NARRATIVE ATTACHMENT

House Bill No. 750 proposes to further define the "No Limit" provision of Section 5 of Chapter 56. Under the existing "No Limit" provision it could be argued that a municipality can sell bonds that would require principle and interest payments that would exceed the limitations provided for in sections 45 or 50 of Chapter 56. If a municipality's administrative budget equals the limitations provided then and principal and interest payments on bonds would exceed these limits.

Sec. 43.56.010 (b) reads in part that a "A tax collected by a municipality as authorized by AS29.53.045 shall be credited against the tax levied under (a) of this section-----". Taxes paid to a municipality in excess of a 20 mill levy then become a credit to the taxpayer against oil and gas property taxes due the State from other areas, or from the undesignated tax base if the municipality elected the 225% formula. This would have a direct effect on the state property tax revenue by the amount of local tax collected in excess of their per capita limitation.

House Bill No. 750 appears to provide the necessary legislation to insure that a municipality comply with the free conference committee's letter of intent relating to "No Limitation" Section. This is a layman's opinion on what may be considered a legal point and should be considered as such.

Briefing Memorandum

SUSITNA RIVER HYDROELECTRIC PROJECT

for the

STATE OF ALASKA

HENRY J. KAISER COMPANY

1. INTRODUCTION

In its proposal to the State of Alaska, February 13, 1974, the Henry J. Kaiser Company offered to reassess existing development schemes for the Susitna River, and to prepare a conceptual design, order-of-magnitude cost estimate, and preliminary feasibility report for a hydroelectric project on the upper river.

This proposal includes three main points. First, it proposes that the State of Alaska undertake the river's development. Second, it proposes to conceptualize an economical alternate hydroelectric project for the upper river. Third, it proposes that the resulting report serve as the basis for seeking preliminary development commitments from energy-intensive industries, such as primary aluminum.

The proposal was prepared following a preliminary investigation of Alaska's thermal and hydroelectric energy resources. A broad review suggested that domestic export demand for Alaska's fossil fuels would rule out their future availability at low cost to Alaskan electric utilities, and to prospective new industrial consumers within Alaska. The investigation then concentrated on hydroelectric resources as a necessary feature in Alaska's economic growth; it particularly focused on the upper Susitna River as best suited to near-term hydroelectric development.

Identification of the upper Susitna was based partly on characteristics of the river basin; it is entirely within Alaska, and between Devil's Canyon and the Maclaren River confluence, it is uninhabited, non-navigable, and supports no migratory fishery. In much of the upper Susitna basin, steep terrain would permit reservoir impoundment with minimal surface inundation and environmental impact. Also in the Devil's Canyon area, dam sites exist which are close to the Anchorage and Fairbanks power markets, and which are readily accessible via the Railbelt transportation corridor. Upper Susitna basin lands are largely eligible for acquisition and development by Alaskans under Statehood Act and Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act selections. Finally, the size of the upper Susitna power sites appears to be roughly compatible with forecasts of Alaskan utility sector power demands in the 1980's, especially if new industrial consumers are added.

After reviewing U. S. Bureau of Reclamation (U. S. B. R.) proposals for the upper Susitna, noting both their high cost and long deferral of the federal project, it was concluded that the Henry J. Kaiser Company could propose an alternate development which would benefit Alaska's electric utilities, and also provide an opportunity for new industry. This possibility of an alternate was based on indications that a larger and more economical first-stage hydroelectric project could be constructed at an alternate site in the Devil's Canyon area. Such a project would appear capable of satisfying Southcentral-Interior electrical load growth from 1981 through 1985 to 1990, and also possibly to supply low-cost power for an aluminum reduction plant at a coastal point such as Seward or Kenai. With these power markets and rapid buildup to full utilization of capacity, such an alternate project could be suitable for revenue bond financing and self-supporting operation by an autonomous state-owned power authority. As conceived, the project would be compatible with long-term development of the river's additional hydroelectric potential.

The preliminary investigation included discussions with Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corporation to establish general parameters under which an Alaskan power project could be attractive to the aluminum industry. Following their parallel investigation, it was concluded that Alaska could be an attractive location for an aluminum reduction plant, provided that a long-term source of low-cost electrolytic power were available.

Although the results of these preliminary investigations have been optimistic, their conclusions are tentative, pending further analysis of the potential alternate hydroelectric project. Because it is believed that the river's development must be publicly sponsored, and that its overall benefits are to be realized in the economy of Southcentral and Interior Alaska as a whole, it is proposed that the State of Alaska undertake this program.

The Henry J. Kaiser Company believes that the work outlined in its proposal is an appropriate step toward prompt, self-supporting implementation of an upper Susitna hydroelectric project. If the results of the proposed report are favorable, they will provide a basis for definitive development planning by both Alaska's electrical utilities and private industry.

2. U.S. BUREAU OF RECLAMATION PROPOSAL

The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation (U.S. B.R.) has proposed to develop the hydroelectric potential of the upper Susitna River by constructing four main dams, at Devil's Canyon, Watana, Vee, and Denali. In the long run, power plants would be installed at the first three of these sites, with a total energy capability of 7,000 million kilowatt hours annually, and a potential peaking capacity of 1.6 million kilowatts. Denali dam, as planned, would impound the system's main storage reservoir, but no power plant would be installed there.

The first stage of this development proposed by U.S. B.R. would be construction of Devil's Canyon dam and power plant, and Denali dam. The total energy capability of this first stage would be 2,900 million kilowatt hours; peaking capacity would total 580,000 kilowatts. In reviewing U.S. B.R. studies, the following points have been noted regarding the proposed Devil's Canyon and Denali dams:

- Devil's Canyon dam would be 635 feet in height and would result in a maximum head pond surface elevation of 1,450 feet above sea level. A higher dam was considered by U.S. B.R. for the Devil's Canyon site, but was abandoned. The canyon shape in the particular section chosen appears to be efficient for a thin-arch dam structure of moderate height, but not for a higher dam which would better develop the river's reservoir potential. As projected, Devil's Canyon dam would produce all power for the first-stage development of the river, but would impound only about one million acre feet of storage, or 17% of the total first-stage reservoir capacity.
- Denali Dam, as proposed, would be 290 feet high, resulting in a maximum reservoir elevation of 2,552 feet above sea level. This dam would impound a reservoir volume of five million acre feet, or 83% of the system's first-stage reservoir capacity. Under the proposed system operating plan, water would be released from Denali reservoir from September through April to maintain a full head pond at Devil's Canyon. Normally, Denali reservoir would be entirely depleted during the winter months, and the resulting loss of head would not permit year-round operation of a power plant at this site. However, the cost of constructing Denali dam, as proposed, would be approximately the same as for the Devil's Canyon dam. This is due partially to the need to excavate a deep permafrost overburden from the foundation site, as well as relocating about six miles of the existing Denali Highway.

3. PRELIMINARY INVESTIGATION AND CONCEPTUAL ALTERNATE

The Kaiser preliminary investigation noted that Devil's Canyon dam site is well located for construction, operating access, and power transmission along the Railbelt corridor between Anchorage and Fairbanks. In this report, it appears to be a much more economical site for first-stage development than Watana or Vee Canyon, which are located in rugged country, 40 to 60 miles from existing transportation and potential transmission routes.

The review also suggested that the high cost of Denali dam and reservoir would make it reasonable to conceptualize a more economical alternative reservoir site in the Devil's Canyon general area. It is apparent that in this area a larger reservoir plus additional operating head may be obtained by construction of a higher dam than proposed by U.S. B.R.

Preliminary analysis of U.S. Geological Survey topographic maps indicated at a reservoir surface elevation of 1,800 feet, storage volume upstream from Devil's Canyon could be increased to 7 million acre feet, more than the combined storage of Devil's Canyon and Denali reservoir, as proposed by U.S. B.R. Possible alternative dam sites have been noted several miles upstream from the proposed Devil's Canyon dam site; these appear to be more favorable for economical construction of a high dam than the site proposed by U.S. B.R.

The attached drawing illustrates the increased reservoir capacity to be impounded by a high dam in the Devil's Canyon area. The U.S. B.R. first stage scheme is shaded red and proposed alternate shaded blue for comparison. This drawing also compares the canyon cross sections at the Devil's Canyon dam site proposed by U.S. B.R., and at the potential alternative site, about five miles upstream.

As the drawing illustrates, the alternate high dam would incorporate the approximate head and most of the reservoir area of the Devil's Canyon and Watana dams proposed by U.S. B.R. In a first-stage development, it would eliminate the need to construct Denali dam as a storage reservoir for the system. The energy capability resulting from development of this alternate site could be in the range of 4,400 to 5,600 million kilowatt hours, while peaking capacity could be between 1 million and 1.3 million kilowatts.

As the result of this preliminary analysis it was decided that the alternate concept warranted reassessment of the upper Susitna River's hydroelectric potential to test reasonable alternates by intensive conceptual engineering and economic evaluation. Consistent with the overall objective of determining an economical development program, this work would include analysis of the following:

- Maximizing reservoir storage and operating head at an alternate dam site in the Devil's Canyon area, and eliminating Denali dam and reservoir in the first-stage development.
- Obtaining additional generating capability by use of a long power tunnel, permitting an alternate power plant to be located at a lower elevation, downstream from the alternate Devil's Canyon dam site.

In addition, this work will consider methods of developing and using upstream storage at Vee and other sites, and the possible contribution of downstream afterbay dams either in the first stage or possible subsequent development.

In this engineering and economic reassessment, first priority would be given to establishing a feasible alternate first stage project. It is intended, however, that this alternate should also be compatible with longer term development of the river's full hydroelectric potential.

4. DEVELOPMENT SCHEDULE AND SYSTEM DEMAND

At this early point in investigations of the upper Susitna hydroelectric development, it is not possible to indicate a schedule for completion of the first stage, however hydroelectric projects usually require about six years from start of outline design to initial power production. For the U.S. B.R. first stage scheme, a development period of six and one-half years was estimated, and it is expected that an alternate project would also require a similar length of time.

Following these guidelines, an upper Susitna project initiated at the beginning of 1975 could not produce power until 1981. Accordingly the proposed capacity of the project has been measured against electrical load growth forecasts for the ten years 1981 through 1990. During this period, the Alaska Power Administration's 1973 mid-range forecasts indicate that total energy consumption for the Southcentral and Interior regions will increase by about 4,600 million kilowatt hours annually, while peak demand will increase by over 900,000 kilowatts. In this context, the first-stage upper Susitna development proposed by U. S. B. R. would be fully utilized in about seven years. Assuming the proposed alternate project would induce an aluminum reduction plant to locate in Alaska, energy consumption of 2,600 million kilowatts and peak demand of about 300,000 kilowatts would be added to the system's load growth. It is visualized that the alternate project could satisfy this aluminum industry requirement in addition to providing for five to seven years' growth of Southcentral-Interior energy consumption, plus eight to ten years' growth of peak demand.

5. IMPACT OF THE PROPOSED ALUMINUM INDUSTRY

The Henry J. Kaiser Company's preliminary investigation suggested that in the 1980's, Southcentral-Interior utility load growth alone would be insufficient to enable a self-supporting development program for the upper Susitna, except possibly on a suboptimal, and consequently expensive scale. On this basis, it was decided that the addition of an aluminum reduction plant or other energy-intensive industry to the regional power system would benefit the regional economy by facilitating a more economical hydroelectric project.

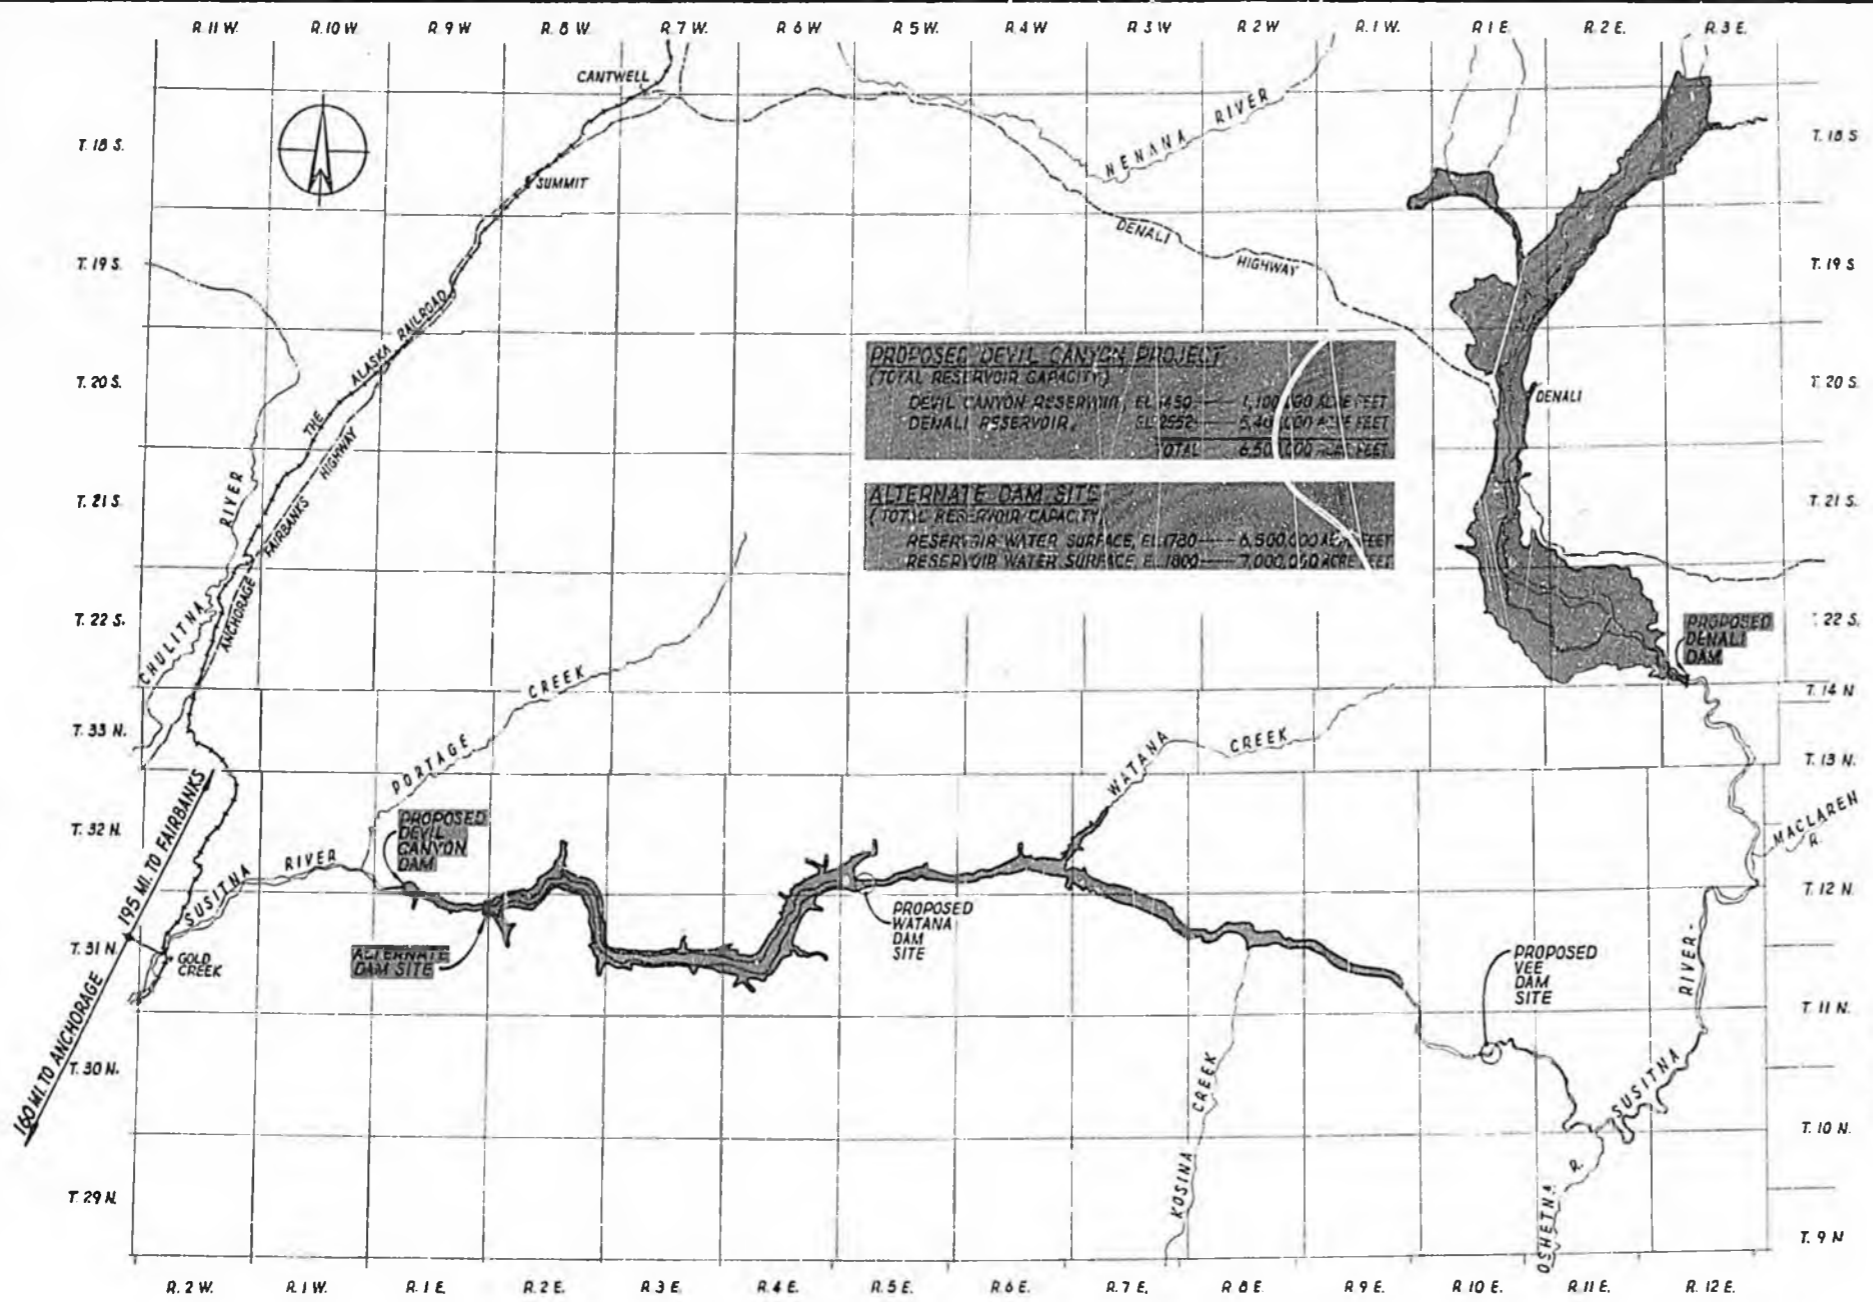

A primary objective of the aluminum industry would be to obtain a substantial block of low cost base loading power. Although utility power cost normally is higher than that for such a consumer due to load factor, transmission, and administrative requirements, it is expected that a project which met the requirements of the aluminum industry would also be economical and advantageous to the utility sector.

Following discussions with Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corporation it was concluded that although the U. S. B. R. development scheme was not attractive, a conceptual report should be prepared on alternate methods for developing a more economical project. This study, if favorable, could then furnish a basis for preliminary commitments by the aluminum industry and regional utilities which would make the project financially self-supporting.

In addition to providing for integration with future growth of the Southcentral-Interior region's utility sector, an aluminum industry based on use of upper Susitna power could be generally integrated into the region's economy and infrastructure. Two possible aluminum reduction plant locations have been targeted, at Seward and Kenai. Both of these areas have the advantage of prior industrial development, a population base and local infrastructure. They are easily accessible from Anchorage, which is considered an advantage in attracting a stable work force. Seward has special transportation advantages and substantial existing infrastructure which would facilitate aluminum industry development.

Unlike most energy-intensive industries, the aluminum industry employs a relatively large labor force. As a result, a large percentage of the value added to its product is retained in the local community and contributes to its fiscal base. As indicated on the attached chart, compared to other energy-intensive industries now located in Alaska, the aluminum industry would have substantially greater employment, wage and capital investment impacts per unit of energy resource used. Further, because the industry operates year-around and is based on a nondepletable energy resource, associated population and community development is expected to be stable and permanent.

6 For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to the creation and administration of 7 memorial scholarship revolving loan funds; and pro-
8 viding for an effective date."

9 BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

10 * Section 1. AS 14.40 is amended by adding new sections to read:

11 ARTICLE 10. MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP REVOLVING LOAN FUND.

12 Sec. 14.40.810. DECLARATION OF PURPOSE. (a) The legislature may 13 pay tribute to the memory of Alaskans who, by the example of their lives,
14 or by their distinguished contribution and service to this state, their 15 community or their profession, exemplified the best that is the challenge
16 of "The Great Land" by the creation of memorial scholarships as a part 17 of a general memorial scholarship revolving loan fund, setting out the 18 purpose for which each is created, and the conditions applicable to each
19 scholarship.

20 (b) The purposes of the several memorial scholarship accounts in 21 the memorial scholarship revolving loan fund are as follows:

22 (1) the Michael Murphy memorial scholarship perpetuates the 23 memory of Michael Murphy, a member of the Alaska State Troopers, who,
24 while on leave from that division, gave his life for his adopted country
25 in Vietnam on May 22, 1968;

26 (2) the Carroll L. "Butch" Swartz memorial scholarship per-
27 petuates the memory of Carroll L. "Butch" Swartz, of Juneau, who was 28 a student intern with the Criminal Justice Planning Agency and the 29 Governor's Commission on the Administration of Justice during the

1 summer months of 1972 and 1973 and whose accidental and untimely death
2 in November 1973, occurred while he was completing his undergraduate
3 education at Yale University, thus never realizing his educational goals
4 or career objective;

5 (3) the Harvey Golub memorial scholarship perpetuates the
6 memory of Harvey Golub, of Juneau, who was chief engineer of the bridge
7 design section of the Department of Highways of the State of Alaska and
8 whose accidental and untimely death September 13, 1971, cut short a
9 widely-respected career in civil engineering.

10 Sec. 14.40.815. FUND CREATED. (a) There is created a memorial
11 scholarship revolving loan fund. The fund shall be used to provide
12 educational scholarship loans to students selected under secs. 810 - 845
13 of this chapter. All repayments of principal shall be paid into the 14 memorial scholarship revolving loan fund and shall be used to make new 15 scholarship loans.

16 (b) Each memorial scholarship, the purpose of which is set out in 17 sec. 810(b) of this chapter, is a separate account in the memorial
18 scholarship revolving loan fund created under (a) of this section.

19 Sec. 14.40.820. LIMITS ON, CONDITIONS OF LOANS. (a) A scholar-
20 ship loan to a recipient under secs. 810 - 845 of this chapter may not
21 exceed $2,500 a school year for an undergraduate student or $5,000 a
22 school year for a graduate student. Loans may not be made to a student
23 for more than six years.

24 (b) A loan made under secs. 810 - 845 of this chapter may be used
25 only as follows:

26 (1) a Michael Murphy memorial scholarship loan may be used

29 related fields;

2 may be used only to pursue a degree program in an accredited college or
3 university in criminal law, criminology, corrections, police science and 4 administration, juvenile justice, or other fields closely related to 5 criminal justice; and

6 (3) a Harvey Golub memorial scholarship loan may be used only
7 to pursue a degree program in an accredited college or university in 8 civil, mechanical, electrical, electronic, petroleum, mining, traffic
9 and transportation, sanitary, chemical or other recognized field of 10 engineering.

11 (c) The recipient shall be a resident of Alaska and either

12 (1) enrolled as a full-time undergraduate or graduate student
13 leading to an Associate, Baccalaureate or Graduate degree program in a 14 field listed in (b) of this section that is appropriate to the memorial
15 scholarship loan received;

16 (2) a graduate of a high school, or scheduled for graduation
17 from a high school within six months, with sufficient academic credits to

20 section that is appropriate to the memorial scholarship loan received;
21 or

22 (3) an officer or employee of a department, agency or muni-
23 cipality in the state who intends to pursue a course of study in his
24 professional field leading to a degree in one of the fields listed in (b)
25 of this section appropriate to the memorial scholarship loan received.

26 (d) The recipient must at all times continue to be enrolled as 27 a full-time student in good standing at an accredited college or univer-
28 sity.

29 (e) In any year in which the memorial scholarship revolving loan

1 fund created under sec. 815 of this chapter has inadequate receipts to
2 fund a loan in one of the scholarship categories listed in sec. 810(b)
3 of this chapter, no loan in that scholarship category may be offered
4 and the receipts shall be added to the amount available for that cate-
5 gory in the succeeding year.

6 (f) The administering authority may provide conditions in the 7 note signed by the recipient or in a separate document or communication
8 that will help it carry out the provisions of secs. 810 - 845 of this 9 chapter.

10 Sec. 14.40.825. REPAYMENT OF LOANS. (a) Memorial scholarship
11 loans shall be noninterest-bearing and security for the loan may not be

ANALYSIS:

The Nenana Learning Environment is a proposed cooperative project between the Nenana School District and the Tanana Chiefs Conference, utilizing the old FAA site which was abandoned by the FAA in 1972 and currently is owned by the City of Nenana.

Approximately 40 to 50 rural boarding students would be housed in the facility. Goals of the program are:

1. To establish new learning communication systems to enable area high schools to reach out to people in outlying villages.

2. To transfer village boarding students currently attending high school in Fairbanks (overcrowded) to Nenana High School which has surplus space due to declining enrollment caused by establishment of Anderson High School at Anderson and closure of the FAA site. (Individual boarding homes are not available in Nenana.)

Budgetary expenditures call for residential counselors, staff travel, fuel and utilities, office equipment, and refurbishment of the FAA housing.

WILLIAMA EGAN, GOVERNOR

DEPT. OF COMMUNITY & REGIONAL AFFAIRS

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONER

POUCH B--JUNEAU 99801

March 19, 1974

Mr. Jay Hogan, Director
Legislative Finance Division
State Capitol, Room 425
Juneau, Alaska 99801

Dear Mr. Hogan:

Re: HB 784, providing an appropriation for the unincorporated communities services account.

HB 784, offered by the Community and Regional Affairs Committee, would provide $100,000 to fund the unincorporated communities services account. The bill is a companion to HB 404 (as offered, presently CSHB 404) wherein the Department of Community and Regional Affairs would be authorized to pay to unincorporated communities an annual entitlement--the greater of either $1,000 per community or $10 per capita--for purposes of planning for future community development.

Of the nearly 140 communities which may potentially qualify, I am unable to determine which might complete and transmit in proper and timely manner the necessary certificate that the recipient is a corporation or association "open to and broadly representative of all residents," Sec. 43.18.500(b). The requirement being minimal, one must assume that nearly all communities could qualify. In subsequent years, the reporting requirement, Sec. 43.18.500(e), may serve to disqualify several recipients of previous years; the reporting burden not being onerous, however, I would suggest that nearly all could meet that burden, too.

The range of communities which might be eligible derives from three sources:

- 1) those unincorporated places of 25 permanent residents or more recognized as eligible villages pursuant to the Claims Settlement Act;

March 19, 1974

2) those unincorporated places, with presumably 25 or more permanent residents, whose eligibility is presently subject to appellate review by the Alaska Native Claims Appeals Board, or which have chosen to receive reservation land and forego other Act benefits;

3) unincorporated places having a population of 25 or more, generally predominantly non-Native, wherein may be found a BIA or SOS school.

The list is not exclusive. There may be other places which qualify, of which we have no knowledge, though their cumulative claim for funds would be relatively small.

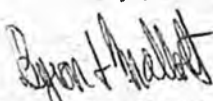

To fully fund the program, I would estimate an appropriation of $221,670 would be required. An appropriation of $100,000 would, assuming all villages named herein qualified, require a proration of 45.11%, resulting in a minimum entitlement of approximately $451.00 per community. The rate would, of course, be higher if a lesser number of communities took the initiative to complete the necessary applications.

It is understood also that, as the number of communities seeking to incorporate as cities increases, a smaller appropriation would be required to sustain the unincorporated communities fund.

Worksheets more specifically identifying unincorporated communities and their projected entitlements are enclosed.

Please contact me if you have any questions.

Sincerely,

Byron I. Mallott
