 1. AS 08.29.200(b) is amended to read:

(b) Notwithstanding (a) of this section, a person licensed under this chapter shall report incidents of

(1) child abuse or neglect as required by AS 47.17;

(2) harm or assaults suffered by a vulnerable [AN ELDERLY

PERSON OR DISABLED] adult as required by AS 47.24.

 Sec. 2. AS 08.63.200(b) is amended to read:

(b) Notwithstanding (a) of this section, a person licensed under this chapter shall report incidents of

(1) child abuse or neglect as required by AS 47.17;

(2) harm or assaults suffered by a vulnerable [AN ELDERLY PERSON OR DISABLED] adult as required by AS 47.24.

 Sec. 3. AS 11.56.740(a) is amended to read:

(a) A person commits the crime of violating a protective order if the person is subject to a protective order

(1) issued or filed under AS 18.66 and containing a provision listed in AS 18.66.100(c)(1) - (7) and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act with reckless disregard that the act violates or would violate a provision of the protective order; [OR]

(2) issued under AS 18.65.850, 18.65.855, or 18.65.860 and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act that violates or would violate a provision listed in AS 18.65.850(c)(1) - (3); or

(3) issued under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act with reckless disregard that the act violates or would violate a provision of the protective order.

 Sec. 4. AS 11.56.740(c) is amended to read:

(c) In this section, "protective order" means an order issued or filed under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.870, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180.

 Sec. 5. AS 12.55.155(c) is amended by adding a new paragraph to read:

(35) the defendant knowingly directed the conduct constituting the offense at a victim because that person was 65 years of age or older.

 Sec. 6. AS 13.26.165 is amended to read:

Sec. 13.26.165. Protective proceedings. Upon petition and after notice and hearing in accordance with the provisions of AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.315, the court may appoint a conservator or issue another [MAKE OTHER] protective order for cause as follows:

(1) appointment of a conservator or other protective order may be made in relation to the estate and affairs of a minor if the court determines that

(A) a minor owns money or property that requires management or protection that [WHICH] cannot otherwise be provided;

(B) the minor [,] has or may have business affairs that [WHICH] may be jeopardized or prevented by the status of being a minor; [,] or

(C) [THAT] funds are needed for the minor's support and education and [THAT] protection is necessary or desirable to obtain or provide funds;

(2) appointment of a conservator or other protective order may be made in relation to the estate and affairs of a person if the court determines that

(A) the person is unable to manage the person's property and affairs effectively for reasons such as mental illness, mental deficiency, physical illness or disability, advanced age, chronic use of drugs, chronic intoxication, fraud, confinement, detention by a foreign power, or disappearance; and

(B) the person has property that [WHICH] will be wasted or dissipated unless proper management is provided, or that funds are needed for the support, care, and welfare of the person or those entitled to be supported by the person and [THAT] protection is necessary or desirable to obtain or provide funds.

 Sec. 7. AS 13.26.180(a) is amended to read:

(a) The person to be protected, a person's attorney or other legal representative, any person who is interested in the estate, affairs, or welfare of the person to be protected, including a parent, guardian, [OR] custodian, or caregiver, the Department of Health and Social Services, or any person who would be adversely affected by lack of effective management of the property and affairs of the person to be protected, may petition for the appointment of a conservator or for other appropriate protective order.

 Sec. 8. AS 13.26.180 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(c) The petition may include a request for temporary conservatorship as provided in AS 13.26.206 if it appears that the respondent's property is likely to be wasted or dissipated during the pendency of the conservatorship proceeding. A request for temporary conservatorship must specify the facts that cause the petitioner to believe that a temporary conservatorship is necessary.

* Sec. 9. AS 13.26.185 is amended by adding a subsection to read:

(c) This section does not apply to a petition or order for an ex parte protective order filed under AS 13.26.207 or a temporary protective order filed under AS 13.26.208.

* Sec. 10. AS 13.26 is amended by adding new sections to read:

Sec. 13.26.206. Temporary conservators. (a) If, during the pendency of an initial petition for conservatorship, it appears that the respondent is in need of a protective order to protect the respondent against waste or dissipation of funds or property, or to obtain funds that are needed for the immediate support, care, and welfare of the respondent or persons entitled to be supported by the respondent, and the respondent is not capable of protecting the respondent's funds or property or obtaining the funds that are needed to support the respondent or persons whom the respondent is required to support, the petitioner may request the appointment of a temporary conservator to authorize the protection or to obtain the necessary funds. The request must state the reasons and factual basis for the request. The petitioner shall immediately file the request with the court and serve copies on the respondent and the respondent's attorney and other persons as ordered by the court. The court shall appoint an attorney for a respondent who is unrepresented to be at the hearing and conduct a hearing within 72 hours after the filing.

(b) If the court determines that a temporary conservator should be appointed, it shall make the appointment and grant to the temporary conservator only the authority that is least restrictive upon the liberty of the respondent and that enables the temporary conservator to provide the protection or authority necessary to protect the respondent from waste or dissipation of funds or property or to obtain the funds necessary for support.

(c) The temporary conservatorship expires at the time of the appointment of a full or partial conservator or on the dismissal of the petition for conservatorship.

Sec. 13.26.207. Ex parte protective orders. (a) A person who is allowed to file a petition for a protective order under AS 13.26.180(a) may file a petition for an ex parte protective order against a person other than the protected person. A petition filed on behalf of a protected person by a person other than the protected person must be accompanied by proof of service of the petition on the protected person or the person's attorney unless service would cause an immediate threat of harm to the best interests of the protected person and the petition includes a written explanation of the harm. If the court finds that the petition establishes probable cause that the respondent is financially defrauding the petitioner or a person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition and that, because of the fraud, there has been or is an immediate threat of a waste or dissipation of the proposed protected person's funds or other property, the court shall ex parte and without notice to the respondent issue a protective order. The petitioner shall certify to the court in writing any effort that the petitioner made to provide notice to the respondent.

(b) An ex parte protective order under this section may

(1) grant any protection described in AS 13.26.200;

(2) supersede an existing power of attorney;

(3) prohibit the respondent from having any direct or indirect contact with the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition; and

(4) prohibit the respondent from taking any act with respect to the funds or other property of the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition.

(c) An ex parte protective order expires 20 days after it is issued, unless dissolved earlier by the court at the request of the petitioner or respondent and after notice and, if requested, a hearing, or on the earlier appointment of a temporary or permanent conservator.

Sec. 13.26.208. Temporary protective orders; conversions. On application filed with the court before the expiration of a 20-day ex parte protective order issued under AS 13.26.207, the court shall schedule a hearing on whether to convert the protective order to a temporary order effective for up to six months. The court shall provide to the protected person and the respondent at least 10 days' notice of the hearing and the respondent's right to appear and be heard. If the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the respondent has committed fraud against the petitioner or the person for whose benefit the petition was filed, regardless of whether the respondent appears at the hearing, the court may convert the ex parte protective order to a temporary protective order effective for up to six months.

Sec. 13.26.209. Protective orders; modification; third-party compliance; forms; fees. (a) The petitioner, respondent, or protected person, if the protected person is a vulnerable adult, may request modification of a protective order issued under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209. If a request is made for modification of a protective order, the court shall schedule a hearing on three days' notice or on shorter notice as the court may prescribe. If the court modifies a protective order, the court shall issue a modified order and shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the order is understood by the petitioner, the respondent, and the protected person who are present at the hearing.

(b) The court shall cause a copy of a protective order, any related orders, and a scheduling order, if any, to be served on the respondent and the protected person.

(c) A protective order issued under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 is in addition to any other civil or criminal remedy.

(d) A third party that has received actual or legal notice of a protective order issued under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 shall comply with the order. A third party who does not comply with a protective order granted under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 may be liable in a civil action to the protected person or the protected person's heirs, assigns, or estate for a civil penalty not to exceed $1,000, plus the actual damages, costs, and fees associated with the failure to comply with the protective order. A third party who does not comply with a protective order granted under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209 may also be criminally liable under AS 11.56.740 for violating a protective order. As used in this section, "actual or legal notice" means delivery by mail or facsimile at the most recently known place of residence or business of the third party.

(e) The Alaska Court System, after consulting with the Department of Health and Social Services, the office of public advocacy, the office of elder fraud and assistance, the long term care ombudsman, and other interested persons and organizations, shall prepare forms for petitions and protective orders and instructions for use of the forms by a person seeking a protective order under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209. The forms must conform to the Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure and Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, except that information on the forms may be filled in by legible handwriting. The office of the clerk of each superior and district court shall make available to the public the forms a person seeking a protective order may need and instructions for the use of the forms. The clerk shall provide assistance in completing and filing the forms.

(f) Filing fees may not be charged for a petition under AS 13.26.180 or 13.26.207.

* Sec. 11. AS 13.26 is amended by adding a new section to article 4 to read:

Sec. 13.26.324. Definitions. In AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.324, unless the context requires otherwise, "fraud" means

(1) robbery, extortion, and coercion under AS 11.41.500 - 11.41.530;

(2) offenses against property under AS 11.46.100 - 11.46.740; or

(3) exploitation of another person or another person's resources for personal profit or advantage if no significant benefit accrues to the person who is exploited.

* Sec. 12. AS 18.65.530(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except as provided in (b) or (c) of this section, a peace officer, with or without a warrant, shall arrest a person if the officer has probable cause to believe the person has, either in or outside the presence of the officer, within the previous 12 hours,

(1) committed domestic violence, except an offense under AS 11.41.100 - 11.41.130, whether the crime is a felony or a misdemeanor;

(2) committed the crime of violating a protective order in violation of AS 11.56.740(a)(1) or (2) [AS 11.56.740];

(3) violated a condition of release imposed under AS 12.30.016(e) or (f) or 12.30.027.

* Sec. 13. AS 18.65.540(a) is amended to read:

(a) The Department of Public Safety shall maintain a central registry of protective orders issued by or filed with a court of this state under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.870, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180. The registry must include, for each protective order, the names of the petitioner and respondent, their dates of birth, and the conditions and duration of the order. The registry shall retain a record of the protective order after it has expired.

 Sec. 14. AS 18.65.540(b) is amended to read:

(b) A peace officer receiving a protective order from a court under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.855, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180, a modified order issued under AS 18.65.860 or AS 18.66.120, or an order dismissing a protective order shall [, MUST] take reasonable steps to ensure that the order, modified order, or dismissal is entered into the central registry within 24 hours after being received.

 Sec. 15. AS 44.21.415(g) is amended to read:

(g) In this section,

(1) "fraud" means

(A) robbery, extortion, and coercion under AS 11.41.500 - 11.41.530;

(B) [THEFT AND RELATED] offenses against property under AS 11.46.100 - 11.46.740; or

(C) exploitation of another person or another person's resources for personal profit or advantage with no significant benefit accruing to the person who is exploited;

(2) "older Alaskan" means a person residing in the state who is 60 years of age or older.

 Sec. 16. AS 47.24.010(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except as provided in (e) and (f) of this section, the following persons who, in the performance of their professional duties, have reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect shall, not later than 24 hours after first having cause for the belief, report the belief to the department's central information and referral service for vulnerable adults in the office of the department that handles adult protective services:

(1) a physician or other licensed health care provider;

(2) a mental health professional as defined in AS 47.30.915(11) and including a marital and family therapist licensed under AS 08.63;

(3) a pharmacist;

(4) an administrator or employee of a nursing home, residential care, or health care facility;

(5) a guardian or conservator;

(6) a police officer;

(7) a village public safety officer;

(8) a village health aide;

(9) a social worker;

(10) a member of the clergy;

(11) a staff employee of a project funded by the Department of Administration for the provision of services to older Alaskans, the Department of Health and Social Services, or the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault;

(12) an employee of a personal care or home health aide program;

(13) an emergency medical technician or a mobile intensive care paramedic;

(14) a caregiver of the vulnerable adult;

(15) a certified nurse aide;

(16) an educator or administrative staff member of a public or private educational institution.

* Sec. 17. AS 47.24.010(b) is amended to read:

(b) A report made under this section may include the name and address of the reporting person and must include

(1) the name and contact information [ADDRESS] of the vulnerable adult;

(2) information relating to the nature and extent of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect;

(3) other information that the reporting person believes might be helpful in an investigation of the case or in providing protection for the vulnerable adult.

* Sec. 18. AS 47.24.010(c) is amended to read:

(c) The department or its designees shall report to the Department of Law any person required by (a) of this section to report who fails to comply with this section. A person listed in (a) of this section who, because of the circumstances, should have had reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect but who knowingly fails to comply with this section is guilty of a class B misdemeanor. If a person convicted under this section is a member of a profession or occupation that is licensed, certified, or regulated by the state, the court shall notify the appropriate licensing, certifying, or regulating entity of the conviction.

* Sec. 19. AS 47.24.010(d) is amended to read:

(d) This section does not prohibit a person listed in (a) of this section, or any other person, from reporting cases of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult that have come to the person's attention in the person's nonoccupational capacity. This section does not prohibit any other person from reporting a harm under this section.

* Sec. 20. AS 47.24.010(e) is amended to read:

(e) If a person making a report under this section believes that immediate action is necessary to protect the vulnerable adult from imminent risk of serious physical harm due to undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect and the reporting person cannot immediately contact the department's central information and referral service for vulnerable adults, the reporting person shall [MAY] make the report to a police officer or a village public safety officer. The police officer or village public safety officer shall take immediate action to protect the vulnerable adult and shall, within 24 hours after receiving the report of harm [AT THE EARLIEST OPPORTUNITY], notify the department. A person may not bring an action for damages against a police officer, a village public safety officer, the state, or a political subdivision of the state based on a decision under this subsection to take or not to take immediate action to protect a vulnerable adult. If a decision is made under this subsection to take immediate action to protect a vulnerable adult, a person may not bring an action for damages based on the protective actions taken unless the protective actions were performed with gross negligence or intentional misconduct; damages awarded in the action may include only direct economic compensatory damages for personal injury.

* Sec. 21. AS 47.24.010(f) is amended to read:

(f) A person listed in (a) of this section who reports to the long term care ombudsman under AS 47.62.015, or to the Department of Health and Social Services, that a vulnerable adult has been unduly influenced, abandoned, exploited, abused, or neglected in an out-of-home care facility is considered to have met the duty to report under (a) of this section.

* Sec. 22. AS 47.24.010 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(i) A person required to report under this section who makes the report to the person's job supervisor or to another individual working for the entity that employs the person is not relieved of the obligation to make the report to the department as required under (a) of this section.

(j) A person who recklessly makes a false report under this section is civilly liable for actual damages suffered by the person who is the subject of the report.

* Sec. 23. AS 47.24.013(a) is amended to read:

(a) If a report received under AS 47.24.010 pertains to [REGARDS] the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult who is 60 years of age or older that is alleged to have been committed by or to have resulted from the negligence of the staff or a volunteer of an out-of-home care facility, including a facility licensed under AS 47.32, in which the vulnerable adult resides, the department shall transfer the report for investigation to the long term care ombudsman under AS 47.62.015.

* Sec. 24. AS 47.24.013(b) is amended to read:

(b) The department shall investigate a report received under AS 47.24.010 regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult who is less than 60 years of age that is alleged to have been committed by or to have resulted from the negligence of the staff or a volunteer of an out-of-home care facility in which the vulnerable adult resides.

 Sec. 25. AS 47.24.013(c) is amended to read:

(c) Upon receipt of a report under (a) or (b) of this section, the long term care ombudsman and the department shall

(1) conduct an investigation as appropriate under AS 47.62.015 or this title, respectively;

(2) coordinate and cooperate in their responses to and investigations of the report if their jurisdictions overlap;

(3) provide the results of their actions or investigations to the central information and referral service of the office of the department that handles adult protective services within 60 days after the receipt of the report.

 Sec. 26. AS 47.24.013(d) is amended to read:

(d) If the long term care ombudsman receives directly a report regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult in an out-of-home care facility, the ombudsman shall provide the report, and the results of the ombudsman's actions or investigations regarding the report, to the central information and referral service of the office of the department that handles adult protective services. The department may investigate the report as described in AS 47.24.015 if the department determines that action is appropriate.

 Sec. 27. AS 47.24.015(a) is amended to read:

(a) Upon the department's receipt of a report under AS 47.24.010 that is not transferred under AS 47.24.013, the department, or its designee, shall promptly initiate an investigation to determine whether the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect. The department, or its designee, shall conduct a face-to-face interview with the subject of the report unless that person is unconscious or the department, or its designee, has determined that a face-to-face interview could further endanger the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 28. AS 47.24.015(c) is amended to read:

(c) The department [,] or its designee [,] shall immediately terminate an investigation under this section upon the request of the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report made under AS 47.24.010. However, the department or its designee may not terminate the investigation if the investigation to that point has resulted in probable cause to believe that the vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and the request is made personally by the vulnerable adult and the vulnerable adult is not competent to make the request on the adult's own behalf, or the request is made by the vulnerable adult's guardian, attorney-in-fact, or surrogate decision maker and that person is the alleged perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult and is being investigated under this chapter. If the department has probable cause to believe that the vulnerable adult is in need of protective services,

(1) the department may petition the court as set out in AS 47.24.019;

(2) the department or its designee may refer the report made to the department under AS 47.24.010 to a police officer for criminal investigation; or

(3) in cases involving fraud, the department or its designee may refer the report made to the department under AS 47.24.010 to the office of public advocacy for investigation; in this paragraph, "fraud" has the meaning given in AS 13.26.324 [AS 44.21.415].

 Sec. 29. AS 47.24.015 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(h) In conducting an investigation under this section, the department may issue subpoenas, conduct interviews, and examine any health care or financial records related to a vulnerable adult. The department may seek a court order to enforce a subpoena.

(i) A person may not interfere with the department in the performance of its investigation under this section, including interfering with the department's access to the vulnerable adult.

(j) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the office of the department that handles adult protective services shall have access to any information compiled or retained by other divisions in the department, regardless of the nature of the information or whether the information is considered confidential, to assist in administering the provisions of this chapter.

(k) The department may audiotape or videotape an interview of a vulnerable adult if the adult has the capacity to consent and gives that consent. The department shall document the consent in its investigative file. The department may not audiotape or videotape an interview of a vulnerable adult who lacks the capacity to consent.

(l) The department shall provide for the training of investigators who investigate reports of harm under this section. Training must include instruction in federal, state, and local laws and policies of the department related to vulnerable adults, and in investigative techniques. The department may require other appropriate training.

(m) In this section, "financial records" include financial records related to the vulnerable adult that are maintained by any person.

 Sec. 30. AS 47.24.016(a) is amended to read:

(a) If the department determines under AS 47.24.015 that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services, but the department cannot obtain the vulnerable adult's consent to receive the services because the vulnerable adult is unable to consent or lacks decision making capacity, and has no guardian, conservator, [OR] attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate for health care decisions under AS 13.52.030 to serve as the vulnerable adult's surrogate decision maker, the department may select from the following list, in the order of priority listed, an individual who is willing to be the vulnerable adult's surrogate decision maker for the purpose of deciding whether to consent to the vulnerable adult's receipt of protective services:

(1) the vulnerable adult's spouse, unless

[(A) THE VULNERABLE ADULT AND THE SPOUSE HAVE SEPARATE DOMICILES; OR

(B)] the vulnerable adult or the spouse have initiated divorce, [OR] dissolution, or legal separation proceedings;

(2) an individual who lives with the vulnerable adult in a spousal relationship or as a domestic partner and who is 18 years of age or older;

(3) a son or daughter of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older;

(4) a parent of the vulnerable adult;

(5) a brother or sister of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older; or

(6) a close friend or relative of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older.

 Sec. 31. AS 47.24.016(b) is amended to read:

(b) An individual from the list in (a) of this section may not be selected as a surrogate decision maker if

(1) the department determines that individual does not possess decision making capacity; or

(2) there are allegations that individual is a perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 32. AS 47.24.016(d) is amended to read:

(d) The department may not continue to provide protective services to a vulnerable adult based on the consent of a surrogate decision maker serving under this section or AS 13.52.030 if the department determines that the vulnerable adult has become able to consent or has regained decision making capacity since the surrogate's consent was given. The department may continue protective services to a vulnerable adult who has become able to consent or has regained decision making capacity only if the vulnerable adult consents.

 Sec. 33. AS 47.24.017(a) is amended to read:

(a) If the department determines under AS 47.24.015 that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and [EITHER] the vulnerable adult, the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, [OR] attorney-in-fact, trustee, [OR] a surrogate decision maker selected under AS 47.24.016, or a surrogate for health care decisions under AS 13.52.030 consents to receipt of the protective services, and to the extent that resources are available, the department shall ensure that the protective services for the vulnerable adult are provided by the department, or its designee, within 10 working days after the department received the report under AS 47.24.010 regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of the vulnerable adult. However, if circumstances beyond the control of the department or the department's designee make it impossible to provide the protective services within the 10 working days, the department shall ensure that the services are provided as soon as possible after that time.

 Sec. 34. AS 47.24.019(c) is amended to read:

(c) If a vulnerable adult who has consented to receive protective services, or on whose behalf consent to receive protective services has been given, is prevented by any person [A CAREGIVER, GUARDIAN, ATTORNEY-IN-FACT, OR SURROGATE DECISION MAKER] from receiving those services, the department may petition the superior court for an injunction restraining the person [CAREGIVER, GUARDIAN, ATTORNEY-IN-FACT, OR SURROGATE DECISION MAKER] from interfering with the provision of protective services to the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 35. AS 47.24.050 is amended to read:

Sec. 47.24.050. Confidentiality of reports. (a) Investigation reports and reports of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult filed under this chapter are confidential and are not subject to public inspection and copying under AS 40.25.110 - 40.25.125. However, under [IN ACCORDANCE WITH] this chapter and regulations adopted under this chapter, investigation reports may be used by appropriate agencies or individuals inside and outside the state, in connection with investigations or judicial proceedings involving the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult.

(b) The department shall disclose a report of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult if the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report or the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate decision maker consents in writing. The department may not disclose a report of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult to the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate decision maker if that person is an alleged perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult and is being investigated under this chapter. The department shall, upon request, disclose the number of verified reports of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult that occurred at an institution that provides care for vulnerable adults or that were the result of actions or inactions of a public home care provider.

* Sec. 36. AS 47.24.130 is amended to read:

Sec. 47.24.130. Treatment through spiritual means. This chapter may not be construed to mean that a person is unduly influenced, abused, neglected, self-neglected, vulnerable, unable to consent, abandoned, exploited, or in need of emergency or protective services for the sole reason that the person relies on or is being furnished treatment by spiritual means through prayer alone under [IN ACCORDANCE WITH] the tenets and practices of a church or religious denomination of which the person is a member or adherent, if [PROVIDED THAT] the person consents to the treatment through spiritual means only and the treatment is administered by an accredited practitioner of the church or religious denomination. In this section, "church or religious denomination" has the meaning given to "religious organization" in AS 05.15.690.

* Sec. 37. AS 47.24.900(2) is amended to read:

(2) "abuse" means

(A) the [WILFUL,] intentional, knowing, or reckless nonaccidental [,] and nontherapeutic infliction of physical pain, injury, [OR] mental or emotional distress, or fear, including coercion and intimidation; or

(B) sexual assault under AS 11.41.410 or 11.41.420;

* Sec. 38. AS 47.24.900(3) is amended to read:

(3) "caregiver" means

(A) a person who is providing care to a vulnerable adult as a result of a family relationship, or who has assumed some or all responsibility for the care of a vulnerable adult voluntarily, by contract, as an employee of a business that provides care in an adult's home, or by court order; or

(B) an employee of an out-of-home care facility who provides care to one or more vulnerable adults;

* Sec. 39. AS 47.24.900(4) is amended to read:

(4) "decision making capacity" means the ability to understand and appreciate the nature and consequences of a decision and the ability to reach and communicate an informed decision; in this paragraph, "informed decision" includes a decision made by the vulnerable adult that is free from undue influence;

* Sec. 40. AS 47.24.900(7) is amended to read:

(7) "exploitation"

(A) means unjust or improper use of another person or another person's resources for one's own profit or advantage, with or without the person's consent; and

(B) includes acts by a person who stands in a position of trust or confidence with a vulnerable adult or who knows or should know that the vulnerable adult lacks the capacity to consent that involve obtaining profit or advantage through undue influence, deception, fraud, intimidation, or breach of fiduciary duty; in this paragraph, "fraud" has the meaning given in AS 13.26.324(1) and (2);

* Sec. 41. AS 47.24.900(9) is amended to read:

(9) "neglect" means the intentional, knowing, or reckless failure by a caregiver to provide essential care or services or access to essential care or services or to carry out a prescribed treatment plan necessary to maintain the physical and mental health of the vulnerable adult when the vulnerable adult is unable to provide or obtain the essential care or services or to carry out the prescribed treatment plan on the vulnerable adult's own behalf; in this paragraph, "essential care or services" includes food, clothing, shelter, medical care, and supervision;

* Sec. 42. AS 47.24.900(11) is amended to read:

(11) "protective services" means services that are intended to prevent or alleviate harm resulting from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect and that are provided to a vulnerable adult in need of protection; in this paragraph, "services" ["PROTECTIVE SERVICES"] includes

(A) protective placement;

(B) applying for or obtaining public benefits;

(C) obtaining health care services and supplies;

(D) staying financial transactions;

(E) petitioning for a protective order under AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.209;

(F) assisting with personal hygiene;

(G) obtaining food and clothing;

(H) protection from physical and emotional abuse;

(I) obtaining representative payee services; and

(J) coordinating protective services;

 Sec. 43. AS 47.24.900(15) is amended to read:

(15) "unable to consent" means refusal to, or inability to, accept services because

(A) the person is an incapacitated person or apparently is an incapacitated person;

(B) of coercion by or fear of reprisal from the perpetrator of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect;

(C) of dependency on the perpetrator of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect for services, care, or support; or

(D) of an inability to perceive that refusal to consent results in an imminent and substantial danger of loss, waste, or dissipation of income or assets, eviction, physical or mental harm to self or others, or death [OR IRREPARABLE HARM TO SELF OR OTHERS];

 Sec. 44. AS 47.24.900(16) is amended to read:

(16) "vulnerable adult" means a person 18 years of age or older who, because of incapacity, mental illness, mental deficiency, physical illness or disability, advanced age, chronic use of drugs, chronic intoxication, fraud, confinement, or disappearance [PHYSICAL OR MENTAL IMPAIRMENT], is unable to meet the person's own needs or to seek help without assistance.

 Sec. 45. AS 47.24.900 is amended by adding new paragraphs to read:

(17) "deception" means creating, reinforcing, or failing to correct a false impression or preventing another person from acquiring information that would affect the person's judgment regarding a transaction;

(18) "fiduciary duty" means the duty of a third party who stands in a position of trust or confidence with another person, including a vulnerable adult, to act with due regard for the benefit and interest of that person;

(19) "financial institution" means an institution subject to state or federal banking or financial regulations, including

(A) a broker-dealer;

(B) a commercial bank;

(C) a savings bank;

(D) a credit union;

(E) a premium finance company;

(F) a small loan company;

(G) a bank holding company;

(H) a financial holding company;

(I) a trust company;

(J) a savings and loan association;

(K) a deferred deposit advance licensee;

(L) an investment bank;

(M) an insurance company subject to regulation by AS 21;

(N) a licensee subject to regulation by AS 21; and

(A) is a relative by blood or marriage;

(B) is a joint tenant or tenant in common;

(C) has a legal or fiduciary relationship; or

(D) is a person who has been entrusted with or has assumed responsibility for the use or management of the vulnerable adult's assets or income;

(21) "undue influence" means the use by a person who stands in a position of trust or confidence of the person's role, relationship, or authority to wrongfully exploit the trust, dependency, or fear of a vulnerable adult to gain control over the decision making of the vulnerable adult, including decision making related to finances, property, residence, and health care.

 Sec. 46. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

DIRECT COURT RULE AMENDMENT. Rule 12(h), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, is amended to read:

(h) Continuance of Trial. A motion for continuance of a trial date will be granted by the court only for cause shown. In deciding whether to grant the motion, the court shall consider the victim's circumstances and the effect the delay would have on the victim, particularly a victim of advanced age or extreme youth. The court shall place its findings on the record. The presiding judge of a judicial district may require that a visiting or pro tem judge obtain approval from the presiding judge before granting any continuance of trial.

 Sec. 47. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

DIRECT COURT RULE AMENDMENT. Rule 45(a), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, is amended to read:

(a) Priorities in Scheduling Criminal Cases. The court shall provide for placing criminal proceedings upon appropriate calendars. Preference shall be given to criminal proceedings and the trial of defendants in custody shall be given preference over other criminal cases. The court shall consider the circumstances of the victim, particularly a victim of advanced age or extreme youth, in setting the trial date. Trial dates in criminal cases in the superior court shall be set at the time of arraignment, and if a trial date is thereafter vacated, the trial shall be immediately set for a date certain.

 Sec. 48. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

INDIRECT COURT RULE AMENDMENTS. (a) AS 13.26.207, 13.26.208, and 13.26.209(a) - (e), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, have the effect of amending Rule 17, Alaska

Rules of Probate Procedure, relating to conservatorships and protective proceedings, by allowing ex parte orders to be issued related to protecting the assets of a person otherwise subject to AS 13.26.165 from financial exploitation.

(b) AS 13.26.209(f), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, has the effect of amending Rule 9, Alaska Rules of Administration, by requiring that filing fees may not be charged for a petition for an ex parte protective order under AS 13.26.180, amended by secs. 7 and 8 of this Act, or AS 13.26.207, enacted by sec. 10 of this Act.

(c) AS 13.26.206, enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, has the effect of amending Rule 77, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, by requiring a hearing within 72 hours of the filing of a petition for the appointment of a temporary conservator.

* Sec. 49. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

APPLICABILITY. Sections 3 - 5, 46, and 47 of this Act apply to offenses committed on or after the effective date of this Act.

* Sec. 50. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

REVISOR'S INSTRUCTIONS. The revisor of statutes is instructed to change the catch line of

(1) AS 47.24.010 from "Reports of harm" to "Persons required to report; reports of harm";

(2) AS 47.24.013 from "Reports of abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of vulnerable adults in out-of-home care facilities" to "Reports of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of vulnerable adults in out-of-home care facilities."

* Sec. 51. The uncodified law of the State of Alaska is amended by adding a new section to read:

CONDITIONAL EFFECT. (a) AS 13.26.207, 13.26.208, and 13.26.209(a) - (e), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, take effect only if sec. 48(a) of this Act receives the two-thirds vote of each house required by art. IV, sec. 15, Constitution of the State of Alaska.

(b) AS 13.26.209(f), enacted by sec. 10 of this Act, takes effect only if sec. 48(b) of this Act receives the two-thirds vote of each house required by art. IV, sec. 15, Constitution of the State of Alaska.

* Sec. 52. Sections 16 and 20 of this Act take effect September 1, 2011.

* Sec. 53. Except as provided in sec. 52 of this Act, this Act takes effect July 1, 2011.

(1) child abuse or neglect as required by AS 47.17;

(2) harm or assaults suffered by a vulnerable [AN ELDERLY

New Text Underlined [DELETED TEXT BRACKETED]

PERSON OR DISABLED] adult as required by AS 47.24.

* Sec. 2. AS 08.63.200(b) is amended to read:

(b) Notwithstanding (a) of this section, a person licensed under this chapter shall report incidents of

(1) child abuse or neglect as required by AS 47.17;

(2) harm or assaults suffered by a vulnerable [AN ELDERLY PERSON OR DISABLED] adult as required by AS 47.24.

* Sec. 3. AS 11.56.740(a) is amended to read:

(a) A person commits the crime of violating a protective order if the person is subject to a protective order

(1) issued or filed under AS 18.66 and containing a provision listed in AS 18.66.100(c)(1) - (7) and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act with reckless disregard that the act violates or would violate a provision of the protective order; [OR]

(2) issued under AS 18.65.850, 18.65.855, or 18.65.860 and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act that violates or would violate a provision listed in AS 18.65.850(c)(1) - (3); or

(3) issued under AS 13.26.180 or 13.26.209 and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act with reckless disregard that the act violates or would violate a provision of the protective order.

* Sec. 4. AS 11.56.740(c) is amended to read:

(c) In this section, "protective order" means an order issued or filed under AS 13.26.180, 13.26.209, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.870, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180.

* Sec. 5. AS 12.55.155(c) is amended by adding a new paragraph to read:

(35) the defendant knowingly directed the conduct constituting the offense at a victim because that person was 65 years of age or older.

* Sec. 6. AS 13.26.165 is amended to read:

Sec. 13.26.165. Protective proceedings. Upon petition and after notice and hearing in accordance with the provisions of AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.315, the court may appoint a conservator or issue another [MAKE OTHER] protective order for cause as follows:

(1) appointment of a conservator or other protective order may be made in relation to the estate and affairs of a minor if the court determines that

(A) a minor owns money or property that requires management or protection that [WHICH] cannot otherwise be provided;

(B) the minor [,] has or may have business affairs that [WHICH] may be jeopardized or prevented by the status of being a minor; [,] or

(C) [THAT] funds are needed for the minor's support and education and [THAT] protection is necessary or desirable to obtain or provide funds;

(2) appointment of a conservator or other protective order may be made in relation to the estate and affairs of a person if the court determines that

(A) the person is unable to manage the person's property and affairs effectively for reasons such as mental illness, mental deficiency, physical illness or disability, advanced age, chronic use of drugs, chronic intoxication, fraud, confinement, detention by a foreign power, or disappearance; and

(B) the person has property that [WHICH] will be wasted or dissipated unless proper management is provided, or that funds are needed for the support, care, and welfare of the person or those entitled to be supported by the person and [THAT] protection is necessary or desirable to obtain or provide funds.

 Sec. 7. AS 13.26.180(a) is amended to read:

(a) The person to be protected, a person's attorney or other legal representative, any person who is interested in the estate, affairs, or welfare of the person to be protected, including a parent, guardian, [OR] custodian, or caregiver, the Department of Health and Social Services, or any person who would be adversely affected by lack of effective management of the property and affairs of the person to be protected, may petition for the appointment of a conservator or for other appropriate protective order.

 Sec. 8. AS 13.26.180 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(c) The petition may include a request for temporary conservatorship as provided in AS 13.26.207 if it appears that the respondent's property is likely to be wasted or dissipated during the pendency of the conservatorship proceeding. A request for temporary conservatorship must specify the facts that cause the petitioner to believe that a temporary conservatorship is necessary.

* Sec. 9. AS 13.26.185 is amended by adding a subsection to read:

(c) This section does not apply to a petition or order for an ex parte protective order filed under AS 13.26.209.

* Sec. 10. AS 13.26 is amended by adding new sections to read:

Sec. 13.26.207. Temporary conservators. (a) If, during the pendency of an initial petition for conservatorship, it appears that the respondent is in need of a protective order to protect the respondent against waste or dissipation of funds or property, or to obtain funds that are needed for the immediate support, care, and welfare of the respondent or persons entitled to be supported by the respondent, and the respondent is not capable of protecting the respondent's funds or property or obtaining the funds that are needed to support the respondent or persons whom the respondent is required to support, the petitioner may request the appointment of a temporary conservator to authorize the protection or to obtain the necessary funds. The request must state the reasons and factual basis for the request. The petitioner shall immediately file the request with the court and serve copies on the respondent and the respondent's attorney and other persons as ordered by the court. The court shall appoint an attorney for a respondent who is unrepresented to be at the hearing and conduct a hearing within 72 hours after the filing.

(b) If the court determines that a temporary conservator should be appointed, it shall make the appointment and grant to the temporary conservator only the authority that is least restrictive upon the liberty of the respondent and that enables the temporary conservator to provide the protection or authority necessary to protect the respondent from waste or dissipation of funds or property or to obtain the funds necessary for support.

(c) The temporary conservatorship expires at the time of the appointment of a full or partial conservator or on the dismissal of the petition for conservatorship.

Sec. 13.26.209. Ex parte protective orders; modification; forms for petitions and orders; fees. (a) A person who is allowed to file a petition for a protective order under AS 13.26.180(a) may file a petition for an ex parte protective order against another person. A petition filed on behalf of a protected person by another person must be accompanied by proof of service of the petition on the protected person or the person's attorney unless service would cause an immediate threat of harm to the best interests of the protected person and the petition includes a written explanation of the harm. If the court finds that the petition establishes probable cause that the respondent is financially defrauding the petitioner or a person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition and that, because of the fraud, there has been or is an immediate threat of a waste or dissipation of the proposed protected person's funds or other property, the court shall ex parte and without notice to the respondent issue a protective order. The petitioner shall certify to the court in writing any effort that the petitioner made to provide notice to the respondent. The court shall cause a copy of the protective order, any related orders, and a scheduling order, if any, to be served on the respondent and the protected person.

H #3

H #4

(b) An ex parte protective order under this section may

(1) grant any protection described in AS 13.26.200;

(2) supersede an existing power of attorney;

(3) prohibit the respondent from having any direct or indirect contact with the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition; and

(4) prohibit the respondent from taking any act with respect to the funds or other property of the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition.

(c) An ex parte protective order expires 20 days after it is issued, at the end of a six-month extension if granted by the court under (d) of this section, or on the appointment of a temporary or permanent conservator or dismissal of the petition for the ex parte order.

(d) On application filed with the court before the expiration of the 20-day ex parte protective order, the court shall schedule a hearing on whether to extend the protective order for up to six months. The court shall provide to the protected person and the respondent at least 10 days' notice of the hearing and the respondent's right to appear and be heard. If the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the respondent has committed fraud against the petitioner or the person for whose benefit the petition was filed, regardless of whether the respondent appears at the hearing, the court may extend the ex parte protective order for up to six months.

(e) Either the petitioner or the respondent may request modification of a protective order issued under this section. If a request is made for modification of a protective order, the court shall schedule a hearing on three days' notice or on shorter notice as the court may prescribe. If the court modifies a protective order under this section, the court shall issue a modified order and shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the order is understood by the petitioner and by the respondent, if present at the hearing.

(f) A protective order issued under this section is in addition to any other civil or criminal remedy.

(g) A third party that has received actual or legal notice of a protective order issued under this section shall comply with the order. A third party who does not comply with a protective order granted under this section may be liable in a civil action to the protected person or the protected person's heirs, assigns, or estate for a civil penalty not to exceed $1,000, plus the actual damages, costs, and fees associated with the failure to comply with the protective order. A third party who does not comply with a protective order granted under this section may also be criminally liable under AS 11.56.740 for violating a protective order. As used in this section, "actual or legal notice" means delivery by mail or facsimile at the most recently known place of residence or business of the third party.

(h) The Alaska Court System, after consulting with the Department of Health and Social Services, the office of public advocacy, the office of elder fraud and assistance, the long term care ombudsman, and other interested persons and organizations, shall prepare forms for petitions and protective orders and instructions for use of the forms by a person seeking a protective order under this section. The forms must conform to the Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure and Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, except that information on the forms may be filled in by legible handwriting. The office of the clerk of each superior and district court shall make available to the public the forms a person seeking a protective order under this section may need and instructions for the use of the forms. The clerk shall provide assistance in completing and filing the forms.

(i) Filing fees may not be charged for a petition under this section.

 Sec. 11. AS 13.26 is amended by adding a new section to article 4 to read:

Sec. 13.26.324. Definitions. In AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.324, unless the context requires otherwise, "fraud" means

(1) robbery, extortion, and coercion under AS 11.41.500 - 11.41.530;

(2) offenses against property under AS 11.46.100 - 11.46.740; or

(3) exploitation of another person or another person's resources for personal profit or advantage if no significant benefit accrues to the person who is exploited.

 Sec. 12. AS 18.65.530(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except as provided in (b) or (c) of this section, a peace officer, with or without a warrant, shall arrest a person if the officer has probable cause to believe the person has, either in or outside the presence of the officer, within the previous 12 hours,

(1) committed domestic violence, except an offense under AS 11.41.100 - 11.41.130, whether the crime is a felony or a misdemeanor;

(2) committed the crime of violating a protective order in violation of AS 11.56.740(a)(1) or (2) [AS 11.56.740];

(3) violated a condition of release imposed under AS 12.30.016(e) or (f) or 12.30.027.

 Sec. 13. AS 18.65.540(a) is amended to read:

(a) The Department of Public Safety shall maintain a central registry of protective orders issued by or filed with a court of this state under AS 13.26.180, 13.26.209, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.870, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180. The registry must include, for each protective order, the names of the petitioner and respondent, their dates of birth, and the conditions and duration of the order. The registry shall retain a record of the protective order after it has expired.

* Sec. 14. AS 18.65.540(b) is amended to read:

(b) A peace officer receiving a protective order from a court under AS 13.26.180, 13.26.209, AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.855, or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180, a modified order issued under AS 18.65.860 or AS 18.66.120, or an order dismissing a protective order shall [, MUST] take reasonable steps to ensure that the order, modified order, or dismissal is entered into the central registry within 24 hours after being received.

* Sec. 15. AS 44.21.415(g) is amended to read:

(g) In this section,

(1) "fraud" means

(A) robbery, extortion, and coercion under AS 11.41.500 - 11.41.530;

(B) [THEFT AND RELATED] offenses against property under AS 11.46.100 - 11.46.740; or

(C) exploitation of another person or another person's resources for personal profit or advantage with no significant benefit accruing to the person who is exploited;

(2) "older Alaskan" means a person residing in the state who is 60 years of age or older.

* Sec. 16. AS 47.24.010(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except as provided in (e) and (f) of this section, the following persons who, in the performance of their professional duties, have reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect shall, not later than 24 hours after first having cause for the belief, report the belief to the department's central information and referral service for vulnerable adults in the office of the department that handles adult protective services:

(1) a physician or other licensed health care provider;

(2) a mental health professional as defined in AS 47.30.915(11) and including a marital and family therapist licensed under AS 08.63;

(3) a pharmacist;

(4) an administrator or employee of a nursing home, residential care, or health care facility;

(5) a guardian or conservator;

(6) a police officer;

(7) a village public safety officer;

(8) a village health aide;

(9) a social worker;

(10) a member of the clergy;

(11) a staff employee of a project funded by the Department of Administration for the provision of services to older Alaskans, the Department of Health and Social Services, or the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault;

(12) an employee of a personal care or home health aide program;

(13) an emergency medical technician or a mobile intensive care paramedic;

(14) a caregiver of the vulnerable adult;

(15) a certified nurse aide;

(16) an educator or administrative staff member of a public or private educational institution.

 Sec. 17. AS 47.24.010(b) is amended to read:

(b) A report made under this section may include the name and address of the reporting person and must include

(1) the name and contact information [ADDRESS] of the vulnerable adult;

(2) information relating to the nature and extent of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect;

(3) other information that the reporting person believes might be helpful in an investigation of the case or in providing protection for the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 18. AS 47.24.010(c) is amended to read:

(c) The department or its designees shall report to the Department of Law any person required by (a) of this section to report who fails to comply with this section. A person listed in (a) of this section who, because of the circumstances, should have had reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect but who knowingly fails to comply with this section is guilty of a class B misdemeanor. If a person convicted under this section is a member of a profession or occupation that is licensed, certified, or regulated by the state, the court shall notify the appropriate licensing, certifying, or regulating entity of the conviction.

 Sec. 19. AS 47.24.010(d) is amended to read:

(d) This section does not prohibit a person listed in (a) of this section, or any other person, from reporting cases of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult that have come to the person's attention in the person's nonoccupational capacity. This section does not prohibit any other person from reporting a harm under this section.

 Sec. 20. AS 47.24.010(e) is amended to read:

(e) If a person making a report under this section believes that immediate action is necessary to protect the vulnerable adult from imminent risk of serious physical harm due to undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect and the reporting person cannot immediately contact the department's central information and referral service for vulnerable adults, the reporting person shall [MAY] make the report to a police officer or a village public safety officer. The police officer or village public safety officer shall take immediate action to protect the vulnerable adult and shall [,] at the earliest opportunity within 24 hours after receiving the report of harm [,] notify the department. A person may not bring an action for damages against a police officer, a village public safety officer, the state, or a political subdivision of the state based on a decision under this subsection to take or not to take immediate action to protect a vulnerable adult. If a decision is made under this subsection to take immediate action to protect a vulnerable adult, a person may not bring an action for damages based on the protective actions taken unless the protective actions were performed with gross negligence or intentional misconduct; damages awarded in the action may include only direct economic compensatory damages for personal injury.

* Sec. 21. AS 47.24.010(f) is amended to read:

(f) A person listed in (a) of this section who reports to the long term care ombudsman under AS 47.62.015, or to the Department of Health and Social Services, that a vulnerable adult has been unduly influenced, abandoned, exploited, abused, or neglected in an out-of-home care facility is considered to have met the duty to report under (a) of this section.

* Sec. 22. AS 47.24.010 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(i) A person required to report under this section who makes the report to the person's job supervisor or to another individual working for the entity that employs the person is not relieved of the obligation to make the report to the department as required under (a) of this section.

(j) A person who recklessly makes a false report under this section is civilly liable for actual damages suffered by the person who is the subject of the report.

* Sec. 23. AS 47.24.013(a) is amended to read:

(a) If a report received under AS 47.24.010 pertains to [REGARDS] the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult who is 60 years of age or older that is alleged to have been committed by or to have resulted from the negligence of the staff or a volunteer of an out-of-home care facility, including a facility licensed under AS 47.32, in which the vulnerable adult resides, the department shall transfer the report for investigation to the long term care ombudsman under AS 47.62.015.

* Sec. 24. AS 47.24.013(b) is amended to read:

(b) The department shall investigate a report received under AS 47.24.010 regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult who is less than 60 years of age that is alleged to have been committed by or to have resulted from the negligence of the staff or a volunteer of an out-of-home care facility in which the vulnerable adult resides.

* Sec. 25. AS 47.24.013(c) is amended to read:

(c) Upon receipt of a report under (a) or (b) of this section, the long term care ombudsman and the department shall

(1) conduct an investigation as appropriate under AS 47.62.015 or this title, respectively;

(2) coordinate and cooperate in their responses to and investigations of the report if their jurisdictions overlap;

(3) provide the results of their actions or investigations to the central information and referral service of the office of the department that handles adult protective services within 60 days after the receipt of the report.

* Sec. 26. AS 47.24.013(d) is amended to read:

(d) If the long term care ombudsman receives directly a report regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult in an out-of-home care facility, the ombudsman shall provide the report, and the results of the ombudsman's actions or investigations regarding the report, to the central information and referral service of the office of the department that handles adult protective services. The department may investigate the report as described in AS 47.24.015 if the department determines that action is appropriate.

* Sec. 27. AS 47.24.015(a) is amended to read:

(a) Upon the department's receipt of a report under AS 47.24.010 that is not transferred under AS 47.24.013, the department, or its designee, shall promptly initiate an investigation to determine whether the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect. The department, or its designee, shall conduct a face-to-face interview with the subject of the report unless that person is unconscious or the department, or its designee, has determined that a face-to-face interview could further endanger the vulnerable adult.

* Sec. 28. AS 47.24.015(c) is amended to read:

(c) The department [,] or its designee [,] shall immediately terminate an investigation under this section upon the request of the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report made under AS 47.24.010. However, the department or its designee may not terminate the investigation if the investigation to that point has resulted in probable cause to believe that the vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and the request is made personally by the vulnerable adult and the vulnerable adult is not competent to make the request on the adult's own behalf, or the request is made by the vulnerable adult's guardian, attorney-in-fact, or surrogate decision maker and that person is the alleged perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult and is being investigated under this chapter. If the department has probable cause to believe that the vulnerable adult is in need of protective services,

(1) the department may petition the court as set out in AS 47.24.019;

(2) the department or its designee may refer the report made to the department under AS 47.24.010 to a police officer for criminal investigation; or

(3) in cases involving fraud, the department or its designee may refer the report made to the department under AS 47.24.010 to the office of public advocacy for investigation; in this paragraph, "fraud" has the meaning given in AS 13.26.324 [AS 44.21.415].

 Sec. 29. AS 47.24.015 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(h) In conducting an investigation under this section, the department may issue subpoenas, conduct interviews, and examine any health care or financial records related to a vulnerable adult. The department may seek a court order to enforce a subpoena.

(i) A person may not interfere with the department in the performance of its investigation under this section, including interfering with the department's access to the vulnerable adult.

(j) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the office of the department that handles adult protective services shall have access to any information compiled or retained by other divisions in the department, regardless of the nature of the information or whether the information is considered confidential, to assist in administering the provisions of this chapter.

(k) The department may audiotape or videotape an interview of a vulnerable adult if the adult has the capacity to consent and gives that consent. The department shall document the consent in its investigative file. The department may not audiotape or videotape an interview of a vulnerable adult who lacks the capacity to consent.

(l) The department shall provide for the training of investigators who investigate reports of harm under this section. Training must include instruction in federal, state, and local laws and policies of the department related to vulnerable adults, and in investigative techniques. The department may require other appropriate training.

(m) In this section, "financial records" include financial records related to the vulnerable adult that are maintained by any person. #16

 Sec. 30. AS 47.24.016(a) is amended to read:

(a) If the department determines under AS 47.24.015 that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services, but the department cannot obtain the vulnerable adult's consent to receive the services because the vulnerable adult is unable to consent or lacks decision making capacity, and has no guardian, conservator, [OR] attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate for health care decisions under AS 13.52.030 to serve as the vulnerable adult's surrogate decision maker, the department may select from the following list, in the order of priority listed, an individual who is willing to be the vulnerable adult's surrogate decision maker for the purpose of deciding whether to consent to the vulnerable adult's receipt of protective services: #17

(1) the vulnerable adult's spouse, unless

[(A) THE VULNERABLE ADULT AND THE SPOUSE HAVE SEPARATE DOMICILES; OR

(B)] the vulnerable adult or the spouse have initiated divorce, [OR] dissolution, or legal separation proceedings; #18

(2) an individual who lives with the vulnerable adult in a spousal relationship or as a domestic partner and who is 18 years of age or older;

(3) a son or daughter of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older;

(4) a parent of the vulnerable adult;

(5) a brother or sister of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older; or

(6) a close friend or relative of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older.

 Sec. 31. AS 47.24.016(b) is amended to read:

(b) An individual from the list in (a) of this section may not be selected as a surrogate decision maker if

(1) the department determines that individual does not possess decision making capacity; or

(2) there are allegations that individual is a perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 32. AS 47.24.016(d) is amended to read:

(d) The department may not continue to provide protective services to a vulnerable adult based on the consent of a surrogate decision maker serving under this section or AS 13.52.030 if the department determines that the vulnerable adult has become able to consent or has regained decision making capacity since the surrogate's consent was given. The department may continue protective services to a vulnerable adult who has become able to consent or has regained decision making capacity only if the vulnerable adult consents.

 Sec. 33. AS 47.24.017(a) is amended to read:

(a) If the department determines under AS 47.24.015 that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and [EITHER] the vulnerable adult, the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, [OR] attorney-in-fact, trustee, [OR] a surrogate decision maker selected under AS 47.24.016, or a surrogate for health care decisions under AS 13.52.030 consents to receipt of the protective services, and to the extent that resources are available, the department shall ensure that the protective services for the vulnerable adult are provided by the department, or its designee, within 10 working days after the department received the report under AS 47.24.010 regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of the vulnerable adult. However, if circumstances beyond the control of the department or the department's designee make it impossible to provide the protective services within the 10 working days, the department shall ensure that the services are provided as soon as possible after that time.

4 #19

 Sec. 34. AS 47.24.019(c) is amended to read:

(c) If a vulnerable adult who has consented to receive protective services, or on whose behalf consent to receive protective services has been given, is prevented by any person [A CAREGIVER, GUARDIAN, ATTORNEY-IN-FACT, OR SURROGATE DECISION MAKER] from receiving those services, the department may petition the superior court for an injunction restraining the person [CAREGIVER, GUARDIAN, ATTORNEY-IN-FACT, OR SURROGATE DECISION MAKER] from interfering with the provision of protective services to the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 35. AS 47.24.050 is amended to read:

Sec. 47.24.050. Confidentiality of reports. (a) Investigation reports and reports of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult filed under this chapter are confidential and are not subject to public inspection and copying under AS 40.25.110 - 40.25.125. However, under [IN ACCORDANCE WITH] this chapter and regulations adopted under this chapter, investigation reports may be used by appropriate agencies or individuals inside and outside the state, in connection with investigations or judicial proceedings involving the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult.

(b) The department shall disclose a report of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult if the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report or the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate decision maker consents in writing. The department may not disclose a report of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult to the vulnerable adult's guardian, conservator, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate decision maker if that person is an alleged perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult and is being investigated under this chapter. The department shall, upon request, disclose the number of verified reports of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult that occurred at an institution that provides care for vulnerable adults or that were the result of actions or inactions of a public home care provider.

 Sec. 36. AS 47.24.130 is amended to read:

Sec. 47.24.130. Treatment through spiritual means. This chapter may not be construed to mean that a person is unduly influenced, abused, neglected, self-neglected, vulnerable, unable to consent, abandoned, exploited, or in need of emergency or protective services for the sole reason that the person relies on or is being furnished treatment by spiritual means through prayer alone under [IN ACCORDANCE WITH] the tenets and practices of a church or religious denomination of which the person is a member or adherent, if [PROVIDED THAT] the person consents to the treatment through spiritual means only and the treatment is administered by an accredited practitioner of the church or religious denomination. In this section, "church or religious denomination" has the meaning given to "religious organization" in AS 05.15.690.

 Sec. 37. AS 47.24.900(2) is amended to read:

(2) "abuse" means

(A) the [WILFUL,] intentional, knowing, or reckless nonaccidental [,] and nontherapeutic infliction of physical pain, injury, [OR] mental or emotional distress, or fear, including coercion and intimidation; or

(B) sexual assault under AS 11.41.410 or 11.41.420;

 Sec. 38. AS 47.24.900(3) is amended to read:

(3) "caregiver" means

(A) a person who is providing care to a vulnerable adult as a result of a family relationship, or who has assumed some or all responsibility for the care of a vulnerable adult voluntarily, by contract, as an employee of a business that provides care in an adult's home, or by court order; or

(B) an employee of an out-of-home care facility who provides care to one or more vulnerable adults;

 Sec. 39. AS 47.24.900(4) is amended to read:

(4) "decision making capacity" means the ability to understand and appreciate the nature and consequences of a decision and the ability to reach and communicate an informed decision; in this paragraph, "informed decision" includes a decision made by the vulnerable adult that is free from undue influence;

H 23

H 24

 Sec. 40. AS 47.24.900(7) is amended to read:

(7) "exploitation"

(A) means unjust or improper use of another person or another person's resources for one's own profit or advantage, with or without the person's consent; and

(B) includes acts by a person who stands in a position of trust or confidence with a vulnerable adult or who knows or should know that the vulnerable adult lacks the capacity to consent that involve obtaining profit or advantage through undue influence, deception, fraud, intimidation, or breach of fiduciary duty; in this paragraph, "fraud" has the meaning given in AS 13.26.324(1) and (2);

 Sec. 41. AS 47.24.900(9) is amended to read:

(9) "neglect" means the intentional, knowing, or reckless failure by a caregiver to provide essential care or services or access to essential care or services or to carry out a prescribed treatment plan necessary to maintain the physical and mental health of the vulnerable adult when the vulnerable adult is unable to provide or obtain the essential care or services or to carry out the prescribed treatment plan on the vulnerable adult's own behalf; in this paragraph, "essential care or services" includes food, clothing, shelter, medical care, and supervision;

 Sec. 42. AS 47.24.900(11) is amended to read:

(11) "protective services" means services that are intended to prevent or alleviate harm resulting from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect and that are provided to a vulnerable adult in need of protection; in this paragraph, "services" ["PROTECTIVE SERVICES"] includes

(A) protective placement;

(B) applying for or obtaining public benefits;

(C) obtaining health care services and supplies;

(D) staying financial transactions;

(E) petitioning for an ex parte protective order under AS 13.26.209;

#25 #26 #27 #28 #29 #30

(F) assisting with personal hygiene;

(G) obtaining food and clothing;

(H) protection from physical and emotional abuse;

(I) obtaining representative payee services; and

(J) coordinating protective services;

 Sec. 43. AS 47.24.900(15) is amended to read:

(15) "unable to consent" means refusal to, or inability to, accept services because

(A) the person is an incapacitated person or apparently is an incapacitated person;

(B) of coercion by or fear of reprisal from the perpetrator of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect;

(C) of dependency on the perpetrator of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect for services, care, or support; or

(D) of an inability to perceive that refusal to consent results in an imminent and substantial danger of loss, waste, or dissipation of income or assets, eviction, physical or mental harm to self or others, or death [OR IRREPARABLE HARM TO SELF OR OTHERS];

 Sec. 44. AS 47.24.900(16) is amended to read:

(16) "vulnerable adult" means a person 18 years of age or older who, because of incapacity, mental illness, mental deficiency, physical illness or disability, advanced age, chronic use of drugs, chronic intoxication, fraud, confinement, or disappearance [PHYSICAL OR MENTAL IMPAIRMENT], is unable to meet the person's own needs or to seek help without assistance.

 Sec. 45. AS 47.24.900 is amended by adding new paragraphs to read:

(17) "deception" means creating, reinforcing, or failing to correct a false impression or preventing another person from acquiring information that would affect the person's judgment regarding a transaction;

(18) "fiduciary duty" means the duty of a third party who stands in a position of trust or confidence with another person, including a vulnerable adult, to act with due regard for the benefit and interest of that person;

(19) "financial institution" means an institution subject to state or federal banking or financial regulations, including

(A) a broker-dealer;

(B) a commercial bank;

MEMORANDUM

April 4, 2011

TO: Leg. Legal

FROM: Cindy Smith

RE: CS for SB86 Protection of Vulnerable Adults/Minors

Please prepare a CS for SB86, as follows:

Import the House Judiciary version of the companion bill (27-GH1722\D).

To that version of the bill make the following changes:

1. In Section 13.26.207, add language that requires that if an attorney has not already been appointed for the respondent, the court shall appoint an attorney to represent the person at the hearing.

2. In the exparte order section (Sec. 13.26.209 and any others as needed), add language to allow the person to be protected or the respondent to seek modification or termination of any ex-parte protective order on three days' notice.

3. Add language in 13.26.185 (not currently in the bill) to clarify notice provisions do not apply to the exparte orders created under this bill.

4. Add definitions from revisor's bill (see attached memo).

5. Add a delayed effective date for new reporting provisions in 47.24.010(a) and (e) to go into effect September 1, 2011.

SENATE BILL NO. 86

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

TWENTY-SEVENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

BY THE SENATE RULES COMMITTEE BY REQUEST OF THE GOVERNOR

Introduced: 2/9/11
Referred: Judiciary, Finance

A BILL

FOR AN ACT ENTITLED

"An Act relating to the protection of property of persons under disability and minors; relating to the crime of violating a protective order concerning certain vulnerable persons; relating to aggravating factors at sentencing for offenses concerning a victim 65 years or older; relating to the protection of vulnerable adults; amending Rule 12(h), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure; amending Rule 45(a), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure; amending Rule 65, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure; amending Rule 17, Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure; amending Rule 9, Alaska Rules of Administration; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

 Section 1. AS 11.56.740(a) is amended to read: new protective order provisions

(a) A person commits the crime of violating a protective order if the person is subject to a protective order

(1) issued or filed under AS 18.66 and containing a provision listed in AS 18.66.100(c)(1) - (7) and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act with reckless disregard that the act violates or would violate a provision of the protective order; [OR]

(2) issued under AS 18.65.850, 18.65.855, or 18.65.860 and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act that violates or would violate a provision listed in AS 18.65.850(c)(1) - (3); or

(3) issued under AS 13.26.180 or 13.26.209 and knowingly commits or attempts to commit an act with reckless disregard that the act violates or would violate a provision of the protective order.

 Sec. 2. AS 11.56.740(c) is amended to read:

(c) In this section, "protective order" means an order issued or filed under AS 13.26.180, 13.26.209; AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.870; or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180.

 Sec. 3. AS 12.55.155(c) is amended by adding a new paragraph to read:

(35) the defendant knowingly directed the conduct constituting the offense at a victim because that person was 65 years of age or older.

 Sec. 4. AS 13.26.165 is amended to read:

Sec. 13.26.165. Protective proceedings. Upon petition and after notice and hearing in accordance with the provisions of AS 13.26.165 - 13.26.315, the court may appoint a conservator or make other protective order for cause as follows:

(1) appointment of a conservator or other protective order may be made in relation to the estate and affairs of a minor if the court determines that a minor owns money or property that requires management or protection which cannot otherwise be provided, has or may have business affairs which may be jeopardized or prevented by the status of being a minor, or that funds are needed for the minor's support and education and that protection is necessary or desirable to obtain or provide funds;

(2) appointment of a conservator or other protective order may be made in relation to the estate and affairs of a person if the court determines that

(A) the person is unable to manage the person's property and affairs effectively for reasons such as mental illness, mental deficiency, physical illness or disability, advanced age, chronic use of drugs, chronic intoxication, fraud, confinement, detention by a foreign power, or disappearance; and

(B) the person has property which will be wasted or dissipated unless proper management is provided, or that funds are needed for the support, care and welfare of the person or those entitled to be supported by the person and that protection is necessary or desirable to obtain or provide funds.

 Sec. 5. AS 13.26.180(a) is amended to read:

(a) The person to be protected, a person's attorney or other legal representative, any person who is interested in the estate, affairs, or welfare of the person to be protected, including a parent, guardian, [OR] custodian, or caregiver, the Department of Health and Social Services, or any person who would be adversely affected by lack of effective management of the property and affairs of the person to be protected, may petition for the appointment of a conservator or for other appropriate protective order.

 Sec. 6. AS 13.26.180 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(c) The petition may include a request for temporary conservatorship as provided in AS 13.26.207 if it appears that the respondent's property will be wasted or dissipated during the pendency of the conservatorship proceeding. A request for temporary conservatorship must specify the facts that cause the petitioner to believe that a temporary conservatorship is necessary.

 Sec. 7. AS 13.26 is amended by adding new sections to read:

Sec. 13.26.207. Temporary conservators. (a) If, during the pendency of an initial petition for conservatorship, it appears that the respondent is in need of a protective order to protect the respondent against waste or dissipation of funds or property, or to obtain funds that are needed for the immediate support, care, and welfare of the respondent or persons entitled to be supported by the respondent, and the respondent is not capable of protecting the respondent's funds or property or obtaining the funds that are needed to support the respondent or persons whom the respondent is required to support, the petitioner may request the appointment of a temporary conservator to authorize the protection or to obtain the necessary funds. The request shall state the reasons and factual basis for the request. The petitioner shall immediately file the request with the court and serve copies on the respondent and the respondent's attorney. The court shall conduct a hearing within 72 hours after the filing.

(b) If the court determines that a temporary conservator should be appointed, it shall make the appointment and grant to the temporary conservator only the authority that is least restrictive upon the liberty of the respondent and that enables the temporary conservator to provide the protection or authority necessary to protect the respondent from waste or dissipation of funds or property or to obtain the funds necessary for support.

(c) The temporary conservatorship expires at the time of the appointment of a full or partial conservator or upon the dismissal of the petition for conservatorship.

Sec. 13.26.209. Ex parte protective orders; forms for petitions and orders; fees. (a) A person who is allowed to file a petition for a protective order under AS 13.26.180(a) may file a petition for an ex parte protective order against another person. If the court finds that the petition establishes probable cause that the respondent is financially defrauding the petitioner or a person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition, and that because of the fraud there has been, or is an immediate threat of, a waste or dissipation of the proposed protected person's funds or other property, the court shall ex parte and without notice to the respondent issue a protective order. The petitioner shall certify to the court in writing any effort that the petitioner made to provide notice to the respondent. The court shall cause a copy of the protective order to be served on the respondent.

(b) An ex parte protective order under this section may

(1) grant any protection described in AS 13.26.200;

(2) supersede an existing power of attorney;

(3) prohibit the respondent from having any direct or indirect contact with the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition; and

(4) prohibit the respondent from taking any act with respect to the funds or other property of the petitioner or other person for whose benefit the petitioner filed the petition.

(c) An ex parte protective order expires 20 days after it is issued, at the end of a six-month extension if granted by the court under (d) of this section, or upon the appointment of a temporary or permanent conservator or dismissal of the petition for the ex parte order.

(d) Upon application filed with the court before the expiration of the 20-day ex parte protective order, the court shall schedule a hearing on whether to extend the protective order for up to six months. The court shall provide at least 10 days' notice to the respondent of the hearing and the respondent's right to appear and be heard. If the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the respondent has committed fraud against the petitioner or the person for whose benefit the petition was filed, regardless of whether the respondent appears at the hearing, the court may extend the ex parte protective order for up to six months.

(e) A protective order issued under this section is in addition to any other civil or criminal remedy.

(f) A third party shall comply with a protective order issued under this section. A third party who does not comply with a protective order granted under this section may be liable in a civil action to the protected person or the protected person's heirs, assigns, or estate for a civil penalty not to exceed $1,000, plus the actual damages, costs, and fees associated with the failure to comply with the protective order. A third person who does not comply with a protective order granted under this section may also be criminally liable under AS 11.56.740 for violating a protective order.

(g) The Alaska Court System, after consulting with the Department of Health and Social Services, the office of public advocacy, the office of elder fraud and assistance, the long-term care ombudsman, and other interested persons and organizations, shall prepare forms for petitions, protective orders, and instructions for their use by a person seeking a protective order under this section. The forms must conform to the Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure and Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, except that information on the forms may be filled in by legible handwriting. The office of the clerk of each superior and district court shall make available to the public the forms a person seeking a protective order under this section may need and instructions for the use of the forms. The clerk shall provide assistance in completing and filing the forms.

(h) Filing fees may not be charged for a petition under this section.

 Sec. 8. AS 13.26 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 13.26.325. Definitions. In AS 13.26.165 - AS 13.26.325, unless the context requires otherwise, "fraud" means

(1) robbery, extortion, and coercion under AS 11.41.500 - 11.41.530;

(2) theft and related offenses under AS 11.46.100 - 11.46.740; or

(3) exploitation of another person or another person's resources for personal profit or advantage with no significant benefit accruing to the person who is exploited.

 Sec. 9. AS 18.65.530(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except as provided in (b) or (c) of this section, a peace officer, with or without a warrant, shall arrest a person if the officer has probable cause to believe the person has, either in or outside the presence of the officer, within the previous 12 hours,

(1) committed domestic violence, except an offense under AS 11.41.100 - 11.41.130, whether the crime is a felony or a misdemeanor;

(2) committed the crime of violating protective order in violation of AS 11.56.740(a)(1) and (2) [AS 11.56.740];

(3) violated a condition of release imposed under AS 12.30.016(e) or (f) or 12.30.027.

 Sec. 10. AS 18.65.540(a) is amended to read:

(a) The Department of Public Safety shall maintain a central registry of protective orders issued by or filed with a court of this state under AS 13.26.180, 13.26.209; AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.870; or AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180. The registry must include for each protective order the names of the petitioner and respondent, their dates of birth, and the conditions and duration of the order. The registry shall retain a record of the protective order after it has expired.

 Sec. 11. AS 18.65.540(b) is amended to read:

(b) A peace officer receiving a protective order from a court under

AS 13.26.180, 13.26.209; AS 18.65.850 - 18.65.855; or [,] AS 18.66.100 - 18.66.180, a modified order issued under AS 18.65.860 or AS 18.66.120, or an order dismissing a protective order, must take reasonable steps to ensure that the order, modified order, or dismissal is entered into the central registry within 24 hours after being received.

 Sec. 12. AS 47.24.010(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except as provided in (e) and (f) of this section, the following persons who, in the performance of their professional duties, have reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect shall, not later than 24 hours after first having cause for the belief, report the belief to the department's central information and referral service for vulnerable adults in the department office that handles adult protective services:

(1) a physician or other licensed health care provider;

(2) a mental health professional as defined in AS 47.30.915(11) and including a marital and family therapist licensed under AS 08.63;

(3) a pharmacist;

(4) an administrator or employee of a nursing home, residential care or health care facility;

(5) a guardian or conservator;

(6) a police officer;

(7) a village public safety officer;

(8) a village health aide;

(9) a social worker;

(10) a member of the clergy;

(11) a staff employee of a project funded by the Department of Administration for the provision of services to older Alaskans, the Department of Health and Social Services, or the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault;

(12) an employee of a personal care or home health aide program;

(13) an emergency medical technician or a mobile intensive care paramedic;

(14) a caregiver of the vulnerable adult;

(15) a certified nurse aide;

(16) an educator or administrative staff member of a public or private educational institution.

 Sec. 13. AS 47.24.010(b) is amended to read:

(b) A report made under this section may include the name and address of the reporting person and must include

(1) the name and contact information [ADDRESS] of the vulnerable adult;

(2) information relating to the nature and extent of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect;

(3) other information that the reporting person believes might be helpful in an investigation of the case or in providing protection for the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 14. AS 47.24.010(c) is amended to read:

(c) The department, or its designees, shall report to the Department of Law any person required by (a) of this section to report who fails to comply with this section. A person listed in (a) of this section who, because of the circumstances, should have had reasonable cause to believe that a vulnerable adult suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect but who knowingly fails to comply with this section is guilty of a class B misdemeanor. If a person convicted under this section is a member of a profession or occupation that is licensed, certified, or regulated by the state, the court shall notify the appropriate licensing, certifying, or regulating entity of the conviction.

 Sec. 15. AS 47.24.010(d) is amended to read:

(d) This section does not prohibit a person listed in (a) of this section, or any other person, from reporting cases of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult that have come to the person's attention in their nonoccupational capacity, nor does it prohibit any other person from reporting a harm under this section.

 Sec. 16. AS 47.24.010(e) is amended to read:

(e) If a person making a report under this section believes that immediate action is necessary to protect the vulnerable adult from imminent risk of serious physical harm due to undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect and the reporting person cannot immediately contact the department's central information and referral service for vulnerable adults, the reporting person shall [MAY] make the report to a police officer or a village public safety officer. The police officer or village public safety officer shall take immediate action to protect the vulnerable adult and ~~shall~~ [, AT THE EARLIEST OPPORTUNITY,] notify the department within 24 hours of receiving the report of harm. A person may not bring an action for damages against a police officer, village public safety officer, the state, or a political subdivision of the state based on a decision under this subsection to take or not to take immediate action to protect a vulnerable adult. If a decision is made under this subsection to take immediate action to protect a vulnerable adult, a person may not bring an action for damages based on the protective actions taken unless the protective actions were performed with gross negligence or intentional misconduct; damages awarded in the action may include only direct economic compensatory damages for personal injury.

 Sec. 17. AS 47.24.010(f) is amended to read:

(f) A person listed in (a) of this section who reports to the long term care ombudsman under AS 47.62.015, or to the Department of Health and Social Services, that a vulnerable adult has been unduly influenced, abandoned, exploited, abused, or neglected in an out-of-home care facility is considered to have met the duty to report under (a) of this section.

 Sec. 18. AS 47.24.010 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(i) A person required to report under this section who makes the report to the person's job supervisor or to another individual working for the entity that employs the person is not relieved of the obligation to make the report to the department as required under (a) of this section.

(j) A person who recklessly makes a false report under this section is civilly liable for actual damages suffered by the person who is the subject of the report.

 Sec. 19. AS 47.24.013(a) is amended to read:

(a) If a report received under AS 47.24.010 regards the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult who is 60 years of age or older that is alleged to have been committed by or to have resulted from the negligence of the staff or a volunteer of an out-of-home care facility, including a facility licensed under AS 47.32, in which the vulnerable adult resides, the department shall transfer the report for investigation to the long term care ombudsman under AS 47.62.015.

 Sec. 20. AS 47.24.013(b) is amended to read:

(b) The department shall investigate a report received under AS 47.24.010 regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult who is less than 60 years of age that is alleged to have been committed by or to have resulted from the negligence of the staff or a volunteer of an out-of-home care facility in which the vulnerable adult resides.

 Sec. 21. AS 47.24.013(c) is amended to read:

(c) Upon receipt of a report under (a) or (b) of this section, the long term care ombudsman and the department shall

(1) conduct an investigation as appropriate under AS 47.62.015 or this title, respectively;

(2) coordinate and cooperate in their responses to and investigations of the report if their jurisdictions overlap;

(3) provide the results of their actions or investigations to the central information and referral service of the office of the department that handles adult protective services within 60 days after the receipt of the report.

 Sec. 22. AS 47.24.013(d) is amended to read:

(d) If the long term care ombudsman receives directly a report regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult in an out-of-home care facility, the ombudsman shall provide the report, and the results of the ombudsman's actions or investigations regarding the report, to the central information and referral service of the office of the department that handles adult protective services. The department may investigate the report as described in AS 47.24.015 if the department determines that action is appropriate.

 Sec. 23. AS 47.24.015(a) is amended to read:

(a) Upon the department's receipt of a report under AS 47.24.010 that is not transferred under AS 47.24.013, the department, or its designee, shall promptly initiate an investigation to determine whether the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report suffers from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect. The department, or its designee, shall conduct a face-to-face interview with the subject of the report unless that person is unconscious or the department, or its designee, has determined that a face-to-face interview could further endanger the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 24. AS 47.24.015(c) is amended to read:

(c) The department, or its designee, shall immediately terminate an investigation under this section upon the request of the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report made under AS 47.24.010. However, the department, or its designee, may not terminate the investigation if the investigation to that point has resulted in probable cause to believe that the vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and the request is made personally by the vulnerable adult and the vulnerable adult is not competent to make the request on the adult's own behalf, or the request is made by the vulnerable adult's guardian, attorney-in-fact, or surrogate decision maker and that person is the alleged perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult and is being investigated under this chapter. If the department has probable cause to believe that the vulnerable adult is in need of protective services,

(1) the department may petition the court as set out in AS 47.24.019;

(2) the department, or its designee, may refer the report made to the department under AS 47.24.010 to a police officer for criminal investigation; or

(3) in cases involving fraud, the department, or its designee, may refer the report made to the department under AS 47.24.010 to the office of public advocacy for investigation; in this paragraph, "fraud" has the meaning given in AS 13.26.325.

 Sec. 25. AS 47.24.015 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(h) An individual or entity shall cooperate with an investigation initiated by the department under this section. The individual or entity shall permit representatives of the department to obtain and review any financial or health care records related to a vulnerable adult and to interview staff that have had contact with, treated, or observed the vulnerable adult.

(i) A person may not interfere with the department in the performance of its investigation under this section, including interfering with the department's access to the vulnerable adult.

(j) If an entity or other person denies the department access to a vulnerable adult, a vulnerable adult's residence, or the health care or financial records of a vulnerable adult, the department may file a petition with the court for an ex parte order granting access if the department has not filed a petition for guardianship or conservatorship of the vulnerable adult. The court may grant the ex parte order if the petition shows that the department has received a report of harm under AS 47.24.010 and that the order is necessary for access to the adult or that the health care or financial records are relevant to the department's investigation under AS 47.24.015. Notice of the order shall be given to the party denying access as directed by the court.

(k) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the office of the department that handles adult protective services shall have access to any information compiled or retained by other divisions within the department, regardless of the nature of the information or whether the information is considered confidential, in order to assist in administering the provisions of this chapter.

(l) The department may audiotape or videotape an interview of a vulnerable adult if the adult has the capacity to consent and gives that consent. The department shall document the consent in its investigative file. The department may not audiotape or videotape an interview of a vulnerable adult who lacks the capacity to consent.

(m) The department shall provide for the training of investigators who investigate reports of harm under this section. Training must include instruction in federal, state, and local laws and policies of the department related to vulnerable adults, and in investigative techniques. The department may require other appropriate training.

(n) In this section, "financial records" includes records related to the vulnerable adult maintained by the following:

(1) the vulnerable adult or fiduciary for the vulnerable adult;

(2) a financial institution;

(3) a caregiver of a vulnerable adult;

(4) a member of the vulnerable adult's family.

* Sec. 26. AS 47.24.016(a) is amended to read:

(a) If the department determines under AS 47.24.015 that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services, but the department cannot obtain the vulnerable adult's consent to receive the services because the vulnerable adult is unable to consent or lacks decision making capacity, and has no guardian, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate for health care decisions under AS 13.52.030 [OR ATTORNEY IN FACT] to serve as the vulnerable adult's surrogate decision maker, the department may select from the following list, in the order of priority listed, an individual who is willing to be the vulnerable adult's surrogate decision maker for the purpose of deciding whether to consent to the vulnerable adult's receipt of protective services:

(1) the vulnerable adult's spouse, unless

[(A) THE VULNERABLE ADULT AND THE SPOUSE HAVE SEPARATE DOMICILES; OR

(B)] the vulnerable adult or the spouse have initiated divorce or dissolution proceedings;

(2) an individual who lives with the vulnerable adult in a spousal relationship or as a domestic partner and who is 18 years of age or older;

(3) a son or daughter of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older;

(4) a parent of the vulnerable adult;

(5) a brother or sister of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older; or

(6) a close friend or relative of the vulnerable adult who is 18 years of age or older.

* Sec. 27. AS 47.24.016(b) is amended to read:

(b) An individual from the list in (a) of this section may not be selected as a surrogate decision maker if

(1) the department determines that individual does not possess decision making capacity; or

(2) there are allegations that individual is a perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult.

* Sec. 28. AS 47.24.016(d) is amended to read:

(d) The department may not continue to provide protective services to a vulnerable adult based on the consent of a surrogate decision maker serving under this section or AS 13.52.030 if the department determines that the vulnerable adult has become able to consent or has regained decision making capacity since the surrogate's consent was given. The department may continue protective services to a vulnerable adult who has become able to consent or has regained decision making capacity only if the vulnerable adult consents.

* Sec. 29. AS 47.24.017(a) is amended to read:

(a) If the department determines under AS 47.24.015 that a vulnerable adult is in need of protective services and either the vulnerable adult, the vulnerable adult's guardian or attorney-in-fact, trustee [ATTORNEY IN FACT], [OR] a surrogate decision maker selected under AS 47.24.016, or a surrogate for health care decisions under AS 13.52.030 consents to receipt of the protective services, and to the extent that resources are available, the department shall ensure that the protective services for the vulnerable adult are provided by the department, or its designee, within 10 working days after the department received the report under AS 47.24.010 regarding the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of the vulnerable adult. However, if circumstances beyond the control of the department or the department's designee make it impossible to provide the protective services within the 10 working days, the department shall ensure that the services are provided as soon as possible after that time.

* Sec. 30. AS 47.24.019(c) is amended to read:

(c) If a vulnerable adult who has consented to receive protective services, or on whose behalf consent to receive protective services has been given, is prevented by a family member, caregiver, guardian, conservator, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate decision maker from receiving those services, the department may petition the superior court for an injunction restraining the family member, caregiver, guardian, conservator, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate decision maker from interfering with the provision of protective services to the vulnerable adult.

 Sec. 31. AS 47.24.050 is amended to read:

Sec. 47.24.050. Confidentiality of reports. (a) Investigation reports and reports of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult filed under this chapter are confidential and are not subject to public inspection and copying under AS 40.25.110 - 40.25.125. However, under [IN ACCORDANCE WITH] this chapter and regulations adopted under this chapter, investigation reports may be used by appropriate agencies or individuals inside and outside the state, in connection with investigations or judicial proceedings involving the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult.

(b) The department shall disclose a report of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult if the vulnerable adult who is the subject of the report or the vulnerable adult's guardian, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate decision maker consents in writing. The department may not disclose a report of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult to the vulnerable adult's guardian, attorney-in-fact, trustee, or surrogate decision maker if that person is an alleged perpetrator of the undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect of the vulnerable adult and is being investigated under this chapter. The department shall, upon request, disclose the number of verified reports of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of a vulnerable adult that occurred at an institution that provides care for vulnerable adults or that were the result of actions or inactions of a public home care provider.

 Sec. 32. AS 47.24.130 is amended to read:

Sec. 47.24.130. Treatment through spiritual means. This chapter may not be construed to mean that a person is unduly influenced, abused, neglected, self-neglected, vulnerable, unable to consent, abandoned, exploited, or in need of emergency or protective services for the sole reason that the person relies on or is being furnished treatment by spiritual means through prayer alone under [IN ACCORDANCE WITH] the tenets and practices of a church or religious denomination of which the person is a member or adherent, if [PROVIDED THAT] the person consents to the treatment through spiritual means only and the treatment is administered by an accredited practitioner of the church or religious denomination. In this section, "church or religious denomination" has the meaning given to "religious organization" in AS 05.15.690.

 Sec. 33. AS 47.24.900(2) is amended to read:

(2) "abuse" means

(A) the [WILFUL,] intentional, or reckless nonaccidental, and nontherapeutic infliction of physical pain, injury, [OR] mental or emotional distress, or fear, including coercion and intimidation; or

(B) sexual assault under AS 11.41.410 or 11.41.420;

 Sec. 34. AS 47.24.900(3) is amended to read:

(3) "caregiver" means

(A) a person who is providing care to a vulnerable adult as a result of a family relationship, or who has assumed some or all responsibility for the care of a vulnerable adult voluntarily, by contract, as an employee of a business that provides care in an adult's home, or by court order; or

(B) an employee of an out-of-home care facility who provides care to one or more vulnerable adults;

 Sec. 35. AS 47.24.900(4) is amended to read:

(4) "decision making capacity" means the ability to understand and appreciate the nature and consequences of a decision and the ability to reach and communicate an informed decision; in this paragraph, "informed decision" means a decision made by the vulnerable adult that is free from undue influence;

 Sec. 36. AS 47.24.900(7) is amended to read:

(7) "exploitation~~"~~

(A) means unjust or improper use of another person or another person's resources for one's own profit or advantage, with or without the person's consent;

(B) includes acts by a person who stands in a position of trust or confidence with a vulnerable adult, or who knows or should know that the vulnerable adult lacks the capacity to consent, that involve obtaining profit or advantage through undue influence, deception, intimidation, or breach of fiduciary duty;

 Sec. 37. AS 47.24.900(9) is amended to read:

(9) "neglect" means the intentional, or reckless failure by a caregiver to provide essential care or services or access to essential care or services, or to carry out a prescribed treatment plan, necessary to maintain the physical and mental health of the vulnerable adult when the vulnerable adult is unable to provide or obtain the services on the vulnerable adult's own; in this paragraph, "essential care or services" means food, clothing, shelter, medical care, and supervision;

 Sec. 38. AS 47.24.900(11) is amended to read:

(11) "protective services"

(A) means services that are intended to prevent or alleviate harm resulting from undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect and that are provided to a vulnerable adult in need of protection; ["PROTECTIVE SERVICES"]

(B) includes

(i) protective placement;

(ii) applying for or obtaining public benefits;

(iii) obtaining health care services and supplies;

(iv) freezing an account at a financial institution;

(v) petitioning for an ex parte protective order under AS 13.26.209;

(vi) assisting with personal hygiene;

(vii) obtaining food and clothing;

(viii) protection from physical and emotional abuse;

(ix) obtaining representative payee services; and

(x) coordinating protective services;

 Sec. 39. AS 47.24.900(15) is amended to read:

(15) "unable to consent" means refusal to, or inability to, accept services because

(A) the person is an incapacitated person or apparently is an incapacitated person;

(B) of coercion by or fear of reprisal from the perpetrator of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect;

(C) of dependency on the perpetrator of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, or neglect for services, care, or support; or

(D) of an inability to perceive that refusal to consent results in an imminent and substantial danger of loss of income or assets, eviction, physical or mental harm to self or others, or death [OR IRREPARABLE HARM TO SELF OR OTHERS];

 Sec. 40. AS 47.24.900(16) is amended to read:

(16) "vulnerable adult" means a person 18 years of age or older who, because of incapacity, mental illness, mental deficiency, physical illness or disability, advanced age, chronic use of drugs, chronic intoxication, fraud, confinement, or disappearance [PHYSICAL OR MENTAL IMPAIRMENT], is unable to meet the person's own needs or to seek help without assistance.

 Sec. 41. AS 47.24.900 is amended by adding new paragraphs to read:

(17) "deception" means creating, reinforcing, or failing to correct a false impression or preventing another person from acquiring information that would affect the person's judgment regarding a transaction;

(18) "fiduciary duty" means the duty of a guardian, conservator, trustee, representative payee, or holder of a power of attorney of a vulnerable adult to act for the benefit of the vulnerable adult;

(2) AS 47.24.013 from "Reports of abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of vulnerable adults in out-of-home care facilities" to "Reports of undue influence, abandonment, exploitation, abuse, neglect, or self-neglect of vulnerable adults in out-of-home care facilities."

 Sec. 47. This Act takes effect immediately under AS 01.10.070(c).

SECTIONAL ANALYSIS

SB 86, "An Act relating to the protection of property of persons under disability and minor; relating to the crime of violating a protective order concerning certain vulnerable persons; relating to aggravating factors at sentencing for offenses concerning a victim 65 years or older; relating to the protection of vulnerable adults; amending Rule 12(h), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure; amending Rule 45(a), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure; amending Rule 65, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure; amending Rule 17, Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure; amending Rule 9, Alaska Rules of Administration; and providing for an effective date."

Section 1 makes the knowing violation or attempted violation of a financial protective order (introduced in section 7 of this legislation to protect vulnerable adults and elders) a crime.

Section 2 amends the definition of protective orders found in AS 11.56.740 to include financial protective orders being introduced with this legislation to protect the financial security of vulnerable adults and elders.

Section 3 makes the fact that a defendant knowingly directed criminal conduct at a person 65 years of age or older an aggravating factor at sentencing.

Section 4 adds being a victim of fraud as a basis for appointing a conservator by amending AS 13.26.165(2)(a). This will allow courts to protect individuals who may not be suffering from any mental deficiency but are victims of financial abuse.

Section 5 adds attorneys, caregivers, and the Department of Health and Social Services as entities who may petition for conservatorship for an individual. These additions widen the net of individuals who can help protect victims to include entities who likely have first-hand knowledge of the abuse.

Section 6 creates a procedure for requesting the appointment of a temporary conservator in a conservatorship petition by adding a new subsection to AS 13.26.180. Currently, there is no statutory basis for appointing a conservator on a temporary basis. Under this section, a temporary conservator may be requested if it appears that the respondent's property will be wasted or dissipated during the pendency of the conservatorship proceedings.

Section 7 adds two new statutes. The first provides the statutory basis for temporary conservators to protect the victims of fraud and financial abuse and to ensure that funds are obtained to meet the needs of the respondent and respondent's dependents. Procedurally, this proposed statute parallels the existing statute AS 13.26.140 which deals with temporary guardians. The second statute creates a process for obtaining financial protective orders to immediately stop suspected financial abuse of the elderly and vulnerable adults. An initial 20-day protective order may be obtained ex parte, without notice to the respondent. The protective order may be extended for up to six months, after notice and a hearing at which the respondent may be heard.

Section 8 adds a definition of fraud (which is already found in the statutes creating the Office of Elder Fraud and Assistance) to conservatorship statutes.

Section 9 excludes the crime of violating a financial protective order from the crimes subject to warrantless arrest.

Sections 10 and 11 add financial protective order to the registry of protective orders maintained by the Department of Public Safety and updated by law enforcement officers.

Section 12 adds the concept of undue influence to the list of reportable harms to a vulnerable adult. Employees of nursing homes, residential care or health care facilities and the staff of educational institutions are added to the list of mandated reporters.

Section 13 clarifies information that may be contained in a report of harm to include contact information regarding the vulnerable adult and information regarding any undue influence.

Section 14 adds "undue influence" to the list of reportable harms.

Section 15 adds "undue influence" to the list of reportable harms and clarifies that a mandatory reporter is not prohibited from reporting harm in their non-occupational capacity. It also clarifies that no person is prohibited from making a report of harm.

Section 16 requires mandated reporters to contact law enforcement in situations where they believe the vulnerable adult is at imminent risk of serious physical harm and it is not possible to contact the department. "Undue influence" is added as one of the reportable harms. Law enforcement is required to contact the department within 24 hours of receiving the report.

Section 17 adds "undue influence" and "abandonment" to the list of harms that can be reported regarding a vulnerable adult residing in an out-of-home care facility.

Section 18 adds two new subsections. The first subsection states that a mandatory reporter is not relieved of the obligation to report to the department by reporting to their supervisor or another employee. The second subsection makes an individual who willfully or recklessly makes a false report liable for civil damages.

Section 19 adds" undue influence" to the list of reportable harms regarding vulnerable adults 60 years of age or older residing in an out-of-home care facility. The department is required to transfer these reports to the long term care ombudsman.

Section 20 adds "undue influence" to the list of reportable harms the department is required to investigate regarding individuals under 60 years of age living in out-of-home facilities.

Section 21 clarifies that the department and the long term care ombudsman must provide the results of their actions or investigations to the office of the department that handles adult protective services.

Section 22 adds "undue influence" to the list of reportable harms included in the reports sent to the department by the long term care ombudsman. It is clarified that these reports are sent to the office of the department that handles adult protective services.

Section 23 adds "undue influence" to the list of reportable harms the department is required to investigate.

Section 24 adds "undue influence" to the list of reported harm that applies to an alleged perpetrator.

Section 25 adds seven new subsections. These subsections

- Require individuals and entities to provide the department access to health and financial records of a vulnerable adult as part of its investigation;
- Prohibit anyone from interfering in an investigation;
- Allow the department to file an ex parte order for access to records if necessary if no petition for guardianship or conservatorship has been filed;
- Allow adult protective services access to any departmental information necessary to assist in the case;
- Allow the department to audio or video tape an interview of a vulnerable adult with their consent;
- Require the department to provide training to investigators and
- Define "financial records".

Section 26 adds an attorney-in-fact, a surrogate for health care decisions and a trustee as individuals who may serve as a surrogate decision maker for the purpose of consenting to the receipt of protective services for a vulnerable adult. It also deletes the requirement that in order for a spouse to be a surrogate decision maker, the spouse and vulnerable adult may not be living in separate domiciles.

Section 27 adds an allegation of "undue influence" to the allegations that would disqualify an individual from being selected as a surrogate decision maker.

Section 28 requires the department to discontinue protective services if a vulnerable adult who has regained the cognitive ability to make their own decisions refuses services. Services may be continued only if the adult consents.

Section 29 adds attorney-in-fact, surrogate for health care decisions and a trustee as individuals who may consent to the provision of protective services to a vulnerable adult and adds undue influence to the list of potential reports of harm.

Section 30 adds family members, trustees and conservators to the list of individuals who may be restrained by a court injunction from interfering with the provision of protective services to a vulnerable adult.

Section 31 adds "undue influence" to the types of harm contained in confidential reports and adds trustee to the list of individuals who may consent to release a confidential report.

Section 32 clarifies that a person is not considered to be unduly influenced if they choose to consent to treatment by spiritual means only.

Section 33 redefines "abuse" to include the infliction of emotional distress or fear, including coercion and intimidation.

Section 34 redefines "caregiver" to include someone who is an employee of a business that provides care in an adult's home.

Section 35 defines "informed decision" as a decision made free from undue influence.

Section 36 redefines "exploitation" to include acts by a person in a position of trust with a vulnerable adult who obtains profit or advantage through undue influence, deception, intimidation or breach of fiduciary duty.

Section 37 redefines neglect to include the willful or reckless failure by a caregiver to provide access to services or to carry out a treatment plan necessary to the health of a recipient. "Essential care or services are defined as food, clothing, shelter, medical care and supervision.

Section 38 expands the definition of protective services to include services that obtain basic health care needs, financial assistance services, and protection from abuse, obtaining basic food, shelter and clothing, among others. Undue influence is added to the list of types of harm.

Section 39 amends the definition of "unable to consent" by adding the concept of "undue influence" and that the inability to consent includes a person's inability to perceive a loss of income or assets, eviction, and physical or mental harm.

Section 40 amends the definition of a vulnerable adult by more clearly defining what constitutes a physical or mental impairment.

Section 41 adds definitions for the following terms:

- Deception
- Fiduciary duty
- Financial institution
- Person who stands in a position of trust or confidence
- Undue influence

Section 42 amends the uncodified law. Under Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, the court, when considering a motion for continuance of a trial date, will be required to consider whether the victim is vulnerable due to advanced age and what effect the delay would have on the victim. In addition, trials in which the victim is vulnerable due to advanced age will be added to cases that will be given preference for scheduling.

Section 43 amends Indirect Court Rules in three areas. First, amending Rule 17, Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure, to allow ex parte orders to be issued to protect persons from financial exploitation. Second, amending Rule 9, Alaska Rules of Administration, by not requiring filing fees for an ex parte protective order. Third, amending Rule 65, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure, by allowing ex parte orders to be issued to access records related to the investigation of a report of harm.

Section 44 amends the uncodified law by indicating that Section 1, 2, 3, and 42 apply to offenses committed on or after the effective date of the Act.

Section 45 amends the uncodified law regarding the number of votes required to enact Sections 7 and 25 of this bill.

Section 46 amends the uncodified law by adding revisor's instructions.

Section 47 provides for an effective date.

FISCAL NOTE #1

STATE OF ALASKA BILL NO. SB 86
2011 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Analysis:

This legislation provides additional protections to seniors and other vulnerable adults. The proposed changes in the vulnerable adult statutes add the concept of undue influence as a potential harm. This bill provides additional legal and investigatory tools to the department in order to respond to reports of harm and establish protective services to individuals who need them. There is no fiscal impact anticipated.

FISCAL NOTE #2

STATE OF ALASKA BILL NO. SB 86
2011 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Analysis

This bill will enhance the legal protections against fraud and financial abuse available to elders and vulnerable adults. The Office of Public Advocacy wishes to highlight two portions of the bill that will provide new emergency procedures to protect vulnerable adults who may be served by the agency's Elder Fraud or Probate practices.

In section 7, this bill creates two emergency judicial proceedings to stop and prevent financial exploitation of vulnerable adults. The first is a process for the appointment of temporary conservators. This will allow the court to impose emergency conservatorships to assist vulnerable individuals with their financial affairs to prevent imminent waste or fraudulent dissipation of their estates.

The second creates a process for the imposition of financial protective orders. Individual victims and other concerned parties will be able to apply for the protections of 20 day ex parte protective orders to stop or prevent financial exploitation. The initial ex parte order may be extended for up to six months after notice and a hearing at which the respondent may be heard.

The bill also provides for expanded reporting of financial abuse and enhanced penalties in criminal cases when there is an elderly victim. Additionally, the bill criminalizes violations of the financial protective orders.

The agency does not believe that this will result in significant cost increases to the agency.

BILL NO. SB 86

Analysis

This bill adds a 20-day and six-month ex parte process for financial fraud, and a temporary conservatorship process when the need exists during the pendency of a regular petition for conservatorship. The bill also expands the list of mandatory reporters of harm to a vulnerable adult, adds the harm of undue influence, and expands the investigative powers of the Office of Adult Protective Services, including the authority to seek an ex parte order for access to a vulnerable adult or records regarding an adult. The bill also amends the crime of violating a protective order by adding the crime of violating a protective order issued to protect a vulnerable adult under AS 13.26.180 or 13.26.209. Violating a protective order is a class A misdemeanor.

There is no anticipated fiscal impact to Department of Law.

FISCAL NOTE #4

STATE OF ALASKA BILL NO. SB 86
2011 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Analysis

This bill treats AS 13 protective orders in the same manner as stalking, sexual assault, and domestic violence protective orders under AS 18 and will require the development of new protective order forms with substantial collaboration between DPS, the Alaska Court System, DHSS, the Office of Public Advocacy, and the Department of Revenue. The findings and orders for these new AS 13 protective orders will differ from the AS 18 orders in the existing protection order registry, which address violence and domestic situations.

Once the forms are developed, APSIN programming changes will be required to accommodate new fields and types of information required. A separate version of the APSIN central registry must be developed to accommodate these new orders. Note: these new orders do not meet the necessary criteria for entry into the national registry of protection, stalking and sexual assault orders (NCIC) because they do not necessarily involve physical violence.

Programming and analysis for APSIN changes will require 280 hours of contractual work @ $100/hr to evaluate and make recommendations regarding statewide implementation of new processes and procedures for entering and maintaining these new orders into existing APSIN . Additionally, 40 hours of contractual work (at $100/hr) will be required to integrate these new orders in new APSIN.

Statewide training will then be required on the new forms and APSIN procedures. Statewide training costs are included.

FISCAL NOTE #5

STATE OF ALASKA BILL NO. SB 86
2011 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Analysis

This bill makes several changes to AS 13.26 and AS 47.24 concerning vulnerable adults. It adds fraud as a reason that might necessitate a conservatorship, and as a basis for seeking an ex parte financial protective order. This bill also adds the concept of undue influence to the list of reportable harms and adds certain individuals as mandatory reporters of harm to vulnerable adults. Finally, this bill expands the investigatory authority of the Adult Protective Services Office.

Passage of this legislation will have no fiscal impact on the division.

FISCAL NOTE #6

STATE OF ALASKA
2011 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

BILL NO. SB 86

Analysis

This legislation creates a new crime of violating protective orders and adds aggravating factors at sentencing for a crime against a victim 65 years or older. Violation of this law could result in incarceration. However, the Department of Corrections is unable to determine the number of future offenders and therefore is unable to determine the fiscal impact of the passage of this legislation.

The Honorable Hollis French, Chair
Senate Judiciary Committee
State Capitol Room 417
Juneau, AK 99801

Dear Senator French:

The Department of Health and Social Services respectfully requests a hearing in the Senate Judiciary Committee on Senate Bill 86, "An Act relating to the protection of property of persons under disability and minors; relating to the crime of violating a protective order concerning certain vulnerable persons; relating to aggravating factors at sentencing for offenses concerning a victim 65 years or older; relating to the protection of vulnerable adults; amending Rule 12(h), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure; amending Rule 45(a), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure; amending Rule 65, Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure; amending Rule 17, Alaska Rules of Probate Procedure; amending Rule 9, Alaska Rules of Administration; and providing for an effective date."

The bill strengthens the laws against financial exploitation and enhances the ability to obtain emergency protection orders for seniors. It improves the ability of those investigating reports of harm to obtain vital information in a timely manner, and will lead to better services and safety for vulnerable adults who are abused, neglected or exploited and unable to protect their own interests.

A copy of Governor Parnell's transmittal letter providing additional information on the bill and the associated fiscal note should be on file with the committee.

Your favorable consideration of this request will be appreciated.

Sincerely,

William J. Streur

A BILL

FOR AN ACT ENTITLED

"An Act clarifying that a legislator or legislative employee is allowed to accept certain compassionate gifts; allowing legislators and legislative employees who are representing persons in an administrative hearing to contact hearing officers and attempt to influence the outcome of the hearing if they are professionals licensed in the state, and allowing legislators and legislative employees who are not professionals licensed in the state to contact hearing officers for the purpose of influencing the outcome of the hearing in certain instances; requiring the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics to maintain a public record of certain ethics disclosures made by legislators and legislative employees; prohibiting a public member of the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics from disclosing confidential information without authorization; clarifying the ethics disclosure requirements for tickets to or gifts in connection with charity events; amending disclosure deadlines under the Legislative Ethics Act; relating to requests to refrain from disclosure under the Legislative Ethics Act; relating to the applicability of certain provisions of the Legislative Ethics Act to certain legislative employees, volunteers, and interns; establishing a seat for an alternate public member on the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics; clarifying the requirements related to participation by alternate public members and alternate legislative members in the proceedings of the committee; amending the definition of 'legislative employee' in the Legislative Ethics Act; and repealing a procedure for appointment of alternate legislative members."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

 Section 1. AS 24.60.030(a) is amended to read:

(a) A legislator or legislative employee may not

(1) solicit, agree to accept, or accept a benefit other than official compensation for the performance of public duties; this paragraph may not be construed to prohibit lawful solicitation for and acceptance of campaign contributions, solicitation or acceptance of contributions for a charity event, as defined in AS 24.60.080(a)(2)(B), or the acceptance of a gift [LAWFUL GRATUITY] under AS 24.60.075 or 24.60.080 [AS 24.60.080];

(2) use public funds, facilities, equipment, services, or another government asset or resource for a nonlegislative purpose, for involvement in or support of or opposition to partisan political activity, or for the private benefit of [EITHER] the legislator, legislative employee, or another person; this paragraph does not prohibit

(A) limited use of state property and resources for personal purposes if the use does not interfere with the performance of public duties and either the cost or value related to the use is nominal or the legislator or legislative employee reimburses the state for the cost of the use;

(B) the use of mailing lists, computer data, or other information lawfully obtained from a government agency and available to the general public for nonlegislative purposes;

(C) the legislative council, notwithstanding AS 24.05.190, from designating a public facility for use by legislators and legislative employees for health or fitness purposes; when the council designates a facility to be used by legislators and legislative employees for health or fitness purposes, it shall adopt guidelines governing access to and use of the facility; the guidelines may establish times in which use of the facility is limited to specific groups;

(D) a legislator from using the legislator's private office in the capital city during a legislative session, and for the 10 days immediately before and the 10 days immediately after a legislative session, for nonlegislative purposes if the use does not interfere with the performance of public duties and if there is no cost to the state for the use of the space and equipment, other than utility costs and minimal wear and tear, or the legislator promptly reimburses the state for the cost; an office is considered a legislator's private office under this subparagraph if it is the primary space in the capital city reserved for use by the legislator, whether or not it is shared with others;

(E) a legislator from use of legislative employees to prepare and send out seasonal greeting cards;

(F) a legislator from using state resources to transport computers or other office equipment owned by the legislator but primarily used for a state function;

(G) use by a legislator of photographs of that legislator;

(H) reasonable use of the Internet by a legislator or a legislative employee except if the use is for election campaign purposes;

(I) a legislator or legislative employee from soliciting, accepting, or receiving a gift on behalf of a recognized, nonpolitical charitable organization in a state facility;

(J) a legislator from sending any communication in the form of a newsletter to the legislator's constituents, except a communication expressly advocating the election or defeat of a candidate or a newsletter or material in a newsletter that is clearly only for the private benefit of a legislator or a legislative employee; or

(K) full participation in a charity event approved in advance by the Alaska Legislative Council;

(3) knowingly seek, accept, use, allocate, grant, or award public funds for a purpose other than that approved by law, or make a false statement in connection with a claim, request, or application for compensation, reimbursement, or travel allowances from public funds;

(4) require a legislative employee to perform services for the private benefit of the legislator or employee at any time, or allow a legislative employee to perform services for the private benefit of a legislator or employee on government time; it is not a violation of this paragraph if the services were performed in an unusual or infrequent situation and the person's services were reasonably necessary to permit the legislator or legislative employee to perform official duties;

(5) use or authorize the use of state funds, facilities, equipment, services, or another government asset or resource for the purpose of political fund raising or campaigning; this paragraph does not prohibit

(A) limited use of state property and resources for personal purposes if the use does not interfere with the performance of public duties and either the cost or value related to the use is nominal or the legislator or legislative employee reimburses the state for the cost of the use;

(B) the use of mailing lists, computer data, or other information lawfully obtained from a government agency and available to the general public for nonlegislative purposes;

(C) storing or maintaining, consistent with (b) of this section, election campaign records in a legislator's office;

(D) a legislator from using the legislator's private office in the capital city during a legislative session, and for the 10 days immediately before and the 10 days immediately after a legislative session, for nonlegislative purposes if the use does not interfere with the performance of public duties and if there is no cost to the state for the use of the space and equipment, other than utility costs and minimal wear and tear, or the legislator promptly reimburses the state for the cost; an office is considered a legislator's private office under this subparagraph if it is the primary space in the capital city reserved for use by the legislator, whether or not it is shared with others; or

(E) use by a legislator of photographs of that legislator.

* Sec. 2. AS 24.60.030(i) is amended to read:

(i) A [EXCEPT FOR SUPPLYING INFORMATION REQUESTED BY THE HEARING OFFICER OR THE INDIVIDUAL, BOARD, OR COMMISSION WITH AUTHORITY TO MAKE THE FINAL DECISION IN THE CASE, OR WHEN RESPONDING TO CONTACTS INITIATED BY THE HEARING OFFICER OR THE INDIVIDUAL, BOARD, OR COMMISSION WITH AUTHORITY TO MAKE THE FINAL DECISION IN THE CASE, A] legislator or legislative employee may not attempt to influence the outcome of an administrative hearing by directly or indirectly contacting or attempting to contact the hearing officer assigned to the hearing or the individual, board, or commission with authority to make the final decision in the matter [CASE] unless [THE]

(1) the legislator or legislative employee is representing another person for compensation subject to AS 24.60.100 and as a professional who is licensed in the state;

(2) the contact is made in the presence of all parties to the hearing or the parties' representatives while the legislator or legislative employee is acting as a party or a witness in the matter or responding to a question asked of the legislator or legislative employee by the hearing officer, individual, board, or commission and the contact is made a part of the record; ~~or~~

(3) the contact is inadvertent and ex parte and the [(2)] fact and substance of the contact are [IS] promptly disclosed ~~by~~ the legislator or legislative employee to all parties to the hearing and [THE CONTACT IS] made a part of the record.

* Sec. 3. AS 24.60.050(c) is amended to read:

(c) A legislator or legislative employee who participates in a program or receives a loan that is not exempt from disclosure under (a) of this section shall file with the committee by the date required under AS 24.60.105 a disclosure stating the amounts of the loans outstanding or benefits received during the preceding calendar year from nonqualifying programs. If the committee requests additional information necessary to determine the propriety of participating in the program or receiving the loan, it shall be promptly provided. The committee shall maintain the disclosure as a public record and promptly forward the information contained in the disclosure [PROMPTLY COMPILE A LIST OF THE STATEMENTS INDICATING THE LOANS AND PROGRAMS AND AMOUNTS AND SEND IT] to the presiding officer of each house who shall have it published in the supplemental journals on or before the next regularly scheduled publication of ethics disclosures. If a legislator or legislative employee asks the committee to keep any part of the disclosure confidential and a quorum of the committee determines by vote of a majority of committee members that making the entire disclosure public would cause an unjustifiable invasion of personal privacy, the committee may elect to publish only the fact that a person has participated in the program and the amount of benefit that the unnamed person received. The committee shall maintain the disclosure of the name of the person as confidential and may only use the disclosure in a proceeding under AS 24.60.170. If the disclosure becomes part of the record of a proceeding under AS 24.60.170, the disclosure may be made public as provided in that section.

* Sec. 4. AS 24.60.060(a) is amended to read:

(a) A legislator, [OR] legislative employee, or public member of the committee may not knowingly make an unauthorized disclosure of information that is made confidential by law and that the person acquired in the course of official duties. A person who violates this section is subject to a proceeding under AS 24.60.170 and may be subject to prosecution under AS 11.56.860 or another law.

* Sec. 5. AS 24.60.080(a) is amended to read:

(a) Except as otherwise provided in this section, a legislator or legislative employee may not

(1) solicit, accept, or receive, directly or indirectly, a gift worth $250 or more, whether in the form of money, services, a loan, travel, entertainment, hospitality, promise, or other form, or gifts from the same person worth less than $250 that in a calendar year aggregate to $250 or more in value;

(2) solicit, accept, or receive a gift with any monetary value from a lobbyist, an immediate family member of a lobbyist, or a person acting on behalf of a lobbyist, except

(A) food or beverage for immediate consumption;

(B) a contribution to a charity event, [FROM ANY PERSON AT ANY TIME, AND] tickets to [FOR] a charity event, and [AT ANY TIME, EXCEPT THAT TICKETS TO OR] gifts to which the tickets may entitle the bearer; however, under this subparagraph a legislator or legislative employee may not solicit, accept, or receive from the same lobbyist, an immediate family member of the lobbyist, or a person acting on behalf of the lobbyist, tickets to a charity event, gifts to which the tickets may entitle the bearer, or both, that in a calendar year aggregate to $250 or more in value [RECEIVED AT A CHARITY EVENT UNDER THIS SUBPARAGRAPH ARE SUBJECT TO THE CALENDAR YEAR LIMIT ON THE VALUE OF GIFTS RECEIVED BY A LEGISLATOR OR LEGISLATIVE EMPLOYEE IN (1) OF THIS SUBSECTION]; in this subparagraph, "charity event" means an event the proceeds of which go to a charitable organization with tax-free status under 26 U.S.C. 501(c)(3) and that the Alaska Legislative Council has approved in advance; the tickets may entitle the bearer to admission to the event, to entertainment, to food or beverages, or to other gifts or services in connection with [INVOLVED IN] the charity event; as long as is generally available to all participants?

(C) a gift that is unconnected with the recipient's legislative status and is from a member of the legislator's or legislative employee's immediate family;

(D) a gift delivered on the premises of a state facility and accepted on behalf of a recognized nonpolitical charitable organization; or

(E) a compassionate gift under AS 24.60.075.

* Sec. 6. AS 24.60.080(c) is amended to read:

(c) Notwithstanding (a)(1) of this section, it is not a violation of this section for a person who is a legislator or legislative employee to accept

(1) hospitality, other than hospitality described in (4) of this subsection,

(A) with incidental transportation at the residence of a person; however, a vacation home located outside the state is not considered a residence for the purposes of this subparagraph; or

(B) at a social event or meal;

(2) discounts that are available

(A) generally to the public or to a large class of persons to which the person belongs; or

(B) when on official state business, but only if receipt of the discount benefits the state;

(3) food or foodstuffs indigenous to the state that are shared generally as a cultural or social norm;

(4) travel and hospitality primarily for the purpose of obtaining information on matters of legislative concern;

(5) gifts from the immediate family of the person; in this paragraph, "immediate family" means

(A) the spouse of the person;

(B) the person's domestic partner;

(C) a child, including a stepchild and an adoptive child, of the person or of the person's domestic partner;

(D) a parent, sibling, grandparent, aunt, or uncle of the person;

(E) a parent, sibling, grandparent, aunt, or uncle of the person's spouse or the person's domestic partner; and

(F) a stepparent, stepsister, stepbrother, step-grandparent, step-aunt, or step-uncle of the person, the person's spouse, or the person's domestic partner;

(6) gifts that are not connected with the recipient's legislative status;

(7) a discount for all or part of a legislative session, including time immediately preceding or following the session, or other gift to welcome a legislator or legislative employee who is employed on the personal staff of a legislator or by a standing or special committee to the capital city or in recognition of the beginning of a legislative session if the gift or discount is available generally to all legislators and the personal staff of legislators and staff of standing and special committees; this paragraph does not apply to legislative employees who are employed by the Legislative Affairs Agency, the office of the chief clerk, the office of the senate secretary, the legislative budget and audit committee, the office of victims' rights, or the office of the ombudsman;

(8) a gift of legal services in a matter of legislative concern and a gift of other services related to the provision of legal services in a matter of legislative concern;

(9) a gift of transportation from a legislator or a legislative employee to a legislator or a legislative employee if the transportation takes place in the state on or in an aircraft, boat, motor vehicle, or other means of transport owned or under the control of the donor; this paragraph does not apply to travel described in (4) of this subsection or travel for political campaign purposes; or

(10) a contribution to a charity event, a ticket to a charity event, or a gift in connection with a charity event [FROM ANY PERSON AT ANY TIME]; in this paragraph, "charity event" has the meaning given in (a)(2)(B) of this section.

* Sec. 7. AS 24.60.080(d) is amended to read:

(d) A legislator or legislative employee who accepts a gift under (c)(4) of this section that has a value of $250 or more or a ticket to a charity event or gift in connection with a charity event under (c)(10) of this section that has a value of $250 or more shall disclose to the committee, within 60 [30] days after receipt of the gift, the name and occupation of the donor and the approximate value of the gift. A legislator or legislative employee who accepts a gift under (c)(8) of this section that the recipient expects will have a value of $250 or more in the calendar year shall disclose to the committee, within 30 days after receipt of the gift, the name and occupation of the donor, a general description of the matter of legislative concern with respect to which the gift is made, and the approximate value of the gift. The committee shall maintain a public record of the disclosures it receives relating to gifts under (c)(4), (c)(8), (c)(10), and (i) of this section and shall forward the disclosures to the appropriate house for inclusion in the journal. The committee shall forward to the Alaska Public Offices Commission copies of the disclosures concerning gifts under (c)(4), (c)(8), (c)(10), and (i) of this section that it receives from legislators and legislative directors. A legislator or legislative employee who accepts a gift under (c)(6) of this section that has a value of $250 or more shall, within 30 days after receiving the gift, disclose to the committee the name and occupation of the donor and a description of the gift. The committee shall maintain disclosures relating to gifts under (c)(6) of this section as confidential records and may only use, or permit a committee employee or contractor to use, a disclosure under (c)(6) of this section in the investigation of a possible violation of this section or in a proceeding under AS 24.60.170. If the disclosure under (c)(6) of this section becomes part of the record of a proceeding under AS 24.60.170, the confidentiality provisions of that section apply to the disclosure.

 Sec. 8. AS 24.60.105 is amended by adding a new subsection to read: Ethics disclosure

(d) A person may submit a written request to refrain from making a disclosure that is required by this chapter if making the disclosure would violate state or federal law, including the United States Constitution and the Constitution of the State of Alaska, or a rule, adopted formally by a trade or profession, that state or federal law requires the person to follow. The committee shall approve or deny the request, or require further justification from the person making the request. At the request of the committee or a person authorized to act on behalf of the committee, a person who seeks to refrain from making a disclosure under this subsection shall provide the committee with justification in writing, and the committee may review the written justification to determine whether it is sufficient.

 Sec. 9. AS 24.60.112 is amended to read:

Sec. 24.60.112. Applicability to volunteers and educational trainees. A person who works more than 30 days as a legislative volunteer or educational trainee shall be considered to be a legislative employee for purposes of compliance with AS 24.60.030 - 24.60.039, 24.60.060, 24.60.080, 24.60.085, 24.60.155, 24.60.158 - 24.60.170, 24.60.176, and 24.60.178. If a person believes that a legislative volunteer or educational trainee has violated the provisions of one of those sections, the person may file a complaint under AS 24.60.170. The provisions of AS 24.60.170 apply to the proceeding.

 Sec. 10. AS 24.60.130(h) is amended to read:

(h) A member is disqualified from participating as a member in any proceeding before the committee involving a complaint against the member or an employee whose work is supervised by the member or an advisory opinion requested by the member. If a regular legislative member of the committee is disqualified under this subsection from participating in a proceeding involving a complaint, the member's alternate shall be designated under AS 24.60.131 [(n) OF THIS SECTION].

 Sec. 11. AS 24.60.130(o) is amended to read:

(o) Notwithstanding (h) [AND (n)] of this section and AS 24.60.131, if a complaint before the committee alleges a violation of this chapter by a group of legislators that includes a legislative member of the committee and that member's alternate, the member and alternate member are disqualified from serving on the committee with regard to the complaint. If the two disqualified members of the committee are members of the majority organizational caucus, the presiding officer of the house in which the two disqualified members serve shall appoint from that house an alternate to serve with regard to the complaint. If one of the two disqualified legislative members of the committee is not a member of the majority organizational caucus, the leader of the minority organizational caucus with the greatest number of members shall appoint from that house an alternate to serve with regard to the complaint. If a complaint alleges a violation of this chapter that includes all legislative members of the majority organizational caucus of one house, the presiding officer of that house shall appoint from the other house an alternate to serve with regard to the complaint. If the complaint alleges a violation of this chapter that includes all legislative members of a minority organizational caucus of one house, the leader of that minority organizational caucus shall appoint from the other house an alternate to serve with regard to the complaint.

 Sec. 12. AS 24.60 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 24.60.131. Alternate members. (a) When appointing members of the legislature to serve on the committee under AS 24.60.130(b), the speaker of the house of representatives or the president of the senate, as appropriate, shall appoint an alternate member for each regular member. The alternate member shall have the same qualifications for appointment to the committee as the regular member for whom the alternate stands as alternate. The alternate member's appointment is subject to confirmation as required for appointment of the regular member.

(b) When selecting public members to serve on the committee under AS 24.60.130(b), the Chief Justice of the Alaska Supreme Court shall select one alternate public member. The alternate public member's selection is subject to ratification as required for selection of the regular public members.

(c) Subject to (d) of this section, if a regular member of the committee or a subcommittee is unable to participate in a proceeding other than a proceeding under AS 24.60.170, the chair of the committee or subcommittee that holds the proceeding shall designate the regular member's alternate to participate in place of the regular member at the proceeding, and the alternate shall participate for the duration of that proceeding unless the alternate is unable to participate.

(d) If a regular member of the committee or a subcommittee or an alternate member appointed under (a) or (b) of this section participates at the commencement of a proceeding under AS 24.60.170, the member shall participate for the duration of the proceeding unless the member is disqualified under AS 24.60.130(h) or is unable to continue participating. If the participating member is disqualified under AS 24.60.130(h) or becomes unable to participate, the chair of the committee or subcommittee that holds the proceeding shall designate the member's alternate to participate in place of the member for the duration of the proceeding unless the alternate is disqualified or is unable to participate.

(e) If both a regular legislative member and that member's alternate appointed under (a) of this section are not available to participate at the commencement of a proceeding under AS 24.60.170 because they are disqualified under AS 24.60.130(h), the presiding officer of the house in which the two members serve shall appoint from that house an alternate and designate that alternate to participate in the proceeding; however, if the two members who are not available to participate are not members of the majority organizational caucus, the leader of the minority organizational caucus with the greatest number of members shall appoint from that house an alternate and designate that alternate to participate in the proceeding.

(f) A designation under (c) - (e) of this section is a confidential proceeding under AS 24.60.170(l) unless the member who is replaced as a result of the designation waives confidentiality.

 Sec. 13. AS 24.60.155 is amended to read:

Sec. 24.60.155. Legislative ethics course. A person who serves for more than 30 days as a legislative volunteer or educational trainee or who is a legislator, legislative employee, or public member of the committee shall complete a legislative ethics course administered by the committee under AS 24.60.150(a)(4) within 10 days of the first day of the first regular session of each legislature. However, a person who begins a period of service of more than 30 days as a volunteer or trainee or who first takes office or begins employment after the 10th day of the first regular session of a legislature shall complete the course required by this section within 30 days after the person's first day of service and, thereafter, as required by this section. The committee may grant a person additional time to complete the course required by this section.

 Sec. 14. AS 24.60.990(a)(11) is amended to read:

(11) "legislative employee" means a person, other than a legislator, who is compensated by the legislative branch in return for regular or substantial personal services, regardless of the person's pay level or technical status as a full-time or part-time employee, independent contractor, or consultant; it includes public members and staff of the committee; it does not include individuals who are hourly employees who perform functions that are incidental to legislative functions, [INCLUDING SECURITY, MESSENGER, MAINTENANCE, AND PRINT SHOP EMPLOYEES,] and other employees designated by the committee;

 Sec. 15. AS 24.60.130(n) is repealed.

SENATOR JOHN COGHILL

Senate Bill 89 Legislative Ethics Amendments

This bill is a product of discussions by the Select Committee of Legislative Ethics over the past couple of years.

The bill draws a bright line for legislators and legislative staff to follow for assisting constituents with problems they encounter with state agencies. Once an issue has been appealed to an administrative hearing officer, the legislator or legislative staffer may no longer make contacts with the agency, unless that person is a licensed professional to represent a person in such a proceeding and is being compensated for that representation. There are also provisions for inadvertent ex parte contact.

It also extends the reporting deadline for reporting gifts of travel and from charitable events from 30 to 60 days and expands legislative ethics training to legislative volunteers or educational trainees who are on the job for more than 30 days.

The bill adds public members of the ethics committee to the statute prohibiting members from knowingly making unauthorized disclosure of confidential information. This bill clarifies that disclosures prohibited by state and federal confidentiality laws are not required by the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics

The committee recommended a statute that would allow an alternate member of the ethics committee who participates in the beginning of a proceeding to participate in the entire proceeding. The Chief Justice of the Alaska Supreme Court would also be required to appoint one alternate for the public members.

SB 89 clarifies that a gift of a ticket from a lobbyist to a charity event sanctioned by Legislative Council cannot exceed $250.00. It also further describes a contribution to a charity event as a ticket to a charity event or a gift in connection with the charity event.

The Ethics Committee has been grappling with the issue of partisan activities while on state travel since 1993. This bill was a first attempt at setting standards by which a legislator or a legislative staffed can participate in a partisan activity or a campaign fundraiser when traveling on legislative business. The State Affairs Committee deleted the language that set a standard but agreed further discussion needs to take place in Senate Judiciary on the issue.

MEMORANDUM

SB 89 Legislative Ethics Bill Summary of Version T

Sec. 1. Replaces "lawful gratuity" with "gift" to make section of law consistent with the usage of "gift".

Sec. 2. Bright line for legislators or staff being actively involved in constituent problems with the State. Once the issue is assigned to an administrative hearing the involvement of the legislative office ceases. Exceptions are included for lawyers and provision for inadvertent exparte contact.

Sec. 3. Eliminates requirement of committee to compile lists of financial disclosure statements. They must only maintain public records and forward them to chief clerk and senate secretary.

Sec. 4. Adds public members to statute prohibiting disclosure of confidential information.

Sec. 5. Clarifies that a ticket to a charity event from a lobbyist, or gifts received because of the ticket from a lobbyist cannot exceed $250.

Sec. 6. Further describes "a contribution to a charity event" by clarifying it could be a ticket to a charity event or a gift in connection with a charity event.

Sec. 7. Extend the reporting period for gifts of travel for the purpose of obtaining information on legislative matters and disclosure of gifts from charitable events from 30 days to 60 days.

Sec. 8. Allows for exceptions from disclosure under the legislative ethics law if it would be in violation of the state or federal constitution or state or federal law. The State Affairs Committee added language that includes exceptions for disclosures for a rule, adopted formally by a trade or profession, that state or federal law requires the person to follow. A written request with justification must be submitted to the committee.

Sec. 9. Requires anyone who is a volunteer or educational trainee for more than 30 days to take the ethics training. The 30 day guideline was added in State Affairs.

Sec. 10. Adds cite for new section on Alternate Members to statute describing the committee, its structure and its duties.

Sec. 11. Adds cite for new section on Alternate Members to statute describing the committee, its structure and its duties.

Sec. 12. This is a new section describing the process for appointing alternates. The section adds a new provision that provides for the Chief Justice to appoint an alternate public member.

Sec. 13. Adds legislative volunteers and educational trainees who are in that capacity for more than 30 days to the statute requiring the Legislative ethics course. The 30 day guideline was added in State Affairs.

Sec. 14. Redefines legislative employee.

Sec. 15. Repeals old statute describing the process for appointing alternates.

Subject: Senate Bipartisan Working Group- Press Availability Transcript 4-5-2011

Good Evening Everyone!

Just in case you missed it, here is a transcript of today's Senate Bipartisan Working Group Press Availability.

If you'd rather watch or listen to it: http://gavelalaska.org/media/?media_id=SMJP110405A

In attendance: Sen. Stevens, Sen. Meyer, Sen. Ellis, Sen. Stedman, Sen. Hoffman, Sen. Paskvan

Question: Stefan Milkowski with the Alaska Budget Report, a question about Senator John Coghill's ethics legislation. One thing that was in his original bill was a provision that would have allowed a certain amount of partisan activity, would've allowed legislators to do a certain amount of partisan activity while on state sponsored travel? A question for the rural members, is that something that you support?

Sen. Hoffman: Yes.

Question: Why?

Sen. Hoffman: Because it makes sense.

Sen. Stedman: I could add a little bit to that. It is awkward, for instance, if I travel to Anchorage, where most of the state business is done out of Session, cause that's where most of the people live, it's not rocket science. But to expect me to go to Anchorage, take care of some business, fly all the way back to Sitka, then turn around and fly back to Anchorage and then fly back home is ludicrous. Another situation is when I send a staff member to Anchorage and maybe they are there for two weeks, three weeks, four weeks or even longer and they can't stop by some political rally after work or on the weekend or stop by some political guys running for this or that, his little booth. It doesn't work. They have, the employees that we have, have rights too. I don't feel that the state, with this huge geographical footprint we have, should have everything concentrated in Anchorage with a concentration on how everything should work out of Anchorage. We need to recognize that, for instance, it's expensive to move a Senator from Golovin to Juneau. It's more expensive to do that from Anchorage to Juneau or Juneau to Juneau. We just need to realize that this is large state and recognize that and work with that. So how that legislation matures through the process, clearly, it's an issue that we need to clean-up and resolve.

Sen. Stevens – I'm not sure I can clarify this, but I can tell you the way the new rules read is, if Senator Stedman say, were in Anchorage for three days of meetings and he wanted to go to a fundraiser for Senator Murkowski or Senator Begich, he would have to fly back to Sitka, fly back to Anchorage to go to an evening fundraiser. Somehow, we've lost the common sense in the whole process. But that has been taken out in the House, I believe, and we'll see what happens to that as we move along.

Question: Senator – is it fair that the state pay for your entire trip? You addressed the logistical problem. But why should the public pay for all of a trip when part of it used for partisan purposes or non-state business?

Sen. Stedman- I think it becomes more of an issue the closer you are to an election. I'll give you an example. For instance, if I happen to be running, and I'll just use 30 days, it was 30 days in front in the election, or you know some number. I think there's need to be some cutoff where you clearly you have an election account to pay that travel. But I can also use an example like this past year, I wasn't running. When I went up to Anchorage to work on issues I couldn't stop by Lisa Murkowski's booth or what have you, her little headquarters and b.s. with them or anything. I wasn't running for anything nor do I have enough in fundraising accounts. Nothing. It just doesn't work. It needs to modified somewhat. I'm not interested in having the state foot the bill for the so-called partisan fundraising activities and stuff like that. That's not the issue at hand.

Sen. Stevens: So to just to look at the bigger picture here – The Select Committee on Legislative Ethics has had several issues that have been percolating over the years that they wanted addressed and I did ask Senator Coghill to carry that bill. He's been quite courageous about stepping up and doing what he thinks is right. The bill will change as it moves through the committee process.

Question: But quickly for the two Finance Co-Chairs- do you support the language that Sen. Coghill came up with on that bill?

Sen. Stedman: I don't know what the language he had is. I haven't looked at it in that detail. I haven't talked with Senator Coghill on the subject since the beginning of the Session in just the concept phase, so I couldn't tell you what his language was.

Senator Hoffman: Same here.

Question: So I am going to give a hypothetical- where somebody spends three days on state business and wants to do one dinner that's partisan business.
How do you guard against the opposite situation where somebody has three days of campaign and they schedule one meeting with an AIDEA official about a project and say they were there on state business.

Senator Stevens: Well then you report it, and then the public throws the (??) out. laughter

Senator Stedman: Clearly, if I'm campaigning in Anchorage, there is something wrong. My voters are in Southeast. They don't vote for me in Anchorage. So, there's a disconnect there. And the funding reports are available and we all look at them and stuff like that. We look at where the money comes from, in-district, out-of-district, all that stuff. That's a standard procedure in the business.

Sen. Hoffman: I think you could put language in there, it may be arbitrary, but say incidental, the amount of time that you spend is incidental to the initial purpose of the trip.

Sen. Stevens: I think as I recall, Senator Coghill had put in an 8 to 5 day and beyond that, I believe that's the wording he used, beyond that you were on your own. You were free to do your own business, whatever that might be. Senator Paskvan, you had some comments, did we bypass you on HB 110? Do you have any thoughts that you want to share with us?

Sen. Paskvan: I think that the Senate Resource Committee, we've been working on this bill for a quite a long time now and I kind of get back to sayings by my carpenter friends. You measure twice and cut once. So that kind of raised the issue of what are the tools that we need to use to measure and what are the tools we need to use to cut? Part of the problem that we have is whether the lack of information at present time puts us in a situation where we don't have enough information to even measure the first time much less getting back to the original carpenter's saying, measure twice cut one. So, I think we're working on it. We're working hard on it. We're going to continue to work on it, but I think we have to do our due diligence as we move forward.

Sen. Stevens: We had a whole bunch of people online, but I think they gave up in disgust. So that's a disadvantage of being online, I guess. So I want to thank them for at least attempting to be with us. That was Mike Mason from Dillingham, KDLG, Andrew Rogers from KRSN and Matt Lichtenstein, KFSK Petersburg. We appreciate them being them with us. One or two more questions. Bob?

Question: Senator Paskvan- Have you placed any requests with the Administration or any department that you haven't gotten a response to yet for information or studies or models on the oil tax bill?

Sen. Paskvan: Over the last couple of months, there's been a lot of requests and there have been responses and those responses have been modified. So, as we move forward, I think we are trying to establish a factual foundation. And again, that's where the difficulty is – Not that there is a lack of response, I think that there is some cooperation, but it's trying to get to the substantive numbers themselves so that when one looks at the tax system, it's not just the nominal rate, it's the effective rate when one rolls the credit system into it. Some credits are applied in the current year, some credits are applied in a subsequent year and other credits are paid out in cash. Trying to assemble all of those components into one unified understanding of what the state brings in far as production tax has been awkward at times. But I think we are heading towards better information to rely upon. But again that gets to the point of the tools necessary so that we can measure once before we proceed from there.

Question: But you are not aware of any requests that have been refused?

Sen. Paskvan: I'm not aware of any request that has been refused.

Question: Judy Erickson, I asked this question last week, but I am going to ask it one more time. You told us last week you were talking with the House. As a long time observer of this process, I haven't quite seen it come down to the wire here with hardly any of members priority bills even in Rules of either body. So, besides the budgets and perhaps Coastal Zone, are there any other bills that you guys have agreed are priorities for this Session with the House? Any agreements with the House?

Sen. Stedman: Just a clarification- House and Senate Priorities together?

Question: Well, I was looking at the Senate priorities. It seems to me that Senator Ellis – his film production tax credit is probably a priority, I think it's still in the Senate-

Sen. Ellis: For me!

Sen. Stevens: and he won't let us forget it either. laughter

Questions: But that's what I'm saying, members' priorities. Do you have any agreements?

Sen. Stevens: I think Coastal Zone Management is an issue that is extremely important. We're working towards that. We're anxious to see what the House came up with. Senator Hoffman explained that very clearly. I think that's an important issue. I think we must do something to bring that to conclusion. Whether it's a major change or whether it's a one-year-extension. I'm hoping that we can come to a serious decision on that. Senator Hoffman, any comments on that?

Sen. Hoffman: No. And I'd like to see 97 passed too. That's the revenue sharing bill.

Sen. Stevens: An important bill as well. Thank you all very much. Appreciate it.

SENATE BILL NO. 89
"An Act clarifying that a legislator or legislative employee is allowed to accept certain charity events; amending disclosure deadlines under the Legislative Ethics Act; relating compassionate gifts; allowing legislators and legislative employees to use legislative to requests to refrain from disclosure under the Legislative Ethics Act; and establishing mailing lists for campaign purposes and non legislative purposes; allowing legislators a seat for an alternate public member on the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics and legislative employees who are representing persons in an administrative hearing to clarifying the requirements related to participation by alternate members in the contact hearing

CHAIR WIELECHOWSKI asked about the issue of title companies, and stated it seems to be more of a Judiciary issue rather than State Affairs. He said he would like to see more information when the bill reaches Judiciary.

SENATOR PASKVAN moved to report SB 104, version I, from committee with individual recommendations and attached fiscal note(s). There being no objection, the motion carried.

9:07:00 AM
At-ease.

9:08:39 AM

SB 89-LEGISLATIVE ETHICS ACT

CHAIR WIELECHOWSKI announced the next order of business would be SB 89. The new CS is version T.

9:08:59 AM
SENATOR PASKVAN moved to adopt the proposed committee substitute to SB 89, labeled CSSB 89(STA), Version T, as the working document of the committee

CHAIR WIELECHOWSKI objected for discussion purposes.

9:09:20 AM
SENATOR JOHN COGHILL, sponsor of SB 89, said he would comment after the review of the new CS.

MICHELE SYDEMAN, staff to Senator Wielechowski, said she would explain the changes in the CS, version T. This version makes four changes to the previous version. The first substantive change is to remove provisions that would have allowed a legislator to use his or her legislative mailing list for campaign purposes. Underlined text was removed from Version E, page 3, lines 3-4. On page 4, lines 26-27, the same wording was removed.

9:12:27 AM
The next substantive change was removal of the provision allowing a legislator or legislative employee to campaign or participate in partisan activities while on state travel.

The third substantive change added a provision allowing a legislator or legislative employee to request to refrain from making a disclosure if that would violate a confidentiality rule of his or her profession.

9:14:45 AM
The fourth substantive change adds language clarifying the requirement that volunteers or trainees complete the legislative ethics class. It would now apply only to those who work for more than 30 days. Casual or drop-in employees or volunteers would not have to complete the ethics training.

9:16:11 AM
SENATOR GIESSEL asked what committee is being referred to on page 10, section 8, line 18, which says "the committee shall approve or deny the request."

MS. SYDEMAN answered it referred to the Legislative Ethics Committee.

9:16:42 AM
SENATOR COGHILL said the 30 day change for volunteers was an excellent idea, and he also had no problem with section change to section 8.

RYNIEVA MOSS, staff to Senator Coghill, said a change on page 12 was requested by the Chair of the Legislative Ethics Committee. They had removed language on line 26 which said "or unable to participate." This change got dropped from the new CS.

9:19:33 AM
SENATOR COGHILL said the mailing list issue came from an advisory opinion that they wanted to include in the statutory language. The new CS says legislators may not use mailing list from office in campaign. The advisory opinion went to the direction that you can use it. He noted that would probably make them revise the ethics opinion.

CHAIR WIELECHOWSKI said removal would not alter an existing advisory opinion.

SENATOR COGHILL said he just wanted to clarify. He is okay as long as there is a clear rule.

9:21:23 AM
SENATOR COGHILL stated the big question is what happens with regard to partisan activity while on state travel. This has been discussed since 1993. If you are under state travel, is there any time that partisan activity is acceptable? He tried to find a way to say that there are times and reasons. For legislators from urban areas, they can go from a committee meeting to a Republican luncheon, but those from out of town cannot because they are away from home on state business.

He said he was trying to find a reasonable solution. The question is left unanswered in the version T CS. He understands the reason. When his bill was introduced, headlines implied they were trying to use state monies to campaign. This leaves a strict prohibition.

CHAIR WIELECHOWSKI noted the bill has a further referral to the Judiciary Committee.

9:24:49 AM
SENATOR COGHILL said he has been tasked to ask the question. It is a tough question. In fairness to people who live outside the urban areas, we need to resolve this issue.

JOYCE ANDERSON, Chair, Legislative Ethics Committee, said this has been an issue since 1993. She feels the legislature needs to decide if they want to change this policy or keep as it is. The Ethics Committee has not made any specific proposal; that is up to the legislature.

9:26:27 AM
SENATOR COGHILL said in the ethics act which applies to members of the administration, they talk about de minimis use of time. Perhaps that could be used in this bill also.

SENATOR PASKVAN asked if there is some place to look for di minimus conduct. If someone just attends a luncheon, that might be okay; if they were the keynote speaker, then that would be another thing. He asked how to define de minimus and what are some examples.

SENATOR COGHILL said he struggles with that, because it is a question of intent. This kind of question would always need to come before the Ethics Committee. If statues list prohibited actions, then intent is not as much of a problem. He would like to see the statutes be clear. Any time there is an ethics complaint, it puts peoples' integrity at risk. He is trying to clarify actions so that a member knows he when has crossed a line.

9:30:21 AM

That is why he put time frames and other specific items in the bill. Action versus intent is too hard to define. Under much of the ethics law we have guidance as to what is ethical behavior, but we need good guidelines as to what is unethical. We have put legislators not in urban areas under an ethical cloud. In this bill he was trying to find a way to dispel that cloud.

CHAIR WIELECHOWSKI said could hold SB 89 or move it to Judiciary. He asked the will of the committee.

SENATOR KOOKESH moved to report CSSB 89(STA), version T, from committee with individual recommendations and attached fiscal note(s). There being no objection, the motion carried.

9:33:01 AM
There being no further business to come before the committee, Chair Wielechowski adjourned the meeting at 9:33 a.m.

Article 02. TRAVEL REGULATIONS

Sec. 39.20.110. Per diem allowance.

Officials and employees of the state agencies, while traveling on official business and away from their designated post of duty, shall be allowed, instead of their actual expenses for subsistence and all fees or tips, a per diem allowance to be prescribed by the commissioner of administration under the regulatory authority set out in AS 39.20.160 , and in consultation with the head of the agency concerned.

Sec. 39.20.120. Allowable expenses.

Except as provided in AS 39.20.110 - 39.20.170, only actual and necessary traveling expenses shall be allowed to an official or employee.

Sec. 39.20.130. Mileage allowance.

Officials and employees of state agencies shall, under regulations adopted by the commissioner of administration, and whenever the mode of transportation is authorized or approved as more advantageous to the state, be paid an amount, instead of actual expenses of transportation, not to exceed a mileage allowance set by the commissioner of administration for the use of privately-owned automobiles or airplanes, when engaged in official travel inside or outside their designated posts of duty or places of service. In addition to the mileage allowance, there may be allowed reimbursement for the actual cost of ferry fares, and bridge, road, and tunnel tolls. When two or more officials or employees are traveling in the same direction, and it is possible to share a privately-owned automobile or airplane, the mileage permitted shall be allowed only once.

Sec. ⏩39.20.140⏪. Travel costs and travel outside the state.

(a) The Department of Administration may not pay an official or employee for per diem or transportation costs unless the travel is clearly necessary to benefit the state.

(b) The Department of Administration may not reimburse an official or employee or pay for more than the lowest tourist class fare for the most direct route unless

(1) tourist class accommodation is not available;

(2) waiting for tourist class accommodation would occasion a delay harmful to the state; or

(3) the Department of Administration finds that travel by tourist class accommodation is not in the best interest of the state, and authorizes other accommodation.

(c) When the Department of Administration authorizes more expensive travel under (b)(3) of this section, it shall file a justification for that authorization with the travel voucher. When fares other than tourist class are authorized under (b) of this section, the Department of Administration may not reimburse the official or employee or pay for more than the lowest first class fare available.

(d) Officials and employees are authorized to travel only the least number of days necessary to transact the business involved, to secure return passage, and to return.

(e) Every official and employee shall, unless otherwise authorized by law to travel outside the state, obtain prior approval for travel outside the state from the head of the official's or employee's department or from an immediate supervisor, or from the Department of Administration if the official or employee is not within a department or is not under the direct supervision of an official or supervisor. If an employee deviates materially from the travel authorized under this section, the employee must obtain approval for the deviation from the person who approved the travel before the Department of Administration may reimburse the employee for the travel.

Sec. 39.20.150. Advances and recovery.

(a) An agency may advance, through proper disbursing methods, to a person entitled to per diem or mileage allowance under AS 39.20.110 - 39.20.170 the sums considered advisable considering the character and probable duration of the travel to be performed.

(b) Sums advanced and not used for allowable travel expense are recoverable by setoff against salary due, or otherwise, from the person to whom advanced, or the person's estate, by deduction from any amount due from the state, or by other legal methods of recovery that may be necessary.

Sec. 39.20.160. Regulations.

The fixing and payment under AS 39.20.110 - 39.20.170 of travel and per diem allowances and of advances and recovery and reimbursement of travel expenses shall be in accordance with regulations adopted by the commissioner of administration. The regulations shall be uniform for all officials and employees, and all agencies and departments. The regulations shall also govern the use of public transportation facilities by officials and employees. The regulations relate to the internal management of state agencies and their adoption is not subject to AS 44.62 (Administrative Procedure Act).

Sec. 39.20.170. Construction of AS 39.20.110 - 39.20.170.

AS 39.20.110 - 39.20.170 may not be construed to modify or repeal a law providing for the travel expenses of the governor, or members of the legislature, or members of boards or commissions of the state government.

HISTORICAL PERSPECTIVE
LEGISLATIVE TRAVEL AND COLLATERAL CAMPAIGN ATIVITY

1993 - Chair of the Ethics Committee in September 1993 recommended

Use of State Funds and Property:
State funds (travel, per diem, or salary stipend) may not be claimed, received or accepted by legislators or legislative employees unless the primary purpose of the trip is official legislative business.

Incidental use of time in travel or pay status may be spent for personal purposes provided:

a.) No time, materials, equipment, or funds are spent in political activities; e.g. fund raising, handing out campaign literature, circulating petitions, or requesting support or assistance for any candidate or cause.
b.) No time, materials, equipment or funds are spent in lobbying activities of any kind.
c.) No unlawful activities are undertaken.

No action taken by the Committee.

1993- Memo from Speaker of the House, Ramona Barnes

In a memo dated September 21, 1993 from Speaker Barnes, she states,

> "During the legislative session each lawmaker is allowed one trip back to their district for legislative business. This applies to both majority and minority members. During the interim all requests from legislators for travel to NCSL and the Western Legislative Conference have been approved as have all travel requests by committee members wishing to attend their committee meetings. Additionally it has been my policy to approve travel requests by members appointed to various task forces and subcommittees to attend events that relate to the work they are involved in. All other travel requests are reviewed on a case by case basis. I approve all staff travel on a case by case basis when such travel is appropriate to their majority or minority status. With respect to attending campaign activities during a state paid trip that involved legislative business, it has not been allowed in the past and is not allowed now."

1993- Letter from Senate President Rick Halford

In a letter dated October 23, 1993, from Senate President, he states,

> "You specifically requested travel authorization information concerning attendance at campaign activities during a state paid trip. State paid travel is authorized for legislative business. Campaign activities are not an acceptable purpose for travelling at state expense."

1994- Ethics Committee suggested the following guidelines

Version 1: Campaign activity may occur provided the legislator completes no less than 7.5 hours per day of non-campaign related state business. The travel authorization request, filed in advance, must indicate what specific state business activities will be undertaken for a minimum of 7.5 hours per day and must indicate what type of campaign activity the legislator will be participating in. This does not apply to legislative employees. Legislative employees are not permitted to participate in campaign activities while in travel status.

No action taken by the Committee.

Version 2: Campaign activity may occur provided the legislator [or legislative employee] completes no less than 4 hours per day of state related business. The travel authorization request must be filed in advance.

No action taken by the Committee.

1995 - Ethics Committee: Open Issue regarding Legislation

What can or can't a legislator or legislative employee do while in "travel status?"

Ethics Committee Minutes: On February 3, 1994, the committee sent a letter to Legislative Council requesting the council to develop guidelines concerning travel, specifically campaign activities while in "travel status." Legislative Council did not respond to the request. The committee continues to receive inquiries on this issue. On February 13, 1995, the committee directed staff to send another letter to Legislative Council.

No response is on file in the Ethics Office.

1996 – Ethics Committee issues Advisory Opinion 96-05

The committee was asked the following by a legislator: Whether a legislator may accept payment for the costs of a trip on which the legislator conducted both legislative business and personal business? The committee concluded it is permissible for a legislator to accept state payment for the costs of a trip on which governmental business was conducted. The committee further noted that it does not have authority, in the context of advisory opinions, to use its judgment in lieu of a legislator's judgment in determining what is necessary state business or how much sate business is necessary to justify accepting state payment for a trip. The committee also cautioned that if a legislator or legislative employee were to intentionally use a façade of legislative business to obtain a government paid trip but were to fail to conduct any governmental business to justify governmental payment, the committee might well find a violation of AS 24.60.0309(a)(2). The committee also noted in the opinion the following statements: "The ethics committee has, in the past, requested an explanation of legislative travel and per diem policy from Legislative Council. A response has not been forthcoming to date."

1997/98 -- SB 105, Ethics/Lobbying/Campaign Finance

SB 105 was introduced on February 25, 1997 by the Senate Rules Committee by Request of the Legislative Ethics Committee. SB 105 was signed into law on July 15, 1998. An amendment to the bill, which was not adopted, addressed the subject of state paid travel and campaigning while on that trip. The amendment read as follows:

> SB 105H HCS CCSSB 105(STA) 4/23/98
> House CS for CS for Senate Bill No. 105(STA)
> Section 17. AS 24.60.031 is amended by adding new subsections to read:
> (c) A legislator may not travel at state expense to a place in which the legislator plans to hold a campaign fund raising event if the travel occurs less than 48 hours before the event is scheduled to begin. This subsection does not prohibit a legislator from holding a campaign fund raising event in a place to which the legislator travels at state expense if the
> (1) travel to the place is completed at least 48 hours before the event was scheduled to begin;
> (2) legislator made a trip at state expense to a place, returned from that place, and then, within 48 hours, made a second trip to the place and the cost of the second trip was not paid for at state expense; or > (3) travel was to the capital city immediately before the beginning of a legislative session or from the capital city to the legislator's home immediately after the final adjournment of a regular or special legislative session.
> (d) In (c) of this section, an event is considered to be a campaign fund raising event only if the legislator, or another person acting on behalf of the legislator with the legislator's expense or implied permission,
> (1) asks for contributions for the legislator's campaign at the event;
> (2) announces that the legislator will accept contributions for the legislator's campaign at the event; or > (3) otherwise uses the event in a manner that clearly demonstrates that a primary purpose of the event is to raise contributions for the legislator's campaign;
> the fact that a legislator received campaign contributions at an event is insufficient, without other evidence, to satisfy the proof required by this paragraph.

This subject was discussed at the following committee meetings:

- House State Affairs Committee meeting of April 9, 1998
- House State Affairs Committee meeting of April 16, 1998
- House State Affairs Committee meeting of April 21, 1998
- House Finance Committee meeting of April 24, 1998.

(Minutes from these meetings are attached for your reference.)

2010 – Ethics Committee Staff drafted two versions of possible clarifying statutory language

AS 24.60.030(a)(5) A legislator or legislative employee may use or authorize the use of state funds, facilities, equipment, services or another government asset or resource for the purpose of political fund raising or campaigning: this paragraph does not prohibit

Version 1 – add a new section (B)

(B) limited use of state funds while traveling on legislative business for political fund raising or campaigning purposes if the use

(i) is collateral or incidental to the normal, scheduled performance of official duties;
(ii) does not exceed 10 percent of the total time spent on the trip;
(iii) does not interfere with the performance of public duties, and
(iv) there is no additional cost to the state;

Version 2 – add a new section (B)

(B) limited use of state funds while traveling on legislative business for political fund raising or campaigning purposes if the use

(i) is collateral or incidental to the normal, scheduled performance of official duties;
(ii) does not exceed 10 percent of the total time spent on the trip;
(iii) does not interfere with the performance of public duties,
(iv) does not occur within 30 days of an election in which the legislator or legislative employee is a candidate for office,
(v) generate no additional cost to the state, and
(vi) the proportionate share of the actual cost of the use shall be reimbursed to the state;

No discussion. Item was not before the committee as an agenda item.

2010 - Ethics Committee issues Advisory Opinion 10-01 and then rescinded their action

The committee issued Advisory Opinion 10-01 on May 27, 2010 and then rescinded the opinion at the June 14, 2010 meeting and referred back to the August 19, 2008 letter to the Alaska Public Offices Commission for guidance in this area. AO 10-01 stated that it was the nature of the business conducted rather than whether it is paid for with state resources that should be the governing standard in determining whether an ethical violation has occurred. A statement signed by the legislator designating the primary nature and purpose of the business rather than whether is it paid for by state resources should suffice to govern whether or not collateral activities can or cannot occur. AS 24.60.030(a)(3).

The August 19, 2008 letter to APOC the committee stated a legislative resource, including money provided by the legislature to cover or reimburse costs incurred by a legislator or legislative employee while traveling on legislative business, is a government asset or resource. A government asset or resource may not be used for involvement in or support of or opposition to partisan political activity. AS 24.560.030(a)(2. A legislator or legislative employee may not use or authorize the use of government asset or resource for the purpose of political fund raising or campaigning. AS 24.60.030(a)(5).

CHAIR JAMES asked Mr. Brown to address Amendment LS0074\L.2, Cramer, 4/3/98.

MR. BROWN explained Amendment L.2 deals with fund-raisers happening when people are traveling at state expense. This language puts a prohibition in place for legislators, governor and lieutenant governor. If you go somewhere at state expense it should have to be incidental if you end up staying there and holding a political fund-raiser it should not at any way be apparent to the public that that was part of the reason there at state expense. This puts a 48-hour ban in place to try to prevent that sort of activity.

Page 17, following line 5, insert a new bill section to read:

*Sec. 21. AS 24.60.031 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(c) a legislator may not travel at state expense to a place in which the legislator plans to hold a campaign fund raising event if the travel occurs less than 48 hours before the event is scheduled to begin. This subsection does not prohibit a legislator from holding a campaign fund raising event in a place to which the legislator traveled at state expense if the travel to the place is completed at least 48 hours before the event was scheduled to begin.

Page 48, following line 31, insert a new subsection to read:

(b) Except for travel to the capital city, an elected official may not travel at state expense to a place in which the official plans to hold a campaign fund raising event if the travel occurs less than 48 hours before the event is scheduled to begin. This subsection does not prohibit an elected official from holding a campaign fund raising event in a place to which the elected official traveled at state expense if the travel to the place is completed at least 48 hours before the event was scheduled to begin. In this subsection, "elected official" means the governor or the lieutenant governor.

REPRESENTATIVE BERKOWITZ stated, "I drive home at the end of session ... they want to have a fund-raising event for me when I get there, they can't do it."

MR. BROWN replied they can after 48-hours or if you don't take your state reimbursement for the drive. If it were 48-hours after you got home state expense would cover your reimbursement.

Number 0213

CHAIR JAMES stressed she didn't think that was ever the intent of this amendment, there should be an exception when you go home at the end of the legislative session. She suggested they include that as an amendment to this amendment.

MR. BROWN indicated that was discussed with the drafter as an exemption for adjourning travel not for convening travel.

REPRESENTATIVE BERKOWITZ remarked if you don't want people to travel at state expense solely or primarily to have a fund-raising event, and if that's the case why don't we just say it that way.

CHAIR JAMES asked for a motion to adopt Amendment L.2 for discussion and amending if needed.

Number 0222

REPRESENTATIVE HODGINS made a motion to adopt proposed Amendment L.2 for discussion.

REPRESENTATIVE RYAN objected.

CHAIR JAMES noted there is an objection. Chair James said she believes it should be amended that in the adjourning trip home, especially when they are limited to any campaigning while in the capital and there is so little time, going home should not be the issue.

REPRESENTATIVE HODGINS said he is totally against the amendment since he lives in Kenai and makes many trips to Anchorage. He indicated this means he can't go into Anchorage two days prior to, a function or committee meeting, or something like that. He will be voting against it if it is a 48-hour thing.

CHAIR JAMES responded it is not proper for her to fly from Fairbanks to Anchorage to attend fund-raising. She indicated she has either paid her own way or used her campaign funds to pay and has not traveled to Anchorage for a fund-raiser on state pay because she doesn't believe it's right.

Number 0234

REPRESENTATIVE HODGINS continued. He pointed out Kenai is so close to Anchorage that he will make several trips back and forth. If he has business the day before (an Oil and Gas Committee meeting) and travels on a state warrant and returns to Kenai and the following day travel to Anchorage on his own money for a fund-raiser that would unduly restrict him for the compensation of traveling the day before. He said they're assuming that you...

CHAIR JAMES stressed the four days is a problem in the amendment.

REPRESENTATIVE HODGINS read the amendment which addresses traveling at state expense and travel that occurs less than 48 hours before the event is scheduled to begin. He stressed if he makes a round-trip on Tuesday and attends a fund-raiser on Wednesday...

CHAIR JAMES reiterated this isn't going to work.

MR. BROWN remarked he believes the drafter deleted another sentence when she put the legislative language in there. He indicated at that time they were only dealing with the governor.

Number 0246

CHAIR JAMES noted the governor is what prompted them on the issue of whether or not he should be raising funds while they are in a legislative session when someone is running against him. She said, "We tried to solve on the floor ... so now he can't. That means he can go visit somebody, any place in the state, and have a fund-raiser while he's there. Unless we put something in here, that's still allowed. I don't think it should be, and I think it's fair for both of us to not." She asked that this amendment be withdrawn for now and move onto the next amendment.

Number 0254

REPRESENTATIVE HODGINS removed his motion to adopt Amendment L.2.

CHAIR JAMES indicated they need to talk to the drafter.

No action taken at this meeting.

MR. BROWN continued. That same place, within the 48 hours, and still be able to have a fund-raising event. Especially those on the road system near Anchorage would be penalized by that. He indicated that wasn't the intention that was a drafting error.

Insert a new subsection to read:

(d) Except for travel to the capital city, the governor or the lieutenant governor may not travel at state expense to a place in which the official plans to hold a campaign fund raising event if the travel occurs less than 48 hours before the event is scheduled to begin. This subsection does not prohibit the governor or the lieutenant governor from holding a campaign fund raising event in a place to which the official traveled at state expense if the

(1) travel to the place is completed at least 48 hours before the event was scheduled to begin;

(2) official made a trip at state expense to a place, returned from that place, and then, within 48 hours, made a second trip to the place and the cost of the second trip was not paid for at state expense.

MR. BROWN said the prohibition doesn't exist right now. It's come up more as an issue in terms of the executive branch and concern about travel at state expense by the chief executive and then fund-raisers being held. He implied the same standard has been put in place for the governor, and the governor's home is considered to be Juneau for the purposes of the governor's term of office. Other than that, there is the same 48-hour ban and the go, come back, and go back again at personal expense or campaign expense exemption.

Number 0022

REPRESENTATIVE BERKOWITZ asked what's a campaign event. If someone slips him a check, is that a campaign event.

MR. BROWN responded no.

REPRESENTATIVE BERKOWITZ asked if he goes around collecting checks from people that's fine.

CHAIR JAMES replied, "No that's a campaign event. If somebody accidentally gives you one, or sends you one, gives you one when you're there - people do that all the time, but if you are making an effort to collect them (indisc. - interrupted) depends on who initiates it."

MR. BROWN added that we would hold that standard if an invitation went out, or a public announcement was made, or there was a guest list, or someone was coordinating the event.

Number 0029

REPRESENTATIVE BERKOWITZ said if he starts calling people and asking for money that doesn't seem to rise to the level of being an event.

MR. BROWN said he doesn't foresee that being a problem, of course for legislators, running for legislative office. this isn't going to happen during session anyway, this is an interim concern. For the governor, as SB 275 is now on its way through the system, it's a concern year-round. He implied that it's a heightened level of concern for the governor.

Number 0037

REPRESENTATIVE ELTON expressed that his heightened concern is for the governor and the lieutenant governor. He asked does this mean that if they're in Anchorage on business that they cannot have dinner with their campaign manager.

MR. BROWN replied he didn't think dinner with the campaign manager is a fund-raising event. If the campaign manager invited ten employees from the timber industry to sit down with the governor, and they were told ahead of time to please bring a check, that would be an event. He expressed the public policy goal is not to have the governor fly to Anchorage at state expense and attend that dinner.

REPRESENTATIVE ELTON indicated they may be discussing a fund-raising event that they will be setting up a month later.

MR. BROWN responded saying that's a strategy, that's not a fund-raising event. He said they didn't want to (indisc.) in that too wide here. It was just to ban a very specific organized type of fund-raising activity. It's a public perception thing, people will say, "Gosh I saw this public official on TV this morning cutting a ribbon, and I know tonight this public official is having a fund-raiser at so and so's house, and I know that this public official traveled to and from Anchorage - is paid by the state."

MR. BROWN implied Ms. Barnett recommended that if it were possible to apportion the cost of your trip, say it was 50 percent business and 50 percent campaign. He said that would be the squeaky clean way to do it, but in terms of enforcement and advising people, it just didn't seem that that was going to be a very workable statute. It seemed easier to say, if it's for state expense you travel at state expense, and if it's for campaign purposes you travel at campaign expense.

Number 0056

REPRESENTATIVE IVAN IVAN indicated he can respect the intent of the legislation to correct deficiencies that occurred several years ago, but it's getting to a borderline of controlling our thinking. He said, "The governor sitting down with his campaign manager, or me sitting down with someone that will help me ... and now his thoughts are going to be controlled."

CHAIR JAMES stated that she doesn't think that was the intent of the conversation. She said she thinks the intent was to try to define a fund-raising event and if it's still questionable, as to what a fund-raising event is, we might want to describe what it is and what it isn't. It's not questionable and would be easy to define. That the questions that Representative Berkowitz had - if somebody hands you an occasional check, when you're out on state business, or whatever, during a period of time, when it's okay to accept a check, that certainly is not a fund-raising event. Chair James interpreted a fund-raising event as a place where people come, they either pay to come, or they're invited to attend and to bring their checkbook to an event. This could be any kind of event where more than a certain number of people come together for that purpose.
