ISSUES TO BE IDENTIFIED IN A POLICY ADVISORY GROUP REPORT

1. How to provide representation for people living outside municipal boundaries, but within a municipal service area (as when a city extends utility service beyond its boundaries).

2. Should a uniform provision on executive sessions be included in Title 29 delineating specific occasions when it is appropriate to call for an executive session of a municipal governing body?

3. Should there be only two classes of borough -- home rule and general law?

4. Should there be only two classes of city -- home rule and general law?

5. Should villages which are currently unincorporated be recognized as municipal corporations under state law? Should IRA councils be recognized as municipal governing bodies?

6. Should the state or local government be primarily responsible for providing the following services: water system and sewage disposal inspections; subdivision review of on-site sanitation capabilities; sanitation inspections of restaurants, hotels, etc; clean-up of small oil spills; the issuing of oily waste burn permits and surface oiling permits; litter control; vehicular emmisions control? If local governments should have more control in these areas, how may the state delegate these functions while insuring the programs continue to meet applicable standards to qualify for federal funding and to avoid state liability if the programs are not properly carried out by the local governments?

7. Should the state or local government be primarily responsible for the provision of health services? If local governments should have more control in these areas, how may the state delegate these functions while insuring the programs continue to qualify for federal funding?

8. How to insure that local issues are dealt with in the unorganized borough, since the legislature rarely meets as the assembly for the unorganized borough.

9. How to avoid establishing multiple governmental and administrative bodies with duplicate functions in small communities which suffer from a lack of people to fill the positions.

10. Should there be a regionally elected body in the unorganized borough to manage local service programs and to deal with the state?

a municipality, ~~by itself~~, to ~~be construed~~ create liability for the condition of or for ~~areas~~ the maintenance, improvement or for providing other services to those areas.

Sec. 29.06.010. HOME RULE. A home rule municipality is a municipal corporation and political subdivision. It is a city or an organized borough which has adopted a home rule charter, or it is a municipality unified in accordance with AS 29.12.190 - 29.12.350. A home rule municipality has all the legislative powers not prohibited by law or charter.

Sec. 29.06.030. CLASSES OF GENERAL LAW. General law municipalities are of four classes:

(1) first class boroughs;

(2) second class boroughs;

(3) repeal

(4) first class cities;

(5) second class cities.

Sec. 29.06.040. RECLASSIFICATION. Section unchanged to:

(g) A second class borough may reclassify as a first class borough in the manner provided by AS 29.36.110 - 29.36.130 for the addition of powers by boroughs, except that the petition or proposal requests reclassification instead of requesting addition of powers.

(h) repeal.

(i) repeal.

(j) repeal.

Sec. 29.06.050. TRANSITION. (a) A third class borough existing on the effective date of this act shall continue as a third class borough under the conditions established by law prior to the effective date of this act until it becomes reclassified in accordance with this section.

(b) A third class borough may reclassify as a first or second class borough in the manner provided by AS 29.36.110 - 29.36.130 for the addition of powers by boroughs, except the petition or proposal requests reclassification instead of requesting addition of powers. If reclassification is approved, a school board shall be elected in conformity with AS 14.12 at the next regular election if it occurs within 90 days of the date of the reclassification election, or at a special election within 90 days of the date of the reclassification election. Expiration dates of terms of members elected at a special election must coincide with the date of the regular election. Until a board is elected and qualified, the assembly continues to serve as the board.

EXPLANATION; Third class boroughs are eliminated. A transition section provides that the existing third class borough retain its status until it is reclassified. The option of allowing the assembly to continue to serve as school board of a borough which is reclassifed from third to first or second class currently contained in AS 29.06.030(i) has been eliminated, so that if the third class borough changes its classification it must elect a school board. (NOTE: This was prepared as a request of the Policy Group to eliminate third class boroughs. If it is approved upon reconsideration, additional technical drafting changes will be required to eliminate references to third class boroughs in other sections.)

Sec. 29.09.180. ORGANIZATIONAL GRANTS. (a) For the purpose of defraying the cost of transition to a municipal form of government and in order to provide for initial government operations, each municipality incorporated after January 1, 1981, or for a second class city reclassified after January 1, 1981, is entitled to an organizational grant of $150,000, except that a municipality which is merged, consolidated, or unified under AS 29.12. is not entitled to an organizational grant.

EXPLANATION: This section is being resubmitted as the recommendation of the Technical Group after considering legislation on the matter proposed by Community and Regional Affairs.

Sec. 29.12.390. POWERS OF A UNIFIED MUNICIPALITY. A municipality organized under AS 29.12.190 - 29.12.390 shall have all the powers

(1) not prohibited it by law or charter;

(2) granted to home rule boroughs.

EXPLANATION: Existing language in (2) is confusing in that the reference to cities may imply a limitation of some sort on the powers of a unified municipality. This is a clearer statement of existing law.

Sec. 29.24.010. CONFLICTS OF INTEREST. Each home rule and general law municipality shall adopt a conflicts of interest ordinance which other provisions of this chapter notwithstanding, includes provision that an officer or employee shall disqualify himself from participating in any official action in which he has a substantial financial interest.

EXPLANATION: The second sentence is deleted as redundant. After considering the alternative proposed by the Policy Group, the Technical Group reasserts its original recommendation. It is felt that a person should not vote on a matter in which he has a substantial financial interest and that disclosure of the interest is not adequate protection for the public.

Sec. 29.24.170. VACANCIES. The governing body may provide by ordinance the manner in which a vacancy occurs in any elected office except the office of mayor and member of the school board. Unless otherwise provided by ordinance the governing body shall declare an elective office, other than the office of mayor or member of the school board, vacant when the person elected.

(The rest of the section was previously approved by the Policy Group).

EXPLANATION: The Technical Group upon reconsideration recommends that the governing body not be allowed to declare the office of a school board member vacant. Current law allows the members to determine vacancy on the school board.

Sec. 29.24.430. OTHER BOARDS AND COMMISSIONS. The governing body may, by ordinance, establish advisory or quasi-judicial boards and commissions.

EXPLANATION: Upon reconsideration, the Technical Committee would like to limit specific authority to set up boards to exclude administrative boards. In addition, subsection (b) is deleted from the draft which was originally approved by the Policy Group because it is felt that appointment power is adequately included under general separation of powers principles and ought not to be further restricted in an inflexible statute applying to every type of board.

Sec. 29.24.590. APPOINTMENT. The governing body shall appoint a manager by a majority vote of its membership. He is chosen on the basis of his administrative qualifications and receives the compensation set by the governing body. A member of the governing body may not be appointed manager of the municipality sooner than one year after leaving office except by a vote of three-forths of the authorized membership of the governing body.

EXPLANATION: Upon reconsideration, it is felt that the prohibition against serving as manager ought not to apply to officials other than members of the legislative body. This change would allow the governing body to appoint a municipal official to the office of manager without the one year or super majority restriction.

Sec. 29.24.680. PROHIBITIONS. Repeal.

EXPLANATION: (a) and (b) have been approved for repeal by the Policy Group. Upon reconsideration it is felt that the rest of the section should also be repealed. (c) and (d) were adopted for a specific Juneau problem which no longer exists according to Mr. Lee Sharp.

Sec. 29.27.010. ACTS REQUIRED TO BE BY ORDINANCE. (a)

(12) repeal.

The rest of the section is unchanged.

EXPLANATION: It is felt that (12) should be repealed as redundant because the provision is contained in AS 36.25. (Note: changes to (2), (5), (7), and (8) were previously approved by the Policy Group and the Technical Committee makes no further recommendation with regard to those paragraphs.)

Sec. 29.27.050. CODES OF REGULATION. The governing body may in a single ordinance adopt or amend by reference provisions of a standard published code of regulations. The regular ordinance procedure applies except that neither the ordinance nor its amendments need be distributed to the public or read in full at the hearings. For a period of 15 days before adoption at least five copies of the code must be made available for public inspection at a time and place set out in the hearing notice. Only the adopted ordinance need be printed after adoption. The governing body shall provide for the adopted code to be made available to the public at no more than cost.

EXPLANATION: The Policy Group previously approved changes made to the last line of this section - "The governing body shall provide for the adopted code to be sold or made available at no charge to the public." It is felt that this would be more flexible in that a municipality would also have the option of collecting a fee which represents only a part of the cost.

Sec. 29.27.080. PENALTIES. (a) For the violation of an ordinance the governing body may prescribed penalties not to exceed those imposed for a class B misdemeanor and may require mandatory, nonsuspendable imprisonment not to exceed five days.

(b) The municipality or an aggrieved person may institute a civil action against a person who violates an ordinance. In addition to injunctive and compensatory relief, a civil penalty not to exceed $1,000 may be imposed for each violation. An action to enjoin a violation may be brought notwithstanding the availability of any other remedy. Upon application for injunctive relief and a finding of a violation or a threatened violation, the superior court shall grant the injunction. Every day upon which a violation of an ordinance continues shall constitute a separate violation.

(c) The penalties authorized under this section may be imposed only if copies of the ordinance are made available for distribution to the public at no more than cost.

EXPLANATION: Technical drafting changes with no substantive impact on the section as previously approved by the Policy Group in (a) and (b). Subsection (c) has been changed from the language previously approved so that a municipality has the option of charging less than full cost.

Sec. 29.30.030. ELECTION DATES. (a) The governing body shall give at least 20 days notice of a regular or special election.

(b) The date of a regular election is the first Tuesday of each October unless a different date or interval of years is provided by ordinance.

EXPLANATION: Technical changes. The notice requirement is applied to the regular election as well as the special election.

Sec. 29.30.160. PRESENTATION OF INITIATIVE. (a) Unless substantially the same measure is adopted, when a petition seeks an initiative vote the clerk shall submit the matter to all of the municipal voters at the next regular or special election occuring no sooner than 45 days after certification of the petition.

Other subsections as previously approved.

EXPLANATION: The Technical Committee wishes to reassert its first recommendation that no special election be required in the initiative process. In rejecting this suggestion, the Policy Group appears to have felt that the initiative process should be treated the same as the recall and referendum processes, both of which require a special election if a regular election is not held within a given time period. The Technical committee feels that the initative process, seeking to establish new law, is not as much of an emergency situation as the recall of an official or the repeal of an unpopular law, and therefore that the expense and inconvenience of holding a special election on an initiative ought not to be placed on municipalities.

Sec. 29.30.300. ELECTION NOTICE. At least 20 days notice of an election to recall an official shall be given notwithstanding an ordinance or charter provision to the contrary.

EXPLANATION: It is felt that since a recall must be done at a regular or special election, procedural requirements dealing with election apply so most of this section is eliminated as redundant. The notice provision is necessary to bind home rule municipalities.

Sec. 29.30.330. SUCCESSORS. (a) If an official is recalled from the governing body his office becomes vacant and is filled in accordance with AS 29.24.175.

(b) Nothwithstanding subsection (a), if all members of the governing body are recalled, the governor shall appoint three qualified persons to the governing body. The appointees shall appoint additional members to fill remaining vacancies in accordance with AS 29.24.175.

(c) If all officials are recalled from a school board the governor shall appoint three qualified persons to the school board. The appointees shall appoint additional members to fill remaining vacancies.

(d) A person appointed under (a) - (c) of this section shall serve until a successor is elected and takes office.

(e) If an official is recalled the clerk, without further action by the governing body, shall conduct an election for a successor to fill the unexpired portion of the term. The election shall be held not more than 60 days from the date the recall election is certified, except that if a regular election occurs within 75 days after certification the successor shall be chosen at that election.

(f) Nominations for a successor may be filed until seven days prior to the last date upon which a first notice of the election must be published. Nominations may not be filed before the certification of the recall election.

EXPLANATION: Redrafted at the request of the Policy Group. This would provide that vacancies in a governing body resulting from recall would be filled as any other vacancy, unless all members of the body are recalled, in which case the governor shall appoint members so that local government can continue to function. If all members of a school board are recalled, the governor would have the same power of appointment to that board.

Sec. 29.42.150. DELEGATIONS. The assembly may by ordinance authorize the planning commission and the platting authority to delegate powers to hear and decide cases under this chapter in a manner authorized by the ordinance, including but not limited to delegations to one or more members of the planning commission or platting authority, to other boards or commissions or to a hearing officer designated by the planning commission or platting authority.

EXPLANATION: The Technical Committee originally recommended repeal of this section. Upon reconsideration, it is recommended that it be retained in a slightly redrafted form to insure that there is no question that hearing officers may be used by the planning commission and platting authority to hear individual cases.

Sec. 29.45.610. POWER OF LEVY. (a) A city within a borough which levies and collects areawide sales or use taxes may levy sales or use taxes on all sources taxed by the borough in the manner provided for boroughs, except that the assembly may by ordinance authorize a city to levy and collect sales or use taxes on other sources.

(b) A city within a borough which does not levy and collect areawide sales or use taxes may levy and collect sales or use taxes in the manner provided for boroughs.

Sec. 29.45.620. POWER OF LEVY AND COLLECTION. Repeal.

EXPLANATION: Subsection (a) is altered to allow a city to levy taxes on other sources if authorized by a borough. It is felt that borough authorization should be required since the borough does the collecting and would experience added administrative difficulties if the city and borough tax differ. Subsection (b) contains the material formerly in AS 29.45.620.

Sec. 29.33.200. MUNICIPAL PROPERTIES. (Section as previously approved by the Policy Group with the following new subsection:)

(g) Dedication of streets, rights of way, easements or other areas for public use shall not be construed to require the municipality to maintain, improve or provide for municipal services in the area dedicated and the dedication shall not impose any liability on the municipality for the condition of the area dedicated.

EXPLANATION: Since the municipality may be the recipient of land deeded over by a private person without the muncipality's approval, it is felt that the municipality should not be liable for the condition of property just as the result of dedication. This would not affect the liability of a municipality for the condition of land which it undertakes to improve or maintain.

TO: Title 29 Policy Committee Members

Re: Proposed Draft on Municipal Powers & Duties

Attached please find a proposed draft of a new Title 29 chapter on Municipal Powers and Duties. This draft was prepared and reviewed by the Technical Committee in response to numerous complaints that the present law on this subject is extremely confusing and overly restrictive for municipal governments. The proposed draft attempts to consolidate in one place all provisions dealing with the powers of various classes of local government, including all provisions for the assumption of new municipal powers.

Since this work represents a major reorganization of the present statutes, a section by section comparison of old and new provisions will be difficult. For reference, the proposed material would replace the following provisions in present law:

AS 29.33.010 - .050
AS 29.33.250 - .290
AS 29.38.010 - .050
AS 29.41.010 - .020
AS 29.43.010 - .110
AS 29.48.010 - .110
AS 29.48.190; .210; .220; .270;
AS 29.48.310 - .330

Hopefully, you will find the proposed organization a bit easier to follow and understand than the rather confusing collection of present statutes listed above.

Aside from reorganization, the primary change in the proposed draft is to eliminate the "laundry list" approach to describing permissible municipal powers. The proposed statutes would identify those powers that can be exercised by the assembly or council for various classes of governments and would then allow exercise of any other general law power provided such powers are assumed by vote of the people or transferred as required under present law.

Given the short time before the January 17 Policy meeting, Tam Cook and I agreed to mail the proposed draft to the Policy Committee members so that there would be a chance to review it prior to the Juneau meeting. There is certainly no pride of authorship on my part, and your comments and criticisms will be most welcome.

If you have questions on the proposed draft prior to the January 17 meeting, please feel free to contact me at 264-4236, and I will do my best to answer them.

Sincerely yours,

CHAPTER 33. MUNICIPAL POWERS AND DUTIES

(CHAPTER 48. POWERS APPLICABLE TO ALL MUNICIPALITIES)

Article 1. GENERAL POWERS

Sec. 29.33.010. (Sec. 29.48.010.) GENERAL POWERS. Municipalities have the following general powers, subject to other provisions of law:

(1) to establish and prescribe the functions of municipal departments, offices or agencies;

(2) to establish and prescribe salaries for the elected and appointed municipal officers and employees;

(3) to make investigations of the affairs of the municipality and make inquiries into the conduct of a municipal department;

(4) to enter into agreements, including those for cooperative or joint administration of any functions or powers with a local government, with the state, or with the United States;

(5) to require periodic and special reports from a municipal department to be submitted through the municipal executive;

(6) to sue and be sued;

(7) to levy taxes and special assessments and to impose liens for the enforcement thereof;

(8) to enforce ordinances and to prescribe penalties for violations;

(9) to acquire, manage, control, use and dispose of real and personal property, and interests in such property whether or not the property is situated within or outside the municipal boundaries; this power includes the power of a borough to expend, for any purpose authorized by law, money received from the disposal of land in a service area created under [AS 29.63.090(f)];

(10) to acquire membership in organizations which promote legislation for the good of the municipality;

(11) to expend funds for community purposes for the good of the municipality;

(12) to borrow money and issue evidences of indebtedness.

(13) to regulate the operation and use of its public rights of way, public facilities and services.

Sec. 29.33.020. (Sec. 29.48.037.) EXTRATERRITORIAL JURISDICTION. (a) A municipality may, to the extent otherwise authorized or permitted by law, provide parks, roads (including ice roads), trails, playgrounds, solid and septic waste disposal, wharves, harbors and other marine facilities, emergency medical services, cemeteries, airports, transportation systems and utility services outside its boundaries, and may regulate their use and operation to the extent that the jurisdiction in which they are located does not regulate them. A regulation adopted under this section must state that it applies outside the municipality.

(b) A municipality may adopt ordinances to protect its water supply and watershed and may enforce them outside its boundaries. Before this power may be exercised within the boundaries of another municipality, the approval of that municipality must be given by ordinance. This section applies to general law and home rule municipalities.

Sec. 29.33.030 (Sec. 29.73.020.) EMINENT DOMAIN. A home rule or general law municipality may exercise the powers of eminent domain and declaration of taking in the performance of an authorized power or function of the municipality, in accordance with AS 09.55.250-09.55.460.

Sec. 29.33.040. (Sec. 29.48.270.) EMERGENCY DISASTER POWERS. (a) A municipality which is wholly or partially within an area declared by the President or Governor to be a disaster area may participate in and provide for housing and urban renewal and redevelopment in the same manner as a home rule city. The exercise of these powers by a borough is limited to the area outside cities in the borough.

(b) A borough may exercise the powers for a housing or urban renewal and redevelopment project transferred to it by a city located in the borough as provided by AS_____.

(c) Powers granted by this section must be initiated within a period of not more than five years from the date of declaration of a natural disaster by the President or Governor, but these powers may be extended for an additional period of not more than three years.

Sec. 29.33.050. FRANCHISES AND PERMITS. (a) The assembly acting for the area outside cities and the council acting for the area within a city may grant franchises, including exclusive franchise privileges and may grant permits for use of streets and other public places.

(b) No exclusive franchise is valid until it has been ratified by a majority of the qualified voters voting on the question at a regular or special municipal election.

Sec. 29.33.060. (Sec. 29.48.060.) PUBLIC UTILITIES RATES. The assembly acting for the area outside cities and the council acting for the area within a city may regulate, fix, establish and change, as it considers proper, the rates and charges imposed for utilities services given to the municipality or its inhabitants by a utility to the extent that the utility is not regulated under AS 42.05, provided that interest must be paid on any deposit required by the utility. All rates, charges and regulations shall be reasonable and shall permit a fair and reasonable return in invested capital.

Sec. 29.33.070. MUNICIPAL PROPERTY.

The assembly or council shall by ordinance establish a formal procedure for acquisition and disposal of land and interests in land of the municipality. Each disposal of land or an interest in land shall be by ordinance unless the assembly or council finds by resolution that the land or interest in land is without substantial value to the municipality.

Sec. 29.33.080. (Sec. 29.48.190.) BUDGET AND CAPITAL PROGRAM. (a) The assembly or council shall establish the manner for the preparation and submission of the budgets and capital programs by the executive. After public hearing, the assembly or council may approve the budgets with or without amendments and shall appropriate the funds required for the approved budgets.

(b) The assembly or council may make supplemental and emergency appropriations. No payment may be authorized or made and no obligation incurred except in accordance with appropriations.

Sec. 29.33.090. (Sec. 29.48.210.) EXPENDITURE OF BOROUGH REVENUES. Borough revenues received through taxes collected on an areawide basis by a home rule or general law borough may be expended on general administrative costs and on areawide functions only. Borough revenues received through taxes and levied and collected in the area outside cities only may be expended on general administrative costs and functions which render service to the area outside cities only. This section does not apply to unified municipalities.

Sec. 29.33.100. (Sec. 29.48.220.) POST AUDIT. The assembly or council shall provide for an annual independent audit of the accounts and financial transactions of the municipality or in the case of a second class city an audit or statement of annual income and expenditures. To make the audit the assembly or council shall designate a public accountant who has no personal interest, direct or indirect, in the fiscal affairs of the municipality. Copies of the audit shall be available to the public upon request. This section applies to home rule and general law municipalities.

Article 2. MANDATORY AREAWIDE POWERS

Sec. 29.33.110. (Sec. 29.33.010.) SCOPE OF AREAWIDE POWERS. (a) First and second class boroughs shall exercise the powers as specified and in the manner specified in this article on an areawide basis, both inside and outside cities within their boundaries.

(b) No city may exercise an areawide power once that power is being exercised by a borough.

Sec. 29.33.120. (Sec. 29.33.050.) EDUCATION. Each borough constitutes a borough school district and establishes, maintains, and operates a system of public schools on an areawide basis as provided in AS 14.14.060. A military reservation within an organized borough is not part of the borough school district until the military mission is terminated or until inclusion in the borough school district is approved by the Department of Education. However, operation of the military reservation schools by the borough school district may be required by the Department of Education under AS 14.14.110. If the military mission of a military reservation terminates or continued management and control by a regional educational attendance area is disapproved by the Department of Education, operation, management and control of schools on military reservation transfers to the borough school district in which the military reservation is located.

Sec. 29.33.130. (Sec. 29.33.030.) ASSESSMENT AND COLLECTION OF TAXES. (ASSESSMENT AND COLLECTION) Boroughs shall assess and collect property, sales and use taxes levied within their boundaries, subject to ch. 45 (ch. 53) of this title. Taxes levied by a city and collected by a borough are returned in full to the levying city.

Sec. 29.33.140. LAND USE REGULATION.

First and second class boroughs shall provide for land use regulation in accordance with AS 29.42._____

Article 3. ADDITIONAL CITY AND BOROUGH POWERS

Sec. 29.33.150. FIRST CLASS BOROUGH POWERS. (a) In addition to the powers granted by Sec. .010 through .140, a first class borough in the areas outside cities, may exercise any power not otherwise prohibited by law.

(b) A first class borough may, by ordinance, exercise the following powers on an areawide basis:

1. Providing transportation systems
2. Water pollution control
3. Air pollution control as provided in AS 46.03.140-.240
4. Licensing of day care facilities
5. Regulation of animals

(c) In addition to powers conferred by (b) of this section, a first class borough may, on an areawide basis, exercise any other power not otherwise prohibited by law provided that such power has been transferred by a city and approved by the borough assembly or has been acquired pursuant to sec. .190 of this chapter.

Sec. 29.33.160. SECOND CLASS BOROUGH POWERS. (a) In addition to the powers granted by Sec. .010 through .150, a second class borough, in the area outside cities, may, by ordinance, exercise the following powers:

1. Providing transportation systems
2. Regulation of fireworks
3. Regulation of animals
4. Regulation of drivers and motor vehicles, including snow vehicles and off highway vehicles, to the extent allowed under AS 28.01.010.
5. Provision of garbage and solid waste collection and disposal.
6. Air pollution control as provided in AS 46.03.140-.240
7. Water pollution control
8. Participation in federal or state loan programs for housing rehabilitation and improvement for energy conservation.
9. Economic development programs and activities.

(b) A second class borough may, by ordinance, exercise the following powers on an areawide basis:

1. Providing transportation systems
2. Regulation of animals

3. Air pollution control as provided in AS 46.03.140-.240

4. Water pollution control

5. Licensing of day care facilities

(c) In addition to powers conferred by (b) of this section, a second class borough may, on an areawide basis or in the area outside cities, exercise any other power and may provide other services or facilities not otherwise prohibited by law on an areawide basis provided that such power has been transferred by a city and approved by the borough assembly for exercise within the city or has been acquired by election under Sec. .190 of this chapter, or in the area outside cities, provided it has been acquired by election under Sec. .190.

Sec. 29.33.170. CITIES WITHIN ORGANIZED BOROUGHS. (a) In addition to the power conferred under Sec. .010, a first or second class city within an organized borough may exercise any power not otherwise prohibited by law. In accordance with Sec. .110, a city may not exercise a power once that power is being exercised by a borough.

Sec. 29.33.180. CITIES OUTSIDE ORGANIZED BOROUGHS. (a) Cities outside an organized borough may exercise any power not otherwise prohibited by law.

(b) Cities outside an organized borough may assess, levy and collect a general property tax and a sales or use tax. A property, sales or use tax if levied must be assessed, levied and collected as provided by Chapter 45 of this title for boroughs.

Cities may, by ordinance, establish, alter and abolish differential tax zones for property taxes for services not provided in the entire city or provided at a different level than provided generally within the city.

(c) Home rule and first class cities outside an organized borough shall constitute city school districts and shall establish, operate and maintain a system of public schools as provided by AS 29.36.040 for boroughs.

(d) Home rule and first class cities outside an organized borough shall, and second class cities outside an organized borough may, provide for land use regulation as provided by AS 29.42.010-.245 for boroughs.

(2) substantive change in 20.18.120(c) to provide for local flexibility "unless provided otherwise by the incorporation petition."

(3) substantive change in 29.18.140 intended to address confusion over whether a newly created municipality may succeed a previously incorporated municipality.

(4) 29.18.130 needs to be re-drafted.

(5) add a definition of "department" and of "nonareawide power" to the definition section.

CHAPTER 12. ALTERATION OF A MUNICIPALITY

Article 1. Change of Municipal Name

Sec. 29.12.010 (29.73.050). CHANGE OF NAME. (a) The name of a municipality may be changed by ordinance which is ratified by majority vote at a regular or special election and filed with the lieutenant governor. Upon receipt of a ratified ordinance, the lieutenant governor shall issue an order to the municipality changing its name in compliance with the ordinance. A name change shall become effective within 45 days of receipt of the ordinance on a date fixed in the order. A copy of the order shall be sent to the department.

(b) An ordinance changing the name of a municipality which is ratified by the voters may not be repealed, except by adopting a different name as provided in (a) of this section.

(c) Suits, applications, petitions, hearings and other proceedings to which a municipality is a party which are pending or brought after a change of municipal name shall proceed in the name of the municipality as changed by order.

NOTE: substantive change in (b). I cannot see any reason to allow repeal of an ordinance which has been ratified by the voters, unless the voters will ratify the change.

ARTICLE 2. ANNEXATION AND EXCLUSION.

Sec. 29.12.040 (29.68.010). MUNICIPAL BOUNDARY CHANGE. (a) No change. Follows language of the constitution.

(b) In addition to the regulations governing annexation by local action adopted under AS 44.19.260, the Local Boundary Commission shall establish procedures for annexation and exclusion of territory by a municipality by local action. The regulations shall include a requirement that

(1) a proposed annexation or exclusion be approved by a majority of the voters voting on the question residing within the area proposed to be annexed or exclused;

(2) municipally-owned property adjoining the municipality may be annexed by ordinance without voter approval; and

(3) an area adjoining a municipality may be annexed by ordinance without an election if all property owners and voters within the area petition the assembly or council.

(c) A boundary change effected under (a) of this section prevails over a change initiated by local action, without regard to priority in time. (No change)

Sec. 29.12.040 (29.68.020). ANNEXATION OF A MILITARY RESERVATION. A military reservation may be annexed to a municipality in the manner prescribed by AS 29.12.040 (29.68.010). If a city within a borough annexes a military reservation, the area encompassing the reservation is automatically annexed to the borough.

ARTICLE 3. MERGER AND CONSOLIDATION

Sec. 29.12.080 (29.68.030). No change.

Sec. 29.12.090 (29.68.040). PETITION. Merger or consolidation of two or more municipalities is proposed by filing with the department a petition containing

(1) the name and class of each municipality;

(2) the name and class of the proposed municipality;

(3) the proposed composition and apportionment of the assembly or council;

(4) maps, documents, and other information required by the department;

(5) the signature and resident address of 15 percent of the permanent resident voters in each municipality based on the number who voted in the last regular election.

Sec. 29.12.100 (29.68.050, 070). REVIEW AND INVESTIGATION. (a) The department shall review a petition for merger or consolidation and return a deficient petition for correction.

(b) If a petition contains the required information and number of signatures, the department shall investigate the proposal.

(c) After investigation of a proposal, the department shall report its findings and recommendations to the Local Boundary Commission.

Sec. 29.12.110 (29.68.070, 080). HEARING AND DECISION. (a) Prior to making a decision regarding a petition for merger or consolidation, the Local Boundary Commission shall hold at least one public hearing in each of the municipalities included in the petition, unless officials of the municipalities agree to a single hearing.

(b) If the Local Boundary Commission determines that a proposed merger or consolidation fails to meet the standards for municipal incorporation, it shall reject the petition. If the commission determines that the proposed merger or consolidation meets the standards, it shall accept the petition. If the commission determines that the proposed boundaries or the composition and apportionment of the assembly or council can be altered to meet the standards, it may change the proposal and accept the petition.

(c) The Local Boundary Commission shall immediately notify the lieutenant governor of its acceptance of a merger or consolidation petition.

(d) A decision by the Local Boundary Commission under this section may be appealed under the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62).

Sec. 29.12.140 (29.68.090). ELECTION. (a) Within 30 days after notification of acceptance of a merger or consolidation petition, the lieutenant governor shall order an election within the area to be included in the proposed municipality to be held not less the 30 nor more than 90 days after the order.

(b) A voter who is a resident of the area to be included within the proposed municipality may vote.

(c) The lieutenant governor shall supervise the election in the manner prescribed by the Alaska Election Code (AS 15.05 - 15.60). The state shall pay all election costs.

(d) The lieutenant governor shall certify the election results. If merger or consolidation is approved, he shall, within ten days, order an election for officers of the new municipality to be held not less than 30 nor more than 90 days after the order. The election order must specify the dates during which nomination petitions for election of officers may be filed. The merger or consolidation becomes effective upon election of municipal officers.

Sec. 29.12.150 (29.68.100). ASSETS AND LIABILITIES. (a) When two or more municipalities merge, one municipality succeeds to the rights, powers, duties, assets and liabilities of the consolidated municipalities as specified in the merger petition.

(b) When two or more municipalities consolidate, the newly incorporated municipality succeeds to the rights, powers, duties, assets and liabilities of the consolidated municipalities.

Sec. 29.12.160 (29.68.110). ORDINANCES. No change.

NOTE: (1) substantive change in AS 29.68.040(a) in the number of signatures required to petition (from 25 to 15 percent) in order to conform to percentages required for petition for other boundary alterations or for formation of a municipality. Why should this be different? Residents are protected since they ultimately vote on the question.

(2) technical change in AS 29.68.090(d) to add procedural requirements and eliminate the cross-reference to the procedural requirements of AS 29.18.120 for ease of use of this section.

medical services, and cemeteries outside its boundaries and may regulate their use. If adopted under this section, a regulation must state that it applies outside the municipality.

(b) A municipality may adopt ordinances to protect its water supply and watershed and may enforce them outside its boundaries. Before this power may be exercised within the boundaries of another municipality, that municipality must by ordinance approve the exercise of the power; and

(c) This section applies to general law and home rule municipalities.

Sec. 29.73.020. EMINENT DOMAIN. (a) A home rule or general law municipality may exercise the power of eminent domain and declaration of taking in the performance of an authorized power or duty of the municipality in accordance with AS 09.55.250 - 09.55.460.

The exercise of the power of eminent domain and declaration of taking shall be by ordinance which shall be submitted to the voters at the next regular election or special election called for that purpose. A majority vote is required for the approval of the ordinance.

(c) The power granted by this section must be initiated within a period of not more than five years from the date of declaration of a natural disaster by the President, but this power may be extended for an additional period of not more than three years.

SUBJECT: Proposed drafting change

TO: Advisory Policy Committee -
Title 29 Revision

FROM: Tamara Brandt Cook
Legislative Counsel

This is a proposed technical revision which makes no substantive legal changes. I have used the chapter and article numbers which these sections are organized under according to the reorganization proposed by the Technical Committee. The section number, AS 29.23.310, is the section in which this material appears in the existing Title 29.

In an effort to make this section clearer to the unsophisticated user, I am proposing a new opening section containing a cross-reference to the appropriate statute dealing with school districts. I have subdivided the existing section 29.23.310 in order to segregate material applicable to specific types of municipalities. I have also somewhat expanded this section to include a reference to the fact that the assembly serves as school board for third class boroughs. I added subsection (c) to provide notice within Title 29 of the existence of a provision outside of the title providing for an alternative to the school board membership requirements set out in Title 29.

In general, I have expanded the section dealing with school boards in order to provide more complete coverage of that topic in one place in the statutes for ease of use.

ARTICLE 4. POWERS AND DUTIES OF THIRD CLASS BOROUGHS

Sec. 29.41.010. POWERS OF THIRD CLASS BOROUGHS. (a) A third class borough shall exercise the areawide powers of education and tax assessement and collection in the manner provided for a second class borough. Areawide exercise of other powers may be assumed. A third class borough may establish, operate, alter or abolish a service area in the manner provided by AS 29.63.090.

(b) A third class borough may exercise the general powers set out in AS 29.48.010 and may assume other general powers.

(c) Before a third class borough may assume a power under (a) of this section, assumption of the power must be approved by a majority vote in a general or special election. The acquisition of an additional power by the borough may be initiated in either of two ways:

(1) a number of voters equal to 15 percent of the number of votes cast in the preceding regular election may file a petition with the assembly; or

(2) the assembly may place the question on the ballot.

Sec. 29.41.020. SCHOOL BOARD. The borough assembly is the school board for a third class borough. The mayor is the president of the school board. While acting as president of the school board he has all the powers of a borough executive except for the veto power.

Sec. New. MILITARY RESERVATION NOT PART OF SCHOOL DISTRICT. A military reservation within a third class borough is not part of the borough school district until inclusion in the district is approved by the Department of Education or the military mission is terminated. However, operation of a military reservation school by the borough school district may be required by the Department of Education under AS 14.14.110. If the military mission of a reservation terminates or if continued management and control by a regional educational attendance area is disapproved by the Department of Education, operation, management and control of a school on a military reservation transfers to the borough school district in which the reservation is located.

NOTE: I have omitted AS 29.41.010(c) from this draft, because it appears that AS 29.58.010 - .140 apply to third class boroughs (to the extent they assume powers and become thereby authorized to incur indebtedness under AS 29.58.010) as well as the section cited in (c).

ARTICLE 4. POWERS AND DUTIES OF THIRD CLASS BOROUGHS

Sec. 29.41.010. POWERS OF THIRD CLASS BOROUGHS. (a) A third class borough shall exercise the areawide powers of education and tax assessement and collection in the manner provided for a second class borough. Areawide exercise of other powers ~~is not authorized~~ may be assumed.

(b) ~~A third class borough may by a majority vote in a general or special election provide for planning, platting, and zoning in accordance with AS 29.33.070 - 29.33.245.~~ A third class borough may exercise the general powers set out in AS 29.48.010 and may assume other general powers. In addition to the general powers set out in AS 29.48.010, a third class borough ~~may assume~~ any other general law powers ~~which a second class borough is authorized to assume by this title.~~

(c) ~~Powers assumed by a third class borough under~~ (b) of this section ~~may be exercised only within service areas.~~ Before a third class borough may assume a power under (a) or acquisition of the power by a third class borough must be approved by a majority vote in a general or special election. A third class borough may establish, operate, alter or abolish a service area in the manner provided by AS 29.63.090. The acquisition of ~~an~~ additional powers ~~on a service area basis~~ may be initiated in either of two ways:

(1) a number of voters equal to 15 percent of the number of votes cast in the ~~proposed service area at the~~ preceding regular election may file a petition with the assembly; or

(2) the assembly may place the question on the ballot.

Sec. 29.41.020. SCHOOL BOARD. The borough assembly is the school board for a third class borough. The mayor is the president of the school board. While acting as president of the school board he has all the powers of a borough executive except for the veto power.

Sec. New. MILITARY RESERVATION NOT PART OF SCHOOL DISTRICT. A military reservation within a third class borough is not part of the borough school district until inclusion in the district is approved by the Department of Education or the military mission is terminated. However, operation of a military reservation school by the borough school district may be required by the Department of Education under AS 14.14.110. Under AS 29.48.010 third class boroughs have the power to borrow money and issue evidences of indebtedness, unless this power is limited under some other section. Is it?

No I suspect that (c) is redundant in that all of AS 29.58 applies to third class boroughs.

SJUBJECT: Proposed drafting change

TO: Policy Group
Title 29 Revision Commission

FROM: Tamara Brandt Cook TBC
Legislative Counsel

This is a proposed technical revision of AS 29.53.020 dealing with exemptions from property taxation but containing no important substantive legal changes. However, I wish to alert you to a change which may have some substantative impact.

AS 29.53.020(e) currently contains the language

> Only one exemption may be granted with respect to the same property and, if two or more persons are eligible for an exemption with respect to the same property, the parties shall between or among themselves which shall receive the benefit of the exemption.

This sentence has been in subsection (e) since 1972, but its meaning is unclear. I checked with Mr. Lee Sharp, Municipal Attorney for Juneau, and Mr. Terry Early, State Assessor regarding the meaning of this provision. Both of them agreed with me that the section is unclear and Mr. Early advised me to check with an assessor to see how it has been applied in the field. I contacted Mr. Bob Howe, Juneau assessor, and he imformed me that the sentence in question has been ignored as a practical matter. I also checked with the Department of Revenue and was informed that they rely upon information supplied by the boroughs in determining the amount of the state rebate, and therefore have not been interpreting this sentence themselves. Consequently, I have deleted this sentence from this draft.

Please let me know of any changes which you would like me to make in this draft.

(b) Property described in (a) of this section from which income is derived is exempt only if that income is solely from use of the property by a nonprofit religious, charitable, hospital, or educational group for classroom space.

(c) Property exempted from execution under the Code of Civil Procedure (AS 09) is not exempt from municipal taxes.

(d) An exemption may not be granted except upon written application on a form prescribed by the state assessor for use by local assessors. A claimant must file the application no later than January 15th of the assessment year for which the exemption is sought, but during that year the governing body of the municipality for good cause may waive the claimant's failure to make timely application for the exemption and authorize the assessor to accept the application. If an application is approved by the assessor, he shall allow an exemption in accordance with the provisions of this section. If failure to file by January 15th of the assessment year is waived and the application is approved, the amount of tax which a claimant may have already paid for the assessment year for property exempted shall be refunded. The assessor may require proof at any time of the right to and amount of an exemption claimed. A claimant must file a separate application for each assessment year in which an exemption is sought.

(e) Real property which the assessor determines, after notice and hearing to the parties concerned, has been conveyed to the applicant primarily for the purpose of obtaining the exemption under (a)(7) of this section may not be exempted.

The determination of the assessor is appealable under AS 44.62.560 - 44.62.570. The state shall reimburse a borough or city for the real property tax revenues lost to it by the operation of (a)(7) of this section. However, reimbursement will be made only to the extent that revenue lost exceeds an exemption which was granted by the borough or city or which, upon application, would have been granted under AS 29.53.025(a).

(f) The exemption granted by (a)(8) of this section is limited to:

(1) an amount equal to two percent of the value of the structure based on the assessment for 1981, if the fire protection system is a fixture of the structure on January 1, 1981; or

(2) an amount equal to two percent of the value of the structure based on the assessment as of January 1st of the year immediately following the installation of the fire protection system if the fire protection system becomes a fixture of the structure after January 1, 1981.

(g) Except as provided in (e) of this section, nothing affects similar exemptions from property taxes granted by municipalities on September 10, 1972.

LEGISLATIVE AFFAIRS AGENCY

MEMORANDUM September 26, 1980

SUBJECT: Proposed drafting changes

TO: Advisory Policy Committee - Title 29 Revision

FROM: Tamara Brandt Cook
Legislative Counsel TBC

As noted in several of the comments submitted to the Advisory Policy Committee, the status of an ordinance between the time of adoption and the time of veto is unclear in the current statutes. This draft contains several substantive legal changes which would clarify this situation.

1. An ordinance takes effect 30 days after adoption or at a later date specified in the ordinance. Currently the statutes are unclear as to when an ordinance is effective. The 30 day period, could, of course, be shortened or lengthened.

2. Copies of the ordinance are to be made available within five days. Currently, there is no time period designated and the statutes merely indicate that copies of an ordinance are to be made available. The five day period, could, of course, be lengthened or shortened.

3. In order to go along with the first two proposed substantive changes, I have added a requirement that ordinances be vetoed within 30 days. The existing law gives no time frame within which a veto must be exercised.

4. In the case of a veto, the mayor must immediatly submit a statement advising of the veto and giving reasons. Under existing law, the mayor is required advise of a veto during the next regular meeting of the assembly or council. Since an assembly or council may not meet very often on a regular basis, I feel that the assembly or council ought to be informed of a veto so that it can call a special session to attempt to override it.

5. An emergency ordinance is immediately effective after adoption, which appears to be the case under existing law. If vetoed, it ceases to be effective immediately and a veto may not be overriden. Since it takes a larger majority to pass an emergency ordinance than to override a veto, absent this provision, it appears that a veto could always be overriden. The assembly or council would still have the alternative of passing an ordinary ordinance, should an emergency ordinance be vetoed.

6. Copies of emergency ordinances are to be made available within 24 hours after adoption. The current law provides that copies be made available without specifying a time period for compliance.

In addition to the substantive changes mentioned above, this draft constitutes a complete technical revision of the sections. Section numbers match the numbers as they currently exist in Title 29.

Please let me know whether this approach appears satisfactory. I would be glad to make any desired changes to this draft.

Enclosure

Sec. 29.23.170. VETO. (a) Except as provided in (b) and (c) of this section, the borough mayor may within 30 days veto any ordinance, resolution, motion or other action of the assembly and may strike or reduce items in appropriation ordinances except for school budget items. He shall immediately submit to the assembly a written statement advising of his veto and giving his reasons. A veto may be overridden by two-thirds of all the votes to which the assembly is entitled on the question, except that a veto of an emergency ordinance may not be overridden.

(b) A borough mayor may not veto actions of the assembly taken under AS 29.23.130(d) or actions of the board of equalization and the board of adjustment.

(c) The mayor of a third class borough may not veto actions of the assembly taken in its capacity as school board.

Sec. 29.23.260. VETO. He shall immediately submit to the council a written statement advising of his veto and giving his reasons. A veto may be overridden by two-thirds of all the votes to which the council is entitled on the question, except that a veto of an emergency ordinance may not be overridden.

(b) The mayor of a second class city has no veto power.

(4) approve the transfer of a power to a borough from a city;

(5) provide for the levying of taxes;

(6) provide for the retention or sale of tax-foreclosed property;

Sec. 29.48.140. FORM OF ORDINANCES. An ordinance shall be introduced in writing in the form required by the assembly or council.

Sec. 29.48.150. ORDINANCE PROCEDURE AND EFFECTIVE DATE. (a) The following procedure governs the enactment of all ordinances except emergency ordinances:

(1) an ordinance may be introduced by a member or committee of the assembly or council or by the municipal executive or chief administrator;

(2) an ordinance shall be set for public hearing by the affirmative vote of a majority of the authorized votes;

(3) at leave five days prior to the public hearing, a summary of the ordinance and available amendments shall be published with a notice of the time and place for the hearing;

(4) a copy of the ordinance and all amendments offered shall be made available to each person present at the public hearing, or the ordinance and amendments shall be read in full;

(5) during the public hearing, the assembly or council shall hear each person wishing to speak about the ordinance or amendments;

(7) within five days after adoption, copies of an ordinance shall be made available to the public.

(b) Unless vetoed, an ordinance takes effect 30 days after adoption or at a later date specified in the ordinance.

Sec. 29.48.160. EMERGENCY ORDINANCES. (a) The assembly or council may adopt, amend and adopt, or reject an emergency ordinance at the meeting at which it is introduced. Every emergency ordinance adopted shall

(1) receive the affirmative vote of all members present, or the affirmative vote of three-fourths of the total membership, whichever is less;

(2) contain a finding by the assembly or council that an emergency exists and a statement of the facts upon which the finding is based;

(3) be printed with copies made available to the public within 24 hours after adoption.

(b) An emergency ordinance is effective immediately after adoption. If an emergency ordinance is vetoed it shall cease to be effective and the veto may not be overridden by the assembly or council. Unless vetoed, an emergency ordinance is effective for 60 days.

(c) An emergency ordinance may not be used to levy taxes, to grant, renew or extend a franchise, or to regulate the rate charged by a public utility.

Sec. 29.42.010. Planning, platting, and land use regulation. (a) First and second class boroughs shall provide for planning, platting, and land use regulation on an areawide basis.

(b) the assembly by ordinance may delegate any of its powers and responsibilities under (a) of this section to the council of a city of any class within the borough or a subordinate board or commission of a city, provided the city first consents by ordinance to that delegation. The Assembly, with or without the consent of the council may at any time revoke any or all powers or responsibilities delegated to a city council or subordinate body under this section.

EXPLANATION

This section is substantially similar to AS 29.33.070. A reference in subsection (a) to "zoning" has been changed to the more flexible term "land use regulation". Subsection (b) is a redrafted version of AS 29 33.070(b). The proposed language clarifies the issue of whether a city's consent is required before delegated powers are revoked by the Assembly.

(Alternate Section suggested by Joanne Shanley)

Sec. 29.42.010. Planning, platting and land use regulation. (a) First and second class boroughs shall provide for planning, platting and land use regulation on an areawide basis.

(b) the assembly by ordinance may delegate any of its powers and responsibilities under (a) of this section to the council of a city of any class within the borough or a subordinate board or commission of a city, provided the city first consents by ordinance to that delegation. The assembly, with or without the consent of the council may at any time revoke any or all powers or responsibilities delegated to a city council or subordinate body under this section.

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of (b) of this section the functions of planning, platting, and land use regulation within a first class or home rule city located more than 25 miles from the boundary of the Borough seat may be assumed and exercised exclusively by that city upon ratification by the qualified voters residing in the city of an ordinance of the city council proposing exercise of those powers by the city.

Sec. 29.42.020. Plnning commission. (a) By ordinance the assembly shall establish a planning commission consisting of not less than five persons appointed and confirmed as provided by law. The assembly by ordinance shall also prescribe the qualifications, terms, and compensation of planning commissioners.

(b) In addition to those responsibilities prescribed by law, the planning commission shall:

(1) Prepare and recommend to the assembly a comprehensive plan for the systematic and organized development of the borough, as defined in .030 of this chapter.

(2) Prepare, recommend, and as required by law to administer those measures necessary to implement the comprehensive plan.

EXPLANATION

This section is a shortened and revised version of AS 29.33.080. Major changes include: elimination of apportionment requirements based on residency of specified members within first class cities; elimination of specific language regarding appointments, terms, and compensation of planning commissioners and substitution of more general language requiring the Assembly to prescribe by ordinance the qualifications, terms and compensation of commissioners; elimination of detailed and unnecessary specifications of the commission's duties in favor of a general statement requiring the commission to prepare and recommend measures necessary to implement the comprehensive plan; and elimination of public meetings and public records requirements as redundant.

Sec. 29.42.030. Comprehensive plan. (a) The comprehensive plan is a compilation of policy statements, goals, standards and maps for guiding the physical, social and economic development, both private and public, of the borough, and may include, but is not limited to, the following: statements of policies, goals, standards, a land use plan, a community facilities plan, a transportation plan, and recommendations for plan implementation.

(b) The assembly shall adopt, or may modify the a comprehensive plan with the recommendations of the planning commission. The assembly shall, with the advice and recommendations of the planning commission, undertake an overall review of the plan and update the plan as necessary to ensure the continued validity and effectiveness of the plan.

EXPLANATION

This section is derived from AS 29.33.085. Subsection (a) is identical to AS 29.33.085(a). Subsection (b) is redrafted to eliminate the mandatory two year review requirement of AS 29.33.085(b) and contains a more flexible review requirement premised on a determination that the continued validity and effectiveness of the plan requires review.

Sec. 29.42.040. Land use regulation. In accordance with a comprehensive plan adopted under Section .030 of this chapter and in order to implement that plan, the assembly by ordinance and as a legislative act, may enact or amend regulatory measures governing the use and occupancy of land, including but not limited to:

(1) Zoning regulations which restrict or govern use of land and improvements by geographic districts;

(2) Construction, fire and life safety codes governing placement, erection and occupancy of structures;

(3) Land use permit systems designed to encourage specified uses and structures and to discourage others, or to minimize unfavorable externalaties of certain uses and structures.

(4) Other regulatory measures reasonably necessary to further the goals and objectives of the comprehensive plan.

(5) Measures defining and regulating public nuisances.

EXPLANATION

The proposed Section 29.42.040 represents a substantial modification of AS 29.33.090. Present law requires implementation of the comprehensive plan through traditional zoning applicable to geographically defined districts, and allows so called "contract zoning." Although the present AS 29.33.090(b) contains a rather traditional enumeration of the purposes of zoning, the "including but not limited to" preface to that subsection renders the detailed laundry list legally meaningless. The suggested language of AS 29.42.040 preserves the requirement that all land use regulations comply with a comprehensive plan and recites the more important catagories of land use regulations available to the Borough. Passage of AS 29.42.040 would clearly enable second class boroughs to enact building and fire codes and to regulate public nuisances.

Sec. 29.42.050. Appeals from administrative decisions. (a) By ordinance the assembly shall provide for appeals from administrative decisions of borough employees or boards and commissions made in the enforcement, administration, or application of land use regulations adopted by the borough under this chapter to a board of adjustment, hearing officer, or other independent quasi-judicial body established by the borough.

(b) By ordinance the assembly shall provide for appointment of hearing officers, or the composition, appointment and terms of office of a board of adjustment or other quasi judicial body established to hear appeals from administrative actions specified in (a) of this section and the assembly may define proper parties, prescribe evidentiary rules and standards of review and define remedies available to such bodies or hearing officers.

EXPLANATION

This section consolidates provisions of existing Section 29.33.110 and Section 29.33.120. The specific enumeration of the kinds of decisions from which appeals may be taken is eliminated; in its place is a more general requirement allowing appeals from administrative decisions of borough employees or boards made in enforcing or administering land use regulations. New language allows appointment of hearing officers, eliminates redundent public records and meeting requirements, and allows the Assembly to define proper parties, evidentary rules, and standards of review rather than follow more restrictive rules of the present AS 29.33.120.

Sec. 29.42.060. Judicial review. (a) The assembly shall provide by ordinance for appeals from decisions of the board of adjustment, hearing officer or other quais-judicial board or others named under Sec. 050 of this chapter to the Superior Court by a municipal officer or person jointly or severally aggrieved.

(b) Appeals to the Superior Court under this section are administrative appeals and shall be governed by Rules of Court applicable to appeals from decisions of administrative agencies.

(c) Appeals are heard on the record established by the administrative agency, and the court may affirm, reverse, wholly or partly, the decision appealed from. Issues in proceedings under this section have preference over all other civil actions and proceedings.

EXPLANATION

Based on AS 29.33.130, the proposed section makes several important changes in procedures governing administrative appeals to Superior Court. The "automatic stay" requirement of AS 29.33.130(c) is eliminated, allowing parties to follow more customary appellate rules governing injunctions pending appeal; the language plainly makes land use appeals administrative appeals under the Appellate Rules, and eliminates procedural requirements already governed by the Rules of Court.

Sec. 29.42.070. Platting jurisdiction and power. (a) First and second class boroughs shall exercise the power to regulate platting and the subdivision of land on an areawide basis. By ordinance the assembly shall enact subdivision regulations:

(1) governing the form, size and other aspects of subdivision, dedications, and vacations of land;

(2) regulating dimensions and design features of lots or tracts;

(3) establishing strict width, arrangement, and right of way, including allowance for public access to lots and installation of street paving, curbs, gutters, sidewalks, sewers, water lines, drainage and other public utility facilities and improvements.

(4) requiring dedication of streets, rights of way, public utility easements and other areas deemed by the platting authority necessary for future public use.

(b) The assembly by ordinance shall establish a platting board to administer subdivision regulations adopted by the borough and perform other duties prescribed by law. The platting board may, in whole or in part, consist of members of the planning commission or of other municipal bodies, boards and commissions.

EXPLANATION

This section is derived from AS 29.33.150 and, aside from stylistic changes, makes the following modifications to existing law: requires adoption of subdivision regulations by ordinance; clearly allows the platting authority to require dedications; allows the Assembly to determine the composition of the platting board; and eliminates the provisions of 85 SLA 1979 which allow the State of Alaska to ignore capital improvement requirements of local subdivision regulations.

Sec. 29.42.080. Application to state and political subdivisions. All subdivisions of land made by the state, its agencies, instrumentalities and political subdivisions are subject to the provisions of this chapter or home rule ordinances or egulations governing subdivisions, and shall comply with ordinances and other local regulations adopted under this chapter or under home rule authority, in the same manner and to the same extent as subdivisions made by private landowners.

EXPLANATION

This section contains the language of AS 40.15.200 and adds the word "private" preceeding the word "landowners" in the last line. It is believed that the provisions of AS 40.15.200 are more appropriately placed here rather than in AS 40.15.

Sec. 29.42.090. Waiver in certain cases. (a) The platting authority shall, in individual cases, waive the preparation, submission for approval, and recording of a plat upon satisfactory evidence that:

(1) each tract or parcel of land will have adequate legal and physical access by the public to a public highway or street;

(2) each parcel created is five acres in size or larger and that the land is divided into four or fewer parcels;

(3) the conveyance is not made for the purpose of, or in connection with, a present or projected subdivision development;

(4) no dedication of a street, alley, thoroughfare or other public area is involved or required.

(b) In other cases the platting authority may waive the preparation, submission for approval, and recording of a plat, if the transaction involved does not fall within the general intent of this chapter and AS 40.15 if it is not made for the purpose of, or in connection with, a present or projected subdivision development which constitutes an isolated transaction and no dedication of a street, alley, thoroughfare, park or other public area is involved or required.

EXPLANATION

This section contains one modification to its predecessor, AS 29.33.170. A reference to "adequate legal and physical access" is added to subsection (a)(1) which will guarantee public access to tracts or parcels created by waiver.

Sec. 29.42.095. Short plat procedure. (a) Notwithstanding the requirements of this chapter governing the submission, consideration, or approval of vacations, subdivisions, or resubdivisions, by ordinance the Assembly may establish a short or abbreviated plat procedure for plats which will only relocate or vacate lot lines, subdivide a single tract, parcel or lot into not more than four tracts or lots and will not:

(1) deny legal and physical access to and from all lots or tracts created by, or adjacent to, the subdivision or require construction or improvements necessary for access;

(2) alter a dedicated street or right-of-way, or require any dedication except to match a half right-of-way;

(3) allow a change in the permitted use to which the lot or tract may be devoted under existing law;

(4) require the granting of a vacation or variance from the subdivision regulations enacted by the Borough.

(b) Consistent with this section, regulations governing the short plat procedure may allow an administrative official to review, consider, and approve abbreviated plats with such notice, hearing, and other procedural requirements established by the Assembly.

EXPLANATION

New section allowing short plat procedure under such expedited procedures as the Assembly may adopt.

Sec. 29.42.100. Procedure. (a) The platting board shall within 60 days of filing approve or disapprove the plat or shall return it to the applicant for modification or correction. If the board fails to act, the plat is considered approved and a certificate of approval shall be issued by the board on demand. The applicant for plat approval may consent to the extension of the period for action by the board. The board shall state on its record and in writing to the applicant its reason for disapproval of a plat.

(b) The platting board shall submit an approved plat to the district recorder in compliance with AS 40.15.010 -- 40.15.020.

EXPLANATION

Subsections (a) and (b) are identical to AS 29.33.160(a) and (b). The proposed section eliminates AS 29.33.160(c) relating to submission of preliminary plats for state disposals under AS 38.05 or 38.08, because the proposed changes in Sections 29.42.070 require full state compliance with local capital improvement requirements.

Sec. 29.42.110. Information required. A plat shall show initial point of survey, original or reestablished corners and their descriptions, and actual traverse showing area of closure and all distances, angles and calculations required to determine initial point, corners and distances of the plat, as well as other information which may be required by ordinance.

EXPLANATION

Identical to AS 29.33.180.

Sec. 29.42.120. Alteration of replat petition. No recorded plat may be altered or replatted except upon petition of the owners of a majority of the land affected by the application of replat or by the platting board. No platted street may be vacated, except upon petition of the municipality or owners of the majority of the front feet of the land fronting the part of the street sought to be vacated. The petition shall be filed with the platting board. It shall be accompanied by a copy of the existing plat showing the proposed alteration or replat.

EXPLANATION

Identical to AS 29.33.200.

Sec. 29.42.130. Notice of hearing. The platting board shall fix a time for a hearing on the petition which shall not be more than 60 days after the filing. The board shall publish a notice stating when and by whom the petition was filed, its purpose, and the time and place of the hearing. The notice shall generally describe the alteration or replat sought. The notice shall be published once a week for two consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation in the area. The board shall also mail a copy of the notice to each affected property owner not signing the petition.

EXPLANATION

Identical to AS 29.33.210.

Sec. 29.42.140. Hearing and determination. At the hearing the platting board shall consider the alteration or replat and make its decision on the merits of the proposal. No vacation of a city street may be made without the consent of the city council. No vacation of a street in the borough area outside cities may be made without the consent of the borough assembly. The assembly or council shall have 30 days from the decision in which to veto the board decision. If no veto is received by the board within the 30-day period, the consent of the city or borough shall be considered to have been given to the vacation.

EXPLANATION

Identical to AS 29.33.220.

Sec. 29.42.150. Recording. If the alteration or replat is approved, the revised plat must be recorded by the platting board and is thereafter the lawful plat.

EXPLANATION

Identical to AS 29.33.240.

Sec. 29.42.160. Title to vacated area. (a) The title to the street or other public area vacated on a plat attaches to the lot or lands bordering on the area in equal proportions, except that if the area was originally dedicated by different persons, original boundary lines shall be adhered to so that the street area which lies on one side of the boundary line shall attach to the abutting property on that side and the street area which lies on the other side of the boundary line shall attach to the property on that side. The portion of a vacated street which lies within the limits of a platted addition attaches to the lots of the platted addition bordering on the area. If a public square is vacated, the title to it vests in the city if it lies within the city and to the borough if it lies within the borough outside a city. If the property vacated is a lot or tract, title vests in the rightful owner.

(b) If the borough or city acquired the street or other public area vacated for legal consideration or by express dedication to and acceptance by the borough or city other than required subdivision platting, before the final act of vacation the fair market value of the street or public area shall be deposited with the platting authority to be paid over to the borough or city on final vacation.

(c) Provisions of (a) of this section notwithstanding, the council of a second class city located outside an organized borough may vacate those streets, alleys, crossings, sidewalks or other public ways that may have been previously dedicated or established when the council, in its discretion, finds that the streets, alleys, crossings, sidewalks or other public ways are no longer necessary for the public welfare, or when the public welfare will be enhanced by the vacation. If the council determines that all or a portion of the area vacated under this subsection should be devoted to another public purpose, title to the area vacated and held for another public purpose does not vest as provided in (a) of this section but remains in the city.

EXPLANATION

Identical to AS 29.33.240.

Sec. 29.42.170. Remedies. (a) It shall be unlawful for the owner or agent of the owner of land located within a subdivision to transfer, sell, offer to sell, or to enter into a contract to sell land in a subdivision before a plat of the subdivision has been prepared, approved and recorded in accordance with applicable municipal subdivision regulations enacted under this chapter. It shall be unlawful for any person to file or record a subdivision plat or other instrument depicting subdivided land in any public recorder's office unless that plat or document bears the approval of the municipal platting authority. Every act prohibited by this chapter or the maintenance of any condition prohibited by municipal subdivision regulations adopted in accordance with this chapter is unlawful and the willful commission of such act or maintenance of such condition is a misdemeanor. Every person convicted of a violation of any provision of this title or any municipal subdivision regulation adopted under this title or the terms, conditions, or limitations imposed by a municipal platting authority in the exercise of its powers under this title is guilty of a misdemeanor and may be punished by a fine not to exceed $500.

(b) If there is a violation of the terms of this chapter, municipal subidivision regulations adopted under this chapter, or any terms, conditions, or limitations imposed by a platting authority in the exercise of its powers under this chapter, the Borough or any aggrieved citizen may institute or cause to be instituted any appropriate civil action to prevent, abate, enjoin, estop, remove or punish such violation and to obtain monetary damages suffered by that party. In addition to injunctive and compensatory relief each violation shall be subject to a civil penalty not to exceed $1,000. An action to enjoin any violation to this title may be brought notwithstanding the availability of any other remedy. Upon application for injunctive relief and a finding of an existing or threatened violation, the Superior Court shall grant injunctive relief to restrain that violation.

(c) Every day upon which an unlawful act or condition shall occur shall constitute a separate violation.

(d) The platting authority may enjoin any partition, lease, transfer, or sale of land which would result in an unlawful subdivision. Following an unlawful petition, transfer, lease or sale, the platting authority may enjoin any further transfer, sale of all unlawfully subdivided parcels until such time as the parcels are dully subdivided or returned to common ownership.

EXPLANATION

This section is derived in part from AS 29.33.190 and contains certain new provisions which strengthen remedies available to municipalities seeking to enforce subdivision regulations. The new section prohibits persons from offering to sell unsubdivided land in violation of local subdivision regulations; authorizes injunctive relief to restrain violations of subdivision regulations, allows imposition of civil penalties, and makes daily occurrences of unlawful acts separate violations.

Not adopted

ARTICLE ____. CORRECTIONS, CANCELLATIONS AND REFUNDS OF TAXES.

Section 29.45.510 [new]. Corrections.

(a) Correction of Clerical Errors of Assessor.

(1) When it can be ascertained from an inspection of the property, the records of the assessee, or from the roll or any papers in the assessor's office what was intended, or what should have been assessed, defects in description or form or other errors of the assessor not involving the exercise of judgment as to value which result in the entry on the roll of assessed values other than those intended by the assessor, or which result in the assessment of nonexistent improvements or personal property which will not increase the amount of taxes due may be corrected as provided in this article at anytime, and if such correction will result in an increase in the amount of taxes, at anytime prior to January 1 of the year following the year in which such error was made.

(b) Correction of Clerical Errors of Tax Collector.

Clerical errors of the tax collector on the roll or delinquent tax roll may be corrected by the tax collector at anytime in the manner provided in this article.

(c) Making of Corrections. Corrections authorized in this section which do not affect any property other than the property taxed or assesed, and do not result in a decrease, increase, refund or cancellation of taxes due may be made by the assessor or tax collector. All other corrections shall be made only upon order of the assembly and provided in this article.

(d) Notice and Hearing Where Tax Increase Necessitated.

If the correction will increase the amount of taxes due, the assembly, sitting as the board of equalization, shall give the assessee an opportunity for a hearing after not less than thirty (30) days notice at which the assessee may present any objections to the change. The decision of the board of equalization may be appealed to the Superior Court pursuant to section 29.45.220(f).

(e) Tax Rate Applicable to Increased Assessment: Roll Entries: Collection of Taxes in Event of Bona Fide Transfer or Encumbrance.

In the event any correction authorized under this article has the effect of increasing the assessment, the assembly shall apply a tax rate to such increase at whatever tax rate was in existence in the year in which the error was made. All increased amounts of taxes shall be entered on the roll prepared or being prepared for the current assessment year and shall thereafter be treated and collected like other taxes on said roll; provided, however, that if the correction affects taxes on the secured roll for any year and subsequent to the entry of the original assessment but prior to the date of such correction the real property on which such taxes constitute a lien has been transferred or conveyed to a bona fide purchaser for value or becomes subject to a bona fide encumbrance for value, such increased amount of taxes shall not create, impose or constitute a lien on such real property but shall be collected as follows:

(1) The assessor or tax collector may record with the recorder in any recording district a certificate which shall set forth the name of the person who was the assessee in the year for which such correction was made as shown on the certified assessment roll for that year and the amount or amounts of any such correction. From the date of the recording of such certificate, a lien shall be created and attach against any real property of such person which is in the recording district and which is owned by him at the time or is acquired by him afterward but before the lien expires, for the amount of such taxes, which lien shall have the force, effect, priority and duration of a judgment lien.

(2) Where, in the opinion of the assessor there is no real property sufficient to secure such taxes they shall be entered on the unsecured roll in the name of the assessee as shown on the certified assessment roll for the year for which such correction was made.

(f) Payment in Installments. The assembly may, by ordinance, provide for spreading of payments for taxes when such taxes have been increased by the discovery of an error under the provisions of this article.

Section 29.45.512 [new]. Correction of Payment or Credit on Wrong Property.

(a) If an assessee, or agent of the assessee, by mistake pays the tax on other than the property intended, or if through no fault of the assessee or agent of the assessee, a tax payment is credited to property other than the property intended and by substantial evidence the tax collector is convinced that the payment should have been credited to another property, the tax collector shall, upon order of the assembly, cancel the credit on the unintended property and transfer the payment to the property intended at any time before a guaranty or certificate of title issues respecting the unintended property and before one (1) year has elapsed since the date of the payment.

(b) If a credit is cancelled on unintended property, the tax collector shall notify the owner of the unintended property as shown on the current assessment records, by registered mail at his last known address respecting the proposed transfer. The notice shall state that the owner of the unintended property may, within ____ (____) days after the mailing demand a hearing by the assembly. If made, the demand shall be filed with the tax collector. The assembly shall set a time for the hearing and its decision on the transfer shall be final.

(c) Payment of Amount Outstanding. If the amount that was paid is less than the amount due on the property intended, the balance of the amount due shall be paid before the transfer is made.

(d) Refund of Excess. If the amount paid exceeds the amount due on the property intended, the applicant is entitled to a refund of the excess; provided however, no interest shall be paid thereon unless payment to the unintended property was the result of an error of the tax collector or other employees of the borough.

Section 29.45.514 [new]. Cancellations.

(a) All or any portion of any tax, interest, penalty, or costs heretofore or hereafter levied, may, on satisfactory proof, be canceled by the tax collector on order of the assembly if it was levied or charged:

(1) more than once;

(2) erroneously or illegally; provided however, no cancellation shall be made on tax exempt property by reason of such exempt status if there has not been compliance with the statutory procedure for claiming the exemption;

(3) on the portion of an assessment that has been decreased pursuant to a correction authorized in this article;

(4) on property which did not exist on the lien date;

(5) on property of the United States, the state or any borough, city, school district or other public entity and which, because of such public ownership, was not subject to the tax involved.

(b) If property is acquired by a negotiated purchase, sale, gift, devise or eminent domain proceedings by the United States of America, or by the state or by any borough, city, school district or other public entity, and because of such public ownership becomes exempt from taxation, taxes shall be canceled or paid as follows:

(1) If there are any delinquent taxes, interest or penalties, for other than the current tax year, no cancellation shall be made in respect of all or any portion of any such delinquent unpaid tax, or penalties or costs, but such tax, together with such penalties and costs as may have accrued thereon while on the secured roll, shall be paid, or if unpaid for any reason, they shall be transferred to the unsecured roll and collected like any other taxes on the unsecured roll.

(2) If such property is acquired after the lien date but prior to the commencement of the fiscal year for which current taxes are a lien on the property, the amount of such current taxes shall be canceled and neither the person from whom the property was acquired nor the acquiring public entity shall be liable for the payment of such taxes unless otherwise provided by law.

(3) If such property is so acquired after the commencement of the fiscal year for which the current taxes are a lien on the property, that portion only of such current taxes allocable to the property acquired, together with any allocable penalties and costs thereon, which are properly allocable to that part of the fiscal year which ends on the day before the date of acquisition of the property shall be paid, or if unpaid for any reason, they, shall be transferred to the unsecured roll and shall be collectible from the person from whom the property was acquired. The portion of such taxes allocable to the property acquired, together with any penalties and costs thereon, which are allocable to that part of the fiscal year which begins on the date of the acquisition of the property, shall be canceled and shall not be collectible either from the person from whom the property was acquired nor from the public entity unless otherwise provided by law.

In no event shall any transfer or cancellation of unpaid taxes, penalties or costs be made with respect to property which has been transferred or tax deeded to a borough or a city for delinquency.

(4) For purposes of this subdivision, if proceedings for acquisition of the property by eminent domain have not been commenced, the date of acquisition shall be the date that the conveyance is accepted by the acquiring authority. If proceedings to acquire the property by eminent domain have been commenced the date of acquisition shall be the date title vests in the acquiring authority.

Section 29.45.516 [new]. Refunds.

On order of the assembly, any taxes paid before or after delinquency shall be refunded if they were:

(a) paid more than once or in excess of the amount due on the property as shown on the roll;

(b) erroneously or illegally collected; provided however, no refund shall be made on tax exempt property by reason of such exempt status if there has not been compliance with the statutory procedure for claiming the exemption;

(c) paid on an assessed value of the property by reason of the assessor's clerical error and a correction of such error has been made as provided in this article;

(d) paid on an assessment of improvements when the improvements did not exist on the lien date;

(e) paid on an assessment in excess of the equalized value of the property as determined by the board of equalization pursuant to section 29.45.220.

(f) paid on property later acquired by a public entity to the extent that taxes would have been subject to cancellation pursuant to Section 29.45.514 had such taxes not been paid prior to the date of acquisition.

No refunds under the provisions of this section shall be made because of any error involving the exercise of judgment as to valuation of property, except as authorized in subsection (e).

Section 29.45.518 [new]. Refund by Tax Collector in Event of Multi- or Overpayment. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 29.45.516 any taxes paid before or after delinquency may be refunded by the tax collector within ninety (90) days after the date of payment if:

(a) paid more than once;

(b) the amount exceeds the amount due on the property as shown on the roll.

Section 29.45.520 [new]. Refund Claims; Verification and Filing. No order for a refund under this article shall be made except on a written claim:

(a) verified by the person who paid the tax, his guardian, executor, or administrator stating the statutory grounds upon which the refund is claimed;

(b) filed within one (1) year after making of the payment sought to be refunded;

(c) interest shall be allowed on such refunds at the rate of eight percent (8%) per year from the date of payment.

Section 29.45.522 [new]. Action on rejected claim--Time for commencement. If the assembly rejects a claim, in whole or in part, or fails to act within six (6) months from the date of filing of a claim for refund the person who paid the taxes, his guardian, executor, or administrator may within two (2) years after the date of payment of the claimed refund amount commence an action in the superior court against the borough to recover the taxes which the assembly has refused to refund. No action shall be commenced or maintained under this article unless a claim for refund shall have been filed in compliance with the provisions of this article, and no recovery of taxes shall be allowed in any such action upon a ground not asserted in the claim for refund.

Section 29.45.524 [new]. Uncollectible Accounts. The Assembly, by ordinance, may provide procedures for the writing off of taxes carried on the unsecured tax roll which are determined to be uncollectible at anytime after expiration of _____ years after the date such taxes were due, provided however, the write off of such taxes for such accounting purposes shall not operate as a release or discharge of liability of any person or property otherwise responsible for the payment of such taxes.

Section 29.45.526 [new]. Taxes Defined. As used in this article, "tax" or "taxes" includes penalties, interest and costs.

See State v. Wakefield Fisheries, Inc., 495 P.2d 166 (1972) [six (6) year statute of limitation provided for in AS 9.10.050 applies for action for refund of taxes.

Sec. 29.33.200 [29.48.260]

(e) A municipality, in order to make sites available for beneficial new industries, may acquire and hold real property, either inside or outside the corporate limits, and may sell, lease or otherwise dispose of such property to persons who agree to operate a beneficial new industry upon the terms and conditions the assembly or council considers advantageous to the municipality. A municipality may by ordinance exempt all or any specific sale, lease or other disposition of property under this paragraph (e) from the requirements of (c) of this section.

Addresses Libby v. City of Dillingham,
____ P.2d ____, Op. No. 2097 (1980)

DRAFTED CHANGES ALTERED BY THE POLICY GROUP - 10 & 11 November 1980

Sec. 29.12.260. COMPOSITION OF CHARTER COMMISSION. (a) The charter commission shall consist of 11 voters, three of whom shall be residents elected at large from the area of the borough and eight of whom, proportionate to the population as determined by the Department of Community and Regional Affairs, shall be

(1) residents of and elected from the area outside a home rule or first class city in the borough, or;

(2) residents of and elected from a home rule or first class city in the borough.

(b) If at least one nomination of a qualified charter commission candidate for each available seat is not filed in accordance with AS 29.12.240 the resolution or petition for unification is void and no election on the question shall be held.

EXPLANATION: Subsection (a) has been altered so that second class cities are included within the area outside cities for purposes of selecting representatives on the charter commission. This was done so that first class and home rule cities, with their greater concentrations of population, have less chance of overwhelming the rest of the borough. Subsection (b) has been added to avoid the expense and inconvenience of an election in the question of unification if not enough nominations of commission members are received. It is felt that failure to nominate a sufficient number of commission candidates indicates a general lack of interest in the question of unification.

DRAFTED CHANGES ALTERED BY THE POLICY GROUP - 10 & 11 November 1980

Sec. 29.30.010. ADMINISTRATION. The borough assembly or city council shall prescribe the rules for conducting a municipal election and shall appoint an election board composed of at least three judges for each precinct. Unless no qualified voter is willing to serve, a judge shall be a voter of the precinct for which he is appointed.

EXPLANATION: Adds the provision that judges be appointed from among precinct voters in order to conform to the 1980 revision of AS 15.10.120. The following language was deleted as a duplication of AS 29.30.040: "The municipality may not alter voter qualification requirements of this title." Subsection (b), making this applicable to home rule municipalities, was deleted.

DRAFTED CHANGES ALTERED BY THE POLICY GROUP - 10 & 11 November 1980

Sec. 29.30.050. MAJORITY ELECTIONS. (a) Unless otherwise provided by ordinance, there shall be a runoff election if no candidate receives over 40 percent of the votes cast for the office of mayor or member of the assembly, council or school board.

(b) A municipality may by ordinance require a majority vote for the election of a municipal official.

(c) Unless otherwise provided by ordinance, a runoff election shall be held within three weeks after the date of certification of the election for which a runoff is required and notice of the runoff election shall be published at least five days prior to the election date.

EXPLANATION: Under existing law a runoff election is required if no candidate receives over 40 percent of the votes cast for his office. This requirement has been altered to apply to certain offices only and liberalized to allow a municipality to provide otherwise by ordinance. The provisions specifying when a runoff must be held and notice requirements are no longer mandatory. In addition, the procedure set out in (c), for the benefit of a municipality which desires specific procedural guidance, has been changed to provide three weeks before the runoff is held rather than two. The additional time would enable cities within boroughs to coordinate their runoff elections.

DRAFTED CHANGES ALTERED BY THE POLICY GROUP - 10 & 11 November 1980

Sec. 29.30.095. APPLICATION FOR PETITION. (a) An initiative or referendum is proposed by filing an application with the municipal clerk containing the bill to be initiated or the act to be referred and the address to which all correspondence relating to the application may be sent. An application shall be signed by at least ten municipal voters who will sponsor the petition. Other sponsors may be added at any time prior to filing the petition by submitting their names to the clerk. Within two weeks the clerk shall certify the application if he finds that it is in proper form and, for an initiative petition, that the matter

(1) is not restricted by AS 29.30.090;

(2) includes only a single subject;

(3) relates to a legislative rather than to an administrative matter; and

(4) would be enforceable as a matter of law.

(b) A decision by the clerk on an application for petition shall be subject to judicial review.

EXPLANATION: This is a new section. The first part is modeled after section two of the initiative article in the state constitution. Sponsors of a petition would be required to register with the clerk. The clerk would review an initiative for substantive legality, with his decision subject to immediate appeal. This allows for a judicial determination of the legality of an initiative prior to incurring the expense of an election on it.

DRAFTED CHANGES ALTERED BY THE POLICY GROUP - 10 & 11 November 1980

Sec. 29.30.110. PETITION. (a) Within two weeks after certification of an application for petition, a petition shall be prepared by the municipal clerk. Each copy of the petition shall

(1) contain a summary of the bill to be initiated or the act to be referred;

(2) set out fully the ordinance or resolution sought to be initiated or referred;

(3) state the date on which the petition is issued by the clerk;

(4) contain notice that signatures must be secured within 60 days after the date the petition is issued;

(5) contain spaces for each signature, the printed name of each signer, the date each signature is affixed, and the residence and mailing addresses of each signer;

(6) contain a statement that the sponsor personally circulated the petition, that all signatures were affixed in his presence, that he believes the signatures to be those of the persons whose names they purport to be, space for indicating the number of signatures on the petition, and space for the sponsor's sworn signature.

(b) If a petition is composed of more than one page, each page shall contain the summary of the bill to be initiated or the act to be referred.

(c) Copies of the petition shall be provided to each sponsor by the clerk.

EXPLANATION: This section would require the clerk to provide the petition forms to the petitioners to insure that they are complete and legible. This is similar to the requirement imposed upon the Lieutenant Governor in state initiative proceedings. The petition contents are essentially the same as those provided in present law, with a shortening of the petition circulation time from 90 to 60 days, some expansion of the information the signers must provide, and the addition of the circulator's affidavit.

DRAFTED CHANGES ALTERED BY THE POLICY GROUP - 10 & 11 November 1980

Sec. 29.30.120. REQUIRED SIGNATURES. (a) The necessary signatures on a petition shall be secured within 60 days after the clerk issues the petition. The statement provided under AS 29.30.110(a)(6) shall be completed and signed by the sponsor. Signatures shall be ink or indelible pencil.

(b) A petition shall be signed by a number of voters residing within the municipality based on the number of votes cast at the last regular election held on or prior to the date the petition was issued equal to

(1) 25 percent, when a municipality has fewer than 7,500 persons; or

(2) 15 percent, when a municipality has 7,500 persons or more.

(c) Illegible signatures shall be rejected by the clerk unless accompanied by a legible printed name. Signatures not accompanied by a legible residence address shall be rejected.

(d) A petition signer may withdraw his signature upon written application to the clerk prior to certification of the petition.

EXPLANATION: The 60 day signature gathering period is carried forward. While the possibility of an initiative or referendum on a matter which affects only a service area is not eliminated, such petitions contain the same number of signatures as a petition on an areawide matter. Permitting a service area to initiate a matter on a service area basis is contrary to the concept of the service area being under the control of the entire legislative body. Additional changes require rejection of a signature not accompanied by a legible residence address and allow a signer to withdraw his name up until the time the petition is certified, whereas now he must withdraw within seven days after the petition is filed.

DRAFTED CHANGES ALTERED BY THE POLICY GROUP - 10 & 11 November 1980

Sec. 29.30.130. SUFFICIENCY OF PETITION. (a) All copies of a petition shall be assembled and filed as a single instrument. Within 10 days after the date the petition is filed, the municipal clerk shall certify on the petition whether it is sufficient.

(b) If a petition is insufficient, it may be supplemented with additional signatures obtained within 10 days after the date on which the petition is rejected.

(c) Within 10 days after a supplementary filing the clerk shall recertify the petition. If it is still insufficient, the petition is rejected and filed as a public recond.

EXPLANATION: The only significant change makes it clear that in providing supplementary signatures the sponsors have only 10 days to gather the signatures. They may not use signatures which were gathered prior to the first filing but not submitted, and they may not use signatures gathered during the period in which the clerk is checking the petition.

DRAFTED CHANGES ALTERED BY THE POLICY GROUP - 10 & 11 November 1980

Sec. 29.30.160. PRESENTATION OF INITIATIVE. (a) Unless substantially the same measure is adopted, when a petition seeks an initiative vote the clerk shall submit the matter to all of the municipal voters at the next regular or special election occuring no sooner than 45 days after certification of the petition. If no regular or special election occurs within 75 days after the certification of a petition, the assembly or council shall hold a special election within 75 days, but not sooner than 45 days after certification.

(b) If the assembly or council adopts substantially the same measure, the petition is void and the matter initiated shall not be placed before the voters.

(c) The ordinance or resolution initiated shall be published in full in the notice of the election but may be summarized on the ballot to indicate clearly the proposal submitted.

(d) If a majority vote favors the ordinance or resolution it becomes effective upon certification of the election unless a different effective date is provided in the ordinance or resolution approved by the voters.

EXPLANATION: The changes allow for the submission of an initiative measure to the voters within 75 days after certification of a petition rather than requiring that the vote be delayed until the next regular election. The 45 day requirement was added to insure that a petition certified after the legal notices of a regular election were published does not complicate the election. Since the clerk determines whether the subject is within the restrictions and since this determination is subject to judicial review, the assembly or council no longer may reject a petition. An areawide vote is required whether the matter initiated is areawide or nonareawide because a service [illegible] a should not be allowed to become autonomous.

Sec. 29.30.170. PRESENTATION OF REFERENDUM. (a) Unless the ordinance or resolution is repealed, when a petition seeks a referendum vote the clerk shall submit the matter to all of the municipal voters at the next regular or special election occuring no sooner than 45 days after certification of the petition. If no regular or special election occurs within 75 days of certification of a petition, the assembly or council shall hold a special election within 75 days, but not sooner than 45 days after certification.

(b) If a petition for referendum is certified before the effective date of the matter referred, the ordinance or resolution against which the petition is filed shall be suspended pending the referendum vote. During the period of suspension, the assembly or council may not enact an ordinance or resolution substantially similar to the suspended measure.

(c) If the assembly or council repeals the ordinance or resolution before the referendum election, the petition is void and the matter referred shall not be placed before the voters.

(d) If a majority vote favors the repeal of the matter referred, it is repealed. Otherwise, the matter referred remains in effect or, if it has been suspended, becomes effective upon certification of the election.

EXPLANATION: The ability to suspend an ordinance or resolution which has taken effect when a petition is filed within 30 days of the passage of the ordinance or resolution has been deleted to avoid the apparent ability of a part of the voters to exercise a temporary repeal. The reference to amending a charter by initiative or referendum was deleted as that is covered under AS 29.13.080. All questions are submitted to an areawide vote.

Sec. 29.30.180. EFFECT. (a) An ordinance or resolution may not be repealed within one year of its effective date if adopted in an initiative election or adopted after a petition which contains substantially the same measure has been filed. The ordinance or resolution may be amended at any time.

(b) If an ordinance or resolution is repealed in a referendum election or by the assembly or council after a petition which contains substantially the same measure has been filed, substantially similar legislation may not be be enacted by the assembly or council for a period of one year.

(c) An unsuccessful initiative or referendum precludes the filing of a new petition application for substantially the same measure sooner than six months after the election results are certified.

EXPLANATION: Technical revisions and a change in (c) to accommodate the petition process.

DRAFTED CHANGES ALTERED BY THE POLICY GROUP - 10 & 11 November 1980

Sec. 29.30.210. RECALL. (a) An official who is elected or appointed to an elective municipal office may be recalled by the voters after he has served six months of the term for which elected or appointed.

(b) This section applies to home rule and general law municipalities.

EXPLANATION: The possibility of recalling an official who has been appointed to an elective position has been added. The date to be used in determining when the six month period has run has been clarified.

Sec. 29.30.225. APPLICATION FOR RECALL PETITION. (a) An application for a recall petition shall be filed with the municipal clerk and shall contain

(1) the signature and residence addresses of at least 10 municipal voters who will sponsor the petition;

(2) the address to which all correspondence relating to the application may be sent;

(3) a statement in 200 words or less of the grounds of the recall stated with particularity.

(b) Additional sponsors may be added at any time prior to filing the petition by submitting their names to the clerk.

EXPLANATION: This is a new section which describes the requirements for an application for recall petition.

Sec. 29.30.230. PETITION. (a) If the municipal clerk determines that an application for a recall petition meets the requirements of AS 29.30.225, he shall prepare a recall petition. All copies of the petition shall contain

(1) the name of the official sought to be recalled;

(2) the statement of the grounds for recall as set forth in the application for petition;

(3) the date the petition is issued by the clerk;

(4) notice that signatures must be secured within 60 days after the date the petition is issued;

(5) spaces for each signature, the printed name of each signer, the date of each signature, and the residence and mailing addresses of each signer;

(6) a statement that the sponsor personally circulated the petition, that all signatures were affixed in his presence, that he believes the signatures to be those of the persons whose names they purport to be, space for indicating the number of signatures on the petition, and space for the sponsor's sworn signature.

(b) Copies of the petition shall be provided to each sponsor by the clerk.

EXPLANATION: This section sets out requirements similar to those relating to the content of initiative and referendum petitions. Requiring the clerk to prepare the petition and supply copies insures that each copy is complete and legible. A petition must be filed within 60 days after the petition is issued rather than 60 days after the date of the earliest signature on the petition.

Sec. 29.30.240. REQUIRED SIGNATURES. (a) The necessary signatures on a recall petition shall be secured within 60 days after the date the clerk issues the petition. The statement provided under AS 29.30.230(a)(6) shall be completed and signed by the sponsor. Signatures shall be in ink or indelible pencil.

(b) If a petition seeks to recall an official who represents the municipality at large, the petition shall be signed by 35 percent of the voters residing within the municipality based on the number of votes cast at the last regular election for that office held prior to issuance of the petition. If a petition seeks to recall an official who represents a district, the petition shall be signed by 35 percent of the voters residing within the district based on the number of votes cast at the last regular election for that office held prior to issuance of the petition. The clerk shall determine the number of signatures required on a petition and shall inform each sponsor.

(c) Illegible signatures shall be rejected by the clerk unless accompanied by a legible printed name. Signatures not accompanied by a legible residence address shall be rejected.

(d) A petition signer may withdraw his signature upon written application to the clerk prior to certification of the petition.

EXPLANATION: Which election to be used as a standard for determining the number of signatures required is clarified. The number of signatures required has been increased as compared to the number required for initiative and referendum because it is felt that recall is an especially disruptive process which should be more difficult to initiate. However, the signature requirement is based on the number who voted in a municipal rather than a state election. It is expected that this number will reflect a relatively low turnout, and therefore that it is not as difficult a requirement as may appear.

Sec. 29.30.250. SUFFICIENCY OF PETITION. (a) The copies of a petition shall be assembled and filed as a single instrument. Within ten days after the date the petition is filed, the municipal clerk shall certify on the petition whether it is sufficient.

(b) If a petition is insufficient, it may be supplemented with additional signatures obtained within ten days after the date on which the petition is rejected, except that a petition which does not contain an adequate number of signatures, both valid and invalid, may not be supplemented and shall be rejected and filed as a public recond.

(c) Within ten days after the supplementary filing the clerk shall recertify the petition. If it is still insufficient, the petition is rejected and filed as a public record.

EXPLANATION: Unlike the situation in initiative and recall, this section does not allow additional time for obtaining signatures when a petition is filed which does not have enough signatures even before any are disqualified. This keeps a petitioner from filing an insufficient petition to gain additional time to gather signatures. Once again, it is felt that in the case of a recall effort, the process ought not to be prolonged.

Sec. 29.30.260. NEW RECALL PETITION. The rejection of a recall petition for any reason does not preclude the filing of a new petition. However, a new application for a petition to recall the same official may not be filed sooner than six months after a petition is rejected.

EXPLANATION: Filing a new petition prior to the six month waiting period is prohibited even though the petition is rejected for a reason other than failure to obtain sufficient signatures. Under existing law, failure to obtain sufficient signatures alone triggers the waiting period.

DRAFTED CHANGES ALTERED BY THE POLICY GROUP - 10 & 11 November 1980

Sec. 29.30.280. ELECTION. (a) If a regular election occurs within 75 days but not sooner than 45 days after submission of the petition to the assembly or council, the assembly or council shall submit the recall at that election.

(b) If no regular election occurs within 75 days the assembly or council shall hold a special election on the recall question within 75 days but not sooner than 45 days after a petition is submitted to the assembly or council.

(c) If a vacancy occurs in the office after a sufficient recall petition is filed with the clerk, the recall question shall not be submitted to the voters. The assembly or council may not appoint to the same office an official who resigns after a sufficient recall petition is filed naming him.

EXPLANATION: The 45 day requirement was added to insure that a petition submitted after the legal notices of a regular election were published would not complicate the election. Added in section (c) is the prohibition against the appointment of an official who resigns after a sufficient recall petition is filed.

DRAFTED CHANGES ALTERED BY THE POLICY GROUP - 10 & 11 November 1980

Sec. 29.30.290. FORM OF RECALL BALLOT. A recall ballot shall contain

(1) the grounds as stated in 200 words or less on the recall petition;

(2) a statement by the official named on the recall petition of 200 words or less if the statement is filed with the clerk for publication and public inspection within 20 days before the election;

(3) the following question: "Shall (name of person) be recalled from the office of (office)? YES ( ) NO ( )".

EXPLANATION: This section makes reference to the fact that each statement is limited to 200 words or less and provides that the statement of the official if published before the election will appear on the ballot.

DRAFTED CHANGES ALTERED BY THE POLICY GROUP - 10 & 11 November 1980

Sec. 29.30.300. ELECTION PROCEDURE. Procedures for conducting a recall election are those of a regular municipal election if the question is submitted at a regular election. Procedures for conducting a recall election are those of a special election if the question is submitted at a special election, except that at least 20 days notice shall be given notwithstanding an ordinance or charter provisions to the contrary.

EXPLANATION: This section was changed to provide for cases in which a recall election is held as a special election.

DRAFTED CHANGES ALTERED BY THE POLICY GROUP - 10 & 11 November 1980

Sec. 29.30.330. SUCCESSORS. (a) If an official is recalled from the assembly or council, the assembly or council, by affirmative vote of a majority of the remaining members, may appoint a qualified person to fill a vacancy created by the recall.

(b) If all members of the assembly or council are recalled, the governor shall appoint at least three qualified persons to the assembly or council. The appointees shall, by an affirmative vote of the majority, appoint additional members to fill remaining vacancies.

(c) If all but two members of the assembly or council are recalled, each remaining member shall appoint a qualified person to fill a vacancy created by the recall. Additional persons may be appointed to fill vacancies by the affirmative vote of a majority of the remaining members and their appointees.

(d) If all officials are recalled from a school board the assembly or council may appoint a qualified person to fill a vacancy created by the recall.

(e) A person appointed under (a) - (d) of this section shall serve until a successor is elected and takes office.

(f) If an official is recalled the clerk, without further action by the assembly or council, shall conduct an election for a successor to fill the unexpired portion of the term. The election shall be held at least ten but not more than 60 days from the date the recall election is certified, except that if a regular or special election occurs within 75 days after certification and the certification occurs at least 20 days prior to the last date upon which a first notice of the election must be published, the successor shall be chosen at that election.

(g) Nominations for a successor may be filed until seven days prior to the last date upon which a first notice of the election must be published. Nominations may not be filed before the certification of the recall election.

EXPLANATION: This section has been expanded to prevent a local government from having to attempt to operate without a quorum of elected officials. Subsections (f) and (g) were changed to take into account time periods required for election notice and nominations.

CLASSES AND POWERS OF MUNICIPALITIES

.010 Classes of Municipalities. A municipality shall be a home-rule or general law municipality.

.020 Power of General Law Municipalities (a) Powers of general law of municipalities are 1) regulatory powers enumerated in section ____ or 2) powers to provide services and facilities enumerated in section _____.

A city within its jurisdiction and a borough on an area-wide or non-areawide basis may acquire additional regulatory powers or powers to provide public facilities or services by ordinance approved by a vote of two-thirds (2/3) of the membership of the assembly or council. A decision to acquire powers under this section is subject to referendum.

.040 Exercise within Cities. Except as provided in section .070, a borough may not exercise within a city in the borough a power which the city is then exercising if the city council by ordinance approved two-thirds vote of its membership states its opposition.

TO: TITLE 29 TECHNICAL AND POLICY COMMITTEES

FROM: ALASKA ASSOCIATION OF MUNICIPAL CLERKS

SUBJECT: TITLE 29 REVISIONS

We respectfully submit the following comments:

1) Sec. 29.30.040. We support the drafted changes as recommended by the Technical Committee, dated October 10, 1980, with the following amendment to (b):

> "(b) Voter registration by the municipality may not be required, and a municipality may not alter voter qualification requirements except that a municipality may by ordinance require a person to be a resident of and registered in the precinct, district, or service area in which he votes."
> Explanation: Those voting on the issue are residents of the specific area and thus will have to live with the outcome of the election; requiring registration in the precinct, district or service area will hopefully eliminate some of the problems and the time demanded in trying to prove residency; such a procedure will give the Canvass Board clearer direction.

2) Regarding new AS 29.30.110 and .230, the AAMC feels it is within the scope of responsibilities of the clerks to provide an acceptable petition format; however, we object to being burdened with any of the responsibility of composing any type of initiative, referendum or recall statement. We feel that the newly-proposed sections are unclear in this regard and request that clarification of our position be considered.

3) AAMC strong supports the language as proposed in AS 29.30.050 regarding elections which gives the municipalities the option to provide for runoff elections by ordinance.

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act Relating to Native Village Governments."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) The legislature has determined that,

(1) there exist within the state several communities which have Native village governments whose members are citizens of the state; and

(2) the law and customs of Native village governments include notions of democracy, liberty, and the exercise of personal rights consistent with the state and federal constitutions.

(b) It is the purpose of this Act to,

(1) extend recognition to Native village governments and encourage them in the administration of local government;

(2) provide for cooperative agreements between the state government and Native village governments to promote the equitable delivery of state services.

* Section 2. As 29 is amended by adding a new chapter to read:

CHAPTER ____ NATIVE VILLAGE GOVERNMENTS

Sec. 29 --. 010. NATIVE VILLAGE GOVERNMENTS. The State of Alaska hereby recognizes Native Villages as distinct, independent, political communities exercising original tribal soverienty in dependent association with the United States. Any Native village ordinance or custom heretofore or hereafter adopted by the duly constituted Native village government, in the exercise of any authority which it may possess shall, if not inconsistent with any applicable law or constitutional provision of the State of Alaska, be given full force and effect within the Alaska State Courts, provided that such Court shall have jurisdiction to hear such cause as a result of the withdrawal of federal jurisdiction pursuant to P.L. 83-280 (67 Stat. 588), as amended by P.L. 85-615 (72 Stat. 545).

Sec. 29.--. 020. ELIGIBILITY FOR STATE PROGRAMS. A Native village government, for a village which is not incorporated under this title, and is not located within an organized borough is,

a) eligible to participate in all state programs to the same extent and in the same manner as a second-class city;

b) entitled to notice concerning proposed actions by the state to the same extent as a government of a second-class city is entitled to notice; and

c) entitled to consultation with the state on state actions and programs which affect the village to the same extent that the government of a second-class city is consulted on state actions and programs.

Sec. 29.--.030. AGREEMENTS.

(a) A Native village government or a group of Native village governments may negotiate agreements with the Commissioner regarding coordination of state and Native village facilities and services which may include judical, law enforcement, and correction services.

(b) When the Commissioner negotiates an agreement under this section, he shall first consult with the head of each principal executive department which may be affected by the agreement. The Commissioner shall next submit the proposed agreement to the Governor. The Governor may approve the agreement and upon approval of the agreement shall define the respective responsibilities of the state and of the Native village government during the period of time covered by the agreement.

Sec. 29.--.040. NONDISCRIMINATION.

(a) A Native village government which is a party to an agreement under AS 29.--.030 may not adopt a rule or operate a program which creates or extinguishes a benefit, liability, privilege, immunity or license dependent upon racial classification or membership in a Native tribe, clan or organization, except that a Native village government may participate in federally funded programs which provide services to persons or organizations because of their status as Native persons or Native organizations. Violation of this section renders an agreement entered into under AS 29.--020 void.

(b) The Governor may withdraw recognition of a Native village government authorized under AS 29.--.010 whenever he shall make a determination that the Native Village government has adopted a rule or operates a program which creates or extends a benefit, liability, privilege, immunity or license dependent upon racial classification or membership in a Native tribe, clan or organization, except that such determination may not be dependent on a Native village government's operation or participation in programs funded exclusively by federal or tribal funds which provide services to persons or organizations because of their status as Native persons or Native organizations.

(c) Actions and determinations made under this section shall be made in accordance with the Alaska Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62).

Sec. 29.--.050. LIMITATIONS. Nothing in this chapter authorizes the alienation, encumbrance, or taxation of real or personal property, including water rights, belonging to a Native person or village that is held in trust by the United States or is subject to a restriction against alienation imposed by the United States, or authorizes regulation of the use of property in a manner inconsistent with a federal treaty, agreement, statute, or regulation, or extends the jurisdiction of the state to adjudicate the ownership or right to possession of property. Nothing this this chapter deprives a Native person, Native village, or Native corporation of any right, privilege, or immunity afforded under federal or state treaty, agreement, or law, or alters the jurisdiction of the state, its political subdivisions, or a Native village government. Nothing in this chapter shall create in the state any trust obligation toward a Native person or Native organization because of their status as Native persons or Native organizations.

Sec. 29.--.060. DEFINITIONS. In this chapter,

(1) "Native person" means a person who meets the requirements for membership in a Native village or organization authorized, chartered or incorporated under the authority of a Native village government;

(2) "Native village government" means a local governing body organized by the authority of the Act of Congress of June 18, 1934, 25 USC, Sec. 476, or a traditional governing body of a Native village which meets the requirements of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act, 43 USC secs. 1601 et. seq.

(3) "Commissioner" means Commissioner of the Department of Community and Regional Affairs.

* Sec. 3. AS 29.48.010 (4) is amended to read:

(4) to enter into agreement, including those for cooperative or joint administration of any functions or powers with a local government, with the state, (OR) with the United States, or with a Native village government recognized under AS 29.--.010.

APPENDIX B

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act Relating to Native Village Governments Establishing Third Class Cities."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) The legislature has determined that,

(1) there exist within the state several communities which have Native village governments whose members are citizens of the state; and

(2) the law and customs of Native village governments include notions of democracy, liberty, and the exercise of personal rights consistent with the state and federal constitutions.

(b) It is the purpose of this Act to,

(1) extend recognition to Native village governments and encourage them in the administration of local government;

(2) Provide for incorporation of Native village.

(3) provide for cooperative agreements between the state government and Native village governments to promote the equitable delivery of state services.

* Section 2. As 29 is amended by adding a new chapter to read:

Not adopted 12/6/80

Sec. 29.33.200 MUNICIPAL PROPERTIES. (a) A municipality may acquire and hold real or personal property or interest in real or personal property. A municipality may sell lease or otherwise dispose of property no longer required for municipal purposes or to achieve a public purpose.

(b) Except as provided in (c) of this section, the assembly or council shall by ordinance establish a formal procedure for the sale, lease or disposition of real property or interest in real property. The ordinance shall require: (1) an estimated value of the property by a qualified appraiser or the assessor; (2) a notice of sale published in a newspaper of general circulation distributed within the municipality at least 30 days before the date of the sale, lease, or disposition, or if no such newspaper of general circulation exists, posted within that time in at least three public places in the municipality; (3) public auction or opening of sealed bids or lottery; and (4) other terms and conditions fixed by the assembly or council. However, no ordinance for the sale, lease, or disposition of real property or interest in real property valued at $25,000 or more is valid unless ratified by a majority of the qualified voters voting at a regular or special election at which the question of the ratification of the ordinance is submitted. Thirty days notice shall be given of the election and during that period the assembly or council shall have published at least once a week in a newspaper of general circulation distributed within the municipality a notice stating the time of the election and the place of voting. describing the property to be sold, leased or disposed of, giving a brief statement of the terms and conditions of the sale and the consideration, if any, and stating the title and date of passage of the ordinance. Notice shall also be given by posting a copy of it in at least three public places in the municipality at least 30 days before the election. If no newspaper of general circulation is distributed within the municipality, the notice given by posting is sufficient for the purposes of this section.

(c) When in the judgment of the assembly or council it is advantageous to the municipality, a municipality may by ordinance:

1) sell, lease, donate or exchange with the United States, the state, a Native village government or political subdivisions thereof real estate or other property or interests in such property;

2) establish a formal procedure for acquisition of real property or interests in real property from the state, or a village corporation formed pursuant to the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 USC 1601 et. seq.); or

3) sell, lease or dispose of real property or interests in real property to persons who agree to operate a beneficial new industry upon the terms and conditions the assembly or council considers advantageous to the municipality.

The provisions of this section shall not apply to acquisitions and disposals of real property or interests in real property made pursuant to this subsection.

(d) A deed, contract of sale, lease, or other instrument evidencing disposition by a borough of land or interest in land classified by the borough as agricultural land shall include, among other terms, conditions and limitations which may be required by law or which the assembly may elect to include, a condition that the land is restricted to agricultural use. The assembly may not by subsequent action waive or abrogate the condition for a period of 50 years. An abrogation of the restriction to agricultural use after the 50-year period requires the consent of any party having an interest in the land. The assembly shall provide for enforcement by appropriate legal means, including but not limited to forfeiture of the purchaser's interest for violation of the condition.

(e) For the purposes of this section, a Native village government is a government organized under the Indian Reorganization Act (49 Stat. 1250 as amended) or a traditional Native government for a community eligible for benefits under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act. (43 USC 1601 et. seq.).

COMMENTS

This redraft of 29.48.260 solves several problems which occur under current law.

1) The new section is reorganized to state a general principle governing disposals (subsection b) and gathers together all the exceptions (subsection c). Under this version, the ambiguity which arose in the Libby case is eliminated and it becomes clear that the rule regarding disposals does not apply to any exception.

2) Adds disposals for public purposes to current authorization for surplus disposals.

3) Clarifies that posting notice is acceptable only when no newspapers of general circulation exists.

4) Clarifies that disposals accepted from the general rule must also be made pursuant to an ordinance.

5) Clarifies that disposals of land to a Native government is authorized in light of controversy as to whether a Native Government is a federal instrumentality.

6) Provides for exception for management of 14(c)(3) lands similar to municipal land grants. Currently existing and future cities for ANCSA communities will not receive municipal land grants. Instead they will receive 14(c)(3) reconveyances. There is no logical reason to distinguish the two types of municipal land grants.

7) Overrules Libby case.

ARTICLE 2. MUNICIPAL LEGISLATIVE BODIES

Sec. 29.24.050. GENERAL LEGISLATIVE POWER. The legislative power of a borough is vested in the assembly. The legislative power of a city is vested in the council.

EXPLANATION: The second sentence is added. Rather than dealing with assemblies in one article and councils in another, this article will deal with both legislative bodies. No substantive change.

Sec. 29.24.125. CITY COUNCIL COMPOSITION. Each first class city has a council of six members elected by the voters at large. Each second class city has a council of seven members elected by the voters at large. The council of a first or second class city may by ordinance provide for election of members other than on an at-large basis for all members.

EXPLANATION: This section contains material now found in AS 29.23.200(a). The material currently in (b) has been moved to the section on qualifications. No substantive change.

Sec. 29.24.140. QUALIFICATIONS. (a) A borough voter is eligible to be a member of the assembly and a city voter is eligible to be a member of the council. A member of the assembly who ceases to be a qualified borough voter forfeits his office. A member of the council who ceases to be a qualified city voter forfeits his office.

(b) A legislative body may by ordinance establish a durational residency requirement for its members not to exceed three years.

(c) An assembly or council member who represents an area less than that of the total borough or city and who becomes a resident of another area within the municipality may continue to serve until the next regular election unless provided otherwise by ordinance.

(d) A municipality may by ordinance establish district residency requirements for members of its legislative body.

EXPLANATION: The qualification for members of the council or assembly are combined since they are identical. Subsection (c) has been altered to allow a municipality the flexibility of providing otherwise by ordinance. Subsection (d) has been added to allow a municipality to impose additional district residency requirements.

Sec. 29.24.145. TERM OF OFFICE. (a) Assembly and council members are elected for three year terms and until their successors have qualified unless different terms are prescribed by charter or ordinance.

(b) Except when otherwise required by a change in composition or apportionment, if the term of a member of a legislative body is changed by charter or ordinance the term of an official holding office at the time the change becomes effective is not affected.

(c) The regular term of office begins on the first Monday following certification of the election, unless a different date is prescribed by charter or ordinance.

EXPLANATION: The term of both assembly and council members is combined into one section. Under existing law different terms not exceeding four years may be prescribed. The four year maximum has been eliminated for greater flexibility. The section is no longer mandatory for home rule municipalities.

Sec. 29.24.150. PROCEDURES OF LEGISLATIVE BODIES. (a) The assembly shall elect from among its members a presiding officer and a deputy presiding officer to serve at the pleasure of the members, except that in a borough which has adopted the manager form of government under AS 29.24.550, the mayor serves as presiding officer. In a city the mayor serves as presiding officer. If the presiding officer is not present or disqualifies himself, the deputy presiding officer shall preside.

(b) A municipal legislative body shall hold at least one regular meeting every month, unless otherwise provided by ordinance. A special meeting may be held at the call of the presiding officer or at least one-third of the members provided a majority of the members are given at least 24 hours oral or written notice and reasonable efforts are made to notify all members. A special meeting may be conducted with less than 24 hours notice if all members are present or if absent members have waived in writing the required notice. Waiver of notice can be made before or after the special meeting is held. A waiver shall be made a part of the journal for the meeting.

(c) A majority of the total membership of a legislative body authorized by law shall constitute a quorum. A member disqualified by law from voting on a question may be considered present for purposes of constituting a quorum. In the absence of a quorum, any number of members may recess or adjourn the meeting to a later date.

(d) Actions of a legislative body are adopted by a majority of members authorized to vote on the question. All members present shall vote on every question unless they are required to abstain from voting on a question by law. The final vote on every ordinance, resolution or substantive motion shall be recorded "yes" or "no", except that if the vote is unanimous it is necessary only to so state.

(e) A legislative body shall maintain a journal of its official proceedings which shall be a public record.

(f) A legislative body may, consistent with law or charter, determine by ordinance its own rules of procedure and order of business.

Sec. 29.24.150.

EXPLANATION: Combines the procedures to be followed by both assemblies and councils. Allows a special meeting to be held if a majority of members receive actual notice whereas existing law allows for a meeting only if all members receive notice and if an emergency exists. Reference to the fact that meetings are public is deleted because that requirement is contained in AS 29.24.020. A requirement that the journal maintained by the legislative body be public was added in (e). The material concerned with the expulsion of members for committing a corrupt practice was moved to AS 29.23.070.

Sec. 29.24.160. DEPARTMENTS. Repeal

EXPLANATION: The material contained in this section is placed in an article dealing with municipal departments and employees.

Sec. 29.24.170. VACANCIES. The legislative body shall provide by ordinance the manner in which a vacancy occurs in any elected office except the office of mayor. Unless otherwise provided by ordinance the legislative body may declare an elective office vacant when the person elected

(1) fails to qualify or take office within 30 days after his election or appointment;

(2) unless excused by the assembly or council, is absent for 90 days;

(3) resigns and his resignation is accepted;

(4) is physically or mentally unable to perform the duties of his office;

(5) if a member of the assembly or council, misses three consecutive regular meetings unless excused;

(6) is convicted of a felony or of an offense involving a violation of his oath of office; or

(7) is convicted of a felony or misdemeanor described in AS 15.56 as a corrupt practice and two-thirds of the members concur in expelling him.

EXPLANATION: Allows the legislative body to provide the manner in which a vacancy occurs for all elected offices except for the office of mayor. If the body does not provide by ordinance situations which result in the vacancy of an office, the seven listed situations will result in a vacancy.

Sec. 29.24.175. FILLING A VACANCY. If a vacancy occurs in a legislative body, the remaining members shall within 30 days appoint a qualified person to fill the vacancy. The person shall serve until the next regular election, at which time a successor shall be elected to serve the balance of the term. If less than 30 days remain in a term, a vacancy shall not be filled.

(b) Notwithstanding subsection (a), if the membership is reduced to fewer than the number required to constitute a quorum, the remaining members shall within seven days appoint a number of qualified persons to constitute a quorum.

EXPLANATION: Contains material currently found in AS 29.23.080 and 29.23.220. Provides that no appointment shall be made where less than 30 days remain in a term. Subsection (b) was added to insure that a legislative body will be able to continue to function if the number of vacancies which occur destroys the possiblity of achieving a quorum.

ARTICLE 3. MUNICIPAL EXECUTIVE

Sec. 29.24.200. EXECUTIVE POWER. (a) The executive power within a municipality is vested in a mayor elected by the voters or by the legislative body as provided in this article.

(b) The mayor shall act as ceremonial head of government, execute official documents upon authorization of the legislative body, and is responsible for additional duties and powers prescribed by ordinance.

EXPLANATION: Under current law the executive and administrator are dealt with in one article. It is proposed that one article deal with executive functions and a separate article deal with administrative functions. Therefore, this section eliminates the material dealing with administrative functions.

Sec. 29.24.205. ELECTION AND TERM OF MAYOR. (a) The mayor of a borough or first class city is elected at large. The mayor of a second class city is elected by and from the council.

(b) A mayor shall serve a term of three years unless by ordinance a different term not to exceed four years is provided, except that the current term of an incumbent mayor may not be altered. The regular term of a mayor commences on the first Monday following certification of his election. The council of a second class city shall meet on the first Monday after certification of the regular election and elect a mayor who takes office immediately.

EXPLANATION: This new section contains material currently found in AS 29.23.130(c) and 29.23.250. No substantive changes.

Sec. 29.24.206. QUALIFICATIONS FOR THE OFFICE OF MAYOR. (a) A voter of a borough or first class city is eligible to hold the office of mayor. A member of a city council for a second class city is eligible to hold the office of mayor in that city.

(b) Residency requirements for the office of mayor not exceeding three years may be prescribed by ordinance.

EXPLANATION: This section contains material now appearing in AS 29.23.130(b) and 29.23.250. No substantive change.

Sec. 29.24.210. POWERS AND DUTIES OF MAYOR. (a) If a municipality has not adopted the manager form of government, the administrative power is vested in the mayor and the mayor has the same powers and duties as those of the manager.

(b) The mayor may take part in the discussion of all matters before the assembly or council.

(c) The mayor may not vote on any matter before the assembly or council, except that the mayor of a first class city may vote in the case of a tie and the mayor of a second class city may vote on all matters as a council member.

EXPLANATION: This section contains material currrently found in AS 29.23.130(a), AS 29.23.260, and AS 29.23.160. No substantive change.

Sec. 29.24.240. VETO. (a) Except as provided in subsections (c) and (d), the mayor may veto any ordinance, resolution, motion, or other action of the legislative body and may strike or reduce appropriation items.

(b) A veto must be exercised before the next regular meeting of the legislative body and must be accompanied by a written explanation of the reasons for that action. A veto may be overridden by vote of two-thirds of the authorized membership of the legislative body within 21 days following exercise of the veto or at the next regular meeting, whichever is later.

(c) The veto does not extend to

(1) appropriation items in a school budget ordinance;

(2) actions of the Board of Equalization or the Board of Adjustment;

(3) adoption or repeal of the manager form of government.

(d) The mayor of a first class city has no veto power.

EXPLANATION: Contains material currently found in AS 29.23.170, 29.23.260, and 29.23.270. Adds a time period within which a veto must be overridden.

Sec. 29.24.250. VACANCY IN THE OFFICE OF MAYOR. (a) The assembly or council shall provide by ordinance the manner in which a vacancy occurs in the office of mayor. Unless otherwise provided by ordinance the legislative body may, upon two-thirds concurring vote, declare the office of mayor vacant when the person elected

(1) fails to qualify or take office within 30 days after his election or appointment;

(2) unless excused by the assembly or council, is absent for 90 days;

(3) resigns and his resignation is accepted;

(4) is physically or mentally unable to perform the duties of his office;

(5) if a member of the assembly or council, misses three consecutive regular meetings unless excused;

(6) is convicted of a felony or of an offense involving a violation of his oath of office; or

(7) is convicted of a felony or misdemeanor described in AS 15.56 as a corrupt practice.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (c), a vacancy in the office of mayor occuring six months before a regular election shall be filled by the legislative body. The person appointed shall serve until the next regular election and until a successor is elected and has qualified. If a member of the legislative body is chosen, he shall resign his seat on the assembly or council. If a vacancy occurs more than six months before a regular election, the legislative body shall call a special election to fill the unexpired term.

(c) In a second class city, the office of mayor is filled by and from the council.

EXPLANATION: This section is enlarged to deal with a vacancy occuring in the office of city as well as borough mayor. Allows the legislative body to establish the manner in which a vacancy occurs in the office of mayor and supplies situations which may result in vacancy if the body does not pro an alternative.

29.30.220 Grounds. Grounds for recall are Failure to perform to the satisfaction of petitioners
(1) violation of an ordinance, law, or regulation made applicable to the official by his candidacy for or holding of such elected office,

(2) judicially declared incompetence arising out of a medical or mental condition, or

(3) failure to perform a duty of the office prescribed by ordinance, law, or regulation.

(This section requires a submission of an application to the clerk for a petition for recall. As provided in a later section, the clerk will provide the recall petition forms. The application procedure is necessary as a part of a new, proposed procedure whereby the official who is the subject of the petition will be given an opportunity to have his statement answering the accusation placed upon the petition before it is circulated.)

(This continues the current 60 day signature gathering period. It also clarifies the election which is to be used as a standard for determining the number of signatures required. It is proposed that a state election be used. Prior to the 1972 revision of Title 29, the last gubernatorial election was the standard.)

29.30.260 Sufficiency of Petition. (a) Within ten days of the date the petition is file, the municipal clerk shall certify on the petition whether or not it is sufficient.

(b) If the petition is insufficient, it may be supplemented within ten days with additional signatures which are obtained within ten days after the date on which the petition is rejected. If the petition is insufficient for any other reason, it shall be rejected and filed as a public record.

Add - No 10 days if petition invalid on its face

(c) Within ten days after the supplementary filing, the clerk shall recertify the petition. If it is still insufficient, the petition is rejected and filed as a public record.

(The only significant change to the corresponding section of the present law is that the proposed section makes it clear that signatures for the supplementary filing must be those which are gathered during the ten day period after the petition is first rejected.)

29.30.270 New Application. The rejection of a petition for failure to contain sufficient signatures or for any other reason does not preclude the filing of a new application for a recall petition. However, a new application may not be filed sooner than six months after a petition is rejected.

(The only significant change is to prohibit a new petition if the prior petition was rejected for any reason in addition to rejection for insufficient signatures.)

29.30.280 Submission. If a recall petition is sufficient, the clerk shall submit it to the assembly or council at its next regular meeting.

(No significant change.)

29.30.290 Challenge of Petition. (a) The officer who is the subject of a recall petition submitted to the assembly or council may, within 30 days of the date the petition is filed with the assembly or council, file an action in the superior court for a determination of any of the following questions:

(1) Whether any of the grounds for recall stated are not grounds under §220.

Anyone can do this -

(2) Whether any of the acts alleged do not constitute one or more of the permitted and alleged grounds.

(3) Whether one or more of the accepted signatures should be rejected.

(b) Upon a finding that any of the acts alleged do not constitute a permissible and alleged ground or that any grounds alleged are not grounds set forth in §220 or that sufficient accepted signatures should have been rejected to cause the petition to be insufficient, or for any other reason which the court finds appropriate, the court shall order the petition rejected and shall order the name of the officer subject to the rejected petition to be removed from the ballot.

(c) If an officer who is the subject of a recall petition submitted to the assembly or council files suit under this section, no recall election may be held for the officer who has filed the suit nor for any other officer who is the subject of a recall petition until after the time for appeal of the superior court judgment has passed.

(I believe the foregoing is relatively clear on its face.)

29.30.300 Election. (a) If a regular election occurs within 75 days, but not sooner than 40 days of the later of either the submission to the assembly of a certified petition or the passage of the time for appeal of a judgment in a suit filed under §290, the assembly or council shall submit the recall at that election.

(b) If no regular election will occur within such time, the assembly or council shall hold a special election within 75 days, but not sooner than 40 days after, the later of the submission of a certified petition or the expiration of the time for the appeal of a judgment of a suit brought under §290.

(c) If a vacancy occurs in the office after a sufficient recall petition is filed with the clerk, the petition shall not be submitted to the voters. However, the assembly or council may not appoint to such a vacancy the officer who resigns from that office after a sufficient recall petition is filed.

(The 40 day minimum was added to insure that a petition submitted after the legal notices of the election were published would not complicate the election and that the election would not be held before the 30 days during which the official has to file suit. Added in section (c) is the prohibition against the appointment of an officer who resigns after a sufficient recall petition is filed.)

29.30.310 Form of Recall Ballot. A recall ballot shall contain:

(1) the grounds as stated in 200 words or less in the recall petition;

(2) the officer's statement of 200 words or less if the statement is filed with the clerk for publication and public inspection within 20 days before the election, otherwise the statement of the officer, if any, which appeared in the recall petition;

(3) the following question: "Shall (name of person) be recalled from the office of (office)? Yes [ ] No [ ]".

(The only significant change is to make reference to the fact that the statement of the grounds is limited to 200 words and also to provide that the statement of the officer which was used in the recall petition will appear on the ballot unless the officer provides a different statement.)

29.30.320 Election Procedure. Procedures for conducting a recall election are those of a regular municipal election if the question is submitted at a regular election; otherwise, the procedures shall be those applicable to a special municipal election. [Except that 10 days notice will be required notwithstanding municipal procedure to the contrary]

(This section was changed to make reference to special election procedures if the election is a special election.)

29.30.330 Majority Required. A majority of those voting on the question must vote in favor of recall to recall an officer. Only those voters in the district or area which elects the officer may vote on the recall of the officer.

(This merely restates in different language the majority vote requirement. The section also adds a new sentence which makes it clear that if the officer is elected by the voters of a district, then only the voters in that district will vote on the recall question.)

29.30.340 Effect. If a majority of those voting on the question vote to recall the officer, the officer's seat shall become vacant immediately upon certification of the result of the election on the question. If an incumbent is not recalled at the recall election, a new application for a recall petition on the same incumbent may not be filed sooner than six months after the date of the certification of the recall election.

(The first sentence is added to this section to make it clear precisely when a recalled officer looses his seat. The second sentence has been slightly changed to peg the commencement of the six month period as the date of certification of the election results.)

29.30.350 Successors. (a) If one or more officers are recalled from an assembly or council, the assembly or council, by the affirmative vote of a majority of the remaining members, may appoint qualified persons to fill any vacancy created by the recall.

(b) If all members of the assembly or council are recalled, the governor shall appoint at least three qualified persons to the assembly or council. Such appointees, by an affirmative vote of a majority of the appointees, shall appoint such additional members as are required to fill any remaining vacancies.

(c) If one or more officers are recalled from a school board or from a body created by the assembly or council, then the assembly or council may appoint such qualified persons as it deems necessary to fill any vacancy created by the recall.

(d) A person appointed to fill a vacancy under sections (a) through (c) shall serve until a successor is elected, qualified, and takes office.

(e) If the voters recall an officer, the clerk shall conduct an election for a successor to fill the unexpired term. The election shall be held at least ten but not more than 60 days from the date of the certification of the recall election. However, if a regular or special election occurs within 75 days of the certification of the recall election and the certification occurs at least 20 days prior to the latest date upon which first notice of the election must be published, the successor to the recalled official shall be chosen at that regular or special election. The procedures and requirements for the regular election for the office from which the incumbent is recalled apply to the election conducted under this section; provided, nominations may be filed until the later of seven days before the latest date upon which first notice of the election must be published or the deadline for the filing of nominations for regular elections. Nominations may not be filed before the certification of the recall election.

(Sections (a) through (d) are new and are submitted to prevent a local government from having to attempt to operate without a quorum of elected officers. Section (e) was changed to take into account times required for election notice and nominations.)

TITLE 29 REVISION

PROPOSAL FOR INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM
(Formerly AS 29.28.060-110)

October 20, 1980

29.30.090 Reservation of Powers. The powers of initiative and referendum are reserved to the residents of municipalities except the powers do not extend to matters restricted by §7, art. XI of the State Constitution.

(Unchanged.)

29.30.095 Application. An initiative or referendum is proposed by an application containing the legislative matter to be initiated or referred. The application shall be signed by not less than ten qualified voters as sponsors, shall contain the address to which all correspondence relating to the application may be sent, and shall be filed with the clerk. The clerk shall certify the application if he finds that the application is in proper form, and in addition, if the application is for an initiative, that the matter to be initiated is not restricted by §90, embraces only a single subject, and as to each part, would not be unenforceable as a matter of law. The clerk's certification or denial of certification shall be subject to judicial review.

(This section is new. The first part is modeled after §2 of the initiative article in the state constitution. As drafted, this section would also make it clear that the clerk is to review initiatives for substantive legality and that the clerk's decision is subject to appeal. This procedure will allow for a judicial determination of the legality of an initiative prior to the expense of an election.)

Within 2 weeks

29.30.110 Petition. After certification of the application, a petition, containing a summary of the subject matter shall be prepared by the clerk for circulation by the sponsors. The petition shall

(1) set out fully the ordinance or resolution sought to be initiated or referred by the petition;

(2) state upon the petition the date first issued by by the clerk;

(3) contain the statement, when circulated, that the signatures on the petition must be secured within 60 days of the date first issued;

(4) contain spaces for the required signatures, the printed name of each person signing the petition, the date of each signature, and both the resident and the mailing address of each signer;

(5) contain a statement to be signed and sworn to by the circulator stating the number of signatures on the petition page or pages, that the circulator personally circulated the page or pages, that all signatures were affixed in his presence, that he believes them to be genuine signatures of the persons whose names they purport to be, that each signer had an opportunity before signing to read the full text of the proposed initiative or referred measure, and that he believes each signer to be a qualified municipal voter.

(This section would require the clerk to provide the petition forms to the petitioners. This is similar to the requirement levied upon the Lieutenant Governor in state initiative proceedings. The petition contents are essentially the same as present law (AS 29.28.065) with a shortening of the petition circulation time from 90 to 60 days, some expansion of the information the petition signers must provide, and the addition of the circulator's affidavit in (5) of the section.)

29.30.120 Required Signatures. (a) The necessary signatures on a petition shall be secured within 60 days of the date the clerk first issues the petition. The petition shall be signed in ink or indelible pencil.

(b) Every petition, whether dealing with an areawide or a non-areawide matter, shall be signed by a number of registered voters residing within the territorial limits of the municipality equal to ~~25~~ 10 leave as is 15 Big Areas 25 small ones percent of the number of votes cast at the last regular municipal election in the municipality which was held on or prior to the date of the first issuance of the petition.

(c) Illegible signatures shall be rejected by the clerk unless accompanied by a legible printed name. Signatures not accompanied by a legible residence address shall be rejected.

(d) A petition signer may withdraw his signature upon written application to the clerk at any time prior to certification of the petition by the clerk.

(e) The petition pages shall be assembled and filed as a single instrument.

(This section carries forward the 60 day signature gathering period. Although it does not eliminate the possibility of an initiative or referendum on a matter which affects only a service area, it does require that such petitions contain the same number of signatures as a petition on an areawise matter. Permitting a service area to initiate and vote upon a matter on a service area basis is contrary to the concept of the service area being under the control of the entire legislative body. If service areas are permitted to initiate and vote upon service area only initiatives, service areas will have the authority to become essentially autonomous units of government without a governing body. Other minor changes were made to require rejection of signatures which were illegible or failed to have additional legible information accompanying the signature.)

29.30.130 Sufficiency of Petition. (a) Within ten days of the date the petition is filed, the municipal clerk shall certify on the petition whether or not it is sufficient.

(b) If the petition is insufficient, it may be amended or supplemented with additional signatures which are obtained within ten days after the date on which the petition is rejected as insufficient.

(c) Within ten days after the supplementary filing, the clerk shall recertify the petition. If the petition is still insufficient, the petition is rejected and filed as a public record.

(The only significant change is to make it clear that in providing supplementary signatures, the petitioners have only ten days to gather the signatures and may not use petition signatures which were gathered prior to the first filing but not submitted, and that they may not use signatures gathered during the period in which the clerk is checking the petition.)

29.30.140 Protest. If the clerk certifies the petition is insufficient, a signer of the petition may file a protest with the municipal executive within seven days after the certification and the municipal executive shall present the protest at the next regular meeting of the assembly or council which shall hear and decide the protest.

(No change.)

29.30.150 New Petition. Failure to secure sufficient signatures does not preclude the filing of a new application for an initiative or referendum petition. However, a new application for a petition may not be filed sooner than six months after the petition is rejected by the clerk.

(This section was changed slightly to take into account the application procedure and to indicate that the rejection from which the six months is counted is a rejection by the clerk, not a rejection which might be deemed to have occurred if the matter is appealed to the assembly and the assembly sustains the clerk's rejection.)

29.30.160 Presentation of Initiative. (a) When a petition seeks enactment of an ordinance or resolution within the powers of the assembly or council and not otherwise restricted by §90 of this chapter, the clerk shall present it to the assembly or council at its next meeting after certification. The assembly or council may reject the petition if it determines the subject matter of the initiative or referendum is within the restrictions of §90 of this chapter or is unlawful.

(b) An initative measure presented to the assembly or council and not rejected under section (a) shall be submitted to all the voters of the municipality at the next regular municipal election held more than 45 days after submission of the petition to the assembly or council, unless the assembly or council adopts substantially the same measure. If the assembly or council adopts substantially the same measure, the petition shall be void and the question shall not be submitted to the voters.

(c) The ordinance or resolution shall be published in full in the notice of the election but may be summarized on the ballot to indicate clearly the proposal submitted.

(The changes here allow for the submission of an initiative measure at any time during the year, but it would be placed before the voters at the first regular municipal election occuring 45 days after submission to the assembly or council, unless rejected for cause or adopted in substantially the same form as presented. It also requires an areawide vote whether the matter is areawide or non-areawide for reasons outlined above.)

29.30.170 Presentation of referendum. (a) When a petition seeks a referendum vote on a legislative ordinance or resolution, the clerk shall submit the ordinance or resolution to all the voters of the municipality at the next regular or special election unless the assembly or council repeals the ordinance or resolution to be referred. If no regular or special election occurs within 75 days of the certification of a sufficient petition by the clerk, the assembly or council shall hold a special election within 75 days of filing.

OK → (b) If a sufficient petition for referendum is certified before the effective date of the ordinance or resolution, the ordinance or resolution against which the petition is filed, ~~which is not in effect~~ shall be suspended pending the referendum on the matter. During the period of suspension, the assembly or council may not enact an ordinance or resolution substantially similar to the suspended measure but may repeal the suspended ordinance or resolution.

(c) If the assembly repeals the ordinance or resolution before the election, the petition shall be void and the referred measure shall not be placed before the voters.

(d) If a majority of those voting favor the repeal of the referred measure, it is repealed; otherwise, it remains in effect or, if suspended under section (b), it shall become effective upon certification of the election results by the assembly or council. Leave immediate effective date

(The ability to suspend an ordinance or resolution which had taken effect if a referendum petition was filed within 30 days of the passage of the ordinance or resolution has been deleted to avoid the apparent ability of a part of the voters to be able to exercise a temporary repeal of the measure. The reference to amending a charter by initiative or referendum was deleted as it is already covered under AS 29.13.080. This also requires submission of the question to the areawide voters for reasons outlined above.)

29.30.180 Effect. (a) The assembly or council may not, within two years of its effective date, repeal an ordinance or resolution adopted through the initiative process nor may it amend such an ordinance or resolution in a way to substantially modify or negate the effect of the successful initiative.

(b) If an ordinance or resolution against which a referendum is directed has been repealed by the assembly or council after a petition has been filed but before the referendum election, or if an ordinance or resolution is repealed by the voters in a referendum election, the council or assembly may not enact substantially similar legislation for a period of one year after the repeal. A measure which is repealed in a referendum election shall be repealed effective upon the certification of the election results by the assembly or council.

(c) An unsuccessful initiative or referendum precludes the filing of a new application for the same or substantially the same purpose sooner than six months after the initiative or referendum election results are certified by the assembly or council.

(Minor changes to make dates more certain and to accommodate the petition application process.)

The assembly, with or without the consent of the council may at any time revoke any or all powers or responsibilities delegated to a city council or subordinate body under this section.

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of (b) of this section the functions of planning, platting, and land use regulation within a first class or home rule city located more than 25 miles from the boundary of the Borough seat may be assumed and exercised exclusively by that city upon ratification by the qualified voters residing in the city of an ordinance of the city council proposing exercise of those powers by the city.

[adapted from AS 29.33.070]

Sec. 29.42.020. Planning commission. (a) By ordinance the assembly shall establish a planning commission consisting of not less than five persons appointed and confirmed as provided by law. (1) Zoning regulations which restrict or govern use of land and improvements by geographic districts;

(2) Construction, fire and life safety codes governing placement, erection and occupancy of structures;

(3) Land use permit systems designed to encourage specified uses and structures and to discourage others, or to minimize unfavorable externalaties of certain uses and structures.

Sec. 29.42.050. Appeals from administrative decisions. (b) By ordinance the assembly shall provide for appointment of hearing officers, or the composition, appointment and terms of office of a board of adjustment or other quasi judicial body established to hear appeals from administrative actions specified in (a) of this section and the assembly may define proper parties, prescribe evidentiary rules and standards of review and define remedies available to such bodies or hearing officers. (b) Appeals to the Superior Court under this section are administrative appeals and shall be governed by Rules of Court applicable to appeals from decisions of administrative agencies.

(c) Appeals are heard on the record established by the administrative agency, and the court may affirm, reverse, wholly or partly, the decision appealed from. Issues in proceedings under this section have preference over all other civil actions and proceedings.

[adapted from AS 29.33.130]

Sec. 29.42.070. Platting jurisdiction and power. (a) First and second class boroughs shall exercise the power to regulate platting and the subdivision of land on an areawide basis. By ordinance the assembly shall enact subdivision regulations:

(1) governing the form, size and other aspects of subdivision, dedications, and vacations of land;

(2) regulating dimensions and design features of lots or tracts;

(3) establishing strict width, arrangement, and right of way, including allowance for public access to lots and installation of street paving, curbs, gutters, sidewalks, sewers, water lines, drainage and other public utility facilities and improvements.

(4) requiring dedication of streets, rights of way, public utility easements and other areas deemed by the platting authority necessary for future public use.

(b) The assembly by ordinance shall establish a platting board to administer subdivision regulations adopted by the borough and perform other duties prescribed by law. The platting board may, in whole or in part, consist of members of the planning commission or of other municipal bodies, boards and commissions.

[adapted from AS 29.33.150]

Sec. 29.42.080. Application to state and political subdivisions. All subdivisions of land made by the state, its agencies, instrumentalities and political subdivisions are subject to the provisions of this chapter and AS 29.42.080 -- 29.42.170, or home rule ordinances or regulations governing subdivisions, and shall comply with ordinances and other local regulations adopted under this chapter and AS 29.42.080 -- 29.42.170, or under home rule authority, in the same manner and to the same extent as subdivisions made by private landowners.

Sec. 29.42.090. Waiver in certain cases. (a) The platting authority shall, in individual cases, waive the preparation, submission for approval, and recording of a plat upon satisfactory evidence that:

(1) each tract or parcel of land will have adequate legal and physical access by the public to a public highway or street;

(2) each parcel created is five acres in size or larger and that the land is divided into four or fewer parcels;

(3) the conveyance is not made for the purpose of, or in connection with, a present or projected subdivision development;

(4) no dedication of a street, alley, thoroughfare or other public area is involved or required.

(b) In other cases the platting authority may waive the preparation, submission for approval, and recording of a plat, if the transaction involved does not fall within the general intent of 29.42.080 -- 29.42.170 of this chapter and AS 40.15 if it is not made for the purpose of, or in connection with, a present or projected subdivision development which constitutes an isolated transaction and no dedication of a street, alley, thoroughfare, park or other public area is involved or required.

[AS 29.33.170]

Sec. 29.42.100. Procedure. (a) The platting board shall within 60 days of filing approve or disapprove the plat or shall return it to the applicant for modification or correction. If the board fails to act, the plat is considered approved and a certificate of approval shall be issued by the board on demand. The applicant for plat approval may consent to the extension of the period for action by the board. The board shall state on its record and in writing to the applicant its reason for disapproval of a plat.

(b) The platting board shall submit an approved plat to the district recorder in compliance with AS 40.15.010 -- 40.15.020.

Sec. 29.42.110. Information required. A plat shall show initial point of survey, original or reestablished corners and their descriptions, and actual traverse showing area of closure and all distances, angles and calculations required to determine initial point, corners and distances of the plat, as well as other information which may be required by ordinance.

[AS 29.33.180]

Sec. 29.42.120. Alteration of replat petition. No recorded plat may be altered or replatted except upon petition of the owners of a majority of the land affected by the application or replat or by the platting board. Re: Title 29 Review - Proposed Revisions to Chapter 53 "Municipal Assessment and Taxation"

Dear John.

In furtherance of our discussion this date, please find enclosed herewith the following:

(1) Draft of proposed revisions to existing chapter 53 (Assessments). Comments to each section indicate the purpose of each proposed change.

(2) Copy of mark-up of chapter 53 prepared by the Alaska Association of Assessing Officers.

(3) Tamara Cook's rewrite under date October 2, 1980, of the required exemptions provisions of existing section 29.53.020.

I would appreciate any observations or comments you may have regarding these proposed or other amendments to chapter 53.

As we also discussed, the major remaining area which I intend to address is the area relating to corrections, cancellations and refund of taxes which I believe will solve many problems currently confronting assessors and administrators of the tax provisions.

Yours very truly,

Russell W. Walker
Municipal Attorney

Enclosures

Sec. 29.45.030. Required exemptions. (a) The following property is exempt from general taxation:

(1) municipal, state or federally owned property, except that private leaseholds, contracts or other interest in the property shall be taxable to the extent of those interests;

(2) household furniture of the head of a family or a household [not exceeding $500 in value];

(3) property used exclusively for nonprofit religious, charitable, cemetery, hospital or educational purposes;

(4) property of a nonbusiness organization composed entirely of persons with 90 days or more of active service in the armed forces of the United States whose conditions of service and separation were other than dishonorable, or the property of the auxiliary of such organization;

(5) money on deposit;

(6) the real property of certain residents of the state to the extent and subject to the conditions provided in (e) of this section.

(7) real property to the extent and subject to the conditions provided in (j) of this section.

(b) "Property used exclusively for religious purposes" includes the following property owned by a religious organization:

(1) the residence of a bishop, pastor, priest, rabbi, minister or religious order of a recognized religious organization.

(2) a structure, its furniture and its fixtures used solely for public worship, charitable purposes, religious administrative offices, religious education or a nonprofit hospital;

(3) lots supporting and adjacent to a structure or residence mentioned in (1) or (2) of this subsection which are necessary to convenient use;

(4) lots required by local ordinance for parking near a structure defined in (2) of this subsection.

(c) Property described in (a) or (b) of this section from which income is derived is exempt only if that income is solely from use of the property by nonprofit religious, charitable, hospital or educational groups [for classroom space]. If used by nonprofit educational groups, the property is exempt only if used exclusively for classroom space.

(e) The real property owned and occupied as a permanent place of abode by a resident 65 years of age or over is exempt from taxation of the assessed value of the real property. Only one exemption may be granted with respect to the same property and, if two or more persons are eligible for an exemption with respect to the same property, the parties shall decide between or among themselves which shall receive the benefit of the exemption. No real property may be exempted under this subsection which the assessor determines, after notice and hearing to the parties concerned, has been conveyed to the applicant primarily for the purpose of obtaining the exemption. The determination of the assessor is appealable under AS 44.62.560-44.62.570.

(f) No exemption may be granted under (e) of this section except upon written application for the exemption on a form prescribed by the state assessor for use by local assessors. The claimant must file the application no later than January 15 of the assessment year for which the exemption is sought, but during the same year the governing body of the municipality for good cause shown may waive the claimant's failure to make timely application for the exemption for that year and authorize the assessor to accept the application as if timely filed. The claimant must file a separate application for each assessment year in which the exemption is sought. If an application is filed within the required time and is approved by the assessor, he shall allow an exemption in accordance with the provisions of this section. If a claimant whose failure to file by January 15 of the assessment year has been waived as provided in this subsection and the application for exemption is approved, the amount of tax which the claimant may have already paid for the assessment year with respect to the property exempted shall be refunded to him. The assessor may at any time require proof in the form he considers necessary of the right and amount of an exemption claimed under this section.

(g) The state shall reimburse a borough or city, as appropriate, for the real property tax revenues lost to it by the operation of (e) of this section. However, reimbursement will be made to a borough or city for revenue lost to it only to the extent that the loss exceeds an exemption which was granted by the borough or city, or which upon proper application by an individual would have been granted by the borough or city, under sec. 25(a) of this chapter.

(h) Except as provided in (g) of this section, nothing in (e)-(i) of this section affects similar exemptions from property taxes granted by municipalities on September 10, 1972 or prevents municipalities from granting similar exemptions by ordinance as provided in sec. 25 of this chapter.

(i) In (e)-(i) of this section the term "real property" includes but is not limited to mobile homes, whether classified as real or personal property for municipal tax purposes.

(j) Two percent of the assessed value of a structure is exempt from taxation if the structure contains a fire protection system approved under AS 19.70.081, in operating condition, and incorporated as a fixture or part of the structure. The exemption granted by this subsection is limited to

(1) an amount equal to two percent of the value of the structure based on the assessment for 1981, if the fire protection system is a fixture of the structure on January 1, 1981; or

(2) an amount equal to two percent of the value of the structure based on the assessment as of January 1 of the year immediately following the installation of the fire protection system if the fire protection system becomes a fixture of the structure after January 1, 1981.

Formerly: AS 29.53.020

Comments: Based on Alaska Association of Assessing Officers (AAAO) recommendation:

(1) Para. (a)(2): deletes $500 limit on exemption of household furniture;

(2) Para. (c): clarifies that "exclusively for classroom space" limitations on rental income under (c) only applies to rental use by an "educational group" and does not preclude the exemption when the income is derived from use by nonprofit religious, charitable, or hospital groups.

(3) Para. (f): clarifies filing of a claim for exemption is a requirement for only the senior citizen exemption under (e), and not for the other exemptions addressed in the section.

Sec. 29.45.050. Optional exemptions and exclusions.

(a) Municipalities may exclude or exempt or partially exempt residential property from taxation by ordinance ratified by the voters at a regular or special election. An exclusion or exemption authorized by this section may not exceed $10,000 for any one residence.

(b) Municipalities may by ordinance

(1) classify boats and vessels for purposes of taxation and may establish the assessed valuation of boats and vessels on the basis of their registered or certificated net tonnage; a tax based upon a tonnage valuation shall not exceed $5 a year for a boat or vessel of less than five net tons and shall not exceed $15 a year for a boat or vessel of more than five net tons;

(2) classify and exempt from taxation

(A) All or any portion of the household goods and furnishings in actual use by the owner thereof in equipping and outfitting his or her residence or place of abode and not for sale or commercial use, and all personal effects held by any person for his or her exclusive use and benefit and not for sale or commercial use. "Personal effects" shall be construed to mean and include such tangible property as usually and ordinarily attends the person such as wearing apparel, jewelry, toilet articles, and the like [the household furniture over $500 in value and the effects of the head of a family or a householder]; and

(B) the property of an organization not organized for business or profit-making purposes and used exclusively for community purposes, provided that income derived from rental of such property does not exceed the actual cost to the owner of the use by the renter; and

Comments: modifies and expands existing (a)(2)(A) relating to optional exemption of household furniture and effects. Based upon recommendation of AAAO since assessors currently do not include household furnishings and personal effects of family members.

Sec. 29.45.060. Mining claims. The assessed value of an unimproved unpatented mining claim which is not producing, and a nonproducing patented mining claim upon which the improvements originally required for patent have become useless and valueless through depreciation, removal or otherwise, is exempt [fixed at $200 for each 20 acres or fraction of 20 acres]. If the surface ground of a claim has a separate and independent value for nonmining uses, the real and personal property is assessed at its full and true value.

Formerly: AS 29.53.030

Comments: Deletes $200 valuation figure. AAAO recommends deletion since administrative costs exceed taxes to be realized in carrying property at $200 figure on roll.

Sec. 29.45.100. Tax limitations.

(a) No municipality may levy and tax for any purpose in excess of three percent of the assessed valuation of property within the municipality in any one year.

(b) No municipality, or combination of municipalities occupying the same geographical area, in whole or in part, may levy taxes (1) which will result in tax revenues from all sources exceeding $1,500 [$1,000] a year for each person residing within their boundaires or (2) upon values which, when combined with the value of property otherwise taxable by the municipality, exceed the product of 225 per cent of the average per capita assessed full and true value of property in the state multiplied by the number of residents of the taxing municipality. If two or more municipalities occupying the same geographical area, in whole or in part, attempt to levy a tax (1) the combined levy of which would result in tax revenues from all sources exceeding $1,500 [$1,000] a year for each person residing within their boundaries or (2) upon value which, when combined with the value of property otherwise taxable by the municipality, exceed the product of 225 per cent of the average per capita assessed full and true value of property in the state multiplied by the number of residents of the taxing municipality, the commissioner of community and regional affairs shall apportion the lawful levy and equitably divide these revenues on the basis of need, services performed and other considerations in the public interest. For the purpose of this subsection, population shall be determined by the commissioner or community and regional affairs based on the latest statistics of the United States Bureau of the Census or on other reliable population data. For purposes of this subsection the average per capita assessed full and true value of property in the state shall be calculated without regard to the assessed value of taxable property under AS 43.58.

Formerly: AS 29.53.050

Comments: Technical change requested by AAAO to conform with provisions of AS 29.53.045 (SLA 80)

Sec. 29.45.120. Full and true value.

(a) The assessor shall value [assess] property at its full and true value as of January 1 of the assessment year, except as provided in this section and sections 60 [30], 70 [35] and 240 [160] of this chapter. The full and true value is the estimated price which the property would bring in an open market and under the then prevailing market conditions in a sale between a willing seller and a willing buyer both conversant with the property and with prevailing general price levels.

(b) Assessment of business inventories may be based on the average monthly method of assessment rather than the value existing on January 1. The method used to assess business inventories shall be prescribed by the borough assembly.

(c) In case of cessation of business during the tax year, the assembly may provide for reassessment of business inventories using the average monthly method of assessment for the tax year rather than the value existing on January 1 of the tax year, and for reduction and refund of taxes. In enacting an ordinance authorized by this section, the assembly may prescribe procedures, restrictions, and conditions of assessing or reassessing business inventories and of remitting or refunding taxes.

Comments: Requested by AAAO

Sec. 29.45.180. Assessment notice.

(a) The assessor shall give every person named in the assessment roll a notice of assessment, showing the assessed value of his property. On each notice is printed a brief summary of the dates when taxes are payable, delinquent and subject to penalty and interest. [and the dates when the board of equalization will sit.]

(b) Sufficient assessment notice is given if mailed by first class mail 30 days before the equalization hearings. If the address is not known to the assessor, the notice may be addressed to the person at the post office nearest the property. Notice is effective on the date of mailing.

Deletes requirement that assessor include in the assessment notice the date the board of equalization will meet since many times assessors at that time do not know the dates at the time the notices are mailed. Based on the recommendation of AAAO.

Sec. 29.45.210. Board of Equalization. The assembly sits as a board of equalization for the purpose of hearing any appeal from determinations of the borough assessor, however, may delegate this authority to one or more boards appointed by it for that purpose. An appointed board may be composed of not less than three (3) persons, who may be members of the assembly, private individuals, or a combination thereof. [The board of equalization shall consist of at least that number of members of the assembly over and above the number required for a quorum to transact business.] The board is governed in its proceedings by such procedures consistent with general rules of administrative law and the laws governing equalization proceedings as may be adopted by ordinance, including but not limited to quorum and voting requirements. The assembly shall by ordinance establish the qualifications for membership and adopt rules of conduct of the board.

Formerly: AS 29.53.135

Comments: Change would clarify authority to establish boards of equalization composed of other than assembly members and by ordinance to establish qualifications. Deletion required to allow appointment of boards of three members or more which number may be less than number required for quorum of assembly.

Sec. 29.45.220. Hearing.

(a) If an appellant fails to appear, the board of equalization may proceed with the hearing in his absence.

(b) The appellant bears the burden of proof.

(c) The only grounds for adjustment is proof of unequal, excessive or improper valuation based on facts which are stated in a valid written appeal timely filed and [or] proved at the hearing.

(d) The board shall certify its actions to the assessor within seven days.

(e) The assessor shall enter the changes and certify the final assessment roll by June 1 except as to supplementary assessments.

(f) [an] The appellant and the assessor may appeal the board's action to the superior court as provided by rules of court applicable to appeals from the decisions of administrative agencies. Appeals are heard on and limited to the record established at the hearing before the board of equalization. [for, and is entitled to, trial de novo of the board's action. Either party to the appeal may demand a jury trial].

Formerly: AS 29.53.140

Comments:

(1) Para. (c): Based on recommendation of AAAO, substitutes and for or to assure must set forth factual grounds in written appeal and prove at hearing;

(2) para. (e): Based on recommendation of AAAO, clarifies that there may be further proceedings after June 1 in event there are supplementary assessments per former section 29.53.150;

(3) para. (f): deletes provisions regarding trial de novo and jury trial and limits scope of review to substantial evidence rule and clarifies confusion created by Winegardner v. Greater Anchorage Area Borough (534 P.2d 541)

Sec. 29.45.230. Supplementary assessment rolls. The assessor shall include property omitted from the assessment roll on a supplementary roll, using the procedures set out in this chapter for the original roll. Any supplementary roll must be finalized and certified on or before September 1 of the assessment year.

Formerly: AS 29.53.150

Comments: Recommended by AAAO. State assessor requires for his purposes all proceedings to be completed not later than September 1, including any supplemental assessments.

Sec. 29.45.440. Expiration.

(a) At least 30 days before the expiration of the redemption period the clerk shall publish a redemption period expiration notice. The notice shall contain the date of judgment, the date of expiration or the period of redemption and a warning to the effect that all properties ordered sold under the judgment, unless redeemed, shall be deeded to the borough or city immediately in expiration of the period of redemption and that every right or interest of any person in the properties will be forfeited forever to the borough or city. The notice is published once a week for four consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation distributed within the borough. If there is no newspaper of general circulation distributed within the borough, the notice is posted in three public places for at least four consecutive weeks. The clerk shall send a copy of the published notice by certified mail to each record owner of property against which a judgment of foreclosure has been taken and, if the assessed value of the property is more than $100,000 [$10,000], to all holders of mortgages or other liens of record on the property. The notice shall be mailed within five days of the first publication. The mailing shall be sufficient if mailed to the property owner and to the holder of a mortgage or recorded lien at the last address of record. The right of redemption shall expire 30 days after the date of the first publication notice.

(b) Costs incurred in the determination of holders of mortgages and other liens of record and costs of publication of notice incurred by a municipality under (a) of this section are a lien on the property and may be recovered by the municipality.

Formerly: AS 29.53.350

Comments: Based on recommendation of AAAO; raises assessed value of property which triggers duty of clerk to advise holders of security of judgment of foreclosure.

(a) The assembly or council shall provide by ordinance the procedure for the nomination of elected officers by [PROVIDING FOR] declaration of candidacy, or petition requiring the signatures of not more than 10 [VOTERS] ~~qualified electors~~ voters, or both.

(b) A person may be nominated for and occupy more than one office, but he may not serve simultaneously as borough mayor and as a member of the borough assembly or as mayor and as a member of the council of a first class city.

Lee Sharp suggests that it should be left to local option as to whether the mayor in a manager-type municipality should be permitted to be a member of the legislative body so long as he does not have the veto power. If the Committee supports this suggestion, (b) should be amended.

A home rule city levying property taxes for schools, upon furnishing proof satisfactory to the Department of Education and the Department of Community and Regional Affairs of the needs for school facilities which, if provided, will require the city to exceed limits on authorizing or issuing bonds which may be established by charter, may exceed the limits to the extent necessary to pay costs of school construction. In this section "costs of school construction" means costs as defined in AS 43.18.100(g)(2).

SEC. 29.58.350. BOND GUARANTEE FUND. (a) To guarantee payment by the state of the principal and interest of bonds issued under the enabling authority of § 345 of this chapter, there is in the Department of Community and Regional Affairs a special fund called the local school bond guarantee fund in which there shall be deposited all money appropriated by the legislature for the purpose of the fund and other money which may be made available for the purpose of the fund from any other source. Money in the fund shall be held and applied solely to further guarantee and provide an additional pledge of payment of all bonds issued under the provisions of § 345 of this chapter. Money shall not be withdrawn from the fund if a withdrawal would reduce the amount in the fund to an amount equal to less than the "maximum debt service reserve" (as defined in this section), except for payment of interest then due and payable on bonds and the principal of bonds then maturing and payable and for the retirement of bonds in accordance with the terms of a contract between the municipality and its bondholders and for the payments on account of which interest or principal or retirement of bonds other money is not then available in accordance with the terms of the contract. In this section "maximum debt service reserve" means, as of any date of computation, the largest amount of money required by the terms of all contracts between municipalities and their bondholders as to bonds issued under § 345 of this chapter to be raised in any succeeding calendar year for the payment of interest on and maturing principal of outstanding bonds and payments required by the terms of the contracts to sinking funds established for the payment or redemption of the bonds, all calculated on the assumption that bonds will cease to be outstanding after the date of the computation by reason of the payment of bonds at their respective maturities and the payments of the required money to sinking funds and the application of the money in accordance with the terms of the contracts to the retirement of bonds.

(b) Money in the guarantee fund at any time in excess of the maximum debt service reserve, whether by reason of investment or otherwise, may be withdrawn by the department and transferred to the general fund.

(c) Money at any time in the guarantee fund may be invested in any direct obligation of, or obligations as to which principal and interest is guaranteed by, the United States, the state or a political subdivision.

(d) For purposes of valuation, investments in the guarantee fund shall be valued at the lowest of the par value, cost to the authority, or market value of the investments. Valuation on any particular date shall include the amount of interest then earned or accrued to that date on any money or investments in the fund.

(e) Other provisions of this section notwithstanding, no bonds may be issued carrying the guarantee provided in this section unless there is in the guarantee fund the maximum debt service reserve for all bonds then issued and outstanding and the bonds about to be issued, but nothing prevents or precludes a municipality from satisfying the foregoing requirement by depositing so much of the proceeds of the bonds about to be issued, upon their issuance, as is needed to achieve the maximum debt service reserve.

(f) In order to assure the maintenance of the maximum debt service reserve in the guarantee fund, there is authorized to be appropriated annually and paid to the authority for deposit in the fund, the sum, if any, that is certified by the commissioner of community and regional affairs to the governor as necessary to restore the fund to an amount equal to the maximum debt service reserve. The chairman shall annually, before December 2, deliver to the governor his certificate stating the sum, if any, required to restore the fund to that amount, and the sum so certified is authorized to be appropriated and paid to the fund during the then current state fiscal year.

(g) Nothing in this section may be considered to cause bonds, payment of which is guaranteed from money in the fund established under this section, to be in any way a debt or liability of the state or any political subdivision of the state other than the political subdivision issuing the bonds, and the bonds, whether or not payable from the maximum debt service reserve created and established under this section, shall not create or constitute an indebtedness, liability or obligation of the state or be or constitute a pledge of the faith and credit of the state.

Agenda Suggestions from the Title 29 Working Group to the Title 29 Policy Group

1. Are unified municipalities home rule or general law? This needs to be clarified. They are boroughs - probably should not be spelled out of course they are home rule (29.68.240

2. We recommend that AS 29.08.050 Transition be repealed as out of date. yes -

3. We recommend that the statute concerning REAAs be expanded to include procedures for integrating REAAs into newly organized boroughs.

4. AS 29.18.180. Organization Grants. The dollar amounts of the organizational grants are inadequate. We recommend the amount be tripled.

5. AS 29.68.290 Nomination of charter commission candidates. Should a legislative body be authorized to make appointements to the charter commission in case of vacancies on the commission because of a failure to elect enough people?

6. AS 29.68.440. Powers of a unified municipality. What is a unified municipality? a borough

7. Should the percentage requirements for signatures on petitions be lowered?

8. AS 29.68.500 Methods of dissolution. The section regarding the methods of dissolution are confusing, in that the two methods outlined involve substantially the same processes. No - 29.68.500 recognizes case law interpreting sec 12 of Art X which overrides if Constitution chooses - see Fairview PUD v Anchorage 368 P2 540 and Odegaard v Fellingham

9. AS 29.13.050 Initiative and Referendum. This section should be clarified so that Home Rule municipalities are not bound by the procedures set out in the statute. why not - appears this should be by charter not ordinance. Charter could incorporate general law by reference

10. We need a more precise way of dealing with inconsistencies between Home Rule and state enactments. No

11. AS 29.13.100 Limitation of home rule powers. This "laundry list" of limitations on Home Rule needs to be reviewed. Should there be cross-referencing to the home rule provisions in other statutes? No - the question of the extent of home rule other than Title 29 could be very restrictive as to expansion to be afforded. Extant statute and decisions of state courts not precedent.

12. Chapter 18. Development cities. The chapter on development cities should either be reviewed and improved or deleted.

13. Chapter 23. Municipal Officers and Employees. This chapter should have provisions for dealing with the public records of municipalities. Municipalities should have a public records policy such as "except as provided by ordinance, all records shall be public." Freedom of Information Act for municipalities?

14. Should municipalities be allowed to set residency requirements for voters? Should the three year residency requirement for elected officials which municipalities are permitted to set be lowered to one year in view of Castner v. City of Homer, specifically upholding one year requirements? Yes

15. We feel there should be alternate methods for majority requirements of the votes of municipal assemblies.
Sounds like nonsense

16. AS 29.23.021 Assembly composition and apportionment. We feel there should be a greater delineation between composition and reapportionment. Not understood

17. There should be provisions for emergency situations arising when there is a lack of a quorum.

18. AS 29.48.130 (a) This should be amended to make possible budget transfers and supplemental appropriations by resolution instead ordinance. Budget transfers presently, appropriations by ordinance is long standing practice and nothing is to be allowing supplementals by resolution can make budget process meaningless. Any municipality should be able to handle matters.

19. What should mayoral veto powers encompass? Ordinances

20. How are planning responsibilities to be divided between cities and boroughs? Leave alone

21. We recommend that the sections of chapter 23 dealing with the involvement of young people in local government be repealed.

OK but will elect unnecessary fees

TITLE 29 REVISION COMMISSION
Policy Advisory Group Meeting

Minutes of September 29 & 30, 1980

The second meeting of the Policy Advisory Group of the Title 29 Revision Commission was held September 29, 1980 in Courtroom K of the Alaska Court System Building, 303 K Street, Anchorage, Alaska. The meeting was called to order by Senator Arliss Sturgulewski, Chairman, at 9:00 a.m.

Present as members of the Policy Group were: Senator Arliss Sturgulewski, Representative Charles H. Parr, Ronald Larson, Russell W. Walker, Marilyn Dimmick, Donna Sherby, Jonathan Solomon, James Kohler, Ted Berns, and Dennis Sheldon representing Terry Cook. Ex-Officio members present were Ginny Chitwood and Phil Smith. Richard Garnett, III was there as a member of the Technical Committee. Ted Berns and Russell Walker are members of both the Policy Group and the Technical Group. Present from the staff of Legal Services were Jack Chenowith and Tamara Cook.

There to make presentations to the Policy Group were C. Demming Cowles, Deputy Commissioner of the Department of Environmental Conservation; David Dye, Planner for the Department of Community and Regional Affairs; Dr. Fred McGinnis, Deputy Commissioner of the Department of Health and Social Services; Stephanie Scott, representing the Haines Borough Assembly; and Mike Walleri representing Tanana Chiefs, Inc.

Guests and members of the public attending were: Stuart Bowdoin, Bristol Bay Borough; Gary Bradford, Bristol Bay Borough, Glen Svendsen, Administrative Assistant, Senate Community and Regional Affairs Committee; Cris Fowler, AOGA Regulatory Reform Committee; Ray Menninger from Haines; Jim Bennett, researcher for AVCP (Calista Corporation); Ellen Greenburg, and Emily Larson.

After the meeting was called to order and guests introduced themselves, Commissioner Cowles began the presentations. He spoke regarding the functions of the Department of Environmental Conservation which could be locally done and raised policy questions about whether state or local government should be in charge of the following functions:

1. Water system and sewage disposal inspections.
2. Subdivision review of on-site sanitation capabilities.
3. Basic sanitation inspections of restaurants, hotels, etc.

4. Clean up of small oil spills.

5. The issuing of oily waste burn permits and surface oiling permits.

6. Litter control.

7. Vehicular emmissions control.

Changes to Title 29 would have to be made to allow for delegation of these powers. Commissioner Cowles suggested that the statutes could make it optional for small communities to assume these powers and provide for state reimbursement, because money for communities to perform these services is a problem.

Stephanie Scott representing the Haines Borough Assembly spoke next. The borough of Haines would like a clarification of the powers of third class boroughs. She reported that the Borough Chairman had the following recommendations to make:

1. Rewrite 29.48.260(e) to relieve procedural requirements under Libby vs. Dillingham.

2. Include inventories as optional exemptions from personal property taxation.

Ms. Scott stated there would be teleconference facilities available in Haines December 1, and there was a great deal of local interest in participating in a teleconference with the Policy Group.

David Dye, Planner III for the Department of Community and Regional Affairs made these recommendations from his division:

1. The law should be amended to allow municipal land exchanges with individuals. Municipal expansion land in some cases is located too far from the community to be used for municipal expansion. The definition of "municipal purpose" should be clarifed.

2. Subsection (c) of 29.48.260 sets out two procedural requirements for land disposal. Mr. Dye reccommends that lottery be added as an equitable way of disposing of land which is not based on wealth.

3. The provision for voter ratification of disposal of land valued at more than $25,000.00 should be changed to reflect current land values. A more realistic figure would be 50,000.00 to 100,000.00 dollars.

4. Subsection (d) of 29.48.260 exempts lands derived from the state from procedural requirements. C&RA suggests that exemption turn on the purpose of disposal, not the source of the land.

5. Under ANCSA, people who have occupied land after December 18, 1971 do not receive title to that land. C&RA would like a preference right for occupiers of land after that date to allow them to purchase land without having to bid.

6. Mr. Dye would like a definition of "official map".

7. The wording of AS 29.23.090 should be changed to substitute "land use regulation" for "zoning".

8. C&RA suggests that rather than a platting waiver provision, the section include a "short plat" provision to allow for additional platting requirements if the land were subsequently re-subdivided.

9. AS 29.33.070(b)(2) allows boroughs to delegate planning and zoning to cities. The Department of Community and Regional Affairs believes in consistent area-wide planning and wants only the delegation of enforcement and administration of planning.

10. The sections regarding Development Cities should be deleted.

Mike Walleri of Tanana Chiefs, Inc. spoke regarding municipal lands disposal and the need for preference to occupiers of land regarding purchasing rights. This should, however, be subject to the municipality's sanction of the use of the land. Mr. Walleri recommends a waiver of the requirements for land payments to the municipality, or that the state assist buyers in paying for the land. Tanana Chiefs would support a lottery system if the preference rights and waiver of payments to municipalities were included. Mr. Walleri spoke in favor of integrating traditional native governments into the municipal system, possibly through recognition by the state of the status of native governments as local state governments.

Dr. Fred McGinnis of the Department of Health and Social services told us that his department recommends the delegation of health powers to municipalities. If municipalities were to take over the providing of services, the DHSS would still receive federal funding, would disburse the funds, would audit programs, supervise, and be responsible to the federal government for the administration of the programs. He emphasized that these powers should be optional rather than mandatory, and that in the absence of local government being able to take over the function of health services, a local contractor could provide them.

After the presentations, the committee considered Old Business. Phil Smith gave a report on the conclusions of the Information Dissemination Committee. Their recommendations are: take advantage of scheduled meetings and conventions being held by interested groups; put inserts in newsletters; buy space in newspapers; and use the teleconference network. Mr. Smith reported that the Alaska Federation of Natives Convention will be making a room available for us at the Sheraton. Chairman Sturgulewski said a member of each group should be available to attend the AFN Convention. She also directed the Department of Community and Regional Affairs to prepare an article on the Title 29 revision project for newsletters.

Ted Berns gave a report from the Technical Committee. He explained the draft index of Title 29, saying the reorganization had been done by subject matter. Mr. Berns told the Policy Group that the Technical Group was now ready to start drafting and the group had broken up into smaller groups to work on specific changes.

Chairman Sturgulewski said the Policy Group would like justification of all drafted changes in the form of memos pointing out the pluses and minuses of each change.

Ted Berns suggested that the Policy Group go through the index section by section and determine policy questions.

The Policy Group reviewed the index until recessing at 4:30.

The meeting was called to order 30 September 1980 at 9:00 a.m. by Chairman Sturgulewski. With the exception of Bob Lohr sitting in for Phil Smith, the same members were present. Guests were: Bob Walker of Exxon; Cris Fowler of the AOGA Regulatory Reform Committee; David Dye from the Department of Community and Regional Affairs; Stephanie Scott, Ray Menninger, and Vivian Menniger from the Haines Borough; Glen Svendsen, Administrative Assistant to the Senate Community and Regional Affairs Committee; and Mike Walleri, Tanana Chiefs, Inc.

The Policy Group continued their review of the Title 29 index and the Technical Group was directed to make recommendations regarding the following:

1. AS 29.13.100. Review and make recommendations as to the limitations of home rule powers. Careful - this is probably the reason it was dropped by local activity unit

2. Edit the whole of Title 29 so that definitions are consistent. Yes

3. List those procedures which can be handled by ordinances. What does this mean?

4. Prepare drafts to change prohibitions on powers.

5. Draft changes to the statute regarding initiative and referendum. which way - pro popular (don't like them - out) or established changes? If so rule tough

6. Draft provisions for emergency situations arising from the lack of a quorum.

7. Redraft statute enabling budget actions to take place other than by ordinance. (Enable an individual municipality to set it's own limits.) Don't understand

8. Make recommendations regarding whether first class boroughs should be eliminated and consider the impact of this step. I feel this option should remain open.

9. Find out whether second class boroughs would still be able to implement a similar program if the statute about the Involvement of Young People in Local Government were to be deleted.

Chairman Sturgulewski directed that the Local Boundary Commission and Alan Tesche be invited to make a presentation in defense of retaining the statutes regarding Development Cities.

Probably not constitutional but not certain

Ron Larson moved the Policy Group retain the 3-year residency requirement for candidates for municipal office. The motion was seconded, Jim Kohler raised a point of order. The motion carried.

Marilyn Dimmick moved that the wording of the grounds for recall be deleted. The motion was seconded. Ron Larson moved to table the motion. Larson's motion failed. Ted Berns moved to postpone the motion until the next meeting. The motion for postponement passed.

Bob Lohr of RuralCAP was directed to come back with specific recommendations for the Technical Group regarding small communities and their problems.

The meeting was adjourned at 4:00 p.m.

Respectfully submitted,

LEGISLATIVE AFFAIRS AGENCY

MEMORANDUM September 25, 1980

SUBJECT: Proposed drafting change

TO: Advisory Policy Committee -
Title 29 Revision

FROM: Tamara Brandt Cook
Legislative Counsel

This is a proposed technical revision of AS 29.53.020 dealing with exemptions from property taxation but containing no important substantive legal changes. However, I wish to alert you to two changes which may have some substantative impact.

AS 29.53.020(e) currently contains the language

> Only one exemption may be granted with respect to the same property and, if two or more persons are eligible for an exemption with respect to the same property, the parties shall between or among themselves which shall receive the benefit of the exemption.

This sentence has been in subsection (e) since 1972, but its meaning is unclear. I checked with Mr. Lee Sharp, Municipal Attorney for Juneau, and Mr. Terry Early, State Assessor regarding the meaning of this provision. Both of them agreed with me that the section is unclear and Mr. Early advised me to check with an assessor to see how it has been applied in the field. I contacted Mr. Bob Howe, Juneau assessor, and he informed me that the sentence in question has been ignored as a practical matter. I also checked with the Department of Revenue and was informed that they rely upon information supplied by the boroughs in determining the amount of the state rebate, and therefore have not been interpreting this sentence themselves. Consequently, I have deleted this sentence from this draft.

In addition, I have deleted the subsection currently appearing as (h).

> Except as provided in (g) of this section, nothing in (e) - (i) of this section effect similar exemptions from property taxes granted by municipalities on September 10, 1972 or prevents municipalities from granting similar exemptions by ordinances as provided section 25 of this chapter.

I have omitted this subsection because it appears to be superfluous.

Lastly, I would like to draw your attention to the current subsection (c)

> Property described (a) or (b) of this section from which income is derived is exempt only if that income is solely from use of the property by nonprofit religious, charitable, hospital or education groups for classroom space. (Emphasis added).

If the policy behind allowing a tax exemption for property used by nonprofit organizations is to encourage people to rent their property to those organizations, why limit the use which can be made of the property by the nonprofit organizations? I would recommend that the Committee consider either (1) not allowing an exemption for property from which income is derived at all; or (2) eliminating the language "for classroom space".

Please let me know of any changes which you would like me to make in this draft.

If failure to file by January 15th of the assessment year is waived and the application is approved, the amount of tax which a claimant may have already paid for the assessment year for property exempted shall be refunded. The assessor may require proof at any time of the right to and amount of an exemption claimed. A claimant must file a separate application for each assessment year in which an exemption is sought.

(2) an amount equal to two percent of the value of the structure based on the assessment as of January 1st of the year immediately following the installation of the fire protection system if the fire protection system becomes a fixture of the structure after January 1, 1981.

(1) I'm not sure how much you can change present law -

Used & substituted "property tax" for "general taxation" at beginning of this section - to tie back to AS 29.53.010. I do not feel too strongly about this.

(2) ~~29.53.020(b) is a change from present law. But I don't see~~

(2) Do you read (b) as applying only to classroom space? I do.

I like your reorganization.

I don't think you need the intro to (7). But I don't feel strongly about this. It's simply a matter of opinion

Chapter 53. Municipal Assessment and Taxation.

Article 1. Municipal Property Tax.

Sec. 29.53.010. General property tax. Home rule and general law boroughs may levy (1) an areawide property tax for areawide functions, and (2) a property tax limited to the area outside cities for functions limited to the area outside cities. A property tax if levied must be assessed, levied and collected on real and personal property as provided in this chapter. (§ 2 ch 118 SLA 1972)

Taxation of personal property of resident located outside city. — See Town of Fairbanks v. Independent Meat Mkt., 4 Alaska 147 (1910).

The North Slope Borough is a viable legal entity with powers to tax as provided to boroughs by this section. Arco Pipe Line Co. v. North Slope Borough, Superior Court, 4th Jud. Dist., C.A. No. 73-836 and C.A. Nos. 73-294 to 73-306 (1973).

Sec. 29.53.020. Required exemptions. (a) The following property is exempt from general taxation:

(1) municipal, state or federally owned property, except that private leaseholds, contracts or other interest in the property shall be taxable to the extent of those interests;

(2) household furniture of the head of a family or a householder not exceeding $500 in value;

(3) property used exclusively for nonprofit religious, charitable, cemetery, hospital or educational purposes;

(4) property of a nonbusiness organization composed entirely of persons with 90 days or more of active service in the armed forces of the United States whose conditions of service and separation were other than dishonorable, or the property of the auxiliary of such organization;

(5) money on deposit;

(6) the real property of certain residents of the state to the extent and subject to the conditions provided in (c) of this section.

(b) "Property used exclusively for religious purposes" includes the following property owned by a religious organization:

(1) the residence of a bishop, pastor, priest, rabbi, minister or religious order of a recognized religious organization;

(2) a structure, its furniture and its fixtures used solely for public worship, charitable purposes, religious administrative offices, religious education or a nonprofit hospital;

(3) lots supporting and adjacent to a structure or residence mentioned in (1) or (2) of this subsection which are necessary to convenient use;

(4) lots required by local ordinance for parking near a structure defined in (2) of this subsection.

(c) Property described in (a) or (b) of this section from which income is derived is exempt only if that income is solely from use of the property by nonprofit religious, charitable, hospital, or educational groups for classroom space.

(d) Laws exempting certain property from execution under the Code of Civil Procedure (AS 09) do not exempt the property from taxes levied and collected by municipalities.

(e) The real property owned and occupied as a permanent place of abode by a resident 65 years of age or over is exempt from taxation of the assessed value of the real property. Only one exemption may be granted with respect to the same property and, if two or more persons are eligible for an exemption with respect to the same property, the parties shall decide between or among themselves which shall receive the benefit of the exemption. No real property may be exempted under this subsection which the assessor determines, after notice and hearing to the parties concerned, has been conveyed to the applicant primarily for the purpose of obtaining the exemption. The determination of the assessor is appealable under AS 44.62.560 — 44.62.570.

(f) No exemption may be granted except upon written application for the exemption on a form prescribed by the state assessor for use by local assessors. The claimant must file the application no later than January 15 of the assessment year for which the exemption is sought, but during the same year the governing body of the municipality for good cause shown may waive the claimant's failure to make timely application for the exemption for that year and authorize the assessor to accept the application as if timely filed. The claimant must file a separate application for each assessment year in which the exemption is sought. If an application is filed within the required time and is approved by the assessor, he shall allow an exemption in accordance with the provisions of this section. If a claimant whose failure to file by January 15 of the assessment year has been waived as provided in this subsection and the application for exemption is approved, the amount of tax which the claimant may have already paid for the assessment year with respect to the property exempted shall be refunded to him. The assessor may at any time require proof in the form he considers necessary of the right and amount of an exemption claimed under this section.

(g) The state shall reimburse a borough or city, as appropriate, for the real property tax revenues lost to it by the operation of (e) of this section. However, reimbursement will be made to a borough or city for revenue lost to it only to the extent that the loss exceeds an exemption which was granted by the borough or city, or which upon proper application by an individual would have been granted by the borough or city, under § 25(a) of this chapter.

(h) Except as provided in (g) of this section, nothing in (e)—(i) of this section affects similar exemptions from property taxes granted by municipalities on September 10, 1972 or prevents municipalities from granting similar exemptions by ordinance as provided in § 25 of this chapter.

(am §§ 1, 2 ch 60 SLA 1973; am § 1 ch 65 SLA 1975; am § 1 ch 191 SLA 1976; am § 1 ch 217 SLA 1976; am §§ 1, 2 ch 229 SLA 1976; am § 1 ch 97 SLA 1977)

(i) In (e)—(i) of this section the term "real property" includes but is not limited to mobile homes, whether classified as real or personal property for municipal tax purposes. (§ 2 ch 118 SLA 1972)

History of section. — See City of Anchorage v. Chugach Elec. Ass'n, 17 Alaska 481, 252 F.2d 412 (9th Cir. 1958).

This section was enacted pursuant to Alaska Const., art. IX, § 4. Harmon v. North Pac. Union Conference Ass'n of Seventh Day Adventists, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 591 (File No. 1060), 462 P.2d 432 (1969).

Intent of constitutional convention. —The constitutional convention intended that only so much of the property used for religious purposes as was being used to produce income should be taxable, that such other parts should be exempt, and that a proration between taxable and nontaxable parts should be made. 1962 Op. Att'y Gen., No. 16.

Purpose. —The purpose of this section is to encourage the establishment of privately supported nonprofit educational institutions; the motivation for their establishment is largely irrelevant. McKee v. Evans, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 740 (File No. 1382), 490 P.2d 1226 (1971).

It should be noted that, in addition to favoring a simplified organization for Title 29, there seemed to be considerable initial support for increasing local government autonomy. One of the Policy Group's next tasks will probably be a section-by-section analysis of the present statutes to determine which laws might either be eliminated or placed in a "directory" category to be used at the option of municipalities.

The Policy Group is tentatively looking at a second meeting on or about September 22nd. At this time, it is hoped that the technical group, together with staff, will have prepared an outline of a proposed new organization showing all of the present statutes organized into the three or four categories described above. Additionally, I know many of you submitted specific written comments on the present statutes, and I suggest that we explore a division of labor to begin preparing specific recommended statutory changes for consideration by the Policy Group.

Since time is uncomfortably short, I would like to propose an initial meeting for 9:00 a.m., Monday, September 8, 1980, at the Legislative Information Office, 1024 W. 6th Avenue, Anchorage. At this meeting, the committee would attempt to respond to the requests of the Policy Group and to discuss its future role in the review of Title 29. Hopefully, everyone will be able to consider in advance of September 8, a proposed reorganization along the lines described above and begin our individual grouping of present statutes. Recognizing all of our busy schedules, I am hopeful that a one day meeting on the 8th will be sufficient. However, if necessary, you may wish to allow for some time on your calendar for the morning of the 9th.

It is my understanding that travel and per diem expenses will be reimbursed. Please contact Ms. Tamara Cook, Legislative Counsel, 465-4996 for details. I look forward to seeing you in Anchorage. Please feel free to contact my office at 264-4236 with any questions.

Title 29 - Technical Review Committee

Re: Organizational Meeting

It is my understanding that you have agreed to serve on a technical review committee to assist in a comprehensive review of AS Title 29. (Municipal Government). A Policy Review Group has been appointed by the Legislature to review Title 29 and report on any recommended revisions. The Technical Committee has been asked to assist the Policy Group in recommending changes and reorganizing the present body of statutes. As a member of the Policy Group, I have been asked to act as liason with the Technical Committee. I would therefore like to propose an organizational meeting and to pass along some preliminary requests made by the Policy Group at its initial meeting on August 27th and 28th in Anchorage.

One of the first points of consensus reached by the Policy Group was a feeling that the present Title 29 is confusing and badly organized. The Policy Group therefore requested the Technical Committee to explore the feasibility of a new organization for Title 29. Under the proposed organization, the present statute would be organized into roughly three or four categories according to their applicability. Category I would be those provisions applicable to and binding upon all municipal governments, including home rule municipalities. Category II would then contain statutory material constituting additional limitations or prescriptions for various classes of cities or boroughs. Category III would seek to address the needs of many smaller communities by containing directory administrative and legislative provisions. Such provisions would apply to local governments unless a municipality, by ordinance, rejected coverage in order to adopt its own local procedures. Probably, a Category IV containing miscellaneous and general matter would also be necessary.

SUBJECT: Comments on Amendments to State Statutes re: Local Government

FROM: V. L. Iverson, Director
Division of Administrative Services

The subject of local control by political subdivisions over selected DHSS programs does appear to be proper for consideration by the special legislative committee on revision of the State Municipal Code.

I'm sure you are aware that it is essential to distinctly separate statutorily delegated local government control of DHSS programs from contractual arrangements with private, non-profit entities to implement DHSS programs. The latter system presents numerous legal problems with respect to at least those programs that are partially Federally funded. As we all know, on the other hand, many States for many years have successfully operated their health and social services programs through statutory delegation of powers to local political subdivisions.

per call Debbie Behr.

would like issue raised of giving local control of health programs to local gov. by allowing DESS to have statutory authority to delegate implementation of programs to the local gov.

SUBJECT: Designation of "Village"

Thank you for your letter of August 13 concerning the use of the term "City" rather than "Village" for small rural incorporated communities. A term I find even more offensive is the word "bush" as a substitute for "rural."

I fear, however, that "village" may be with us a long time. AS 46.07.080(2) reads:

> "'village' means an unincorporated community which has between 25 and 600 people residing within a two-mile radius, or a second class city." (Emphasis added)

We have tried to encourage the Legislature to revise this language; perhaps we can ask them to replace "village" with a term such as "eligible rural community."

CHAPTER 03. THE UNORGANIZED BOROUGH.

Sec. 29.03.010. ESTABLISHMENT. Areas of the state which are not within the boundaries of an organized borough constitute a single unorganized borough.

Sec. 29.03.020. SERVICE AREAS. Allowing for maximum local participation, the legislature may establish, alter, or abolish service areas within the unorganized borough to provide special services, which may include but are not limited to schools, utilities, land use regulations and fire protection. A new service area may not be established if the new service can be provided by an existing service area, by incorporation as a city, or by annexation to a city.

CHAPTER 06. CLASSIFICATION OF MUNICIPALITIES.

*Sec. 29.06.010. HOME RULE. A home rule municipality is a municipal corporation and political subdivision. It is a city of the first class or an organized borough which has adopted a home rule charter, or it is a municipality unified in accordance with AS 29.12.190 - 29.12.350. A home rule municipality has all legislative powers not prohibited by law or charter.

Sec. 29.06.020. GENERAL LAW. A general law municipality is a municipal corporation and political subdivision and is an unchartered borough or city. It has legislative powers conferred by law.

Sec 29.06.030. CLASSES OF GENERAL LAW. General law municipalities are of five classes:

(1) first class boroughs;

(2) second class boroughs;

(3) third class boroughs;

(4) first class cities;

(5) second class cities.

Sec. 29.06.040. RECLASSIFICATION. (a) A second class city may be reclassified as a first class city by holding an election on the question as provided in this subsection, if the Department of Community and Regional Affairs determines from the best figures available that the population of the city has reached 400 permanent residents.

(b) An election on the question of reclassification may be initiated in two ways:

(1) a number of voters equal to 15 percent of the number of votes cast in the city at the preceding regular election may file a petition with the council; or

(2) the council may propose reclassification.

(c) The council shall hold at least one public hearing within the city on the question. The council shall then evaluate the ability of the city to assume first class status and make its findings public.

(d) The council shall, within 30 days after its findings have been made public, order an election to be held on the question. The election shall be held at least 30 days after the order and not later than the next regular election occurring after the 30-day period.

(e) If more than one question is to be voted on at the election, each appears separately on the ballot.

(f) The council shall certify the election results to the Department of Community and Regional Affairs. If the majority of votes cast on the question is favorable, the city shall be considered reclassified to first class status 30 days after certification of the election results.

(g) A second class borough may reclassify as a first class or third class borough, and a third class borough may reclassify as a first class or second class borough, in the manner provided by AS 29.36.110 -29.36.130 for the addition of powers by boroughs, except the petition or proposal requests reclassification instead of requesting addition of powers.

(h) At the time of voting on reclassification of a second class borough to third class status, borough voters in conformity with AS 29.36. shall elect an assembly to serve as the combined assembly and school board of the third class borough if reclassification is approved.

(i) At the time of voting on reclassification of a third class borough to second class or first class status, borough voters shall vote also on the question whether the borough shall upon reclassification retain a combined assembly and school board or a separate assembly and board as otherwise provided for first and second class boroughs. If the majority of votes cast on the question favors retention of the combined assembly and board, the assembly serving at the time of the relassification election continues to serve as the assembly and board upon voter approval of reclassification and until terms of assemblymen expire as provided before reclassification. If a separate board and assembly are approved at the reclassification election, a school board shall be elected in conformity with AS 14.12 at the next regular municipal election, if it occurs within 90 days of the date of the reclassification election, or otherwise at a special election within that time called by the assembly with expiration dates of terms of members elected at the special election to coincide with the date of the regular municipal election. Until a board is elected and qualified, the assembly continues to serve as the board.

(j) The effective date of reclassification of a borough for which reclassification is approved under (h) of this section is the first day of the borough's fiscal year which begins at least six months after the date on which the reclassification proposition has been approved by the voters.

*Sec. 29.06.050. TRANSITION. Repeal.

CHAPTER 09. INCORPORATION.

ARTICLE 1. REQUIREMENTS.

Sec. 29.09.010. INCORPORATION OF CITIES. (a) A community which meets the following standards may incorporate as a first class city:

(1) the community has 400 or more permanent residents;

(2) the boundaries of the proposed city include all areas necessary to provide municipal services on an efficient scale;

(3) the economy of the community includes the human and financial resources necessary to provide local services; in considering the economy of the community, the Local Boundary Commission shall consider property valuations, economic base, personal income, resource and commercial development, anticipated functions, and the expenses and income of the proposed city, including the ability of the community to generate local revenue;

(4) the population of the community is stable enough to support local government;

Upon acquisition of an areawide power the borough succeeds to all of the rights, powers and duties of any city or service area with respect to that power. The borough succeeds to claims, franchises and other contractual obligations, liability for bonded and all other indebtedness and to all of the right, title and interest in the real and personal property held by the city or service area for the exercise of the power. The borough assembly may levy and collect special charges, taxes or assessments including interest for the purpose of amortizing bonded indebtedness previously incurred by the city or service area for continuing services in the area. When a city or service area had previously incurred bonded indebtedness, no less than all property that was within the city or service area at the time the bonds were issued shall remain subject to taxation to pay the principal of and interest on the bond for a long as they remain outstanding. Upon acquisition of additional areawide powers the borough, in consultation with the city or service area personnel, shall arrange for an orderly and equitable transfer of rights, assets, liabilities, powers, duties and other matters related to acquisition of the areawide powers. (2) the assembly may place the question on the ballot.

Sec. 29.36.190. INVESTIGATION. The assembly shall hold at least one public hearing in the borough on the question. The assembly shall then evaluate the ability of the borough to exercise the powers and make its findings public.

Sec. 29.36.200. ELECTION. (a) The assembly shall, within 30 days after its findings have been made public, order an election on the question in the borough area outside cities. (b) If more than one power is proposed, each appears separately on the ballot.

(c) The borough mayor shall certify the election results to the Department of Community and Regional Affairs. If the majority of the votes cast on the question is favorable, the borough shall assume the added power within 30 days of certification of election results.

ARTICLE 5. POWERS OF THIRD CLASS BOROUGHS.

Sec. 29.36.230. POWERS OF THIRD CLASS BOROUGHS. (a) A third class borough shall exercise the areawide powers of education and tax assessment and collection in the manner provided for second class boroughs. Areawide exercise of powers other than education and tax assessment and collection is not authorized.

However, operation of the military reservation schools by the borough school district may be required by the Department of Education under AS 14.14.110. If the military mission of a military reservation terminates or continued management and control by a regional educational attendance area is disapproved by the Department of Education, operation, management and control of schools on the military reservation transfers to the borough school district in which the military reservation is located.

In a first class borough the assembly may exercise within a service area any power granted a first class city by general law. Except as provided in (f) of this section, a second class borough may exercise the powers granted a first class city by general law but the exercise of the powers must be approved by a majority of the qualified voters residing within the service area and voting on the question at a regular or special election, or if no voters reside within the area, all owners of real property within the service area must consent in writing to the exercise of the power.

(b) The assembly may levy or authorize the levying of taxes, charges, or assessments in service areas to finance the special services.

A second class borough may establish a service area, with the concurrence of the commissioner of natural resources, which may include only vacant, unappropriated and unreserved land owned by the state and classified for disposal to individuals. A second class borough may provide those services in a service area established under this subsection necessary to develop state or municipal land as required by the planning and platting ordinances of the borough. Exercise of the powers authorized by this subsection shall be by ordinance.

CHAPTER 39. POWERS OF CITIES OUTSIDE BOROUGHS.

Sec. 29.39.010. ADDITIONAL POWERS. In addition to the powers granted by ch. 48 of this title, cities outside boroughs are granted the powers specified in this chapter. The assembly may, without first obtaining the consent of the city, revoke any power or responsibility delegated under this section.

Sec. 29.42.020. PLANNING COMMISSION. (a) The borough planning commission consists of five residents unless a greater number is otherwise provided by ordinance. Commission membership shall be apportioned so that the number of members from first class cities reflects the proportion of borough population residing within those cities. Members shall be appointed by the borough executive for a term of three years subject to confirmation by the assembly, except that appointments of members from first class cities are selected from a list of recommendations submitted by the city council. Members first appointed shall draw lots for one, two-and three-year terms. Appointments to fill vacancies are for the unexpired term. The compensation and expenses of the planning commission and its staff are paid as directed by the assembly.

(2) prepare, recommend, and administer measures necessary to implement the comprehensive plan, including measures provided under AS 29.42.040.

Sec. 29.42.030. COMPREHENSIVE PLAN. *Sec. 29.42.080. PLATTING JURISDICTION AND POWER. (a) By ordinance the assembly shall adopt subdivision requirements which may include but are not limited to the control of

If the platting authority fails to act, the plat is considered approved and a certificate of approval shall be issued by the platting authority on demand. The applicant for plat approval may consent to the extension of the period for action by the platting authority. The platting authority shall state on its record and in writing to the applicant its reason for disapproval of a plat.

*Sec. 29.42.115. SHORT PLAT PROCEDURE. (a) Nothwithstanding other provisions of this chapter the assembly may by ordinance establish a short or abbreviated plat filing procedure for a plat which will only relocate or vacate lot lines, or subdivide a single tract or lot into not more than four tracts or lots and which will not:

(1) deny legal and physical public access to all lots or tracts created or adjacent to the subdivision, or require construction or improvements necessary for access;

(2) alter a dedicated street or right-of-way, or require any dedication other than a dedication needed for an existing right-of-way;

(3) allow a change in the permitted use to which the lot or tract may be devoted;

(4) require the granting of a vacation or a variance from a subdivision regulation.

(b) Regulations may provide for an administrative official to review, consider, and approve short plats with notice, hearing, and other procedure requirements established by the assembly.

*Sec. 29.42.120. PENALTIES. Repeal.

*Sec. 29.42.130. ALTERATION OR REPLAT PETITION. No recorded plat may be altered or replatted except by the platting authority upon petition of the state, the municipality, a public utility, or the owners of a majority of the land affected by the alteration or replat. No platted street may be vacated, except upon petition of the state, municipality, or a public utility, or owners of the majority of the land fronting the part of the street sought to be vacated. The petition shall be filed with the platting authority. It shall be accompanied by a copy of the existing plat showing the proposed alteration or replat.

*Sec. 29.42.140. NOTICE OF HEARING. The platting authority shall fix a time for a hearing on the petition which shall not be more than 60 days after the filing. The platting authority shall publish a notice stating when and by whom the petition was filed, its purpose, and the time and place of the hearing. The notice shall generally describe the alteration or replat sought. The notice shall be published once a week for two consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation in the area. The platting authority shall also mail a copy of the notice to each affected property owner not signing the petition.

*Sec. 29.42.150. HEARING AND DETERMINATION. At the hearing the platting authority shall consider the alteration or replat and make its decision on the merits of the proposal. No vacation of a city street may be made without the consent of the city council. No vacation of a street in the borough area outside cities may be made without the consent of the borough assembly. The assembly or council shall have 30 days from the decision in which to veto the board decision. If no veto is received by the board within the 30-day period, the consent of the city or borough shall be considered to have been given to the vacation.

*Sec. 29.42.160. RECORDING. If the alteration or replat is approved, the revised plat must be recorded by the platting authority and is thereafter the lawful plat.

Sec. 29.42.170. TITLE TO VACATED AREA. (a) The title to the street or other public area vacated on a plat attaches to the lot or lands bordering on the area in equal proportions, except that if the area was originally dedicated by different persons, original boundary lines shall be adhered to so that the street area which lies on one side of the boundary line shall attach to the abutting property on that side, and the street area which lies on the other side of the boundary line shall attach to the property on that side. The portion of a vacated street which lies within the limits of a platted addition attaches to the lots of the platted addition bordering on the area. If a public square is vacated, the title to it vests in the city if it lies within the city and to the borough if it lies within the borough outside a city. If the property vacated is a lot or tract, title vests in the rightful owner.

(b) If the borough or city acquired the street or other public area vacated for legal consideration or by express dedication to and acceptance by the borough or city other than required subdivision platting, before the final act of vacation the fair market value of the street or public area shall be deposited with the platting authority to be paid over to the borough or city on final vacation.

(c) Provisions of (a) of this section notwithstanding, the council of a second class city located outside an organized borough may vacate those streets, alleys, crossings, sidewalks or other public ways that may have been previously dedicated or established when the council, in its discretion, finds that the streets, alleys, crossings, sidewalks or other public ways are no longer necessary for the public welfare, or when the public welfare will be enhanced by the vacation. If the council determines that all or a portion of the area vacated under this subsection should be devoted to another public purpose, title to the area vacated and held for another public purpose does not vest as provided in (a) of this section but remains in the city.

*Sec. 29.42.190. REMEDIES. (a) It shall be unlawful for the owner of land located within a subdivision to transfer, sell, offer to sell, or enter into a contract to sell land in a subdivision before a plat of the subdivision has been prepared, approved and recorded in accordance with this chapter or with an ordinance adopted under this chapter. It shall be unlawful for a person to record a plat or other document depicting subdivided land in any public recorder's office unless the plat or document has been approved by the municipal authority. A person convicted of violating a provision of this chapter, a municipal subdivision regulation adopted under this chapter, or a term, condition, or limitation imposed by a municipal platting authority in the exercise of its powers under this chpater is guilty of a class B misdemeanor.

(b) The municipality or an aggrieved person may institute civil action against a person who violates a provision of this chapter, a municipal subdivision regulation adopted under this chapter, or a term, condition, or limitation imposed by a municipal platting authority. In addition to injunctive and compensatory relief, a civil penalty not to exceed $1,000 may be imposed for each violation. An action to enjoin a violation may be brought notwithstanding the availability of any other remedy. Upon application for injunctive relief and a finding of a violation or threatened violation, the superior court shall grant the injunction.

(c) Every day upon which an unlawful act or condition continues shall constitute a separate violation.

CHAPTER 45. MUNICIPAL TAXATION

Article 1. MUNICIPAL PROPERTY TAX

In providing notice under this subsection, the council or assembly shall substitute for the millage equivalency its estimate of the equivalent sales tax rate for each of the categories of financial assistance set out in (a) of this section. Notice shall be provided

(1) by publishing in a newspaper of general circulation within the municipality a copy of the notice once each week for a period of three successive weeks, with publication to occur not later than 45 days after the final adoption of the municipality's budget; or

(2) if there is no newspaper of general circulation in the municipality, by posting a copy of the notice for at least 20 days in at least two public places within the municipality, with posting to occur not later than 45 days after the final adoption of the municipality's budget.

(c) Compliance with the provisions of this section is a prerequisite to receipt of municipal tax resource equalization assistance under AS 29.62 and state aid for miscellaneous municipal services under AS 29.62. The Department of Community and Regional Affairs shall withhold annual allocations under those chapters until municipal officials demonstrate that the requirements of this section have been met.

Sec. 29.45.030. REQUIRED EXEMPTIONS. (a) The following property is exempt from general taxation:

* (1) municipal, state or federally owned property, except that a private leasehold, contract or other interest in the property shall be taxable to the extent of those interests;

If used by nonprofit educational groups, the property is exempt only if used exclusively for classroom space.

(d) Laws exempting certain property from execution under the Code of Civil Procedure (AS 09) do not exempt the property from taxes levied and collected by municipalities.

(e) The real property owned and occupied as a permanent place of abode by a resident 65 years of age or over is exempt from taxation of the assessed value of the real property. Only one exemption may be granted with respect to the same property and, if two or more persons are eligible for an exemption with respect to the same property, the parties shall decide between or among themselves which shall receive the benefit of the exemption. No real property may be exempted under this subsection which the assessor determines, after notice and hearing to the parties concerned, has been conveyed to the applicant primarily for the purpose of obtaining the exemption. The determination of the assessor is appealable under AS 44.62.560 and 44.62.570.

* (f) No exemption may be granted under (e) of this section except upon written application for the exemption on a form prescribed by the state assessor for use by local assessors. The claimant must file a separate application for each assessment year in which the exemption is sought. If an application is filed within the required time and is approved by the assessor, he shall allow an exemption in accordance with the provisions of this section. If a claimant whose failure to file by January 15 or a date provided by ordinance which is not later than March 31, of the assessment year has been waived as provided in this subsection and the application for exemption is approved, the amount of tax which the claimant may have already paid for the assessment year with respect to the property exempted shall be refunded to him. (g) The state shall reimburse a borough or city, as appropriate, for the real property tax revenues lost to it by the operation of (e) of this section. However, reimbursement will be made to a borough or city for revenue lost to it only to the extent that the loss exceeds an exemption which was granted by the borough or city, or which upon proper application by an individual would have been granted by the borough or city, under AS 29.53.025(a).

(h) Except as provided in (g) of this section, nothing in (e) - (i) of this section affects similar exemptions from property taxes granted by municipalities on September 10, 1972 or prevents municipalities from granting similar exemptions by ordinance as provided in AS 29.53.025.

(i) In (e) - (i) of this section the term "real property" includes but is not limited to mobile homes, whether classified as real or personal property for municipal tax purposes.

The siezure is made by virtue of a warrant issued by the borough clerk to a peace officer. If the property sold is not sufficient to satisfy the tax, penalty and interest, and costs of sale, the warrant may authorize the seizure of other personal property sufficient to satisfy the tax, penalty, interest and costs of sale. If the property is sold for more money than is needed to satisfy the tax, upon presentation of a proper claim, the municipality shall remit the excess to the former record owner. A claim for the excess filed after six months of the date of sale is forever barred.

(b) The list shall be arranged in alphabetical order as to the last name and shall include

(5) a statement that the list is available for public inspection at the clerk's office;

(6) a statement that the list has been presented to the superior court with a petition for judgment and decree.

(c) Completion of the requirements of (a) of this section constitutes and has the same force and effect as the filing of an individual and separate complaint and service of summons to foreclose a lien against each property described on the foreclosure list.

Sec. 29.45.340. CLEARING DELINQUENCIES. During the publication or posting of the foreclosure list and up to the time of transfer to the borough a person may pay the taxes, together with the penalty, interest and costs. The collector shall note payment on the foreclosure list.

Sec. 29.45.370. ANSWER AND OBJECTION. A person having an interest in a tract on the foreclosure list may file an answer within 30 days of the date of last publication, specifying his objection. The court shall make its decision in summary proceedings. The foreclosure list is prima facie evidence that the assessment and levy of the tax is valid and that the tax is unpaid.

Sec. 29.45.380. JUDGEMENT. The court shall in a proper case give judgment and decree that the tax liens be foreclosed. It is a several judgment against and a lien on each parcel.

When answers are filed the court may enter judgment against and order the transfer to the borough of all other properties on the list pending determination of the matters in controversy. The court shall hear and determine the issues raised by the complaint and answers in the same manner and under the same rules as it hears and determines other actions.

The clerk or his designee shall collect the recording fee at the time or redemption and shall file the certificate with the record as part of the judgment roll.

Sec. 29.45.420. ADDITIONAL LIENS. If a property included in a foreclosure list is removed after payment of delinquencies or redemption by another lienholder, the payment represented by receipt for payment constitutes an additional lien on the property, collectible by the lienholder in the same manner as the original lien.

Sec. 29.45.430. POSSESSION DURING REDEMPTION PERIOD. Foreclosure does not affect the former owner's right to possession during the redemption period. In the event that waste is committed by the former owner, or by anyone acting under his permission or control, the borough may declare an immediate forfeiture of the right to possession.

Sec. 29.45.440. EXPIRATION. *(a) At least 30 days before the expiration of the redemption period the clerk or his designee shall publish a redemption period expiration notice. The notice shall contain the date of judgment, the date of expiration of the period of redemption and a warning to the effect that all properties ordered sold under the judgment, unless redeemed, shall be deeded to the borough or city immediately on expiration of the period of redemption and that every right or interest of any person in the properties will be forfeited forever to the borough or city. The notice is published once a week for four consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation distributed within the borough. If there is no newspaper of general circulation distributed within the borough, the notice is posted in three public places for at least four consecutive weeks. The clerk shall send a copy of the published notice by certified mail to each record owner of property against which a judgment of foreclosure has been taken and, if the assessed value of the property is more than $100,000, to all holders of mortgages or other liens of record on the property. The notice shall be mailed within five days of the first publication. The mailing shall be sufficient if mailed to the property owner and to the holder of a mortgage or recorded lien at the last address of record. The right of redemption shall expire 30 days after the date of the first publication notice.

The governing body may by ordinance or resolution fix the date, denominations, maturities, rate or rates of interest, redemption terms, registration privileges, manner of execution, signatures required, purchase price, manner of sale, and other requirements for issuing bonds or notes. If an official whose signature appears on the bonds or coupons ceases to be an official before delivery of the bonds, his signature is valid as if he had remained in office until delivery.

*Sec. 29.51.380. INTEREST RATE. The interest rate payable on a bond or note shall be determined by the governing body and is not subject to the usury rate limitations of AS 45.45.010.

*Sec. 29.51.390. Repeal.

Sec. 29.51.400. REDEMPTION BEFORE MATURITY. A bond or note may be made subject to redemption before maturity as stated in the authorization or in the bond or note.

*Sec. 29.51.410. BOROUGH INDEBTEDNESS. (a) A borough may incur indebtedness

(1) on an areawide basis for areawide functions; or

(2) on a nonareawide basis for functions performed in the area outside cities only; or

(3) on a service area basis for functions performed in a service area only.

(b) Payment of debt principal and interest as well as other costs shall be derived from the area incurring the debt under (a)(2) or (a)(3) of this section, except that the full faith and credit of the entire borough may be pledged to guarantee payment of principal and interest.

(c) If the bonded debt to be incurred by a borough is an areawide debt, the vote is areawide; if the full faith and credit of the entire borough is pledged for the payment of the debt of the area outside cities or of a service area, an areawide election is held and the proposition must pass both areawide and in the area which will benefit from the improvement; if the bonded indebtedness to be incurred is limited to areas outside cities only or to service areas, the vote is limited to voters in those areas and only the full faith and credit of the area voting on the indebtedness is pledged for the payment of the debt.

(d) The indebtedness of a municipality reclassified under AS 29.08.040 is not affected by reclassification. Not less than all property within a municipality which is reclassified remains subject to taxation to amortize bonded or other indebtedness affecting the municipality and authorized on the effective date of reclassification.

*Sec. 29.51.430. Repeal.

*Sec. 29.51.440. SERVICE AREA DEBT. The indebtedness of a service area acquired under AS 29.51.410 shall remain the indebtedness of the area which incurred the debt notwithstanding a subsequent court determination that the service area was not validly formed under law or by virtue of a defect in the proceedings creating the service area. All the property within the service area remains subject to taxation to pay the bonded indebtedness.

COMMENTS FOR CONSIDERATION ON THE PROPOSED CHAPTER 45
ON MUNICIPAL TAXATION

29.45.010. The authority to levy a property tax should be extended to unified municipalities.

29.45.020. The use of the disjunctive in the phrase "real or personal property" implies that a municipality may levy either real or personal property taxes. This conflicts with the requirement set forth in the preceeding section that if a property tax is levied it must be levied on real and personal property.

29.45.020(c). I suggest that an additional clause be added to the last sentence of this subsection which would provide that if DCRA has not notifed a muncipa'ity of the amount it will receive under the equalization and state aid programs at least 30 days prior to the date the municipality gives final approval to its budget, the municipality need not include the mill or tax equivalent attributable to the program and DCRA will not withhold allocations for such failure to provide notice.

29.45.030(a)(3). Shouldn't we add the requirement that property under this section be owned by and used exclusively for the nonprofit religious, charitable, etc?

29.45.030(b)(3). If a lot which is adjacent to the residence of of a pastor is a 10 acre lot and a quarter acre of that lot is used to support the residence, is the entire lot exempt? If not, perhaps the substitution of the word "property" or a similar word for the word "lot" would provide some justification for prorating in such cases. The other alternate would be to make it clear that the entire lot must be used to support the structure in order order to obtain an exemption.

29.45.030(b)(4). Same comment here as above. The exemption probably should not go to any more property then is actually required to meet off-street parking requirements. Either the entire lot should be required and devoted to off-street parking or the language should be changed to indicate that a proration may occur.

29.45.030(c). The reference to section (b) is probably superfluous as the property which is set forth in (b) is merely a definition of property which falls under (a).

29.45.030(j). Although this was just enacted by the Legislature, I would like to see it dropped as personally, I don't think that such tax incentives are significant in causing persons to install fire protection systems. If fire protection systems are needed they should be required by code.

29.45.040. I think we ought to find a different place for this section as it has nothing to do with the levying or collection of taxes.

29.45.050(b)(1). The $5 and $15 tonnage-based tax on vessels should be raised to something that makes it worthwile to administer the tax; that, or the dollar limiation should be deleted to permit municipalities to establish the tax rate per ton.

29.45.060. If patented and unpatented mining claims are to be made exempt then this subject should be dealt with under the exemption section and not a separate section. Also, I do not believe that nonproducing patented mining claims should be exempt from property any more than any other nonproductive, privately owned property is exempt. Also, if mining claims valued at $200 are to much trouble, perhaps raising the value from $200 to $1000 could be considered.

29.45.090(b) and 100(b). Section 90(b) apparently sets a limit from property tax of $1500 per person. Section 100(b) sets a per capita limit in terms of "tax revenues from all sources." The "all sources" phrase is used twice in Section 100(b). The sections should be clarified to indicate whether the limitation is one which looks to all tax revenues or only to property tax revenues.

29.45.110. The references to Sections 45 and 50 in line 19 should be changed to 90 and 100.

29.45.120. The reference to Section 60 should be deleted if mining claims are exempted and moved to the exemption section. Also, would it be worthwhile to attempt to address the method of evaluation of property which is in the jurisdiction for only part of a year and property which is involved in inter-borough and inter-state commerce. CSSB 582 (though not adopted) addressed this matter as to transient aircraft.

29.45.120(b). I suggest this section be rewritten to delete the last sentence and to indicate that a municipality may provide by ordinance for the assessment (valuation) of business inventories based on the average monthly method etc.

29.45.120( ). The method evaluation of a possessory interest in tax exempt property is not addressed in the statutes. While we have a Superior Court case or two which indicate that it is the feeless reversion method, it might not hurt to have this established by statute. Some states go so far as to say that the value of a possessory interest in tax exempt land is the value of the fee. This latter approach is probably much simpler to apply, it might have an equal protection weakness.

29.45.140(b). I suggest dropping the phrase "if refused entry" and adding at the end of the sentence "or production of records."

29.45.150. I suggest we raise the fine to something more in keeping with inflation.

29.45.180(a). I question the wisdom of requiring notice on the assessment notice of a summary of when unlevied taxes are payable delinquent and subject to penalty and interest (all of which is unrelated to the assessment proceedings) but not requiring the inclusion of a date when the Board of Equalization will sit (something very directly related to the assessment proceeding). I think we are asking for more administrative problems by not requiring that the date be set prior to the sending of assessment notices than we would be eliminating to accommodate those assessors and councils or assemblys which can't seem to get their act together well enough to establish a hearing date sometime 45 or so days down road.

29.45.180(b). I suggest that if in the preceding Section 170 we are going to allow any person having an interest in the property to be listed on the records that it be made clear that notice is sufficient if sent to the record owner, the first person listed as grantee on a multiple grantee deed or if sent to a person designated by such first grantee or record owner.

29.45.210. Should we change the first sentence to read "The assembly, or council of a city outside a borough, sits. . . ." or have we dealt elsewhere with the applicability of these procedures to such cities? In the third line we could delete the word "borough" and I believe we should add the word "it" before the word "may". If we are going to include reference to city councils, there are two additional references to assembly in this section which should be modified appropriately.

29.45.220(and 210). Section 210 speaks to appeals from "determinations" of the assessor. Section 220, however, appears to deal with assessment (value) determinations of the assessor. I suggest we clarify whether or not the Board of Equalization will hear appeals on the assessor's determination of the taxability of property.

29.45.220(e). I suggest that if assessors are concerned over the June 1 certification date applying to supplemental roles that Section (e) be rewritten to delete the reference to June 1 and merely require that the assessor enter the changes and certify the final assessment role immediately upon receipt of certification of the board changes.

29.45.230. I suggest that the assessing officer's suggestion not be included. I would hope that merely because the state assessor requires certain assessment information for reports, revenue sharing, etc. a municipality not be foreclosed from establishing a supplementary assessment role for property which comes to its attention during the latter part of the year. The assessing officer's suggestion would effectively preclude supplemental assessment roles for property which is discovered much later than the first of July.

29.45.250. I suggest that the reference to the date of equalization be deleted so that this may be set by motion. This will also provide a little more flexibility in the event a municipality appoints a board as the board should be the one which sets its date of hearing. As to the rate of levy and the date when taxes become delinquent, I suggest that we change the language to indicate that these may be fixed by ordinance or resolution.

29.45.260(a). The penalty and interest should be raised substantially. I just noticed that in the territorial days, as far back as the 1940's when interest rates and inflation were unbelievably low, the penalty limit for property tax delinquencies was 15% and the interest limit was 12% per year. I'd suggest we shoot for 20% penalty and a 15% interest limit. The penalty and interest appear in several places in Section 260.

29.45.300(a). I suggest that the phrase "assessed against" in line 22 should be "levied on" as property is assessed (valued) while taxes are levied.

29.45.300(b). I suggest that we permit the collection of taxes levied on trailers, mobile homes, etc. which are classed as real property to be collected in either or both an action against the property or a personal action against the owner. By the time the municipality gets around to collecting its delinquencies, the trailer may well have been sold and even removed from the taxing jurisdiction.

29.45.310. Would it be appropriate to stick a tactful reminder in the second sentence of this section that the procedure for distraint and sale include a hearing to which the owner is invited?

29.45.320(b). The reference to Section 40 should be changed to 80. Also, I believe the reference to "leasehold interest in tax exempt property" should be changed to "private interest in tax exempt property" as a leasehold is not the only type of taxable interest in tax exempt property.

29.45.350. I would suggest that this section be changed so that it is clear that failure to notify the lienholder does not defeat any of the rights of the municipality to foreclose on and sell the property. I would also suggest the deletion of the requirement that the notice be sent by certified mail.

29.45.400(a). The reference to Section 350(a) should be 440(a).

29.45.400(b). I think this section should be deleted as it appears to attempt to create a situation whereby a lienholder can carve out an interest in foreclosed property by merely paying his prorata share of the amounts due. If we are going to allow a lienholder to establish an interest in foreclosed property which is not extinguished by sale of the property, why aren't we allowing those persons who have a partial interest in the fee to do the same thing? There is no need for this section. A lienholder who redeems the property by paying the amounts due is given a lien for that amount under Section 420. Section 420 could be changed to make such lien paramount to others.

29.45.410 and 400(a). Section 400(a) provides that redeemed property is still subject to all taxes, assessments, liens, etc. as though it had continued in private ownership but that only the amount set forth in the judgment and decree must be paid in order to redeem the property. Section 410 then provides that upon payment of the redemption money all claims of the municipality are released. This is in conflict with the provision that taxes, assessments, liens, etc. accrue as though the property had continued in private ownership. The release language should be limited to claims which are the subject of the judgment and decree.

29.45.460(a). The reference to Section 360 in line 20 should be to 450.

29.45.460 and 470. I think these two sections ought to be dropped. The owner of the property has had ample opportunity to redeem his property and notice at every turn. There is no reason to allow his existence to create a cloud on property which the municipality may wish to use or later dispose of. If we are going to retain these sections, the interest rate in Section 470 ought to be raised to the same as is established for delinquent taxes and the municipality ought also to be able to collect interest on the taxes which would have been levied and paid had the property remained in private ownership. This interest increment does not appear to be authorized under Section 470.

29.45.480(b). I believe the reference in line 11 to Section 350(a) should be to 440(a).

29.45.510. Would it be worthwhile to add a subsection here or a new section relating to the right of a person who has paid taxes on the wrong property.

29.45.570. I believe the word "or" between the word "sales" and "rents" should be a comma.

29.45.570(d). I suggest the 8% limit on delinquent tax payment is a bit low.

29.45.590(a). I suggest the last two sentences of this section be dropped. I also suggest that subsection (b) be dropped. Perhaps the entire section can be written in a single sentence reading "A new sales tax or an increase in the rate of levy of a sales tax approved by the assembly by ordinance shall not take effect until ratified by a majority of the voters voting on the question of approval at a regular or a special election called for that purpose." date

Dear Ted:

I have reviewed the draft of Chapter 58 of the Municipal Code regarding Municipal Debt. I have a few suggestions as follows:

1. AS 29.58.030. This section was repealed in 1974. I don't know why it should be reenacted.

2. AS 29.58.160(a). Delete "ordinance." Before the last Title 29 revision most communities put bond questions on the ballot by resolution. Since the public has the final say on bonds at the election the additional public hearing that an ordinance provides seems superfluous. The ordinance procedure also causes timing problems due to the two reading requirement. Since small communities often meet only once or twice per month this can be serious.

3. AS 29.58.200. Subsection (a) seems superfluous; given the broad authority of (c). Thus (a) could simply be deleted. I suggest deleting "except taxes" in (c) since a project may need a limited tax backing short of full faith and credit to be marketable. The Palmer Industrial Park bonds were sold by pledging sales tax revenues. Tax increment financing is another possibility. Similarly if (a) is retained "solely" should be deleted.

4. Industrial Development Bonds. General law municipalities should have the authority to issue the IDB's permitted by Section 103(c) of the Internal Revenue Code as well as home mortgage bonds. A new section permitting this is attached.

5. AS 29.58.280 and 29.58.300. Delete "at par" and "for an amount not less than par and accrued interest" from 29.58.280 and use alternate 29.58.300. The ability to sell at less than par can be a useful marketing tool.

6. AS 29.58.310. Delete this section which serves no purpose.

add 7. AS 29.58.340(c). Add the following sentence at the end: "The full faith and credit of the area voting on the indebtedness is pledged for the payment of the debt." This makes it clear that there can be a service area general obligation bond.

8. AS 29.58.360. Add a new section as follows:

add AS 29.58.360 Service Area Debt. The indebtedness of a service area issued pursuant to §340(a)(3) of this chapter shall remain the indebtedness of the area incurring the debt notwithstanding a subsequent determination by a court that the service area was not validly formed under law or by virtue of a defect in the proceedings creating the service area. Not less than all property within the service area remains subject to taxation to pay the bonded indebtedness.

The Alaska Constitution prohibits the establishment of service areas when the function can be performed by a city or another service area. No guidelines have ever been established, leaving the legality of some areas in doubt. This language provides for the continuation of a debt should such an area subsequently be declared to have violated constitutional standards. In effect it creates a de facto service area for the purpose of the debt.

Very truly yours,

WOHLFORTH & FLINT

Sec. 29.58.200(c) [or(d) if (a) is retained]. A municipality shall have the power to borrow money and to issue bonds or other evidence of indebtedness for the purpose of promoting economic development in and adjacent to the municipality. Such indebtedness may be authorized by the municipality without a vote of the electorate for obligations which are defined as industrial development bonds by the United States Internal Revenue Code, as amended. The municipality may, with respect to the issuance of such debt, acquire, purchase, lease, construction, sell, sublease or otherwise dispose of projects by action of the council or assembly. No bonds or other indebtedness issued by the municipality under this section shall be repayable from taxes levied by the municipality nor be a charge against the general credit of the municipality.

TITLE 29 REVISION COMMISSION
NEWS RELEASE

Alaska Legislative Resolve number 39 directed the Alaska Legislative Council to revise Title 29 of the Alaska Statutes (Municipal Government) with the assistance of a Policy Advisory Group. A group was appointed consisting of both public and legislative members. Members are:

Senator Arliss Sturgulewski-Chairman, Anchorage
Senator Bob Mulcahy, Kodiak
Representative Margaret Branson, District 5
Representative Charles Parr, Fairbanks
Ted Berns, Attorney, Municipality of Anchorage
Terry Cook, City Council, Alakanuk
Marilyn Dimmick, Assembly, Kenai Peninsula Borough
James Kohler, Manager, City of Yakutat
Ronald Larson, Mayor, Matanuska-Susitna Borough
Gene Moore, Manager, City of Kotzebue
Donna Sherby, City Clerk, City of Cordova
Jonathan Solomon, Mayor, City of Fort Yukon
Russell Walker, Attorney, City of Ketchikan and Ketchikan Gateway Borough

Ex-Officio Members are:
Ginny Chitwood, Alaska Municipal League,
Palmer McCarter, Department of Community & Regional Affairs
Phil Smith, RuralCAP

The first meeting of the Policy Group was in Anchorage on the 27th and 28th of August, 1980. At that meeting the Policy Group discussed the direction their policy decisions would take. It was agreed that Title 29 needed to be clarified so that elected officials could understand Title 29 without the help of attorneys, and that there needed to be greater self determination and latitude for local governments. A Technical Revision Committee was appointed to perform actual drafting. It is composed primarily of attorneys with expertise in municipal law.

The second meeting of the Policy Advisory Group was held in Anchorage on September 29th and 30th, 1980. Presentations were made by representatives of the Department of Environmental Conservation, the Department of Community and Regional Affairs, the Department of Health and Social Services, the Haines Borough Assembly, and Tanana Chiefs Conference, Inc. The Policy Group reviewed the work that had been done by the Technical Committee.

Chairman Sturgulewski attended the Alaska Federation of Natives convention and a meeting of the Alaska Village Council Presidents to answer questions and receive comments.

The latest Policy Advisory Group meeting was held in conjunction with the Alaska Municipal League's convention in Fairbanks, 10 and 11 November, 1980. Members of the public were heard including representatives from the City of Fairbanks, the City of McGrath, the City of Nome, the City of Saxman, the City of Homer, the Kodiak Island Borough, and the City of Unalaska. The Policy Group reviewed the work that the Technical Committee had accomplished.

To date changes in Title 29 granted preliminary approval by the Policy Advisory Group include a reorganization of the order of the sections, clarification and technical clean-up of the wording in many of the sections, and substantive changes in the area of initiative and referendum, recall, limitations on home rule powers, and procedures dealing with adoption of home rule or unification charters. However, all decisions made by the Policy Advisory Group are subject to further consideration and possible revision.

DRAFTED CHANGES RECOMMENDED BY TECHNICAL COMMITTEE - 10 OCTOBER 1980

Sec. 29.06.010. HOME RULE. A home rule municipality is a municipal corporation and a political subdivision. It is a city of the first class or an organized borough which has adopted a home rule charter, or it is a municipality unified in accordance with AS 29.12.190 - 29.12.350. A home rule municipality has all legislative powers not prohibited by law or charter.

EXPLANATION: A reference to unified municipalities along with a cross-reference to provisions dealing with the organization of unified municipalities has been included so that this section will provide a complete definition of home rule. No substantive change.

Sec. 29.06.050. Repeal

EXPLANATION: This section deals with the transition period following the 1972 revision of the Municipal Code and is of no effect. The reclassification of municipalities to conform to provisions of the 1972 Code were to have been essentially completed within two years of September 10, 1972.

Write new transition as last draft

Sec. 29.09.180. ORGANIZATION GRANTS. ~~(a)~~ For the purpose of defraying the cost of transition to a municipal form of government and in order to provide for initial government operations, each municipality incorporated after January 1, 1981, or, for a second class city, reclassified after January 1, 1981 is entitled to an organization grant of $150,000, except that a municipality which is merged, consolidated, or unified under AS 29.12. is not entitled to an organization grant.

EXPLANATION: Since no new municipality formed is likely to contain a great enough population to qualify for a grant over the minimum, the provision tying population to the amount of the grant has been eliminated in favor of a flat amount. The amount of the grant has been raised from $25,000 to $150,000 in recognition of the fact that setting up a government has become an expensive proposition and to encourage the formation of local governments despite this expense. In addition, a second class city will qualify to receive that grant as well as a city within an organized borough, whereas the existing law ties the amount of a grant to a second class city and to a first class city in an organized borough to its population. This change encourages the formation of local governments in rural areas where the population may be small. The formation of a city is expensive regardless of the size of the population. It is felt that the grant should be used to cover any initial government operation, so the terms "development and interim" were eliminated as unduly restrictive. The increased grant will be available only to a municipality formed after January 1, 1981.

Do we need a diff. formula for formation of boroughs vs cities? Seed money?

Sec. 29.12.260. COMPOSITION OF CHARTER COMMISSION.

(b) If at least one nomination of a qualified charter commission candidate is not filed in accordance with AS 29.12.240. for each available seat the resolution or petition for unification is void and no election on the question of unification shall be held.

re-word
2nd class to be cities included in area outside cities.

EXPLANATION: Subsection (b) has been added to avoid the expense and inconvenience of an election on unification where there is not enough interest in the question to assure that a charter commission can be formed. An alternative would be to provide for appointment of members when not enough nominations are received, but it was felt that in such cases basic interest in unification was probably lacking so the process should be halted.

Sec. 29.15.020. NOMINATION.

(b) A nomination petition shall be filed with the borough or city clerk on or before a date to be fixed by the borough assembly or city council. If at least seven nominations for qualified charter commission candidates are not filed, the petition or resolution calling for a charter commission is void and no election on the question shall be held.

EXPLANATION: Subsection (b) has been added to avoid the expense and inconvenience of an election on the question of forming a charter commission if not enough nominations for commission members are received. An alternative would be to provide for appointment of members in such cases but it was felt that failure to nominate a sufficient number of commission candidates indicated a general lack of interest in the formation of a charter commission.

Sec. 29.15.050. INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM. (a) A municipal charter shall provide procedures for initiative and referendum.

EXPLANATION: This is technical clean-up creating no substantive change in existing law. However, it has been argued that the phrase "charters shall provide the procedures" refers to the procedures set out in Title 29 applicable to general law municipalities. Consequently, "the" has been dropped in order to clarify the fact that home rule municipalities are free to establish procedures which may differ from those set out in Title 29.

Sec. 29.15.110. LIMITATION OF HOME RULE POWERS.

(13) AS 29.24.340(a) (election and term of mayor) Repeal.

(19) AS 29.30.040 (voter qualification)

(28) AS 29.33.220 (expenditure of borough revenue) Repeal.

EXPLANATION: AS 29.24.340(a) provides that a home rule city may prescribe additional residency requirements by charter for eligibility to hold the office of mayor. This is not a limitation and does not properly appear in the list of home rule limitations. That section also stipulates that a mayor must be a municipal voter, but it is felt that those sort of administrative decisions ought to be left up to a home rule municipality.

AS 29.30.010 provides that three judges shall be appointed for each polling place and that the assembly or council prescribe rules for conduction elections. These appear to be administrative decisions properly left up to a home rule municipality. This section is eliminated from (19) as a limitation.

AS 29.30.030(b) provides that the assembly or council may call a special election upon at least 20 days notice. This is an administrative matter properly left up to home rule municipalities and was eliminated from (19). However, it was felt that AS 29.30.040 dealing with voter qualifications ought to be included as a limitation on home rule powers to preserve uniformity across the state in this area.

AS 29.33.220 provides that revenues collected on an areawide basis may be expended on general administrative costs and on areawide functions only. Likewise, revenues collected outside cites may be expended on general administrative costs and in providing services outside cities. It was felt that home rule municipalities ought to be given more flexibility in managing revenues.

Sec. 29.65.050. FULFILLMENT OF LAND ENTITLEMENTS.

(j) Notwithstanding AS 29.65.010 - 29.65.130, a municipality which is unable to satisfy its entitlement due to a shortage of vacant, unappropriated, unreserved general grant land suitable for residential, commercial or industrial purposes may fulfill its remaining entitlement by selection of other state land which is vacant, unappropriated and unreserved.

EXPLANATION: This added subsection addresses a problem which has come up when a municipality is formed in an area with little vacant state land nearby. This allows a municipality the option of selecting vacant state land which is not general grant land if general grant land is unavailable.

DRAFTED CHANGES RECOMMENDED BY TECHNICAL COMMITTEE - 10 OCTOBER 1980

Sec. 29.30.01?. ADMINISTRATION. The borough assembly or city council shall prescribe the rules for conducting a municipal election and shall appoint an election board composed of at least three judges for each precinct. ~~If possible, a judge shall be a voter of the precinct for which he is appointed.~~

EXPLANATION: Adds the provision that judges be appointed from among precinct voters in order to conform to the 1980 revision of AS 15.10.120. "The municipality may not alter voter qualification requirements of this title" was deleted because that issue is addressed in AS 29.28.030. Subsection (b) which makes this applicable to home rule municipalities was deleted to conform to the change suggested in the proposed draft of AS 29.15.110.

Unless no qualified voter is willing to serve, a judge shall be a voter of the precinct for which he is appointed.

Sec. 29.30.020. NOMINATIONS. (a) The assembly or council shall provide by ordinance the procedure for the nomination of elected officers by declaration of candidacy, or petition requiring the signatures of not more than 10 voters, or both.

EXPLANATION: This is a technical revision which does not substantively alter existing law.

Sec. 29.30.030. ELECTION DATES. (a) Unless otherwise provided by ordinance, a regular municipal election shall be held annually on the first Tuesday of October.

EXPLANATION: This is a technical revision assuring maximum flexibility for local governments.

Sec. 29.30.040. VOTER QUALIFICATION. (a) A person may vote if he meets the requirements of AS 15.05.010 - 15.05.040, has been a resident of the municipality for 30 days immediately preceding the election, is registered to vote in state elections and is not disqualified under article V of the state constitution.

(b) Voter registration by the municipality may not be required, and a municipality may not alter voter qualification requirements except that a municipality may by ordinance require a person to be a resident of the precinct, district, or service area in which he votes.

(c) This section applies to home rule and general law municipalities.

EXPLANATION: A reference has been provided to the voter qualification requirements for state elections. A municipality has been granted the flexibility of imposing a requirement that a person be a resident of the area in which he votes to avoid the possiblity of people voting on nonareawide matters who will not have to live with the outcome of the vote.

Hold

Sec. 29.30.050. MAJORITY ELECTIONS. (a) ~~A municipality~~ Unless otherwise provided by ordinance there shall be may by ordinance provide for a runoff election if no candidate receives over 40 percent of the votes cast for the office of mayor or member of the assembly, council or school board.

(b) A municipality may by ordinance require a majority vote for the election of officials. A runoff election or other means of obtaining a majority may be used.

(c) Unless provided otherwise by ordinance, a runoff election shall be held within three weeks from the date of certification of the election for which a runoff is required and notice of the runoff election shall be published at least five days prior to the election date.

EXPLANATION: Under existing law a runoff election is required if no candidate receives over 40 percent of the votes cast for his office. This has been liberalized to allow a municipality to provide for this by ordinance for certain offices only. Otherwise, the person who receives the greatest number of votes is elected. The provisions specifying when a runoff must be held and the notice requirements is no longer mandatory. In addition, the procedure set out in (c) for municipalities which desire more procedural guidance allows three weeks before the runoff is held rather than two. The additional time would enable cities within boroughs to coordinate their runoffs and hold them at the same time.

Sec. 20.30.095. APPLICATION FOR PETITION. (a) An initiative or referendum is proposed by an application containing the bill to be initiated or the act to be referred. The application shall be signed by at least ten municipal voters who will sponsor the petition, shall contain the address to which all correspondence relating to the application may be sent and shall be filed with the municipal clerk. Within two weeks the clerk shall certify the application if he finds that it is in proper form, and, for an inititative petition, that the matter

(1) is not restricted by AS 29.30.090;

(2) includes only a single subject;

(3) relates to a legislative rather than to an administrative matter; and

(4) would not be unenforceable as a matter of law.

(b) A decision by the clerk on an application for petition shall be subject to judicial review.

EXPLANATION: This section is new. The first part is modeled after section 2 of the intiative article in the state constitution. As drafted, the section would require the clerk to review an initative for substantive legality, with his decision subject to appeal. This would allow for a judicial determination of the legality of an initiative prior to incurring the expense of an election.

other sponsers may be added prior to filling of petition ~~at any time~~ by submitting names to clerk.

Sec. 29.30.110. PETITION. (a) Within two weeks after certification of an application for petition, a petition shall be prepared by the municipal clerk. The petition shall Add each

(1) contain a summary of the bill to be initiated or the act to be referred;

(2) set out fully the ordinance or resolution sought to be initiated or referred;

(3) state the date on which the petition is issued by the clerk;

(4) contain notice that signatures must be secured within 60 days of the date the petition is issued;

(5) contain spaces for each signature, the printed name of each signer, the date of each signature, and the residence and mailing address of each signer;

(6) contain a statement that the sponsor personally circulated the petition, that all signtures were affixed in his presence, that he believes the signatures to be those of the persons whose names they purport to be, ~~,that each signer had an opportunity before signing to read the petition, that he believes each signer to be a municipal voter~~, space for indicating the number of signatures on the petition, and space for the sponsor's sworn signature.

(b) Copies of the petition shall be provided to each sponsor by the clerk.

EXPLANATION: This section would require the clerk to provide the petition forms to the petitioners to insure that they are complete and legible. This is similar to the requirement imposed upon the Lieutenant Governor in state initiative proceedings. The petition contents are essentially the same as those provided in present law, with a shortening of the petition circulation time from 90 to 60 days, some expansion of the information the signers must provide, and the addition of the circulator's affidavit

Sec. 29.30.120. REQUIRED SIGNATURES. (a) The necessary signatures on a petition shall be secured within 60 days ~~of~~ after the date the clerk issues the petition. The statement provided under AS 29.30.110 (a)(6) shall be completed and signed by the sponsor. Signatures shall be in ink or indelible pencil.

(b) A petition shall be signed by a number of voters residing within the municipality based on the number of votes cast at the last regular municipal election held on or prior to the date the petition was issued equal to

(1) 25 percent, when a municipality has fewer than 7,500 persons; or

(2) 15 percent, when a municipality has 7,500 persons or more.

(c) Illegible signtures shall be rejected by the clerk unless accompanied by a legible printed name. Signatures not accompanied by a legible residence address shall be rejected.

(d) A petition signer may withdraw his signature upon written application to the clerk prior to certification of the petition.

EXPLANATION: This section carries forward the 60 day signature gathering period. It does not eliminate the possibility of an initiative or referendum on a matter which affects only a service area, but it does require that such petitions contain the same number of signatures as a petition on an areawide matter. Permitting a service area to initiate ~~and vote on~~ a matter on a service area basis is contrary to the concept of the service area being under the control of the entire legislative body, ~~and service areas will then have the authority to become essentially automomous units of government~~. Changes have been made to require rejection of a signature not accompanied by a legible residence address and to allow a signer to withdraw his name up until the time the petition is certified, whereas now he must withdraw within seven days after the petition is filed.

Sec. 29.30.130. SUFFICIENCY OF PETITION. (a) The pages of a petition shall be assembled and filed as a single instrument. Within ten days of the date the petition is filed, the municipal clerk shall certify on the petition whether it is sufficient.

(b) If a petition is insufficient, it may ~~be amended or~~ supplemented with additional signatures obtained within 10 days after the date on which the petition is rejected.

(c) Within 10 days after the supplementary filing the clerk shall recertify the petition. If it is still insufficient, the petition is rejected and filed as a public record.

EXPLANATION: The only significant change makes it clear that in providing supplementary signatures, the sponsors have only ten days to gather the signatures and may not use signatures which were gather prior to the first filing but not submitted, and that they may not use signatures gathered during the period in which the clerk is checking the petition.

Sec. 29.30.140. PROTEST. Repeal

EXPLANATION: Since the clerk determines the sufficiency of a petition, it was felt that allowing a protest to the municipal executive when a petition is rejected to be considered by the assembly or council would serve no purpose. The assembly or council would simply rely upon the clerk, since he has the voter registration records.

Sec. 29.30.150. NEW PETITION. Failure to secure sufficient signatures does not preclude the filing of a new initiative or referendum petition. However, a new application for a petition on substantially the same matter may not be filed sooner than six months after the petition is rejected.

EXPLANATION: This section was changed slightly to take into account the application procedure and to clarify that a new petition may not be filed dealing with the same matter, but that a petition on a different matter may be filed sooner than the six month period.

Sec. 29.30.160. PRESENTATION OF INITIATIVE. (a) When a petition seeks enactment of an ordinance or resolution within the powers of the assembly or council the clerk, after certifying it, shall present it to the assembly or council at its next regular meeting or special meeting called for that purpose.

(b) Unless substantially the same measure is adopted, an iniatiative measure presented to the assembly or council shall be submitted to the all voters of the municipality at the next regular municipal election held more than 45 days after the measure was presented to the assembly or council. If the assembly or council adopts substantially the same measure and if it is not vetoed, the petition is void and the question shall not be submitted to the voters.

(c) The ordinance or resolution initiated shall be published in full in the notice of the election but may be summarized on the ballot to indicate clearly the proposal submitted.

EXPLANATION: The changes allow for the submission of a measure at any time of the year, but provides it would be placed before the voters at the first regular election occurring 45 days after submission to the assembly or council. Since the clerk determines whether the subject is within the restrictions and since this determination is subject to judicial review, the assembly or council no longer makes that determination. This section requires an areawide vote whether the mattter is areawide or nonareawide because a service area should not be allowed to become automonous.

160 use 1st sent. of 17c clerk to put on ballot unless if assembly does not act

Sec. 29.30.170. PRESENTATION OF REFERENDUM. (a) Unless the ordinance or resolution is repealed, when a petition seeks a referendum vote, the clerk shall submit the matter to the voters All of the municipality at the next regular or special election. If no regular or special election occurs within 75 days of the certification of a petition, the assembly or council shall hold a special election within 75 days of filing.

(b) If a petition for referendum is certified before the effective date of the matter referred, the ordinance or resolution against which the petition is filed shall be suspended pending the referendum vote. During the period of suspension, the assembly or council may not enact an ordinance or resolution substantially similar to the suspended measure.

(c) If the assembly or council repeals the ordinance or resolution before the referendum election, the petition is void and the matter referred shall not be placed before the voters.

(d) If a majority vote favors the repeal of the matter referred, it is repealed. Otherwise, the matter referred remains in effect or, if it is suspended, becomes immediately effective. Upon certification of the election

EXPLANATION: The ability to suspend an ordinance or resolution which had taken effect when a petition is filed within 30 days of the passage of the ordinance or resolution has been deleted to avoid the apparent ability of a part of the voters to exercise a temporary repeal. The reference to amending a charter by initiative or referendum was deleted as it is covered under AS 29.13.080. This section once again requires submission of the question to the areawide voters.

Sec. 29.30.180. EFFECT. (a) An ordinance or resolution adopted in an initiative election or adopted after a petition which contains substantially the same measure has been filed may not be repealed ~~or amended~~ by the assembly or council within ~~two~~ one year years of its effective date. It may be amended at any time.

(b) If an ordinance or resolution is repealed in an referendum election or by the assembly or council after a petition which contains substantially the same measure has been filed, substantially similar legislation may not be enacted by the assembly or council for a period of one year.

(c) An unsuccessful initiative or referendum precludes the filing of a new petition application for substantially the same measure sooner than six months after the election results are certified by the assembly or council.

EXPLANATION: Technical revisions and a change in (c) to accommodate the petition application process.

DRAFTED CHANGES RECOMMENDED BY TECHNICAL COMMITTEE - 10 OCTOBER 1980

Sec. 29.30.210. RECALL. (a) An application for a petition for the recall of ~~a mayor or a member of the assembly, council, or~~ a person who holds an elective office of a home rule or general law school board may be filed with the municipal clerk after the official has served six months of the term for which elected or appointed.

(b) This section applies to general law and home rule municipalities

EXPLANATION. This section lists the municipal officials which may be recalled rather than providing for the recall of an elected official in order to avoid the possibility of recalling service area board members who may be elected officials. It clarifies the dates to be used in determining when the six month period has run and includes the possibility of recalling officials who are appointed to elected positions.

use existing law but add appointed -

Sec. 29.30.220. GROUNDS. Grounds for recall may include any grounds which constitute failure to perform official duties to the satisfaction of petitioners.

EXPLANATION: This section broadens the grounds for recall in order to avoid forcing petitions to name a ground in a petition which has no connection with the real reasons which may inspire a recall effort. It is felt that an elected official ought not to be subjected to being labeled incompetent or guilty of misconduct or failure to perform his duties in a petition when the reason for a recall effort may not be based on any of those things.

DRAFTED CHANGES RECOMMENDED BY TECHNICAL COMMITTEE - 10 OCTOBER 1980

Sec. 29.30.225. APPLICATION FOR RECALL PETITION. An application for a recall petition shall be filed with the municipal clerk (mine) and shall contain

(1) the signature and residence address of at least ten voters who will sponsor the petition; ← additional sponsors may be added at any time see pg. 14

(2) the address to which all correspondence relating to the application may be sent;

(3) a statement in 200 words or less of the grounds of the recall stated with particularity as to specific actions~~, pertinent ordinances, laws, regulations, or judicial decrees~~.

EXPLANATION: This section requires a submission of an application to the clerk for a recall petition. The clerk will provide petition forms and the application procedure is necessary in order to allow the official sought to be recalled to be given an opportunity to have his statement included on the petition.

add by submitting these names to the clerk

Sec. 29.30.230. PETITION. (a) If the municipal clerk determines that an application for a recall petition meets the requirements of AS 29.30.225, he shall submit a copy of the application to the official who is the subject of the application. The official shall have ten days from receipt of the application to provide the clerk with a statement of 200 words or less if he so chooses.

(b) The clerk shall prepare a recall petition containing

(1) the name of the official sought to be recalled;

(2) The statement of the grounds for recall as set forth in the application;

(3) if provided, the statement of the official sought to be recalled;

(4) the date the petition is issued by the clerk;

(5) notice that signatures must be secured within ~~30~~ 60 days of the date the petition is issued;

(6) spaces for each signature, the printed name of each signer, the date of each signature, and the residence and mailing address of each signer;

(7) a statement that the sponsor personally circulated the petition, that all signatures were affixed in his presence, that he believes the signatures to be those of the persons whose names they purport to be, ~~that~~ each signer had an opportunity before signing to read the petition, that he believes each signer to be a municipal voter, space for indicating the number of signatures on the petition, and space for the sponsor's sworn signature.

should change to conform p. 35

(c) Copies of the petition shall be provided to each sponsor by the clerk.

EXPLANATION: This section sets forth requirements similar to those proposed under the initiative and referendum procedures as it relates to petition content. Requiring the clerk to prepare the petition insures that it is complete and legible. The period of time within which signatures must be collected has been reduced to 30 days to minimize the period of disruption in government created by a recall effort.

Sec. 29.30.240. REQUIRED SIGNATURES. (a) The necessary signatures on a recall petition shall be secured within ~~30~~ 60 days of the date the clerk issues the petition. The statement provided under AS 29.30.230(b)(7) shall be completed and signed by the sponsor. Signatures shall be in ink or indelible pencil.

(b) If a petition seeks to recall an official who represents the municipality at large, the petition shall be signed by 35 percent of the voters residing wthin the municipality based on the number of votes cast at the last regular election for that office held prior to the petition. If a petition seeks to recall an official who represents a district, the petition shall be signed by 35 percent of the voters residing within the district based on the number of votes cast at the last regular election for that office held prior to ~~filing~~ issuance of the petition.

(c) Illegible signatures shall be rejected by the clerk unless accompanied by a legible printed name. Signatures not accompanied by a legible residence address shall be rejected.

(d) A petition signer may withdraw his signature upon written application to the clerk prior to certification of the petition.

EXPLANATION: This section continues the 30 day signature gathering period and clarifies which election is to be used as a standard for determining the number of signatures required. The number of signatures required has been increased as compared to the number required for initiative and referendum because it is felt that recall is an especially disruptive process which should be more difficult to initiate. However, the signature requirement is based on the number who voted in a municipal rather than a state election. It is expected that is number will reflect a relatively low turnout, and therefore that it is not as difficult a requirement as may appear.

DRAFTED CHANGES RECOMMENDED BY TECHNICAL COMMITTEE - 10 OCTOBER 1980

Sec. 29.30.250. SUFFICIENCY OF PETITION. (a) The pages of a petition shall be assembled and filed as a single instrument. Within ten days ~~of~~ after the date the petition is filed, the municipal clerk shall certify on the petition whether it is sufficient.

(b) If a petition is insufficient, it may ~~be amended or~~ supplemented with additional signatures obtained within ten days after the date on which the petition is rejected, except that a petition which is insufficient on its face may not be reword supplemented. It shall be rejected and filed as a public record.

(c) Within ten days after the supplementary filing the clerk shall recertify the petition. If it is still insufficient, the petition is rejected and filed as a public record.

EXPLANATION: Unlike the situation in initiative and recall, this section does not allow additional time for obtaining signatures when a petition is filed which does not have enough signatures even before any are disqualified. This keeps a petitioner from filing an insufficient petition to gain additional time to gather signatures. Once again, it is felt that in the case of a recall effort, the process ought not to be prolonged.

DRAFTED CHANGES RECOMMENDED BY TECHNICAL COMMITTEE - 10 OCTOBER 1980

Sec. 29.30.260. NEW RECALL PETITION. The rejection of a petition for any reason does not preclude the filing of a new recall petition. However, a new application may not be filed sooner than six months after a petition is rejected.

EXPLANATION: Filing a new petition prior to the six month waiting period is prohibited even though the petition is rejected for a reason other than failure to obtain sufficient signatures. Under existing law, failure to obtain sufficent signatures alone triggers the waiting period.

Sec. 29.30.270. SUBMISSION. If a recall petition is sufficient, the clerk shall submit it to the assembly or council at its next regular meeting.

EXPLANATION: This section requires the clerk to submit the petition at the next regular meeting rather than immediately as required under existing law.

Sec. 29.30.280. ELECTION. (a) If a regular election occurs within 75 days, but not sooner than ~~40~~ 45 days after submission of the petition to the assembly or council, the assembly or council shall submit the recall at that election.

(b) If no regular election will occur within 75 days, the assembly or council shall hold a special election within 75 days but not sooner than ~~40~~ 45 days after a petition is submitted to the assembly or council.

(c) If a vacancy occurs in the office after a sufficient recall petition is filed with the clerk, the petition shall not be submitted to the voters. The assembly or council may not appoint the official who resigns from an office after a sufficient recall petition is filed naming him to the same office.

EXPLANATION: The 40 days requirement was added to insure that a petition submitted after the legal notices of a regular election were published would not complicate the election. Added in section (c) is the prohibition against the appointment of an official who resigns after a sufficient recall petition is filed.

Sec. 29.30.290. FORM OF RECALL BALLOT. A recall ballot shall contain

(1) the grounds as stated in 200 words or less on the recall petition;

(2) the statement of the official ~~which appeared on the recall petition or a statement~~ of 200 words or less which is filed with the clerk for publication and public inspection within 20 days before the election;

(3) the following question: "Shall (name of person) be recalled from the office of (office)? YES () NO ()".

EXPLANATION: This section makes reference to the fact that the statement of the grounds is limited to 200 words or less and provides that the statement of the official used on the petition will appear on the ballot unless the official provides a different statement.

Sec. 29.30.300. ELECTION PROCEDURE. Procedures for conducting a recall election are those of a regular municipal election if the question is submitted at a regular election. Procedures for conducting a recall election are those of a special election if the question is submitted at a special election, except that at least 20 days notice shall be given notwithstanding an ordinance or charter provision to the contrary.

EXPLANATION: This section was changed to provide for cases in which a recall election is held as a special election.

Sec. 29.30.310. MAJORITY REQUIRED. A majority vote is required to recall an official. Only those voters residing in the district or area which elects an official may vote on the recall of the official.

EXPLANATION: This section adds a new sentence which makes it clear that if an official is elected by the voters of a district, then only those voters may vote to recall him.

Sec. 29.30.320. EFFECT. If a majority votes to recall an official, the official's seat shall become vacant immediately upon certification of the result of the election. If an incumbent is not recalled at a recall election, an new application for a petition to recall the same incumbent may not be filed sooner than six months after the date the election is certified.

EXPLANATION: The first sentence was added to make it clear when a recalled official looses his seat. The second sentence clarifies the fact that the commencement of the six month period is the date of certification of the election results.

DRAFTED CHANGES RECOMMENDED BY TECHNICAL COMMITTEE - 10 OCTOBER 1980

Sec. 29.30.330. SUCCESSORS. (a) If ~~one or more~~ an official is recalled from an assembly or council, the assembly or council, by the affirmative vote of a majority of the remaining members, may appoint a qualified person to fill a vacancy created by the recall.

(b) If all members of the assembly or council are recalled, the governor shall appoint at least three qualified persons to the assembly or council. The appointees shall, by an affirmative vote of the majority, appoint additional members to fill remaining vacancies.

(c) If ~~one or more~~ all officials are recalled from a school board the assembly or council may appoint a qualified person to fill a vacancy created by the recall.

(d) A person appointed under (a) - (c) of this section shall serve until a successor is elected and takes office.

(e) If an official is recalled the clerk, without further action by the assembly or council, shall conduct an election for a successor to fill the unexpired portion of the term. The election shall be held at least ten but not more than 60 days from the date of certification of the recall election, except that if a regular or special election occurs within 75 days of the certification of the recall election and the certification occurs at least 20 days prior to the latest date upon which first notice of the election must be published, the successor to the recalled official shall be chosen at that regular or special election. The procedures and requirements for the regular election for the office from which the incumbent is recalled apply to the election conducted under this section; provided, nominations may be filed until the later of seven days before the latest date upon which first notice of the election must be published or the deadline for the filing of nominations for regular elections. Nominations may not be filed before the certification of the recall election.

EXPLANATION: This section has been expanded to prevent a local government from having to attempt to operate without a quorum of elected officials. Section (e) was changed to take into account times required for election notice and nominations.

SUMMARY OF ATTORNEY GENERAL MEMOS AND OPINIONS CONCERNING TITLE 29 - 1972-80

1. AS 29.03.210 - .240 - (M) July 3, 1979
Vacation of a state easement across state-owned land does not constitute "disposal of an interest in land" and strict statutory requirements of notice for disposals of state land are not required. Notice required by due process are fulfilled by the notice procedures set when the state is acting as a platting authority in the unorganized borough and in third class boroughs under AS 40.15.075.

2. AS 29.13.010, 29.53.055 - (O) August 29, 1978
A strict tax-limit ordinance conflicts with state law and is void. An ordinance which, without exception, limits property tax rates would impair the obligation of contracts.

3. AS 29.13.100 - (M) July 10, 1978
Home rule boroughs are not precluded from establishing their own postsecondary educational institution which is independent of the University of Alaska.

4. AS 29.13.100, 29.48.037 - (O) May 5, 1977
Because AS 29.48.037 is identified by AS 29.13.100 as among those provisions which a home rule municipality may not provide to the contrary, it is exclusive and no additional services may be provided or jurisdiction exercised extraterritorially by any municipality. Only the matters provided for in AS 29.48.037 are within a municipality's power and it may not levy an extraterritorial tax. Insofar as revenue sharing is available for providing a serive or facility identified in AS 29.48.037, a municipality providing the service or facility extraterritorially should qualify. Ownership of the situs of the facility should have no effect except insofar as a provision on revenue sharing may contemplate ownership as a condition of eligibility. If a municipality operates a park, it makes no difference that it is on federally owned land.

5. AS 29.13.100, 29.53.035 - (O) May 19, 1972
Farm lands must be assessed at their value for farm use only.

6. AS 29.18 - (M) July 27, 1979
The Department of Natural Resources may not grant municiapl and ANCSA selections of state land within the capital site at Willow.

7. AS 29.18.180, 29.18.200-.460 - (M) February 22, 1978
Development cities are not entitled to an organization grant, only to land (AS 29.18.420) and to shared revenue (AS 29.18.440).

8. AS 29.18.190 - (M) February 14, 1974
Lands leased for oil and gas are not vacant for municipal selection. Lands classified "resource management" are appropriated and removed from municipal selection.

9. AS 29.18.201 et seq. - (M) May 22, 1979
The Department of Natural Resources should not put land selected by municipalities or by Cook Inlet Regional Corp. into the land disposal bank even though there is insufficient state land available to meet the acreage limits suggested by the letter of intent accompanying the provision creating the land disposal bank.

10. AS 29.18.201 et seq. (M) May 18, 1979
The Department of Natural Resources is obligated to approve and convey leased land which has been selected by a unified municipality prior to Julyl, 1979, the effective date of the act changing this obligation.

11. AS 29.18.202 - (M) October 19, 1978
The director of the Division of Lands may use AS 38.053.315 to do substantial equity for municipalities which do not contain "vacant, unappropriated, unreserved general grant land" for purposes of municipal selection. Mental health lands are not "general grant lands" for purposes of municipal selection.

12. AS 29.18.205(e) - (M) December 15, 1978
A nomination of land for selection by a municipality segregates it from homestead appropriation. (Interpretation of the Alaska Homestead Act.)

13. AS 29.28.030 - (M) December 15, 1978
Re-registration in a new municipality is not required before a person may vote in the municipal elections. The statute requires only 30 days residency and registration to vote in state elections.

14. AS 29.18.213(12) - (M) June 20, 1979
Kodiak Borough selections of land classified as timber land on Shutak Island should not be approved. Timber land is not "vacant, unappropriated, unreserved land" unless classified in accordance with an agreement between a municipality and the state providing for state management of municipal land.

15. AS 29.18.340, 29.23.555 - (O) September 27, 1972
A conflict of interest would arise in the event that a state employee who serves as a member of a Development City Council should also have a stock interest in the major development company.

16. AS 29.18.360, .460, 29.33.010(b), .050, .070 - (M) April 6, 1978
A development city, during its development stage, could take over planning and zoning under AS 29.33.080 from the borough, though it need not do so. An organized borough retains full authority over any schools. It is the borough, and not the development city, which must develop and adopt the district coastal management program, however, the development city's plan must be considered by the borough when it develops and adopts the coastal management program.

17. AS 29.23.020 - (M) November 6, 1978
Re-apportionment must occur when the existing apportionment does not meet equal protection (one-man, one-vote) standards. Redistribution of voting power among the existing membership (weighted voting) does not meet re-apportionment requirements for borough assemblies.

18. AS 29.23.020 - (O) February 25, 1974
The municipal code, not AS 14.12.030(a), governs the size of assembly-school boards in third class boroughs. Localities were intended to have broad latitute in determining the composition of their assemblies and the narrow restrictions on size of school boards ought not to be applied where the assembly also serves as school board.

19. AS 29.23.020(a) - (O) February 9, 1973
Inclusion of non-resident military personnel and dependents in the population base for purposes of apportioning representation on a borough assembly is not constitutionally required.

20. AS 29.23.021 - (M) March 21, 1980
Apportionment plan may provide for district-at-large representation absent an attempt to underrepresent a racial or political minority.

21. AS 29.23.021 - (M) March 20, 1980
Weighted or fractional voting is not a constitutionally valid method of reapportionment.

22. AS 29.23.100 - (O) October 31, 1974
School boards must be elected at large rather than from zones. (Incorrect - see (O) Aug. 29, 1977)

23. AS 29.23.170(a) - (O) May 2, 1977
The mayor may veto the "local source" resolution but he may not exercise an item veto upon it (or the subdequent appropriation) to strike or to reduce any of its items. The item veto is to be used solely on appropriation and my not be used on school budget "items." The "local source" resolution (setting the total amount of local money to be used to finance schools) is not itself an appropriation but rather sets the limit and advises school officials of it. A subsequent enactment makes the appropriation.

24. AS 29.23.310 - (O) August 29, 1977
Borough school board members may be elected from zones, but they must be elected only at-large from zones (while they represent the zone in which they reside, they are responsible to the entire borough electorate).

25. AS 29.28 - (O) June 6, 1977
Inaccuracy of recall petition's allegations is not concern of election officials or the courts and is irrelevant. The only question to be decided is whether or not the charges are sufficiently specific to allege incompetence or misfeasance if they were in fact true.

26. AS 29.28.140, .150(a) - (O) April 12, 1977
Recall petitions must allege specific instance of misconduct, incompetence, or failure to perform prescribed duties. Voters alone determine merits of recall petitions.

26. AS 29.23.010(b), 29.58.340 - (M) January 24, 1980
A power becomes areawide with respect to a borough and any city within it upon the duly authorized transfer of the power from the city to the borough. With respect to a city in the borough which did not transfer the same power, it is not areawide. A city which has transferred a power is not prohibited from exercising that power if the borough failed to do so.

27. AS 29.33.150 - (O) March 24, 1980
State subdivision legislation does not pre-empt local zoning of post-sale private development. A municipality may not disapprove a state subdivision plat, or prevent the sale of lots in that subdivision, based upon the fact that the land is not residentially zoned by the municipality. In the platting process, the municipality may attach reasonable terms and conditions -- including conditions relating to lot size, configuration and layout. Private buyers of lots within a state subdivision are not immune from local zoning, so, although the zoning ordinance may not be used to prohibit platting of the subdivision, or the subsequent sale of lots, the ordinance does control subsequent private development.

28. AS 29.33.150 - (M) January 21, 1980
A borough cannot require the state to do the following work in relation to a subdivision of state land: 1. define transportation corridors to be utilized for access to subdivisions; 2. analyze defined transportation corridors as to grade and soils to insure the feasibility of borough standard road contruction; 3. in all areas in the subdivision proposal where existing grades indicate potential problems, submit proposed road plans and profiles to the satisfaction of the engineering department.

29. AS 29.33.250 - .290, 29.38.020 - .030 - (M) July 26, 1979
While a first class or home rule borough can acquire additional areawide powers merely by transfer from the city, a second class borough can do so only with respect to powers which it has already acquired to be exercised in the area outside cities. That requires an election in most instances.

30. AS 29.33.010(b), .260(b), .290(c) - (M) January 24, 1980
The borough is under a duty to exercise the powers which are transferred to it when it approved the transfer. City ordinances become borough ordinances and the borough has a duty to enforce them until they are repealed or amended by the borough assembly. A city may no longer exercise power transferred to the borough, except that a city may exercise a power which is not being exercised by the borough.

31. AS 29.33.290, .360, .550 - (M) April 20, 1979
A general law municipality may not provide by ordinance for the powers to confirm appointments, suspensions, and discharges of municipal officers and employees to be extended to include more than is prescribed by the Municipal Code.

32. AS 29.33.290, 29.48.030 - (M) February 6, 1979
No authority exists for a borough to divest itself of an areawide power and thereby restoreit to a city from which it was previously transferred. Cities may presumably act as agents or contractors of the borough for carrying out its exercise of the power.

33. AS 29.33.290(c) - (O) - March 5, 1973
North Star Borough succeeds to Fairbank's interest in Alaska land notwithstanding statutory conditions on forgiving the loan by the State Bond Committee

34. AS 29.41 - (M) January 6, 1977
Third class boroughs are nothing more than school districts.

35. AS 29.43.020, 29.48.010(7), 29.53.415(a), .440, .450 - (M) January 9, 1980
The limitation placed on a borough's sales tax is three percent. A bed tax on hotel occupants should be considered a sales tax subject to the limitation.

36. AS 29.48.010, .440 - (O) August 14, 1973
A city of any class has the power to levy and collect sales taxes. Sale of utility services is a sale for sales tax purposes. Public utility cooperatives are exempt from all local sales and use taxes however. No local tax upon a utility company can be passed on to utility subscribers outside the local unit of government.

37. AS 29.48.010 - .035, 29.68.440 - (M) September 30, 1976
The Municipality of Anchorage has the power to contract to maintain local roads and trails.

38. AS 29.48.010(4) - July 16, 1975
Powers and functions may be conferred on municipalities by statutes not contained in the Municipal Code. AS 44.47.180-.230 constitute effective law and second class boroughs need not acquire additional powers under AS 29 in order to authorize expenditures of administrative costs required by those sections.

39. AS 29.48.010(11), .210 - (M) May 12, 1975
Boroughs may advance monies from their general funds to their service areas even in the absence of specific statutory authority.

40. AS 29.48.130(a)(5) - (M) October 21, 1977
Implementation of a CETA regulation regarding retirement benefits may require action by Anchorage to fund retirement contributions. Under state law, municipal funds may be used to fund these benefits only if the municipal assembly or council enacts an ordinance to that effect.

41. AS 29.48.200 - (M) July 24, 1979
Municipalities can precribe mandatory sentencing for OMVI. The maximum for violating any local ordinance is $500 and 30 days.

42. AS 29.48.260 - (M) August 22, 1979
For the limited purpose of providing certain facilities in rural areas, Regional Housing Authorities may be considered political subdivisions of the state. A municipality may dispose of its property to a political subdivision, so a racially exclusive regional association can receive municipal property for public housing programs.

43. AS 29.53.020, .045 - (M) November 9, 1977
A city may prohibit hunting as a safety measure within city limits, but not for wildlife management purposes.

44. AS 29.53.020(a) - (M) March 7, 1979
No amendment to AS 29.53.020 could modify the definition of taxable property for purposes of the general statewide property tax. The "business inventories" exemption form municipal property taxation will not affect total state revenue.

45. AS 29.53.020(a)(3), .020(c) - (M) April 5, 1973
To remain tax exempt, property may generate income solely for the statutorily expressed purposes. The income derived from property must be from only its use as classroom space under this section.

46. AS 29.53.020(e) - (M) August 17, 1979
By interpretive regulation, a property tax exemption can be limited to comport with legislative intent. The Department of Community and Regional Affairs may define "permanent place of abode" as being limited to not more than one acre if urban nor more than five acres if rural because the legislature intended to relieve senior citizens from tax burdens on their dwellings, not to create a windfall for holders of vast tracts of land. However, such a regulation must be adopted under the APA to have legal effect.

47. AS 29.53.020(e) - (g), .025 (M) September 17, 1975
State must reimburse municipalities for senior citizen exemptions even though the local tax code also exempts the property from taxation, but the Department of Community and Regional Affairs could adopt interpretive regulations stipulating that payments will be made to a municipality for revenue lost to it for claims only to the extent that senior citizens' exemption exceeds an exemption the senior citizens are eligible for under municipal ordinance.

48. AS 29.53.045, .045(e), .050 -.(O) May 16, 1978
The military population should be included in the total when calculating the average per capita assessed valuation in the state.

49. AS 29.53.045, . 050 - (M) May 2, 1978
AS 29.53.045(a) gives a municipality a choice as to the methods of taxation, but both methods are subject to the 30 mill limit.

50. AS 29.53.135 - (M) February 10, 1978
The phrase "at least ... over and above the number required for a quorum" means at least one more than a quorum. Since the statute does not set a maximum number, it may be set by ordinance. The phrase "number of members of" refers to the number required for a quorum and does not require an appointed board's membership to include assembly members. (Suggests that this statute be rewritten.)

51. AS 29.53.180(b), .390(b) - (M) December 21, 1979
Municipalities must pay interest on excess tax penalties they have levied. A municipality may initiate refunds on its own motion.

52. AS 29.53.405 - (M) February 1, 1980
Differential tax zones within cities are authorized. Changes in differential tax zones may be made by ordinance without voter approval.

53. AS 29.53.415 - (M) October 6, 1976
A city may impose a tax upon retail sales and limit it to intoxicating liquor, or apply a higher rate to the sale of alcoholic beverages than the sales of other commodities.

53. AS 29.53.415, .440, .450 - (M) August 21, 1973
A municipality may impose a sales tax on the sale of intoxicating liquor.

54. AS 29.63.010, 29.53.010-.020 - (M) April 23, 1974
State property is subject to special assessments by units of local government for improvements which benefit the property

55. AS 29.63.065 (M) October 24, 1975
The state must reimburse a municipality for special assessments which persons 65 years of age or older are exempt from paying in full at its initial levy, not in installments as allowed in AS 29.63.060.

56. AS 29.63.090 - (O) January 14, 1974
Depending upon circumstances, a service area can embrace one or more cities as well as unincorporated areas.

57. AS 29.68.010(b)(3), 29.78.010 - (M) August 24, 1979
The state and the United States need not be considered "property owners" for purposes of obtaining consent to annexation by ordinance. This way property-owner consent is not lost when state or federal holders of rights of way, easements, railroads, streambeds and the like do not consent to annexation.

58. AS 29.68.010(b)(3) - (M) April 17, 1979
The Bureau of Land Management's townsite trustee is a "property owner" for purposes of the requirement of obtaining consent to annexation.

59. AS 29.68.020 - (O) April 29, 1975
The repeal of the provision which excluded military reservations from mandatory boroughs did not thereby cause their inclusion. The borough must annex military reservations.

60. AS 29.68.240, .410 - (O) February 18, 1976
A unified municipality can issue general obligation bonds approved by the voters of its predecessor units of government.

61. AS 29.68.500 - (O) October 5, 1973
Including an existing city within a new city does not, in itself, dissolve it. (This is probably wrong, i.e., the lesser is probably swallowed by the greater.)

62. (M) August 21, 1973
There is no state law which prohibits boroughs and municipalities from levying user charges and industrial cost recovery assessments for waste treatment facilities which have been federally funded.

TITLE 29 REVISION COMMITTEE
Policy Advisory Group Meeting

Minutes of August 27 & 28 1980

The first meeting of the Policy Advisory Group of the Title 29 Revsion Committee was held August 27, 1980 in the Conference Room of the Legislative Information Office, 1024 6th Avenue, Anchorage, Alaska. The meeting was called to order by Billy G. Berrier, Director of the Division of Legal Services at 9:00 am.

Present were: Ted Berns, Terry Cook, Marilyn Dimmick, James Kohler, Gene Moore, Donna Sherby, Jonathan Solomon, Russell W. Walker, Ronald Larson, Senator Arliss Sturgulewski, Senator Bob Mulcahy, Representative Margaret Branson, Representative Charles H. Parr as members of the Policy Group. Also present were Phil Smith and Mr. Palmer McCarter, Ex Officio Members of the Policy Advisory Group. Allan E. Tesche attended representing the Technical Committee. Ted Berns and Russell Walker are also members of the Technical Committee. Mike Walleri of the Tanana Chiefs Conference, Inc., and Glen Svendsen, Administrative Assistant to the Senate Community and Regional Affairs Committee were present. Billy Berrier and Tamara Cook were present representing the Division of Legal Services, Legislative Affairs. Tam Cook explained that Ginny Chitwood from the Alaska Municipal League could not be present but would attend future meetings as an Ex Officio member.

The first order of business was the selection of a chairman for the committee. Nominations were opened and Senator Sturgulewski was nominated by Representative Parr. The nomination was seconded and Senator Sturgulewski was elected Chairman by acclamation.

Mr. Berrier spoke on the role of the Technical Revision Committee and asked for an appointment of a group. A motion to set up a Technical Revision Group was made by Representative Branson. The motion was seconded and carried. The Technical Revision Committee members will be Ted Berns, Richard Garnett, III; John Messenger, Jim Nordale, JoAnne Shanley, Gerald Lee Sharp, Allan Tesche, and Russell Walker.

The Ex Officio members were introduced and there was discussion as to their role. It was agreed that they should sit at the table and take part in the discussion. Palmer McCarter spoke about the role of Community and Regional Affairs. He said that there would be a representative of C&RA at every meeting, either he or Patrick Poland would attend. Mr. McCarter also presented a letter from the Local Boundary commission requesting the statutes regarding Development cities be left in Title 29 but improved. Phil Smith spoke on the concerns of RuralCAP regarding the impact of government on villages and rural areas.

Representative Parr suggested directions for the Policy Committee: 1). greater self determination and latitude for local governments; and 2.) that elected officials should be able to understand Title 29 without the help of attorneys. Senator Sturgulewski agreed that Title 29 needed clarification.

The members present of the Technical Committee met briefly and Ted Berns, as spokesman, gave a report regarding the ideas they discussed. The group recommended that Title 29 be broken down into three sections.

1. The first section to be general provisions applying to all local government.
2. The second section to be delineation of procedures and additional limits on specific forms of government.
3. The third section to be directory provisions to be used unless the local government adopts ordinances of their own.

It was decided that the Technical Committee should attempt to reorganize Title 29 along these lines and present a draft at the next meeting.

Mike Walleri, Village Government Specialist, Tanana Chiefs Conference, Inc., spoke, saying he would like a simplification of government.

A list of items pertaining to Title 29 included in the preliminary draft of the Alaska Municipal League 1981 policy statement was handed out. .

Future meeting dates and places were discussed. None were decided upon.

The kinds of things applicable to all municipalities were discussed, such as incorporation, dissolution, boundary changes, classification of government, extraterritorial powers, merger/consoldiation, revenue, taxation, bonding, and intergovernmental relations.

Protection of people in service areas who are not represented by local government, such as persons living outside city limits, was discussed.

The meeting recessed at 4:00 pm.

The meeting was called to order the second day at 9:00 am., Chairman Sturgulewski presiding. In addition to the persons present at the first day's meeting, Chris Johnson of House Research and Nels Franklin from near Dillingham were present, and introduced by Chairman Sturgulewski.

Ted Berns gave a recap of the first days meeting.

Terry Cook was appointed repository of ridiculous laws.

Senator Mulcahy spoke on the problem of getting information, drafts, and policy issues to all municipalities within the time constraints. Phil Smith suggested a teleconference and said that he would be presenting material at the Alaska Federation of Natives Convention (23-25 October 1980, in Anchorage). It was decided that the problem of getting materials and information to the public would be an agenda item at the next meeting. Palmer McCarter, Phil Smith, and Ginny Chitwood of the Alaska Municipal League were appointed to a committee to research this problem and make recommendations.

Melissa Fouse was introduced as the new secretary to the Title 29 Revision Committee.

As part of the reorganization of Title 29, there was discussion as to which statutues belonged in which category.

Representative Parr wants a uniform provision on executive session. There was discussion on executive sessions.

The question of retaining present categories of government was raised and discussed. Ted Berns suggested only two classes of boroughs and home rule, pointing out that there are no first class boroughs.

The question of development cities was raised and discussed. Should we retain, restructure, or eliminate development cities?

There was discussion on the third category. If a municipality choses to follow procedures, should they be required to follow all of them?

Senator Mulcahy's legislation regarding the recognition of village governments was discussed. Copies of HB 192 are to be mailed to committee members.

There was discussion of persons representing committee members being allowed to vote. Mr. Berrier had reservations based on the appointment of the members of the commission according to resolution. It was decided that persons filling in for committee members be allowed to take part in the discussion, but would not be allowed to vote.

The meeting was adjourned at 12:00 pm.

Respectfully submitted,

Melissa Aber Fouse

Land disposal —

How to structure disposal ordinance which would help keep land in hands of locals? local people don't have cash incomes, can't compete with rich folks from Juneau/Anchorage.

Would like specific authorization to exchange land between muni. & private people.
Would like lottery's to be specifically allowed.

Libby v Dillingham — decided wrong. Want statutory provisions for opposite result — Land under this section should be exempted from procedural requirement of 18 AAC 61.

Wants to be able to use planned unit Dev. (performance standard base) or pt. systems. Doesn't have to have certain no. of pts but can accumulate them in various ways - so a person could put commercial use in residential area if he could get points for

1) Set back
2) open space
3) height of building

Techniques other than zoning should be allowed

SUGGESTED CHANGES TO TITLE 29

1. Reorganize the title.
2. Adopt uniform definitions of "municipality", "borough", "organized borough" and use the terms consistently throughout the title.
3. Allow persons who buy or sell property to keep the price confidential. Since assessors must appraise at "full and true" value and since they have the right to independently investigate the value of property, appraisal need not be based on information concerning actual price. (29.53.070)
4. AS 29.28.130 is unclear as to whether an official may be subject to recall within 6 months of being re-elected. It would seem that the original intent of this section was to protect rookies rather than encumbants. Recommendation: all an official to be recalled after 6 months have been served in office. The 6 month grace period would not apply if a person is re-elected to the same office.
5. The grounds for recall listed in AS 29.28.140 are too narrow in scope. Since the grounds stated in recall petitions need not be proven, people are forced to name one of the three listed grounds even when the real reason behind the petition bears little relation to it.
6. AS 29.28.150 should be changed so that it is clear that a recall petition can seek to recall only one named official. A separate petition should be filed for each offical sought to be recalled. A petition should be required to contain the mailing address of each person who signs it.
7. AS 29.28.180 should be changed so that a new petition may not be filed sooner than 6 months after the original is rejected for insufficient content. However, the waiting period should not apply when a petition is rejected for lack of signatures.

8. There has been a fear that once a sufficient petition has been submitted and accepted, members of the council could resign and be re-appointed to the council. The statutes should preclude this possibility.

9. The statutues should be clear that the local recall effort is based on the last regular municipal election for purposes of determining the number of signatures required on a petition, not on the state election.

10. It is unclear whether a person recalled is removed from his office at once after the election has been certified, without any transition period. Some sort of transition period should be provided by statute to allow a government to continue to operate when a majority has been recalled from office.

11. Include a provision by which a state officer (governor, commissioner, etc.) enjoys authority to appoint municipal voters to fill elected council or assembly seats when the number of members drops below the number required to produce a quorum. For example, if the 5 members of the Juneau assembly are recalled, it may be that the four remaining cannot function even to the point of filling a vacancy or calling for an election to fill the vacancy, or a council or assembly might be precluded from operating by charter if there are several resignations or wholesale removals.

12. AS 29.23.025(e)(9) outlines procedures to be followed if a reapportionment ordinance has not been approved by the voters after the assembly has determined that reapportionment is necessary. The statute should address what happens to the order - is it voted on by the people? Can it be appealed? Is administrative or judicial review provided for?

13. There should be statory references providing for judicial review and relief in all appoicable instances in AS 29.23.029 and .031. References should be made in AS 29.23.031 to voter approved ordinances and reapportionment orders.
14. Use the term "general election" to refer to state, not local elections.
15. Clarify whether "health and hospital" power is one or two separate local powers.
16. Include property tax exemptions for disabled veterans of any age.
17. Analyze the kind and amount of taxes that various classes of municipalities can levy and exemptions.
18. Delete the sections dealing with development cities.
19. AS 29.18.050(8) should be changed if there are inhabitants in the area. This section of the statute does not follow the standard incorporation procedures because it was assumed that a development city would be located in an uninhabited area.
20. AS 29.18.340 should be changed to read: "the governor shall appoint no fewer than two public members from a list of nominees designated by the major developer providing the industrial base of the city as measured by employment and capital investment; and two members who are state residents preferably residing in the surrounding area or borough if the development city is located in a borough."
21. AS 29.18.360 should have the following language added: "except within an organized borough unless the borough waives DPD powers over development, planning, and zoning." This provision gives planning and zoning powers to the division of planning and research and the Dept. of Environmental Conservation during the development stage. If a project is located in an organized borough it may want some control.

22. AS 29.18.380 - add the following: "meetings shall be made public."

23. Consider the following alternatives regarding development cities:

    1. Change the law to apply to locations which include a population; providing for a more democratic process in the development state of the project.
    2. Repeal the law altogether.
    3. Limit the law to only those areas in the unorganized borough that have no inhabitants.
    4. Leave the statute as is, counting on the regulations from C and RA to clarify the confusing aspects of its application.

Definitions AS. 29.08 - Classification of Municipalities

"Municipality" as used in Ch. 08

29.08.010 - A home rule municipality is a city of the first class or an organized borough which has adopted a home rule charter and includes a municipality unified under AS 29.68

29.08.020 - A general law municipality is an unchartered borough or city

29.08.030 - Classes of general law municipalities

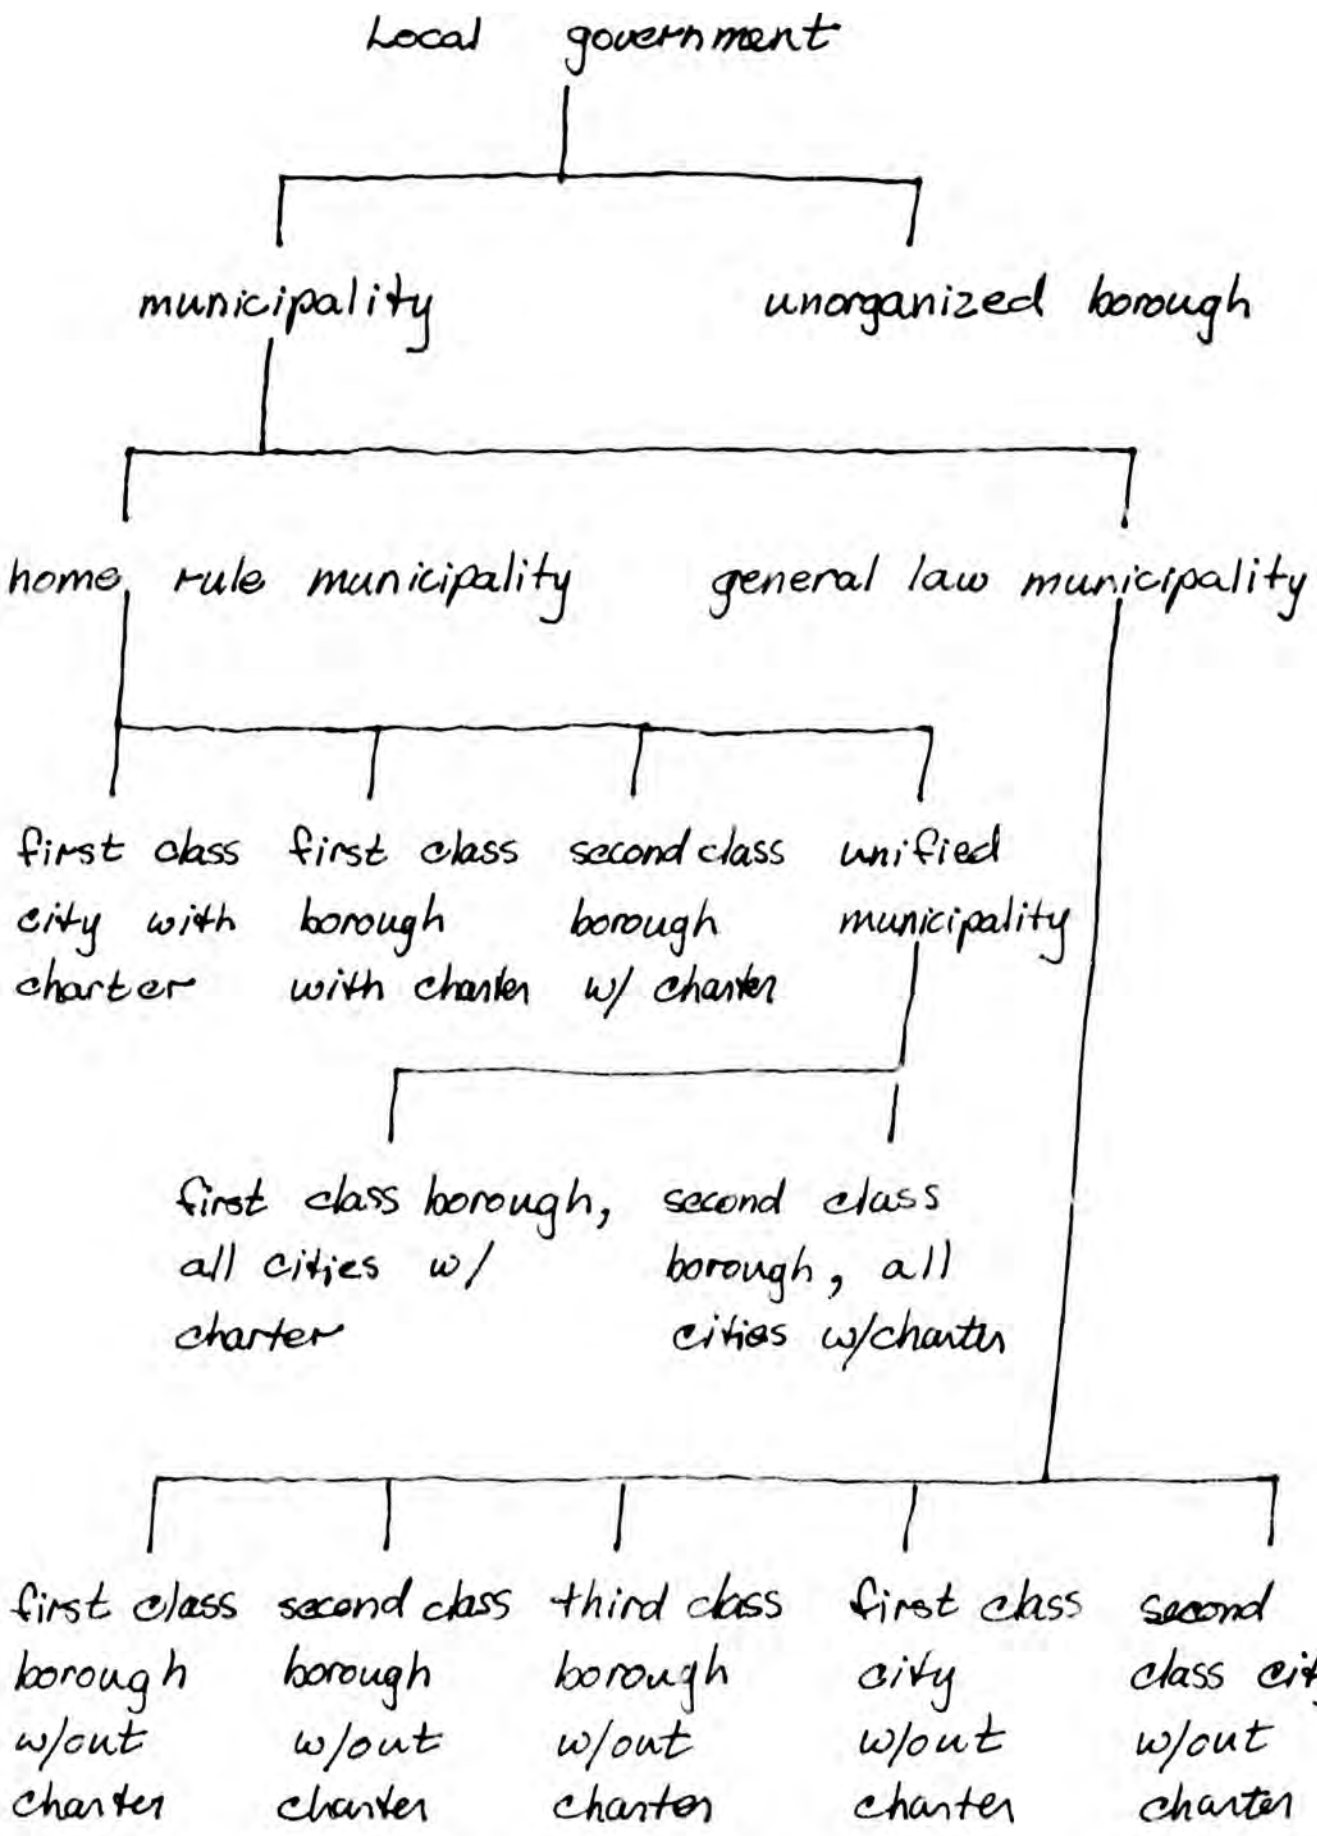
(1) first class boroughs
(2) second class boroughs
(3) third class boroughs
(4) first class cities
(5) second class cities

New Section: A unified municipality is a first or ~~organized~~ second class borough and all cities within the borough which have united to form a single unit of home rule local government by complying with Ch. AS 29.68

Sec. 29.18.213 - Cln § 201-213 of this chapter:

(7) "municipality" means a home rule or general law city or organized borough of any class, and includes unified municipalities established under AS 29.68.24 - 29.68.440.

Chap. 78 - Definitions - In this title, unless otherwise provided, or the context otherwise requires



(1) "borough" means a general law first, second or third class organized borough

(eliminate all statutory references to "organized" borough & rely on definition or use term "organized borough" in definition

(8) "municipality" means a general law municipal corp. and political subdivision, which is a first or second class borough or city, or a third class borough, incorporated under the laws of the State
(excludes "home rule", "unified" municipalities)

How about adding a definition —
"local government" means a municipality ~~and~~ or the unorganized borough

Now "borough" is defined to be an organized borough of any class yet many statutes say "organized borough" Even more confusing because the other some statutes use "organized borough" refers to only 1st & 2nd class.

Borough [Unorganized Borough
Organized Borough
1) first class borough w/ or w/out charter
2) second class borough w/ or w/out charter
3) third class borough

City
1) first class city w/ or w/out charter
2) second class city

P.O. BOX H
HAINES, ALASKA 99827

HAINES BOROUGH RESOLUTION NO. 184

A RESOLUTION OF THE HAINES BOROUGH OPPOSING THE REPEAL OF ALASKA STATUTES GOVERNING A THIRD CLASS BOROUGH AND REQUESTING THE ALASKA STATE LEGISLATURE TO AMEND EXISTING LAWS TO CLARIFY CERTAIN AMBIGUITIES REGARDING THE THIRD CLASS BOROUGH

WHEREAS, the Title 29 Revision Commission formed under Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 66 was charged to consider the experience gained in local government since the previous Municipal Code revision in 1972; and

WHEREAS, experience shows that a third class borough is a viable form of goverment without insurmontable difficulties; and

WHEREAS, experience shows that the difficulties that the only third class borough in the State of Alaska has encountered can be assuaged by some revisions of statutes and that the difficulties are not such as to warrant eradication of the third class borough form of government; and

WHEREAS, the Haines Borough is a third class borough incorporated as a third class borough since 1968,

WHEREAS, repeal of the statutes governing a third class borough will inhibit the operation of our local government;

BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED BY THE HAINES BOROUGH ASSEMBLY to request the Alaska State legislature to reverse the decision of the Title 29 Revision Commission to repeal state statutes authorizing the third class borough;

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED to request the legislature to provide for additions to Title 29 which will indicate that State statute 29.48.010 General Powers is applicable to the third class borough; which will clarify the Commission's revision to the statutes regarding the veto of the borough executive to show that the third class borough mayor does not have the veto power; which will provide for monetary transitional assistance to the third class borough should it choose to up-grade to another class; which will provide for transition from third class borough to home-rule status without the necessity of becoming a second class borough; and to work with legislative counsel to make certain that the revisions to Title 29 do not undermine the existing laws governing third class boroughs.

BOROUGH INCORPORATION STANDARDS
AS INTERPRETED BY LOCAL BOUNDARY COMMISSION

LOCAL BOUNDARY COMMISSION INTERPRETATION OF BOROUGH INCORPORATION STANDARDS

A review of the requests for borough incorporation which have been denied is helpful for the insight it gives into the Local Boundary Commission's interpretation of incorporation standards.

Article X Section 3 of the State Constitutuion outlines the standards for borough incorporation as follows:

> "The entire State shall be divided into boroughs, organized or unorganized. They shall be established in a manner and according to standards provided by law. The standards shall include population with common interests to the maximum degree possible. The legislature shall classify boroughs and prescribe their powers and functions. Methods by which boroughs may be organized, incorporated, merged, consolidated, reclassified, or dissolved shall be prescribed by law."

These standards are further refined in the statutes.

> AS 29.18.030 Organized boroughs An area may incorporate as an organized borough if it conforms to the following standards:
> (1) the population of the area is interrelated and integrated as to its social, cultural, and economic activities, and is large and stable enough to support organized borough government;
> (2) the boundaries of the proposed borough conform generally to natural geography and include all areas necessary for full development of local services;
> (3) the economy of the area includes the human and financial resources capable of porviding local services; evaluation of an area's economy includes land use, property valuation, total economic base, total personal income, resource and commercial development, anticipated functions, expenses, and income of the proposed borough;
> (4) land, water, and air transportation facilities allow the communication and exchange necessary for the development of integrated local government.

It is the role of the Local Boundary Commission to determine if a proposed boroough meets the standards for incorporation. (AS 29.18.090 (a))

In 1973 the Local Boundary Commission had requests for borough incorporation from the Anchorage area (Cook Inlet Borough petition) and the Kenai area including the City of Kenai and the North Kenai Fire Service area (Nikiski Borough petition). The two were rejected on similar grounds.

The Department of Community and Regional Affairs, in its May 11, 1973 report to the Commission, made reference to the underlying principles which prompted the framers of the state constitution to provide for the borough system of government. It reviewed the concept of borough government as an approach to areawide and regional government, functionally adaptable throughout the State as variation in geography, economy and other circumstances required. The report emphasized that the boundaries of a city are not fixed -- that the constitutional framers directed that the boundaries might be altered and the power of a city extended in response to growth and development outward from the central core.

The Department recommended that the petition be denied unless the borough boundaries were expanded to include Tetlin, Tanaccross, Dot Lake, Northway --the entire area between Delta Junction and Tok-as the proposed borough stating, "We find no reason why the entirety of the valley, an area geographically distinct, economically sound, and having the requisite transportation facilities sufficient to foster communication and interrelationship of people in their activities should be divided into separate units." (Department of Community and Regional Affairs report to Local Boundary Commission on the Deltana Borough proposal, p. 33)

In its final decision on July 12, 1974, the Local Boundary Commission found that even if the boundaries were expanded, that based on the testimony received from the residents of the area, the boundaries of the area would not comply with the provisions of AS 29.18.030 (1)"as the population of the area was not interrelated and integrated as to its social, cultural, and economic activities..."

In its statement of decision on the petiton for detachment of the Chugiak-Eagle River area from the Greater Anchorage Area Borough and for incorporation of a second class borough in the Chugiak-Eagle River area (March 15, 1976), the Commission cited the following reasons for rejecting the petition.

1. The proposed petition fails to meet statutory and regulatory standards for detachment and incorporation contained in AS 29.18.030 and AAC 19.15.230 in that the area is an integral part of the municipality of Anchorage culturally, socially, and economically.
2. There are no natural boundaries separating the area from the remainder of the Anchorage municipality.
3. The detachment would be inimical to the interest of the State in that the constitutional mandate of a minimum of local government units and tax levying jurisdictions would be violated.
4. The area is not stable enough to support orgnaized borough government in that the Eagle River-Chugiak tax base is not large enough to support necessary services without the support of the larger tax base of the entire Anchorage area.

The interpretation of the incorporation standard related to boundaries (AS 29.18.030 (2) again became an issue with the formation of the North Slope Borough. The appellants in Mobil Oil Corporation v. Local Boundary Commission argued that neither the geography nor the transportaton standards had been satisfied and that the Local Boundary Commission had erred in granting borough status to the North Slope.

In the Supreme Court decision on the case (January 16, 1974), the Court made reference to Article X Section 1 of the Constitution and stated:

> "We read this to favor upholding organization of borougns by the Local Boundary Commission whenever the requirements for incorporation have been minimally met."

The Court further found that the inclusion of Naval Petroleum Reserve No. 4 was desirable for integrated local government so that it might fall within the new borough's planning and zoning power. The record gave evidence of the Reserve's importance to the subsistence lifestyle of area residents and this evidence justified such inclusion.

SUBJECT: Financial Disincentive to Borough Formation

In this memo the net change in state aid and local effort for all REAA's upon their conversion to organized boroughs is estimated. The date of the assumed conversions is July 1, 1977; the period of state aid is fiscal year 1978. The following principal elements are considered:

1. public school foundation support (AS 14.17)
   (a) in-lieu funds for REAA's (AS 14.08.121)
   (b) basic need
   (c) required local effort (AS 14.17.071)

2. municipal revenue sharing under the terms of HB 192

3. shared corporate income taxes (AS 43.20.016)

Foundation Support

Current state funding for REAA's is at 100% of basic need under the foundation program as well as a state contribution equal to the number of REAA pupils times the average local tax contributions per pupil in the organized school districts during the prior fiscal year, which in this case was $688 per pupil for FY 77 (AS 14.08.121).

Upon conversion to borough status, an REAA loses this latter "in-lieu" contribution of $688 per pupil. For all REAA's, the loss of this support would have amounted to

for FY 78.

Also upon conversion, the new borough would have received less than 100% of basic need, the actual percentage depending on the new borough's assessed value per ADM relative to the average assessed value per ADM for all districts in the state, but in no case being less than 97% (ADM is average daily membership of pupils).

For FY 78 foundation support, the "Alaska Taxable", January 1, 1976, assessed valuation of municipalities of $9,805,715,960 was used. Using a method described in Appendix I, I estimate assessed value of outside municipalities at $110,714,000 for a total statewide valuation of $9,916,429,960 excluding oil and gas property in the unorganized borough.

With 83,274 pupils in ADM for FY 78 according to the Department of Education's "Statistical Report 1978-79", this would have been a statewide average assessed value per ADM of $119,082. As further described in Appendix I, the average assessed value per ADM for an REAA with no oil or gas property would have been $19,895.

Plugging these assessed values per ADM into the formula for determining state support (AS 14.17.021(c)) yields a level of state aid equal to 99.5% of basic need for REAA's that would have become boroughs.

From the attached statement of REAA FY 78 revenues prepared by the Department of Education, we see that total basic need for all REAA's is $47,530,826, this being the sum of amounts under the headings "federal 874" and "foundation" since PL 81-874 funds are deducted from foundation support for both REAA's and organized school districts (AS 14.08.121(a)(1) and AS 14.17.021(a)). Thus, the decrease in foundation support would be $47,530,826 times .5% or for all REAA's in total.

Finally, the assumption of borough status by an REAA would have required local effort for the first time. The required local to state match would have been 1 to 199 for all newly formed boroughs on average.

The state contribution would have been the $47,530,826 in basic need reduced by the $237,654 equilization amount and by the $17,485,871 in PL 81-874 funds or $29,807,301. This would have required a local match of

Local Effort ($149,785)

Thus, the total financial disincentive under the school foundation program for borough formation is

and is due almost entirely to loss of the "in-lieu" funds. The additional loss is about 5% on top of the "in-lieu" funds. A glance at the DOE table on REAA FY 78 revenues allows one to estimate the disincentive for any particular REAA.

It must be cautioned that these estimates are in terms of averages and that the results could differ for individual REAA's. However, the differences should not be that significant, especially for non-pipeline REAA's; even at the minimal level of 97% state support (which only pipeline REAA's would come close to) the loss of foundation support for all REAA's would have been at most $1,425,924, with required local effort decreasing to $44,100 because the match ratio drops to a minimum of 1:32. Thus, the total loss to any individual REAA would probably have been no more than 19% on top of the "in-lieu" loss.

More likely to affect these estimates are changes overtime in the contributions per ADM of organized school districts that determine "in-lieu" funds. The continued increases in the statutory level of basic need (an increase of 10% is scheduled for FY 80 -- AS 14.17.056) should not be significant since the loss due to the equalization factor was only $237,654 to start with.

Municipal Revenue Sharing

Under the method proposed in HB 192, municipal revenue sharing funds would be distributed based on a formula that takes account of population and local effort in relation to assessed valuation per capita (proposed AS 29.88.010). 1/

1/ For purposes of the revenue sharing formula, a municipality's assessed valuation may not be less than 15% of the average statewide assessed value per capita. Using the $9,916,429,960 statewide assessed value derived above and the "Alaska Taxable 1977" January 1, 1977 statewide population estimate of 398,983, we have average per capita of $24,854 of which 15% would be $3,728 per capita. However, estimated unorganized borough valuation per capita is $6,096. (from Appendix I)

If we use the Appendix I population and valuation per capita figures for the unorganized borough excluding oil and gas property (50,451 persons and $6,096 per capita) and assume the only local effort is the required school foundation match ($149,785), the total revenue sharing to all new boroughs would be only on the assumption that the appropriation for all revenue sharing is $27,000,000, the level at which HB 192 becomes effective. 2/

The $149,785 level of local effort is the equivalent of .49 mills. If the new boroughs increased their local effort above the minimum .49 mills required for school foundation aid, they would receive revenue sharing support as follows: 3/

Mills	Local Effort	HB 192 Revenue Sharing
5	$1,528,418	$ 654,387
10	3,056,836	1,308,775
20	6,113,673	2,617,551
30	9,170,510	3,926,326

If the revenue sharing appropriation were roughly $63,000,000 it would on average provide a 1 to 1 match of entitlement to local effort for new boroughs (other than pipeline boroughs).

Depending on the average mill rate in the new boroughs, the appropriation would have to be much larger to offset $7,610,656 "in-lieu" disincentive under the foundation program:

Mills	Revenue Sharing Appropriation Required to Offset "in-lieu"
5	$377,000,000
10	220,000,000
30	115,000,000

2/ Sec. 11 of HB 192 provides a minimum entitlement of $25,000 plus a COLA during the first fiscal year the act is effective. Thus, if the act takes effect before a new borough formation, this floor is of no value to new boroughs and would not in any event provide increased support beyond the first year.

3/ See next page for footnote

Thus, at common borough millages of 5 or 10 and the trigger appropriation level, HB 192 revenue sharing would provide insignificant revenues to any individual non-pipeline, newly-formed borough since the total support to 21 old REAA's would have been from $65,000 to $1,300,000.

Shared Corporate Income Taxes

AS 43.20.016 distributes the appropriation for shared corporate income taxes in an amount equal to that received by boroughs in FY 78, or for newly-formed boroughs in amount equal to the FY 78 receipts of the borough closest in population, pro-rated if the appropriation is insufficient to fund these base levels. If it is greater, the excess is distributed per capita.

FY 78 total distribution was $10,571,500. FY 80's appropriation was just a little above that, $11,400,000. If appropriation levels remain sufficient to only fund base amounts the entitlements of newly-formed boroughs would be:

REAA	Population 4/	Base Entitlement
Adak	3,200	$ 7,275
Alaska Central Railbelt	1,095	13,985
Alaska Gateway	788	13,985
Aleutian Region	2,375	7,275
Annette Island	962	13,985

3/ These estimated new Chapter 88 revenue sharing entitlements are based on a pro-ration factor of 2.61 shown on the attached Legislative Affairs computer simulation of HB 192 dated February 19, 1979. As the new boroughs took a bigger bite of the pie the pro-ration factor would decrease. Thus, the estimates for the higher millages become progressively greater than they should be. However, the estimates still give a rough idea of entitlements and a more accurate picture of the relative fiscal effect if only one or two REAA's should actually convert to boroughs.

4/ Estimated by applying ratio of total population to ages 5 through 18 from appropriate 1970 census divisions to Department of Education pupil ADM figures for FY 78 and adding population of city school districts from "Alaska Taxable 1978". The total population differs from that in Appendix I because of the inclusion of Valdez and one year later data.

REAA	Population	Base Entitlement
Bering Strait	4043	7,275

Yukon Flats	1004	13,985
Yukon Koyukuk	2828	7,275

The pattern here presents a crazy-quilt of aid in which some larger communities get less than smaller ones, with Chugach and the Lower Kuskokwim to receive substantially more than any of the others because their populations were near that of the North Slope Borough which had, of course, large business license tax receipts for FY 78.

Although the administration's estimates for the corporate petroleum income tax have remained at $160 million a year (the calendar 1978 level), legislative finance estimates the petroleum income taxes alone, disregarding non-petroleum corporate income taxes, will mount to around $600 million by FY 81. If distributions were at 10% of this level, $60,000,000, the excess of roughly $50,000,000 over base entitlements would bring $7,500,000 to newly-formed boroughs on a per capita distribution, more nearly offsetting the other financial disincentives to borough formation.

The Lower Kuskokwim should clearly gain from borough formation as should Chugach if Valdez is incorporated into the borough, even at current appropriation levels.

Other Considerations

This analysis has not considered the further decline in state support to REAA's that become boroughs that would occur for school construction. Under AS 43.18.100, the state would pick up 80% of the debt service for new borough's school construction debt whereas the state now builds entirely at its own expense the necessary school facilities for REAA's.

Of course, with the "Hooch" case settlement new boroughs school construction needs may not be that significant for some time.

One incentive not considered is the value of municipal land selections a new borough would be entitled to under AS 29.18.203. However, it may be an incentive to postpone formation since a new borough receives 10% of state lands within its boundary at the time of incorporation. So until Alaska's land status is resolved, there are disincentives here too, considering opportunity costs.

APPENDIX I
UNORGANIZED BOROUGH ASSESSED VALUES

The potential average assessed value of real and personal property in the unorganized borough is estimated in a roughshod way here, using data from several points in time, partially because that is the way the Department of Education does it for the foundation formula, and partially to not pretend to insupportable exactitude.

The FY 78 REAA pupil ADM was 10,729 according to the Department of Education's "1978-1979 Statistical Report" The average ratio of total population to school population (ages 5 through 18) for all census divisions outside organized cities or boroughs in the 1970 consensus was 3.01:1. Thus, total REAA population for FY 78 is estimated at 32,294. For purposes of estimating property values, we deduct 666 persons from this figure for Selawik and Eagle, which levy property taxes and have assessed value figures in "Alaska Taxable", but are part of REAA's.

Using some assumptions from Darbyshire & Associates, August 1979 Yukon Flats Regional Government Study (see attached page 139 from that study) -- namely, 3.5 persons per household, restricted deeds on 50% of residential property, $20,000 average value per non-restricted dwelling, and $2,000 taxable personal property per household -- I estimate assessable values outside taxing jurisdictions at $110,714,000. This is conservative in that no commercial or industrial values are inputed; such properties are assumed to be in the taxing cities in the unorganized borough.

Adding this $110,714,000 to the January 1, 1976 assessed value for all cities, except Valdez, which are outside organized boroughs, $196,849,710, we get a total assessable value for the unorganized borough, excluding Valdez and oil and gas property, of $307,563,710.

As of January 1, 1977, total population, excluding Valdez, that resided outside organized boroughs was 32,294 estimated for REAA's, plus 18,157 for school districts outside organized boroughs (from "Alaska Taxable 1977"), or 50,451.

The total pupil ADM for FY 78 was the 10,729 for REAA's plus 4,730 for all school districts, excluding Valdez, outside organized boroughs, or 15,459.

Based on these figures, the average assessed value per ADM would be $19,895 and per capita $6,096 in the unorganized borough for FY 78 excluding oil and gas property.

Column 1 - The year of projection.

Column 2 - Population - Base year is 1978 - population 1,571. The annual increase in population is projected to be 3% per year. From Derbyshire & Associates "Technical Report #2 - Data Reconnaissance."

Column 3 - Households - The number of households was estimated by dividing the projected population by 3.5 persons per household.

Column 4 - Per Capita Assessed Value - The average per capita assessed value for the state as published annually by the Department of Community and Regional Affairs. It is estimated the annual increase for the projection period will be 5% per year. From 1978 to 1979 the per capita assessed value for the state increased 13%, excluding oil and gas property. Therefore, the writer estimates a 5% annual increase over the projection period is reasonable to anticipate.

Column 5 - Maximum Operating Budget - The estimated maximum amount of revenue that can be levied through property tax for the operating budget of the proposed borough.

Formula:

Population x 225% Average per Capita Assessed Value x 30 Mills = Maximum Operating Budget.

Example: 1980

1,667 x $49,710 x 2.25 x 0.03 = $5,593,493.48 — Say $5,593,490.00.

Population - As certified by the Commissioner of Community and Regional Affairs on the Assessment Date (A.S. 29.53.045a).

Average Per Capita Assessed Value - A.S. 29.53.045a.

30 Mills - A.S. 29.53.080.

Column 6 - Locally Assessed Property/Total Property - Includes:

Real Property -

A - Residential,

B - Commercial-Industrial

Personal Property -

C - Individual,

D - Commercial-Industrial

A - Real Property/Residential: A survey of deeds issued by the townsite trustee indicates 50% of the residential property is subject to the covenants and restrictions of the restricted deed, and therefore not subject to property tax. It is estimated there is one dwelling unit per household with an average value of $20,000;

Therefore:

Households x 50% x $20,000 = Residential Assessed Value.

B - Real Property/Commercial-Industrial: It is estimated that there is $2,500/capita invested in commercial and industrial development to support the population of the proposed borough. The growth of commercial and industrial properties will equal the growth of the population.

C - Personal Property/Individual: It is estimated the taxable personal property will average $2,000/household.

D - Personal Property/Commercial-Industrial: It is estimated that there is $600/capita invested in commercial and industrial equipment and inventory to support the population of the proposed borough. Value will increase in direct proportion to the population.

Column 7 - Residential Exemptions - It is assumed 80% of the dwelling units are owner-occupied and the proposed borough will enact the $10,000 single-family owner-occupied exemption allowed under A.S. 29.53. This column gives the projected assessed value that would be exempt from taxation.

Column 8 - Locally Assessed Property/Net Taxable - Column 6 minus Column 7.

LEGISLATIVE PROPOSALS RELATED TO ORGANIZATION AND FINANCIAL EQUALIZATION IN THE UNORGANIZED BOROUGH

LEGISLATIVE PROPOSALS UNORGANIZED BOROUGH	SB 101 (1969)	HB 736 (1970)	HB 161 (1971)	HB 122 (1971)
POINT OF REGIONAL GOVERNMENT AUTHORIZED	Six unorganized boroughs and service area within unorganized boroughs (Northwestern, Western, Interior, Southwestern, Southcentral, Southeastern) Residents of each unorganized borough represented on elected five-member advisory board.	Regional unorganized boroughs, as a prerequisite to so-called regional boroughs; service areas authorized within regional unorganized boroughs. A regional borough, once established, would be supervised by an elected regional council.	None; service areas of the unorganized borough were authorized. Authority was given to the director of local Affairs Agency to establish, alter and abolish unorganized borough areas in accordance with standards he developed. Once established, the service areas would be controlled and directed by Regional Service Area Commissions, appointed or elected, whose principal responsibilities were advisory.	Second class boroughs with boundaries corresponding to the boundaries of the 12 geographic areas described by the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act. The bill made provision for elections to determine the initial powers which the second class boroughs would enjoy and for the choice of initial borough officers.
MANNER OF ORGANIZATION	Directive as to the number of unorganized boroughs; discretionary with the legislative Affairs Agency as to the subsequent establishment of service areas.	Boundary determinations for regional unorganized boroughs were mandatory; the first election for the establishment of a regional borough was also mandatory, but subsequent action seeking incorporation of regional boroughs required submission of a petition from area voters.	Discretionary with the director of the local Affairs Agency.	Mandatory, in accordance with the provisions of the legislation which require mandatory incorporation if no voluntary incorporation occurred before Jan. 1, 1977.
FISCAL INCENTIVES AND IMPLICATIONS	Authority was retained by the legislature to levy service area taxes, with the Local Affairs Agency authorized to collect any taxes which were levied; the unorganized borough boards were granted the authority to receive and expend funds.	A Regional and Community Affairs fund was established as a source of shared revenues for borough gov'ts. and for regional unorganized boroughs (with a 10% reserve for cities of the unorganized borough). To be distributed on the basis of population ratio and income deficiency. No fiscal estimate was provided. Regional unorganized boroughs might select 10% land entitlement.	No authority was granted to a service area to raise revenues within the region; presumably state grants would be made available for purposes of organization operation and provision of state services.	No incentives; the bill specifically denied to "boroughs incorporated by this act" the benefits of the then applicable ten percent land selection authorization.

UNORGANIZED BOROUGH

	SB 122 (1973)	HB 291 (1973)	HB 292 (1977)HB 9 (1979)	Governor's 1972 "Package" HB 596, HB 597, HB 598
FORM OF REGIONAL GOVERNMENT AUTHORIZED	None. This was the predecessor of legislation eventually enacted in 1975 to provide for the decentralization of responsibility for the operation of schools.	Unorganized borough districts. This legislation is quite similar to HB 596 except that the entities are called "unorganized borough districts and it modified the local hearing requirements with respect to the drawing of the boundaries of these districts and requires affirmative legislative approval of the proposed boundaries.	None.	FORM OF REGIONAL GOV'T. Unorganized borough mills each of which would have authority to adopt home rule charters. (HB 596) Boundaries would be recommended by the Boundary Commission Voters would chose 11 member advisory council in each borough.
MANNER OF ORGANIZATION	Mandatory formation of educational service areas.	(See above and HB 596)	Not applicable.	MANNER OF ORGANIZATION Mandatory formation of unorganized borough mills. (HB 596)
FISCAL INCENTIVES AND IMPLICATIONS	Full state funding of the basic costs of educational services to be provided; no authorization to generate and expend revenues from local sources.	(See above and HB 596)	The levy of a millage rate, the proceeds of which are to be deposited in the general fund to partially off-set state-funded educational costs, would constitute the first general property tax levy in the unorganized borough. The tax would necessarily fall on the improved commercial property as possibility exists 2nd Class cities would establish residential exemptions.	FISCAL INCENTIVES AND IMPLICATIONS Extension of the property tax levy on a statewide basis (HB 597), with the levy of a premium rate on certain real and personal property of companies engaged in oil and gas activities (HB 598), was, even with the credits & exceptions allowed, expected to be sufficient to meet revenue sharing demands built into the two bills. The sharing of general property tax revenue, involving population and fiscal capacity factors, represented a realistic effort to address economic disparities. Major source of shared revenue was to be 20 mill tax on pipeline property (HB 598) however, sharing scheme was converted in the House to one based on economic impact -real or imagine-non-conducive to providing revenues on a sustained basis to meet the costs of public services at the local level.

REQUESTS RELATING TO BOROUGH FORMATION

RECORD OF INQUIRIES MADE OF THE DEPARTMENT OF COMMUNITY AND REGIONAL AFFAIRS RE BOROUGH INCORPORATION

During the 1970's there have been numerous inquiries into the process of devloping borough government from communities in the unorganized borough.

Most of these inquiries were simply that -- with no action being pursued by the community. Most were initiated in response to a particular need which it was perceived local government might meet.

Admiralty Island Angoon expressed interest in borough government. Primary motivation behind interest appeared to be concern about controlling any timber development that took place on Admiralty Island. When there appeared to be no immediate threat of timber development occurring, and the Community realized that they might have a difficult time satisfying the financial requirements of a regional government, interest waned.

Cordova At the time Cordova area was seriously being considered as the southern terminus of a North Slope gas line, that area seemed very interested in borough government. Once the gas pipeline became a non-reality for the Cordova area, so did the issue of borough government.

Kobuk A petition of incorporation was received in 1974, but no follow-up action was taken to remedy deficiencies in the petition. The primary motivating factor for the request appeared to be local control of schools.

Kotzebue NANA region expressed interest in regional government 1974-75. Primary interest seemed to be the exercise of the planning power, both in the sense of controlling development within the region and controlling State and Federal activities that were taking place, at that time, on a rather random basis. NANA Regional Strategies Proposal was developed and appears to have satisfied many of the planning requirements of that particular region.

Newson Island This is a small island located in the Calista Region, which has on it the communities of Nightmute, Toksook Bay and Tununak. In the early 1970's, there was some talk of these three communities uniting and forming a small borough. The person who was the primary mover, a consultant, disappeared and so did the enthusiasm for regional government.

Nome Nome has inquired into regional government, although the only interest the Community appears to have in borough government is how they might use it as a defense mechanism to keep themselves out of any other borough.

Prince of Wales Island Strong interest was expressed in the early 1970's. The local residents' thoughts appeared to be that they could obtain additional revenues through realization of stumpage fees for forestry activities taking place on the Island, as well as have more of a say in how timber development would affect them. An additional factor for at least one community on the Island was that they desired to remove themselves from the State-operated School System. However, in the end, the independent nature of the Communities of Craig, Hydaburg, Klawock and Thorne Bay rendered the situation such that they could simply not agree on the class of borough, the powers it would exercise and how the assembly ought to be composed.

SERVICE DELIVERY TO THE UNORGANIZED BOROUGH

The Alaska State Constitution states:

> "The legislature shall provide for the performance of services it deems necessary or advisable in unorganized boroughs, allowing for maximum local participation and responsibility. It may exercise any power or function in an unorganized borough which the assembly may exercise in an organized borough."
> Article X, Section 6

There are presently three legislatively-mandated service areas:

1. Aquaculture Service Areas
2. Coastal Resource Service Areas
3. Regional Educational Attendance Areas (REAAs)

AQUACULTURE SERVICE AREAS

In 1979, the Legislature amended AS 16, the Aquaculture Program, with FCCS HB 359 (Ch. 59, SLA 1979) granting the Commissioner of Commerce and Economic Development the authority to declare qualified regional associations, incorporated as non-profit corporations, as "service areas" within the unorganized borough for the purpose of providing salmon enhancement services.

Under this provision, a regional aquaculture association, comprised of associations representative of commercial fishermen and other representatives within the region, whose board of directors includes no less than one representative of each member user group, which has incorporated as a nonprofit corporation, becomes a service area within the unorganized borough with the authority to tax designated species of salmon caught commercially within the region and apply the proceeds to salmon enhancement programs.

On July 13, 1979, Judge Allen Compton, Superior Court, declared that the state may not dedicate a tax on the harvest of a natural resource of the state to a specific purpose by the device of declaring the tax for the purpose of providing a service within a so-called service area in the unorganized borough. Further, it was the Court's view that an incorporated nonprofit association may not become a "service area," either by inference or express legislative declaration. (No. 1JU-78-191 Civil Memorandum of Decision and Order - Judge Allen Compton, Superior Court.)

The Southern Southeast Regional Aquaculture Association will appeal Judge Compton's ruling.

COASTAL RESOURCE SERVICE AREAS

Coastal Resource Service Areas are authorized by the Alaska Coastal Management Act of 1977 to plan for the coastal areas. Each regional educational attendance area containing a part of the coastal area may be organized for this purpose or two or more REAAs may be consolidated as a single coastal resource service area. Implementation of the plans which are developed is the responsibility of the state.

At the present time, residents of two areas in the unorganized borough have voted to create coastal resource service areas. The Northwest Coastal Resource Service Area, comprising the area covered by REAA 1, has elected its seven-member board and will develop a coastal management plan.

On May 15, 1979, residents of REAA 3 and 4 voted to create the Yukon/Kuskokwim Delta Coastal Resource Service Area and will elect its board members on September 11, 1979. The City of Bethel opted to be excluded from this service area. In the Yukon/Kuskokwim area, the Department of Community and Regional Affairs entered into an agreement with Nunam Kitlutsisti, Inc. (Protectors of the Land,) the environmental planning area of Association of Village Council Presidents (AVCP) to provide a public outreach program presenting organizational options and procedures for coastal management in the area.

There have been expressed concerns related to how the state, through the appropriate state agencies, will actually implement an approved district coastal management program in the unorganized borough. Under AS 38.05.037, the Division of Lands has a general grant of authority to exercise zoning powers within the unorganized borough. Until recently, this has not been a problem because the zoning power was never used. However, where land-use controls are involved in coastal resource service areas, zoning will have to be established and administered by the Division of Lands.

On this subject, Mr. Vic Fischer in a memorandum to Mr. Steve Reeve, DNR, (February 2, 1979) recommends:

> "If the state is deemed to have an overriding interest that requires it to exercise zoning authority in the unorganized borough, or at least within its coastal areas, neither ADL (Alaska Division of Lands) or DNR (Department of Natural Resources) appear to be the appropriate agency to manage the zoning program, with its strictly localized zoning, adjustment, appeals, and other aspects of continuing zoning administration. If the state is to engage in zoning, by far the most appropriate agency for the exercise of the function is the Department of Community and Regional Affairs (DCRA did not exist at the time ADL was granted zoning authority many years ago.)
> In general, states have played only a minor role in the exercise of zoning authority beyond authorizing its use by local governments. The only exception is Hawaii, where general zoning classification is handled by the state, supplemented by local government; i.e., county, regulations in urban and other development areas. Elsewhere, zoning has been applied as a local government police power.

COASTAL RESOURCE SERVICE AREAS (Cont'd)

> Except for the special authority given ADL, zoning in Alaska has traditionally been a power of cities and, more recently, of boroughs. Zoning would not have to be exercised by the state at all if provisions were made for (1) reorganization of the unorganized borough into a series of organized boroughs with planning and zoning authority (and this could be done without forcing them to tax or even manage schools) or (2) delegating the planning and zoning power to service areas within the unorganized borough, much as was done by the legislature in the case of coastal management planning."

REGIONAL EDUCATION ATTENDANCE AREAS (REAAs)

REAAs were created in 1975 as the mechanism through which the Legislature delegates to regional school boards the authority to operate the public schools using the boundaries or sub-boundaries of the regional corporations established under the Alaska Native Settlement Act or a combination of such boundaries.

Because the REAAs represent a major effort in regionalization, local control and decentralization of service delivery in the unorganized borough, the boundaries of which are also to be used for coastal zone management purposes, an in-depth history and analysis of the REAAs is included for your review.

During the early 1970's, the Center for Northern Educational Research was requested by the Department of Education to initiate a study of the delivery of educational services in the unorganized borough and the Interim Legislative Committee on Pre-Higher Education of the Eighth Legislature identified decentralization of the Alaska State-Operated Schools as the subject it wanted to study. The final report published in 1974, entitled "Pre-Higher Education in the Unorganized Borough: Analysis and Recommendations," included a wide range of recommendations. A primary point was the recognition of the need for local control of education and the relationship of that local control with local government creation.

> "In order that any plan be more than temporary, the authority for controlling education should be aligned with the development of local governmental units as envisioned by Alaska's Constitution. If local control can be defined as that measure of control which a state delegates to local units of government, then the issues of local control of education cannot be treated separately from the broad issue of the creation of local units of government. And local government units formed around the delivery of education can provide the vanguard for local control over delivery of other governmental services. Therefore, the structure created to serve educational needs must be formed in anticipaion of increases in appetites for control of other governmental functions. To ignore the need for legislative support to move toward creating local government units will only blunt the emerging desire of local citizens to assume the reigns and responsibility for their own destiny." p. 34

The Center approached this subject with a note of caution; however,

> "Local control of education in many regions is the main reason for creating local government units. All such creations, however, must await the readiness and desire of local people to assume control over them....the main sources of constituent resistance to local government stem from 1) lack of self-confidence, understandable, in the light of past history 2) groundless fear that the local tax base must be the primary source of local government, especially school funding, and 3) an acute shortage of trained personnel to handle what must seem like the endless march of administrative details.." p. 35

BOUNDARIES OF THE REGIONAL EDUCATIONAL ATTENDANCE AREAS

AS 14.08.031 (a) provides that REAA boundaries follow regional boundaries set under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act unless by referendum a community votes to merge wth another community contiguous to it but within the boundaries or sub-boundaries of another regional corporation. The use of regional lines was not intended to be exclusive as shown by AS 14.08.031 (b) prescribing certain characteristics for REAAs.

> "As far as practicable, each regional educational attendance area shall contain an integrated socio-economic, linguistically and culturally homogeneous area. In the formation of the REAAs, consideration shall be given to the transportation and communication between communities that comprise the area. Wherever possible, municipalities, other governmental or regional corporate entitles, drainage basins and other identifiable geographic features shall be used in describing the boundaries.."

Taken together, these two sections suggest that REAA boundaries are to follow, rather than cross, regional corporation boundaries where they contict them and conform to natural or other predetermined boundaries. This is how the State Department of Community and Regional Affairs, which was charged with administering the act in consultation with the State Department of Education, interpreted it in a series of informational meetings in rural areas around the state in July and August, 1975. Later they began implementing it similarly when hearings were held in numerous bush locations regarding proposed boundaries. The result of the hearings was a division of the state into some 21 REAAs. Originally 20 REAAs were created by C&RA, but after a meeting of residents of REAA 17 and the Governor, REAA 21 (including Whittier and Tatitlek) was created on September 24, 1975, dividing REAA 14 along the boundary between the Chugach and Ahtna Regional Corporations.

Frecuent mention has been made of the fact that the statutory characteristics for boundary selections of the REAAs are similiar to the standards for borough incorporation.

SERVICE DELIVERY TO THE UNORGANIZED BOROUGH (Cont'd)

ADMINISTRATION OF THE REAAs

REAA voters elect a board of from 5-11 members who are voted on "at large." In addition to the elected board for each REAA, every community (or military reservation) with a school has a community school committee. The Statute merely charges them to "review and make recommendations to the board" of the REAA "concerning the curriculum, program and general operation of the local school. They may, however, be delegated other functions by the school board.

Matters of employment, salaries, purchasing, and disbursement of funds are lodged with the REAA boards. Although the power to "adopt regulations governing organization, policies and procedures for the operation of the schools" and to "develop a philosophy of education, principles and goals for the schools" is a board responsibility, the Commissioner of Education is given overriding control of school operations.

FINANCING REAAs

All funds for REAAs are furnished by the State Legislature. They receive "basic need," as used in computing foundation aid to districts, plus an amount equal to the average per pupil local tax contributions in city and borough districts. Thus, they are relieved of local effort requirements, but the amount they can receive from the state over and above basic need is indirectly determined by city and borough decisions regarding their local tax effort. (AS 14.08.12)

Among the local financial concerns of the REAAs, even as they began their first year of operation with full state support, were the following: (See Summary of Findings Alaska School Finance Study Workshops October-November 1976, published February 1977)

1. Public School Foundation Program. While few wished to change the basic funding method, concern was expressed about the ability of the formula to provide sufficient funds to meet operating costs, especially those of small attendance centers. The validity, accuracy and amounts of instructional unit allotments (regional cost differentials) were questioned. The ability of "basic need" dollars to meet the REAAs' "basic program need" was of great concern. (Two important legislative changes made in the Public School Foundation Program in 1977 responded to the financial concern of the REAAs. One recognized the plight of the very small attendance centers and provided for an increased minimum of instructional units. The second change modified the instructional unit allotments (regional cost differentials) to be more in line with the cost of doing business in rural and isolated areas of the state.)

2. School Construction. The amount of funds available for new construction, as well as the manner in which it is provided, received extensive criticism. Even as the FY 1978 building program got underway, REAAs expressed additional concern about the proportion of bond issue building funds being retained by the supervising state agencies for administrative purposes.

3. Equity. REAAs, with no local source of revenue, have limited ability to operate discretionary programs beyond what is possible with the amount in lieu of local taxes available to each. The possibility that legislation might be enacted to tax property in REAAs was of concern.

4. Operation and Maintenance of School Facilities. Extreme operational costs often result from inheriting substandard or poorly designed facilities. Costs of operating facilities are unpredictable, and in some cases were expected to consume as much as one-third of the operating budget. Inherited utility contracts was singled out as an item of great concern.

5. Other Financial Concerns. State and federal categorical programs were items of much concern, partly because obtaining some of these funds depends upon the grant writing ability of the REAA. High costs of travel and meeting expenses for school boards and superintendents were expected to cause problems. Inadequate funding for school food service programs was also identified as a major concern. The acceptance and operation of former BIA schools was of concern because of the possibility that current funding methods might not be adequate to provide funds necessary to operate the schools. Costs of teacher housing was a problem in some REAAs.

CHRONOLOGY OF EVENTS: DECENTRALIZATION OF THE ALASKA STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL SYSTEM - 1974-1976

January 1974. Center for Northern Educational Research (CNER) releases its report, PreHigher Education in the Unorganized Borough: Analysis and Recommendations, produced at the request of the Eighth Alaska State Legislature's Interim Committee and of native leaders.

January - May 1974. Eighth Alaska State Legislature meets and reviews CNER report in committee, but does not act on the recommendations of the report concerning rural education.

July 14-16, 1974. The Alaska Federation of Natives (AFN), having assessed the Legislature's inactivity, calls an Education Strategies Conference in Fairbanks to review CNER's recommendations, to prioritize issues addressed in the report, and to determine whether and how to bring CNER recommendations to the attention and action of the new State Legislature.

August 15, 1974. Mr. Gordon Jackson, Executive Vice-President for Human Resources, at the AFN presents the recommendations and strategies from the July conference to the State Board of Education and receives their unanimous support of those items.

October 14-16, 1974. The AFN Annual Convention endorses through resolutions the PreHigher Education's recommendations and strategies. The Human Resource Committee of AFN, meeting during the convention, endorses those principles and directs staff to include those concerns into the formal AFN Education Position Paper to be presented to the newly elected State Legislature.

January 1975. The Ninth Alaska State Legislature convenes, with several bills related to the CNER/AFN recommendations prefiled. These bills include Senate Bill (SB) 35, House Bill (HB) 24, and SB 94 and SB 136.

June 4, 1975. Governor Hammond signs into law (Chapter 124, SLA 75) the Free Conference version of SB 35 and HB 24. An interim administrative structure, AUBSK, is created for the transitional year.

September-October 1975. Representatives of DOE and DCRA hold formal hearings for REAAs; public hearings are held in 21 communities in the unorganized borough; 796 people attend, representing 83 communities.

July 1, 1976. Twenty-one Regional Educational Attendance Area school boards take responsbility for education in their regions.

SB 35 AND REGIONAL GOVERNMENT *

Patrick K. Poland

The transfer of the major operational responsibilities for rural Alaska's schools from the State of Alaska (Alaska Unorganized Borough School District) to regional school districts (Regional Educational Attendance Areas) with locally elected school boards was accomplished by Ch 124, Session Laws of Alaska, 1975 (popularly referred to as Senate Bill 35).

To a great extent, the ultimate impact of Senate Bill 35 is just beginning to be realized. However, there are already several definite implications for municipal government that have arisen from the implementation of Senate Bill 35. The purpose of this discussion is to underscore these implications as they relate to the development of municipal government in the Unorganized Borough. For purposes of this discussion, municipalities consist of boroughs and first-class cities; that is, municipalities having the education function.

Regional Identification

While rural Alaska's initial encounter with the concept of regionalism came about with passage of Public Law 92-746, the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA), there is no doubt that Senate Bill 35 went far beyond the implications of the ANCSA in terms of developing regional identification. In the view of the Department of Community and Regional Affairs this was a positive step towards developing regional government in the Unorganized Borough. Prior to the passage and implementation of this particular act there were no real tests of the regional concept of service delivery taking place in the Unorganized Borough;[1] and while there were many advocates of this particular mechanism of service delivery, it remained, by and large, untested. However, with the mandate of regionalization created by Senate Bill 35, rural residents have, in a sense, been forced to test the concepts of regionalism in Alaska's vast Unorganized Borough.

Surprisingly, there seemed little if any real resistance to the idea of regional school districts. On the contrary, most rural residents seemed eager to embrace the concept. Much of this was undoubtedly due to the dissatisfaction many rural residents felt with the former State-Operated School System. Perhaps the strongest demonstration of this desire to participate in a regional approach to service delivery was the change in municipal status executed by the City of Selawik. In that particular instance, the City of Selawik, formerly a city of the first class in the Unorganized Borough and therefore having school responsibilities, petitioned the Local Boundary Commission[2] and convinced them of the need for the city to be dissolved and "reincorporated" as a second class city so that it might become a part of the particular Regional Educational Attendance Area (Northwest Arctic). Among the arguments presented in support of Selawik's reclassification was a strong statement by residents concerning their desire to be a part of the Regional Educational Attendance Area and to receive benefits they perceived as being available only to constituents of the REAA.

The Department of Community and Regional Affairs, noting the relatively warm embrace being given regionalization by Unorganized Borough residents, early in 1976 initiated a study of the acceptability of general purpose regional governments in the Unorganized Borough. That study,[3] which consumed some six months, came to a number of conclusions, the most important of which appears to be the fact that rural residents are still wary of any form of government that has the authority to levy and collect taxes. Additionally, many residents expressed concern about moving too fast; while they embraced the idea of regional school districts, they felt that the concept required the test of time before jumping to yet a new form of government. Nevertheless, the department has had inquiries from several regions (most notably the Fort Yukon, Bethel, Glennallen, and Valdez regions) concerning possible borough incorporation. To date, none of those discussions has evolved into an actual petition for borough incorporation, although it does appear that many areas are getting close to taking that step. There is no doubt that formal consideration by these regions of regional government was precipitated by the establishment of REAAs.

An additional development which, to some degree, appears to be an offshoot of the regional approach fostered by Senate Bill 35, was the passage of Ch 84 SLA 1977, which established a mechanism for regions of the Unorganized Borough to establish coastal zone management (CZM) service areas for the purpose of CZM planning. Under the provisions of that particular act any Regional Educational Attendance Area, upon determination by the local electorate, may establish itself as a coastal zone management planning district. While the legislation permits consolidation of two or more Regional Educational Attendance Areas into a CZM planning district, it does not allow individual REAAs to be subdivided into smaller districts for the purposes of planning. This is an interesting development and one that seems to further reinforce the concept of delivery services on a regional basis.

Finally, in terms of regionalization, it is interesting to note the provisions of Senate Bill 35 which deal with the boundaries of Regional Educational Attendance Areas. Specifically, the bill provides that:

> As far as practicable, each Regional Educational Attendance Area shall contain an integrated socio-economic, linguistically and culturally homogenous area. In the formation of Regional Educational Attendance Areas, consideration shall be given to the transportation and communication network to facilitate the administration and communication between communities that comprise the area.

Very similar statutory language exists at AS 29.18.030, which is the statutory provision establishing standards for borough incorporation. The similarity of the standards goes a long way towards defining appropriate boundaries for potential regional governments. In fact, to some observers, the boundaries of the newly created Regional Educational Attendance Areas (with some exceptions) generally conform to good borough boundaries. This has been a little alarming to many rural residents, since no small number of them are still concerned that the state is going to "foist" boroughs upon them.

Finance

The second major subject area that has been the topic of much discussion as a result of Senate Bill 35 is that of local government finance. As presently constituted, Regional Educational Attendance Areas, in comparison to municipal school districts, have an advantageous funding schedule. In addition to 100 percent Public School Foundation Program funding, Regional Educational Attendance Areas also receive from the State an amount equal to the average local contribution per pupil in municipal school districts multiplied by the number of students in the Regional Educational Attendance Area. This advantageous funding schedule for REAAs versus municipal districts remains a hindrance rather than an enticement for REAAs to seek organized borough status.

Since most REAAs are property poor (hence, no ability to generate tax revenues), the thought of forming municipal school districts to provide services which are currently provided by Regional Educational Attendance Areas is almost out of the question. For example, the poorest existing borough has about $20,000 worth of taxable property per capita. On the other hand, some of the Regional Educational Attendance Areas could probably expect to have considerably less than $5,000 worth of taxable property per capita. Realistically, it is impossible to provide basic municipal services without adequate funding.

The major exceptions to this discussion, of course, are those areas surrounding "the pipeline." The regions surrounding Fort Yukon, Delta Junction, Glennallen, Copper Center, and Valdez have taxable property per capita values that could easily support borough government.

Partially in response to these obvious funding inequities, the Department of Community and Regional Affairs, as a part of its final conclusions reached in its study of regional government, recommended that a new system of financing regional governments be found. Basically, the system suggested was one that placed a state-wide property tax on all property associated with the exploitation of natural resources and then, in turn, distributed those tax revenues on the basis of population and services being provided by individual boroughs. It was determined that additional study of that particular proposal areas as needed before the feasibility of it could be determined.

Nevertheless, this particular area is still a popular subject among legislators as demonstrated by current House Bill 202 and Senate Bill 35 introduced in the first session of the 1977 Legislative Session. Both those bills would levy real property taxes on developed land in the Unorganized Borough. Hearings on House Bill 202 were held this October (1977) in Fort Yukon, Delta Junction, and Tok.

Finally, one last area of financing that again discriminates between the municipal versus REAA school district is that of school construction. Presently municipal districts must pay for 50 percent of school construction while REAAs contribute no local effort towards construction of new facilities. This is seen as a significant impediment to the development of regional government for the purpose of assuming local control of education, particularly in areas which are "poor" or are marginally deficient in terms of a real property tax base.

Constitutionality

I mention this issue simply because it is one of concern to many involved with municipal government. Because REAAs are not units of local government they cannot be given taxing authority nor can they provide "local government" services.[4] While the legality of the current REAAs has not been challenged on the grounds of Article X, Section 2, of the Constitution, there is reason to believe that if additional REAA-type entities are established they will be challenged and may, on the basis of Article X, Section 2, be declared unconstitutional.

On the other hand, those defending the constitutionality of the REAAs cite Article X, Section 6, of the Constitution which authorizes the Legislature to provide services in the Unorganized Borough ostensibly through the service area mechanism. However, the significant degree of autonomy given REAAs, particularly with respect to their abilities to independently contract and incur debt, makes the argument that REAAs are service areas, and hence an arm of the Legislature, highly suspect.[5]

Summary

In summary, it can be said that formation of the Regional Educational Attendance Areas can be viewed as a positive step towards the formation of regional government in rural Alaska. In particular the newly created service areas have provided a greater amount of local control over a local municipal-type service, maintained and strengthened existing regional identifications, and provided boundaries that will be useful for the establishment of boroughs in the future.

The principal negative aspect of Senate Bill 35 has been the funding formula which maintains a disincentive to formation of municipal governments and fails to properly address the extremely poor tax base of much of rural Alaska.

Ultimately, the passage of Senate Bill 35, if for no reason other than the fact that it has generated discussion and interest, is going to have had a significant effect (probably the most significant since the passage of the 1964 mandatory borough act) towards developing regional government in this state.

Notes

1. Admittedly, certain state and federal agencies have been administering a few programs on a regional basis. However, these agencies have had the benefit of vast government financial and technical resources to assist them. In the opinion of this writer, the availability of these resources makes any comparison between the state/federal regional approach and the REAAs invalid.

2. The Local Boundary Commission is composed of five members and is responsible for reviewing and approving or disapproving all municipal incorporation, dissolution, and boundary change proposals.

3. While a final report was not issued at the end of the study, several comprehensive memorandums summarizing various aspects of the study are available from Community and Regional Affairs. As an additional result of the study, legislation calling for a Local Government Commission to study and make recommendations to the Legislature on all aspects of state/local relations is being introduced by Governor Hammond in the second session of the Tenth State Legislature (January 1978).

4. Alaska Constitution, Article X, Section 2. All local government powers shall be vested in boroughs and cities. The state may delegate taxing powers to organized boroughs and cities only.

STATUTORY INDUCEMENTS AND DISINCENTIVES RELATED TO BOROUGH GOVERNMENT INCORPORATION

XIV

STATUTORY INDUCEMENTS AND DISINCENTIVES RELATED TO BOROUGH GOVERNMENT INCORPORATION

Organizational Grants (AS 29.18.180) To defray the cost of transition to borough government status and to provide for its development and interim governmental operations, each newly created borough is entitled to an organizational grant of $25,000 or $10 per voter voting in the incorporation election, whichever is greater.

The organizational grants have not been a statutory incentive to encourage borough incorporation because the grant is not adequate and is not intended to pay for the entire cost of borough organization. Although there are no guidelines for the use of the organizational grants, a newly incorporated borough may use the funds to defray the cost of hiring a borough administrator, paying for a local assessment of real and personal property, obtaining office space, etc.

In order to provide an incentive to borough incorporation, an organizational grant would have to be at least $75,000 to $100,000 plus the initial cost involved in conducting a feasibility study on borough incorporation, and an amount equal to the cost of conducting the initial assessment and appraisal of real and personal property.

Land Selections (AS 29.18.203) A newly created borough may select ten percent of the total acreage of vacant, unappropriated, unreserved land within its boundaries on the date of incorporation. In the selection of land under the Statehood Act, it has been the policy of the State to make available to boroughs and cities the maximum land area from which to make selections consistant with the State's best interest.

The municipal land selection process is an incentive to borough incorporation to the extent that the boundaries proposed for a borough would probably include the maximum allowable vacant, unappropriated, and unrestricted lands from which to select its ten percent. However, the boundaries of a proposed borough must conform to natural geography and include all areas necessary for full development of local services.

State Revenue Sharing Program (AS 43.18.010-045) The State Revenue Sharing Program annually distributes grants to cities and boroughs based on the number of local residents in a municipality, the eligible powers exercised by each local government, the cost of living allowance used in computing total grant entitlements and the total appropriation approved for the grant program.

During each fiscal year, the Department of Community and Regional Affairs distributes State Revenue Sharing Funds to eligible cities or organized boroughs which provide specific services, and exercise the powers as follows:

Municipal Service	Rate of Entitlement
Police Protection	$12. per capita
Military	$ 6. per capita
Fire Protection	$ 7.50 per capita
Water or Air Pollution	$ 2. per capita
Land-Use Planning	$ 2. per capita
Parks and Recreation	$ 5. per capita

Municipal Service (Cont'd)	Rate of Entitlement (Cont'd)
Military	$ 1.25 per capita
Transportation Facilities	$ 5.00 per capita
Military	$ 2.50 per capita
Road Maintenance
- Public Roads	$ 1,500. per mile
- Ice Roads	$ 900. per mile
Health Facilities	$ 4,000. per fac. OR
	$ 1,000. per bed
Health Services	$ 2. per capita
Hospitals	$75,000. per host. OR
	$25,000. per hosp. OR
	$ 1,000. per bed
State Construction Aid	$ 2,500. per bed

State Revenue Sharing has had an increasing impact on municipalities since its enactment in 1969. The program funding has increased from $2.0 million in 1970 to $18.6 million in FY 1979, and municipalities have become increasingly dependent on these grants. However, due to the limited amount of funding made available for the program each year, municipalities have not received 100 percent of their grant entitlements. Last fiscal year municipalities received only 88.7 percent of their total grant entitlements and next fiscal year the Department of Community and Regional Affairs expects the program to be funded at approximately 85 percent of all the grant entitlements.

The current formula is intended to encourage existing local governments to provide financial incentives to exercise powers, improve upon existing services provided and reduce any local taxes.

Local Service Road and Trail Program (LRS&T) (AS 19.30.111-251) The Local Service Roads and Trail Program provides state assistance in the development of roads and trails on routes that are not eligible for Federal-aid highway funds. These funds are intended to provide local service roads, year-around foot trails, winter trail staking, bicycle paths, erosion control, foot bridges, boardwalks, etc.

This program is 100 percent State-funded through State bond issues. Under the program, funds are allocated to organized boroughs and home-rule cities according to a strict area/population formula. Each local government receives its allocation by submitting a three-year program with project priorities noted to the Regional Highway Engineer by October 1 of each year. A portion of the fund is also allocated to the unorganized boroughs; this money is administered by DOTPF. The communities within the unorganized boroughs receive funding based on priority and need. Each community selects its project and submits it to the Department for consideration.

The Department of Transportation and Public Facilities (DOTPF) is responsible for maintaining, causing to be maintained, or constructing any project under the LSR&T Program. However, a project constructed within the boundaries of a local government which exercises the power of streets and sidewalks may be transferred to a local government upon the approval of DOTPF and acceptance by the local government.

Local Service Road and Trail Program (LRS&T) (AS 19.30.111-251) (Cont'd)

A road, street or highway transferred to a local government under this process can be eligible to receive State Revenue Sharing funding equal to $1,500 a mile for each eligible mile for streets or highways maintained by the local government.

Although a borough stands a greater chance of being awarded local service roads and trails projects under the area/population formula, and although roads, streets and highways may be transferred to a municipality, the LSR&T Program has not been a sufficient incentive to encourage borough incorporation.

Regional Education Attendance Area (REAAs) REAAs were created with the passage of Chapter 124, Session Laws of Alaska, 1975 (popularly referred to as Senate Bill 35,) thus transferring the major operational responsibilities for rural Alaska schools (Alaska Unorganized Borough School District) to regional school districts (REAAs.) Although the REAAs created have provided a greater amount of local control over local municipal-type services, strengthened the existing regional identification of these areas, and provided boundaries that are useful to establishing future boroughs, the State funding formula has been a disincentive to the formation of borough government, and it fails to properly address the extremely poor tax base for much of rural Alaska. In addition to receiving funding for 100 percent of the Public School Foundation Program and 100 percent of the cost for new school construction, REAAs receive from the State an amount equal to the average local contribution per pupil in municipal school districts multiplied by the number of students which will approximate $710 per student this year. The Public Foundation Program will be funded approximately at 100 percent this year, and the State school construction cost will only be funded at approximately 80 percent this year. The advantageous funding schedule mentioned above for REAAs still remains a disincentive to the formation of organized boroughs unless the borough school districts can obtain additional funding to offset the increased level of funding for REAAs.

State-Shared Taxes State-shared taxes are specific taxes levied and collected by the State of Alaska (Department of Revenue) and are, in part, refunded to cities and boroughs providing municipal services. State-shared taxes refunded to municipalities include the following:

Amusement and Gaming Taxes (AS 43.35.010-090) Fifty percent of the taxes collected under this program are refunded to the municipality in which the tax is collected. Payments are made automatically, on a semi-annual basis, to all cities and boroughs upon receipt of notice of incorporation.

Aviation Fuel Taxes (AS 43.40.010-040) Sixty percent of the taxes collected under this program are refunded to the municipality in which the tax is collected, if that municipality owns and/or operates a public airport.

Corporate Income Taxes (AS 43.20.010) Effective July 1, 1979, each municipality will receive a refund equal to the amount they received as a refund under the former Business License Tax Program. Refunds are mailed automatically to municipalities, once a year.

Liquor License Taxes (AS 04.10.460) One hundred percent of the amount collected under this tax program is refunded to the municipality in which it was collected if the municipality has a police force and actively enforces State, Federal, and local liquor laws. Refunds are mailed automatically to municipalities semi-annually.

Punchboard Taxes (AS 43.35.100-150) Seventy-five percent of the amount collected under this tax program is refunded to the municipality in which it was collected. Refunds are mailed automatically to municipalities once a year.

Raw Fish Taxes (AS 43.75.130-135) Currently each borough receives twenty percent of the amount of tax revenues collected in the area outside cities and ten percent of the amount of tax revenues collected within cities. Refunds to eligible municipalities are mailed annually.

Telephone and Electric Cooperative Taxes (AS 10.25.570) One hundred percent of the tax collected from telephone and electric cooperatives is refunded to the municipalities in which the cooperative does business. A municipality's entitlement is based upon the amount of gross revenue the cooperative received from operations within the municipality's boundaries. The tax is refunded annually.

With the exception of the raw fish tax refunds, all other State-shared taxes contribute a relatively small amount of revenue to an organized borough and would not provide a statutory inducement to municipal incorporation. Depending on the amount of fish products processed within the boundaries of a proposed borough, the raw fish tax could provide an incentive to borough incorporation; i.e., the Aleutian Islands.

FISCAL IMPACT OF STATE STATUTES AND REGULATIONS ON MUNICIPALITIES

Part I of the Municipal League's legislative policy statement deals with local taxation and finance. One aspect of local revenue and expenditures which is not treated in the policy statement is the effect of State laws and regulations on the costs of local government.

Two bills introduced last session would have addressed this issue. Senate Bill No. 352 called for the preparation of fiscal notes on local costs of proposed bills by the Department of Community and Regional Affairs. This bill was a result of the work done by the Joint Community and Regional Affairs Committees' interim Local Government Study. The Municipal League was active in its support of this bill. (The companion bill in the House was numbered (Committee Substitute for House Bill) CSHB586.

Senate Bill No. 309 dealt with the local cost of State regulations, and took a somewhat different approach. SB 309 called for the preparation of "fiscal impact statement" for any change of regulations which would affect the revenue available to communities or their required expenditures. Major questions on the original bill centered around the concept of the "fiscal impact statement":

- was it to be a detailed analysis of fiscal effects on local governments or a simple fiscal note similar to that used by the Legislature;

- was it to be done on a municipality-by-municipality basis or by a lump sum figure;

- how technical should it be;

- should only direct fiscal impacts, or should indirect effects also be included;

- should there be a "threshold" level of fiscal impact or should all changes in level of impact be covered; and

- how would the fiscal impact statement process be implemented?

The Community and Regional Affairs Committee amended SB 309 to narrow the scope of fiscal impacts to direct effects on municipal revenues or expenditures. Also the Department of Community and Regional Affairs was written into the process of developing an agency's fiscal impact statement. Before this bill is reintroduced, the legislative intent in regard to the remaining issues must be clarified.

A related bill, SB 292, that required fiscal notes on the impacts of regulations on State agencies did become law. These State level impacts can be more directly estimated in terms of increased appropriations requests by each agency. However, the possible fiscal impacts on local governments are much more varied, and for the most part do not relate directly to state appropriation requests.

The goal is to develop a method of assessing the fiscal impacts of any proposed bill or regulation on local governments. In any case, the fiscal impact statements required in SB 309 and SB 352 must be completed within definite time frames. The introduction of legislation, or the submission of new regulations by a state agency for review and comment, are relatively short-term processes that will influence the nature of the fiscal impact statement process.

Any direction from the Municipal League on the scope and the level of detail that such fiscal statements should include would be greatly appreciated. It would be especially helpful to know what specific types of fiscal impacts you feel need to be addressed in such an analysis.

CREATION OF UNORGANIZED BOROUGHS

Major legislation introduced as a result of the Joint Community and Regional Affairs Committees' interim Local Government Study included Senate Bill 348.

Senate Bill 348 would have divided the present unorganized borough into distinct unorganized boroughs. These unorganized boroughs would be based on the present Regional Education Attendance Area boundaries, with adjustments made by the Department of Community and Regional Affairs. In determining boundaries for the unorganized boroughs, the Department must consider the standards applicable for borough incorporation, Native corporation boundaries and census divisions. SB 348 provided a mechanism for identifying the boundaries of the unorganized boroughs and for instituting a comprehensive planning program for each unorganized borough.

As stated in SB 348, one primary purpose of this legislation was to provide residents of the unorganized borough the opportunity to assist in planning and program development for their own regions.

In addition, State statutes on incorporation would be changed to allow an unorganized borough to incorporate directly as a home-rule borough. A procedure for preparing a home-rule charter and holding an election on the charter was included in the legislation.

ELEVENTH LEGISLATURE - SECOND SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to unorganized boroughs, establishing unorganized boroughs, establishing a program of financial assistance for the preparation of regional plans by unorganized boroughs, permitting adoption of home rule charters by unorganized boroughs, and directing submission of recommendations concerning adjustment of the boundaries of service areas of the unorganized borough; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. PURPOSE. The legislature finds that the single unorganized borough of the state has proven unworkable in accommodating demands from its residents for change and recognizes that a more systematic approach to the planning and delivery of services for residents of this area is necessary. In providing, in this Act, for identifying a common set of boundaries by which to subdivide the state's single unorganized borough into multiple unorganized boroughs, it is the purpose of the legislature to extend the opportunity to residents of unorganized boroughs to assist in planning and program development by

(1) preparing regional plans; and

(2) broadening the range of methods by which residents may incorporate a regional government.

* Sec. 2. INTENT. In providing for the division of the state's unorganized borough into unorganized boroughs, it is the intent of the legislature that all future transfers of functions or services from state agencies to regions within unincorporated areas be made only within the boundaries for unorganized boroughs established under AS 29.03.011 - 29.03.021, added by sec. 3 of this Act.

* Sec. 3. AS 29.03 is amended by adding new sections to read:

Sec. 29.03.011. ESTABLISHMENT OF UNORGANIZED BOROUGHS. Except as the boundaries are adjusted as provided in AS 29.03.021, the geographic area within each regional educational attendance area established under AS 14.08.031 is, effective 180 days after the effective date of this Act, established as an unorganized borough.

Sec. 29.03.021. ADJUSTMENT OF BOUNDARIES BY COMMISSIONER. (a) The commissioner of community and regional affairs may establish boundaries other than the boundaries of a regional educational attendance area for an unorganized borough under AS 29.03.011. Before establishing boundaries for unorganized boroughs under this section, the commissioner shall hold at least one public hearing within each regional educational attendance area. In establishing boundaries under this section, the commissioner shall consider

(1) the standards applicable to the incorporation of boroughs under AS 29.18.030;

(2) the regional boundaries adopted by the Native regional corporations established under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act; and

(3) census divisions of the state used for the 1980 census.

(b) The commissioner of community and regional affairs may not establish boundaries so that an unorganized borough includes territory within more than one Native regional corporation established under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act.

* Sec. 4. AS 44.47 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 44.47.085. ASSISTANCE FOR REGIONAL PLANS IN THE UNORGANIZED

BOROUGH. (a) The commissioner may contract with a municipality, a group of municipalities, or one or more regional Native corporations organized as nonprofit corporations under the laws of the state to prepare a regional plan for an unorganized borough.

(b) The commissioner may contract for the preparation of only one regional plan for each unorganized borough. The commissioner may contract only if he is satisfied that the party with whom he contracts is capable of preparing a regional plan that considers the entire population of the unorganized borough.

(c) When a municipality, group of municipalities, or one or more regional Native nonprofit corporations proposes to prepare a regional plan for an unorganized borough, the commissioner shall request proposals for preparation of a regional plan. The residents of an unorganized borough may petition the commissioner to request proposals for preparation of a regional plan, and the commissioner shall request proposals if the petition is signed by a number of qualified voters equal to not less than 15 percent of the number of votes cast in the unorganized borough at the last state general election.

(d) A request for proposal for preparation of a regional plan for an unorganized borough made under (c) of this section shall be advertised. The commissioner shall advertise for a period of not less than 45 days by public notice announcements provided to newspapers and radio and television stations. The advertisement of a request for a proposal for the preparation of a regional plan shall

(1) invite a municipality, group of municipalities or regional Native nonprofit corporation to submit a proposal for the preparation of a regional plan;

(2) outline the work to be completed; and

(3) contain other information which the commissioner believes will inform the public of the work to be completed under the contract, and which will assist him in evaluating proposals received.

(e) After receiving the proposals for preparation of a regional plan, the commissioner shall evaluate them. In evaluating the proposals, the commissioner may request advice from residents of an unorganized borough for which the regional plan is proposed. The commissioner may refuse all proposals and readvertise, or may accept a proposal and enter into a contract as provided in (f) of this section.

(f) A contract entered into under this section

(1) shall require that the regional plan include

(A) an analysis and recommendations concerning incorporation of a borough government for all or a portion of the unorganized borough;

(B) an evaluation of the economic development potential of the unorganized borough;

(C) a recommendation concerning capital facility needs of the unorganized borough;

(D) an examination of demographic, social and environmental factors affecting the unorganized borough;

(E) an examination of

(i) interrelationships among the regional educational attendance area, the coastal resource service area, and any other regional entity responsible for services in the unorganized borough; and

(ii) the interrelationships between the governments of cities within the unorganized borough and regional entities listed in (i) of this subparagraph; and

(F) a process for implementing the recommendations made as part of the regional plan;

(2) shall provide

(A) a mechanism for securing public participation in the preparation of the regional plan;

(B) that the regional plan be completed not later than the June 30 following the third anniversary of the date of the contract; and

(C) that payment for work performed under the contract is subject to legislative appropriation to the account established in (g) of this section;

(3) may permit the contractor to subcontract parts of the work to be performed to one or more subcontractors.

(g) There is established in the Department of Community and Regional Affairs the unorganized borough regional planning account. The account shall be administered by the commissioner and shall be used to pay for contracts entered into under this section.

(h) During each fiscal year, the commissioner may not pay to a contractor under a contract authorized by this section more than $25,000 plus $25 per capita for each person residing within the unorganized borough for which the regional plan is to be prepared, as determined by the commissioner.

(i) In this section, "unorganized borough" means a subdivision established under AS 29.03.011 - 29.03.021.

* Sec. 5. AS 29 is amended by adding a new chapter to read:

CHAPTER 19. DIRECT INCORPORATION OF A HOME RULE BOROUGH.

Sec. 29.19.010. INCORPORATION. (a) The residents of an unorganized borough established in accordance with AS 29.03.011 - 29.03.021 may apply for the incorporation of a home rule borough. The petition for borough incorporation shall be filed with the Department of Community and Regional Affairs and shall include the information and signatures required by AS 29.18.050. Petitions for incorporation filed under this section shall be processed, reviewed and determined in accordance with AS 29.18.060 - 29.18.090.

(b) A petition submitted under (a) of this section shall

(1) specify the number of members of the charter commission, but the number of members may not exceed 15; and

(2) describe the manner of election of members of the charter commission; if election is to be by district, a description of the boundaries of each district shall be included in or attached to the petition.

(c) If the petition submitted under (a) of this section requests election of charter commission members on a basis other than at large within the unorganized borough, the manner of election of the members of the commission shall conform to standards applicable to the composition and apportionment of legislative bodies which are imposed by art. I, sec. 1 of the state constitution.

(d) The standards applicable to the incorporation of an organized borough under art. X, sec. 3 of the state constitution and AS 29.18.030 apply to the incorporation of an unorganized borough under this section.

Sec. 29.19.020. CHARTER ELECTION. (a) If the Local Boundary Commission accepts the petition filed under AS 29.19.010, it shall immediately notify the lieutenant governor. Within 30 days after notification, the lieutenant governor shall order an election within the proposed home rule borough to determine whether the voters will elect a charter commission, and to determine the persons elected to serve on the charter commission.

(b) Charter commission candidates are nominated by petition signed by at least 50 registered voters residing within the unorganized borough. The lieutenant governor shall allow not less than 20 or more than 30 days during which candidates for the charter commission may present nominating petitions.

(c) The election on the question of election of a charter commission and the determination of persons elected to serve on the charter commission shall be held not less than 60 or more than 75 days after the date of the election order.

Sec. 29.19.030. PREPARATION OF CHARTER. (a) If, at the election called by the lieutenant governor under AS 29.19.020, a majority of the voters favors election of a charter commission, the persons receiving the highest number of votes cast at that election constitute the charter commission. The charter commission shall prepare a proposed charter and submit it to the Department of Community and Regional Affairs within one year of the first meeting of the charter commission. The commissioner of community and regional affairs shall review the proposed charter for compliance with laws applicable to home rule municipalities and, if it complies, request the lieutenant governor to submit the proposed borough incorporation petition and proposed home rule charter to residents of the proposed home rule borough. If the proposed charter does not comply with law, the commissioner of community and regional affairs shall return the proposed charter to the charter commission with a statement of the legal deficiencies.

(b) Within 90 days of the receipt of the statement of the commissioner of community and regional affairs indicating that the proposed home rule charter does not comply with law, the charter commission may prepare and submit to the commissioner an amended charter which meets the objections to the original proposed charter.

Sec. 29.19.040. RATIFICATION OF CHARTER. The lieutenant governor shall order an election on the question of whether the unorganized borough shall be incorporated as a home rule borough in accordance with the charter approved by the commissioner of community and regional affairs. The proposed charter shall be posted throughout the proposed borough by the lieutenant governor before the election is held. The election shall be held not less than 60 or more than 90 days following the election order.

Sec. 29.19.050. RESULTS OF RATIFICATION ELECTION. (a) The votes cast at an election held under AS 29.19.040 shall be tabulated in two classifications. One classification shall consist of all votes cast within cities of the proposed home rule borough. The second classification shall consist of all votes cast in the remaining area of the proposed borough. If a majority of the votes cast in each classification by the qualified voters of the proposed borough favors incorporation of the borough under the proposed home rule charter, the lieutenant governor shall declare that the unorganized borough in which the election was held is incorporated as an organized borough and a municipal corporation in accordance with the provisions of the home rule charter. The lieutenant governor shall provide for the election of the officers provided for in the charter.

(b) The election and qualification of officers under (a) of this section shall be completed by the lieutenant governor in accordance with AS 29.18.120 and the provisions of the home rule charter of the borough.

Sec. 29.19.060. RESUBMISSION OF CHARTER. If a proposed charter is rejected, the charter commission shall prepare, adopt and submit a second proposed charter to the voters in accordance with AS 29.19.030 - 29.19.050. The second proposed charter shall be submitted to the voters within one year of the date of the charter election held under AS 29.-19.040. If the second proposed charter is rejected, the charter commission is dissolved.

Sec. 29.19.070. VOTERS, ELECTIONS, COSTS, AND VACANCIES. (a) A person is qualified to vote in an election authorized by AS 29.19.010 - 29.19.060 if he is qualified to vote in state elections and if he is a resident of the unorganized borough proposed for incorporation as a home rule borough.

(b) The Alaska Coastal Policy Council shall recommend to the legislature, not later than January 31, 1981, whether changes should be made in the boundaries of an existing coastal resource service area organized under AS 46.40 to conform the boundaries of the coastal resource service area to an unorganized borough of which it is a part.

STATE AGENCY COORDINATION

The purpose of Senate Bill 350 was to coordinate State agency program management and service delivery. SB 350 required all state agencies to adopt a common set of geographic districts for the purposes of program planning and for data collection and publication of statistics and reports. The units were to be boroughs, home-rule municipalities, and the set of unorganized boroughs created by SB 348. REAA's would take the place of unorganized boroughs if SB 348 did not pass.

A major purpose of this legislation was to standardize the delivery of state services along a common set of districts. The legislation specifically directed State agencies to develop and implement agency plans (and coordinate their plans with other agencies) on the basis of these common geographic units.

A second intent of this legislation was to make an analysis of State service delivery easier by having all information based on the same geographic units. In addition, a variety of supporting data--such as income levels, population, health statistics, unemployment statistics, and so on--would be available for the same geographic units.

Information on both agency programs and socio-economic measures would then be available for a specific geographic area. The legislative response, in terms of agency budget requests and needed appropriations for projects or capital improvements, should become more direct and effective with this information base.

While this bill speaks primarily in terms of the unorganized borough, there are benefits to organized municipalities as well. The establishment of a common set of State agency program planning districts based on borough boundaries should prove to be a very powerful tool. In addition, the formal designation of boroughs and unorganized boroughs as "State planning districts" would affect federal program planning and service delivery districts as well. Overall, the existing boroughs and unified municipalities should gain in their ability to influence State and Federal agency programs because information on all agency plans can be coordinated and compared. The inter-relation of agency plans can be seen more directly, and can be responded to more efficiently. Finally, the availability of socio-economic data on a borough-by-borough basis will make it easier for local governments to respond to a variety of data requirements used in State and Federal agency programs.

Your comments on the desirability of having State agencies adopt a common set of program planning and service delivery boundaries would be helpful.

CAPITAL PROJECTS FOUNDATION FUND

A Capital Projects Foundation Fund would have been established by CSSB546. This Fund would provide capital construction and maintenance funds to all areas of the State. The allocation of funds, based on a formula incorporating both population and land area, would guarantee that funds are available annually to each area of the State.

To be eligible for Foundation funds, each area--whether it is a borough, unified municipality, home-rule municipality or REAA (or "unorganized borough" if created under SB 348)--must have a capital improvements program (CIP). Projects funded must appear on the local CIP, but need not be funded in order. Foundation funds would not lapse, but could be held over from one year to the next to fund a major project. Foundation funds can also be used as local match required for other State and Federal grant programs.

The attached information sheets summarize the provisions of SB 546 in more detail.

The Municipal League gave its support to SB 546 during a statewide teleconference hearing held on April 16, 1980. The key issues brought out at that hearing centered around: the allocation formula; the role of first and second class cities within boroughs and to the regional planning councils established for REAA's (or unorganized boroughs if applicable); and whether the Foundation was intended to replace or simply supplement existing state capital programs. The Municipal League also expressed concern about the make-up of the regional planning councils.

The committee substitute for SB 546 attempted to satisfy the concerns expressed on these issues. Most importantly, the allocation formula was changed to give more weight to an area's population, while still maintaining some sensitivity to the scale of improvements required in areas with a small population dispersed over a wide area. The present formula provides that 70% of the annual appropriation will be distributed on the basis of population, and 30% on the basis of land area. Under this formula, for example, Anchorage would receive about 30% of the total appropriation, which is comparable to the proportion of the state's total general and special capital appropriations the Municipality received for fiscal year 1980. This revised formula should help reassure Alaska's larger communities that they are not, in actuality, giving up potential capital funds to other areas of the State.

The second major issue addressed in the revision of SB 546 was the relation of first and second class cities to boroughs and to the regional planning councils in the unorganized borough. CSSB546 specifically allows first and second class cities to undertake funded projects on their own, if they exercise the authority to operate the facility to be funded. In those cases where a city is located within a borough that also exercises the same authority, the city and borough can agree on how the responsibility for constructing and operating a facility is to be divided. In the unorganized borough, project responsibility may be transferred by DOT/PF to the city, upon concurrence of the city council.

First and second class cities are also guaranteed representation on the regional planning councils established in the unorganized borough. Each first class city will be represented on the planning council by at least one elected city official. Other members of the regional planning council will be drawn from elected officials of second class cities within the region, and from unincorporated communities.

Finally, the Capital Projects Foundation Fund was intended to supplement the present grant programs for specific capital projects that are administered by various State agencies. In fact, CSSB546 specifically states that Foundation Funds may be used as match for State and Federal grant programs. The intent was to partially institutionalize the present system of general and special capital appropriations to communities, rather than replace existing State grant programs.

In summary, the Capital Projects Foundation Fund is a very important piece of legislation in terms of municipal capital planning and financial management. The Municipal League's support of this concept was greatly appreciated. Any suggestions on how this idea can be improved would be helpful and receive serious consideration. Your continued support of this idea will be critical during the next legislative session.

Information Sheet

CAPITAL FOUNDATION FUND

The Capital Foundation Fund will, by appropriation, provide funds to all areas of the State for certain capital improvements. To expend funds, each area will need to develop an areawide capital improvement plan, approved by the local assembly when there is one. and developed with the Department of Transportation and Public Facilities when there is no local government.

Organized and unorganized boroughs are encouraged to conduct regionwide planning to avoid costly duplications of capital projects and to prioritize, on the local level, needs among communities, rather than leaving this process to state level government.

Each area, so long as appropriations are made, is certain of a source of funding for local projects. Each area will receive a formula share of the appropriation. This stability will be advantageous to local governments for planning purposes. Additionally, unlike the current situation, areas may have greater ability to use capital projects for anti-cyclic economic benefits by being in control of fund expenditures. Annual funds do not lapse and may be accumulated for locally determined purposes.

Capital Foundation Funds may be used as the local match required for certain state and federal projects. This will be particularly significant in rural areas which do not now have a source of local match.

Funds are eligible for both construction and maintenance costs. This means that local governments will be encouraged to consider life-cycle costs and encouraged to maintain buildings and other improvements in order to maximize the efficiency of their capital dollars.

Local governments, under the Capital Foundation Fund program, will be assured of a steady supply of state funds for capital improvements that will be directed toward locally determined project needs and can be expended at a locally determined pace.

(2) by the city, if the city has the authority under AS 29 to operate and hold title to that type of facility; or

(3) by either the borough or city as they may agree, if both the city and the borough have authority to operate and hold title to that type of facility.

(c) An entitlement from the capital projects foundation fund for a project in a first or second class city which is part of the capital improvement plan of an unorganized borough or a regional educational attendance area may be distributed to the city with the concurrence of the city council subject to the following terms:

(1) that the city will secure, retain and protect title to the site of an existing facility or to the site on which a new facility is to be constructed; for purposes of this paragraph it is sufficient that title is obtained in fee or by a lease which provides that the city enjoys exclusive use of the site and any improvements for the estimated life of the facility;

(2) that the city will assume responsibility for the operation of the facility to be financed with the entitlement, and the feasibility of the discharge of this obligation shall be demonstrated to the satisfaction of the commissioner before the payment of the entitlement.

(d) If it appears that the cost of a capital project financed by an entitlement from the capital projects foundation fund to an organized borough, home rule municipality, or unified municipality will vary substantially from the cost estimated at the time the entitlement was made for the capital project, the recipient is responsible for obtaining the additional money needed to complete the project. If a capital project financed by an entitlement from the capital projects foundation fund to an organized borough, home rule municipality, or unified municipality costs less to complete than estimated at the time the entitlement was made, the recipient may use the excess entitlement for other capital projects in its capital improvement plan.

(e) Each regional council shall annually determine which projects in its capital improvement plan to finance with entitlements from the capital projects foundation fund to an unorganized borough or regional educational attendance area. The department is responsible for the design and construction of the projects selected by a regional council under this subsection and shall carry out the projects in accordance with AS 35 unless the commissioner allows a city to receive and use an entitlement in accordance with AS 44.42.140(b).

(f) An entitlement from the capital projects foundation fund may be used to match state or federal grants.

Sec. 44.42.160. DEFINITIONS. In AS 44.42.100 - 44.42.160

PROPERTY TAX LEGISLATION

Part I-B of the Municipal League's 1980 Legislative Policy Statement addresses the local property taxing system and the place of state mandated property tax exemptions and reimbursements.

There were a number of specific property tax exemption bills introduced during this legislative session. A summary of that legislation in a letter to Dave Walsh was included with your agenda for this committee meeting. In some cases, that legislation did not provide for state reimbursement of revenues lost by local governments.

Item I-B-1 and I-B-2 both call for reimbursement of lost tax revenues by the State. This policy could receive more legislative support through the passage of a bill such as SB 352, requiring a fiscal note on the local costs of proposed bills. The clear presentation of the costs of legislative action to local governments would make lawmakers more aware of the effect of property tax exemption on local government.

There are a number of other taxation issues not directly addressed in the League's Legislative Policy Statement that are worthy of consideration. These policy questions include the following:

1) The long-term effects on state revenues and expenditures.

   As Alaska's population and economy grow, the value of the exempted property will also grow. Senior citizen's homeowner tax exemptions, for example, have increased from $197,050 in 1973 to $1.8 million for fiscal year 1979. (Part of this increase was due to lifting the $10,000 maximum allowable exemption in 1974.)

   State analysts project a decrease in state oil and gas revenues starting in 1990, dropping by 5% to 10% annually thereafter. Creating a number of mandatory property tax exemptions, including such exemptions as business inventory, the first $25,000 assessed residential property values, and so on, will simply add to the future drain on state revenues. This situation will become critical when total revenues decline to present levels and below.

   The long-term concern is that communities will be left without reimbursement for property tax exemptions if state revenues decline. Will the Legislature continue to fund exemptions? Will tax laws be revised to eliminate various mandatory exemptions in the future? Or will local governments simply be left with smaller tax bases?

   Local property taxes are potentially a major component of state income. As of January 1, 1979, locally assessed property was valued at $13 billion, while state assessed oil and gas property was valued at another $12 billion, of which $7.6 billion was located within local taxing jurisdictions.

2) The equity of mandatory exemptions.

Mandatory exemptions raise a number of equity questions. As the list of mandatory exemptions grows, the local tax burden falls on an increasingly narrow portion of the local population. This is especially critical for exemptions which result in loss of local revenue which is not reimbursed by the state. Even if local revenue losses are made up by the state, the equity question is still pertinent, as some other, non-local source of revenue is paying for local services from which it may not benefit.

3) A Rational Exemption System.

Can there be any rational system developed for deciding which groups of taxpayers should be relieved of a property tax burden. The Department of Community and Regional Affairs suggests that an exemption must result in a clear public benefit, in order to justify an increased burden for other taxpayers.

There is at present no set of guidelines on how this "public benefit" is to be measured or assessed, or no policies of how deserving groups within the population should be identified or treated. A number of "worthy" groups were identified in last session's legislation, including disabled veterans, surviving spouses of senior citizens that had received property tax exemptions, and so on. Is there any way that the desirability of tax exemptions for these groups can be distinguished from disabled persons and veterans, as a whole, or other deserving segments of Alaska's population.

4) Corporate U.S. Residential Property.

What is the relation of exemptions for business property to exemptions for the real and personal property used for residential purposes. A bill introduced last session would have exempted business inventory from taxation, with state reimbursement to municipalities for lost revenues. Would this type of exemption create sufficient public good to justify shifting this tax burden to the State general fund?

5) Part I-C of the League's 1980 Legislative Policy Statement focuses on local taxing powers. A bill introduced last session (SB 299) would have reduced the maximum rate of taxation from 3% of assessed value (30 mills) to 0.9% of assessed value (9 mills). This limitation would seriously constrain local ability to raise revenue.

6) Renters and Property Owners.

Balancing the property tax exemption benefits of property owners and renters presents another equity question. A property tax equivalency payment is currently made to senior citizens who rent their homes. Legislation passed this session raised the level of payment that will be made to renters that are senior citizens.

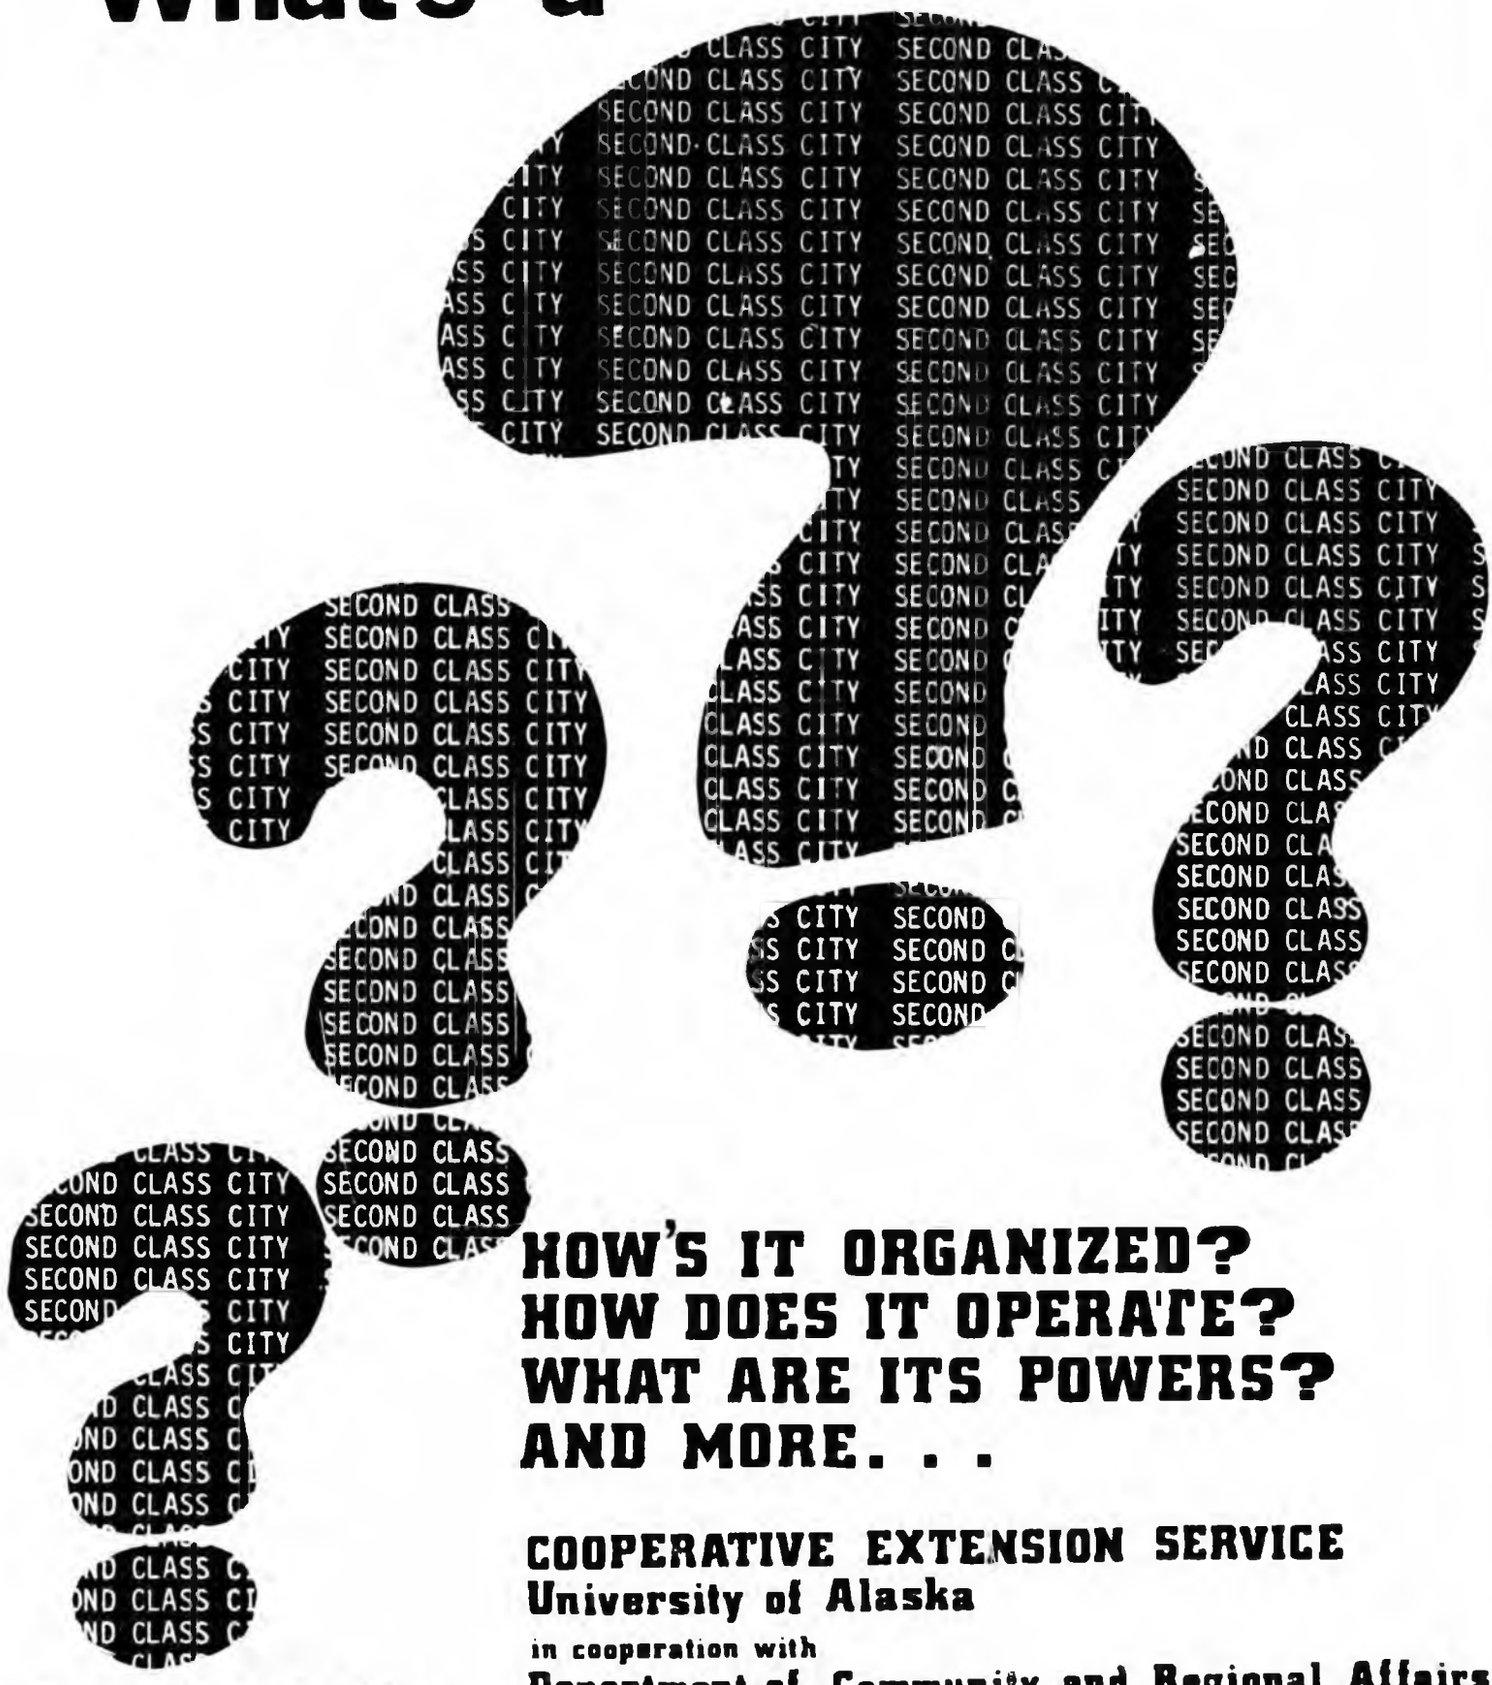
Will the State adopt similar equivalency payments for other types of property tax exemptions in the future? This is especially important in the case of general property tax exemptions. Senate Bill 296 would have mandated that the first $25,000 of assessed value of owner-occupied homes be exempted from taxation. Should such an exemption be also applied to all renters, and how could it be done equitably?



In summary, there are far-reaching questions on the purpose, nature and benefits of property tax exemptions. These questions need more thought and understanding.

There will undoubtedly be a major effort during the next legislative session to reduce or eliminate the property tax liability of various groups and interests. The Municipal League is the organization that most directly reflects the combined opinions and desires of the state's municipal governments. It would certainly be in the Municipal League's best interests to develop a thorough policy statement on the overall question of property tax exemptions, and on the nature of property tax legislation most acceptable to local governments in Alaska.

BRECKENRIDGE, COLORADO:

AN EXPERIMENT IN

REGULATORY SIMPLIFICATION

By

Kirk Wickersham, Jr.

INTRODUCTION

It has been my experience that land developers will acceed to almost any demand on the part of public planners -- even unreasonable and illegal demands -- if in doing so they can move their project forward or make its approval more certain. This observation underlies the basic philosophy of this essay. Substantive controls can be as rigorous and comprehensive as any community could reasonably wish without serious protest from development interests, so long as the decision-making process is quick, cheap, straightforward, fair and predictable.

There are some interesting corollaries which flow from this thesis:

- If we do not clean up the procedural aspects of land use decision-making, we run the risk of losing the substance of land use, environmental and growth controls in a popular backlash to over-regulation and bureaucratic meddling.
- Procedural reform need not reduce the substantive requirements for performance by the developer.
- Some of the developers' savings from procedural reform can be passed on to the future residents of the project in the form of lower initial prices or increased amenities, or to the public through an increase in the amount or quality of dedicated public improvements.

Procedural simplification is in the best interests of everyone involved in the development process: developers, future residents, concerned citizens, staff, and elected and appointed officials.

This essay begins with an analysis of the gradual development of complex regulations, and proceeds to a series of specific proposals for uncorking the regulatory bottleneck. It then describes an application of these ideas in the recently adopted Breckenridge, Colorado, Development Code.

THE EVOLUTION OF COMPLEX DEVELOPMENT REGULATIONS

Traditional Controls

The simplest form of land use regulation always has been, and still is, the use-by-right under traditional zoning. It usually consists of only a perfunctory check of the plans by the zoning administrator, and involves no notice, hearing or discretionary decision.

Subdivision regulations were first adopted to ensure that lots close, that streets were of the proper width and alignment, and that the tax assessor was apprised of the new ownership configuration. Because these issues are handled by elected officials at a public hearing, they became the vehicle for enforcing an ever-increasing number of public concerns with development. Today, subdivision regulations are the most common form of "impact assessment" and discretionary control over development.

Traditional controls are not just procedurally simple, they are also substantively simple. That is, they address only a few of the myriad impacts of new development and redevelopment on the community, and by present standards, the traditional controls have not served their purpose. The old elements of the urban environment which we cherish, and now seek to preserve and restore, were developed prior to any land use controls. Yet much of what we consider ugly, banal, stale, and wasteful -- tract housing, strip commercial development, high-rise redevelopment and the auto-dominated, landscape -- has been developed pursuant to traditional zoning and subdivision regulations.

Discretionary Controls

The demand, from both developers and consumers, for variety and innovation in the design of new development has led to the widespread use of two types of discretionary controls: the special review use and the planned unit development. Both are a direct outgrowth of the traditional functions of the board of adjustment. They recognize that planning and design considerations, and not just "hardship", are proper grounds for variances from rigid use, density and setback requirements.

Special review uses (sometimes called "conditional uses") are uses which may be compatible with surrounding development, depending on the circumstances. They are granted in the discretion of the governing body on the basis of an impact analysis.

Planned unit development is a technique which permits variation in rigid requirements, and encourages good site design, in medium to large scale projects. It, too, is granted in the discretion of the governing body, on the basis of an analysis of the site design.

Single Purpose Controls

During the late 1960's and early 1970's, general prosperity, easy credit and the formation of new households by children of the post-war baby boom combined to create massive new development pressure. At the same time, all levels of government became more actively involved in the development process.

On the one hand, the federal government passed, in rapid succession, a series of financial incentive programs designed to revitalize decaying inner cities and rural areas. Each of these programs, of course, fostered its own blinding maze of eligibility and compliance requirements to be met by the applicant.

Simultaneously, federal, state and local governments all responded to the public demand for an end to mindless degradation of the environment and waste of irreplaceable resources. At the federal level, the prominent programs included legislation on air pollution, water pollution (sewage treatment), management of coastal areas, and, of course, the National Environmental Policy Act. Many states passed their own environmental policy acts, and laws loosely modeled after the American Law Institute's Model Land Development Code, which called for more stringent regulation of critical areas and major development projects.

Generally, local governments or local councils of government bore the burden of implementing and administering this federal and state legislation on a daily basis. In addition, local government was expected to revitalize core areas, protect established neighborhoods, and control growth in fringe areas.

Within the span of a few short years, the development review process passed from a rather perfunctory check of an engineer's subdivision drawings to a years-long, multi-faceted, adversary process, involving dozens of public hearings before as many different local, regional, state, and federal bodies; massive, multi-volume technical evidentiary and impact-analysis materials; and a star-studded multidisciplinary, synergistic cast of lawyers, planners, engineers, ecologists, sociologists, geologists, and intergalactic philosophers.

Each law passed during this period addresses only a single issue, but has its own unique set of substantive and procedural requirements. The responsibility for juggling all these requirements falls completely and exclusively on the developer, since a defeat on any major permit or financial incentive program can doom an entire project. Thus:

> If N is the number of independent requirement for getting ultimate permission to develop, then the number of steps necessary to coordinate these requirements is roughly N^2; therefore, as governments add development requirements arithmetically, problems for developers increase exponentially.

Almost everyone will agree that the substance of this recent patch quilt of regulation has resulted in better designed and engineered development, has protected sensitive natural areas and encouraged inner-city revitalization, has begun to clean up our air and water, and has forced us to carefully examine our assumptions of [illegible] all generally to the public benefit. However, the procedural aspects of this regulation have raised the cost, lengthened the time and heightened the uncertainty of the land development process. This, in turn, has driven many small- and medium-sized developers out of business, and apparently has significantly increased the price of housing to the ultimate consumer.

At this time, the attack on regulation of the land development process is part of the general public reaction to inept and excessive government, and public servants are defensive. It is possible that, if the procedural problems with development regulation are not solved, the general backlash to bureaucratic red tape will reduce or eliminate the substantive gains which were achieved in this recent legislation.

The Hassle Theory of Managing Growth

There is an implicit assumption in the above discussion that communities do not intend to saddle developers with excessive and repetitive procedural requirements. This is not true in some cases, where local officials or citizen groups have perverted procedural requirements to create outrageous evidentiary requirements or processing times, or to contrive a Catch-22. The purpose of this is to bankrupt the developer or to so discourage him that he will abandon the project before a decision is made on the merits.

In such communities, procedure has become substance. Although responsible management of the rate, location or ultimate amount of new growth is now recognized as a valid public concern, accomplishing that goal by hassling developers is insidious for a variety of reasons:

First, it is fundamentally deceitful, since it implies something which is not true: that permission to develop will be granted upon compliance with all stated rules.

Second, it defeats all principles of proper planning, since tenacious, litigous, rich developers can prevail, while smaller, more civilized, developers will be defeated regardless of the merits of their respective projects.

And last, it produces bad value for the consumer since the costs incurred in fighting the local government must be passed on to the ultimate purchaser, even though they add no substantive value to the development.

THE BASIS FOR A SOLUTION

Before we begin the analysis of the principles of reform as contained in the Breckenridge Code, there are some general considerations to be mentioned:

1. There is a distinction to be observed between substantive requirements and procedural requirements. At this time "simplifying" the substantive requirements for development is not in the overall public interest in most communities. Indeed, most communities continue to be built poorly, with little regard for the social, environmental, economic, fiscal, aesthetic or energy impacts of redevelopment and development. These communities might benefit from additional controls (or at least better controls) in these substantive areas.

2. The only valid purpose for the procedural requirements in processing a development proposal is to ensure that it complies with the community's previously adopted substantive requirements.

By way of comparison, here are some invalid purposes:

- To kill the proposal or create a "chilling effect" on making other proposals.
- To provide employment for lawyers, planning consultants and other "experts".
- To provide employment for the planning staff.
- To give the public sector time to dream up new rules to apply to the project.

With these two principles in mind, we can turn to some specific aspects of procedural reform.

REFORMING THE RULES

To maximize the decision-making utility of the community's plan, draft one section of it as specific rules to be applied to development proposals and adopt those rules directly into law.

Be Comprehensive

One way to simplify the development regulation process is to make it predictable, so that everyone involved knows that, if the developer complies with the rules the project will be approved and if he does not it will not be approved. This requires that all the rules be stated up front.

In most cases all the true concerns of the community are not set forth in the written rules, because the community has conflicting goals, or because some lawyer told the city council that there is no precedent for such a rule or because the planning process did not uncover the public concern. None of these are good excuses for failure to articulate the concern or adopt the rule.

Generally, the true concerns of the community are applied to development proposals regardless of whether they are set forth in the adopted rules. When an "unwritten" rule is applied against a developer he feels ambushed. When one is applied over the protests of the citizenry, they feel betrayed.

Since the unwritten rule will probably be applied anyway, why not write it down and adopt it?

Be Accurate

Another element of predictablility is the accurate use of language in the rules.

The homogeneity and banality of much of our postwar development has been blamed in part on rigid performance requirements, like the twenty five foot front setback. The modern response from planners often has been to write performance "standards" that read like a list of buzz words. The application of such "standards" is left completely to the discretion of the decision-makers, or even to staff. Understandably, the results of the process are unpredictable.

We should, and can, demand better. By this, I do not advocate a return to rigidity, but the simple, clear articulation of the community's values and what the developer is expected to do about them. Rules should speak to root problems, not superficial or cosmetic treatments, and they should set forth the desired final condition. The technique or method for achieving that condition should be left to the ingenuity and creativity of the designer, working with the peculiarities of the site, the project and the developer's financial resources.

If performance requirements are desired, they should be set forth, not as immutable law, but as presumptive evidence that the desired results will be achieved. Thus, for instance, a twenty-five foot setback should not be a legal requirement, but merely presumptive evidence that the house will be located a safe and comfortable distance from the street.

Use the Imperative Tense

Perhaps because of the language in the National Environmental Policy Act, it has become common to ask developers what their impact will be, then to make a decision on the basis of the evidence provided. Such open-ended requirements result in great cost, time delays and uncertainty for developers, staff and others involved in the process. The evidence is usually not arrayed in a useful format for decision-making, and there is often simply too much of it to be digested by a volunteer lay decision-maker such as a planning board member. The multiple volumes of self-serving justification produced to meet such regulatory requirements are not necessary to produce quality projects.

Tell the developer what result, or impact, the community wants, then ask him how he or she will achieve that result. The clear statement of the community's goals gives the developer the direction required to be successful, cuts the evidentiary requirements, and structures the public participation and community decision.

Of course, not all community concerns can be stated as absolute rules: prohibiting this feature or requiring that one. Most of them will be expressed in terms of encouraging and discouraging, or in terms of making tradeoffs between conflicting community goals. Weighted point systems can be used to encourage or discourage features, and to structure the tradeoff between conflicting goals. To achieve a set of rules which enables tradeoffs to be made, the actual tradeoff must be designed and put forward by the developer, considering the unique characteristics of the site the use, and the design, and applying the particular weighted value and mix of the encourage/discourage rules, but in the development proposals. Thus, each community concern should be subject of a separate rule, and each rule should address only one community concern.

Monitor and Update Regularly

Communities change. In fact, it seems that the rate of change in both technology and political attitudes is increasing. If the rules for new development do not keep pace with the changing values and conditions in the community, the written rules will become obsolete and irrelevant, and new unwritten rules will probably be substituted. Thus, any system which aspires to completeness and accuracy must include an ongoing survey of conditions and attitudes, and a periodic updating of the development rules.

REFORMING THE DECISION-MAKING PROCESS

Once the community has established a comprehensive set of rules for developers to follow, it can begin instituting the procedural reforms which cut the time, expense and uncertainty of the development review process.

Be Comprehensive

"Comprehensive", when referring to the set of rules, means adopting rules to address each community concern. When referring to the decision-making process, it means:

1. Combining all the different permissions required of the development into one all-inclusive permit. This cuts the hearing requirements and staff review time, so the process is quicker and cheaper for staff and the developer and easier to manage for concerned citizens and lay volunteer decision-makers. It also has a valuable "substantive" benefit: Only where all concerns are combined into one decision can tradeoffs between conflicting community policies be addressed and resolved. A single comprehensive decision should be a more accurate reflection of the community's values and opinions than the sum of the decisions on dozens of single-issue permits.

2. Making every development proposal subject to the rules, regardless of its size or complexity. The only projects which should not be scrutinized (i.e., which should be uses-by-right) are those which we know will not have any offsite impact, good or bad. Moreover, we must know this from only a plat plan, and we must know this to a legal certainty.

Rather than attempting to live with the risk of failure in this regard, it would be easier to make all, or virtually all, proposals subject to review. This can be made politically acceptable by instituting the procedural reforms set forth in this essay.

Standardize the Evidentiary Requirements

Use of rules drafted in the imperative tense enables significant savings in the time and cost of assembling and reviewing the evidence on the project. A one-page standardized form for each rule can be developed, which contains space for:

1. The text of the rule and the source of data, studies or other information available to the public regarding that rule.

2. Space for the developer to describe what he has done to comply with, or implement the rule.

3. Space for staff comment, which might be limited to only boxes for the staff person to check "agree" or "disagree" with the developer's evidence.

4. Space for noting comments made by the public at the hearing.

5. Space for the planning board to record its decision.

These forms are bound together and, along with the required maps, renderings, etc., comprise the complete application and file on the project. Although this type of evidentiary package is bulky, it results in significant savings in time and expense and (because it serves as a checklist) it ensures that all community concerns are properly addressed in the project.

Use the Staff

In many communities, especially in rural areas where the planning profession has not developed a very good reputation, the staff is limited to gathering data and engineering analysis, and it is not allowed to express professional opinions or to apply community policy. This is a waste of professional staff resources.

A comprehensive, accurate set of rules is essential to the proper delegation of the authority to make judgemental decisions to the staff. Once this is done, however, it results in a saving of time and expense for the public, and in the community's wise use of its precious volunteer resources in public bodies.

Reduce Lead Time

Lead time is the advance warning given to participants in the process to enable them to adequately prepare. The most common lead-time requirements in the development review process are the period given for comment by referral agencies or groups, and the notice of a public hearing.

In many cases, lead times were established years ago in the community's organic planning documents, when both planning and communications technology required lengthy response times. Today, however:

- Many referral agencies use computerized engineering and demographic models, checklist procedures, and standardized requirements, which cut their actual review time from weeks to hours.

- To an increasing extent, sophisticated neighborhood organizations with ongoing responsibilities, and perhaps even staff support, have replaced the ad hoc coalition of activists as the medium of citizen comment.

- Official public notices can be placed on cable TV or posted on community bulletin boards much quicker than they can be published in the newspaper.

To the extent that these advances in planning, technology and political sophistication enable the community to reduce lead times without materially sacrificing the quality of public or agency participation in the process, they should be implemented.

Eliminate Dry Runs

A "dry run" is a hearing at which no substantive progress is made toward the decision. The most prevalent example is the advisory planning board hearing. It generally requires a long lead time for notice and full attendance by volunteer members of the board; complete presentations by staff, the developer, and concerned citizens; elaborate findings; and conditions on approval. But then what happens?

Nothing. The governing body calls another hearing, again with long lead times for notice. Full attendance is required. Complete presentations are made by staff, the developer, and concerned citizens. Elaborate findings are made and conditions are drafted up and then the actual decision is made on the proposal.

Of course, many controversial projects are subject to multiple continued public hearings before each body.

One of these sets of hearings is irrelevant. If all the participants in the process -- staff, developer, citizens and officials -- have done their homework, there is no need to hold two hearings. If they have not done their homework, there should not be a scheduled public hearing simply to find that out.

There are two keys to eliminate dry runs of the type just described:

1. Quasi-judicial process. At the present time, most discretionary land-use decisions are rezonings and subdivision approvals which are treated as legislative matters which are required, by state statute, to be made by the governing body. The more streamlined and predictable approach is to adopt the rules for land development proposals directly into law, and then to apply those rules to proposals as they come in. The drafting and adoption of such rules is a legislative act and must be accomplished by the governing body; the interpretation and application of those rules to a particular proposal, however, is a quasi-judicial decision which can be made by an administrative body -- in this case, the planning board. Thus, the use of a permit system instead of a rezoning system results not only in more uniform decisions (due to the application of pre-set standards), but also enables the elimination of an entire set of hearings before the governing body. Of course, it may take more than one hearing date for the planning board to take all the evidence it needs to make the decision. Also a call-up or appeal to the governing body should be available to correct mistakes in the application of the rules by the planning board.

2. Confidence. Public hearings are used to establish and maintain confidence in the decision-making process: to ensure that the decision is fair and that all of the substantive requirements have been met. Public hearings are neither efficient nor convenient, however, and multiple hearings might be reduced if the substantive merit of the decision will not be affected. To achieve this, the following must take place:

   - The governing body must have enough confidence in the planning board to delegate to it the interpretation and application of the rules (subject, of course, to an appeal).

   - There must be sufficient confidence in the staff to allow it to analyze the proposal and draw conclusions.

   - Both the developer and the concerned citizens must believe that the pre-stated rules will be the only basis for the decision, and that the only way they can affect the outcome is to argue their case on the merits.

   These matters of confidence can become self-fulfilling prophecies. In communities where the planning board is given the authority to make final decisions on development proposals, it generally attracts first-rate people who can handle that responsibility. Likewise, first-rate professionals are attracted to communities which allow them to exercise their professional judgment.

Minor Projects

The impact of a project is generally proportional to its size or cost. This presents an opportunity for even further reduction in the procedural requirements for minor projects. The normal list of referral and review agencies can be reduced, as can the time limit for receiving their comments. Instead of elaborate publication in an obscure section of the newspaper, public notice might be effected by handbills distributed in the immediate neighborhood. The final decision might be made by the staff director or a hearing officer, but again with an appeal to or call up by the planning board and governing body.

Since all minor projects do not have minor impacts, staff must be given the discretion to refuse an application under such "fast-track" procedures and insist on a full review of the project.

Review and Appeal

Many elected officials would consider it a dereliction of their public responsibilities to delegate final decision-making authority to staff or an appointed planning board. They will monitor such processes closely, especially at the beginning.

If the developer or concerned citizens are given the absolute right to appeal the planning board's decision to the elected officials, the loser in any contested proceeding will of course do so. This will eliminate many of the intended advantages of the procedural reforms described above, although many decisions are not contested.

A better way of monitoring is to establish a "call up" procedure: a person who feels that the lower decision was made incorrectly has the right to make that argument before the elected officials. If a majority of the elected body agree, they can vote to "call up", or rehear, the lower decision. At first, the elected body may wish to review every decision to ensure that the system is working properly. Later, it will limit its review to substantial questions of interpretation of the rules. Of course, the governing body acts as an administrative body (just like the planning board) when it rehears a proposal in this fashion.

THE BRECKENRIDGE DEVELOPMENT CODE

Breckenridge, Colorado is a small Victorian mining community at 9,600 feet in the Colorado Rockies. Development of a ski area and large man-made lake spurred massive recreation development pressure in the 1960's. This pressure was intensified in 1974 with the opening of a tunnel through the mountains which made the community more accessible to the Denver metropolitan area and its international airport. During this period the town has experienced several severe cyclical swings in construction activity. In 1974 the community embarked upon an ambitious comprehensive planning program which included analysis and policy development on a broad range of social, economic, environmental, public facilities, demographic, historical/cultural and urban design factors. The work culminated in March of 1978 with the adoption of the Development Code and supporting administrative materials. Although, at this writing the Code has been in effect for only one building season, it has been used to process over $115 million worth of new residential, commercial and recreational development. The twin principles of this essay -- rigorous substantive requirements coupled with procedural simplicity -- were employed in the development and adoption of the Code and the administrative materials used with it.

Description of the Code

The Code is one of the first known instances of the exclusive use of the Permit System to regulate all aspects of development. Under it, there are no uses-by-right and virtually no prohibited uses, no prescribed density or intensity of use, and no bulk or setback requirements. These matters, as well as the full range of social, economic, public facilities, environmental, and design considerations in the various Plan documents, refined for each neighborhood, are set forth in a complete set of development rules, or "policies", contained in the Code. There are three types of policies:

- Absolute Policies -- which require or prohibit certain features. Failure to implement an absolute policy defeats a development proposal.

- Relative Policies -- which encourage or discourage features by allocating positive or negative points to the proposal based on its performance. Relative policies are assigned a "multiplier": a number between one and five which indicates the policy's relative importance. The proposal's score on each policy, then, consists of its performance points multiplied by the importance factor for that policy. The development must achieve a total score, for all the relative policies, of zero or better.

The policies governing land use set forth, for each neighborhood, uses which are presumed to be compatible, uses for which the compatibility must be proven by the developer, "pre-emptive" uses which (although they may be compatible with existing development) may discourage certain kinds of future growth in the area, and uses which are presumed to be incompatible (although they are not prohibited). The only use-by-right is the existing use on the property.

- Density Policies -- Density bonuses are awarded to projects which perform above the minimum necessary to get by, in the following manner:

  An optimum density is set forth for each neighborhood, and increases in density above the optimum are penalized with increasingly heavier point deductions. An excellent project will score way above zero points, the minimum necessary to obtain a permit. These "excess" points may be traded off against negative points assigned for excess density designed into the project. In this way, the developer is rewarded with increased units for good design, amenity, or public benefit.

There are three different decision-making procedures, depending on the magnitude of the project:

- Type C Development -- Minor changes in existing buildlings, which sometimes does not even require a buildling permit (remember that Breckenridge is a sensitive historic community set in a beautiful, but fragile natural environment). The application is very brief, and the decision is made by the staff within five days of application.

- Type B Development -- Minor subdivisions, and buildings of a value under $100,000. Applications for Type B development may be referred to selected public agencies for comment prior to staff review of the project. A public hearing and decision are made by the staff within ten days of the application.

- Type A Development -- All other development activity in the community. The application is subject to full referral and review by public agencies and utilities, and a complete staff report is prepared. The public hearing is conducted by the Planning Commission, and a final decision is made within forty days of the application.

In all instances, the Planning Commission may rehear a staff decision and the elected Town Board may rehear a Planning Commission decision. A variety of covenants, bonding requirements, dedications and other conditions may attach to a permit to ensure that the policies are implemented as represented.

The Code in Operation

The entire Breckenridge planning staff consists of two professionals and a secretary. As mentioned above, over $115 million worth of new development has been processed under the Code during the first building season. Although significant controversies have arisen on some projects, all decisions have been made within the time limit specified.

Processing and decision on the application focuses on the developer's "evidentiary package" which consists of the application form, plans, drawings and renderings, and one-page evidentiary forms (one for each policy) completed by the developer. Because of the small professional staff and severe time constraints written into the ordinance, a developer is not permitted to submit more evidence than can be contained on the few lines provided on each evidentiary form without the permission of the Director of Community Development.

Most referral agencies have been able to respond in the short time allowed under the Code. If they do not, they are presumed to have no comment; not to have approved the project. Thus, if a response comes in late, the "no comment" presumption is rebutted. This may cause a problem for staff, which must integrate a late comment into its report with no extension of its own processing deadlines.

Breckenridge is served only by a weekly paper, which comes out the day after the Planning Commission meets, and which has a deadline several days before publication. This posed serious problems for reducing the lead times for public hearings. Breckenridge, however, is a small community with a sophisticated and politically active citizenry. Therefore, it was determined that notice for the public hearings on minor projects would be posted on community bulletin boards rather than published in the paper. This simple expedience has cut the decision-making time for minor projects in half with no apparent decrease in the quality of the decision.

On major projects, the staff report consists of commenting on the sufficiency or quality of the developer's evidence, plus its recommendation for assignment of points. The staff report is available for review by the developer and the citizenry prior to the public hearing, and the format of the evidentiary package provides a good framework for negotiation. Most public hearings have been free of rancor, and the Planning Commission generally ratifies the staff's recommendation for assignment of points and issuance or denial of the permit. In those instances where serious disagreement has arisen between the developer and the staff or the public, the debate has proceeded one policy at a time. At the end of the evidence on each policy, the Planning Commission has assigned points and moved on to the next policy. On one recent major project, this process took almost six hours. It is possible, however, that if the decision had been made pursuant to normal rezoning procedures, it could have taken numerous hearings over a period of a year or more, and then ended in litigation.

Before each Planning Commission meeting the Director of Community Development reports on the permits he has granted and denied in the interim. The Planning Commission then hears requests for "call up", from developers or the public. Although it has reviewed staff decisions, very few instances where the Planning Commission has reversed a staff recommendation or decision have occurred. And while it monitors the permit activity of the staff and Planning Commission, the Town Board has not yet called up a lower decision.

Policies and procedures in the Code are to be reviewed annually after the building season, on the basis of what was permitted and actually built; changed conditions, if any, which have resulted from the new growth; and changes in political attitudes.

CONCLUSION

So far, two major questions have arisen about the ideas expressed in this essay, as they have been applied in the Breckenridge Code:

> Does a community need an elaborate, expensive plan before it can implement a Breckenridge-type system?

The various studies and reports which comprise the Breckenridge Plan are the analytical foundation for the policies contained in the Code, and without them many policies could not have been adopted, or could not now be implemented. According to the principles of this essay, if a rule is not adopted into law, it should not be applied to development proposals. Thus, comprehensive planning and periodic updating are essential to the adoption and implementation of the reforms described in this essay. However, an extensive, high quality program such as that undertaken in Breckenridge is not required. In fact, the resources which most communities presently devote to comprehensive planning, if redirected to provide the foundation for a decision-making system such as the one described in this essay, would probably be more than sufficient.

What About Discretion?

Some people believe that this type of system achieves regulatory reform only by unduly constricting the discretion of elected public officials. This is not true. The system does not constrain the exercise of discretion by elected officials. It simply structures it, making decisions more uniform and predictable.

With the exception of the taking of private property without compensation, racially exclusionary practices, and other constitutional considerations, there are practically no constraints on the contents of the rules which can be adopted to govern development (and any constraints, of course would apply to zoning decisions as well). If all of the community's concerns with development are adopted as rules, then there can be no valid additional consideration or "hidden agenda". In other words, the elected officials are not giving up the right to impose any rule they choose, but only the "right" to invent new rules, or change existing ones, while a proposal is being processed.

Given a reasonable alternative, most communities (even those where environmental quality and limited growth are paramount concern) would reject the arrogant assertion of such unbridled power on the part of their elected officials.

Developers have responded positively to the Code, and the developers of larger projects have generally attempted to obtain density bonuses through provision of superior design and increased amenities. As a result, many projects approved since the Code has been in effect are clearly superior to their predecessors, and the community has expressed satisfaction -- and even pride -- with its new development.

The principles used in the Code are broadly transferrable to communities of all sizes, and with a wide range of physical conditions, human values, and growth pressures (or lack thereof) so long as the principles are modified to reflect those unique conditions. For instance, in larger cities the system should be refined to reflect the unique characteristics of each neighborhood, as well as overall community policy. Also, incentives other than density bonuses may be necessary in less dynamic communities, or communities with large amounts of vacant, developable land. Somtimes state law prevents consolidation of permits at any one level of government, or sets forth particular notice requiremnets and lead times. But if these or other issues thwart the adoption of one or more reforms, the entire effort should not be abandoned. The Permit System, as well as its constituent parts, can be used to advantage by almost all communities with development pressure.

A Lot More Than Just An Ordinance: The Breckenridge Development Code

Kirk Wickersham, Jr.

Breckenridge, Colorado, was founded as a gold mining community in the 1860s. Like all mining communities, it was located for proximity to ore, not necessarily in a place conducive to human habitation. It lies 9,600 feet in the Colorado Rockies, nestled between 14,000 foot peaks. While the mines (and later on, gold dredges) were operating, the town prospered—there are many fine examples of "Mountain Victorian" architecture still evidenced in the community. However, when the mines and dredges closed down, the community became a virtual ghost town, and remained so until the Breckenridge ski area opened in the 1960s.

In the late 1960s and early 1970s the community experienced a series of boom-and-bust cycles which created severe environmental, public facilities, financial, and social problems. As a result, in 1974, the community hired a local consultant to develop data, policy, and impact analysis techniques for all growth factors of concern to the community. The study began with a thorough articulation of the social, economic, environmental, and public facilities goals of the community, eventually including professional planning reports on each subject. The final planning document analyzed land use and intensity in each of 34 neighborhoods. The policy information contained in the analysis documents applied to each neighborhood, articulating its desired pattern, intensity, design, and phase of development or redevelopment. The resulting Breckenridge Development Code then extracts policy principles from the neighborhood plan documents, adopts them directly into law, and uses the studies and reports as reference materials.

What emerges is a land use and growth decision-making system which is unique to Breckenridge. In essence, it is the ultimate permit system. However, it uses principles of policy planning and impact analysis techniques not uncommon in many progressive communities. Therefore, although the policies described below may not be particularly transferrable to other communities, the ideas and principles behind the policies may be adopted by any community or neighborhood faced with development/redevelopment pressures.

Under the Breckenridge Development Code there are no uses-by-right and virtually no prohibited uses, no prescribed density or intensity of use, and no bulk or setback requirements. These matters, as well as social, economic, public facilities, environmental, and design considerations for each neighborhood are regulated by compliance with policies adopted as part of the code.

There are three types of policies in the code:

Absolute Policies—which require or prohibit certain features. Failure to implement an absolute policy defeats a development proposal. The town may grant variances from strict compliance with absolute policies in hardship situations.

Relative Policies—which encourage or discourage features by allocating positive or negative performance points (from +2 to −2, including 0) to the development proposal. Relative policies are assigned a number (from 1 to 5) which indicates the policy's relative importance. The development proposal's score for each policy, then, consists of its performance points multiplied by the importance factor for the policy. A proposal must achieve a total score of zero or better for all the relative policies.

Density Policies—set forth for each neighborhood the density or intensity of use presumed to be compatible with the natural environment, existing public facilities, and existing development character of that neighborhood (although this is not a density-by-right). Performance better than the minimum of zero required by the code on all the relative policies taken together is rewarded with an increase in density. In this way, increased public benefit means increased private benefit—more units or net leaseable space.

The Decision-Making Process

For decision-making purposes, development under the Breckenridge Development Code is divided into three types:

Type C—minor changes in existing buildings or lot line adjustments. This decision is made by the staff within 5 days of the application.

Type B—minor subdivisions, and building permits under $100,000. The application is referred to selected public agencies for review, and then a public hearing is conducted by the staff. Decisions are made within 2 weeks.

Type A—all other kinds of development. The application is subject to full referral and review by affected outside agencies and a complete staff report on the proposal's compliance with the policies. The public hearing is conducted by the planning commission, and the decision is made within 40 days of the application.

In all instances the planning commission may rehear a staff decision and the town board may rehear a planning commission decision. A variety of conditions may attach to a permit to ensure that the policies are implemented as represented.

The genesis of the Breckenridge code was, in many respects, the dual frustration felt by many communities faced with significant growth pressure: the need for thorough and rigorous consideration of all impacts of a development proposal of community concern, coupled with growing public outrage at the cost, delay, and uncertainty of the land use decision-making process.

The Physical Environment

Breckenridge enjoys a unique environmental setting.

- It receives over one hundred inches of snow per year.
- It enjoys unsurpassed natural beauty and vistas, dense stands of timber, and delightful flowers (although vegetation grows very slowly at such altitudes, and disturbance can result in permanent loss of these ecological, economic, and visual resources).
- Pollutants—chiefly auto emissions and fireplace smoke—can be trapped over the town for days by cold air inversions.
- An elk herd lives in and migrates through portions of the plan area.
- Portions of the plan area are subject to severe flooding, avalanches, and other natural hazards.
- The river which runs through the town was once dredged for gold, and thus the riverbanks today consist of a 200-yard wide swath of gravel—an environmental and visual disaster (but good for building foundations).
- Ground water pollution, soil erosion, noise pollution, and glare are other environmental concerns in Breckenridge.

Policies to address each of these matters directly reflect the values of the community. For instance, snow storage areas are required by policy, and development in avalanche chutes is prohibited. Most policies are performance-oriented, mandating the use of creative, flexible solutions to the problem. For example, development must not affect the elk herd, although it is not prohibited in the area, and development must permit the passage of the 100-year flood, although it is not prohibited altogether in the floodway. Positive points are awarded for preserving mountain views from public places, preserving existing vegetation, providing bus pullouts and other inducements toward alternative transportation, and for reclaiming dredge tailings. Points may be deducted for soil disturbance or the construction of fireplaces, although most new construction will still involve these items regardless of negative points.

Economic and Social Factors

Breckenridge's economy is heavily dependent on skiing, resulting in an overreliance on one industry and an underutilization of community resources off-season. In addition, severely inflated housing costs place a burden on the relatively low-paid workers in the industry—waiters and waitresses, maids, lift operators, and the like.

Moreover, the community realizes that it is at a severe disadvantage when competing for non-recreational economic development—there is very little space left in its plan area to accommodate alternative economic activities. For this reason, a large number of points is available to a developer of non-recreational employment opportunities or off-season economic activities that would flatten the annual economic cycle. Of course, any development project may provide summertime construction jobs, a boon to the Breckenridge economy. A large number of points is awarded for the development of housing at affordable prices for people who work in the ski and related industries. On the other hand, points may be deducted for ski-related development on some of the last land available for diversified industry.

The community would also hope that growth will provide a socio-cultural and demographic diversification of the population, which is predominantly young, white, and upper middle class at the present time. Although such a goal is an extremely difficult one for a private developer (and may be of questionable constitutional validity), establishing a diversity of cultural experiences within the community is possible. Thus, for instance, points would be awarded for opening a Moroccan, but not an Italian, restaurant, since the community already has several excellent outlets for Italian food.

Public Facilities

The community has developed an ongoing capital improvements program similar to the one in Ramapo, New York, designed to phase growth into new areas. Development in conformance with the capital improvements program is heavily encouraged through the awarding of both positive and negative points. Locating on public water and sewer mains is required. In addition, the community has developed a fiscal impact analysis model and has adopted a schedule of development fees designed to adequately cover the capital cost of incremental new development. A positive fiscal balance is encouraged, but not required.

Normal public improvements must be constructed to the town's standards before they are dedicated; this applies to all development, not just subdivisions. In addition, many residential projects have included recreational amenities such as tennis courts, swimming pools, exercise rooms, tot lots, and so on. Providing for the recreational needs of new residential development is rewarded with positive points, but these points are vastly increased if the recreation facilities are also made available for public use. In the intensifying downtown core, on-site parking is prohibited and membership in the

Preapplication

The developer in Breckenridge bears the burden of proving that he meets the requirements of the various absolute policies; he must earn enough points under the relative policies to proceed. As the town commits itself to a 10 day/40 day time limit described earlier, issues unresolved by the date of the hearing work to the developer's detriment. This, in turn, gives unprecedented importance to the preapplication negotiating process, allowing the planning director to work with the developer and his design team in the crucial stages of project conceptualization.

The Evidentiary Form

The actual development application consists of the usual identification and legal information, site plans and renderings, and evidentiary forms—one for each policy—completed by the applicant. Each evidentiary form begins with the text of the policy, the number of positive and negative points which may be awarded pursuant to it, the policy's importance factor or "multiplier," and a listing of plan documents or other reference materials used by the town in making its decision. Next, the form contains a small space for the applicant to indicate the number of points he believes he deserves pursuant to that policy, and the reasons why.

Next, there is space for comment on the developer's evidence by referral agencies if applicable, or by the staff. The staff reserves the right to disagree with the developer's assessment of the project, stating its reasons for disagreement. Next, there is space for the decision maker to note comments offered at the public hearing. Finally, the bottom of the form contains "yes" and "no" check boxes for absolute policies, and space for the raw score and computed "weighted" score for a relative policy.

When assembled in a loose-leaf book, the evidentiary forms then contain not only the developer's evidence, but also an entire record of the decision on the application and reasons for it. By limiting the amount of evidence a developer can submit and forcing him to address the issues squarely, front end costs and the public cost of reviewing the application are cut significantly.

The Hearing and Decision

The use of the forms also focuses public comment on the adequacy and accuracy of the developer's evidence and the staff's comment. Structuring a land use decision in this way tends to ensure that it will be based on adopted policies as applied to the best available factual information; it minimizes the possibility that extraneous, irrelevant issues, or emotionalism, will influence the decision.

Because the code establishes a quasi-judicial (or administrative) type of decision, an administrative body or planning director is empowered to hold hearings on minor proposals. For major proposals, the staff issues its recommendations but the hearing and decision are handled by the planning commission. The land use decision is rendered after one, all-inclusive hearing (although, if debate is extended or the agenda is too long, the hearing might be continued another evening). Thus, the developer, staff, and interested citizens are forced to marshall their arguments for the one hearing. Having just one hearing also eliminates the need for notice and a repeat of the hearing before the town board.

Review

By majority vote, the planning commission may decide to rehear any decision made by the planning director at its next meeting. Thus, a developer or concerned citizen who feels aggrieved by the planning director's decision may take his argument to the planning commission, trying to convince them to hear the evidence. There is no appeal by right, however. The planning commission may determine to rehear the decision, limit its rehearing only to certain contested policies, or start over from scratch. In the same fashion, the town board may call up any decision of the planning director or the planning commission.

This process is extremely expedient. The planning director holds his public hearing and makes his decisions on minor developments every second Tuesday afternoon. The planning commission meets that evening, and any request for call-ups must be made at that time. The town board meets the following Thursday evening to decide whether to call up any action from the previous Tuesday.

If the planning commission or town board does determine to rehear a lower decision, the rehearing takes place at the next regular meeting of that body, rather than at the same meeting at which the rehearing decision was made. This provision simply allows the proper scheduling of agenda items.

Since the code has been in effect, the planning commission has regularly scrutinized but never reversed the planning director's decisions on minor proposals. Informed of the permits issued by the planning director and the planning commission, the town board has thus far never called up a decision by either of them. Under Colorado law, court review to determine whether there is minimal evidence to support a decision is limited to the documentary evidence and record made in the hearing. The court's work is made easier by the administrative techniques and devices of the Breckenridge code.

Enforcement

All representations made by the developer upon which the town relies in making its decision can be secured through a variety of sophisticated bonding requirements, covenants, front end fees, dedication requirements, and similar provisions which ensure developer compliance. Inspections of the property are conducted by a county inspector. No certificate of occupancy is issued a project until the town certifies com-formance with the permit. If changes in the project occur after construction is completed, the owner or occupant can be cited and convicted of an offense under the municipal code.

Conclusion

The ideas contained in the Breckenridge Code will prove applicable to a wide variety of growing communities and redeveloping neighborhoods of the future. Although Breckenridge was fortunate in having a thorough and highly professional set of planning documents to support the policies in the code, this is not necessarily a prerequisite to the adoption of a permit system. Indeed, a permit system is modular: policies can be added, deleted, or changed as new information becomes available, as community values change, as conditions within the community change, or as new technology becomes available. A continuously updated process assures that the best information and the most recent expression of community political values are applied to new development proposals.

The development code process can and should be used by communities in the following circumstances:

- older, redeveloping neighborhoods where the design and intensity of new development and renovation should harmonize with preexisting traditional structures;
- rapidly expanding suburban areas where urban sprawl and strip commercial development have created dependance on the automobile and cultural homogeneity;
- rural areas where common sense dictates that zoning is an utterly inappropriate land use regulatory technique;
- boom towns; and
- communities with an active and involved citizenry that greatly values managing the rate, amount, and quality of new growth and development.

The Code should also be of special interest to developers who have been frustrated by the cost, delay, and uncertainty of the land development process; to citizens who are unable to amass the necessary resources to participate in a major community development decision; and to public officials who are interested in upgrading the quality of community development and the uniformity, fairness, and objectivity of the decision-making process.

It was cited for thorough, comprehensive substantive provisions, for procedural simplicity, and for transferability to other communities. POLICY EVALUATION

Absolute Policies

The project either meets the absolute policy requirement or it doesn't. Failure to meet an absolute policy requires the project permit to be denied.

Relative Policies

A project is measured against relative policies based on two factors: the PERFORMANCE by the developer in his effort to comply with the policy and the IMPORTANCE placed on that policy by the community. The PERFORMANCE rating multiplied by the IMPORTANCE factor results in the SCORE on that particular policy.

PERFORMANCE ratings can range from +2 to -2. They may vary from policy to policy, as indicated like this: (+2,0), which means that policy's range covers a +2, a or a 0 PERFORMANCE rating. The community assigns the PERFORMANCE rating based on how well the developer attempts to meet the policy: +2 means he did an excellent job of meeting the policy, +1 means he did a good job, 0 means he did a satisfactory job, -1 means he did a poor job and -2 means he made no effort at meeting the policy. Another way to look at it is that projects scoring a +1 or +2 will leave the community better off in the future, while projects with scores of -1 or -2 will leave the community worse off.

IMPORTANCE factors reflect the priority placed on each relative policy by the community. An IMPORTANCE factor of 5 means the policy is of the utmost importance to the community, while a factor of 1 means it's not so important. Factors of 2, 3 or 4 prioritize policies between those two extremes.

Relative Policy — ENERGY CONSERVATION

A project is encouraged to employ non-fossil fuel sources of energy, such as solar, wind or geothermal. IMPORTANCE FACTOR: 4.

DEVELOPER'S EVIDENCE: Glass-enclosed pool area on South end of building will provide a substantial amount of "passive" solar gain. This heat can be used to warm other parts of the building. I request an award of +2 points.

STAFF COMMENT: Glass is single paned mounted on metal sash which will allow for for a lot of heat loss. Project contains no plans for system to circulate air from pool area to rest of building. Also, a large number of windows (cheap, aluminum frame and single paned glass) on the north side of building will account for large and unnecessary heat losses. Recommend 0 points.

SERVICES

DEVELOPMENT OF A PERMIT SYSTEM

WHAT A COMMUNITY WILL RECEIVE

There are six steps in the development of a Permit System:

1. Formatting the community's data for use in decision-making.
2. Drafting the policies.
3. Drafting the procedural and definitional elements of the regulations (that is, the Permit System Ordinance).
4. Designing the administrative materials and procedures needed to operate the Permit System.
5. Training everyone involved in the use of the System.
6. Following through with the community and fine tuning the System during the first building season it is in use.

WICKERSHAM AND ASSOCIATES, INC.

PRICING

The cost of developing a Permit System will vary from one community to the next. Here are the principles we use in determining the price of our services:

CLIENT	BASE PRICE
Rural county with moderate growth	$20-25,000 *
Town or city under 5000	$15,000 *
City of 5000 to 20,000	$15-20,000
City of 20,000 to 50,000	$15-25,000
City over 50,000	$30,000 +
Towns and counties served by a regional agency	$25,000 + *

* Smaller communities can join with neighboring jurisdictions, or use the services of a regional agency, to develop several Systems simultaneously. This can reduce the cost to as low as $5000 to $7000 per community.

THE BASE PRICE WILL INCREASE IF THE COMMUNITY:

- Is hard to reach from one of our regional offices.
- Is experiencing "boom" growth.
- Has little or no staff time to devote to the development of the System.
- Is experiencing significant political or social problems.
- Is in a complex natural environment.

THE BASE PRICE WILL DECREASE IF THE COMMUNITY:

- Is very accessible from one of our regional offices.
- Can combine its project with that of other communities in the area.
- Has significant professional resources available to devote to development of the System.

BOROUGH INCORPORATION STANDARDS
AS INTERPRETED BY LOCAL BOUNDARY COMMISSION

LOCAL BOUNDARY COMMISSION INTERPRETATION OF BOROUGH INCORPORATION STANDARDS

A review of the requests for borough incorporation which have been denied is helpful for the insight it gives into the Local Boundary Commission's interpretation of incorporation standards.

Article X Section 3 of the State Constitutuion outlines the standards for borough incorporation as follows:

> "The entire State shall be divided into boroughs, organized or unorganized. They shall be established in a manner and according to standards provided by law. The standards shall include population with common interests to the maximum degree possible. The legislature shall classify boroughs and prescribe their powers and functions. Methods by which boroughs may be organized, incorporated, merged, consolidated, reclassified, or dissolved shall be prescribed by law."

These standards are further refined in the statutes.

> AS 29.18.030 Organized boroughs An area may incorporate as an organized borough if it conforms to the following standards:
> (1) the population of the area is interrelated and integrated as to its social, cultural, and economic activities, and is large and stable enough to support organized borough government;
> (2) the boundaries of the proposed borough conform generally to natural geography and include all areas necessary for full develcoment of local services;
> (3) the economy of the area includes the human and financial resources capable of porviding local services; evaluation of an area's economy includes land use, property valuation, total economic base, total personal income, resource and commercial development, anticipated functions, expenses, and income of the proposed borough;
> (4) land, water, and air transportation facilities allow the communication and exchange necessary for the development of integrated local government.

It is the role of the Local Boundary Commission to determine if a proposed boroough meets the standards for incorporation. (AS 29.18.090 (a))

In 1973 the Local Boundary Commission had requests for borough incorporation from the Anchorage area (Cook Inlet Borough petition) and the Kenai area including the City of Kenai and the North Kenai Fire Service area (Nikiski Borough petition). The two were rejected on similar grounds.

The Department of Community and Regional Affairs, in its May 11, 1972 report to the Commission, made reference to the underlying principles which prompted the framers of the state constitution to provide for the borough system of government. It reviewed the concept of borough government as an approach to areawide and regional government, functionally adaptable throughout the State as variation in geography, economy and other circumstances required. The report emphasized that the boundaries of a city are not fixed -- that the constitutional framers directed that the boundaries might be altered and the power of a city extended in response to growth and development outward from the central core.

The Department recommended that the petition be denied unless the borough boundaries were expanded to include Tetlin, Tanaccross, Dot Lake, Northway --the entire area between Delta Junction and Tok-as the proposed borough stating, "We find no reason why the entirety of the valley, an area geographically distinct, economically sound, and having the requisite transportation facilities sufficient to foster communication and interrelationship of people in their activities should be divided into separate units." (Department of Community and Regional Affairs report to Local Boundary Commission on the Deltana Borough proposal, p. 33)

In its final decision on July 12, 1974, the Local Boundary Commission found that even if the boundaries were expanded, that based on the testimony received from the residents of the area, the boundaries of the area would not comply with the provisions of AS 29.18.030 (1)"as the population of the area was not interrelated and integrated as to its social, cultural, and economic activities..."

In its statement of decision on the petiton for detachment of the Chugiak-Eagle River area from the Greater Anchorage Area Borough and for incorporation of a second class borough in the Chugiak-Eagle River area (March 15, 1976), the Commission cited the following reasons for rejecting the petition.

1. The proposed petition fails to meet statutory and regulatory standards for detachment and incorporation contained in AS 29.18.030 and AAC 19.15.230 in that the area is an integral part of the municipality of Anchorage culturally, socially, and economically.
2. There are no natural boundaries separating the area from the remainder of the Anchorage municipality.
3. The detachment would be inimical to the interest of the State in that the constitutional mandate of a minimum of local government units and tax levying jurisdictions would be violated.
4. The area is not stable enough to support orgnaized borough government in that the Eagle River-Chugiak tax base is not large enough to support necessary services without the support of the larger tax base of the entire Anchorage area.

The interpretation of the incorporation standard related to boundaries (AS 29.18.030 (2) again became an issue with the formation of the North Slope Borough. The appellants in Mobil Oil Corporation v. Local Boundary Commission argued that neither the geography nor the transportaton standards had been satisfied and that the Local Boundary Commission had erred in granting borough status to the North Slope.

In the Supreme Court decision on the case (January 16, 1974), the Court made reference to Article X Section 1 of the Constitution and stated:

> "We read this to favor upholding organization of borougns by the Local Boundary Commission whenever the requirements for incorporation have been minimally met."

The Court further found that the inclusion of Naval Petroleum Reserve No. 4 was desirable for integrated local government so that it might fall within the new borough's planning and zoning power. The record gave evidence of the Reserve's importance to the subsistance lifestyle of area residents and this evidence justified such inclusion.

SUBJECT: Financial Disincentive to Borough Formation

In this memo the net change in state aid and local effort for all REAA's upon their conversion to organized boroughs is estimated. The date of the assumed conversions is July 1, 1977; the period of state aid is fiscal year 1978. The following principal elements are considered:

1. public school foundation support (AS 14.17)
   (a) in-lieu funds for REAA's (AS 14.08.121)
   (b) basic need
   (c) required local effort (AS 14.17.071)

2. municipal revenue sharing under the terms of HB 192

3. shared corporate income taxes (AS 43.20.016)

Foundation Support

Current state funding for REAA's is at 100% of basic need under the foundation program as well as a state contribution equal to the number of REAA pupils times the average local tax contributions per pupil in the organized school districts during the prior fiscal year, which in this case was $688 per pupil for FY 77 (AS 14.08.121).

Upon conversion to borough status, an REAA loses this latter "in-lieu" contribution of $688 per pupil. For all REAA's, the loss of this support would have amounted to

for FY 78.

Also upon conversion, the new borough would have received less than 100% of basic need, the actual percentage depending on the new borough's assessed value per ADM relative to the average assessed value per ADM for all districts in the state, but in no case being less than 97% (ADM is average daily membership of pupils).

For FY 78 foundation support, the "Alaska Taxable", January 1, 1976, assessed valuation of municipalities of $9,805,715,960 was used. Using a method described in Appendix I, I estimate assessed value of outside municipalities at $110,714,000 for a total statewide valuation of $9,916,429,960 excluding oil and gas property in the unorganized borough.

With 83,274 pupils in ADM for FY 78 according to the Department of Education's "Statistical Report 1978-79", this would have been a statewide average assessed value per ADM of $119,082. As further described in Appendix I, the average assessed value per ADM for an REAA with no oil or gas property would have been $19,895.

Plugging these assessed values per ADM into the formula for determining state support (AS 14.17.021(c)) yields a level of state aid equal to 99.5% of basic need for REAA's that would have become boroughs.

From the attached statement of REAA FY 78 revenues prepared by the Department of Education, we see that total basic need for all REAA's is $47,530,826, this being the sum of amounts under the headings "federal 874" and "foundation" since PL 81-874 funds are deducted from foundation support for both REAA's and organized school districts (AS 14.08.121(a)(1) and AS 14.17.021(a)). Thus, the decrease in foundation support would be $47,530,826 times .5% or

for all REAA's in total.

Finally, the assumption of borough status by an REAA would have required local effort for the first time. The required local to state match would have been 1 to 199 for all newly formed boroughs on average.

The state contribution would have been the $47,530,826 in basic need reduced by the $237,654 equilization amount and by the $17,485,871 in PL 81-874 funds or $29,807,301. This would have required a local match of

Local Effort ($149,785)

Thus, the total financial disincentive under the school foundation program for borough formation is

and is due almost entirely to loss of the "in-lieu" funds. The additional loss is about 5% on top of the "in-lieu" funds. A glance at the DOE table on REAA FY 78 revenues allows one to estimate the disincentive for any particular REAA.

It must be cautioned that these estimates are in terms of averages and that the results could differ for individual REAA's. However, the differences should not be that significant, especially for non-pipeline REAA's; even at the minimal level of 97% state support (which only pipeline REAA's would come close to) the loss of foundation support for all REAA's would have been at most $1,425,924, with required local effort decreasing to $44,100 because the match ratio drops to a minimum of 1:32. Thus, the total loss to any individual REAA would probably have been no more than 19% on top of the "in-lieu" loss.

More likely to affect these estimates are changes overtime in the contributions per ADM of organized school districts that determine "in-lieu" funds. The continued increases in the statutory level of basic need (an increase of 10% is scheduled for FY 80 -- AS 14.17.056) should not be significant since the loss due to the equalization factor was only $237,654 to start with.

Municipal Revenue Sharing

Under the method proposed in HB 192, municipal revenue sharing funds would be distributed based on a formula that takes account of population and local effort in relation to assessed valuation per capita (proposed AS 29.88.010). 1/

1/ For purposes of the revenue sharing formula, a municipality's assessed valuation may not be less than 15% of the average statewide assessed value per capita. Using the $9,916,429,960 statewide assessed value derived above and the "Alaska Taxable 1977" January 1, 1977 statewide population estimate of 398,983, we have average per capita of $24,854 of which 15% would be $3,728 per capita. However, estimated unorganized borough valuation per capita is $6,096. (from Appendix I)

If we use the Appendix I population and valuation per capita figures for the unorganized borough excluding oil and gas property (50,451 persons and $6,096 per capita) and assume the only local effort is the required school foundation match ($149,785), the total revenue sharing to all new boroughs would be only on the assumption that the appropriation for all revenue sharing is $27,000,000, the level at which HB 192 becomes effective. 2/

The $149,785 level of local effort is the equivalent of .49 mills. If the new boroughs increased their local effort above the minimum .49 mills required for school foundation aid, they would receive revenue sharing support as follows: 3/

5	$1,528,418	$ 654,387
10	3,056,836	1,308,775
20	6,113,673	2,617,551
30	9,170,510	3,926,326

If the revenue sharing appropriation were roughly $63,000,000 it would on average provide a 1 to 1 match of entitlement to local effort for new boroughs (other than pipeline boroughs).

Depending on the average mill rate in the new boroughs, the appropriation would have to be much larger to offset $7,610,656 "in-lieu" disincentive under the foundation program:

Mills	Revenue Sharing Appropriation Required to Offset "in-lieu"
5	$377,000,000
10	220,000,000
30	115,000,000

2/ Sec. 11 of HB 192 provides a minimum entitlement of $25,000 plus a COLA during the first fiscal year the act is effective. Thus, if the act takes effect before a new borough formation, this floor is of no value to new boroughs and would not in any event provide increased support beyond the first year.

3/ See next page for footnote

Thus, at common borough millages of 5 or 10 and the trigger appropriation level, HB 192 revenue sharing would provide insignificant revenues to any individual non-pipeline, newly-formed borough since the total support to 21 old REAA's would have been from $65,000 to $1,300,000.

Shared Corporate Income Taxes

AS 43.20.016 distributes the appropriation for shared corporate income taxes in an amount equal to that received by boroughs in FY 78, or for newly-formed boroughs in amount equal to the FY 78 receipts of the borough closest in population, pro-rated if the appropriation is insufficient to fund these base levels. If it is greater, the excess is distributed per capita.

FY 78 total distribution was $10,571,500. FY 80's appropriation was just a little above that, $11,400,000. If appropriation levels remain sufficient to only fund base amounts the entitlements of newly-formed boroughs would be:

REAA	Population 4/	Base Entitlement
Adak	3,200	$ 7,275
Alaska Central Railbelt	1,095	13,985
Alaska Gateway	788	13,985
Aleutian Region	2,375	7,275
Annette Island	962	13,985

3/ These estimated new Chapter 88 revenue sharing entitlements are based on a pro-ration factor of 2.61 shown on the attached Legislative Affairs computer simulation of HB 192 dated February 19, 1979. As the new boroughs took a bigger bite of the pie the pro-ration factor would decrease. Thus, the estimates for the higher millages become progressively greater than they should be. However, the estimates still give a rough idea of entitlements and a more accurate picture of the relative fiscal effect if only one or two REAA's should actually convert to boroughs.

4/ Estimated by applying ratio of total population to ages 5 through 18 from appropriate 1970 census divisions to Department of Education pupil ADM figures for FY 78 and adding population of city school districts from "Alaska Taxable 1978". The total population differs from that in Appendix I because of the inclusion of Valdez and one year later data.

REAA	Population	Base Entitlement
Bering Strait	4043	7,275
Chatham	3178	7,275
Chugach	7438	1,220,920
Copper River	1925	7,275
Delta/Greely	3051	7,275

Yukon Flats	1004	13,985
Yukon Koyukuk	2828	7,275
Total	61,117	$2,834,615

The pattern here presents a crazy-quilt of aid in which some larger communities get less than smaller ones, with Chugach and the Lower Kuskokwim to receive substantially more than any of the others because their populations were near that of the North Slope Borough which had, of course, large business license tax receipts for FY 78.

Although the administration's estimates for the corporate petroleum income tax have remained at $160 million a year (the calendar 1978 level), legislative finance estimates the petroleum income taxes alone, disregarding non-petroleum corporate income taxes, will mount to around $600 million by FY 81. If distributions were at 10% of this level, $60,000,000, the excess of roughly $50,000,000 over base entitlements would bring $7,500,000 to newly-formed boroughs on a per capita distribution, more nearly offsetting the other financial disincentives to borough formation.

The Lower Kuskokwim should clearly gain from borough formation as should Chugach if Valdez is incorporated into the borough, even at current appropriation levels.

Other Considerations

This analysis has not considered the further decline in state support to REAA's that become boroughs that would occur for school construction. Under AS 43.18.100, the state would pick up 80% of the debt service for new borough's school construction debt whereas the state now builds entirely at its own expense the necessary school facilities for REAA's.

Of course, with the "Hooch" case settlement new boroughs school construction needs may not be that significant for some time.

One incentive not considered is the value of municipal land selections a new borough would be entitled to under AS 29.18.203. However, it may be an incentive to postpone formation since a new borough receives 10% of state lands within its boundary at the time of incorporation. So until Alaska's land status is resolved, there are disincentives here too, considering opportunity costs.

APPENDIX I

The potential average assessed value of real and personal property in the unorganized borough is estimated in a roughshod way here, using data from several points in time, partially because that is the way the Department of Education does it for the foundation formula, and partially to not pretend to insupportable exactitude.

The FY 78 REAA pupil ADM was 10,729 according to the Department of Education's "1978-1979 Statistical Report" The average ratio of total population to school population (ages 5 through 18) for all census divisions outside organized cities or boroughs in the 1970 consensus was 3.01:1. Thus, total REAA population for FY 78 is estimated at 32,294. For purposes of estimating property values, we deduct 666 persons from this figure for Selawik and Eagle, which levy property taxes and have assessed value figures in "Alaska Taxable", but are part of REAA's.

Using some assumptions from Darbyshire & Associates, August 1979 Yukon Flats Regional Government Study (see attached page 139 from that study) -- namely, 3.5 persons per household, restricted deeds on 50% of residential property, $20,000 average value per non-restricted dwelling, and $2,000 taxable personal property per household -- I estimate assessable values outside taxing jurisdictions at $110,714,000. This is conservative in that no commercial or industrial values are inputed; such properties are assumed to be in the taxing cities in the unorganized borough.

Adding this $110,714,000 to the January 1, 1976 assessed value for all cities, except Valdez, which are outside organized boroughs, $196,849,710, we get a total assessable value for the unorganized borough, excluding Valdez and oil and gas property, of $307,563,710.

As of January 1, 1977, total population, excluding Valdez, that resided outside organized boroughs was 32,294 estimated for REAA's, plus 18,157 for school districts outside organized boroughs (from "Alaska Taxable 1977"), or 50,451.

The total pupil ADM for FY 78 was the 10,729 for REAA's plus 4,730 for all school districts, excluding Valdez, outside organized boroughs, or 15,459.

Based on these figures, the average assessed value per ADM would be $19,895 and per capita $6,096 in the unorganized borough for FY 78 excluding oil and gas property.

Column 1 - The year of projection.

Column 2 - Population - Base year is 1978 - population 1,571. The annual increase in population is projected to be 3% per year. From Darbyshire & Associates "Technical Report #2 - Data Reconnaissance."

Column 3 - Households - The number of households was estimated by dividing the projected population by 3.5 persons per household.

Column 4 - Per Capita Assessed Value - The average per capita assessed value for the state as published annually by the Department of Community and Regional Affairs. It is estimated the annual increase for the projection period will be 5% per year. From 1978 to 1979 the per capita assessed value for the state increased 12%, excluding oil and gas property. Therefore, the writer estimates a 5% annual increase over the projection period is reasonable to anticipate.

Column 5 - Maximum Operating Budget - The estimated maximum amount of revenue that can be levied through property tax for the operating budget of the proposed borough.

Formula:

Population x 225% Average per Capita Assessed Value x 30 Mills = Maximum Operating Budget.

Example: 1980

1,667 x $49,710 x 2.25 x 0.03 = $5,593,483.48 -- Say $5,593,490.00.

Column 6 - Locally Assessed Property/Total Property - Includes:

Real Property -

A - Residential,

B - Commercial-Industrial

Personal Property -

C - Individual,

D - Commercial-Industrial

A - Real Property/Residential: A survey of deeds issued by the townsite trustee indicates 80% of the residential property is subject to the covenants and restrictions of the restricted deed, and therefore not subject to property tax. It is estimated there is one dwelling unit per household with an average value of $20,000;

Therefore:

Households x 80% x $20,000 = Residential Assessed Value.

Population - As certified by the Commissioner of Community and Regional Affairs on the Assessment Date (A.S. 29.53.045e).

Average Per Capita Assessed Value - A.S. 29.53.045e.

30 Mills - A.S. 29.53.050.

B - Real Property/Commercial-Industrial: It is estimated that there is $2,500/capita invested in commercial and industrial development to support the population of the proposed borough. The growth of commercial and industrial properties will equal the growth of the population.

C - Personal Property/Individual: It is estimated the taxable personal property will average $2,000/household.

D - Personal Property/Commercial-Industrial: It is estimated that there is $600/capita invested in commercial and industrial equipment and inventory to support the population of the proposed borough. Value will increase in direct proportion to the population.

Column 7 - Residential Exemptions - It is assumed 80% of the dwelling units are owner-occupied and the proposed borough will enact the $10,000 single-family owner-occupied exemption allowed under A.S. 29.53. This column gives the projected assessed value that would be exempt from taxation.

Column 8 - Locally Assessed Property/Net Taxable - Column 6 minus Column 7.

LEGISLATIVE PROPOSALS RELATED TO ORGANIZATION AND FINANCIAL EQUALIZATION IN THE UNORGANIZED BOROUGH

LEGISLATIVE PROPOSALS UNORGANIZED BOROUGH	SB 101 (1969)	HB 738 (1970)	HB 161 (1971)	HB 122 (1971)
POINT OF REGIONAL GOVERNMENT AUTHORIZED	Six unorganized boroughs and service area within unorganized boroughs (Northwestern, Western, Interior, Southwestern, Southcentral, Southeastern) Residents of each unorganized borough represented on elected five-member advisory board.	Regional unorganized boroughs, as a prerequisite to so-called regional boroughs; service areas authorized within regional unorganized boroughs. A regional borough, once established, would be supervised by an elected regional council.	None; service areas of the unorganized borough were authorized. Authority was given to the director of Local Affairs Agency to establish, alter and abolish unorganized borough areas in accordance with standards he developed. Once established, the service areas would be controlled and directed by Regional Service Area Commissions, appointed or elected.whose principal responsibilities were advisory.	Second class boroughs with boundaries corresponding to the boundaries of the 12 geographic areas described by the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act. the bill made provision for elections to determine the initial powers which the second class boroughs would enjoy and for the choice of initial borough officers.
MANNER OF ORGANIZATION	Directive as to the number of unorganized boroughs; discretionary with the legislative Affairs Agency as to the subsequent establishment of service areas.	Boundary determinations for regional unorganized boroughs were mandatory; the first election for the establishment of a regional borough was also mandatory, but subsequent action seeking incorporation of regional boroughs required submission of a petition from area voters.	Discretionary with the director of the Local Affairs Agency.	Mandatory, in accordance with the provisions of the legislation which require mandatory incorporation if no voluntary incorporation occurred before Jan. 1,1977.
FISCAL INCENTIVES AND IMPLICATIONS	Authority was retained by the legislature to levy service area taxes, with the Local Affairs Agency authorized to collect any taxes which were levied; the unorganized borough boards were granted the authority to receive and expend funds.	A Regional and Community Affairs fund was established as a source of shared revenues for borough gov'ts. and for regional unorganized boroughs (with a 10% reserve for cities of the unorganized borough), to be distributed on the basis of population ratio and income deficiency. No fiscal estimate was provided. Regional unorganized boroughs might select 10% land entitlement.	No authority was granted to a service area to raise revenues within the region; presumably state grants would be made available for purposes of organization operation and provision of state services.	No incentives; the bill specifically denied to "boroughs incorporated by this act" the benefits of the then applicable ten percent land selection authorization.

LEGISLATIVE PROPOSALS UNORGANIZED BOROUGH	SB 122 (1973)	HB 291 (1973)	HB 202 (1977)HB 9 (1979)	Governor's 1977 "Package" HB 596, HB 597, HB 598
FORM OF REGIONAL GOVERNMENT AUTHORIZED	None. This was the predecessor of legislation eventually enacted in 1975 to provide for the decentralization of responsibility for the operation of schools.	Unorganized borough districts. This legislation is quite similar to HB 596 except that the entities are called "unorganized borough districts and it modified the local hearing requirements with respect to the drawing of the boundaries of these districts and requires affirmative legislative approval of the proposed boundaries.	None.	FORM OF REGIONAL GOV'T. Unorganized borough units each of which would have authority to adopt home rule charters. (HB 596) Boundaries would be recommended by the Boundary Commission Voters would chose 11 member advisory council in each borough.
MANNER OF ORGANIZATION	Mandatory formation of educational service areas.	(See above and HB 596)	Not applicable.	MANNER OF ORGANIZATION Mandatory formation of unorganized borough units (HB 596)
FISCAL INCENTIVES AND IMPLICATIONS	Full state funding of the basic costs of educational services to be provided; no authorization to generate and expend revenues from local sources.	(See above and HB 596)	The levy of a millage rate, the proceeds of which are to be deposited in the General Fund to partially off-set state-funded educational costs, would constitute the first general property tax levy in the unorganized borough. The tax would necessarily fall on the improved commercial property as possibility exists 2nd Class cities would establish residential exemptions.	FISCAL INCENTIVES AND IMPLICATIONS Extension of the property tax levy on a statewide basis (HB 597), with the levy of a premium rate on certain real and personal property of companies engaged in oil and gas activites (HB 598), was, even with the credits & exemptions allowed, expected to be sufficient to meet revenue sharing demands built into the two bills. The sharing of general property tax revenue, involving population and fiscal capacity factors, represented a realistic effort to address economic disparities. Major source of shared revenue was to be 20 mill tax on pipeline property (HB 598) however, sharing scheme was converted in the House to one based on economic impact -real or imagine-non-conducive to providing revenues on a sustained basis to meet the costs of public services at the local level.

REQUESTS RELATING TO BOROUGH FORMATION

During the 1970's there have been numerous inquiries into the process of developing borough government from communities in the unorganized borough.

Most of these inquiries were simply that -- with no action being pursued by the community. Most were initiated in response to a particular need which it was perceived local government might meet.

Admiralty Island Angoon expressed interest in borough government. Primary motivation behind interest appeared to be concern about controlling any timber development that took place on Admiralty Island. When there appeared to be no immediate threat of timber development occurring, and the Community realized that they might have a difficult time satisfying the financial requirements of a regional government, interest waned.

Cordova At the time Cordova area was seriously being considered as the southern terminus of a North Slope gas line, that area seemed very interested in borough government. Once the gas pipeline became a non-reality for the Cordova area, so did the issue of borough government.

Kobuk A petition of incorporation was received in 1974, but no follow-up action was taken to remedy deficiencies in the petition. The primary motivating factor for the request appeared to be local control of schools.

Kotzebue NANA region expressed interest in regional government 1974-75. Primary interest seemed to be the exercise of the planning power, both in the sense of controlling development within the region and controlling State and Federal activities that were taking place, at that time, on a rather random basis. NANA Regional Strategies Proposal was developed and appears to have satisfied many of the planning requirements of that particular region.

Newson Island This is a small island located in the Calista Region, which has on it the communities of Nightmute, Toksook Bay and Tununak. In the early 1970's, there was some talk of these three communities uniting and forming a small borough. The person who was the primary mover, a consultant, disappeared and so did the enthusiasm for regional government.

Nome Nome has inquired into regional government, although the only interest the Community appears to have in borough government is how they might use it as a defense mechanism to keep themselves out of any other borough.

Prince of Wales Island Strong interest was expressed in the early 1970's. The local residents' thoughts appeared to be that they could obtain additional revenues through realization of stumpage fees for forestry activities taking place on the Island, as well as have more of a say in how timber development would affect them. An additional factor for at least one community on the Island was that they desired to remove themselves from the State-operated School System. However, in the end, the independent nature of the Communities of Craig, Hydaburg, Klawock and Thorne Bay rendered the situation such that they could simple not agree on the class of borough, the powers it would exercise and how the assembly ought to be composed.

SERVICE DELIVERY TO THE UNORGANIZED BOROUGH

X

The Alaska State Constitution states:

> "The legislature shall provide for the performance of services it deems necessary or advisable in unorganized boroughs, allowing for maximum local participation and responsibility. It may exercise any power or functic in an unorganized borough which the assembly may exercise in an organized borough."
> Article X, Section 6

There are presently three legislatively-mandated service areas:

1. Aquaculture Service Areas
2. Coastal Resource Service Areas
3. Regional Educational Attendance Areas (REAAs)

AQUACULTURE SERVICE AREAS

In 1979, the Legislature amended AS 16, the Aquaculture Program, with FCCS HB 359 (Ch. 59, SLA 1979) granting the Commissioner of Commerce and Economic Development the authority to declare qualified regional associations, incorporated as non-profit corporations, as "service areas" within the unorganized borough for the purpose of providing salmon enhancement services.

Under this provision, a regional aquaculture association, comprised of associations representative of commercial fishermen and other representatives within the region, whose board of directors includes no less than one representative of each member user group, which has incorporated as a nonprofit corporation, becomes a service area within the unorganized borough with the authority to tax designated species of salmon caught commercially within the region and apply the proceeds to salmon enhancement programs.

On July 13, 1979, Judge Allen Compton, Superior Court, declared that the state may not dedicate a tax on the harvest of a natural resource of the state to a specific purpose by the device of declaring the tax for the purpose of providing a service within a so-called service area in the unorganized borough. Further, it was the Court's view that an incorporated nonprofit association may not become a "service area," either by inference or express legislative declaration. (No. 1JU-78-191 Civil Memorandum of Decision and Order - Judge Allen Compton, Superior Court.)

The Southern Southeast Regional Aquaculture Association will appeal Judge Compton's ruling.

COASTAL RESOURCE SERVICE AREAS

Coastal Resource Service Areas are authorized by the Alaska Coastal Management Act of 1977 to plan for the coastal areas. Each regional educational attendance area containing a part of the coastal area may be organized for this purpose or two or more REAAs may be consolidated as a single coastal resource service area. Implementation of the plans which are developed is the responsibility of the state.

At the present time, residents of two areas in the unorganized borough have voted to create coastal resource service areas. The Northwest Coastal Resource Service Area, comprising the area covered by REAA 1, has elected its seven-member board and will develop a coastal management plan.

On May 15, 1979, residents of REAA 3 and 4 voted to create the Yukon/Kuskokwim Delta Coastal Resource Service Area and will elect its board members on September 11, 1979. The City of Bethel opted to be excluded from this service area. In the Yukon/Kuskokwim area, the Department of Community and Regional Affairs entered into an agreement with Nunam Kitlutsisti, Inc. (Protectors of the Land,) the environmental planning area of Association of Village Council Presidents (AVCP) to provide a public outreach program presenting organizational options and procedures for coastal management in the area.

There have been expressed concerns related to how the state, through the appropriate state agencies, will actually implement an approved district coastal management program in the unorganized borough. Under AS 38.05.037, the Division of Lands has a general grant of authority to exercise zoning powers within the unorganized borough. Until recently, this has not been a problem because the zoning power was never used. However, where land-use controls are involved in coastal resource service areas, zoning will have to be established and administered by the Division of Lands.

On this subject, Mr. Vic Fischer in a memorandum to Mr. Steve Reeve, DNR, (February 2, 1979) recommends:

> "If the state is deemed to have an overriding interest that requires it to exercise zoning authority in the unorganized borough, or at least within its coastal areas, neither ADL (Alaska Division of Lands) or DNR (Department of Natural Resources) appear to be the appropriate agency to manage the zoning program, with its strictly localized zoning, adjustment, appeals, and other aspects of continuing zoning administration. If the state is to engage in zoning, by far the most appropriate agency for the exercise of the function is the Department of Community and Regional Affairs (DCRA did not exist at the time ADL was granted zoning authority many years ago.)
> In general, states have played only a minor role in the exercise of zoning authority beyond autnorizing its use by local governments. The only exception is Hawaii, where general zoning classification is handled by the state, supplemented by local government; i.e., county, regulations in urban and other development areas. Elsewhere, zoning has been applied as a local government police power.

COASTAL RESOURCE SERVICE AREAS (Cont'd)

> Except for the special authority given ADL, zoning in Alaska has traditionally been a power of cities and, more recently, of boroughs. Zoning would not have to be exercised by the state at all if provisions were made for (1) reorganization of the unorganized borough into a series of organized boroughs with planning and zoning authority (and this could be done without forcing them to tax or even manage schools) or (2) delegating the planning and zoning power to service areas within the unorganized borough, much as was done by the legislature in the case of coastal management planning."

REAAs were created in 1975 as the mechanism through which the Legislature delegates to regional school boards the authority to operate the public schools using the boundaries or sub-boundaries of the regional corporations established under the Alaska Native Settlement Act or a combination of such boundaries.

Because the REAAs represent a major effort in regionalization, local control and decentralization of service delivery in the unorganized borough, the boundaries of which are also to be used for coastal zone management purposes, an in-depth history and analysis of the REAAs is included for your review.

During the early 1970's, the Center for Northern Educational Research was requested by the Department of Education to initiate a study of the delivery of educational services in the unorganized borough and the Interim Legislative Committee on Pre-Higher Education of the Eighth Legislature identified decentralization of the Alaska State-Operated Schools as the subject it wanted to study. The final report published in 1974, entitled "Pre-Higher Education in the Unorganized Borough: Analysis and Recommendations," included a wide range of recommendations. A primary point was the recognition of the need for local control of education and the relationship of that local control with local government creation.

> "In order that any plan be more than temporary, the authority for controlling education should be aligned with the development of local governmental units as envisioned by Alaska's Constitution. If local control can be defined as that measure of control which a state delegates to local units of government, then the issues of local control of education cannot be treated separately from the broad issue of the creation of local units of government. And local government units formed around the delivery of education can provide the vanguard for local control over delivery of other governmental services. Therefore, the structure created to serve educational needs must be formed in anticipaion of increases in appetites for control of otner governmental functions. To ignore the need for legislative support to move toward creating local government units will only blunt the emerging desire of local citizens to assume the reigns and responsibility for their own destiny." p. 34

REGIONAL EDUCATIONAL ATTENDANCE AREAS (REAAs) (Cont'd)

The Center approached this subject with a note of caution; however,

> "Local control of education in many regions is the main reason for creating local government units. All such creations, however, must await the readiness and desire of local people to assume control over them....the main sources of constituent resistance to local government stem from 1) lack of self-confidence, understandable, in the light of past history 2) groundless fear that the local tax base must be the primary source of local government, especially school funding, and 3) an acute shortage of trained personnel to handle what must seem like the endless march of administrative details.." p. 35

BOUNDARIES OF THE REGIONAL EDUCATIONAL ATTENDANCE AREAS

AS 14.08.031 (a) provides that REAA boundaries follow regional boundaries set under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act unless by referendum a community votes to merge wth another community contiguous to it but within the boundaries or sub-boundaries of another regional corporation. The use of regional lines was not intended to be exclusive as shown by AS 14.08.031 (b) prescribing certain characteristics for REAAs.

> "As far as practicable, each regional educational attendance area shall contain an integrated socio-economic, linguistically and culturally homogeneous area. In the formation of the REAAs, consideration shall be given to the transportation and communication between communities that comprise the area. Wherever possible, municipalities, other governmental or regional corporate entitles, drainage basins and other identifiable geographic features shall be used in describing the boundaries.."

Taken together, these two sections suggest that REAA boundaries are to follow, rather than cross, regional corporation boundaries where they contact them and conform to natural or other predetermined boundaries. This is how the State Department of Community and Regional Affairs, which was charged with administering the act in consultation with the State Department of Education, interpreted it in a series of informational meetings in rural areas around the state in July and August, 1975. Later they began implementing it similarly when hearings were held in numerous bush locations regarding proposed boundaries. The result of the hearings was a division of the state into some 21 REAAs. Originally 20 REAAs were created by C&RA, but after a meeting of residents of REAA 17 and the Governor, REAA 21 (including Whittier and Tatitlek) was created on September 24, 1975, dividing REAA 14 along the boundary between the Chugach and Ahtna Regional Corporations.

Frequent mention has been made of the fact that the statutory characteristics for boundary selections of the REAAs are similiar to the standards for borough incorporation.

SERVICE DELIVERY TO THE UNORGANIZED BOROUGH (Cont'd)

ADMINISTRATION OF THE REAAs

REAA voters elect a board of from 5-11 members who are voted on "at large." In addition to the elected board for each REAA, every community (or military reservation) with a school has a community school committee. The Statute merely charges them to "review and make recommendations to the board" of the REAA "concerning the curriculum, program and general operation of the local school. They may, however, be delegated other functions by the school board.

Matters of employment, salaries, purchasing, and disbursement of funds are lodged with the REAA boards. Although the power to "adopt regulations governing organization, policies and procedures for the operation of the schools" and to "develop a philosophy of education, principles and goals for the schools" is a board responsibility, the Commissioner of Education is given overriding control of school operations.

FINANCING REAAs

All funds for REAAs are furnished by the State Legislature. They receive "basic need," as used in computing foundation aid to districts, plus an amount equal to the average per pupil local tax contributions in city and borough districts. Thus, they are relieved of local effort requirements, but the amount they can receive from the state over and above basic need is indirectly determined by city and borough decisions regarding their local tax effort. (AS 14.08.12)

Among the local financial concerns of the REAAs, even as they began their first year of operation with full state support, were the following: (See Summary of Findings Alaska School Finance Study Workshops October-November 1976, published February 1977)

1. Public School Foundation Program. While few wished to change the basic funding method, concern was expressed about the ability of the formula to provide sufficient funds to meet operating costs, especially those of small attendance centers. The validity, accuracy and amounts of instructional unit allotments (regional cost differentials) were questioned. The ability of "basic need" dollars to meet the REAAs' "basic program need" was of great concern. (Two important legislative changes made in the Public School Foundation Program in 1977 responded to the financial concern of the REAAs. One recognized the plight of the very small attendance centers and provided for an increased minimum of instructional units. The second change modified the instructional unit allotments (regional cost differentials) to be more in line with the cost of doing business in rural and isolated areas of the state.)

2. School Construction. The amount of funds available for new construction, as well as the manner in which it is provided, received extensive criticism. Even as the FY 1978 building program got underway, REAAs expressed additional concern about the proportion of bond issue building funds being retained by the supervising state agencies for administrative purposes.

3. Equity. REAAs, with no local source of revenue, have limited ability to operate discretionary programs beyond what is possible with the amount in lieu of local taxes available to each. The possibility that legislation might be enacted to tax property in REAAs was of concern.

4. Operation and Maintenance of School Facilities. Extreme operational costs often result from inheriting substandard or poorly designed facilities. Costs of operating facilities are unpredictable, and in some cases were expected to consume as much as one-third of the operating budget. Inherited utility contracts was singled out as an item of great concern.

5. Other Financial Concerns. State and federal categorical programs were items of much concern, partly because obtaining some of these funds depends upon the grant writing ability of the REAA. High costs of travel and meeting expenses for school boards and superintendents were expected to cause problems. Inadequate funding for school food service programs was also identified as a major concern. The acceptance and operation of former BIA schools was of concern because of the possibility that current funding methods might not be adequate to provide funds necessary to operate the schools. Costs of teacher housing was a problem in some REAAs.

SERVICE DELIVERY TO THE UNORGANIZED BOROUGH (Cont'd)

CHRONOLOGY OF EVENTS: DECENTRALIZATION OF THE ALASKA STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL SYSTEM - 1974-1976

January 1974. Center for Northern Educational Research (CNER) releases its report, PreHigher Education in the Unorganized Borough: Analysis and Recommendations, produced at the request of the Eighth Alaska State Legislature's Interim Committee and of Native leaders.

January - May 1974. Eighth Alaska State Legislature meets and reviews CNER report in committee, but does not act on the recommendations of the report concerning rural education.

July 14-16, 1974. The Alaska Federation of Natives (AFN), having assessed the Legislature's inactivity, calls an Education Strategies Conference in Fairbanks to review CNER's recommendations, to prioritize issues addressed in the report, and to determine whether and how to bring CNER recommendations to the attention and action of the new State Legislature.

August 15, 1974. Mr. Gordon Jackson, Executive Vice-President for Human Resources, at the AFN presents the recommendations and strategies from the July conference to the State Board of Education and receives their unanimous support of those items.

October 14-16, 1974. The AFN Annual Convention endorses through resolutions the PreHigher Education's recommendations and strategies. The Human Resource Committee of AFN, meeting during the convention, endorses those principles and directs staff to include those concerns into the formal AFN Education Position Paper to be presented to the newly elected State Legislature.

January 1975. The Ninth Alaska State Legislature convenes, with several bills related to the CNER/AFN recommendations prefiled. These bills include Senate Bill (SB) 35, House Bill (HB) 24, and SB 94 and SB 136.

June 4, 1975. Governor Hammond signs into law (Chapter 124, SLA 75) the Free Conference version of SB 35 and HB 24. An interim administrative structure, AUBSK, is created for the transitional year.

September-October 1975. Representatives of DOE and DCRA hold formal hearings for REAAs; public hearings are held in 21 communities in the unorganized borough; 796 people attend, representing 83 communities.

July 1, 1976. Twenty-one Regional Educational Attendance Area school boards take responsbility for education in their regions.

SB 35 AND REGIONAL GOVERNMENT *

Patrick K. Poland

The transfer of the major operational responsibilities for rural Alaska's schools from the State of Alaska (Alaska Unorganized Borough School District) to regional school districts (Regional Educational Attendance Areas) with locally elected school boards was accomplished by Ch 124, Session Laws of Alaska, 1975 (popularly referred to as Senate Bill 35).

To a great extent, the ultimate impact of Senate Bill 35 is just beginning to be realized. However, there are already several definite implications for municipal government that have arisen from the implementation of Senate Bill 35. The purpose of this discussion is to underscore these implications as they relate to the development of municipal government in the Unorganized Borough. For purposes of this discussion, municipalities consist of boroughs and first-class cities; that is, municipalities having the education function.

Regional Identification

While rural Alaska's initial encounter with the concept of regionalism came about with passage of Public Law 92-746, the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA), there is no doubt that Senate Bill 35 went far beyond the implications of the ANCSA in terms of developing regional identification. In the view of the Department of Community and Regional Affairs this was a positive step towards developing regional government in the Unorganized Borough. Prior to the passage and implementation of this particular act there were no real tests of the regional concept of service delivery taking place in the Unorganized Borough;[1] and while there were many advocates of this particular mechanism of service delivery, it remained, by and large, untested. However, with the mandate of regionalization created by Senate Bill 35, rural residents have, in a sense, been forced to test the concepts of regionalism in Alaska's vast Unorganized Borough.

Surprisingly, there seemed little if any real resistance to the idea of regional school districts. On the contrary, most rural residents seemed eager to embrace the concept. Much of this was undoubtedly due to the dissatisfaction many rural residents felt with the former State-Operated School System. Perhaps the strongest demonstration of this desire to participate in a regional approach to service delivery was the change in municipal status executed by the City of Selawik. In that particular instance, the City of Selawik, formerly a city of the first class in the Unorganized Borough and therefore having school responsibilities, petitioned the Local Boundary Commission[2] and convinced them of the need for the city to be dissolved and "reincorporated" as a second class city so that it might become a part of the particular Regional Educational Attendance Area (Northwest Arctic). Among the arguments presented in support of Selawik's reclassification was a strong statement by residents concerning their desire to be a part of the Regional Educational Attendance Area and to receive benefits they perceived as being available only to constituents of the REAA.

The Department of Community and Regional Affairs, noting the relatively warm embrace being given regionalization by Unorganized Borough residents, early in 1976 initiated a study of the acceptability of general purpose regional governments in the Unorganized Borough. That study,[3] which consumed some six months, came to a number of conclusions, the most important of which appears to be the fact that rural residents are still wary of any form of government that has the authority to levy and collect taxes. Additionally, many residents expressed concern about moving too fast; while they embraced the idea of regional school districts, they felt that the concept required the test of time before jumping to yet a new form of government. Nevertheless, the department has had inquiries from several regions (most notably the Fort Yukon, Bethel, Glennallen, and Valdez regions) concerning possible borough incorporation. To date, none of those discussions has evolved into an actual petition for borough incorporation, although it does appear that many areas are getting close to taking that step. There is no doubt that formal consideration by these regions of regional government was precipitated by the establishment of REAAs.

An additional development which, to some degree, appears to be an offshoot of the regional approach fostered by Senate Bill 35, was the passage of Ch 84 SLA 1977, which established a mechanism for regions of the Unorganized Borough to establish coastal zone management (CZM) service areas for the purpose of CZM planning. Under the provisions of that particular act any Regional Educational Attendance Area, upon determination by the local electorate, may establish itself as a coastal zone management planning district. While the legislation permits consolidation of two or more Regional Educational Attendance Areas into a CZM planning district, it does not allow individual REAAs to be subdivided into smaller districts for the purposes of planning. This is an interesting development and one that seems to further reinforce the concept of delivery services on a regional basis.

Finally, in terms of regionalization, it is interesting to note the provisions of Senate Bill 35 which deal with the boundaries of Regional Educational Attendance Areas. Specifically, the bill provides that:

> As far as practicable, each Regional Educational Attendance Area shall contain an integrated socio-economic, linguistically and culturally homogenous area. In the formation of Regional Educational Attendance Areas, consideration shall be given to the transportation and communication network to facilitate the administration and communication between communities that comprise the area.

Very similar statutory language exists at AS 29.18.030, which is the statutory provision establishing standards for borough incorporation. The similarity of the standards goes a long way towards defining appropriate boundaries for potential regional governments. In fact, to some observers, the boundaries of the newly created Regional Educational Attendance Areas (with some exceptions) generally conform to good borough boundaries. This has been a little alarming to many rural residents, since no small number of them are still concerned that the state is going to "foist" boroughs upon them.

Finance

The second major subject area that has been the topic of much discussion as a result of Senate Bill 35 is that of local government finance. As presently constituted, Regional Educational Attendance Areas, in comparison to municipal school districts, have an advantageous funding schedule. In addition to 100 percent Public School Foundation Program funding, Regional Educational Attendance Areas also receive from the State an amount equal to the average local contribution per pupil in municipal school districts multiplied by the number of students in the Regional Educational Attendance Area. This advantageous funding schedule for REAAs versus municipal districts remains a hindrance rather than an enticement for REAAs to seek organized borough status.

Since most REAAs are property poor (hence, no ability to generate tax revenues), the thought of forming municipal school districts to provide services which are currently provided by Regional Educational Attendance Areas is almost out of the question. For example, the poorest existing borough has about $20,000 worth of taxable property per capita. On the other hand, some of the Regional Educational Attendance Areas could probably expect to have considerably less than $5,000 worth of taxable property per capita. Realistically, it is impossible to provide basic municipal services without adequate funding.

The major exceptions to this discussion, of course, are those areas surrounding "the pipeline." The regions surrounding Fort Yukon, Delta Junction, Glennallen, Copper Center, and Valdez have taxable property per capita values that could easily support borough government.

Partially in response to these obvious funding inequities, the Department of Community and Regional Affairs, as a part of its final conclusions reached in its study of regional government, recommended that a new system of financing regional governments be found. Basically, the system suggested was one that placed a state-wide property tax on all property associated with the exploitation of natural resources and then, in turn, distributed those tax revenues on the basis of population and services being provided by individual boroughs. It was determined that additional study of that particular proposal would be needed before the feasibility of it could be determined.

Nevertheless, this particular area is still a popular subject among legislators as demonstrated by current House Bill 202 and Senate Bill 35 introduced in the first session of the 1977 Legislative Session. Both those bills would levy real property taxes on developed land in the Unorganized Borough. Hearings on House Bill 202 were held this October (1977) in Fort Yukon, Delta Junction, and Tok.

Finally, one last area of financing that again discriminates between the municipal versus REAA school district is that of school construction. Presently municipal districts must pay for 50 percent of school construction while REAAs contribute no local effort towards construction of new facilities. This is seen as a significant impediment to the development of regional government for the purpose of assuming local control of education, particularly in areas which are "poor" or are marginally deficient in terms of a real property tax base.

Constitutionality

I mention this issue simply because it is one of concern to many involved with municipal government. Because REAAs are not units of local government they cannot be given taxing authority nor can they provide "local government" services.[4] While the legality of the current REAAs has not been challenged on the grounds of Article X, Section 2, of the Constitution, there is reason to believe that if additional REAA-type entities are established they will be challenged and may, on the basis of Article X, Section 2, be declared unconstitutional.

On the other hand, those defending the constitutionality of the REAAs cite Article X, Section 6, of the Constitution which authorizes the Legislature to provide services in the Unorganized Borough ostensibly through the service area mechanism. However, the significant degree of autonomy given REAAs, particularly with respect to their abilities to independently contract and incur debt, makes the argument that REAAs are service areas, and hence an arm of the Legislature, highly suspect.[5]

Summary

In summary, it can be said that formation of the Regional Educational Attendance Areas can be viewed as a positive step towards the formation of regional government in rural Alaska. In particular the newly created service areas have provided a greater amount of local control over a local municipal-type service, maintained and strengthened existing regional identifications, and provided boundaries that will be useful for the establishment of boroughs in the future.

The principal negative aspect of Senate Bill 35 has been the funding formula which maintains a disincentive to formation of municipal governments and fails to properly address the extremely poor tax base of much of rural Alaska.

Ultimately, the passage of Senate Bill 35, if for no reason other than the fact that it has generated discussion and interest, is going to have had a significant effect (probably the most significant since the passage of the 1964 mandatory borough act) towards developing regional government in this state.

Notes

1. Admittedly, certain state and federal agencies have been administering a few programs on a regional basis. However, these agencies have had the benefit of vast government financial and technical resources to assist them. In the opinion of this writer, the availability of these resources makes any comparison between the state/federal regional approach and the REAAs invalid.

2. The Local Boundary Commission is composed of five members and is responsible for reviewing and approving or disapproving all municipal incorporation, dissolution, and boundary change proposals.

3. While a final report was not issued at the end of the study, several comprehensive memorandums summarizing various aspects of the study are available from Community and Regional Affairs. As an additional result of the study, legislation calling for a Local Government Commission to study and make recommendations to the Legislature on all aspects of state/local relations is being introduced by Governor Hammond in the second session of the Tenth State Legislature (January 1978).

4. Alaska Constitution, Article X, Section 2. All local government powers shall be vested in boroughs and cities. The state may delegate taxing powers to organized boroughs and cities only.

STATUTORY INDUCEMENTS AND DISINCENTIVES RELATED TO BOROUGH GOVERNMENT INCORPORATION

XIV

STATUTORY INDUCEMENTS AND DISINCENTIVES RELATED TO BOROUGH GOVERNMENT INCORPORATION

Organizational Grants (AS 29.18.180) To defray the cost of transition to borough government status and to provide for its development and interim governmental operations, each newly created borough is entitled to an organizational grant of $25,000 or $10 per voter voting in the incorporation election, whichever is greater.

The organizational grants have not been a statutory incentive to encourage borough incorporation because the grant is not adequate and is not intended to pay for the entire cost of borough organization. Although there are no guidelines for the use of the organizational grants, a newly incorporated borough may use the funds to defray the cost of hiring a borough administrator, paying for a local assessment of real and personal property, obtaining office space, etc.

In order to provide an incentive to borough incorporation, an organizational grant would have to be at least $75,000 to $100,000 plus the initial cost involved in conducting a feasibility study on borough incorporation, and an amount equal to the cost of conducting the initial assessment and appraisal of real and personal property.

Land Selections (AS 29.18.203) A newly created borough may select ten percent of the total acreage of vacant, unappropriated, unreserved land within its boundaries on the date of incorporation. In the selection of land under the Statehood Act, it has been the policy of the State to make available to boroughs and cities the maximum land area from which to make selections consistant with the State's best interest.

The municipal land selection process is an incentive to borough incorporation to the extent that the boundaries proposed for a borough would probably include the maximum allowable vacant, unappropriated, and unrestricted lands from which to select its ten percent However, the boundaries of a proposed borough must conform to natural geography and include all areas necessary for full development of local services.

State Revenue Sharing Program (AS 43.18.010-045) The State Revenue Sharing Program annually distributes grants to cities and boroughs based on the number of local residents in a municipality, the eligible powers exercised by each local government, the cost of living allowance used in computing total grant entitlements and the total appropriation approved for the grant program.

During each fiscal year, the Department of Community and Regional Affairs distributes State Revenue Sharing Funds to eligible cities or organized boroughs which provide specific services, and exercise the powers as follows:

Municipal Service	Rate of Entitlement
Police Protection	$12. per capita
Military	$ 6. per capita
Fire Protection	$ 7.50 per capita
Water or Air Pollution	$ 2. per capita
Land-Use Planning	$ 2. per capita
Parks and Recreation	$ 5. per capita

Municipal Service (Cont'd)	Rate of Entitlement (Cont'd)
Military	$ 1.25 per capita
Transportation Facilities	$ 5.00 per capita
Military	$ 2.50 per capita
Road Maintenance
- Public Roads	$ 1,500. per mile
- Ice Roads	$ 900. per mile
Health Facilities	$ 4,000. per fac. OR
	$ 1,000. per bed
Health Services	$ 2. per capita
Hospitals	$75,000. per host. OR
	$25,000. per hosp. OR
	$ 1,000. per bed
State Construction Aid	$ 2,500. per bed

State Revenue Sharing has had an increasing impact on municipalities since its enactment in 1969. The program funding has increased from $2.0 million in 1970 to $18.6 million in FY 1979, and municipalities have become increasingly dependent on these grants. However, due to the limited amount of funding made available for the program each year, municipalities have not received 100 percent of their grant entitlements. Last fiscal year municipalities received only 88.7 percent of their total grant entitlements and next fiscal year the Department of Community and Regional Affairs expects the program to be funded at approximately 85 percent of all the grant entitlements.

The current formula is intended to encourage existing local governments to provide financial incentives to exercise powers, improve upon existing services provided and reduce any local taxes.

Local Service Road and Trail Program (LRS&T) (AS 19.30.111-251) The Local Service Roads and Trail Program provides state assistance in the development of roads and trails on routes that are not eligible for Federal-aid highway funds. These funds are intended to provide local service roads, year-around foot trails, winter trail staking, bicycle paths, erosion control, foot bridges, boardwalks, etc.

This program is 100 percent State-funded through State bond issues. Under the program, funds are allocated to organized boroughs and home-rule cities according to a strict area/population formula. Each local government receives its allocation by submitting a three-year program with project priorities noted to the Regional Highway Engineer by October 1 of each year. A portion of the fund is also allocated to the unorganized borougns; this money is administered by DOTPF. The communities within the unorganized boroughs receive funding based on priority and need. Each community selects its project and submits it to the Department for consideration.

The Department of Transportation and Public Facilities (DOTPF) is responsible for maintaining, causing to be maintained, or constructing any project under the LSR&T Program. However, a project constructed within the boundaries of a local government which exercises the power of streets and sidewalks may be transferred to a local government upon the approval of DOTPF and acceptance by the local government.

STATUTORY INDUCEMENTS AND DISINCENTIVES RELATED TO BOROUGH GOVERNMENT INCORPORATION (Cont'd)

Local Service Road and Trail Program (LRS&T) (AS 19.30.111-251) (Cont'd)

A road, street or highway transferred to a local government under this process can be eligible to receive State Revenue Sharing funding equal to $1,500 a mile for each eligible mile for streets or highways maintained by the local government.

Although a borough stands a greater chance of being awarded local service roads and trails projects under the area/population formula, and although roads, streets and highways may be transferred to a municipality, the LSR&T Program has not been a sufficient incentive to encourage borough incorporation.

Regional Education Attendance Area (REAAs) REAAs were created with the passage of Chapter 124, Session Laws of Alaska, 1975 (popularly referred to as Senate Bill 35,) thus transferring the major operational responsibilities for rural Alaska schools (Alaska Unorganized Borough School District) to regional school districts (REAAs.) Although the REAAs created have provided a greater amount of local control over local municipal-type services, strengthened the existing regional identification of these areas, and provided boundaries that are useful to establishing future boroughs, the State funding formula has been a disincentive to the formation of borough government, and it fails to properly address the extremely poor tax base for much of rural Alaska. In addition to receiving funding for 100 percent of the Public School Foundation Program and 100 percent of the cost for new school construction, REAAs receive from the State an amount equal to the average local contribution per pupil in municipal school districts multiplied by the number of students which will approximate $710 per student this year. The Public Foundation Program will be funded approximately at 100 percent this year, and the State school construction cost will only be funded at approximately 80 percent this year. The advantageous funding schedule mentioned above for REAAs still remains a disincentive to the formation of organized boroughs unless the borough school districts can obtain additional funding to offset the increased level of funding for REAAs.

State-Shared Taxes State-shared taxes are specific taxes levied and collected by the State of Alaska (Department of Revenue) and are, in part, refunded to cities and boroughs providing municipal services. State-shared taxes refunded to municipalities include the following:

Amusement and Gaming Taxes (AS 43.35.010-090) Fifty percent of the taxes collected under this program are refunded to the municipality in which the tax is collected. Payments are made automatically, on a semi-annual basis, to all cities and boroughs upon receipt of notice of incorporation.

Aviation Fuel Taxes (AS 43.40.010-040) Sixty percent of the taxes collected under this program are refunded to the municipality in which the tax is collected, if that municipality owns and/or operates a public airport.

Corporate Income Taxes (AS 43.20.010) Effective July 1, 1979, each municipality will receive a refund equal to the amount they received as a refund under the former Business License Tax Program. Refunds are mailed automatically to municipalities, once a year.

Liquor License Taxes (AS 04.10.460) One hundred percent of the amount collected under this tax program is refunded to the municipality in which it was collected if the municipality has a police force and actively enforces State, Federal, and local liquor laws. Refunds are mailed automatically to municipalities semi-annually.

Punchboard Taxes (AS 43.35.100-150) Seventy-five percent of the amount collected under this tax program is refunded to the municipality in which it was collected. Refunds are mailed automatically to municipalities once a year.

Raw Fish Taxes (AS 43.75.130-135) Currently each borough receives twenty percent of the amount of tax revenues collected in the area outside cities and ten percent of the amount of tax revenues collected within cities. Refunds to eligible municipalities are mailed annually.

Telephone and Electric Cooperative Taxes (AS 10.25.570) One hundred percent of the tax collected from telephone and electric cooperatives is refunded to the municipalities in which the cooperative does business. A municipality's entitlement is based upon the amount of gross revenue the cooperative received from operations within the municipality's boundaries. The tax is refunded annually.

With the exception of the raw fish tax refunds, all other State-shared taxes contribute a relatively small amount of revenue to an organized borough and would not provide a statutory inducement to municipal incorporation. Depending on the amount of fish products processed within the boundaries of a proposed borough, the raw fish tax could provide an incentive to borough incorporation; i.e., the Aleutian Islands.

MEMORANDUM 12 February 1981

TO: Representative Hugh Malone
Chairman, Legislative Council

FROM: Senator Arliss Sturgulewski
Chairman, Title 29 Revision Policy Advisory Group

As chair of the Title 29 Policy Advisory Group, I am pleased to submit a bill revising Title 29 of the Alaska statutes. This revision of the municipal government statutes was mandated last year by SCR 66 "Directing the Alaska Legislative Council to revise AS 29 (Municipal Government)". Under this resolution, a thirteen member Policy Advisory Group was appointed to oversee the revision process. In addition to four legislative members; Senator Bob Mulcahy, Representative Charles Parr, Representative Margaret Branson, and myself, nine members represented various levels of local government and geographic areas of the state.

This proposed bill represents a tremendous volume of work completed within a limited time frame. However, the revision of Title 29 has been throughly and carefully considered in spite of this time constraint. This is due in large measure to the real concern about local government shared by all members of the Policy Advisory Group. Excellent assistance was provided by a Technical Group composed of two Advisory Group members, municipal attorneys, and a city clerk. This Technical Group was formed to assist the legislative legal staff and the Advisory Group in interpreting provisions of the law and in revising specific statutes. Policy decisions were made by the Policy Advisory Group.

Since the first organizational meeting in August 1980, three complete redrafts of Title 29 have been prepared and reviewed. The legislative Legal Services staff, under the direction of Billy Be rier, is due special recognition for the tremendous amount of staff work provided to the Policy Advisory Group, especially Ms. Tamara Brandt Cook, who was responsible for the successive drafts of Title 29.

SB

Public testimony was received during the monthly meetings of the Policy Advisory Group from representatives of local government, Native organizations and state agencies. Numerous presentations were made to interested organizations, including a work session at the Alaska Federation of Natives annual meeting, participation at the annual Alaska Municipal League conference and numerous presentations to various interest groups.

A complete report of all changes proposed in Title 29, as well as a explanation of those sections that were deleted from the final bill, has been prepared. This section-by-section analysis will be submitted to respective Senate and House committees of first referral.

The Policy Advisory Group voted unanimously to recommend this bill to the Legislature for passage. While, overall, the committee is satisfied with this bill, it necessarily represents compromises on issues of local government structure by all members of the group. The Policy Advisory Group provided for the submission of minority reports with the Title 29 bill. One minority report was received, and is being submitted with the proposed bill.

The Policy Advisory Group, in its initial meetings, developed two basic guidelines for its revision of Title 29. These can be characterized as the simplification of the title's organization and the achievement of maximum flexibility in the structure and functioning of local government. Simplification of the organization of Title 29 will make it easier for everyone involved with, or interested in municipal government to understand the state's municipal code. Simplification included the clarification of the range of local governmental powers and how those powers can be assumed.

Flexibility in carrying out local administrative and procedural responsibilities meant reducing unnecessary statutory directives on local actions. The Policy Advisory Group recommended the deletion of a number of technical requirements on how local governments were to undertake day-to-day functions. These provisions included requirements for specifying a particular date for council and assembly meetings, the form of local ordinances, specific election dates and procedures, and so on.

However, in meeting the public's desire for more flexibility in the functioning of local government, the Policy Advisory Group was well aware that they were in effect eliminating a model for governmental activities that could be used by newly formed municipalities. Although it does not appear in the proposed revision of Title 29, the Policy Advisory Group found that more technical assistance in defining local government's structure and procedure will be required by local governments once the revision of Title 29 is adopted. To this end, the committee recommends that the capability of the Department of Community and Regional Affairs to provide expanded technical assistance be evaluated and matched to the future demand for the Department's services.

The mandate given the Policy Advisory Group was to prepare a revision of Title 29 for submission to the Legislature. With the submission of this bill, the Policy Advisory Group has fulfilled their mandate. However, there were a number of major policy issues brought before the Policy Advisory Group that could not be addressed within the scope of the revision of Title 29. I would like to outline some of these major issues which the Policy Advisory Group feels will merit further consideration by the Legislature.

The major policy issue beyond the scope of the Title 29 revision was the widespread demand for more local control, both over local matters and over state and federal programs affecting communities. The public brought a variety of proposals before the Policy Advisory Group, from demands for more local direction of state programs, to the granting of municipal rights and powers to Native governments; to the desire for self-governing regional organizations that would be something other than boroughs or unified municipalities. Major policy issues relating to these proposals include the constitutional and statutory basis of such self-governing organizations; questions of representation that must meet federal Supreme Court mandates; and problems of designing mechanisms that will enable the diverse range of local governments to effectively influence state and federal programs.

In testimony before the Policy Advisory Group, two state agencies proposed that local governments consider taking over those agency programs that were primarily local in nature. While responding to the desire for more local control over their programs, neither agency had a clear idea of the cost or manpower requirements such decentralization would place on local governments. As a result, it was not possible to determine whether the total costs of these programs would increase with decentralization, when staff and program costs would be duplicated among several local governments. An important question to be answered by the Legislature, is how much the state is willing to pay to meet the demands for local control. Local governments will need support to carry out statutory mandates. Is the Legislature willing to provide more support to local governments than it presently provides state agencies?

A common problem faced by rural residents is the multiplication of agencies and organizations formed to respond to state and federal program requirements. There was a general call for coordinating and streamlining requirements that now result, in some cases, in up to 10 local boards and organizations. These may include a city council, IRA council, village corporation board and subcommittees, membership in various non-profit organizations (formed to provide health services, state and federal contract construction services, BIA funded social services, regional housing authorities, and so on) and regional Coastal Resource Service Areas and Regional Education Attendance Areas and so on.

Comments on the "pros" and "cons" of the service area concept and its use were brought to the Policy Advisory Group. Some rural residents expressed a strong feeling that the creation of separate single-purpose service areas led to a fragmenting of local control. Others felt that service areas would be the best vehicle for additional public services in the unorganized borough. In any event, the creation of additional single-purpose service areas, to be superimposed on the existing system of REAAs, Coastal Resources Service Areas and Aquaculture Districts, needs to be given serious thought. This is especially true in light of the constitutional intent of a simplified system of local government. Or, put in another way, should the Legislature create a multi-layered type of governmental system in the unorganized borough that is considered undesirable within an organized city or borough?

In short there is a widespread and growing concern in all areas of the state about the nature and structure of local government. The proposed revision of Title 29 addresses many of the difficulties of organized local governments, and will hopefully make it easier for areas to incorporate and function as municipalities. In addition to this revision the Legislature will be faced with a number of questions on the very substance and purpose of local government and local self-determination that go far beyond the recommended revision of Title 29. In order to answer these public concerns, the Legislature will have to be prepared to reassess the constitutional and philosophical foundations of local government in Alaska.

I see the revision of Title 29 as the first necessary step in this reevaluation of the structure and function of local government in our state. When our constitution was adopted in 1956, its provisions for local government were the most advanced in the nation. As with the update of the municipal code in 1972, the present effort to revise Title 29 reflects a continuing commitment to developing a healthy, flexible, and most functional system of local government possible to meet Alaska's needs.

In closing, I would like to request that this memorandum be made a part of the Journal Supplement upon submission of this bill.

Dear Senator Sturgulewski:

As we discussed during the Title 29 Revision Commission meeting of January 17-18, 1981, I wish to submit a minority report.

In general, I agree with the direction taken, a[illegible] in some instances do not consider issues of sufficient import to justify taking written exception. I think it speaks well for the Commission that mine will probably be the only minority report, and that I can confine myself to two issues.

It was a pleasure to work with you.

Sincerely,

Charles H. Parr

TITLE 29 REVISION COMMISSION

Minority Report

At the first meeting of the Commission I laid out what appeared to me to be two general directions in which work should proceed:

1 - The garage mechanic, housewife, or other average citizen, when elected to the city council or borough assembly, should be able to read the Code and understand it.

2 - After ensuring that the Code contained provisions which would guarantee democratic rights common to all citizens of the State, we should "take the strings off" the municipalities as much as possible.

In my view, the Commission's work went a long way toward reaching this first goal. Although the Code is still somewhat confusing, it is much improved in organization and a number of passages with convoluted syntax have been removed.

I do not agree with the Commission's recommendation for abolition of the third class borough. No one has, in my judgment, presented compelling arguments for depriving citizens of this local government alternative. The third class borough at the present time offers a form of local government which is less demanding than that of the first and second class borough, and yet it has powers other than education. It may exercise these powers on a service area basis.

Apparently the crux of the matter is the fact that the third class borough is not required to exercise planning and zoning functions and this is anathema to the professional planners in our midst. I can find no other justification for their opposition.

The second point on which I wish to disassociate myself from the Commission's majority recommendations is that of State compliance with local subdivision regulation. It is common knowledge that the present administration, by its refusal to release land into private ownership, held down the safety valve on the steam boiler and caused the Beirne initiative explosion. We were rescued from the (probably) devastating effects of the initiative by the Supreme Court ruling that it was an appropriation and therefore unconstitutional. In an attempt to release some pressure from the "boiler", the Legislature has established the land disposal program and is insistent that sufficient land be made available to prevent a future such initiative which might meet constitutional tests.

If the State must meet subdivision requirements, several things will happen:

1 - The land disposal program will be delayed as necessary roads, and perhaps other improvements, must be constructed and pass municipal inspection before the land can be disposed of.

2 - The cost of improvements will be high and the State will be faced with a large subsidy for each parcel disposed of. If this large subsidy is not to be made, the parcels of land will be priced out of reach of many of the persons who would like to have them (especially young couples getting started).

3 - Subdivision standards vary from place to place. The State will be, in effect, favoring those municipalities which have higher subdivision standards. This could well lead to municipalities upgrading their standards in order to receive more from the State.

The whole issue of what the State should do in land disposal will be before the Legislature this year and a number of major policy decisions need to be made. I do not consider it appropriate to make such decisions in what was intended to be a non-policy revision of Title 29.

RE: Revision of AS 29

It is generally recognized, especially by those who work most closely with it, that AS 29 is in need of revision. Since the time of original enactment, changes in the title, problems in its application, and policy questions of importance have been noted by municipal attorneys, city managers and clerks, and such other municipal officials as assessors. The Legislative Revisor has indicated that AS 29 should be next approached in terms of needed revision.

The work of revision is complicated and, at times, highly technical. I have received numerous inquiries and requests for a process by which to revise AS 29. I have discussed this problem with many people, including Mr. Berrier, and Ms. Chitwood of the Alaska Municipal League.

I would like to suggest the following as an approach to the revision of AS 29 during the period of time between this session and the 1981 session. Funds and responsibility for this project would be directed by the Legislative Council to Mr. Billy Berrier, Legislative Legal Services, to conduct the revision. I foresee the project as follows: two groups would be selected by Mr. Berrier from recommendations provided by the Department of Community and Regional Affairs, Alaska Municipal League and other interested and affected parties. The first group would be a policy advisory group composed of a variety of perspectives and interests, representing the diversity of local governments across the state, and would include a representative of the legislature. The second, a much smaller group, would be a working group, composed of people who have had experience in the application of AS 29. The work group should consist of municipal attorneys, representatives of the Department of Community and Regional Affairs and the Department of Law, as well as a staff member of Legislative Legal Services; other municipal staff functions should also be represented, such as managers or clerks. While the actual technical work would be conducted by the working group, the policy group would provide overall guidance and assistance on policy questions.

Administrative and secretarial responsbility would rest in Legal Services. In order to support this project funds would be required for travel and per diem. Most local governments will be glad to contribute staff time to this project. However, for both the policy and the working group it will be necessary to provide travel funds. As often as possibl teleconferencing will be used to reduce travel needs and to expedite the project. A draft bill will be ready for January 1981.

It is anticipated that $20,000 should cover the cost of this project. Any funds remaining would be returned.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

SENATE BILL NO. 565

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

ELEVENTH LEGISLATURE - SECOND SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to Native village governments.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE. (a) The legislature has determined that

(1) there exist in the state several communities which have Native village governments recognized as the traditional local government; and

(2) the law and customs of Native village governments include notions of democracy, liberty and the exercise of personal rights consistent with the state and federal constitution.

(b) It is the purpose of this Act to

(1) insure that the state recognizes Native village governments as local governments and encourages them in the administration of government for the benefit of their people; and

(2) provide for interaction between the state government and Native village governments.

* Sec. 2. AS 29 is amended by adding a new chapter to read:

CHAPTER 70. NATIVE VILLAGE GOVERNMENTS.

Sec. 29.70.010. NATIVE VILLAGE GOVERNMENTS. A Native village government, in a village which is not incorporated and not an organized borough is recognized by the state as the governing body of that village A Native village government recognized by the state under this section is eligible to participate in all state programs to the same extent and in the same manner as a second class city. A Native village government recognized under this section is entitled to notice concerning proposed actions by the state to the same extent as the government of a second class city is entitled to notice. A Native village government recognized under this section shall be consulted by the state on state actions and programs which affect the village to the same extent that the government of a second class city is consulted on state actions and programs.

Sec. 29.70.020. AGREEMENTS. A Native village government or group of Native village governments may negotiate agreements with the commissioner of community and regional affairs regarding coordination of state activities with the activities of the Native village government or group of native village governments, including proposals to coordinate state services with services provided by a Native village government such as judicial services, law enforcement services, and correctional services.

(b) When the commissioner of community and regional affairs negotiates an agreement under this section, he shall first consult with the head of each principal executive department which may be affected by the agreement. The commissioner of community and regional affairs shall next submit the proposed agreement to the governor. The governor may approve an agreement and upon approval the agreement shall define the respective responsibilities of the state and of the Native village government during the period of time covered by the agreement.

Sec. 29.70.030. NONDISCRIMINATION. A Native village government which is a party to an agreement under AS 29.70.020 may not adopt a rule or operate a program which creates or extinguishes a benefit, liability, privilege, immunity or license dependent on racial classification or membership in a Native tribe, clan, or organization, except that a Native village government may participate in federally funded programs which provide services to persons or organizations because of their status as Native persons or Native organizations. Violation of this section renders an agreement entered into under AS 29.70.020 void.

Sec. 29.70.040. LIMITATIONS. Nothing in this chapter authorizes the alienation, encumbrance, or taxation of real or personal property, including water rights, belonging to a Native person or Native village that is held in trust by the United States or is subject to a restriction against alienation imposed by the United States, or authorizes regulation of the use of property in a manner inconsistent with a federal treaty, agreement, statute, or a regulation, or extends the jurisdiction of the state to adjudicate the ownership or right to possession of property. Nothing in this chapter deprives a Native person, Native village, or Native corporation of any right, privilege or immunity afforded under federal or state treaty, agreement, or law, or alters the jurisdiction of the state, its political subdivisions, or a Native village government.

(1) "Native person" means a person who meets the requirements for membership in a Native village or organization authorized, chartered, or incorporated under the authority of a Native village government;

(2) "Native village government" means a local governing body organized by authority of the Act of Congress of June 18, 1934, 25 U.S.C. sec. 476, or a local governing body of a Native village which meets the requirements of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act, 43 U.S.C. secs. 1601 et seq.

The Secretary of the Interior shall advise such tribe or its tribal council of all appropriation estimates or Federal projects for the benefit of the tribe prior to the submission of such estimates to the Bureau of the Budget and the Congress.

SEC. 17. The Secretary of the Interior may, upon petition by at least one-third of the adult Indians, issue a charter of incorporation to such tribe: Provided, That such charter shall not become operative until ratified at a special election by a majority vote of the adult Indians living on the reservation. Such charter may convey to the incorporated tribe the power to purchase, take by gift, or bequest, or otherwise, own, hold, manage, operate, and dispose of property of every description, real and personal, including the power to purchase restricted Indian lands and to issue in exchange therefor interests in corporate property, and such further powers as may be incidental to the conduct of corporate business, not inconsistent with law, but no authority shall be granted to sell, mortgage, or lease for a period exceeding ten years any of the land included in the limits of the reservation. Any charter so issued shall not be revoked or surrendered except by Act of Congress.

SEC. 19. The term "Indian" as used in this Act shall include all persons of Indian descent who are members of any recognized Indian tribe now under Federal jurisdiction, and all persons who are descendents of such members who were, on June 1, 1934, residing within the present boundaries of any Indian reservation, and shall further include all other persons of one-half or more Indian blood. For the purposes of this Act, Eskimos and other aboriginal peoples of Alaska shall be considered Indians. Act of May 17, 1884 (23 Stats. 26):

SEC. 14. That none of the provisions of the last two preceding sections of this Act shall be so construed as to warrant the sale of any lands belonging to the United States which shall contain coal or the precious metals, or any town site, or which shall be occupied by the United States for public purposes, or which shall be reserved for such purposes, or to which the natives of Alaska have prior rights by virtue of actual occupation, or which shall be selected by the United States Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries on the island of Kadiak and Afognak for the purpose of establishing fish-culture stations. And all tracts of land not exceeding six hundred and forty acres in any one tract now occupied as missionary stations in said district of Alaska are hereby excepted from the operation of the last preceding sections of this act. No portion of the islands of the Pribylov Group or the Seal Islands of Alaska shall be subject to sale under this Act; and the United States reserves, and there shall be reserved in all patents issued under the provisions of the last two preceding sections the right of the United States to regulate the taking of salmon and to do all things necessary to protect and prevent the destruction of salmon in all the water of the lands granted frequented by salmon.

SEC. 15. That until otherwise provided by law the body of lands known as Annette Islands, situated in Alexander Archipelago in Southeastern Alaska, on the north side of Dixon's entrance, be, and the same is hereby, set apart as a reservation for the use of the Metlakahtla Indians, and those people known as Metlakahtlans who have recently emigrated from British Columbia to Alaska, and such other Alaskan natives as may join them, to be held and used by them in common, under such rules and regulations and subject to such restrictions, as may be prescribed from time to time by the Secretary of the Interior.

Act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. 1101):

SEC. 8. * * * Provided, That the Indians or other persons in said district shall not be disturbed in the possession of any lands actually in their use or occupation or now claimed by them but the terms under which such persons may acquire title to such lands is reserved for future legislation by Congress: And provided further, That parties who have located mines or mineral privileges therein under the law of the United States applicable to the public domain, or who have occupied and improved or exercised acts of ownership over such claims, shall not be disturbed therein, but shall be allowed to perfect their title to such claims by payment as aforesaid: And provided lso, That the land not exceeding six hundred and forty acres at any station now occupied as missionary stations among the Indian tribes in said section, with the improvements thereon erected by or for such societies, shall be continued in the occupancy of the several religious societies to which said missionary stations respectively belong until action by Congress. But nothing contained in this act shall be construed to put in force in said district the general land laws of the United States.

U. S. GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE : 1939

Public Law 93-638
93rd Congress, S. 1017
January 4, 1975

An Act

To provide maximum Indian participation in the Government and education of the Indian people; to provide for the full participation of Indian tribes in programs and services conducted by the Federal Government for Indians and to encourage the development of human resources of the Indian people; to establish a program of assistance to upgrade Indian education; to support the right of Indian citizens to control their own educational activities; and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act".

Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act.
25 USC 450 note.

CONGRESSIONAL FINDINGS

25 USC 450.

SEC. 2. (a) The Congress, after careful review of the Federal Government's historical and special legal relationship with, and resulting responsibilities to, American Indian people, finds that—

(1) the prolonged Federal domination of Indian service programs has served to retard rather than enhance the progress of Indian people and their communities by depriving Indians of the full opportunity to develop leadership skills crucial to the realization of self-government, and has denied to the Indian people an effective voice in the planning and implementation of programs for the benefit of Indians which are responsive to the true needs of Indian communities; and

(2) the Indian people will never surrender their desire to control their relationships both among themselves and with non-Indian governments, organizations, and persons.

(b) The Congress further finds that—

(1) true self-determination in any society of people is dependent upon an educational process which will insure the development of qualified people to fulfill meaningful leadership roles;

(2) the Federal responsibility for and assistance to education of Indian children has not effected the desired level of educational achievement or created the diverse opportunities and personal satisfaction which education can and should provide; and

(3) parental and community control of the educational process is of crucial importance to the Indian people.

DECLARATION OF POLICY

25 USC 450a.
88 STAT. 2203

SEC. 3. (a) The Congress hereby recognizes the obligation of the United States to respond to the strong expression of the Indian people for self-determination by assuring maximum Indian participation in the direction of educational as well as other Federal services to Indian communities so as to render such services more responsive to the needs and desires of those communities.

(b) The Congress declares its commitment to the maintenance of the Federal Government's unique and continuing relationship with and responsibility to the Indian people through the establishment of a meaningful Indian self-determination policy which will permit an orderly transition from Federal domination of programs for and services to Indians to effective and meaningful participation by the Indian people in the planning, conduct, and administration of those programs and services.

(c) The Congress declares that a major national goal of the United States is to provide the quantity and quality of educational services and opportunities which will permit Indian children to compete and excel in the life areas of their choice, and to achieve the measure of self-determination essential to their social and economic well-being.

The Honorable Arlis Sturgulewski, Senator
Alaska State Senate
2957 Sheldon Jackson Street
Anchorage, Alaska 99501

Dear Senator Sturgulewski:

Re: Indian Self-Determination and BIA Contracting

In 1975 the U.S. Congress enacted the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act. This act had a pronounced effect upon the administration of Federal Indian programs. Nationally, the result was a decentralization of Federal Bureaucracies and a corresponding move towards local reservation control and administration of Indian and Native American programs. In Alaska, the result has been the strengthening and growth of Alaska Native Non-profit Corporations through the availability of increased Federal program dollars.

In the Indian Self-Determination Act it specifically identifies Alaska Native villages, or regional or village corporations as having "Indian Tribe" status. The act further states that any recognized Indian tribe with an accountable "Tribal Organization" can negotiate and contract for services normally provided to Indian and Native Americans by the U.S. Department of Interior and HEW.

There are a variety of federally funded programs currently being contracted out to Alaska Native Non-Profit Corporations. The Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) contracts to the non-profits for the provision of Social Services, Employment Assistance and Johnson O'Malley funds (educational). HEW through Indian Health Service (IHA) contracts for the provision of health services to a variety of Alaska Native Health entities. The U.S. Department of Labor contracts Indian and Native American CETA funds to 14 Native Non-profit corporations throughout Alaska. HUD contracts to regional Native Housing Authorities for the provision of adequate Native housing.

Each of these Federal funding agents requires that the contracting non-profit have the support of the regional Native communities for which it is contracting. The Bureau of Indian Affairs is actively involved in the process of Indian Self-Determination implementation. The procedures BIA has developed for determining local support for contracting to a regional non-profit illustrate the inherent strengths and weaknesses of Indian Self-Determination.

The Indian Self-Determination Act specifically identifies Alaska Native villages as being eligible for the contracting of Federal Indian programs. Each recognized Alaska Native community must pass a resolution of support for any entity seeking a service contract from the BIA. In the Calista Region, all fifty of the villages must decide whether or not to support the AVCP (Area Village Council Presidents) in their bid for the BIA contracted services. If only twenty communities pass resolutions supporting the AVCP initiative, the AVCP will receive funding for only those communities. The balance of the communities will continue to be served by the BIA or negotiate for their non-profit service contracts. Individual Native communities or sub-regional Native non-profit corporations can (with proven accountability and resolutions) contract for the provision of BIA funded services. Municipal governments have no say in the process of Indian Self-Determination. The IRA council or traditional council is the body which decides who will provide the contracted services for their community.

Through the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Indian Self-Determination has provided for a more equitable distribution of services. However, this is accomplished at the risk of a decrease in the efficiency of service delivery.

On a local level, the need for specific services and the best manner of delivery of such services can be tailor made through regional control. The variety and applicability of available services can increase the delivery of essential services. In addition, local or regionally contracted Native NOon-profits are strengthened financially and professionally by the availability of program dollars. From this process of self determination, Alaska Native people have begun to have a greater sense of control over their own destinies.

However, as with most processes of change, there are many unanticipated problems. Indian Self-determination in Alaska has created some specific challenges.

1) there has been no increase in BIA funding levels. However, with the proliferation of Native Non-profit service organizations, the total administrative costs have vastly increased. This has resulted in an overall reduction in available program dollars.

2) Each community has the right to support a particular non-profit in its bid for BIA contracts or provide the services themselves. This can lead to the fractionalization of region-wide non-profits and further divide available program and administrative dollars.

3) Each contracting Federal agency has its own limits on the allowable administrative costs. CETA programs have congressionally mandated administrative cost limits. BIA and IHS negotiate their allowable administrative cost levels independently. This can result in a Native non-profit corporation having 3 or 4 administrative cost levels. None of the federal agencies wants their program to be absorbing a disproportionate share of total administrative costs. Frequently, audits result in a Federal agency disallowing administrative costs they feel give a disproportionate share to their agency. This has created serious financial problems for many non-profits. This fosters the breaking apart of regional non-profits into separate non-profits offering specific functions (Health Authority, Housing Authorities, CETA organizations, etc.) The net effect is a reduction in cost efficiency and program coordination.

Conclusions:

There are some aspects of Indian Self-Determination that can be used. This process does allow regional priorities to be set and control to be established at the local level. The contracting of programs to regional non-profits allows these organizations to grow professionally and achieve financial solvency. Most importantly, the inhabitants of the regions have greater accessability to the needed services and local native people can begin to integrate into the employment areas previously reserved for "outsiders".

There are liabilities involved in this self-determination process. There is a potential for continuing regional fractionalization of regional non-profits. This could result in the proliferation of sub-regional or village service delivery entities and a greater sub-dividing of the State. The differing Federal agency administrative cost levels encourages the creation of separate regional non-profits. These two factors could lead to a decreased efficiency in the utilization of Federal funds and encourage the formation of sub-regional boundaries.

Sincerely,

James C. Sanders

SUBJECT: IRA Incorporation

John Hope, of BIA Tribal Oper? ns outlined briefly the procedures for IRA incorporation, with some background on the Bureau's current attitudes toward incorporations which may be proposed for special tax considerations. Incorporation procedures are as follows:

The community proposing IRA incorporation must forward a list of persons who are interested in forming a corporation to the BIA. Once the list is received by the Bureau, a request is sent to the petitioners for creation of a constitutional committee. The completed constitution as drafted by the committee is then returned to the Bureau for review and approval. Upon approval, the Tribal Operations Office sets an election date on the question. At least 30% of the original petitioners must vote with a majority in favor of incorporation. The petitioners, all of whom must demonstrate "common residence occupation, and corporate interest," may then form an IRA council. While in the past some incorporations have established governmental and economic development functions, the trend now is for incorporations to occur strictly for profit ventures.

John Hope remarked that the most recent IRA incorporation took place on the Kenai peninsula some five years ago. He reported that since the passage of the Claims Act in 1971, the Washington office has sought to discourage any IRA incorporations which would create conflict between ANCSA and PL 984, 1934 - the Indian Reorganization Act.

Hope concluded that while the idea of IRA incorporation with intent to transfer village corporation lands and assets to avoid taxation has been presented before, there appears to be little evidence that this idea, in practice is legally defensible.

Mr. Hope encouraged us to have any inquiries concerning the Cordova group channelled to his office of Tribal Operations.

MEMORANDUM

RECEIVED
SEP 01 1976
DEPT. OF COMMUNITY AND REGIONAL AFFAIRS

TO: Palmer McCarter, Director, LGAD

DATE : August 28, 1976

FROM: Lane
Community Development Coordinator

SUBJECT: PL-93-638..Indian Self Determination Act

Cook Inlet Native Association and Tanana Chief's Conference are contesting the position of Clay Antiquia, Area Director, Bureau of Indian Affairs, the latter who states that the non profit Regional corporations are not "tribes" under the definition of PI93-638, the Indian Self Determination Act. The latter piece of legislation, a rather complicated piece, essentially provides that services once performed by the Bureau can now be contracted to Indian tribes. The definition of Indian Tribes has been a very difficult one for Alaskan Natives to deal with and the Area Director is maintaining that only villages can be (under this definition he is looking at IRA, tradition village and second class cities) called tribes and therefore contract for services. It is the contention of CINA and TCC that if this is the case, then the money would be easily disipated because of the economy of scale.

During our soujourns in the Interior we can be just a jump ahead, or a jump behind the team that was traveling this area to explain the position of both sides and asking support for the non profit point of view. The team we met were Fred Baker, Fairbanks Regional Director, BIA; Tom Richards and Sam Demientieff, TCC. They had four resolutions covering the various services currently being offered by BIA and asking that the village councils pass on the resolutions. If a major support is given, then this will be used as an affirmative statement by the villages that they want the non profits to be considered as a contracting agency. In the middle Yukon area, on August 25, we found few of the village leaders present for any length of time, because of the "round up" of the village leaders for a joint meeting at Koyukon. In the upper Yukon, we did not find them at all for they were at a meeting in Fort Yukon. (August 27) We did sit in on the meeting at Galena where the process was explained and watched the decision making of the City Council of Galena. It was a good background for each of us to know.

There will be major meetings on PL 93-638 in Juneau, Bethel, Anchorage and Fairbanks on September 2, 3, 4, 1976. At this time a sub committee of the U. S. Congress on Indian Affairs will be taking testimony and also giving their explanations. It would seem prudent that these be covered in at least Juneau, Anchorage and Fairbanks.

Of particular importance to our Department will be the definition, especially as it may effect second class cities, where the majority of people sitting on the Council are Alaskan Natives, this may be considered "tribe" and therefore eligible to contract.

Basically the meeting was for the purpose of familiarizing BIA regional officials with PL 93-638 grant programs. The meeting was interesting in terms of familiarizing Betty Barton and myself with BIA programs. I believe Department of Community and Regional Affairs field staff should be aware of PL 93-638 grant programs with the advantage being that Department staff can convey information to rural areas.

It would be my opinion that Department staff could act as information carriers but avoid any further involvement.

Grant application deadline is September 10, 1976.

The Juneau Area Office has established the following order of precedence for determining the recognized governing body of a village for the limited purposes of the Self-Determination Act:

(a). If there is an IRA council, and it provides governmental functions, it will be recognized.

(b). If there is no IRA council, or it does not provide governmental functions, and there is a traditional village council which provides governmental functions, then the traditional village council will be recognized.

(c). If there is no IRA council and no traditional village council which provide governmental functions, then under certain circumstances the city council of the incorporated second-class city may be recognized. For a city council to be recognized it must meet the following criteria:

(i) It must have been recognized as the traditional village government prior to its incorporation

(ii) It must be representative of the Native population of the village

(d). If there is no IRA council, no traditional village council and no city council, then the village (profit) corporation will be recognized.

(e). If there are none of the above, then the regional (profit) corporation will be recognized.

The regulations define the tribal governing body as, "The recognized governing body of an Indian tribe. "In many cases there are several governing bodies in each village, i.e., IRA council, traditional village council, city council, and the village corporation organized under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act. Which of these should be "recognized" as the governing body for the purposes of the Self-Determination Act?

STATE OF ALASKA

JAY S. HAMMOND, Governor

DEPT. OF COMMUNITY & REGIONAL AFFAIRS

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONER

POUCH B
JUNEAU, ALASKA 99811

June 30, 1979

To the Residents of the Trust-related Villages:

As trustee for municipal trust lands, I am pleased to present you with this report of the Municipal Lands Trustee program for the past year.

This program concerns the "so-called" 1,280 acre reconveyances to the State-in-Trust for any future municipality which may be established in your village in the future, in accordance with the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA), Section 14 (c)(3). The commissioner of the Department of Community and Regional Affairs has trustee responsibilities for these lands.

As trustee of community lands under ANCSA, our objectives are important to you. These objectives are:

- Municipal trust lands are community lands. Title to these lands are used to benefit your village now and in the years ahead, and for a possible municipality in the future. These lands cannot be used for the benefit of the State itself without specific approval by your community.

- The laws and regulations which control the Trustee Program and our staff activities guarantee the rights of village residents to oversee the Trustee's activities concerning their community lands.

- The trust lands will be turned over to any first or second class municipality established in your village in the future. Our intent is to be so responsive to your needs and desires, however, that you will feel no particular need to incorporate as a municipality simply to obtain more localized control over these lands.

By keeping us informed about your concerns and interests, we can better serve you, your village, and any future municipality.

Sincerely,

Lee McAnerney

Lee McAnerney
Commissioner
(Municipal Lands Trustee)

INTRODUCTION

This annual report of the Municipal Lands Trustee Program is prepared and distributed pursuant to Alaska Statues 44.47.150 (reprinted on the inside front cover of this report).

Section 14(c)(3) of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA) requires all two hundred Native Village Corporations in the state to convey certain lands to the existing municipality in the village or, if no municipality exists, to the State-in-Trust for any municipality that may be established in the village in the future. Those lands conveyed to the State-in-trust are known as Municipal Trust Lands.

Municipal trust lands consist of the surface estate of certain improved lands on which the village is located and additional lands necessary for community expansion, public rights-of-way, and other foreseeable community needs. The minimum amount required by ANCSA to be transferred is 1,280 acres (see the inside front cover of this report for a reprint of ANCSA Section 14(c)(3)). The State Legislature and the Department of Community and Regional Affairs regard these trust lands as being community lands, administered in trust for the residents of the village and for any future municipality in the village, not State lands to benefit the whole of the State.

OVERVIEW OF THE TRUSTEE PROGRAM

In 1975 the State Legislature designated the commissioner of the Department of Community and Regional Affairs, acting as the trustee of municipal trust lands, to accept, administer, and dispose of such lands where no incorporated municipality exists. This Act established four basic policies under which trust lands are administered.

First, all transfers of trust land by sale, lease, right-of-way, easement, or permit, including transfer of surface resources, must first have the approval of a recognized "appropriate village entity such as a traditional council, village meeting, or village referendum".

Second, the Trustee Program aims to be so responsive to the needs and desires of village residents that they will feel little or no pressure to incorporate as municipalities for the single reason of obtaining local control of their lands. If and when a city is organized in a village for which trust lands have been administered, these lands together with all records of lands and revenues, will be conveyed to the city within one State fiscal year.

Third, careful records will be kept concerning trust lands, including an accounting of any revenues received from them, so that if and when incorporation into a municipality does occur, the legislature may appropriate these monies for the new municipality.

Fourth, title to and interest in trust lands can be obtained only through the Trustee Program and may not be acquired by adverse possession or prescription (loosely: a method of acquiring title by possession ("squatting") or by long, continued use).

The Municipal Lands Trustee Program was initiated by AS 44.47.150. Under the general direction of the commissioner, the municipal lands trust officer is responsible for developing and conducting the trustee program. Administrative responsibility for the program is assigned to the director of the Division of Community Planning.

The Trustee Program is a result of federal legislation (the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act). The State Legislature has shown a clear understanding of the local community issues involved for which the State has responsibilities, has shown constructive interest in the program, and has been responsible in funding the program. The Trustee Program is wholly supported by funds from the State; no money or control over the trustee program is provided by the federal government. The legislature provided sufficient travel funds and one additional professional staff position for fiscal year 1979. One additional professional-technical position was funded for FY 1980. Two more staff positions (one clerical and one professional) are being proposed for fiscal year 1981 to meet expected increased trustee activity requirements. This should round out the trustee program staff.

STATUS OF THE TRUSTEE PROGRAM

There are presently 95 villages associated with the trustee program. Their village corporations are receiving lands under ANCSA and have a legal duty to convey municipal lands under Section 14(c)(3). None of these trust villages are incorporated as municipalities under Alaska Statutes. Additional villages may eventually be added to this list as a result of the settling of certain legal or land status issues presently being litigated or considered. The inside back cover of this report contains a list of current trust villages.

The period between July 1, 1978 and June 30, 1979 was devoted to meeting two main objectives:

(1) developing operating regulations and policies to guide the way the trustee must operate and to insure appropriate control of these activities by village residents.

(2) meeting specific land title needs to permit urgent community projects to proceed.

Following strong support of the 1977 preliminary statement of trust philosophy from rural leaders directly affected by the MLT program, operating regulations were drafted for consideration at hearings across the State. These proposed regulations stress that village residents, through their recognized village entity or by village meetings, generally will oversee the trust program in each particular village. This is important since village residents best know the land in their area, can identify land clearly essential for community expansion, and can define continuing expansion needs.

Fourteen hearings were held, with all but one being convened in or near one or more affected unincorporated villages. The proposed regulations were printed and distributed widely for review and comment before hearings were held. Each village council received a copy of the hearing schedule and notices of the hearings were published in the Tundra Times and other news media. Individual copies of the draft regulations were made available to all concerned parties. Hearings were scheduled to test the widest possible range of locational, social, and varied land status situations.

Testimony and comments were plentiful and generally very supportive. Many very constructive suggestions were received. After all hearings were held and all comments considered, the draft regulations were revised as needed. They provide procedures for identifying and conveying potential municipal lands into trust, for officially recognizing "appropriate village entities", for determining how and when meetings of village residents will be held to oversee the trustee program, and for the manner of obtaining approval from recognized village entities concerning transfers of trust lands. Provisions also are included in the regulations for "due process", notice, and review of action to be taken by the State in-trust. The regulations are designed to assure opportunities for high amounts of local participation and input.

At the time this report is being prepared, the final version of the regulations is undergoing a final review by the Attorney General's office, and is expected to be officially adopted during the first quarter of FY 80. Upon adoption, the trustee program can progress to the next stage of recognizing village entities to oversee the program for each village. The following stage will be the tender and acceptance of substantial amounts of Municipal Trust Lands.

Although village corporations filed their land selections with the Bureau of Land Mangement in 1974, by June 30, 1978, only 17 (out of the approximately 100 village corporations which will ultimately convey land to the State in trust) had received title to even a small portion of their land; none had received title to all of its selections. This left little opportunity to develop and implement a large-scale program of conveyances under the trust program.

BLM has now established new policies and reorganized its ANCSA land conveyance procedures and staff. As a result, as of June 30, 1979, 29 trust program villages have received title, or are very close to receiving title, to a substantial portion of their land. The increasing frequency of conveyances indicates that the adoption of our regulations will coincide with the ability of many village corporations to make conveyances under 14(c).

Where Interim Conveyance from BLM has not been granted, the trustee program has developed and used various forms of interim transactions to meet land title requirements needed for pending and urgent community projects such as the construction of new schools, HUD housing projects, village relocations, and so forth. These include both formal, contractual agreements between a village corporation and the State-in-trust respecting future commitments to convey, and informal and conditional letters of intent which convey sufficient property interest to allow project planning by a particular agency to proceed. In turn, these agreements are based upon statutory approval of the proposal by an appropriate village entity.

This past year evidenced a large increase in the number of discussions with village councils and corporations relating to planning for future conveyances of Municipal Trust Lands. These meetings have been helpful in promoting a better understanding of the program and what it means to the villages. There is an increase in activities which have made municipal trust lands available for community uses compared to prior years.

THE FUTURE

The 1980 annual report of trustee activity is expected to show a substantial increase in specific activites involving trust lands. Transfers of land or commitments to transfer certain land into trust, and transfers of land out of trust status to permit school and other public facility construction will substantially increase. These expectations are based upon the following factors, which are expected to be present in the coming year:

(1) The program development phase of the Trustee Program will be completed with adoption of operating regulations.

(2) A greatly increased acreage of land will be conveyed to village corporations by the Bureau of Land Management during 1980.

(3) Village corporations are becoming increasingly aware of the reconveyance requirements of ANCSA 14(c)(3), as a result of explanations by ourselves, regional corporations, and other organizations.

(4) Contacts with, and personal visits to the trust-related villages by the municipal lands trust officer and other department staff members will be greatly increased.

The d-2 legislation currently before Congress, when enacted, will increase the scope of the municipal land trust program by authorizing the transfer of trusteeship over vacant Federal Townsite land in unincorporated villages from BLM to the State-in-trust. This same legislation will also permit change in the minimum acreage requirements for conveyance under ANCSA 14(c)(3) for some villages. The alterations, of course, will come about only if the d-2 legislation is passed in its present form or the proposed legislation is passed in a separate bill, apart from d-2.

TABLES

The following tables show FY 79 and accumulated municipal trust land activity for the period ending June 30, 1979. Because of the restrictions under which community development projects must presently operate due to land title problems, the tables also provide data concerning tentative trustee transactions and related activities.

No revenues have been received from municipal trust lands in this or preceeding years. An RSA contract has been developed for execution in early FY 80 to develop an accounting system for expected revenues generated by the municipal trust lands program in a manner provided by law.

BACKGROUND

The Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA) of December 18, 1971, provided, among other things, that approximately 200 native villages in Alaska would form corporations to receive title to land. 22 million acres were selected by these village corporations in 1974. Generally, the pattern of lands selected commenced with the village situs and progressed outward in several directions for a maximum distance of about 15 miles. The total acreage selected by each village (excepting in Southeast) ranged from 69,120 to over 161,280 acres, with most entitlements being either 69,120 or 92,160 acres (108 and 144 square miles respectively). In Southeast, villages selected 23,040 acres (36 square miles).

MUNICIPAL LANDS TRUST PROGRAM

AN ASSESSMENT OF PRINCIPLES AND PRIMARY POLICY ISSUES

PURPOSE

This paper deals with the program of community expansion lands to be conveyed by about 100 village corporations to the State in trust where no first or second class city exists in the Native village. The paper is designed to fill four purposes.

One purpose is to provide the Commissioner and staff of the Department, and the Attorney General, my initial perception of the nature and scope of the trust program. It summarizes considerable discussion and research, and differentiates this trusteeship from ordinary line programs of the State of Alaska.

A second purpose is to inform outside parties having an interest in the Municipal Lands Trust Program of these preliminary views, through wide-spread distribution of this paper. Parties having interest in this program who will receive copies include: approximately 100 Native Village Corporations, approximately 100 traditional Village Councils, the 24 profit and non-profit regional corporations, AFN and ANF leadership, and the Alaska Native Land Managers Association. It will be offered to Tundra Times and ANF Management Report for publication of excerpts.

Thirdly, involvement and participation by all interested parties is necessary to insure that the trust program be practical and acceptable. This outside input is invited as a structured part of the Municipal Lands Trust program, and is not intended merely to be an incidental follow-up. This paper provides a format for these parties to base such involvement and input.

The fourth and final purpose is that it might serve as a temporary guide for program development and the basis for developing formal regulation proposals, subject to input received from others. This preliminary paper will not substitute for formal review procedures of regulation proposals as prescribed by law, nor is it a formal departmental expression of policy in lieu of regulations.

BACKGROUND

The Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA) of December 18, 1971, provided, among other things, that approximately 200 native villages in Alaska would form corporations to receive title to land. 22 million acres were selected by these village corporations in 1974. Generally, the pattern of lands selected commenced with the village situs and progressed outward in several directions for a maximum distance of about 15 miles. The total acreage selected by each village (excepting in Southeast) ranged from 69,120 to over 161,280 acres, with most entitlements being either 69,120 or 92,160 acres (108 and 144 square miles respectively). In Southeast, villages selected 23,040 acres (36 square miles).

In about one-half of the villages and prior to ANCSA, the federal government had made residential and business land titles available to occupants under the townsite laws. For the remaining half, Congress required village corporations under ANCSA Section 14(c)(1), upon receiving title to the village situs, to convey comparable occupied town lots to village occupants without consideration.

To facilitate title conveyance of these lots to the occupants, the cost of their subdivisional survey will be borne by the United States. 43CFR 2650.5-4(b). When these land transfers are completed, the situation will be roughly equivalent in all villages; that is, residents will have title to the land occupied by their homes and businesses, regardless of whether they received them earlier through operation of the federal townsite laws or from village corporations as a result of ANCSA. All other eligible occupancies specified by ANCSA Section 14(c)(1) and (2), including subsistance campsites, are subject to reconveyance by village corporations, regardless of any prior federal townsite.

Whether or not a federal townsite existed in a Native village prior to ANCSA, Congress provided also, that every village corporation must convey title to yet another category of land; i.e., "the remaining improved land on which the native village is located, and as much additional land as is necessary for community expansion, and appropriate rights-of-way for public use, and land for other forseeable community needs." These lands must be transferred to the appropriate Municipal Corporation where one exists, or otherwise to the "State in trust for any Municipal Corporation established in the Native village in the future." In either case, the amount of lands to be transferred to the Municipal Corporation, or in trust, shall be no less than 1,280 acres (2 square miles). ANCSA Sec. 14(c)(3).[1/]

Presently, about 100, or half, of the villages authorized to make land selections are incorporated as first or second class cities. These cities will receive title to the community expansion lands in their own right. No qualifying municipality exists in the remaining half, requiring conveyance of these land titles to the State in trust for any municipality which may be established in these Native villages in the future. (The exact number of villages involved in each category presently is uncertain due mostly to litigation involving the federal government's determinations of the eligibility of certain villages to select land under ANCSA).

It is this State trust responsibility which is being addressed by this Preliminary Statement of Philosophy and Assessment of Principles and Primary Policy Issues.

DISTINGUISHING BETWEEN STATE AS TRUSTEE AND STATE AS SOVEREIGN

Extra-ordinary relationships and policies exist with respect to community expansion lands conveyed to the State in trust. This arises from the language of ANCSA Section 14(c)(3) establishing a trust, the acceptance of the trust by the state legislature in AS 44.47.150,[2/] and the expectations of rural peoples of Alaska affected by the land trust.

1/ See Appendix A (top half) at the end of this paper for the entire wording of ANCSA Section 14(c)(3).

While the sovereign powers of the state over political subdivisions could color the trustee role, the state is expected in this program to assume a constructive "trust" role by the Congress, the legislature, and affected rural peoples. The Commissioner and the undersigned fully agree that adoption of legal trust principles should be an underlying policy of the Municipal Lands Trust program. As trustee, the State should not acquire title to, nor administer, the community expansion (municipal) lands in the 100 or so villages for its own sovereign use and benefit. Rather, the lands should be conveyed and administered "in trust" for any Municipal Corporation established in the native village in the future.

With respect to lands conveyed in trust under ANCSA Section 14(c)(3), the legislature has defined the term "Municipal Corporation" as including "only first and second class cities incorporated under the laws of the state." AS 44.47.150(g). Defining applicable municipal corporations might seem to be an amendment of the basic trust document which would be an action a trustee normally is not permitted to take. Usually, only the settlor, or creator of a trust, may amend a trust document. However, a reasonable interpretation might be that the legislature can act properly as a sovereign with plenary powers over (future) political subdivisions, rather than as trustee, when it defines the powers of municipal corporations under its jurisdiction.

2/ See Appendix A (bottom half), at the end of this paper for the entire wording of AS 44.47.150.

PRINCIPLES OF TRUSTEESHIP: A DISCUSSION

A trust involves certain well-defined obligations. The Trust Document normally spells out the duties and relationships of each party in the trust relationship, including a clear identification of each party and the property to be held and/or managed in trust. Over the years, court cases also have refined the extent of certain duties, obligations, and rights of different parties to a trust.

Trust Document: Creation Of The Trust: Settlor

Section 14(c)(3) of ANCSA constitutes the basic Trust Document. The United States, as holder of title to the lands prior to their conveyance to the Village Corporations, acted as Settlor, or creator of the trust. When selected land is conveyed to the village corporations, the United States will insert in each patent a requirement that mandatory reconveyances specified in Section 14(c) be made by each Village Corporation, including the community expansion (municipal) lands being discussed.

"Interim" Trustee Role of Village Corporations

All lands selected by village corporations, with the exception of those selected under Section 19 (lands in former reserves selected by villages which did not receive any portion of the Alaska Native Fund monies), are subject to these Section 14(c) reconveyance requirements. As written, ANCSA seems not to permit any other exceptions. Thus, each Village Corporation, in effect, has been charged with the responsibility of being an Interim Trustee over this land until this transfer of property is completed. A village corporation receives title to community expansion lands in trust for further reconveyance to a municipality or to the State in trust. See item #7 (page 20), for more discussion of this interim trust obligation.

Acceptance Of Trust Responsibility by State.

State acceptance of the trust responsibilities was accomplished in 1975 with the enactment of AS 44.47.150. Responsibility for the trust program was placed by the legislature upon the Commissioner of the Department of Community and Regional Affairs.

Identity of Trustee Of Lands Held In Trust

The basic trust document, ANCSA Section 14(c)(3), provides for conveyance of title ..."to the State in trust for any Municipal Corporation established in the Native Village in the future,..." Adding the sense of AS 44.47.150, the Trustee can be defined with respect to each village affected, as:

"The State of Alaska in trust for any first or second class city incorporated under the laws of the state which may be established in the Native village of _____ (name of village) in the future."

I recommend that title to community expansion (municipal trust) lands conveyed to the State in trust under Section 14(c)(3) be granted, accepted, and administered in accordance with the above definition of the trustee.

The State in trust, through the Municipal Lands Trust program, is an institutional trusteeship, differing from the personal trusteeship found in federal (BLM) townsite trust administration. The Commissioner of the Department of Community and Regional Affairs has been designated to administer the trust; and this writer, being appointed to the position of "Municipal Lands Trustee", is a surrogate trustee or agent of the Commissioner, and is subject to the Commissioner's direction and supervision.

The term "municipal lands" in the program name and job title seems appropriate even though the identical term is not found in ANCSA Section 14(c)(3). ANCSA requires that "community expansion" lands be conveyed in trust to the State for later reconveyance to a future municipality in the Native village, hence they are actually "municipal" lands. Where a first or second class city (municipality) already exists so that no trusteeship is required, the comparable lands become "municipal" lands immediately upon conveyance by a village corporation.

Principle of Undivided Loyalty: Relationship of Trustee to Beneficiaries and Others.

In administering the Municipal Lands Trust Program, the Commissioner and Municipal Lands Trustee assume roles somewhat different from those found in administering usual State agency programs. In law, a trustee is one who takes and holds title to trust property solely for the benefit of another. A standard law text (Corpus Juris Secundum), states that a trustee owes to the beneficiaries of a trust the duty of undivided loyalty, and he must not be guided or influenced by personal interests of a third party. So it is the duty of a trustee not to accept any position or enter into any relation, or do any act inconsistent with the interests of the beneficiary; that is, he must refrain from doing those things which would tend to interfere with the exercise of a wholly disinterested and independent judgement; and he cannot assume a position inconsistent with, or in opposition to, his trust. He cannot serve two masters with antagonistic interests. 90 CJS Trusts 247.

The rule of undivided loyalty is one of uncompromising rigidity; and no amount of good faith on the part of the trustee can overcome a breach of trust which would result from the existence of divided loyalty. ibid.

Accordingly, actions, regulations, and policies of the Commissioner, Municipal Lands Trustee, and any other staff involved in administration of these trust lands should reflect at all times the best interests of the beneficiaries, avoid potential conflicts of interest with other parties, and do all things reasonably necessary to avoid any breach of trust in connection with these duties. Such policy seems fully consistent with the terms of acceptance of the trust by the legislature as expressed by AS 44.47.150.

Beneficiaries Of Lands Held In Trust.

Just as the basic Trust Document (ANCSA Section 14(c)(3)) defines the Trustee, it also defines the Beneficiaries, as follows: "any Municipal Corporation established in the Native village in the future..." Adding the sense of AS 44.47.150, each Beneficiary presently is defined by law as:

> "Any first or second class city established in the Native village in the future."

Since it is a future first or second class city that is beneficiary of the trust, it seems instructive to consult the legal text on general property rights of municipalities. Specific laws passed by the Alaska legislature (representing the sovereign powers of the State over municipalities) can modify these general rules; Alaskan municipalities presently have been given rather broad powers regarding municipally owned lands.

All property owned by a municipality is public property in the broadest sense. Municipal corporations hold all property in a fiduciary capacity, for the use and benefit of its citizens, in the sense that all powers of such a corporation are held in trust for public use. 63 CJS MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS 950.

Municipal property is not the private property of the residents of the municipality on the theory that the municipality is a trustee holding the legal title for the benefit of the inhabitants, and the persons who are taxpayers or members of the public do not have any private interest in the funds and property of a municipal corporation. ibid. It follows, then, that community expansion lands held in trust for a future first or second class city are for the ultimate general welfare of all future inhabitants of the village.

"Appropriate Village Entity", and Resident Village Citizens, are Quasi-Co-Trustees with the State.

From the foregoing discussion, it is apparent that the Trustee and resident citizens of the Native Village as represented by the "appropriate village entity" as defined by AS 44.47.150(b), have a joint obligation to manage the trust lands for the village "public" much as would a city government under the same circumstances. The power to pre-approve certain Trustee actions carries with it an obligation to see that the lands are managed consistent with the long-term best interests of that Native community; the trust lands are not merely "private" lands of the present village residents. In this sense, then, the resident citizens collectively can be considered as Co-trustees with the state. Working together, they and the trustee should be certain that appropriate lands and assets can be turned over to the future city at the proper time.

WHAT LANDS MAKE UP THE TRUST (CORPUS)?

Corpus of the trust refers to that property which is to be placed in trust and managed by the trustee for the benefit of the beneficiaries.

Nature of Title Held.

The trust document, ANCSA Section 14(c)(3), specifies title to be conveyed in trust shall be the "surface estate." ANCSA provides, generally, that the Regional Corporations will own the corresponding subsurface estate. Whether certain resources such as gravel are part of the surface or the sub-surface estate is presently in litigation. Whether any powers of village corporations conferred by ANCSA Section 14(f) to grant consent to explore, develop, or remove minerals from the subsurface estate in village lands are transferred along with the land titles reconveyed to Municipal Corporations and to the State in trust, also is a legal matter which has not been determined.

Type of Property to be Conveyed in Trust

The Trust Document, specifies that the land to be conveyed in trust shall be "the improved land on which the Native village is located" (which remains after conveyances have been made under Sections 14(c)(1) and (2), "and as much additional land as is necessary for community expansion, and appropriate rights-of-way for public use, and other forseeable needs", subject to a minimum acreage requirement. ANCSA Section 14(c)(3). See item #13 on page 22 for philosophy on listing land-use catagories of land to be conveyed in trust.

Acreage to be Conveyed

The amount to be conveyed in trust "shall be no less than 1,280 acres". ANCSA Section 14(c)(3). This is equal to two square miles.

Based on settlements already reached between several cities and their respective village corporations, and expressions by a substantial number of village residents and councils where the State will have trust responsibilities, it appears that the 1,280 acre conveyance is not apt to be greatly exceeded except in unusual circumstances where forseeable needs may require the conveyance of a greater acreage.

WHEN DO TRUST RESPONSIBILITIES AND ACTIVITIES BEGIN?

The State's responsibilities as the trustee created by ANCSA began when it accepted those responsibilities in 1975 with the passage of AS 44.47.150. The nature of these responsibilities can best be expressed in terms of appropriate trustee activities related to identifying lands to be placed into trust, and the management of those lands.

Philosophically, this can be approached from two points of view; (1) when is the earliest time that trust activities can occur, and (2) when is the latest time permitted under law.

Trust activities already have begun. Responses have been made to urgent needs and requests from several villages needing title to land for public uses such as schools, power easements, HUD housing, and a sewer lagoon. The approach used where the federal government has not yet issued patent or Interim Conveyance (I.C.) to selected lands is what I call "conveyance by promissary note". A Contractual Agreement is executed voluntarily by the parties (Village Corporation and State in trust), backed up by appropriate resolutions of the Village Corporation Board of Directors, and the traditional council where this is an appropriate village entity. The Regional Corporation also certifies it was given opportunity to review and render advice per ANCSA Section 14(c)(5).

These Agreements provide that the land involved will be part of a future 14(c)(3) conveyance to the State in trust, and that it will be accepted by the State in trust. The Council resolutions concur with the desirability of devoting that parcel to the specific purpose. The trustee gives written assurance to the entity developing the land that an appropriate permit, lease, deed, etc. will be issued to it upon receipt of title by reconveyance from the corporation. As an umbrella over the whole transaction, each party joins in requesting that BLM grant an authorizing temporary permit or lease for the specified use until title is conveyed to the corporation. At that time, the promises to convey made by each party to the Agreements will be carried out.

This cumbersome process is necessitated by the unfortunate delays in granting title by BLM, but it sets the foundation for permanent and equitable long term solutions. Each party becomes involved, and each different interest is recognized and protected.

Carrying this concept further, comprehensive Agreements between the village corporation and the State in trust defining the entire parcel(s) to be conveyed and accepted may be made prior to the time BLM transfers the land title to the corporation by IC or patent, if the corporation and the community desire such action. Several village corporations have begun such discussions. Others located within municipalities already have entered into written Agreements with their appropriate First or Second Class City for all the land to be conveyed, with the blessings of the Regional Corporation.

In several regions, there is a strong expression by village corporation boards to get this major decision settled so they can finish their interim Trusteeship over these lands and get on with other important tasks. Where this is the voluntary wish of the corporation, the State in trust can, and should enter into such early comprehensive agreements. (However, administrative regulations first should be completed and adopted before they are signed by the State in trust. This is scheduled for early 1978).

The latest deadline for actual re-conveyance of community expansion lands to a municipality or the State in trust is, by statute, the receipt of patent to the land by the village corporation. ANCSA 14(c). Before BLM grants patent, however, the corporation must, in virtually every instance present BLM with a Plan of Survey for BLM to use as a guide for surveying the parcels to be re-conveyed under Section 14(c), including the community expansion lands.

Involvement in the Plan of Survey by the State in trust along with the village corporation, is essential, and represents the latest time when activities of the State in trust would begin. The survey plan will constitute a form of acceptance by the Trustee of the 14(c)(3) lands.

Time-wise, there is no statutory deadline when the Plan of Survey must be prepared. However, Village Corporations generally desire to develop the Plan of Survey promptly because, in most instances, individuals authorized to receive tracts under 14(c)(1) cannot get title to their homes, etc. from the corporations without this same Plan of Survey being completed and approved by all parties. Responsibilities of the State in trust in the event of extensive delay or refusal of a corporation to develop a plan of survey or to convey lands under Section 14(c)(3) are discussed later in this paper.

In summary, the State's trust responsibilities already exist. The State in trust may enter into its program activities now on a village-by-village basis if desired by a particular village corporation. Ordinarily, trust activities will begin by discussing and reaching an agreement with village corporations as to the identity of lands to be conveyed in trust, the trustee representing the interests of any future city to be established in the Native village. This process will be described later. If desired by all parties, an interest in these lands then can be transferred to the State in trust by Contractual Agreement. Actual title can be conveyed to the State in trust when the corporation has received Interim Conveyance from BLM. The ultimate deadline for conveyance to the State in trust is receipt of patent by the Corporation. However, trust activities of the trustee would, in most cases, begin earlier than issuance of patent by BLM, with involvement in the Plan of Survey upon which surveys will be executed so that patent can be granted.

TRUSTEE PARTICIPATION IN IDENTIFYING MUNICIPAL TRUST LANDS.

The Trust Document (ANCSA) is silent as to what party or parties have responsibility to identify community expansion lands, other than to impose a clear duty upon village corporations to make such conveyances to Municipal Corporations or to the State in trust.

Lands to be conveyed to municipalities or placed in trust in nearly every instance require prior survey for purposes of identification and property description. Upon presentment of a proper Approved Plan of Survey, the Bureau of Land Management will conduct such a survey.

Before a survey is authorized, however, BLM requires assurances that the parties to receive title from the village corporation under Section 14(c) have reached agreement with the corporation and with each other as to how the lands are to be surveyed and reconveyed. If the Approved Plan of Survey is incomplete or if conflicts are not resolved, any extra survey costs needed to accomplish mandator conveyances appear to be the responsibility of the village corporation. 43 CFR 2650.5-4.

In parallel conveyances of community expansion lands to existing first and second class cities, a broad consensus is developing that the Municipal Corporations and the Village Corporations have a joint, bilaterai, and cooperative role in negotiating a settlement of lands which will be surveyed by the Bureau of Land Management and subsequently transfered from the Village Corporation to the Municipal Corporation. Disagreement which cannot be overcome likely would require settlement through litigation between these two parties. (Of course, in any settlement prior to December 18, 1981, the appropriate Regional Corporation also must be given opportunity by the Village Corporation to review and render advice on this matter, according to common interpretations of ANCSA Section 14(c)(5)). Neither the State in trust nor existing municipalities appear to have a one-sided "selection" right, and for this reason, I recommend that the term "select" be avoided in reference to these lands.

In villages where community expansion lands are to be conveyed to the State in trust, the manner in which specific community expansion lands should be identified is open to interpretation. Do the village corporations in this instance have a unilateral role not found in villages where a municipality exists? I think not. A conveyance made by a village corporation as Grantor also must have a corresponding Grantee to accept the title. Thus, the State in trust, as Grantee, seems to have a legitimate role in identifying and accepting lands to be conveyed in trust. BLM has indicated that they will not make those determinations, and that they look to the State in trust to be a party to the Approved Plan of Survey as an indication that agreement on the parcel(s) to be surveyed and conveyed has been reached.

In my opinion, the State as trustee, after reaching agreement with a village corporation, is the appropriate entity to indicate concurrence on the formal Plan of Survey on behalf of the Beneficiary (a future first or second class city in the Native village). In villages where no Municipal Corporation exists, there is no other authorized legal entity to sign the survey plan with respect to 14(c)(3) community expansion lands. Even though in most villages, community and corporation leadership is identical, Village Corporations cannot properly represent both Grantor and Grantee as this would involve a potential conflict of interest between economic and community interests. Also, some corporation shareholders live outside each village, and some residents in most villages are not shareholders of that village corporation (such as Natives born after December 18, 1971, Natives enrolled elsewhere, and non-Natives).

A PLAN FOR IDENTIFYING MUNICIPAL TRUST LANDS.

Summarizing points made earlier in this paper, and adding to them, a plan for agreeing upon what lands to survey and reconvey to the State in trust might follow the ideas listed here:

1. The Municipal Lands Trust program of the State should be conducted in a manner which recognizes a fiduciary responsibility to "any first or second class city established in the Native village in the future" (the beneficiary). This responsibility includes participating with the village corporation and residents of the village to identify the lands to be placed in trust.

2) The grant of 14(c)(3) community expansion lands by the village corporation as Grantor requires a corresponding acceptance by the State in trust as Grantee to complete the transaction.

3) BLM indicates that the Plan of Survey which instructs them how to survey various catagories of 14(c) lands will provide that the State in trust, or an appropriate municipality, be a signatory party, indicating acceptance of the tract(s) delineated for survey and re-conveyance by the village corporation.

4) Even before the Corporation receives title from BLM, if a community and its village corporation desire, portions or all of a village's trust lands may be identified for ultimate transfer to the State in trust through a negotiated Agreement. This procedure is not required by law, but is designed especially to meet urgent community needs, such as HUD Housing, PHS facilities, school construction, etc. Under this procedure, the Trustee (with the concurrence of an appropriate village entity) can agree to the future transfer of an appropriate property interest to the agency involved, and joins with other parties in petitioning BLM to issue temporary rights thereto.

5) Even if there is no urgent community need for facilities requiring immediate identification of the lands to be surveyed and reconveyed to the State in trust, it may make good sense in many instances to arrive at a decision on the lands to be conveyed into trust at an early time before it is otherwise required. At any rate, an agreement between the village corporation and the Trustee should occur promptly after BLM issues I.C. to the land in connection with development and approval of the Plan of Survey.

6) When a corporation does receive I.C. from BLM, title to the Section 14(c)(3) lands then may be re-conveyed immediately to the State in trust if agreement has been reached; this also will be identified on the Plan of Survey, so it may be surveyed and properly described in terms of a legal survey in a corrective deed, following later issuance of a patent by BLM.

7) Because of the way Section 14(c) is written, village corporations probably would be within their rights if they wish to postpone actual conveyance of these lands to the State in trust until they receive a "patent" from BLM to the selected land, following survey by BLM. Meanwhile, however, they have an Interim Trustee responsibility for the lands involved. If lands necessary and appropriate for purposes listed in Section 14(c)(3) were devoted to other purposes by a village corporation rather than being conveyed to a municipality or to the State in trust, it might constitute a breach of trust of its interim trust duty. Development of the Plan of Survey within a reasonable time following receipt of Interim Conveyance constitutes the latest practicable time for making decisions concerning the identification of these lands, although it can be done earlier.

8) The State Municipal Lands Trust program should act with respect to the trust lands, much as would an imaginary city council and mayor. Great weight should be given by the Trustee to the views of the resident citizens of the Native village during the process of identifying, with the village corporation, which lands should be conveyed in trust. The trustee has a duty to be responsive both to the present needs of the village and to forseeable needs of any future city which may be established there.

9) In order to insure this responsiveness, the views of the same "appropriate entity such as the traditional council, a village meeting or a village referendum" specified in AS 44.47.150(b), should be obtained and its recommendations recorded by resolution and placed in the files of the department prior to accepting the grant of lands from the village corporation.

10) The "appropriate village entity" should be encouraged to obtain outside technical information and analysis to assist it in making recommendations to the trustee. (The Division of Community Planning, for example, has staff and programs to provide technical assistance upon request of the village entity).

11) The trustee, acting as a fiduciary, also should obtain outside technical information and advice when deemed appropriate, and share such information and advice with the "appropriate village entity".

12) While a village corporation could take an extreme position of offering lands for community expansion which are wholly unsatisfactory to the residents of the village or a first or second class city established in the Native village in the future, on a "take it or leave it" basis, it is quite unlikely to occur. If it did, or if a corporation refused altogether to convey lands pursuant to Section 14(c)(3), it appears to be a duty of the trustee to litigate the issue, if it otherwise cannot be resolved by negotiation or arbitration. However, good faith negotiation between the parties will resolve every case without litigation, in my view. Section 14(c)(3) land is community land; the State in trust has a duty to represent and advocate long-term, public interests of the community. Valid community interests will tend to solidify behind reasonable and appropriate settlements of 14(c)(3) lands if all parties representing villages recognize that these lands are their community lands, not the State's. Each community can best determine for itself which lands are most appropriate for community use.

13) No attempt should be made by the State in trust to prepare a uniform or sample list of land-use categories which should be included in the tract or tracts conveyed in trust. Needs of various communities vary greatly. Any such list would hamper common-sense decisions which otherwise will evolve through honest, good-faith negotiation. Technical advice obtained by the village entity and/or the trustee can be expected to raise for consideration land-use issues which might otherwise be overlooked. As a matter of principle it seems appropriate that the lands conveyed be those essential for present and future public, community uses which normally are associated with cities, rather than those which primarily are of income producing nature.

14) Nothing in the law appears to dictate the shape or configuration of all the lands to be conveyed in trust. As appropriate, the conveyance could consist of a single tract, or more than one tract. In some instances the corporation might retain one or more tracts within a larger block conveyed in trust, provided the overall common-sense effect does not violate the definition of lands to be conveyed in trust as stated in ANCSA Section 14(c)(3). Such tracts, if retained and productively improved by the corporation, or made available by the corporation for other private development, might benefit the community and contribute to the well-being of present and future residents more than would inclusion thereof to the State in trust for a future city. This concept best can be identified locally. Merely because a certain parcel of land may be suitable as a site for expansion of a community, does not necessarily mean that its conveyance to the State in trust is necessary for community expansion. ANCSA Section 14(c)(3) requires reconveyance only of lands necessary for community expansion.

15) The duties of the trustee should include making timely reports to the village residents with respect to their trust lands, in addition to the annual fiscal reports required by AS 44.47.150(d).

16) The trustee staff should become personally familiar with the land and residents of villages where trust responsibilities exist, by traveling to the villages as much as practicable, and consulting often with village people and their leaders.

ON BEING RESPONSIVE TO COMMUNITY NEEDS CONCERNING EXPANSION LANDS

It is intended that the Municipal Lands Trust program be highly responsive to the needs of the communities involved in the trust. A village should not find it necessary to incorporate as a city only for the purpose of obtaining control of these community expansion lands. If incorporation occurs, it should be for other valid reasons.

If this kind of responsiveness is achieved, it will result from good-faith efforts and cooperation of the rural people involved, (whose participation is essential), and the Trustee staff. This responsiveness can be concentrated through efforts in two broad areas: (a) program activities of the trustee, and (b) participation and involvement by community residents and leaders.

Here are some examples of planned trustee activities: personal village visits by the Municipal Lands Trustee at least once a year (and more frequently when the level of decision-making activity requires), technical assistance visits by others as requested by the community and the trustee, periodic information letters, and annual and special written reports. One such special report could be made to the rural trust villages summarizing the comments received during the initial trustee village visits this fall, and their possible affect on proposed regulations. Always, the trustee will try to keep an open ear to oral and written requests and comments from village residents.

Different villages may need different solutions to their community expansion land problems; what will work in one village should not be forced on another if it does not fit equally well. The statutory requirement that pre-approval resolutions by an appropriate village entity be obtained before the trustee takes certain land actions, will be honored in good faith.

Village entities will be encouraged to develop long-term plans for trust lands as an aid both to the community and the trustee in knowing what land activities are expected and appropriate. Technical assistance to help in this effort may be arranged through the trustee at the request of the appropriate village entity.

Subdivisional surveys of trust land parcels likely will be required in some villages to make trust land available for authorized purposes; a State budget request by the Municipal Lands Trust program already has been made to establish and fund a Revolving Survey Fund next year. If approved, very low-cost additions probably can be added to basic BLM contractual subdivisional surveys. This would allow lots to be available for lease or sale as appropriate when the village entity has identified them as being required to meet community needs. These survey costs could be included in the price of the lots and recovered as the lots are made available, thus replenishing the fund for later use in that village or elsewhere.

We must honestly encourage, and honorably include, good-faith input by the bush public which is consistent with the legal responsibilities of the trust program. Such a two-way partnership is essential to insure a successful program. Honesty and openness on our part will go a long way in encouraging involvement and acceptance by those served by the trust. Wide distribution of this paper is consistent with this intent.

Prior to drafting proposed regulations which will actually establish the Municipal Lands Trust program operational limits, I expect to visit about 25 villages (about one-fourth of those involved in the trust land program) to discuss this philosophy and to obtain views as to what the regulations should include. These trips will be scheduled for September and October, 1977. Discussions also will be held with staffs of regional profit and non-profit corporations, and their input requested; also with AFN and ANF leaders. Later the proposed regulations will be broadly circulated for comments before being revised and adopted. A target date for distribution of these proposals is this November or December. After changes are made to reflect appropriate comments and suggestions, hopefully they can be adopted in early 1978. Then the trust program can go ahead on solid footing.

COMMENTS ON BASIC ISSUES

Certain basic issues concerning the trust program have arisen which should be mentioned.

The first issue deals with Native villages which are located in organized Boroughs but are not themselves incorporated as first or second class cities. Would the Borough be a "Municipal Corporation" entitled to receive and administer the 14(c)(3) lands on behalf of such a village? I believe paragraph (g) of AS 44.47.150 is a determination by the legislature, which has sovereign, plenary powers over municipalities, that only first and second class cities are municipal corporations for the purpose of administering 14(c)(3) lands.

The second issue deals with the identity of the recipient of Section 14(c)(3) lands for a Native village not incorporated as a first or second class city, where the lands in question physically are located near that village, but also are located within the jurisdiction of an adjacent or nearby first or second class city. In some cases, the nearby city may include another village which has ANCSA selection rights of its own. The question raised is --- should the incorporated city receive title to 14(c)(3) land necessary for the expansion of the donating community just because the land falls within its political jurisdiction, (perhaps in addition to receiving lands from its own village corporation), or would the 14(c)(3) land of the first village be conveyed to the State in trust for a future first or second class city which later might be established in the presently unincorporated Native village?

I feel this issue is best approached by recognizing that selections under ANCSA were authorized by an eligibility certification for each Native village. It makes best sense under ANCSA, I think, that community expansion lands located within a selection of 69,120 (or more) acres made by a village certified to so select, be designated for the benefit of that same village, not for another one. Thus, in the example given, since the incorporated city is not located in the first village, the lands probably should be conveyed in trust for a future first or second class city established in that Native village in the future. If the nearby city should annex the village in question, I assume it would then be the city in that village and the lands would be re-conveyed to it by the State in trust. The fact that present policy prohibits incorporation of a separate city in such close proximity to an existing one could be disregarded here. As sovereign, the legislature could amend that policy, could require merger of both areas into one city, or could even dissolve the first. Meanwhile, the State in trust would manage these lands for the ultimate benefit of a city in the donating village.

The third issue deals with determining what is the "appropriate village entity" (see AS 44.47.150(b) for definition: Appendix B) to speak for the citizens of the village and to pre-approve land transfer actions by the trustee. Closely tied in with this is the question of who are residents of some complex communities, especially those along highways. Stated another way, where are the boundaries of those villages? Also, interwoven with these questions is the identity of present residents of any first or second class beneficiary city which later may be established in that Native village. Do all persons living in close proximity to the traditional Native village also constitute a constituency of that future city? Do they properly have sufficient present interest in these affairs to entitle them to participate in a village meeting or village referendum, such as referred to in AS 44.47.150(b)?

I expect the village informational meetings held later this Fall will reveal common-sense answers to this issue. The answers may not be uniform in all village situations. Consensus probably exists, or can be reached, on a local level without a need for the trustee or some other party to make a determination. Possibly in some cases, a local committee acceptable to all factions where impasse is apparent could be formed to offer a solution. This issue will need to be addressed in future regulations; input from the communities offering suggestions on how to satisfactorily resolve it will be helpful and welcome.

The fourth and final issue discussed here concerns structuring the trust program to obtain maximum separation from ordinary line agency programs of the State. Such separation appears necessary so that the Municipal Lands Trust program may operate under a bona-fide trust policy to the greatest degree possible. It may be more difficult to explain the necessity of this policy to employees of other state agencies than to the trustee program staff.

Acceptance of 14(c)(3) trust lands into the corpus of the trust does not automatically make the land available for purposes desired by other state agencies. AS 44.47.150(b) requires that a pre-approval resolution by the appropriate village entity first must be obtained. A separate transfer document then can be granted by the trustee to make the trust land available to that other agency. In some instances, a reversionary clause might be appropriate to return the property interest to the corpus of the trust or to the future city if the land later were no longer needed for the original purpose.

Arrangements should be made to obtain independent legal advice and representation in the event of actual or potential conflicts of interest occurring between the trust program and other agencies of the state. This might take the form of special counsel appointed by the state attorney general or an independent, outside counsel. Such an arrangement has precedent (See Lassen v Arizona Ex Rel Highway Department, 385 US 458, (1967), involving trust lands in Arizona).

IN CONCLUSION

This paper intends to establish communication with those involved with and affected by the Municipal Lands Trust program, by identifying issues and setting forth a preliminary philosophy.

It is not the final word. It can be modified, or developed along additional lines.

We ask for comments from all who may be affected by the trust program -- both in the State government and outside. If the trust program is to work properly, these comments are necessary. Please send them as soon as possible so they can be useful in drafting the trustee regulations which will begin about October 15, 1977.

Statement by Commissioner:

This preliminary Statement has been reviewed, and its reproduction and distribution is hereby approved. It is not to be regarded as official policy or regulations, but as a method to solicit comments, input, and suggestions from interested parties. Involvement and participation by interested parties is desired and encouraged.

Based upon this statement and any later modifications resulting from comments by others, proposed regulations governing the State in trust program will be created and distributed. These proposed regulations also will be influenced by input received during the 25 to 30 village meetings, one or more to be scheduled in each regional area in the fall of 1977. After the Proposed Regulations are published and copies [illegible] all interested parties of record, (probably in November or December of 1977), further opportunity for comment and input will be provided. SECTION 2650.5-4 VILLAGE SURVEYS, BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR ALASKA NATIVE SELECTIONS

(a) Only the exterior boundaries of contiguous entitlements for each village corporation will be surveyed. Where land within the outer perimeter of a selection is not selected, the boundaries along the area excluded shall be deemed exterior boundaries. The survey will be made after the total acreage entitlement of the village has been selected.

(b) Surveys will be made within the village corporation selections to delineate those tracts required by law to be conveyed by the village corporations pursuant to section 14(c) of the act.

(c)(1) The boundaries of the tracts described in paragraph (b) of this section shall be posted on the ground and shown on a map which has been approved in writing by the affected village corporation and submitted to the Bureau of Land Management. Conflicts arising among potential transferees identified in section 14(c) of the act, or between the village corporation and such transferees, will be resolved prior to submission of the map. Occupied lots to be surveyed will be those which were occupied as of December 18, 1971.

(2) Lands shown by the records of the Bureau of Land Management as not having been conveyed to the village corporation will be excluded by adjustments on the map by the Bureau of Land Management. No surveys shall begin prior to final written approval of the map by the village corporation and the Bureau of Land Management. After such written approval, the map will constitute a plan of survey. Surveys will then be made in accordance with the plan of survey. No further changes will be made to accomodate additional section 14(c) transferees, and no additional survey work desired by the village corporation or municipality within the area covered by the plan of survey or immediately adjacent thereto will be performed by the Secretary.

INTRODUCTION.

Alaska is a state which has clearly adopted the philosophy of the "New Federalism." In adapting the local government section of the Alaska Constitution, the framers clearly indicated that it was their intent to further the philosophy of the new federalism in Alaska by decentralizing state government, and addressing the majority of local concerns through local mechanisms.[1] The Alaska Supreme Court has fully embraced the concept of New Federalism in the area of individual rights by specifically holding that the Federal Constitution does not limit the State of Alaska from securing to its citizens greater protection of individual liberties and freedoms than these found under the Federal Constitution.[2] In the political arena, the State of Alaska has sought to lessen federal concern over lands within the state. Finally, in the conduct of its own affairs, the state government has shown innovative during its attempts to reduce the size and scope of state government.

This report is yet another attempt to pursue this policy. The goal of this study is to devise a mechanism which enhances local control over local concerns in those areas of the state which are "unorganized." Additionally, this study investigates possible mechanisms for coordinating multiple governments which may exist in a community.

In pursuit of these objectives, this study suggests a new paradigm for local government in Alaska. The study focuses upon the possibility of developing a state/tribal governmental interface. Fundamental to this paradigm is the effort to develop government-to-government relations between the state and the Native people. Admittedly, this is in sharp contrast to the short history of the State of Alaska. Since statehood, Alaska has attempted to deal with its Native population within a state/citizen context. While this context is appropriate in many situations, the state/citizen context proves inadequate for all situations. In order for a pluralistic society such as Alaska to reflect the respective pluralistic structures within the society, those structures must reflect the various pluralistic interest which make up the society-at-large.

In the case of the Native people, early experiments and societal assimilation have proved only marginally successful. Rather it is the rule that the Alaska Native people remain culturally unassimilated and retain cultural and government characteristics which separate them as a people from the majority of Alaskan citizens. On the contrary, it is not uncommon for the rural non-Native residents to become assimilated into the Native culture and society. In the political sense, this assimilation is reflected in the active enfranchisement of many non-Native into rural Native government. Thus, in such rural Alaskan communities the dominant Native government and society has come to constitute the whole community's government and society, in spite of the presence and participation of individuals racially defined as non-Native. Under these circumstances, the tribal government constitutes the only feasible and viable form of local government for that community. In such cases, the tribal/state paradigm does not function to exclude representation of non-Native elements within the community, but rather becomes the most appropriate vehicle for the representation of local interests and concern. It is the purpose of this study to investigate the feasibility of utilizing Alaskan Native governments as an alternative local government form for those communities where such a form is the most appropriate vehicle for the representation of local interests and concerns. For such a mechanism to be successful, it is necessary that the mechanism will promote to the maximum extent possible the coordination of Native government and state government. It is hoped that through such coordination the respective interest of the state and the Native governments can be met.

There exists in rural Alaska the common perception that where a parallel government exists within a community, the municipality represents the non-Native interest in the community while the Native government represents the Native interest in the community. For this reason, the Native element in the community generally elects not to participate in the municipal government. The result is that the municipal government is not an expression of self-government for the community but an expression of self-government for the non-Native portion of that community. Furthermore, the Native element of a community tends to exclude non-Natives from participating in the affairs of the Native government.

Obviously, the Native government represents the expression of self-government for the Native portion of the community. In this situation, neither council represents self-government of the community as a whole. The exclusion of Native governments from the local government system of the state thereby results in the exclusion of the Native portion of many communities in rural Alaska. The inclusion of Native governments within the state system of local government would promote the more accurate representation of the community as a whole, albeit a representation through the various factions of the community.

PART I

EARLY AND CURRENT ALASKAN LOCAL GOVERNMENTS

A. EARLY ALASKAN LOCAL GOVERNMENTS

The earliest "local governments" in Alaska were Native. As Dave Case points out these primeval governments varied as between the Native cultures.[1] Generally, however, these early governments were loose associations of individuals based upon family relationships and customs. Group decisions were made by consensus.

Similarly, early non-Native local government in Alaska was very informal. After the purchase of Alaska by the U.S. in 1867, the primary mechanism of local government was the extra legal mining districts.[2] Like the Native governments, these early miner's governments were loose associations based on custom. Generally, decisions were made by majority vote. In 1884, Congress recognized the authority of these mining districts, but the status of Native governments remained in limbo.

In 1900, Congress enacted a civil code for Alaska which included authorization to form towns of over 300 residents.[3] This first form of municipal government was patterned after the mayor-council city government common to the "lower 48." Towns were severely limited as to their ability to tax and contract debt and were highly dependent on intergovernmental transfers. Their primary function seems to have been providing school services. In 1904, some of these limitations were relaxed, but the next major change had to wait until the formation of a territorial government.

In 1905, Congress authorized the formation of independent (city) school districts, and school districts for unincorporated areas.[4] In both cases, the districts were fiscally autonomous respecting current expenditures. They directly received a portion of intergovernmental revenue transfers due the city. They remained dependent on the city or territory tax revenues for capital expenditures.

In 1912, Congress passed the Organic Act creating the Territorial legislature.[5] In the following years, the legislature created a second class of territorial towns, subject to the limitations of the earlier Act of Congress. It was fully intentioned that local government be kept weak so as not to present a taxing or regulatory threat to commercial and mining interests in the territory.[6] In fact, the Organic Act prohibited organization of "counties" or other regional local governments.[7] In 1915, the legislature upgraded territorial towns so that they would be subject to the same limitations as the towns authorized under the federal legislation. At the same time, the legislature for the first time attempted to assimilate Native village government through the Indian Village Act of 1915. This Act authorized Indian villages to organize as units of local government.[8]

In 1917, the legislature authorized incorporation of school districts in unincorporated areas. Under this new legislation, the incorporated school districts achieved greater fiscal autonomy through authorization to tax, as well as an increase in shared intergovernmental transfer revenues.

The legislature undertook a revision of the territorial municipal code in 1923. The new code replaced federally authorized towns with first class cities which directly elected a mayor, expanded council powers, provided for mayoral vetoes, and established minimum procedures for city government.[9] Later, in 1929, the legislature repealed the Indian Village Act of 1915, and revised the laws relating to second class cities making them substantially equal to first class cities.

By 1934, the federal policy toward Indians had again shifted away from assimilation. This was reflected by the passage of the Indian Reorganization Act, and the subsequent extension of the Act to Alaska in 1936.[10] The Act was intended to vest "tribal organizations with real, though limited, authority, and by prescribing conditions which must be met by such tribal organizations."

At this same time, the legislature instituted reforms designed to authorize special purpose regional governments. In 1935, the legislature authorized incorporation of "independent school districts" which included both the area inside city limits and the surrounding adjacent areas. The new school districts were independent of city governments and were fiscally autonomous.[12] Also in 1935, the legislature authorized public utility districts which were fiscally autonomous special purpose governments capable of providing garbage, parks, street, fire, telephones, electrical, etc., services.[13]

In 1951, the legislature authorized third class cities, which were essentially the same as second class cities, differing only in geographical and population size.[14]

In 1957, the territorial legislature again attempted to create incorporate villages under territorial law.[15] An Incorporated Village had limited powers which include its power to provide water, electing sewers, and fire protection; regulate dogs, curfews, and land use; and provide public works. The State amended the Act in 1959 to invest the incorporated village with general police powers and provided for village magistrates to levy limited fines. At the same time, the legislature defined the incorporated villages as a city of the fourth class.

At the time of statehood, there existed in the state:

24 first class cities
8 second class cities
2 third class cities
10 fourth class cities
69 I.R.A.'s
5 P.U.D.'s
8 independent school districts
1 incorporated school district
unknown number of traditional Native councils

Statehood did not drastically alter the local government pattern since under Article XV, Section 1 of the Alaska Constitution, the laws of the territory remained in effect until they were repealed, amended or expired.

It was not until 1972, the state undertook a wholesale version of the municipal code to create the current system.

B. CURRENT STATE CHARTERED LOCAL GOVERNMENT

The system of local government authorized under the Alaska Constitution is relatively simple. It is possible to categorize Alaskan local governments into two basic types, i.e., general and special purpose governments. For the sake of analysis, a general purpose government is a government which exercises independent discretion over a broad range of topical concerns. In contrast, a special purpose government is a government which exercises discretion over a specific topical concern.

General Purpose Governments.

The general purpose government is the constitutionally preferred unit of local government in Alaska. This policy is specifically stated in Article X, Section 1 of the Alaska Constitution which states that, "The purpose of this article is to provide for maximum local self-government with a minimum of local government units, ..." This policy is implemented in Article X, Section 2 which provides that "All local government powers shall be vested in boroughs and cities," and is further stated in Article X, Section 15 which states "Special service districts existing at the time a borough is organized shall be integrated with the government of the borough as provided by law."

This concern for consolidating local powers into single general purpose governments is expressed throughout the Constitutional Convention record. The adoption of "one basic local government system" was intended to prevent "creation of numerous types of local units which can become not only complicated but unworkable."[16] Of immediate concern to the Delegates was the governance of the school boards, Public Utility Districts (P.U.D.s) and health districts. As stated by Delegate Victor Fischer:

> "That is one of the points that we have tried to meet here, not to establish too many local governments but those that would be established would be effective to carry out not only the local but also state functions as may be necessary."[17]

To this end the constitution provides for the creation of boroughs and cities.[18]

The most unique aspect of the Alaskan general law municipality is the framer's intent to create strong local government units. Systems of government then operating in the majority of the states were felt to be too weak.[19] In his initial address to the convention introducing the Local Government Committee's proposed article, Delegate Vic Fischer expressed the "New Federalist" philosophy favoring general decentralized government. Citing the Congressional Commission on Intergovernmental Relations, Delegate Fischer stated:

> "The Commission concerned itself with the need for strengthening of state government and a decentralization of federal power. In this study they found that local government is an important factor in this process and I would like to briefly quote a few paragraphs. In discussing the strengthening of local government, the Committee says, 'The objective of decentralization cannot be obtained by a readjustment of national-state relations alone. It will be fully achieved only when carried through to the lowest levels of government where every citizen has the opportunity to participate actively and directly. The strengthening of local government requires the activities that can be handled by these units be allocated to them together with the financial resources necessary for their support.' Then the report goes on and draws a picture of the tremendous number of overlapping tax jurisdictions and separate local entities we now have in the state and goes on to say, 'More or less hidden in this picture is a paradox that consistently plagues the state and bars any easy solution of the problem of achieving the decentralization of government -- too many local governments and not enough local government.' That is one of the points that we have tried to meet here, not to establish too many local governments but those that would be established would be effective to carry out not only the local but also state functions as may be necessary."[20]

To implement this plan, the committee adopted the so-called "Texas Plan." This approach was explained to the convention by Delegate Victor Rivers as follows:

The old approach to county government was that they existed and had their authorities only in those specifically delegated to them and specifically spelled out to them by the legislature or by the constitution. The other approach which has been adopted and which has operated in a few states, approximately seven as I recall, particularly in Texas, has been called the Texas Plan, and there, under that plan, they allocate such powers to the intermediate tier of government and the cities are not specifically reserved or eventually withdrawn by the state itself. They have a broad exercise of local authority much as our cities have today. That has been the matter of the choice -- whether we wanted to follow the old pattern in which the constitution and the legislature would delegate certain specific powers to the intermediate form of government, which often is called the county and which we have designated as the borough, or whether we would follow the plan of reserving powers to the state and letting the local government exercise broad general authority within the limits of those reservations.[21]

It is quite clear that the "pure" Texas plan called for application of home rule principals to all local governments. The various classes of cities and boroughs would be defined in law by the quantity and quality of powers reserved by the state.

The record indicates that some delegates to the constitutional convention supported the "pure" Texas Plan.[22] In fact, the concept of a "general law" municipality was not introduced in the floor debate, but seems to have been an assumed constant which carried over from the territorial local government concepts. This is reflected in Article X, Section 9 and 11 which respectively provide that first-class municipalities could assume home-rule status, and that the legislature could extend home rule to other classes of government. The concept of "general law" municipalities was enacted by statute.[23] It is interesting to note that although the "general law" concept was not discussed in convention floor debates, it has become a fundamental concept guiding the majority of local governments in Alaska.

i) Boroughs: A borough is the intermediate level of government in the State of Alaska. Although the term "borough" is somewhat unique, the notion of an intermediate level of government is common to the American local government scene. The borough "corresponds generally to the county in other states."[24] By statute, the borough is a government for an "area."[25] This is in contrast to a city, which is a government for a "community."[26] The framers of the constitution anticipated that an average size borough would be between 1,000-2,500 square miles.[27] Presumably, an area could include a number of communities and their outlying areas.[28] Clearly, the framers intended to create a system of two-tiered, local coexistent governments.

But the framers also intended local government to be flexible enough to adjust to future developments. It has, therefore, been observed that:

> Boroughs in different parts of Alaska may serve two quite different purposes. In areas which include cities, they may constitute a second tier of government. In other areas, they may themselves be the sole or primary local units.[31]

The Alaska Supreme Court has recognized this by stating that the Constitution does not require the coexistence of boroughs and cities.[32]

There is a strong indication that the original concept of the borough was strongly linked to home rule. This is most notably demonstrated in committee answers to delegate questions regarding the unorganized borough.

V. Rivers: ... In the extent that the benefits that the legislature sets up will offset the added cost to the people, and the extent of their desire for home rule will govern how far they go in organizing those boroughs, but it was our thought there would be enough inducement for them to organize and exercise home rule so that as time went on they would gradually all become incorporated boroughs...[33]

This sentiment is noticeable in comparing the respective constitutional sections dealing with cities and boroughs. Whereas the constitution specifically states that "Cities shall have the powers and functions conferred by law or charter."[34] (emphasis added) The comparable clause dealing with boroughs is less specific providing that, "The legislature shall classify boroughs and prescribe their powers and functions."[35] (emphasis added) It remains unclear whether such prescription should be by specific enumeration or reservation. Nevertheless, inclusion of reference to boroughs in Article X, Sections 9 and 10 leaves no doubt that general law boroughs were constitutionally contemplated.

ii) Cities. In contrast to boroughs, cities are statutory defined as the local government unit for "communities."[36] The local government committee of the Constitutional Convention considered the option of abolishing the city form of government. It was felt, however, that such a move was "too drastic a step," and it was felt that the existing territorial units of governments should be perpetuated. On the other hand, it was also stated that,

> " .. we visualize the possibility that as the borough becomes a more definite unit of government over the years, which we hope it will, the scope better defined, that all the functions that can best be carried out on the unified basis be transferred over to the borough."[38]

In City of Douglas v. City and Borough of Juneau,[39] the Court recognized that "Unification is consistent with the purpose expressed in Article X, Section 1 of minimizing the number of local government units." But in preserving the city, the convention did not intend to subordinate the city to the borough as indicated by the following exchange:

HURLEY: The borough then has nothing to say about the services that the city offers its own residents within its boundaries. Is that true?

ROSSWOG: Yes, the city should remain as much the same as today, or practically the same unless there are some gradual changes in the future. They can delegate powers back and forth but the borough would not tell the city that they had to supply certain services or couldn't supply certain services. That is why the two are set up as having the authority.

HURLEY: In essence, then, you have two local government units?

ROSSWOG: Yes, that is right.[40]

appraising, its own assisting agency, its own condemnations.[42]

This point was recognized by the Alaska Supreme Court in Macauley v. Hildebrand[43] where the Court held that a home rule borough may not require its school system by ordinance to participate in centralized accounting where the Legislature has delegated express authority to the school board to resist such requirements. The Court based its decision upon the theory that education was an area of "pervasive state authority." The obvious conclusion, therefore, is that service areas may exercise substantial autonomy in areas of "pervasive state authority." In a similar manner, the legislature could provide substantial autonomy to public utility districts since regulation of public utilities is also an area of state concern.[44] Thus, while the constitution provides that "all local powers shall be vested in boroughs and cities",[45] it does not exclude the exercise of governmental authority by governments other than cities and boroughs.

This balance is further demonstrated in those constitutional provisions which provide that when a borough is organized, existing service districts shall be "integrated" into the borough government.[46] Once a borough is organized, the assembly may create service areas within its borders.[47] This latter power is subject to the single prohibition that services areas cannot be established where such services can be rendered by annexation to an existing service area or city.[48] This prohibition is consistent with the general preference for integration rather than separate incorporation.

It is quite clear that service areas are only "semi-autonomous." As indicated above, the service area would be subject to the exclusive "fiscal jurisdiction" of the assembly. Beyond this, however, the framer's contemplated that service area boards could be set up and exercise substantial powers. This was clarified by Delegate Fischer who stated:

..., it is the intent of the committee that when you establish a service area you could, say, establish a

Thus, while the momentum set in force by the Constitutional Convention contemplates eventual dissolution of cities in favor of boroughs, the interim is governed by the principals of sovereign coexistence.

Special Purpose Governments

As noted above the integrated/unified local government is the preferred vehicle of local government in Alaska. The constitution, however, provided for service areas and districts which seem to be semi-autonomous special purpose governments. In understanding the role of special purpose governments, it is necessary to recognize that service areas represent a compromise between the constitutional delegates who argued in favor of wholly integrated local governments, and those delegates who favored continuing the independent school districts, health districts and P.U.D.s formed under the territorial government. In expressing this compromise, delegate Vic Fischer stated:

> Mr. Johnson, it was not the intention of the committee to do away with any existing school districts just by the enactment of this article. (Sec 15). The intent was to leave them within a new framework of government.... what we visualize is putting them under the general fiscal jurisdiction of the larger entity, which includes all the people within the particular school district.[41]

This was again explained by Delegate Rivers who stated:

> Mr. President, the idea was that the general powers of government would be with the general elected representatives of the people. Now, as Mr. Fischer has pointed out, the special functions in regards to the use of one group for one special purpose such as health, education or anything else, the power to take the board and take its powers away, the powers of the boards would probably continue except for the taxing power being centralized in the one taxing agency which would thus have its own separate school board,...to supervise the school functions...[49]

Thus, it is possible for a service area to exercise substantial power independent of the general borough assembly.

It must be remembered, however, that the service area may never exercise total autonomy. There seems to be two chief limitations on the service areas. First, the service area may not unilaterally tax. The Constitution specifically provides that only cities and boroughs may tax.[50] As indicated above, this limitation on service areas was perceived by the framers as the sufficient link needed to achieve local government coordination. There remains, however, substantial autonomy even in fiscal matters as indicated by the Macauley v. Hildebrand case. A school district may maintain separate financial records. Similarly, while service areas have limited control over tax revenues, they may possess substantial autonomy with respect to revenues from intergovernmental transfers. For example, under the terms of A.S. 29.89.030 (2), a health district operating a hospital may qualify for state revenue sharing. Although, the sponsoring municipality would initially receive the revenue sharing payments, the municipality is required to transfer such payments to the service area to be used for health services at the discretion of the hospital "directors".

The second major limitation on a service area's autonomy is related to the operation of the "local activity rule." As the Court stated in Macauley, the legislature may delegate to service areas power beyond the resolution of a parent municipality in those subject areas of state concern. It follows, therefore, that service area autonomy is inversely related to "local" concerns. For example, a municipality could certainly regulate the use of municipal property regardless of whether it was assigned to the service area, since municipal property is purely a local concern.[51] Of course, is is not easy to define what is a "local" concern as opposed to a "state" concern. This is even less clear under the borough form of government in that the framers of the constitution intended boroughs to assume greater responsibility in the area of traditional state concerns as state government "decentralized." The framers seemed to have accepted this ambiguity, and left the matter to the legislature. The courts recognized this role for the legislature in the Macauley and Chugach Electric cases by holding that municipal regulation is invalid in the face of contrary statutory law.

In spite of these limitations, service areas would seem to be remarkably flexible mechanisms of local government. For example, the Constitution authorized intergovernment cooperative agreements between "any local governments" for joint administration of any functions or powers.[52] Presumably, these provisions would apply to service areas since they are local governments. This view is supported by the fact, that only cities and boroughs are authorized to transfer powers, while "all local governments" are authorized to enter into intergovernmental agreements.[53] Thus, it would seem possible for co-extensive service areas to enter into cooperative administrative agreements for such things as centralized accounting and budgeting, personnel management and property management systems. Such mechanisms could be used rather extensively to provide a wide range of services for a community without city incorporation. This concept is not beyond the framer's contemplation, in that both pro-integration, and anti-integration factions within the constitutional convention characterized cities as "a collection of service areas".[54] It must be remembered, however, that a collection of service areas would lack the power to independently tax which a city possesses. Thus, such a collection would be totally dependent on intergovernmental transfers, whether from the borough or the state. Furthermore, a collection of service areas would be subordinate to borough regulation in areas of "local control". The collection of service areas, however, could exercise substantial autonomy in areas of state interest, upon approval of the legislature.

Service areas have their greatest utility in the unorganized boroughs. The constitution directs the legislature to provide necessary services in the unorganized boroughs, "allowing for maximum local participation and responsibility."[55] To implement this section, the legislature provided that it may authorize "service areas" in the unorganized borough.[56] It is agreed that such service areas do not possess powers of fiscal autonomy,[57] however, they may exercise other powers delegated by the legislature.

The legislature has seen fit to authorize four types of service areas in the unorganized borough - i.e.: 1) aquaculture service areas; 2) coastal resource service areas; 3) regional educational service areas, and 4) volunteer fire departments.

The legislature authorized the Commissioner of Commerce and Economic Development to declare aquaculture service areas.[58] The purpose of these service areas are to provide fishery enhancement services. The service area board is comprised of representatives of member user groups.

The coastal zone management service areas are general "planning" units for coastal areas of the state. Whereas, coastal boroughs are automatically designated coastal zone management districts, unorganized areas may organize a special service area for the conducting of making district coastal management programs.[59] These programs operate to guide state agencies in the operation of their programs throughout the coastal areas of the state. While the state continues to be the basic provider of basic services, the service area boards operate as a centralized planning agency for the area. The board of the service area is popularly elected.

Third, the regional education attendance areas (REAA) are service areas providing eudcational services within the unorganized borough.[60] Like the coastal zone management areas, the REAA's are controlled by a popularly elected board, but were mandatorally organized by the legislature after a settlement of the "Molly Hootch" case.

Finally, the legislature has "impliedly" authorized organization of volunteer fire departments for unorganized areas of the state through the state revenue sharing program.[61] Under this program, local fire departments may organize under regulations adopted by the state marshall. Upon approval and registration of the departments, the organizations are eligible for state funding. Generally, these departments enjoy substantial fiscal autonomy, provided that they confine their activities to fire protection.

As noted above, there is great variety in the organization and operation of these special service areas. At the present time, the authority of these special service areas has not been challenged in court, so that it is impossible to define the limits of the legislature's discretion as to the manner and form that these service areas may take. If the past record is an indication of legislative authority, it can only be stated that the legislature possesses broad discretion in creating and organizing service areas, provided they remain impotent in regards to the levying of taxing authority.

C. ALASKA NATIVE GOVERNMENT ORGANIZATION

As with state chartered local governments, Alaskan Native governments can be categorized as general or special purpose governments. Additionally, there is an additional type of "quasi-governmental" entity. This latter type of entity is included in the following discussion.

General Purpose Governments.

It is commonly stated that there are two types of general Native governments in Alaska: Native Councils and IRA Councils.[62] It practices there is little difference between the operation of these two types governments. The distinction between the two governments is largely theoretical. This distinction is important, however, when the authority or status of the government comes into question.

i) Traditional Councils. In a strict sense, traditional councils are not traditional to the Alaska Native people. As pointed by David Case, the traditional precontact of Native governments were primarily based on family ties.[63] Traditional councils have been formed in reaction to contact with the non-Native culture for local representation of the Native community before outside interest. Many of these councils have adopted formal traditional constitutions while others seem to operate according to an unwritten constitution analogous to the British constitution. In all cases, the basic level of organization is the village.

The basis of these government's authority rests in their retained sovereignty, i.e., the principle that absent express Congressional action to the contrary, Indian nations retain the inherent power of internal self-government.[64]

This observation has led to several inquiries regarding the tribal status of Alaskan Native villages. Although the question of tribal status in Alaska is intriguing from an ethnic and political perspective, its resolution has doubtful legal significance. More importantly, the courts have clearly stated that recognition of an Indian community's authority for self-government is directly linked to its dependent status with the federal government. In the United States v. Sandoval,[65] the Supreme Court stated that a Native community's dependent status is determined by legislative and executive course of action respecting the Native community in question.

Congress has specifically extended this recognition to Alaska Native villages and has treated them in the same manner as other Indian tribes. For example, Native villages receive identical treatment as Indian tribes under the Indian Self-determination Act,[67] the State and Local Fiscal Assistance Act of 1972,[68] the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974,[69] the Comprehensive Employment Training Act of 1974,[70] and the Indian Child Welfare Act.[71] Additionally, Congress has recognized self-governing qualities of Alaska Native communities when it provided for the extension of state civil jurisdiction over Alaska Natives. In applying PL 83-290 to Alaska, Congress expressly reserved that:

> Any tribal ordinance or custom heretofore or hereafter adopted by an Indian tribe, band, or community, in the exercise of any authority which it may posess shall, if not inconsistent with any applicable civil law of the state, be given full force and effect in the determination of civil cause of action pursuant to this section.[72]

The executive branch has likewise dealt with Alaska Native villages as Native governments where it exercises discretion. The best example of this is the Omnibus Crimes Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 which places responsibility of the Secretary of the Interior to determine those Indian tribes which perform law and order functions.[73] Under this authority, the Secretary of the Interior has recognized several Alaska Native villages as exercising the law and order functions including the employment of tribal police, establishment of tribal courts, to undertake corrections functions, and to adopt a law and order code.[74]

i) I.R.A.s. A second type of general Native government in Alaska is the "IRA Village Council." IRA stands for Indian Reorganization Act or the Howard Wheeler Act which was passed in the 1930s in an effort to modernize Indian or Native American governments.[75] IRA originally applied throughout the United States. Its application in Alaska was somewhat unique. A 1934 version of the Indian Reorganization Act provided that only "Indian tribe or tribes residing on the same reservation" could organize to adopt constitutions under the act. In that few reservations existed in Alaska at the time, the Act had, in its original form, doubtful utility in Alaska. To address the special problems of Indian organization in Alaska, Congress amended the Indian Reorganization Act in May of 1936 to specifically extend its provisions to the Territory of Alaska.[76] The operation of the Indian Reorganization Act under the 1936 Alaska amendment was substantially different than the general application of the Act in the "lower 48." The adoption of the Alaska amendment marked the extension of the reservation policy to Alaska. Under the Act, Indian communities could petition the federal government for the creation of reservations.[77] Between 1934 and 1949, several IRA reserves were established. The IRA reserve policy, however, was greatly opposed by non-Native residents of Alaska and through the operation of territorial politics, lawsuits and other pressures on the Bureau of Indian Affairs, the Bureau abandoned the policy of creating IRA reserves in Alaska.[78] Even though the reservation policy was abandoned by the Bureau, the organizational efforts of the Bureau left in its wake a number of Native villages organized under the Act, but outside established reservations. Those few reservations actually formed pursuant to the Act were later revoked by the Alaskan Native Claims Settlement Act.[79] A net result of this course of events has left a number of Native governments continuing to operate under their IRA constitutions.

The legislative history accompanying passage of the Alaska amendment clearly indicates that Congress intended to recognize the Alaska Native village as analogous to a tribal organization. The House reports stated:

> The proposed amendment, number 1 above, set out is necessary because of the peculiar nontribal organization under which the Alaska Indians operate. They have no tribal organizations as the term is understood generally. Many groups that would otherwise be termed tribes live in villages which are the basis of their organization.[80]

In this sense, the Alaska amendment was consistent with the general statutory purpose of the Indian Reorganization Act. This general purpose was stated to be:

> To stabilize the tribal organization of Indian tribes by vesting such tribal organizations with real limited authority and by prescribing conditions which must be met by such tribal organizations.[81]

In light of these Congressional enactments and legislative history, it is clear that the Alaskan Native IRA Village Council is equivalent or at least analogous to the tribal organization found in the "lower 48." This principle is recognized under Alaskan state law and was enunciated by the Alaska Supreme Court in Ollestead v. Native Village of Tyonek.[82] In that case, the court recognized tribal status of the Native village of Tyonek council.

It is, therefore, clear that to the extent that they exist, Alaska Native Village Councils organized under Indian Reorganization Act are recognized as local tribal government organizations.

Special Purpose Governments

Whereas it is clear that the general purpose governments of Alaskan Natives are organized at the village level, additional special purpose Native governments exist which complicate the governmental pattern of Alaskan Natives. Most notable in this category is the Tlingit/Haida Central Council.

The specific status of Tlingit/Haida Central Council was litigated in Cogo v. the United States.[83] In that case, an individual brought a lawsuit against the Council to require inclusion in the preparation of tribal roll under the Tlingit/Haida Settlement.[84] In that case, the council successfully claimed sovereign immunity as a tribal organization. The plaintiffs argued that the Council was not a tribal organization, and, therefore, could not assert tribal sovereign immunity. Specifically, the plaintiff pointed to the language in the Indian Self-Determination Act which seems to indicate that in Alaska, the village council was the tribal organization. The court rejected the plaintiff's claim stating that the language in the Indian Self-determination Act was irrelevant for the purposes of this suit and went on to state and whereas the Tlingit/Haida Central Council certainly was not a tribal organization for the purposes of the Indian Self-Determination Act; it was a tribal organization for the purposes of Tlingit/Haida Settlement. This case has clearly established a principle that special purpose tribal governments exist in Alaska, however, the exact extent of such special purpose tribal governments have not been fully delineated.

The organization of the Inupiat Community under the Indian Reorganization Act presents a similar problem. Prior to the passage of ANCSA, the Inupiat Community organized several northern slope villages to form a regional IRA. The Department of the Interior takes a position for the purpose of the Indian Self-Determination Act, the Inupiat Community cannot enter into contracts or accept grants without the prior approval of the affected villages.[85] In both cases, the Solicitor has depended upon the terms of the Indian Self-Determination Act itself which defined "Indian Tribe" as:

> any Indian tribe, band, nation, or other organized group or community including any Alaskan Native or regional or village corporation as defined in or established pursuant to the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act which is recognized as eligible for the special programs of services provided by the United States to Indians because of their status as Indians.[86]

In these special cases, it is unclear which is the special purpose government and which is the general purpose government. As a general rule, Indian nations have the power to determine their own form of self-government in accordance with the political and cultural history.[87] This is in accordance with the principle that "the internal affairs of the Indians remained exclusively within the jurisdiction of whatever tribal governments existed."[88] Under these circumstances, it is necessary to review an organization's status on a case-by-case basis. In light of the Cogo decision, however, it is also necessary to review any relevant specific statutory law to determine if the respective organization has a special function under federal law.

Native Quasi-Governments

In addition to the general purpose governments and the special purpose governments outlined below, there exists entities which, may be called, for the lack of a better term, Native quasi-governments. These types of organizations are not governments in the formal sense, however, they exercise a variety of functions which are generally exercised by governments. In rare cases, these types of organizations have been formally recognized as exercising governmental authority. The most notable example is illustrated in the court case State v. Aleut Corporation.[89] In that case, several Native organizations sued the Alaska Division of Lands to prevent a proposed sale of lands adjacent to their communities. In addition to various villages, the plaintiff's list included the Bristol Bay Native Corporation and the Aleut Corporation, both regional corporations formed under the terms of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act. The plaintiffs in that case sued under AS 38.05.305, which provided that the Division should give notice and consult with incorporated municipalities and other organized communities adjacent to lands proposed for sale by the state. The court recognized that ANCSA regional corporations perform a number of quasi-governmental functions in rural Alaska. However, the court specifically held that for the purposes of the Alaska Lands Act, regional Native corporations formed under ANCSA did not possess the requisite governmental attributes to qualify them for notice and consultation under the terms of the then existing statute. Subsequent to the Alaska Supreme Court decision, the Alaska Legislature amended the Alaska Lands Act to specifically require the Division of Lands to give notice to the regional Native profit corporations prior to a proposed sale of lands by the state. In 1979, the legislature again amended Section 305 to require the Division of Lands to give notice and consult with village corporations formed under ANCSA, similar to that notice given to organized municipalities. In light of this legislative history, it would seem that the Alaska Legislature intended to vest in ANCSA corporations certain specific governmental powers in spite of their general corporate character.

A second type of quasi-governmental Native organization is characterized by the regional Native nonprofit corporation. The activities of these regional nonprofits substantially vary. Their activities include Self-Determination Act contracting for the administration of BIA programs; contracting from HUD for the administration of housing projects; contracting under Title VI, the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, for the operation of Native CETA programs; etc.

The basic model for the regional Native nonprofit organization was established under the terms of the Indian Self-Determination Act. That Act authorizes contracts between the BIA and Native governments or, in their place, Native organizations. In Alaska, BIA programs cannot generally be effectively administered independently by the villages. The sheer cost of administering such programs at the village level makes such contracting not feasible. In response to this problem, Natives have organized along regional lines to form Native organizations which can effectively contract with BIA for the operation of BIA programs within their region.[90] With the exception of the Inupiat Community and the Tlingit/Haida Central Council, none of these regional Native nonprofit organizations possess de jure governmental authority. Rather, they only provide those services normally provided by BIA or other federal or state agencies on a contract basis with those agencies. In this way, they are capable of performing governmental functions without the prerequisite governmental stature.

PART II

COMPARISONS OF GOVERNMENTAL AUTHORITY

The question of governmental authority is actually a question of the respective jurisdiction of the governments in question. Basically there are two types of jurisdiction: Territorial jurisdiction, i.e., the geographical area over which a government's authority extends; subject matter jursidiction, i.e., the topical areas over which a government has the authority.

A. TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION

i) Municipalities. The Alaska Constitution provides that boundaries are determined by the Local Boundary Commission.[1] The Local Boundary Commission is charged by statute with establishing boundaries upon incorporations[2] and subsequent alterations.[3]

The territorial jurisdiction of Alaskan cities is ill-defined by Alaskan statutes. The statutes provide for the creation of boundaries,[4] which presumably infers that boundaries constitute the jurisdictional demarcation of a city.[5] This inference is further reinforced by statutes which provide for extra-territorial jurisdictions. These latter statutes authorize any municipality to provide parks, roads, trails, playgrounds, emergency medical services, cemeteries, and airports outside municipal boundaries.[6] Additionally, cities outside boroughs may exercise extra-territorial curfew regulation.[7]

On the other hand, borough territorial jurisdiction is clearly defined in regards to each respective power. Certain powers are "area-wide," i.e., a power of an organized borough exercised throughout the borough.[8] These include education, planning, platting, zoning, and tax assessment and collection and such additional powers acquired by the borough through transfer or referendum.[9] The borough may exercise other municipal powers as "non-area-wide powers," i.e., powers exercised only in the area outside of cities.[10] For first class boroughs, any municipal power may be exercised as a non-area-wide power by ordinance.[11] Second class boroughs may only exercise certain enumerated powers as non-area-wide powers. These include regulatory power over fireworks, animals, motor vehicles, snow vehicles, garbage, water pollution, and any other municipal power specified in its charter or subsequently acquired by referendum.[12]

ii) Native Government. It is quite common that the various Native village constitutions, whether adopted under the traditional form of government or under the Indian Reorganization Act, fail to define the exterior boundaries of their territorial jurisdiction. It is, therefore, necessary to look to common law in order to determine the respective jurisdictions of the tribal organizations.

Generally, it is said that tribal law and custom are applicable within "Indian country." This rule was not altered when Congress extended the State of Alaska's jurisdiction to Alaskan Indian country. Congress expressly reserved that Indian law and custom shall be given full force and effect in the determination of civil causes of action arising within Indian country in Alaska.[14]

This observation, however, begs the question to whether Indian country exists in Alaska, and, if so, what are the limits of Indian country in Alaska. Unfortunately, in Alaska the question whether Indian country exists is largely disputed, and supported by a vacillating history of cases.

As Felix Cohen illustrates in his early attempt to define the term Indian country, the term is a dynamic concept. Originally, the concept seems to have been born out of respect for the territorial integrity of Indian nations.[15] Later, the idea was supported in the Jacksonian policy of Indian removal to reserves, a policy designed to physically separate Indians and the immigrant culture.[16] From thence, the concept found its way into the early Indian Intercourse Acts to indicate Indian lands west of the Mississippi.[17] From this point, the courts and Congress have separately, albeit tangentially, developed the concept of "Indian country."

Congress repealed the definition section of the act in 1834 and failed to reenact a substitute general definition of Indian country.[18] Later, however, Congress defined the term Indian country in relation to specific jurisdictional situations.[19] The only current federal statutory definition of Indian country exists in 18 USC 1151 which defines Indian country as:

(a) All land within the limits of any Indian reservation under the jurisdiction of the United States government, notwithstanding the issuance of any patent, and including rights of way running through the reservation.

(b) All dependent Indian communities within the borders of the United States whether within the original or subsequently acquired territory thereof and whether within or without the limits of a state.

(c) All Indian allotments, the Indian titles to which have not been extinguished, including rights-of-way running through the same.

It should be noted that this definition of Indian country only applies to a set of federal criminal statutes contained in Title 18 of the U.S. Code. The term Indian country, however, is also found in 28 USC 1360 dealing with state civil jurisdiction over Indians. The result is that there is no general statutory definition for Indian country, nor is there a statutory definition for Indian country in the civil sense.

The resulting ambiguity from the lack of a statutory definition of Indian country led to a series of Supreme Court decisions laying down the principal common law definition of Indian country. Felix Cohen states that the first ruling by the Supreme Court on the issue came in Bates v. Clark,[20] which stated in essence that:

"it follows from this that all the country described by the Act of 1834 is Indian country, remains Indian country so long as the Indians retain their original title to the soil, and ceases to be Indian country when ever they lose that title, in the absence of any different provision by treaty or act of Congress."

This basic principle expanded in Donnelly v. U.S.,[21] where the court stated that executive order reservations constituted Indian country even though the respective band did not possess original title to the land in question.

Of more importance to the Alaskan situation however, was the case U.S. v. Sandoval, 231 US 28 (1913) which held that Pueblo lands not held in trust by the United States, but owned in fee simple by a Native community under a Spanish land grant, was in fact Indian country. In his treaties on the federal-Indian relationship, David Case pointed out that the Sandoval doctrine presents a clear analogy to the Alaskan situation where Native communities own land in fee simple through their Native corporations. In the Sandoval case, the court looked to the statutory definition embodied in 18 USC 1151 and held that the Pueblos of New Mexico were clearly dependent communities within the definition of Indian country. In a similar case, U.S. v. Chavez,[23] the Court defined Indian country as "any unceded lands owned or occupied by an Indian nation or tribe of Indians." If these Court cases are to be literally applied to the Alaska situation, it is clear that Indian country does exist in Alaska. However, the matter has never truly been settled.

The modern federal courts have only addressed the question whether Indian country exists in Alaska on three occasions. In the first case, regarding McCord,[24] the Court heard a petition in a proceeding for a writ of habeas corpus arising from a conviction for statutory rape occurring upon the Tyonek Indian Reserve. In that case, the Court followed the Donnelly decision and held that the executive order reservation was in fact Indian country which denied state jurisdiction to prosecute the defendant in the case. The second major case following McCord by one year, was U.S. v. Booth.[25] In that case, the court held that the Metlakatla Indian Reservation did not constitute Indian country because the reservation was not a "reservation in the traditional sense." The court further distinguished the case from McCord by noting the different conditions and history behind the Metlakatla Reservation. The decision in the McCord case, however, led to a general public outcry in concern over the lack of law and order within Indian country in Alaska. Alerted to this apparent gap in jurisdiction, Congress passed an amendment to PL 83-280 including Alaska among those states where mandatory state jurisdiction extended over Indian country within the borders of the state.[26] The legislative history behind this action clearly indicates that the Congress reacted to the holding in the McCord case, and clearly desired to overrule and reverse the precedents set by that case.[27] If the application of PL 280 in Alaska was a congressional reaction to McCord, not Booth, it is safe to assume that the holding in McCord was a correct statement of the legal crisis prior to the application of PL 280 to Alaska. In that the Act specifically states that the State of Alaska shall have jurisdiction over Indian country within its borders, it seems incredible to assert that Indian country does not exist in Alaska.

But the doctrinal confusion regarding the existence of Indian country in Alaska has continued. This is primarily due to the nature of the cases in which the claim of Indian country arises. For example, in the People of South Naknek v. Bristol Bay Borough,[28] the plaintiffs claimed a tax exemption for Native townsites within the borough by claiming that the townsites were Indian country and therefore exempt from state taxation. The court firmly refused to attempt an answer as to whether or not the land in question was in fact Indian country. The court, however, noted the historical confusion over the question of Indian country in Alaska. The court blamed much of this confusion on "one of the principal Indian jurisdictional cases that has emerged from Alaska," specifically, the Organized Village of Kake v. Egan.[29] Like Naknek, the Kake case arose out of a claim denying state jurisdiction. It is important to note, however, that the case did not deal with the question of Indian country per se, but addressed a narrower question of whether state law applied to off-reservation Indians. It should be noted that the mere existence of Indian country and consequent tribal jurisdiction is not an exclusive claim to jurisdiction and does automatically not deny state criminal and civil jurisdiction.

As noted earlier, Alaska is subject to the mandatory provisions of PL 83-280 which authorized the extension of state jurisdiction over Indian country. As a general rule, however, the application of PL 83-280 does not create exclusive state jurisdiction nor does it substantially affect tribal jurisdiction. In the case Bryan v. Atasca County,[30] the court clearly stated that:

> . . . nothing in its [PL 280] legislative history remotely suggests that Congress meant the Act's extension of civil jurisdiction to states would result in the undermining or destruction of such tribal governments as did exist and a conversion of the affected tribes into little more than private voluntary organizations.[31]

In reaching this conclusion, the court noted that 28 USC Section 1360(c) provided for full force and effect of any tribal ordinances or customs heretofore or hereafter adopted by an Indian tribe if not inconsistent with any applicable civil laws of the state. In light of these cases, it would seem that territorial jurisdiction over those areas which can be determined to be Indian country, would seem to be concurrent between the state and the tribe.

There remains, however, substantial concern that the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act placed in question the existence of Indian country in Alaska. Specifically, concern centers around Section 19, which revoked existing reservations in Alaska. The supporters of this theory contend that, when the reservations were revoked, the territorial jurisdictions of the respective villages was destroyed. The argument, however, rests upon the proposition that Indian country is exclusively coexistent with reservations. The Supreme Court has clearly announced that there is nothing magic in the term "reservation."[32] It is also clear that tribal jurisdiction is not dependent upon federal ownership of the territory in question. The Pueblo cases arising out of the New Mexico situation clearly demonstrate this. For example, in Chavez, Indian country was defined as "any unceded land owned or occupied by an Indian nation or tribe of Indians." It is not necessary that clear, unequivocal boundaries be established. Rather, it is only necessary that the lands in question are occupied by "distinctly Indian communities" recognized and treated by the government as dependent communities entitled to its protection.[33] Applying this rule to Alaska subsequent to ANCSA, it is quite easy to identify those villages in rural Alaska which continue to be predominantly Native. Such communities retain substantial cultural, social, and economic characteristics identifiable as Native. Those villages clearly fall within the definition of a dependent Indian community enunciated in the Sandoval decision. Additionally, it must be recognized that ANCSA clarified continued Native title to certain lands within the state. Under the terms of the Act, Alaskan Native aboriginal claims to the land were extinguished.[34] In compensation for the extinguishment of such claims, Alaska Native villages were allowed to select and receive substantial amounts of land surrounding the villages.[35] The main effect of this act was to continue Native occupancy and ownership of a substantial amount of land surrounding Native communities, thus those lands selected and ultimately conveyed to the village corporations clearly constituted "unceded lands owned and occupied" by the Native villages concerned. Thus, the definition of Indian country as specified in the Chavez case is clearly met. As noted earlier, the fact that such lands were conveyed in fee simple is irrelevant under the terms of the Sandoval case.

Of course, this does not address the substantial concern which may arise upon subsequent land transfers by the respective Indian communities. The problem presents itself in two distinct situations. First, what is the status of lands originally selected by a village corporation and then conveyed by the corporation to non-Natives? Secondly, what is the status of lands subsequently acquired by the Native village?

The basic rule governing subsequently acquired Indian lands and their respective status as Indian country was laid down. In that case, the lands in question were lands owned by the United States and purchased out of funds appropriated by Congress for this purpose. The ruling that such lands were in fact Indian country relied on the role of the government in the establishment of the colony. The role of the federal government in the creation of the Reno Colony is substantially analagous to the role of the federal government in the identification and conveyance of lands received under the terms of ANCSA. Subsequent purchases of private land by Alaskan Native villages in fee simple would by definition not involve the federal government. Under the rationale of McGowan, the diminished federal role in the identification of Indian lands would substantially impact the status of those lands under the McGowan test. Subsequently, acquired land which would not involve federal government participation in the acquisition of such land would clearly not extend village jurisdiction.

The above type of subsequent acquisition, however, should be sharply contrasted from acquisitions authorized under the Indian Reorganization Act.[36] Lands acquired in this manner would fall under the black letter rule of McGowan, so that lands subsequently acquired pursuant to the terms of the Indian Reorganization Act would clearly extend village jurisdiction to those lands.

The possibility that a village might sell or otherwise dispose of village lands to nonmembers of the community presents a substantially different problem. In the case Seymour v. Superintendent,[37] the United States Supreme Court held that lands conveyed to non-Indians within the exterior boundaries of a former reservation did not lose the character of Indian country. This rests upon the theory that once Congress has set aside certain lands for the use and occupancy of Indians, such use and occupancy shall not be disturbed. Broadly applying this principle to Alaskan Native villages, it would seem that lands within the Alaskan Native village selections authorized under the terms of ANCSA, would continue to be Indian country in spite of subsequent conveyance of such lands to non-Indians by the village.[38] In contrast to these decisions, however, is the decision in DeCoteau v. District County Court.[39] In that case, the Court held that the Lake Traverse Indian Reservation in South Dakota was terminated and returned to the public domain and, hence, Indian country on the Lake Traverse reservation ceased to exist on this reservation. The Court in DeCoteau noted that the Act in question was a ratification of a prior negotiated agreement which was fully intended to terminate the reservation. By the terms of the agreement itself, the Indians would "cede, sell, and relinquish, and convey" all the remaining land in the reservation. The court distinguished Matz and Seymour as being cases involving unilateral Congressional action rather than possession or sale of land by the Indians. From this line of cases, it is only reasonable to conclude that a sale of Indian lands by a village would result in the relinquishment of tribal jurisdiction over those lands.

iii) Summary Comparison. In summary, it seems clear that the territorial jurisdiction of state municipal governments are basically defined in terms of their boundaries. Borough's territorial jurisdiction may be limited in regards to a number of powers by the existence of cities within its boundaries. Finally, all municipalities may exercise extra-territorial jurisdiction in respect to certain enumerated powers. The procedure for enlarging or diminishing boundaries is statutorily prescribed. In contrast, a Native village government's territorial jurisdiction is defined in reference to the village's "Indian country." It is most likely that a village's Indian country is coextensive with lands received under ANCSA, and any other lands subsequently acquired with federal participation. A village's Indian country may be diminished through unilateral sale or cession of village lands.

PERSONAL JURISDICTION

In contrast to a municipal government, tribal government has very limited personal jurisdiction. Whereas personal jurisdiction of a municipality extends to all or most individuals within its territorial jurisdiction, a tribe's jurisdiction is generally linked to its membership. The U.S. Supreme Court enunciated the basic principles of tribal personal jurisdiction in the companion cases, Oliphant v. Suquamish[40] and U.S. v. Wheeler.[41] In Oliphant, the Suquamish tribe attempted to enforce a local traffic ordinance against a nontribal member. In its decision, however, the Court denied the tribe's claim to jurisdiction over nonmembers. In Wheeler, however, the Court upheld the Navajo Reservation's claim to enforcement jurisdiction over tribal members.

There are basically two ways to interpret the meaning of these cases. In the broad sense the Oliphant decision can be interpreted as denying tribal jurisdiction in a general sense over nontribal members. It is important to note, however, that the Court in Oliphant did not overrule the holding in U.S. v. Mazurie. In that case, the court upheld the extension of tribal liquor ordinances over nonmembers of the tribe. Although the cases seem irreconcilable at first glance, there were substantial differences in these two cases. In Mazurie, the Court upheld the prescriptive, i.e., legislative, act of a tribal government and stated that such prescriptive or legislative acts extend and apply to nontribal individuals. The actual enforcement mechanism in the Mazurie case were federal authorities, i.e., the federal courts. In contrast, the tribe in Oliphant was attempting to enforce tribal ordinances through tribal courts. The only way these two cases can be reconciled is to recognize that tribal ordinances extend to nonmembers and that tribes have the prescriptive jurisdiction over nontribal members. In contrast, Oliphant tells us that tribes do not have enforcement jurisdiction over nonmembers. The result is that tribes must seek alternative enforcement mechanisms against nontribal members, i.e., the state or federal courts. As noted in Bryan v. Itasca, federal courts are not available in a PL 280 state such as Alaska in that federal jurisdiction has essentially been withdrawn. Thus, the state courts are the only forum for enforcement of tribal ordinances which are available in a PL 280 state. As noted above, however, "PL 280" requires the state to give "full force and effect" to valid tribal ordinances in civil cases.[43] Under this rationale, a village would have prescriptive jurisdiction over non-tribal members with state enforcement in civil matters.

There remains, of course, the question of criminal cases. PL 280 has no comparable requirement for "full force and effect" of tribal ordinances in criminal cases. There exists, however, two lines of authority on this issue. Some states have extended "full faith and credit" to tribal ordinances by holding that a tribe is a "territory" under 28 USC 1738.[44] On the other hand, many states have refused full faith and credit, but have extended "comity" to tribal ordinances.[45] The issue remains unresolved.[46]

B. SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION

Subject matter jurisdiction refers to the types of issues with which a government may concern itself. Often subject matter jurisdiction is referred to as the "powers" of a government. Title 29 of the Alaska Statutes enunciates in a comprehensive manner, the powers of state chartered local governments. In contrast, there exists no similar comprehensive and authoritative exposition of tribal powers. Understanding tribal powers requires a thorough review of a substantial body of federal and international common law. Finally, there exists a less formidable body of federal common law governing the interaction of these respective jurisdictions.

1) Concurrent Jurisdiction

There are two basic principals governing the interaction between municipal and tribal governments.

The first principle was enunciated by the United States Supreme Court in Williams v. Lee.[47] In that case, the United States Supreme Court held that states have jurisdiction over Indians except where such state jurisdiction infringes upon tribal self-government. This test was specifically applied to Alaska in Organized Village of Kake v. Egan.[48] In that case, the Court analyzed the development of this principle and stated:

> "these decisions indicate that even on reservations, state laws may be applied to Indians unless such application would interfere with reservations, self-government, or impair a right granted or reserved by federal law."

In explaining these lines of decisions, the Supreme Court further stated that, "it must be remembered that the Courts in applying the Williams test, have dealt principally with situations involving non-Indians."[49] In these situations, both the tribe and state fairly claim an interest in asserting jurisdiction. The Williams test was designed to resolve this conflict, but providing that the state could protect its interest in its non-Native citizens up to the point where tribal self-government would be affected.[50] In fulfillment of this policy, cases arising between tribal members fell within the exclusive interest of the tribal government.

The second major principle is a modification of the above rule required by the fact that Alaska is governed by the operation of Public Law 280.[51] Generally, this law confers upon the state criminal and civil jurisdiction to adjudicate matters between Natives within Indian country. It is important, however, to understand the parameters of PL 280 as recently defined by the courts. The courts have generally attempted to limit the effect of PL 280 because of the "devastating impact on tribal governments" that the law has had.[52] In Brian v. Itasca County, the U.S. Supreme Court in commenting on PL 280 stated:

> "nothing in this legislative history remotely suggest that Congress meant the acts extension of civil jurisdiction to the states should result in the undermining or destruction of such tribal governments as did exist in a conversion of the affected tribes in the little more than "private volunteer organizations," a possible result if tribal governments and reservation Indians were subordinated to full Panoply of civil regulatory powers, including taxation of state and local governments. The act itself refutes such an inference: There is notably absent any conferral of state jurisdiction of the tribes themselves and Section 4 C, 28 U.S. C Section 1360(C) (28 U.S. CS Section 1360 (C)), providing for the "full force in effect" of any tribal ordinances or custums "heretofore or hereafter adopted by An Indian Tribe...if not inconsistent with any applicable civil laws of the state, contemplates the continuing vitality of tribal government."

The court went on in a footnote to further explain this policy of promoting Native governments. In a comment of particular importance to Alaska, the court stated:

"the suggestion is that since tribal governments are disabled under many state laws from incorporating as local units of government, general regulatory control might relegate tribal governments to a level below that of counties and municipalities, thus essentially destroying them, particularly if they might raise revenue only after the tax base had been filtered through many governmental layers of taxation. Present federal policy appears to be returning to a focus upon strenghthening tribal government...and the Court of Appeals of the Ninth Curcuit has impressed the view that courts are not obliged in ambiguous instances to strain to implement an assimilationist policy Congress has now rejected, particularly, where to do so will interfere with the present Congressional approach to what is after all an ongoing relationship."[54]

This general policy, favoring the strengthening of tribal governments has two effects.

First, PL 280 does not confer a state's general civil regulatory control over Indian country.[55] Although the Supreme Court has failed to fully define what the scope of "regulatory" means, it is clear that taxation of personal property on trust land,[56] zoning authority,[57] and outdoor advertizing[58] in Indian country is beyond the state authority. The second effect of Brian v. Itasca was that PL 280 only made applicable to Indian country those state laws which "had a general applicability throughout the state." In short, this general principle denies the authority of local governments to exercise authority over Indian country since their authority does not extend throughout the state.[59] This basic principle, if applied in Alaska, could have a crippling effect on rural municipal governments in Alaska. The result would be the creation of local governments chartered under state law whose authority only extended over non-Indians. The end result would be the creation of parallel local government units incapable of exercising jurisdiction over the respective persons subject to the other local government's personal jurisdiction.

2) Local Government Powers.

The basic rule regarding the powers of a tribal government is that such powers are not in general delegated powers granted by express Acts of Congress, but rather inherent powers of a limited sovereignty which has never been extinguished.[60] This has recently been compared with the concept of home rule under Alaska state law.[61]

In contrast, Alaskan municipalities are of two types. A home rule municipality, like an Indian tribe possesses all local government powers not reserved from it by state law.[62] A general law municipality possesses powers delegated to it by state law.[63] As noted above, Alaskan municipalities are further divided between cities, boroughs, and service areas.

Basically, all these municipalities exercise four types of powers.

A municipality possesses "general powers" related to the municipal corporate identity. These powers include the power to be sued, power to employ municipal officers and officials, power to be sued, power to levy taxes and special assessments, enforce ordinances, prescribe penalties for violations, acquire manage control use, and dispose of personal and real property to promote legislation for the municipality to expend funds for community purposes, and to borrow money and issue evidence of undebtedness. By statute, all municipalities possess the unilateral authority to exercise these powers.

Second, municipal organizations possess "regulatory powers," which relate to: public rights-of-way facilities to services, traffic and general transportation including buses, taxis, etc., animal control, sales of goods, foods, and alcoholic beverages, dangerous insect and rodent control, recreational devices, building codes, public nuisance abatement, garbage & solid waste collection, water and air pollution, licensing of day-care facilities, police powers, or other general health safety and well-being welfare functions.[65]

As a general rule, cities possess the unilateral authority to exercise the regulatory powers. Boroughs, however, are subject to a narrower grant of authority depending on whether the power is area-wide or non-area-wide (see Part II (i) above).

Third, Alaska Statutes outline a number of municipal facilities and services which municipalities may provide. These include services and facilities relating to streets and sidewalks, sewage treatment facilities, harbors, flood control, health and hospital services, cemeteries, police and jail services, cold storage, telephone, lights, power, heat, water, transportation, community centers, libraries, recreation facilities, airport facilities, garbage facilities, fire protection, parking, urban renewable, consumer protection, and historical sites, buildings and monuments.[66] Any city may exercise the powers necessary to provide these facilities, however, boroughs must assume the powers to provide these facilities and services in a like manner required for the exercise of regulatory powers. Third class boroughs are not specifically authorized to provide such facilities and services.

Fourth, municipalities are authorized to exercise what are commonly called area-wide powers, i.e., education, and planting, platting, and zoning authority. Generally, first and second class boroughs have the statutory authority to unilaterally provide such services on an area-wide basis. All third class boroughs may provide educational services on an area-wide basis and may, upon voter approval, exercise planning and zoning authority. As a rule, cities do not exercise such powers except when they are located outside borough boundaries.[68]

An exhaustive comparison of these powers is certainly beyond the scope of this project if not impossible, however, it is possible to select three areas for special consideration.

i) Police Powers. While municipalities possess police powers,[69] tribes possess the power to regulate the conduct of members.[70] The federal government has withdrawn tribal jurisdiction over most felony crimes by enactment of the Major Crimes Act,[71] and Assimilative Crimes Act.[72]

Both the tribe and the municipality are limited from prescribing a punishment for violation of an ordinance in excess of $500 and/or thirty (30) days in jail.[73] Municipalities are prevented from operating "courts" since the Alaska Constitution provides for an integrated court system under state government.[72] This constitutional reservation of power to the state, however, does not prevent municipalities from operating "administrative tribunals" capable of enforcing its ordinances.[73]

Such tribunals, however, are subject to the same constitutional guarantees protecting the rights of the accused, where the ordinance provides for the regulation of acting which traditionally connotes criminality.[74]

In contrast to municipalities, Native governments possess the inherent power to create courts to enforce their ordinances.[75] Such tribal courts are not generally subject to the individual guarantees of the Bill of Rights.[76] To rectify this, Congress passed the Indian Civil Rights Act of 1968,[77] which applies the constitutional protections of the Bill of Rights to Indian governments.

ii) Planning. Both tribes and municipalities possess planning authority. Alaska statutes specifically provides for municipal planning authority. Within organized boroughs, planning is an area-wide function of the borough.[80] Of course, the borough may also delegate such powers to a city within its borders.[81] Outside organized boroughs, first class cities are required, and second class cities may exercise planning powers.[82] In unorganized areas of the state, planning authority rests with the Department of Natural Resources.[83]

Tribal planning authority is a power retained by tribes in the absence of contrary federal law. This authority is already expressly recognized by the state. While the Court in State v. Aleut Corp.,[84] held that ANCSA regional corporations lacked governmental planning authority so as to require the State Division of Lands to give notice of pending land actions, the Court also held that traditionally organized Native villages constituted local authorized planning agencies.[85]

While both entities enjoy substantially similar planning authority, the entities implement this authority in substantially different ways. Muncipalities have authority to directly implement their plans through zoning, platting,[86] and operation of their program. The municipality, however, is not able to direct state agencies to comply with its plan. For example, the prior A.S. 29.33.090(d) required certain state land management programs to comply with municipal plans. This was repealed.[87]

Municipalities also may implement their plans through its licensing power over vehicles, animals, day care facilities, etc.[88]

A tribe's most potent implementation tool is its recognized authority to license. For example, in U.S. v. Mazurie,[89] the Supreme Court upheld a tribe's right to license bars owned by non-Natives on fee simple land within Indian country.[89] Secondly, a village may regulate the nature of member's ownership rights property.[90] Finally, there is some authority to believe that a Native village government may exercise zoning authority over Native land. In Santa Rosa Band of Indians v. Kings County,[91] the Court struck down local zoning ordinances holding that "the extension of local jurisdiction is inconsistent with tribal self-determination and autonomy."[92] This infers, of course, that the local government invaded a power to zone reserved to the tribe.

lii) Taxation. The right of a Native government to tax is a retained sovereign power.[93] The extent of this power is almost wholly uncertain, since few Native governments exercise this power. It would seem that a tribe may impose taxes on business,[94] lawyers,[95] or to accompany tribal permits.[95]

The taxing powers of municipalities are more clearly defined. They may levy sales and use taxes,[97] and property taxes.[98] These taxing powers are subject to a substantial number of exemptions and limitations.[99]

PART III

SUGGESTIONS TO INCLUDE NATIVE VILLAGE GOVERNMENTS WITHIN THE ALASKAN LOCAL GOVERNMENT SYSTEM

A. POLICY CONSIDERATIONS

The decision to allow inclusion of the Native tribal government within the local government system within the State of Alaska local government system is, of course, a policy issue. The Alaska Constitution and the basic principles which underlies Article 10 dealing with local government in Alaska provides certain objective standards for policy evaluation. The local government committee of the Alaska Constitutional Convention articulated five basic principles which guided the drafting of Article 10. These basic principles are:

1. Self-government.
2. A unified local government system.
3. Prevention of overlapping tax authorities.
4. Flexibility.
5. State interest.[1]

The inclusion of Alaskan Native tribal government within the state local government system is consistent with these principles first enunciated in the Constitutional Convention.

1. Self-government. The maximization of local control over local government was a primary concern of the framers. This policy is specifically enunciated in Section 1 of Article 10 of the Constitution which provides that, "the purpose of this Article is to provide for maximum local self-government..." This concern is reflected in other provisions of Article 10. For example, Section 6 provides that the legislature shall provide performance of services that it deems necessary and advisable in the unorganized boroughs "allowing for maximum local participation and responsibility." Section 9 provides that home rule charters of first-class municipalities shall be approved by popular election. This policy favoring local self-government in municipal matter is consistent with federal policy favoring self-determination of Indian tribes. Fundamental to self-government/self-determination, is the right of people to determine what form their government shall take and to establish rules and regulations regarding the management and operation of that government. For a variety of reasons, several Alaskan Native villages have failed to organize a second-class city under the Alaska state law preferring rather to organize themselves exclusively as Alaska Native villages. In many cases, such organizations reflect a community decision to organize a local government which best reflects the cultural and social character of the respective community. Under this rationale, the state should encourage communities to organize themselves under any authorized governmental form which best represents the respective communities' social, cultural and economic pattern. The inclusion of Native governments within the system of Alaska state local government promote that policy. This action would broaden the number of local options available to communities desiring to organize.

2. Integrated local government system. The framers of the Alaskan Constitution desired to create a single system of local government within Alaska. As noted by this report, however, two parallel systems of local government exist in Alaska, i.e., state chartered municipalities and tribal government. The quality and quantity of interaction between these two types of government varies from community to community. The quality and quantity of possible interaction ranges from substantial cooperative efforts to substantial opposition. Often times coordination between governments is merely a function of interlocking office holders. Where the Native council and the city council are substantially the same, the respective governmental efforts are highly coordinated. In contrast, where the councils are not interlocked there is little coordination and often counterproductive efforts. State and federal program operation is often dependent on this cooperation, since state programs prefer to operate through municipalities and many federal programs operate through tribal governments.

In contrast, non-recognition problems result where a community is exclusively organized as a Native village government. Such communities are not immuned from the same problems which plaque communities organized as municipalities. Where the municipality may draw on the resources of the state to help address such problems, the Native village encounters greater reluctance by the state to render equal assistance. The obvious solution to this problem is for the community to organize as a municipality. The community would in fact only trade problems--i.e., the community would trade a reluctance on part of the state to render assistance in exchange for duplicity and confusion of local government.

The inclusion of the Native government within the local government system, therefore, would further state policy favoring a unified local government system. It would promote cooperation where parallel governments exist and it would alleviate the necessity of creating parallel local governments where none exist now.

3. Prevention of overlapping taxing and authorities. As noted above, the framers of the Alaska Constitution specifically intended to eliminate overlapping tax authorities and promote physical integration within local government. For this reason, Article 10, Section 2, specifies that cities and boroughs are the only local governments authorized to tax under the Alaska Constitution. As noted above, however, this plan is somewhat frustrated by the existence of Native government which possess authority to levy taxes and dues on members. Additionally, the eligibility of Native villages to receive intergovernmental revenue transfers supports the state's objective to facilitate fiscal integration of local government. This lack of fiscal integration within the community leads to a number of problems including duplicate accounting systems, redundant and excessive administrative costs and, in some cases, program duplication. The framers had hoped to avoid such problems in adopting a policy favoring fiscal integration. The inclusion of Native governments within the local government system will help avoid these inefficient fiscal management systems as intended by the framers of the Constitution.

4. Flexibility. Throughout the Constitutional floor debates, the drafters of Article 10 emphasized their desire to provide a "framework" for local government which would be flexible enough to meet community demands throughout a highly pluralistic state such as Alaska. Native governments represent a flexible accommodation to the need for pluralistic representation in local government. It, therefore, follows that the inclusion of such governments fulfill a constitutional policy favoring flexibility in Alaskan local government.

5. State interest. As noted above, the framers of the Alaska Constitution felt that strong local government was a mechanism to facilitate the decentralization of state government. It was fully intended that strong local government could perform traditional state functions much better than a centralized government structure. This plan, however, is dependent on the existence of local government. The state by necessity remains responsible for the provision of basic services in the unorganized areas of the state. Thus, good strong local government serves the state's interest in a long term. The existence in unrecognized, parallel, and competing systems of government at the local level serves to delete the potency of local government and thereby thwarts the efficient implementation of the eventual decentralization of state government. The inclusion of Native governments within the system of local government within the State of Alaska makes available to the state existing government entities capable of pursuing the state's interest. In this sense, the Native government can serve as a conduit for the provision of state services. In a limited sense, the state has already adopted this policy. For example, in the Coastal Zone Management Act, the Rural Development Act, the Municipal Trust Land (14c) Program, the Community Legal Assistance Program, the Community Miscellaneous Assistance Program and various state contracting programs utilize Native government to administer and otherwise implement these programs where substantial community participation is required. The general inclusion of Native governments within the local government system of the State of Alaska will make available to the state a valuable local instrument for the fulfillment of the state interest.

6. Fundamental Rights. The greatest concern over inclusion of Native village governments into the Alaska local government system is the fact that the Native governments are racially defined institutions. As such, it is feared that non-Natives will be relegated to a status of second class citizens in their own communities. This view is founded on two questionable assumptions: 1) non-Natives cannot participate in Native government, and 2) non-Natives have no rights under a Native government.

It is a general rule of law that a Native tribe has the exclusive authority to determine its membership.[2] This power specifically includes the power to provide for adoption of non-Natives into the tribe.[3] This general rule is subject to one exception. The Secretary of the Interior is charged with the responsibility of determining tribal enrollment for the purposes of distributing tribal trust funds.[4]

In contrast, Native governments providing services under federal contracts may also render services to non-Native tribal members, since for the purpose of contracting "Indian" is defined in terms of tribal membership.[5] Benefits provided through state revenue sharing are required by state procedures equally available to non-Native residents of the respective communities. Thus, it is quite possible for non-Natives to fully participate in Native government.

Participation by non-Natives in Native government is quite common, despite efforts of the B.I.A. to discourage the practice. In one case, a Native village constitution goes so far as to guarantee non-member/non-Native heads of households representation on behalf of their Native children before the Native council.[6] In practice, Native councils are reluctant to open village roles to non-Natives who may be transient or are reluctant to establish permanent ties with the community. This is understandable in that membership in a village generally carries with it cultural duties and obligations. This reluctance is analogous to the policy of the federal government to extend citizenship to aliens, or for that matter, the reluctance of the State of Alaska to extend full state benefits to "cheechakos."

The second major concern relates to the individual rights of non-Natives under Native government. The prime guarantee of individual rights under a Native government is the Indian Civil Rights Act of 1968.[7] The Act mandates that a Native government provide many of the same individual protections provided under the U.S. Constitution. These include:

- free exercise of religion
- freedom of speech, press and assembly
- freedom of unreasonable search and seizure
- protection from double jeopardy and self-incrimination
- protection from taking of property without compensation
- right of due process and counsel
- protection from cruel and unusual punishment and excessive bail
- right to equal protection of the laws
- prohibition of bills of attainder or expost facto laws, and
- right to trial by jury

These rights extend to members and non-members alike.[8]

There is some concern that the Act only provide relief through the right of habeas corpus. This concern focuses around dicta contained in Santa Clara Pueblo v. Martinez.[9] In that case, the Court review a tribal ordinance which conferred benefits upon tribal members based upon distinction between patritinial/matritinial ancestors. In dicta, the Court stated that Congress only provided one clear remedy for plaintiffs under the Act - i.e., habeas corpus. A full reading of Martinez, however, reveals that the holding of the case rests upon a test which balances the two current policies of federal Indian law - i.e., self-determination and protection of individual rights. As one commentator remarked, "In litigation under the Indian Civil Rights Act, federal court jurisdiction outside the scope of habeas corpus proceedings has been firmly established.[10]

Conclusion. While the municipalities and tribes do not have co-extensive powers, they have many similar areas of concern where their powers overlap. It should be remembered that the tribal organization is a governmental unit with broader areas of concern and responsibility than the municipality. For example, tribal powers include regulation of property rights, marital relations, and child custody.[100] Tribes provide employment, welfare, economic development, child protection, and various other services generally felt to be beyond the scope of local government. As local government in Alaska develops along the path of decentralization envisioned by the framers, it is likely that municipal governments will also address these subject areas. In any case, it is clear that village and municipal government are not the same thing. It is also evident that they are closer than commonly perceived.

B) PROPOSALS

There are three basic concepts which would allow inclusion of Native governments in the State system of local government. These three concelpts are incorporation, service area designation, and recognition.

i) Incorporation- Incorporation is the formation of a unit of local government. Theoretically it is possible to incorporate Native governments as units of local government under State law. As noted in Part IA, above, this has been attempted twice in the past. Several current second class cities were originally incorporated under the 1957 Act. The Native character of these governments- ie the attributes of tribal self-government- have been so eroded that they are not currently recognized as tribal enities by their people or the federal government.

This is not to say that incorporation is not possible. In Bryan v Itasca[11] the Court stated that one reason it was reluctant to extend local government jurisdiction over Native communities was the fact that many states did not allow incorporation of Native government under state law. This implies, of course, that such incorporation is constitutionally permissible. As noted above, however, Alaska is not bound by the standards of the U.S. Constitution when it is faced with interpreting the Alaska Constitution.. There is no precedence at all in regards to the position of the Alaska Constitution on this issue. Thus, incorporation of Alaska Native village government would be Constitutionally uncertain.

ii) Service Area Designation. Service area designation would allow the formation of service areas in unicorporated areas so as to provide a local mechanism for the provision of state services. This concept has two limitations. First, the Constitution prohibits the use of service areas where the service contemplated could be rendered through a city of annnexation by a city.[12] This means that the service area could not be formed in cities. Secondly, the service area is a local government unit, and designation of a Native government would be akin to incorporation, ie Constitutionally uncertain. To provide for independent organization of the service area would only be fostering futher creation of parallel local government units.

iii) Recognition. Recognition is a concept borrowed from international law. Itis the process whereby one government acknowledges the authority of another government. It is more than taking note of a mere fact. It is the process whereby two governments seek to establish intergovernmental relations. There are two types of recognition- recognition of the community and recognition of the government. Recognition of the community is acknowledgement that the community is a legal enity capable of being organized under an independent and effective government.[14] Recogniton of the government is acknowlegement that an individual or body of individuals act as the government for the community.[15] municipalities exist under the authority of the State

The use of the concept of recognition is quite useful in the context of Native governments, since the state is not attempting to create a racially defined institution under its own authority. Rather the State is acknowledging the existence of the Native communities and governments. Thus the Native government gains no authority from the State, but merely enters into cooperative relations with the existing governments

The draft bill (see Appendix A) would be sufficent to carry out this task. In addition to recognition, the bill defines the method whereby the State will engage in realtions with the Native Villages. The proposal anticipates that Native villages could participate in State programs to the same extent as second class cities. This is analogous to federal programs which extend participation to states and tribes.[16] Incident to recognition, the bill will clarify the status of Native village laws before state courts.

The bill also proposes cooperative agreements between the State and the Native governments to carry out State programs. This section anticipates the passage of the Tribal-State Compact Act[17] which would allow federal funding of programs conducted under a State-Tribal agreement, and thus reduce the burden on the State treasury for those areas affected by these agreements.

Finally, the bill conditions the realtionship upon the Native government compling with antidiscrimination provisions. This of course exempts federally funded Indian programs. The bill allows the Governor to enforce compliance through withdrawal of recognition.

The bill does not attempt to expand the jurisdiction of the State or the Native village. Section three (3) allows municipalities and villages governments to enter into similar agreements.

APPENDIX A

A BILL

For an Act entitled : "An Act relating to Native Village Governments."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE. (a) The legislature has determined that

(1) there exist within the state several communities which have Native village governments whose members are citizens of the State; and

(2) the law and customs of Native village governments include notions of democracy, liberty, and the exercise of personal rights consistent with the State and federal constitutions.

(b) It is the purpose of this Act to

(1) extend recognition to Native village governments and encourage them in the administration of local government;

(2) provide for cooperative agreements between the State government and Native village governments to promote the equitable delivery of State services.

* Sec. 2. AS 29 is amended by adding a new chapter to read:

CHAPTER ____ NATIVE VILLAGE GOVERNMENTS.

Sec. 29. --. 010. NATIVE VILLAGE GOVERNMENTS. The State of Alaska hereby recognizes the Native Villages as distinct, independent, political communities exercising original tribal soverienty in dependent association with the United States. Any Native village ordinance or custom heretofore or hereafter adopted by the duly constituted governing body of Native Village, in the exercise of any authority which it may possess shall, if not inconsistent with any applicable law or constitutional provision of the State of Alaska, be given full force and effect within the Alaska State Courts, Provided that such Court shall have jurisdiction to hear such cause as a result of the withdrawal of federal jurisdiction pursuant to P.L. 83-280 (67 Stat. 588), as amended by P.L. 85-615 (72 Stat. 545).

Sec. 29.—. 020. ELIGIBILITY FOR STATE PROGRAMS. A Native Village government, for a village which is not incorporated under this title, and is not located within an organized borough is

a) eligible to participate in all State programs to the same extent and in the same manner as a second class city;

b) entitled to notice concerning proposed actions by the state to the same extent as a government of a second class city is entitled to notice; and

c) entitled to consultation with the state on state actions and programs which affect the village to the same extent that the government of a second class city is consulted on state actions and programs.

Sec. 29.--.030. AGREEMENTS. (a) A Native Village government or a group of Native village governments may negotiate agreeements with the Commissioner regarding coordination of State and Native Village facilities and services which may include judicial, law enforcement, and correctional services.

(b) When the Commissioner negotiates an agreement under this section, he shall first first consult with the head of each principal executive department which may be affected by the agreement. The Commissioner shall next submit the proposed agreement to the Governor. The Governor may approve the agreement and upon approval the agreement shall define the respective responsibilities of the State and of the Native village government during the period of time covered by the agreement.

Sec. 29.—.040. NON-DISCRIMINATION. (a) A Native Village government which is a party to an agreement under AS 29.—.030 may not adopt a rule or operate a program which creates or estinquishes a benefit, liability, privilege, immunity or licence dependent upon racial classification or membership in a Native tribe, clan or organization, except that a Native village government may participate in federally funded programs which provide services to persons or organizations because of their status as Native persons or Native organizations. Violation of this section renders an agreement entered into under AS 29.—.020 void.

(b) The Governor may withdraw recognition of a Native Village government authorized under AS 29.—.010 whenever he shall make a determination that the Native Village government has adopted a rule or operates a program which creates or extinquishes a benefit, liability, privilege, immunity or licence dependent upon racial classification or membership in a Native tribe, clan or organization, except that such determination may not be dependant a Native Village government's participation in federally funded programs which provide services to persons or organizations because of their status as Native persons or Native organizations .

(c) Actions and determinations made under this section shall be made in accordance with the Alaska Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62).

Sec. 29.—.050 LIMITATIONS. Nothing in this capter authorizes the alienation, encumbrance, or taxation of real or personal property, including water rights, belonging to a Native person of village that is held in trust by the United States or is subject to a restriction against alienation imposed by the United States, or authorizes regulation of the use of property in a manner inconsistent with a federal treaty, agreement, statute, or regulation, or extends the jurisdiction of the State to adjucicate the ownership or right to possession of property. Nothing in this chapter deprives a Native person or

Native village, or Native corporation of any right, privilege, or immunity afforded under federal or state treaty, agreement, or law, or alters the jurisdiction of the state, its political subdivisions, or a Native Village government. Nothing in this chapter shall create in the state any trust obligation toward a Native person or Native organization because of their status as Native persons or Native organizations.

Sec. 29.—.060. DEFINITIONS. In this chapter

(2) "Native Village government" means a local governing body organized by the authority of the Act of Congress of June 18, 1934, 25 USC sec. 476, or a traditional governing body of a Native village which meets the requirements of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act, 43 USC secs. 1601 et. seq.

(3) "Commissioner" means Commissioner of the Department of Community and Regional Affairs.

* Sec. 3 AS 29.48.010 (4) is amended to read:

INTRODUCTION

Local government in rural Alaska is plagued by the existence of parallel government systems. On one hand, there exists a system of Native governments. On the other hand, the state has encouraged the formation of municipal governments. Often the dual system exists side-by-side in communities of less than 200 persons. In these situations, confusion, and the duplication of administrative costs and services has had a crippling effect on local government. Communities which attempt to avoid the duplication find themselves either ineligible for the respective benefits of the missing government, or forced to create exotic or ad hoc organizations which are marginally eligible for the desired benefits.

This study is an effort to sort out and compare these two systems of government. Additionally, the study makes suggestions on how to correct this situation within existing constitutional restraints.

PART I

EARLY AND CURRENT ALASKAN LOCAL GOVERNMENTS

A. EARLY ALASKAN LOCAL GOVERNMENTS

The earliest "local governments" in Alaska were Native. As Dave Case points out, primal governments varied between the Native cultures.[1] Generally, however, these early governments were loose associations of individuals based upon family relationships and customs. Group decisions were made by consensus.

Similarly, early non-Native local government in Alaska was very informal. After the purchase of Alaska by the U.S. in 1867, the primary mechanism of local government was the extra-legal mining districts.[2] Like the Native governments, these early miner's governments were loose associations based on custom. Generally, decisions were made by majority vote. In 1884, Congress recognized the authority of these mining districts, but the status of Native governments remained in limbo.

In 1900, Congress enacted a civil code for Alaska which included authorization to form towns of over 300 residents.[3] This first form of municipal government was patterned after the mayor-council type of city government common to the "lower 48." Towns were severely limited as to their ability to tax and contract debt and were highly dependent on intergovernmental transfers for financial support. Their primary function seems to have been providing school services. In 1904, some of these limitations were relaxed, but the next major change had to wait until the formation of a territorial government.

In 1905, Congress authorized the formation of independent (city) school districts, and school districts for unincorporated areas.[4] In both cases, the districts exercised fiscal autonomy over current operating expenditures. They directly received a portion of intergovernmental revenue transfers due the city. They remained dependent on the city or territorial government for tax revenues for capital expenditures.

In 1912, Congress passed the Organic Act creating the Territorial legislature.[5] In the following years, the legislature created a second class of territorial towns, subject to the limitations of the earlier Act of Congress. It was fully intentioned that local government be kept weak so as to prevent a taxing or regulatory threat to commercial and mining interests in the territory.[6] In fact, the Organic Act prohibited organization of "counties" or other regional local governments.[7] In 1915, the legislature upgraded territorial towns so that they would be subject to the same limitations as the towns authorized under the federal legislation. At the same time, the legislature for the first time attempted to assimilate Native village government through the Indian Village Act of 1915. This Act authorized Indian villages to organize as units of local government.[8]

In 1917, the legislature authorized incorporation of school districts in unincorporated areas. Under this new legislation, the incorporated school districts achieved greater fiscal autonomy through authorization to tax, as well as an increase in shared intergovernmental transfer revenues.

The legislature undertook a revision of the territorial municipal code in 1923. The new code replaced federally authorized towns with first class cities which directly elected a mayor, expanded council powers, provided for mayoral vetoes, and established minimum procedures for city government.[9] Later, in 1929, the legislature repealed the Indian Village Act of 1915, and revised the laws relating to second class cities making them substantially equal to first class cities.

By 1934, the federal policy toward Indians had again shifted away from assimilation. This was reflected by the passage of the Indian Reorganization Act, and the subsequent extension of the Act to Alaska in 1936.[10] The Act was intended to vest "tribal organizations with real, though limited, authority, and by prescribing conditions which must be met by such tribal organizations."[11]

At this same time, the legislature instituted reforms designed to authorize special purpose regional governments. In 1935, the legislature authorized incorporation of "independent school districts" which included both the area inside city limits and the surrounding adjacent areas. The new school districts were independent of city governments and were fiscally autonomous.[12] Also in 1935, the legislature authorized public utility districts which were fiscally autonomous special purpose governments capable of providing garbage, parks, street, fire, telephones, electrical, and other services.[13]

In 1951, the legislature authorized third class cities, which were essentially the same as second class cities, differing only in geographical and population size.[14]

In 1957, the territorial legislature again attempted to incorporate villages under territorial law.[15] An Incorporated Village had limited powers which included power to provide water, electricity, sewers, and fire protection; regulate dogs, curfews, and land use; and provide public works. The State amended the Act in 1959 to invest the incorporated village with general police powers and provided for village magistrates to levy limited fines. At the same time, the legislature defined the incorporated villages as a city of the fourth class.

At the time of statehood, there existed in the state:

- 24 first class cities
- 8 second class cities
- 2 third class cities
- 10 fourth class cities
- 69 I.R.A.'s
- 5 P.U.D.'s
- 8 independent school districts

- 1 incorporated school district
- unknown number of traditional Native councils

Statehood did not drastically alter the local government pattern since Article XV, Section 1 of the Alaska Constitution provided that, the laws of the territory remained in effect until they were repealed, amended or expired.

Finally in 1972, the state undertook a wholesale revision of the municipal code to create the current system. The main impact of the 1972 revision on the smaller rural communities was to strip those communities which organized under the Village Incorporation Act of their "village" status.

B. CURRENT STATE CHARTERED LOCAL GOVERNMENT

The system of local government authorized under the Alaska Constitution is relatively simple. It is possible to categorize Alaskan local governments into two basic types, i.e., general and special purpose governments. For the sake of analysis, a general purpose government is a government which exercises independent discretion over a broad range of topical concerns. In contrast, a special purpose government is a government which exercises discretion over a specified topical concerns.

General Purpose Governments.

The general purpose government is the constitutionally preferred unit of local government in Alaska. This policy is specifically stated in Article X, Section 1 of the Alaska Constitution which states that, "The purpose of this article is to provide for maximum local self-government with a minimum of local government units, ..." This policy is implemented in Article X, Section 2 which provides that "All local government powers shall be vested in boroughs and cities," and is further stated in Article X, Section 15 which states "Special service districts existing at the time a borough is organized shall be integrated with the government of the borough as provided by law."

This concern for consolidating local powers into single general purpose governments is expressed throughout the Constitutional Convention record. The adoption of "one basic local government system" was intended to prevent "creation of numerous types of local units which can become not only complicated but unworkable."[16] Of immediate concern to the Delegates was the governance of the school boards, public utility districts (P.U.D.s) and health districts. As stated by delegate Victor Fischer:

> "That is one of the points that we have tried to meet here, not to establish too many local governments but those that would be established would be effective to carry out not only the local but also state functions as may be necessary."[17]

To this end the constitution provides for the creation of boroughs and cities.[18]

The most unique aspect of the Alaskan municipality is the framer's intent to create strong local government units. Systems of government then operating in the majority of the states were felt to be too weak.[19] In his initial address to the convention introducing the Local Government Committee's proposed article, Delegate Vic Fischer expressed the "New Federalist" philosophy favoring general decentralized government. Citing the Congressional Commission on Intergovernmental Relations, delegate Fischer stated:

> "The Commission concerned itself with the need for strengthening of state government and a decentralization of federal power. In this study they found that local government is an important factor in this process and I would like to briefly quote a few paragraphs. In discussing the strengthening of local government, the Committee says, 'The objective of decentralization cannot be obtained by a readjustment of national-state relations alone. It will be fully achieved only when carried through to the lowest levels of government where every citizen has the opportunity to participate actively and directly. The strengthening of local government requires the activities that can be handled by these units be allocated to them together with the financial resources necessary for their support.' Then the report goes on and draws a picture of the tremendous number of overlapping tax jurisdictions and separate local entities we now have in the state and goes on to say, 'More or less hidden in this picture is a paradox that > consistently plagues the state and bars any easy solution of the problem of achieving the decentralization of government -- too many local governments and not enough local government.' That is one of the points that we have tried to meet here, not to establish too many local governments but those that would be established would be effective to carry out not only the local but also state functions as may be necessary."[20]

To implement this plan, the committee adopted the so-called "Texas Plan." This approach was explained to the convention by delegate Victor Rivers as follows:

> The old approach to county government was that they existed and had their authorities only in those specifically delegated to them and specifically spelled out to them by the legislature or by the constitution. The other approach which has been adopted and which has operated in a few states, approximately, seven as I recall, particularly in Texas, has been called the Texas Plan, and there, under that plan, they allocate such powers to the intermediate tier of government and the cities are not specifically reserved or eventually withdrawn by the state itself. They have a broad exercise of local authority much as our cities have today. That has been the matter of the choice -- whether we wanted to follow the old pattern in which the constitution and the legislature would delegate certain specific powers to the intermediate form of government, which often is called the county and which we have designated as the borough, or whether we would follow the plan of reserving powers to the state and letting the local government exercise broad general authority within the limits of those reservations.[21]

It is quite clear that the "pure" Texas plan called for application of home rule principals to all local governments. The various classes of cities and boroughs would be defined in law by the quantity and quality of powers reserved by the state.

The record indicates that some delegates to the constitutional convention supported the "pure" Texas Plan.[22] In fact, the concept of a "general law" municipality was not introduced in the floor debate, but seems to have been an assumed constant which carried over from the territorial local government concepts. This is reflected in Article X, Section 9 and 11 which respectively provide that first-class municipalities could assume home-rule status, and that the legislature could extend home rule to other classes of government. The concept of "general law" municipalities was enacted by statute.[23] It is interesting to note that although the "general law" concept was not discussed in convention floor debates, it has become a fundamental concept upon which the majority of local governments in Alaska are based.

It is also important to note that the framers specifically desired to provide independent authorization for city and borough powers, rather than provide that such powers be delegated to the cities and boroughs by the legislature. The legislature's authority over cities and borough is specifically enumerated. It may only regulate cities and boroughs through its authority to classify and define the respective powers and manner of incorporation.[24] Oddly enough the Constitution provides for legislative definition of borough assemblies' appointment and composition.[25] In contrast, it does not have a similar provision governing city councils. Rather, the Constitution merely provides that the council, however composed, shall be the governing body of the city.[26]

On the other hand, the powers of service areas are delegated. In the case of an incorporated area, the service area's powers are derived from the organized borough.[27] The exercise of this borough power is subject to legislative regulation by the legislature. In contrast, service areas in unorganized areas of the state possess authority delegated and regulated by the legislature.[28]

i) Boroughs: A borough is the intermediate level of government in the State of Alaska. Although the term "borough" is somewhat unique, the notion of an intermediate level of government is common to the American local government scene. The borough "corresponds generally to the county in other states."[29] By statute, the borough is a government for an "area."[30] This is in contrast to a city, which is a government for a "community."[31] The framers of the constitution anticipated that an average size borough would be between 1,000-2,500 square miles.[32] Presumably, an area could include a number of communities and their outlying areas.[33] Clearly, the framers intended to create a system of two-tiered, local coexistent governments.

But the framers also intended local government to be flexible enough to adjust to future developments. It has, therefore, been observed that:

> Boroughs in different parts of Alaska may serve two quite different purposes. In areas which include cities, they may constitute a second tier of government. In other areas, they may themselves be the sole or primary local units.[34]

The Alaska Supreme Court has recognized this by stating that the Constitution does not require the coexistence of boroughs and cities.[35]

There is a strong indication that the original concept of the borough was strongly linked to home rule. This is most notably demonstrated in committee answers to delegate questions regarding the unorganized borough.

> V. Rivers: ... In the extent that the benefits that the legislature sets up will offset the added cost to the people, and the extent of their desire for home rule will govern how far they go in organizing those boroughs, but it was our thought there would be enough inducement for them to organize and exercise home rule so that as time went on they would gradually all become incorporated boroughs...[36]

This sentiment is noticeable in comparing the respective constitutional sections dealing with cities and boroughs. Whereas the constitution specifically states that "Cities shall have the powers and functions conferred by law or charter."[37] (emphasis added) The comparable clause dealing with boroughs is less specific providing that, "The legislature shall classify boroughs and prescribe their powers and functions."[38] (emphasis added) It remains unclear whether such prescription should be by specific enumeration or reservation. Nevertheless, inclusion of reference to boroughs in Article X, Sections 9 and 10 leaves no doubt that general law boroughs were constitutionally contemplated.

ii) Cities. In contrast to boroughs, cities are statutory defined as the local government unit for "communities."[39] The local government committee of the Constitutional Convention considered the option of abolishing the city form of government. It was felt, however, that such a move was "too drastic a step," and it was felt that the existing territorial units of governments should be perpetuated.[40] On the other hand, it was also stated that,

> "... we visualize the possibility that as the borough becomes a more definite unit of government over the years, which we hope it will, the scope better defined, that all the functions that can best be carried out on the unified basis be transferred over to the borough."[41]

In City of Douglas v. City and Borough of Juneau,[42] the Court recognized that "Unification is consistent with the purpose expressed in Article X, Section 1 of minimizing the number of local government units." But in preserving the city, the convention did not intend to subordinate the city to the borough as indicated by the following exchange:

> HURLEY: The borough then has nothing to say about the services that the city offers its own residents within its boundaries. Is that true?
> ROSSWOG: Yes, the city should remain as much the same as today, or practically the same unless there are some gradual changes in the future. They can delegate powers back and forth but the borough would not tell the city that they had to supply certain services or couldn't supply certain services. That is why the two are set up as having the authority.
> HURLEY: In essence, then, you have two local government units?
> ROSSWOG: Yes, that is right.[43]

Thus, while the momentum set in force by the Constitutional Convention contemplates eventual dissolution of cities in favor of boroughs, the interim is governed by the principals of sovereign coexistence.

Special Purpose Governments

As noted above the integrated/unified local government is the preferred vehicle of local government in Alaska. The constitution, however, provided for service areas and districts which seem to be semi-autonomous special purpose governments. In understanding the role of special purpose governments, it is necessary to recognize that service areas represent a compromise between the constitutional delegates who argued in favor of wholly integrated local governments, and those delegates who favored continuing the independent school districts, health districts and P.U.D.s formed under the territorial government. In expressing this compromise, delegate Vic Fischer stated:

> Mr. Johnson, it was not the intention of the committee to do away with any existing school districts just by the enactment of this article. (Sec 15). The intent was to leave them within a new framework of government.... what we visualize is putting them under the general fiscal jurisdiction of the larger entity, which includes all the people within the particular school district.[44]

This was again explained by delegate Rivers who stated:

> Mr. President, the idea was that the general powers of government would be with the general elected representatives of the people. Now, as Mr. Fischer has pointed out, the special functions in regards to the use of one group for one special purpose such as health, education or anything else, the power to take the board and take its powers away, the powers of the boards would probably continue except for the taxing power being centralized in the one taxing agency which would thus have its own appraising, its own assisting agency, its own condemnations.[45]

This point was recognized by the Alaska Supreme Court in Macauley v. Hildebrand[46] where the Court held that a home rule borough may not require its school system by ordinance to participate in centralized accounting where the Legislature has delegated express authority to the school board to resist such requirements. The Court based its decision upon the theory that education was an area of "pervasive state authority." The obvious conclusion, therefore, is that service areas may exercise substantial autonomy in areas of "pervasive state authority." In a similar manner, the legislature could provide substantial autonomy to public utility districts since regulation of public utilities is also an area of state concern.[47] Thus, while the constitution provides that "all local powers shall be vested in boroughs and cities",[48] it does not exclude the exercise of governmental authority by governments other than cities and boroughs.

This balance is further demonstrated in those constitutional provisions which provide that when a borough is organized, existing service districts shall be "integrated" into the borough government.[49] Once a borough is organized, the assembly may create service areas within its borders.[50] This latter power is subject to the single prohibition that services areas cannot be established where such services can be rendered by annexation to an existing service area or city.[51] This prohibition is consistent with the general preference for integration rather than separate incorporation.

It is quite clear that service areas are only "semi-autonomous." As indicated above, the service area would be subject to the exclusive "fiscal jurisdiction" of the assembly. Beyond this, however, the framer's contemplated that service area boards could be set up and exercise substantial powers. This was clarified by delegate Fischer who stated:

> ..., it is the intent of the committee that when you establish a service area you could, say, establish a separate school board,...to supervise the school functions...[52]

Thus, it is possible for a service area to exercise substantial power independent of the general borough assembly.

It must be remembered, however, that the service area may never exercise total autonomy. There seems to be two chief limitations on the service areas. First, the service area may not unilaterally tax. The Constitution specifically provides that only cities and boroughs may tax.[53] As indicated above, this limitation on service areas was perceived by the framers as the sufficient link needed to achieve local government coordination. There remains, however, substantial autonomy even in fiscal matters as indicated by the Macauley v. Hildebrand case. A school district may maintain separate financial records. Similarly, while service areas have limited control over tax revenues, they may possess substantial autonomy with respect to revenues from intergovernmental transfers. For example, under the terms of A.S. 29.89.030 (2), a health district operating a hospital may qualify for state revenue sharing. Although, the sponsoring municipality would initially receive the revenue sharing payments, the municipality is required to transfer such payments to the service area to be used for health services at the discretion of the hospital "directors".

The second major limitation on a service area's autonomy is related to the operation of the "local activity rule." As the Court stated in Macauley, the legislature may delegate to service areas power beyond the regulation of the parent municipality in areas which are the subject of state concern. It follows, therefore, that service area autonomy is inversely related to "local" concerns. For example, a municipality could certainly regulate the use of municipal property regardless of whether it was assigned to the service area, since municipal property is purely a local concern.[54] Of course, is is not easy to define what is a "local" concern as opposed to a "state" concern. This is even less clear under the borough form of government in that the framers of the constitution intended boroughs to assume greater responsibility in the area of traditional state concerns as state government "decentralized." The framers seemed to have accepted this ambiguity, and left the matter to the legislature. The courts, in turn, have recognized this role for the legislature by holding that municipal regulation is invalid in the face of contrary statutory law.

In spite of these limitations, service areas would seem to be remarkably flexible mechanisms of local government. For example, the Constitution authorized intergovernment cooperative agreements between "any local governments" for joint administration of any functions or powers.[55] Presumably, these provisions would apply to service areas since they are local governments. This view is supported by the fact, that only cities and boroughs are authorized to transfer powers, while "all local governments" are authorized to enter into intergovernmental agreements.[56] Thus, it would seem possible for co-extensive service areas to enter into cooperative administrative agreements for such things as centralized accounting and budgeting, personnel management and property management systems. Such mechanisms could be used rather extensively to provide a wide range of services for a community without city incorporation. This concept is not beyond the framer's contemplation, in that both pro-integration, and anti-integration factions within the Constitutional Convention characterized cities as "a collection of service areas".[57] It must be remembered, however, that a collection of service areas lack independent taxing authority possessed by cities. Thus, a collection of service areas would be totally dependent on intergovernmental transfers, whether from the borough or the state. Furthermore, a collection of service areas would be subordinate to borough regulation in areas of "local control". The collection of service areas, however, could exercise substantial autonomy in areas of state interest, as defined by the legislature.

Service areas have their greatest utility in the unorganized boroughs. The constitution directs the legislature to provide necessary services in the unorganized boroughs, "allowing for maximum local participation and responsibility."[58] To implement this section, the legislature provided that it may authorize "service areas" in the unorganized borough.[59] It is agreed that such service areas do not possess powers of fiscal autonomy,[60] however, they may exercise other powers delegated by the legislature.

The legislature has seen fit to authorize four types of service areas in the unorganized borough - i.e.: 1) aquaculture service areas; 2) coastal resource service areas; 3) regional educational service areas, and 4) volunteer fire departments.

The legislature authorized the Commissioner of Commerce and Economic Development to declare aquaculture service areas.[61] The purpose of these service areas are to provide fishery enhancement services. The service area board is comprised of representatives of member user groups.

The coastal zone management service areas are general planning units for coastal areas of the state. Whereas, coastal boroughs are automatically designated coastal zone management districts, unorganized areas may organize a special service area for the conducting district coastal management programs.[62] These programs operate to guide state agencies in the operation of their programs throughout the coastal areas of the state. While the state continues to be the basic provider of basic services, the service area boards operate as a centralized planning agency for the area. The board of the service area is popularly elected.

Third, the regional education attendance areas (REAA) are service areas providing eudcational services within the unorganized borough.[63] Like the coastal zone management areas, the REAA's are controlled by a popularly elected board, but were mandatorally organized by the legislature after a settlement of the "Molly Hootch" case.[64]

Finally, the legislature has "impliedly" authorized organization of volunteer fire departments for unorganized areas of the state through the state revenue sharing program.[65] Under this program, local fire departments may organize under regulations adopted by the state fire marshall. Upon approval and registration of the departments, the organizations are eligible for state funding. Generally, these departments enjoy substantial fiscal autonomy, provided that they confine their activities to fire protection.

As noted above, there is great variety in the organization and operation of these special service areas. At the present time, the authority of these special service areas has not been challenged in court, so that it is impossible to define the limits of the legislature's discretion as to the manner and form that these service areas may take. If the past record is an indication of legislative authority, it can only be stated that the legislature possesses broad discretion in creating and organizing service areas, provided they are defined taxing authority.

C. ALASKA NATIVE GOVERNMENT ORGANIZATION

As with state chartered local governments, Alaskan Native governments can be categorized as general or special purpose governments. Additionally, there exists "quasi-governmental" entities.

General Purpose Governments.

It is commonly stated that there are two types of general Native governments in Alaska: Traditional Councils and IRA Councils.[66] In practice, there is little difference between the operation of these two types of government. The distinction between the two governments is largely theoretical. This distinction is important, however, when the authority or status of the government comes into question.

i) Traditional Councils. In a strict sense, traditional councils are not traditional to the Alaska Native people. As pointed by David Case, the traditional precontact Native governments were primarily based on family ties.[67] Traditional councils have been formed in reaction to contact with the non-Native culture for local representation of the Native community before outside interest. Many of these councils have adopted formal traditional constitutions while others seem to operate according to an unwritten constitution like the United Kingdom. In all cases, the basic level of organization is the village.

The basis of these government's authority rests in their retained sovereignty, i.e., the principle that absent express Congressional action to the contrary, Indian nations retain the inherent power of internal self-government.[68]

This observation has led to several inquiries regarding the tribal status of Alaskan Native villages. Although the question of tribal status in Alaska is intriguing from an ethnic and political perspective, its resolution has doubtful legal significance. More important that tribal status however, is the general recognition of a group's authority to govern itself. This recognition is directly linked to its dependent status vis-anvis the federal government.[69] In turn, a Native community's dependent status is determined by legislative and executive course of action respecting the Native community in question.

Congress has specifically extended this recognition to Alaska Native villages and has treated them in the same manner as other Indian tribes. For example, Native villages receive identical treatment as Indian tribes under the Indian Self-Determination Act,[70] the State and Local Fiscal Assistance Act,[71] the Housing and Community Development Act,[72] the Comprehensive Employment Training Act,[73] and the Indian Child Welfare Act.[74] Additionally, Congress has recognized self-governing qualities of Alaska Native communities when it provided for the extension of state civil jurisdiction over Alaska Natives. In applying PL 83-290 to Alaska, Congress expressly reserved that:

> Any tribal ordinance or custom heretofore or hereafter adopted by an Indian tribe, band, or community, in the exercise of any authority which it may posess shall, if not inconsistent with any applicable civil law of the state, be given full force and effect in the determination of civil cause of action pursuant to this section.[75]

The executive branch has likewise dealt with Alaska Native villages as Native governments where it exercises discretion. The best example of this is the Omnibus Crimes Control and Safe Streets Act which places responsibility of the Secretary of the Interior to determine those Indian tribes which perform law and order functions.[76] Under this authority, the Secretary of the Interior has recognized several Alaska Native villages as exercising the law and order functions including the employment of tribal police, establishment of tribal courts, corrections functions, and the adoption a law and order code.[77]

i) I.R.A.s. A second type of general Native government in Alaska is the "IRA Village Council." IRA stands for Indian Reorganization Act, or the Howard-Wheeler Act, which was passed in the 1930s in an effort to modernize Indian or Native American governments.[78] The Act originally applied only to the "lower 48." Its application in Alaska was somewhat unique. A 1934 version of the Indian Reorganization Act provided that only an "Indian tribe or tribes residing on the same reservation" could organize to adopt constitutions under the Act. Since few reservations existed in Alaska at the time, the Act had, in its original form, doubtful utility in Alaska. To address the special problems of Indian organization in Alaska, Congress amended the Indian Reorganization Act in May of 1936 to specifically extend its provisions to the Territory of Alaska.[79] The operation of the Indian Reorganization Act under the 1936 Alaska amendment was substantially different than the general application of the Act in the "lower 48." The adoption of the Alaska amendment marked the extension of the reservation policy to Alaska. Under the Act, Indian communities could petition the federal government for the creation of reservations.[80] Between 1934 and 1949, several IRA reserves were established. The IRA reserve policy, however, was greatly opposed by non-Native residents of Alaska and through the operation of territorial politics, lawsuits and other pressures on the Bureau of Indian Affairs, the Bureau abandoned the policy of creating IRA reserves in Alaska.[81] Even though the reservation policy was abandoned by the Bureau, the organizational efforts of the Bureau left in its wake a number of organized Native villages without reservations. Those few reservations actually formed pursuant to the Act were later revoked by the Alaskan Native Claims Settlement Act.[82] The net result of this course of events has left a number of Native governments continuing to operate under their IRA constitutions.

The legislative history accompanying passage of the Alaska amendment clearly indicates that Congress intended to recognize the Alaska Native village as analogous to a tribal organization. A House report stated:

> The proposed amendment, number 1 above, set out is necessary because of the peculiar nontribal organization under which the Alaska Indians operate. They have no tribal organizations as the term is understood generally. Many groups that would otherwise be termed tribes live in villages which are the basis of their organization.[83]

In this sense, the Alaska amendment was consistent with the general statutory purpose of the Indian Reorganization Act, which was

> To stabilize the tribal organization of Indian tribes by vesting such tribal organizations with real limited authority and by prescribing conditions which must be met by such tribal organizations.[84]

In light of these Congressional enactments and legislative history, it is clear that the Alaskan Native IRA Village Council is equivalent or at least analogous to the tribal organization found in the "lower 48." This principle is recognized under Alaskan state law and was enunciated by the Alaska Supreme Court in Ollestead v. Native Village of Tyonek.[85] In that case, the court recognized the tribal status of the Native village of Tyonek council.

It is, therefore, clear that to the extent that they exist, Alaska Native Village Councils organized under Indian Reorganization Act are recognized as local tribal government organizations.

Special Purpose Governments

While it is clear that the general purpose governments of Alaskan Natives are organized at the village level, additional special purpose Native governments exist which complicate the governmental pattern of Alaskan Natives. Most notable in this category is the Tlingit/Haida Central Council.

The specific status of Tlingit/Haida Central Council was litigated in Cogo v. the United States.[86] In that case, an individual brought a lawsuit against the Council to require inclusion in the preparation of the tribal roll under the Tlingit/Haida Settlement.[87] In that case, the council successfully claimed sovereign immunity as a tribal organization. The plaintiffs argued that the Council was not a tribal organization, and, therefore, could not assert tribal sovereign immunity. Specifically, the plaintiff pointed to the language in the Indian Self-Determination Act which seems to indicate that in Alaska, the village council was the tribal organization.[88] The court rejected the plaintiff's claim stating that the language in the Indian Self-determination Act was irrelevant for the purposes of this suit and went on to state that, although the Tlingit/Haida Central Council was certainly not a tribal organization for the purposes of the Indian Self-Determination Act, it was a tribal organization for the purposes of Tlingit/Haida Settlement. This case has clearly established a principle that special purpose tribal governments exist in Alaska, however, the exact extent of such special purpose tribal governments has not been fully delineated.

The organization of the Inupiat Community under the Indian Reorganization Act presents a similar case. Prior to the passage of ANCSA, the Inupiat Community organized several Northern Slope villages to form a regional IRA. The Department of the Interior takes a position for the purpose of the Indian Self-Determination Act, that the Inupiat Community cannot enter into contracts or accept grants without the prior approval of the affected villages.[89] In both cases, the Solicitor has depended upon the terms of the Indian Self-Determination Act itself which defined "Indian Tribe" as:

> any Indian tribe, band, nation, or other organized group or community including any Alaskan Native or regional or village corporation as defined in or established pursuant to the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act which is recognized as eligible for the special programs of services provided by the United States to Indians because of their status as Indians.[90]

In these special cases, it is unclear which is the special purpose government and which is the general purpose government. As a general rule, Indian nations have the power to determine their own form of self-government in accordance with the political and cultural history.[91] This is in accordance with the principle that "the internal affairs of the Indians remained exclusively within the jurisdiction of whatever tribal governments existed."[92] Under these circumstances, it is necessary to review an organization's status on a case-by-case basis. In light of the Cogo decision, however, it is also necessary to review any relevant specific statutory law to determine if the respective organization has a special function under federal law.

Native Quasi-Governments

In addition to the general purpose governments and the special purpose governments outlined above, there exists entities which, for the lack of a better term, may be called Native quasi-governments. These types of organizations are not governments in the formal sense, however, they exercise a variety of functions which are generally exercised by governments. In rare cases, these types of organizations have been formally recognized as exercising governmental authority.

The most notable example is illustrated in the court case State v. Aleut Corporation.[93] In that case, several Native organizations sued the Alaska Division of Lands to prevent a proposed sale of lands adjacent to their communities. In addition to various villages, the plaintiff's list included the Bristol Bay Native Corporation and the Aleut Corporation, both regional corporations formed under the terms of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act. The plaintiffs in that case sued under AS 38.05.305, which provided that the Division should give notice and consult with incorporated municipalities and other organized communities adjacent to lands proposed for sale by the state. The court recognized that ANCSA regional corporations perform a number of quasi-governmental functions in rural Alaska, however, the Court specifically held that for the purposes of the Alaska Lands Act, regional Native corporations formed under ANCSA did not possess the requisite governmental attributes to qualify them for notice and consultation under the terms of the then existing statute. Subsequent to the Alaska Supreme Court decision, the Alaska Legislature amended the Alaska Lands Act to specifically require the Division of Lands to give notice to the regional Native profit corporations prior to a proposed sale of lands by the state. In 1979, the legislature again amended Section 305 to require the Division of Lands to give notice and consult with village corporations formed under ANCSA. These notices are similar to those given to organized municipalities. In light of this legislative history, it would seem that the Alaska Legislature intended to vest in ANCSA corporations certain specific governmental powers in spite of their general corporate character.

A second type of quasi-governmental Native organization is characterized by the regional Native nonprofit corporation. The activities of these regional nonprofits substantially vary. Their activities include Self-Determination Act contracting for the administration of BIA programs; contracting from HUD for the administration of housing projects; contracting under Title VI, the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, for the operation of Native CETA programs; etc.

The basic model for the regional Native nonprofit organization was established under the terms of the Indian Self-Determination Act. That Act authorizes contracts between the BIA and Native governments or, in their place, Native organizations. Generally BIA programs in Alaska cannot be effectively administered at the village level. The sheer cost of administering such programs at the village level makes such contracting not feasible. In response to this problem, Natives have organized along regional lines to form Native organizations which can effectively contract with BIA for the operation of BIA programs within their region.[94] With the exception of the Inupiat Community and the Tlingit/Haida Central Council, none of these regional Native nonprofit organizations possess de jure governmental authority. Rather, they only provide those services normally provided by BIA or other federal or state agencies under a contract with those agencies. In this way, they are capable of performing governmental functions without the prerequisite governmental stature.

PART II

COMPARISONS OF GOVERNMENTAL AUTHORITY

The question of governmental authority is actually a question of the respective jurisdiction of the governments in question. Basically there are two types of jurisdiction: Territorial jurisdiction, i.e., the geographical area over which a government's authority extends; subject matter jursidiction, i.e., the topical areas over which a government has the authority.

A. TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION

i) Municipalities. The Alaska Constitution provides that boundaries are determined by the Local Boundary Commission.[1] The Local Boundary Commission is charged by statute with establishing boundaries upon municipal incorporation[2] and subsequent boundary alterations.[3]

The territorial jurisdiction of Alaskan cities is ill-defined by Alaskan statutes. The statutes provide for the creation of boundaries,[4] which presumably infers that boundaries constitute the jurisdictional demarcation of a city.[5] This inference is further reinforced by statutes which provide for extra-territorial jurisdiction. A municipality may provide parks, roads, trails, playgrounds, emergency medical services, cemeteries, and airports outside its municipal boundaries.[6] Additionally, cities outside boroughs may exercise extra-territorial curfew regulation.[7]

In contrast, a borough's territorial jurisdiction is clearly defined in regards to each respective power. Certain powers are "area-wide," i.e., a power of an organized borough exercised throughout the borough.[8] These include education, planning, platting, zoning, and tax assessment and collection and such additional powers acquired by the borough through transfer or referendum.[9] The borough may exercise other municipal powers as "non-area-wide powers," i.e., powers exercised only in the area outside of cities.[10] First class boroughs may exercise any municipal power as a non-area-wide power by ordinance.[11] Second class boroughs may only exercise certain enumerated powers as non-area-wide powers by ordinance. These include regulatory power over fireworks, animals, motor vehicles, snow vehicles, garbage, water pollution. A second class borough may only acquire other municipal if such powers are specified in its charter or subsequently acquired by referendum.[12]

ii) Native Government. Native Village constitutions, whether adopted under the traditional form of government or under the Indian Reorganization Act, generally fail to define the exterior boundaries of their territorial jurisdiction. It is, therefore, necessary to look to common law in order to determine the respective jurisdictions of the tribal organizations.

Generally, it is said that tribal law and custom are applicable within "Indian country."[13] This rule was not altered when Congress extended the State of Alaska's jurisdiction to Alaskan Indian country. Congress expressly reserved that Indian law and custom shall be given full force and effect in the determination of civil causes of action arising within Indian country in Alaska.[14]

This observation, however, begs the question to whether Indian country exists in Alaska, and, if so, what are the limits of Indian country in Alaska? Unfortunately, in Alaska the question whether Indian country exists is largely disputed, and supported by a vacillating history of cases.

As Felix Cohen illustrates in his early attempt to define the term Indian country, the term is a dynamic concept. Originally, the concept seems to have been born out of respect for the territorial integrity of Indian nations.[15] Later, the idea was supported in the Jacksonian policy of Indian removal to reserves, a policy designed to physically separate Indians and the immigrant culture.[16] From thence, the concept found its way into the early Indian Intercourse Acts to indicate Indian lands west of the Mississippi.[17] From this point, the courts and Congress have separately, albeit tangentially, developed the concept of "Indian country."

Congress repealed the definition section of the Act in 1834 and failed to reenact a substitute general definition of Indian country.[18] Later, however, Congress defined the term Indian country in relation to specific crimes.[19] The only current federal statutory definition of Indian country exists in 18 USC 1151 which defines Indian country as:

> (a) All land within the limits of any Indian reservation under the jurisdiction of the United States government, notwithstanding the issuance of any patent, and including rights of way running through the reservation,
> (b) All dependent Indian communities within the borders of the United States whether within the original or subsequently acquired territory thereof and whether within or without the limits of a state, or
> (c) All Indian allotments, the Indian titles to which have not been extinguished, including rights-of-way running through the same.

It should be noted that this definition of Indian country only applies to a set of federal criminal statutes contained in Title 18 of the U.S. Code. The term Indian country, however, is also found in 28 USC 1360 dealing with state civil jurisdiction over Indians. The result is that there is no general statutory definition for Indian country, nor is there a statutory definition for Indian country in the civil sense.

The resulting ambiguity from the lack of a statutory definition of Indian country led to a series of Supreme Court decisions laying down the principal common law definition of Indian country. Felix Cohen states that the first ruling by the Supreme Court on the issue came in Bates v. Clark,[20] which stated in essence that:

> "It follows from this that all the country described by the Act of 1834 is Indian country, remains Indian country so long as the Indians retain their original title to the soil, and ceases to be Indian country when ever they lose that title, in the absence of any different provision by treaty or act of Congress.'

This basic principle was expanded in Donnelly v. U.S.,[21] where the Court stated that executive order reservations constituted Indian country even though the respective band did not possess original title to the land in question.

Of more importance to the Alaskan situation however, was the case U.S. v. Sandoval,[22] which held that Pueblo lands not held in trust by the United States, but owned in fee simple by a Native community under a Spanish land grant, was in fact Indian country. In his treatise on the federal-Indian relationship, David Case pointed out that the Sandoval doctrine presents a clear analogy to the Alaskan situation. Like the New Mexico pueblos, Alaska Native communities own land in fee simple through their Native corporations. In the Sandoval case, the court looked to the statutory definition embodied in 18 USC 1151 and held that the Pueblos of New Mexico were clearly "dependent communities" within this definition of Indian country. In a similar case, U.S. v. Chavez,[23] the Court defined Indian country as "any unceded lands owned or occupied by an Indian nation or tribe of Indians." If these Court cases are to be literally applied to the Alaska situation, it is clear that Indian country does exist in Alaska. However, the matter has never truly been settled.

The modern federal courts have only addressed the question whether Indian country exists in Alaska on three occasions. In the first case, In re McCord,[24] the Court heard a petition in a proceeding for a writ of habeas corpus arising from a conviction for statutory rape occurring upon the Tyonek Indian Reserve. In that case, the Court followed the Donnelly decision and held that the executive order reservation was in fact Indian country which denied state jurisdiction to prosecute the defendant in the case. The second major case following McCord by one year, was U.S. v. Booth.[25] In that case, the court held that the Metlakatla Indian Reservation did not constitute Indian country because the reservation was not a "reservation in the traditional sense." The Court further distinguished the case from McCord by noting the different conditions and history behind the Metlakatla Reservation. The decision in the McCord case, however, led to a general public outcry of concern over the lack of law and order within Indian country in Alaska. Alerted to this apparent gap in jurisdiction, Congress passed an amendment to PL 83-280 (P.L. 280) including Alaska among those states where mandatory state jurisdiction extended over Indian country within the borders of the state.[26] The legislative history behind this action clearly indicates that the Congress reacted to the holding in the McCord case, and indicates that Congress clearly desired to overrule and reverse the precedents set by that case.[27] If the application of PL 280 to Alaska was a congressional reaction to McCord, rather than Booth, it is safe to assume that the holding in McCord was a correct statement of the legal crisis prior to the application of PL 280 to Alaska. That Act specifically states that the State of Alaska shall have jurisdiction over Indian country within its borders. It therefore seems incredible to assert that Indian country does not exist in Alaska.

But the doctrinal confusion regarding the existence of Indian country in Alaska has continued. This is primarily due to the nature of the cases in which the claim of Indian country arises. For example, in the People of South Naknek v. Bristol Bay Borough,[28] the plaintiffs claimed a tax exemption for Native townsites within the borough by claiming that the townsites were Indian country and therefore exempt from state taxation. The court firmly refused to attempt an answer as to whether or not the land in question was in fact Indian country. The Court, however, noted the historical confusion over the question of Indian country in Alaska. The Court blamed much of this confusion on "one of the principal Indian jurisdictional cases that has emerged from Alaska," specifically, the Organized Village of Kake v. Egan.[29] Like Naknek, the Kake case arose out of a claim denying state jurisdiction. It is important to note, however, that Kake did not deal with the question of Indian country per se, but addressed a narrower question of whether state law applied to off-reservation Indians. Kake, like Naknek, did not address the question whether Indian country exists in Alaska.

It should be noted that the mere existence of Indian country and consequent tribal jurisdiction is not an exclusive claim to jurisdiction and does not exclude state criminal and civil jurisdiction. As noted earlier, Alaska is subject to the mandatory provisions of PL 280 which authorized the extension of state jurisdiction over Indian country. As a general rule, however, the application of PL 280 does not create exclusive state jurisdiction nor does it substantially affect tribal jurisdiction. In Bryan v. Itasca County,[30] the Court stated that:

> . . . nothing in its [PL 280] legislative history remotely suggests that Congress meant the Act's extension of civil jurisdiction to states would result in the undermining or destruction of such tribal governments as did exist and a conversion of the affected tribes into little more than private voluntary organizations.[31]

In reaching this conclusion, the court noted that 28 USC Section 1360(c) provided for full force and effect of any tribal ordinances or customs heretofore or hereafter adopted by an Indian tribe if not inconsistent with any applicable civil laws of the state. In light of these cases, it would seem that territorial jurisdiction over those areas which can be determined to be Indian country, would seem to be concurrent between the state and the tribe.

There remains, however, substantial concern that the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act placed in question the existence of Indian country in Alaska. Specifically, concern centers around Section 19 of the Act, which revoked existing reservations in Alaska. The supporters of this theory contend that, when the reservations were revoked, the territorial jurisdictions of the respective villages were destroyed. The argument, however, rests upon the proposition that Indian country is dependent upon the existence of reservations. The Supreme Court has clearly announced that there is nothing magic in the term "reservation."[32] Other forms of Indian country exist in addition to reservations. It is also clear that tribal jurisdiction is not dependent upon federal ownership of the territory in question.

The Pueblo cases arising out of the New Mexico situation clearly demonstrate these principles. In the Chavez case, Indian country was defined as "any unceded land owned or occupied by an Indian nation or tribe of Indians." It is not necessary to establish clear unequivocal boundaries. Rather, it is only necessary that the lands in question are occupied by "distinctly Indian communities" recognized and treated by the government as dependent communities entitled to its protection.[33] Applying this rule to Post-ANCSA Alaska it is quite easy to identify those villages in rural Alaska which continue to be "distinctly Native communities." Such communities retain substantial cultural, social, and economic characteristics identifiable as Native and therefore these villages clearly fall within the definition of a dependent Indian community enunciated in the Chevez decision. Additionally, it must be recognized that ANCSA clarified continued Native title to certain lands within the state. Under the terms of the Act, Alaskan Native aboriginal claims to the land were extinguished.[34] In compensation for the extinguishment of such claims, Alaska Native villages were allowed to select and receive substantial amounts of land surrounding the villages.[35] The main effect of this act was to continue Native occupancy and ownership of a substantial amount of land surrounding Native communities. Thus those lands selected and ultimately conveyed to the village corporations clearly constituted "unceded lands owned and occupied" by the Native villages concerned. Again, the definition of Indian country as specified in the Chavez case is clearly met. As noted earlier, the fact that such lands were conveyed in fee simple was ruled irrelevant in the Sandoval case.

This view is consistent with a recent solicitor's opinion which stated that,

> The continued existence of Indian country in Alaska, in our view, does not conflict with the Settlement Act, and consequently, that Act should not be construed to have abolished Indian country or the possibility that Native villages might qualify as "dependent Indian communities."[36]

The opinion then considered a number of factors including whether the Native village was modern and urban in character, a high percentage of Native residents, the village's elibiligy to receive federal services, and the land tenure pattern, and concluded that,

> In our view, these factors are sufficient to support presumption that the area (Allakaket) is a dependent Indian community and, therefore, Indian country for the purposes of the liquor laws.[37]

Of course, this does not address the substantial concern which may arise upon subsequent land transfers by the respective Native

communities. The problem presents itself in two distinct situations. First, what is the status of lands originally selected by a village corporation and then conveyed by the corporation to non-Natives? Secondly, what is the status of lands subsequently acquired by the Native village?

The basic rule governing subsequently acquired Indian lands and their respective status as Indian country was laid down in United States v. McGowan.[38] In that case, the lands in question were lands owned by the United States and purchased out of funds appropriated by Congress for this purpose. The ruling that such lands were in fact Indian country relied on the role of the government in the establishment of the colony. The role of the federal government in the creation of the Reno Colony is substantially analagous to the role of the federal government in the identification and conveyance of lands received under the terms of ANCSA. Subsequent purchases of private land by Alaskan Native villages in fee simple would by definition not involve the federal government. Under the rationale of McGowan, the diminished federal role in the identification of Indian lands would substantially impact the status of those lands under the McGowan test. Subsequently, acquired land which would not involve federal government participation in their acquisition would not necessarily extend village jurisdiction.

The above type of subsequent acquisition, however, should be sharply contrasted from acquisitions authorized under the Indian Reorganization Act.[39] Lands acquired in this manner would fall under the black letter rule of McGowan, so that lands subsequently acquired pursuant to the terms of the Indian Reorganization Act would clearly extend village jurisdiction to those lands.

The possibility that a village might sell or otherwise dispose of village lands to nonmembers of the community presents a substantially different problem. In the case Seymour v. Superintendent,[40] the United States Supreme Court held that lands conveyed to non-Indians within the exterior boundaries of a former reservation did not lose the character of Indian country. This rests upon the theory that once Congress has set aside certain lands for the use and occupancy of Indians, such use and occupancy shall not be disturbed. Broadly applying this principle to Alaskan Native villages, it would seem that lands within the Alaskan Native village selections authorized under the terms of ANCSA, would continue to be Indian country in spite of subsequent conveyance of such lands to non-Indians by the village.[41] In contrast to these decisions, however, is the decision in DeCoteau v. District County Court.[42] In that case, the Court held that the Lake Traverse Indian Reservation in South Dakota was terminated and returned to the public domain and, hence, Indian country on the Lake Traverse reservation ceased to exist on this reservation. The Court in DeCoteau noted that the Act in question was a ratification of a prior negotiated agreement which was fully intended to terminate the reservation. By the terms of the agreement itself, the Indians would "cede, sell, and relinquish, and convey" all the remaining land in the reservation. The court distinguished Matz and Seymour as being cases involving unilateral Congressional action rather than possession or sale of land by the Indians. From these two lines of cases it is unclear whether that a sale of Indian lands by a village would result in the relinquishment of tribal jurisdiction over those lands.

iii) Summary Comparison. In summary, it seems clear that the territorial jurisdiction of state municipal governments are basically defined in terms of their boundaries. Borough's territorial jurisdiction may be limited in regards to a number of powers by the existence of cities within its boundaries. Finally, all municipalities may exercise extra-territorial jurisdiction in respect to certain enumerated powers. The procedure for enlarging or diminishing boundaries is statutorily prescribed.

In contrast, a Native village government's territorial jurisdiction is defined in reference to the village's "Indian country." It is most likely that a village's Indian country is coextensive with lands received under ANCSA, and any other lands subsequently acquired with federal participation. It is unclear whether village's Indian country is diminished through unilateral sale or cession of village lands.

B. PERSONAL JURISDICTION

In contrast to a municipal government, tribal government has very limited personal jurisdiction. It is generally assumed that personal jurisdiction of a municipality extends to all or most individuals within its territorial jurisdiction. This may depend upon the subject matter involved (see below). A tribe's jurisdiction is generally linked to its membership. The U.S. Supreme Court enunciated the basic principles of tribal personal jurisdiction in the companion cases, Oliphant v. Suquamish[43] and U.S. v. Wheeler.[44] In Oliphant, the Suquamish tribe attempted to enforce a local traffic ordinance against a nontribal member. In its decision, however, the Court denied the tribe's claim to jurisdiction over nonmembers. In Wheeler, however, the Court upheld the Navajo Reservation's claim to enforcement jurisdiction over tribal members.

There are basically two ways to interpret the meaning of these cases. In the broad sense, the Oliphant decision can be interpreted as denying tribal jurisdiction over non-members. It is important to note, however, that the Court in Oliphant did not overrule the holding in U.S. v. Mazurie.[45] In that case, the Court upheld the extension of tribal liquor ordinances over non-members of the tribe. Although the cases seem irreconcilable at first glance, there was a substantial difference between these two cases. In Mazurie, the Court upheld the authority of the tribe to prescribe the ordinance and stated that such legislative acts extend and apply to nontribal individuals. The actual enforcement mechanism in the Mazurie case were federal authorities, i.e., the federal courts. In contrast, the tribe in Oliphant was attempting to enforce tribal ordinances through tribal courts. The only way these two cases can be reconciled is to recognize that tribal ordinances extend to non-members but that tribes lack the authority to enforce such ordinances against non-members. The result is that tribes must seek alternative enforcement mechanisms against nontribal members, i.e., the state or federal courts. As noted in Bryan v. Itasca, federal courts are not available in a PL 280 state such as Alaska since federal jurisdiction has generally been withdrawn. Thus, in Alaska the state courts are the only forum for the enforcement of most tribal ordinances against non-members.

As noted above, "PL 280" requires the state to give "full force and effect" to valid tribal ordinances in civil cases.[46] This supports the notion that a village would have prescriptive jurisdiction over non-tribal members. It also clarifies that state enforcement of tribal ordinances is clearly required by federal law in civil matters.

There remains, of course, the question of criminal cases. PL 280 has no comparable requirement for "full force and effect" of tribal ordinances in criminal cases. There exists, however, two lines of authority on this issue. Some states have extended "full faith and credit" to tribal ordinances by holding that a tribe is a "territory" under 28 USC 1738.[47] On the other hand, many states have refused full faith and credit, but have extended "comity" to tribal ordinances.[48] The issue remains unresolved.[49]

C. SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION

Subject matter jurisdiction refers to the types of issues with which a government may concern itself. Often subject matter jurisdiction is referred to as the "powers" of a government. Title 29 of the Alaska Statutes enunciates, in a comprehensive manner, the powers of state chartered local governments. In contrast, there exists no similar comprehensive and authoritative exposition of tribal powers. Understanding tribal powers requires a thorough review of a substantial body of federal and international common law. Finally, there exists a less formidable body of federal common law governing the interaction of these respective jurisdictions.

1) Concurrent Jurisdiction

There are two basic principals governing the interaction between municipal and tribal governments.

The first principle was enunciated by the United States Supreme Court in Williams v. Lee.[50] In that case, the United States Supreme Court held that states have jurisdiction over Indians except where such state jurisdiction infringes upon tribal self-government. This test was specifically applied to Alaska in Organized Village of Kake v. Egan.[51] In that case, the Court analyzed the development of this principle and stated:

> "these decisions indicate that even on reservations, state laws may be applied to Indians unless such application would interfere with reservations, self-government, or impair a right granted or reserved by federal law."

In explaining these lines of decisions, the Supreme Court further stated that, "it must be remembered that the Courts in applying the Williams test, have dealt principally with situations involving non-Indians."[52] In these situations, both the tribe and state fairly claim an interest in asserting jurisdiction. The Williams test was designed to resolve this conflict by providing that the state could protect its interest in its non-Native citizens up to the point where tribal self-government would be affected.[53] In fulfillment of this policy, cases arising between tribal members fell within the exclusive interest of the tribal government.

The second major principle is a modification of the above rule required by the fact that Alaska is governed by the operation of Public P.L. 280.[54] Generally, this law confers upon the state criminal and civil jurisdiction to adjudicate matters between Natives within Indian country. It is important, however, to understand the parameters of PL 280 as recently defined by the courts. The courts have generally attempted to limit the effect of PL 280 because of the devastating impact the law has had on tribal governments."[52] In Brian v. Itasca County, the U.S. Supreme Court in commenting on PL 280 stated:

> "nothing in this legislative history remotely suggest that Congress meant the acts extension of civil jurisdiction to the states should result in the undermining or destruction of such tribal governments as did exist in a conversion of the affected tribes in the little more than "private volunteer organizations," a possible result if tribal governments and reservation Indians were subordinated to full panoply of civil regulatory powers, including taxation of state and local governments. The act itself refutes such an inference: There is notably absent any conferral of state jurisdiction of the tribes themselves and Section 4 C, 28 U.S. C Section 1360(C) (28 U.S. CS Section 1360 (C)), providing for the "full force in effect" of any tribal ordinances or custums "heretofore or hereafter adopted by An Indian Tribe...if not inconsistent with any applicable civil laws of the state, contemplates the continuing vitality of tribal government."[56]

The court went on in a footnote to further explain this policy of promoting Native governments. In a comment of particular importance to Alaska, the court stated:

"the suggestion is that since tribal governments are disabled under many state laws from incorporating as local units of government, general regulatory control might relegate tribal governments to a level below that of counties and municipalities, thus essentially destroying them, particularly if they might raise revenue only after the tax base had been filtered through many governmental layers of taxation. Present federal policy appears to be returning to a focus upon strenghthening tribal government...and the Court of Appeals of the Ninth Curcuit has impressed the view that courts are not obliged in ambiguous instances to strain to implement an assimilationist policy Congress has now rejected, particularly, where to do so will interfere with the present Congressional approach to what is after all an ongoing relationship."[57]

This general policy, favoring the strengthening of tribal governments has two effects.

First, PL 280 does not confer upon a state general civil regulatory control over Indian country.[58] Although the Supreme Court has failed to fully define what the scope of "regulatory" means, it is clear that taxation of personal property on trust land,[59] zoning authority,[60] and outdoor advertizing61 in Indian country are beyond the state's authority.

The second effect of Brian v. Itasca was that PL 280 only made applicable to Indian country those state laws which "had a general applicability throughout the state." In short, this general principle denies the authority of local governments to exercise authority over Indian country since their authority does not extend throughout the state.[62] This basic principle, if applied in Alaska, could have a crippling effect on rural Alaskan municipal governments. The result would be the creation of local governments chartered under state law whose authority only extended over non-Indians. The end result would be the creation of parallel local government units incapable of exercising jurisdiction over the respective persons subject to the other local government's personal jurisdiction.

2) Local Government Powers.

The basic rule regarding the powers of a tribal government is that such powers are not in general delegated powers granted by Congress, but rather are inherent powers of a limited sovereignty which has never been extinguished.[63] This has recently been compared with the concept of home rule under Alaska state law.[64]

In contrast, Alaskan municipalities are of two types. A home rule municipality, like an Indian tribe possesses all local government powers not reserved from it by state law.[65] A general law municipality possesses powers delegated to it by state law.[66] Basically, general municipalities exercise four types of powers.

A general law municipality possesses "general powers" related to the municipal corporate identity. These powers include the following powers: be sued; employ municipal officers and officials; levy taxes and special assessments; enforce ordinances; prescribe penalties for violations; acquire manage, control, use, and dispose of personal and real property; promote legislation for the municipality; expend funds for community purposes; and borrow money and issue evidence of undebtedness.[67] By statute, all municipalities possess the unilateral authority to exercise these powers.

Second, general law municipalities "regulatory powers," which relate to: public rights-of-way facilities to services, traffic and general transportation including buses, taxis, etc., animal control, sales of goods, foods, and alcoholic beverages, dangerous insect and rodent control, recreational devices, building codes, public nuisance abatement, garbage & solid waste collection, water and air pollution, licensing of day-care facilities, police powers, or other general health safety and well-being welfare functions.[68]

As a general rule, cities possess the unilateral authority to exercise the regulatory powers. Boroughs, however, are subject to a narrower grant of authority depending on whether the power is area-wide or non-area-wide (see Part II (i) above).

Third, Alaska Statutes outline a number of municipal facilities and services which general law municipalities may provide. These include services and facilities relating to streets and sidewalks, sewage treatment facilities, harbors, flood control, health and hospital services, cemeteries, police and jail services, cold storage, telephone, lights, power, heat, water, transportation, community centers, libraries, recreation facilities, airport facilities, garbage facilities, fire protection, parking, urban renewable, consumer protection, and historical sites, buildings and monuments.[69] Any city may exercise the powers necessary to provide these facilities, however, boroughs must assume the powers to provide these facilities and services in a like manner required for the exercise of regulatory powers. Third class boroughs are not specifically authorized to provide such facilities and services.

Fourth, general law municipalities are authorized to exercise what are commonly called area-wide powers, i.e., education, and planting, platting, and zoning authority. Generally, first and second class boroughs have the statutory authority to unilaterally provide exercise such powers on an area-wide basis.[70] All third class boroughs may provide educational services on an area-wide basis and may, upon voter approval, exercise planning and zoning authority. As a rule, cities do not exercise such powers except when they are located outside borough boundaries.[71]

An exhaustive comparison of these powers is certainly beyond the scope of this project, however, it is possible to select areas for special consideration.

i) Police Powers. While municipalities possess police powers,[72] tribes possess the power to regulate the conduct of members.[73] The federal government has withdrawn tribal jurisdiction over most felony crimes by enactment of the Major Crimes Act,[74] and Assimilative Crimes Act.[75] Both the tribe and the municipality are limited from prescribing a punishment for violation of an ordinance in excess of $500 and/or thirty (30) days in jail.[76]

Municipalities are prevented from operating "courts" since the Alaska Constitution provides for an integrated court system under state government.[77] This constitutional reservation of power to the state, however, does not prevent municipalities from operating "administrative tribunals" capable of enforcing ordinances.[78] Such tribunals, however, are subject to the same constitutional guarantees protecting the rights of the accused, where the ordinance provides for the regulation of acting which traditionally connotes criminality.[79]

In contrast to municipalities, Native governments possess the inherent power to create courts to enforce their ordinances.[80] While tribal courts are not generally subject to the individual guarantees of the Bill of Rights,[81] they are subject to the guarantees of the Indian Civil Rights Act of 1968,[82] which applies the constitutional protections of the Bill of Rights to Indian governments.

ii) Planning. Both tribes and municipalities possess planning authority. Alaska statutes specifically provide for municipal planning authority. Within organized boroughs, planning is an area-wide function of the borough.[83] Of course, the borough may also delegate such powers to a city within its borders.[84] Outside organized boroughs, first class cities are required, and second class cities may exercise planning powers.[85] In unorganized areas of the state, planning authority rests with the Department of Natural Resources.[86]

Tribal planning authority is a power retained by tribes in the absence of contrary federal law. This authority is already expressly recognized by the state. While the Court in State v. Aleut Corp.,[87]

held that ANCSA regional corporations lacked governmental planning authority so as to require the State Division of Lands to give notice of pending land actions, the Court also held that traditionally organized Native villages constituted local authorized planning agencies.[88]

While both entities enjoy substantially similar planning authority, the entities implement this authority in substantially different ways. Muncipalities have authority to directly implement their plans through zoning, platting,[89] and operation and licensing. The municipality, however, is not able to direct state agencies to comply with local plans. For example, the prior A.S. 29.33.090(d) required certain state land management programs to comply with municipal plans. This was repealed.[90]

Municipalities also may implement their plans through its licensing power over vehicles, animals, day care facilities, etc.[91]

A tribe's most potent implementation tool is its recognized authority to license. For example, in U.S. v. Mazurie,[92] the Supreme Court upheld a tribe's right to license bars owned by non-Natives on fee simple land within Indian country. Secondly, a village may regulate the nature of member's ownership rights in property.[93] By defining members property rights, a tribe can restrict uses of property which are delitereious. Finally, there is some authority to believe that a Native village government may exercise zoning authority over Native land. In Santa Rosa Band of Indians v. Kings County,[94] the Court struck down local zoning ordinances holding that "the extension of local jurisdiction is inconsistent with tribal self-determination and autonomy."[95] This infers, of course, that the local government invaded a power to zone reserved to the tribe.

iii) Taxation. The right of a Native government to tax is a retained sovereign power.[96] The extent of this power is almost wholly uncertain, since few Native governments exercise this power. The courst, however, have upheld tribal taxes on business,[97] occupations,[98] or to accompany tribal permits,[99] regardless of whether the tax was levied against members or non-members.

The taxing powers of municipalities are more clearly defined. They may levy sales and use taxes,[100] and property taxes.[101] These taxing powers are subject to a substantial number of exemptions and limitations.[102]

Conclusion. While the municipalities and tribes do not have co-extensive powers, they have many similar areas of concern where their powers overlap. It should be remembered that the tribal organization is a governmental unit with broader areas of concern and responsibility than the municipality. For example, tribal powers include regulation of property rights, marital relations, and child custody.[103] Tribes provide employment, welfare, economic development, child protection, and various other services generally felt to be beyond the scope of local government. As local government in Alaska develops along the path of decentralization envisioned by the framers, it is likely that municipal governments will also address these subject areas. In any case, it is clear that village and municipal government are not the same thing. It is also evident that they are closer than commonly perceived.

PART III

SUGGESTIONS TO INCLUDE NATIVE VILLAGE GOVERNMENTS WITHIN THE ALASKAN LOCAL GOVERNMENT SYSTEM

The decision to allow inclusion of Native village government within the state local government is, of course, a policy issue. Several factors must be considered in making this decision. First is the question whether such action is consistent with the Alaska Constitution. Second, the actions of other states must be considered. Thirdly, the backdrop of federal law needs to be considered. Finally, the state interest in non-Native citizens needs to be addressed.

A. THE CONSTITUTION

Substantial concern exists as to whether the proposed action is consistent with the Alaska Constitution. The proposal raises two issues. First, the proposal must be analyzed to determine whether it is consistent with the constitutional scheme for local government. The local government committee of the Constitutional Convention articulated five basic principles with which the proposal may be compared, i.e., self-government, unified system, prevention of overlapping tax authorities, flexibility, and state interest. Additionally, the proposal raises a question whether it is consistent with the equal protection clause of the Alaska Constitution.

1. Self-government. Maximum local control over local government was a primary goal of the framers. This policy is specifically enunciated in Section 1 of Article 10 of the Constitution which provides that, "the purpose of this Article is to provide for maximum local self-government..." This concern is reflected in other provisions of Article 10. For example, Section 6 provides that the legislature shall provide for the performance of services that it deems necessary and advisable in the unorganized boroughs "allowing for maximum local participation and responsibility." (emphasis added) Section 9 provides that home rule charters of first-class municipalities shall be approved by popular election. This policy favoring local self-government in municipal matter is consistent with federal policy favoring self-determination of Indian tribes. Fundamental to self-government/self-determination, is the right of people to determine what form their government shall take and to establish rules and regulations regarding the management and operation of that government. For a variety of reasons, several Alaskan Native villages have failed to organize as second-class city under the Alaska state law. The prefer rather to organize themselves exclusively as Alaska Native villages. In many cases, such organization reflects a community decision to organize a local government which best reflects the cultural and social character of the respective community. Under this rationale, the state should encourage communities to organize themselves under any authorized governmental form which best represents the respective communities' social, cultural and economic pattern. The inclusion of Native governments within the system of Alaska state local government promotes this policy. This action would broaden the number of local options available to communities desiring to organize, thereby leaving greater control at the local level.

2. Integrated local government system. The framers of the Alaskan Constitution desired to create a single system of local government within Alaska. As noted by this study, however, two parallel systems of local government exist in Alaska, i.e., state chartered municipalities and tribal government. The quality and quantity of interaction between these two types of government varies from community to community. The quality and quantity of possible interaction ranges from substantial cooperative efforts to substantial opposition. Often times coordination between governments is merely a function of interlocking office holders. Where the Native council and the city council are substantially the same, the respective governmental efforts are highly coordinated. In contrast, where the councils are not interlocked there is little coordination and counterproductive efforts often result. State and federal programs often depend on the existence of local cooperation. Nonrecognition of Native governments is a impediment to this local cooperation.

Non-recognition problems also result where a community is exclusively organized as a Native village government. Such communities are not immuned from the same problems which plaque communities organized as municipalities. Where the municipality may draw on the resources of the state to help address such problems, the Native village encounters greater reluctance by the state to render equal assistance. The obvious solution to this problem is for the community to organize as a municipality. The community would in fact only trade problems--i.e., the community would trade a reluctance on part of the state to render assistance in exchange for the duplicity and confusion which results from parallel governments.

The inclusion of the Native government within the local government system, therefore, would further state policy favoring a unified local government system. It would promote cooperation where parallel governments exist and it would alleviate the necessity of creating parallel local governments where none exist now.

3. Prevention of overlapping taxing and authorities. As noted above, the framers of the Alaska Constitution specifically intended to eliminate overlapping tax authorities and promote physical integration within local government. For this reason, Article 10, Section 2, specifies that cities and boroughs are the only local governments authorized to tax under the Alaska Constitution. As noted above, however, this plan is somewhat frustrated by the existence of Native government which possess authority to levy taxes and dues on members and non-members. Additionally, the eligibility of Native villages to receive intergovernmental revenue transfers frustrates the state's objective to facilitate fiscal integration of local government. This lack of fiscal integration within the community leads to a number of problems including duplicate accounting systems, redundant and excessive administrative costs and, in some cases, program duplication. The framers had hoped to avoid such problems in adopting a policy favoring fiscal integration. The inclusion of Native governments within the local government system will help avoid these inefficient fiscal management systems.

4. Flexibility. Throughout the Constitutional floor debates, the drafters of Article 10 emphasized their desire to provide a "framework" for local government which would be flexible enough to meet community demands throughout a highly pluralistic state such as Alaska. Native governments represent a flexible accommodation to the need for pluralistic representation in local government. It, therefore, follows that the inclusion of such governments fulfill a constitutional policy favoring flexibility in Alaskan local government.

5. State interest. As noted above, the framers of the Alaska Constitution felt that strong local government was a mechanism to facilitate the decentralization of state government. It was fully intended that strong local government could perform traditional state functions much better than a centralized government structure. This plan, however, is dependent on the existence of local government. Since the state does not recognize Native governments, these local mechanisms are unavailable to the state. The inclusion of Native governments within the state system of local government makes available to the State existing government entities through which the State may operate. In this sense, the Native government can serve as a conduit for the provision of state services. In a limited sense, the state has already adopted this policy. For example, in the Coastal Zone Management Act, the Rural Development Act, the Municipal Trust Land (14c) Program, the Community Legal Assistance Program, the Community Miscellaneous Assistance Program and various state contracting programs utilize Native government to administer and otherwise implement these programs which require substantial community participation. The general inclusion of Native governments within the local government system of the State of Alaska will make available to the state a valuable local instrument.

6. Equal Protection. It is unfortunate that the Alaska Constitutional Convention failed to address the issue of Native local governments. In the heady atmosphere of the convention, the delegates seemed to assume that the state mechanism would be comprehensive. The record fails to indicate that the convention ever considered that viable Native governments would continue. In this vacuum it is difficult to analyze the constitutionality of state legislation which seeks inclusion of Native government in the local government system. Generally, however, there exists concerns whether such legislation would violate the equal protection clause of the Alaska Constitution.[2] Since this is a novel question in Alaska, we must look to sister states for guidance.

The Supreme Court of Minnesota was forced to deal with the issue in State v. Forge.[3] In that case, non-Indians sought to challenge the constitutionality of a compact between the state and the Chippewa Tribe over ricing and fishing. The state legislation vested certain rights in members of the Chippewa tribe that did not extend to state citizens in general. The court upheld the statutes in the face of a challenge based on the equal protection guarantees of the Minnesota Constitution.

In deciding that the state action did not violate the state constitutional guarantee of equal protection, the Court noted that the compact related to the reconciliation of claims between the state and the Indian tribes. As such, the classifications made by the state law rationally related to the competing claims of the state and the tribes.[4] It is important to note that the court's finding was based upon Indian treaty rights, which could not be used as a basis for Alaskan legislation. Nevertheless, the Court noted that:

> Even in the absence of treaty rights, the United States Supreme Court has frequently upheld legislation that singles out Indians for particular and special treatment.[5]

Subsequent to State v. Forge, the United States Supreme Court dealt with the issue directly in United States v. Antelope.[6] In that case, Antelope was tried for murder under the Major Crimes Act. The defendant argued correctly that if he were not an Indian, he would have been charged under the Assimulative Crimes Act for manslaughter. The court held that the statute did not create an impermissible racial classification since the constitution specifically authorizes particular and special treatment of Indians.[7]

There is one distinction, however, which may distinguish Alaska's and Minnesota's Constitution. The standards of the equal protection clause under the Minnesota Constitution are synonymous with the U.S. Constitution's equal protection clause.[8] In contrast, however, the standards of protection under Alaska's equal protection clause is not synonymous with that of the U.S. Constitution.[9] Absent an express ruling to the contrary, however, the Minnesota interpretation is probably an accurate indicator of the Alaskan position.

B. OTHER STATES

Other states have attempted to establish direct tribal-state relations in one of two basic ways - 1) incorporation, or 2) recognition and compact.

1) Incorporation. Incorporation is the formation of a unit of local government. As noted above, such incorporation may result in the formation of either a general or special purpose government. Theoretically, it is possible to incorporate Native governments under state law. In Bryan v. Itasca, the court stated that one reason it was reluctant to extend local government jurisdiction over Native communities was the fact that many states did not allow incorporation of Native government under state law.[10] This implies, of course, that it is possible for a state to allow such incorporation if it removes its self-imposed prohibitions.

As noted above, this has been attempted twice in Alaska's past. Several current second class cities were originally incorporated under the 1957 Village Incorporation Act. The villages lost their village status through the 1972 municipal code revision.[11] In general, the attributes of tribal self-government are no longer present, so that neither the people, the state, nor the federal government recognize these governments as tribal entities.

Direct state incorporation of general purpose Native governments is not common. There are, however, a few instances of such state action.

One example is New Mexico, which provides for the incorporation of Peubleo Indian communities.[12] The courts, however, have ruled that the pueblo's did not gain any powers, rights or duties under this statue, but rather their powers stem from their authority as Indian tribes.[13]

In contrast, Maine has recently enacted the Maine Indian Claims Settlement Act[14] which does not incorporate the tribal enities, but rather delegates to them "all the rights, privileges, powers and immunities" of a state municipality.[15] This includes the authority to enact ordinances, collect taxes and provide general services like any municipality. Conversely, the tribe is subject to all duties, obligations, liabilities and limitations of a municipality in the operation of municipal authority. A major exception is the internal organization of the tribes.

The tribes' jurisdiction extend over "Indian territory" as defined by the Act, which includes newly created reservations (akin to townsites) and surrounding lands conveyed in fee simple to the new Native corporations.[16] As enities possessing municipal authority, the tribal councils have jurisdiction to prescribe criminal and civil ordinances over non-Natives, but may only judicially enforce certain ordinances against members and handle small claims matters between members.[17] The state courts have jurisdiction to hear all other cases.[18] Law enforcement is handled through a cross-deputization of tribal and state police.[19]

The state has also sought to protect nonmember's rights by making municipal authority dependent upon nondiscriminatory delivery of services and guaranteeing enfranchisement in county, state and federal elections.[20]

In considering the Maine Settlement, two major points must be made. First, the Main Settlement was prompted by litigation over both the land claims and governmental claims of the Maine Indians. By comparison, the Alaska Settlement only addressed land claims, and left unresolved the governmental claims of the Alaskan Native people. This oversight is generally attributable to the common perception of P.L.-280 in the pre-ANSCA period. It must be remembered that ANCSA preceded Bryan v. Itasca,[21] which was decided in 1976. Prior to 1976, the general feeling was that P.L. 280 replaced tribal authority. The court in Bryan v. Itasca, however, clearly rejected this analysis, and reasserted that P.L.-280 merely resulted in concurrent state/tribal jurisdiction.

Secondly, except of the delegation of municipal powers, the Maine Settlement Act does not substantially change the respective authority of the state and tribes. Generally, the Act serves as a restatement of the law as currently understood. Thus, the Maine statutory scheme may serve as a useful model for incorporation of general purpose Native government under a state's authority.

In contrast to general purpose incorporation, some states have sought to declare Indian tribes as special purpose governments. For example, Florida, like Connecticut, has established a state reservations which in effect is an extension of a federal Seminole reservation.[22] In addition, however, the state has declared the whole Seminole Reservation (both federal and state portions) and the Miccosukee Reservation as "special improvement districts."[23] While the state recognizes that the tribes may regulate their members and lands as other tribes,[24] the state law provides that the tribal councils (organized as I.R.A.s) shall be the governing body of the districts, and are granted law enforcement, housing, and health powers, along with providing a variety of state services.[25]

It is interesting to note, that Florida is not the only state which has set up state Indian reservations. Connecticut has also established state reservations.[26] Management of the reservations is through an Indian Affairs Council and tribal councils, both of which have state regulatory powers over the reservation.[27] The State Administrative Procedure Act specifically applies to regulatory decisions of the councils. Texas also has authorized state Indian reservations.[28] Furthermore, Texas has extended state recognition of a federally nonrecognized tribe, and committed the state to seek federal recognition.[29] Even more unique than this, Texas has delegated bonding authority to tribal councils.[30] Under state law, lands held in trust by the state and the rents, royalties, revenue and income from such lands, may be pledged to back the bonds.[31]

While the above states have attempted various types of incorporation, many states have taken the intermediate step of creating State Commissions on Indian Affairs.[32] A fairly representative example is Minnesota which created an Indian Affairs Board.[33] While the tribes are not brought within state government directly, the board is a state commission comprised of various state commissioners, state legislators, and tribal officials. The commission does not attempt to exercise governmental authority over tribes. Rather it acts as a liaison between state and tribal service programs.

Simiarly, in California, state law authorizes the formation of school districts within Indian reservations.[34] Unlike Florida, either the tribal governing body or an independently selected body is the governing body of such a district.

2) Recognition and Compact. Recognition is a concept borrowed from international law. It is the process whereby one government acknowledges the authority of another government. It is more than taking note of a mere fact. It is the process whereby two governments seek to establish intergovernmental relations. There are two types of recognition - recognition of the community and recognition of the government. Recognition of the community is acknowledgement that the community is a legal enity capable of being organized under an independent and effective government.[35] Recognition of the government is acknowledgement that an individual or body of individuals act as the government for the community.[36]

The use of the concept of recognition is quite useful in the context of Native governments since the state is not attempting to create a racially defined institution under its own authority. Rather the State is acknowledging the existence of the Native communities and governments. Thus, the Native government gains no authority from the State, but merely enters into cooperative relations under its existing authority.

States typically implement recognition of Native governments in one of two ways. Either a state may extend general purpose recognition to Native governments, and provide for a systematic procedure for entering into compacts, or the state may adopt an incremental policy of limited recognition for specified purposes.

The Interlocal Cooperation legislation in Nevada,[37] Washington[38] and South Dakota[39] are good examples of legislation which reflect this first policy. Typically, these statutes allow state and local governments to enter into agreements providing for the joint exercise of powers, procedures for entering into such agreements, and financing of joint programs. In the above three states, the Interlocal Act simply defines entities eligible to enter into these agreements to include Indian tribes. Nevada has clarified this inclusion by enacting legislation which guarantees the rights of self-government of Indian tribes,[40] and provides that the administrative jurisdiction of state agencies is not extended over Indian country.[41]

In contrast, other states have adopted an incremental approach to recognition and compacts with Native government. A good example of this approach is Minnesota. A dispute between the State of Minnesota and the Chippewa Tribe arose over ricing and game regulation. The dispute led to a substantial amount of litigation which in turn led to an out-of-court settlement in the form of a ricing and game management compact between the state and the tribe.[42] The compact is a limited effort by the state and tribe to cooperate in these limited subject areas, and does not attempt to establish an ongoing general relationship.

A more common area of limited state-tribal cooperation is in the area of law enforcement. In New Mexico, for example, state law provides general cross-deputization of state and tribal police.[44] Under this agreement, pueblo and Navaho tribal police also carry an appointment under state law, and may, therefore, enforce state law within Native communities. State police also carry a tribal appointment.

C. FEDERAL LAWS

In considering inclusion of Native governments within the state local government system, the backdrop of federal law will have substantial effect. Of prime concern is the extent state law attempts to regulate the internal organization of Native government organization. Secondly, there is future legislation to be considered.

First, the Williams' doctrine prohibits states from regulating the internal self-government of Indian tribes.[45] Thus, the state could not mandate incorporation of Native governments under Title 29. Rather, the state could only authorize such incorporations upon consent of the tribe.

The Alaska constitution authorizes only three forms of local government - cities and boroughs which are capable of possessing all local government powers; and service areas/districts which are only capable of possessing enumerated powers.[46] Therefore, the legislature is limited to these modes of organization. The legislature may classify, define powers, and define manner of incorporation. Thus, in order to provide for the incorporation of a Native government under state law, the legislature must create a class of city, borough or service area, and define the powers of such government in a manner consistent with the Native government character.

If the legislature provided for state incorporation of Native governments as boroughs, however, the constitutional provisions vesting in the legislature the authority to regulate composition and apportionment of borough assemblies[47] would be inconsistent with the Williams' doctrine, which prevents state regulation of internal organization. This inconsistency is irreconcilable.

On the other hand, if the legislature provides for incorporation as a city, there exists no comparable constitutional claim to internal regulation The state would merely create a class of city over which it disclaims authority to regulate composition.

The remaining option is the service area. The use of service areas in the unorganized areas of the state is relatively simple. Since such service areas operate by delegation of authority, the legislature may simply adopt the Florida or Maine plan and delegate to Native governments certain powers. In contrast, service areas within organized areas are subject to borough regulation. While the legislature may authorize boroughs to create a class of service area appropriate to the Native government, the character of borough regulation is equally important. Borough regulation which violates the Williams' test would invalidate the plan. To avoid this, the legislature may declare that the furtherance of Native self-determination is a matter of state interest, and under the local activity rule, the legislature could preempt borough regulation of Native service area composition.

Thus it is conceivable that the state could provide for incorporation of Native government as cities and service areas whether within or without organized boroughs.

The second consideration is the proposed Tribal-State Compact Act which is currently before the U.S. House of Representatives (see Appendix C). The implementation of the tribal-state paradigm would be substantially affected by the terms of the Act. In its current form, the bill specifically authorizes states and local governments to enter into agreements with Native governments. Such legislation is needed in non-P.L. 280 states because of recent court decisions invalidating such agreements.[48]

In addition to merely authorizing tribal-state agreements, Sec. 102 of the proposed Act provides federal assistance to the entity assuming new obligations under the terms of a tribal-state compact. If passed, the Act will provide a mechanism to assist the state in its constitutional plan of decentralization. By entering into eligible arrangements, the state may take advantage of available federal funding to facilitate implementation of state programs. Such agreements are more likely to operate in rural areas of the state where program costs are greatest. Use of such federal funding will decrease the burden on the state budget that such programs represent. While the state enjoys its present wealth, the need for federal assistance is less, yet, as projected state revenues decline in the future, the need for federal assistance will increase.

D. NON-NATIVES

The greatest concern over inclusion of Native village governments into the Alaska local government system is the preception that the Native governments are racially defined institutions. As such, it is feared that non-Natives will be relegated to a status of second class citizens in their own communities. This view is founded on two questionable assumptions: 1) non-Natives cannot participate in Native government, and 2) non-Natives have no rights under a Native government.

It is a general rule of law that a Native tribe has the exclusive authority to determine its membership.[49] This power specifically includes the power to provide for the adoption of non-Natives into the tribe.[50] This general rule is subject to one exception. The Secretary of the Interior is charged with the responsibility of determining tribal enrollment for the purposes of distributing tribal trust funds.[51]

In contrast, Native governments providing services under federal contracts may also render services to non-Native tribal members, since, for the purpose of contracting, "Indian" is defined in terms of tribal membership.[52] Benefits provided through state revenue sharing are required by state procedures to be equally available to non-Native residents of the respective communities. Thus, it is quite possible for non-Natives to fully participate in Native government.

Participation by non-Natives in Native government is quite common, despite efforts of the B.I.A. to discourage the practice. In one case, a Native village constitution goes so far as to guarantee non-member/ non-Native heads of households representation on behalf of their Native children before the Native council.[53] In practice, Native councils are reluctant to open village roles to non-Natives who may be transient or are reluctant to establish permanent ties with the community. This is understandable in that membership in a village generally carries with it cultural duties and obligations. This reluctance is analogous to the policy of the federal government to extend citizenship to aliens.

The second major concern relates to the individual rights of non-Natives under Native government. The prime guarantee of individual rights under a Native government is the Indian Civil Rights Act of 1968.[54] The Act mandates that a Native government provide many of the same individual protections provided under the U.S. Constitution. These include:

- free exercise of religion
- freedom of speech, press and assembly
- freedom of unreasonable search and seizure
- protection from double jeopardy and self-incrimination
- protection from taking of property without compensation
- right of due process and counsel
- protection from cruel and unusual punishment and excessive bail
- right to equal protection of the laws
- prohibition of bills of attainder or expost facto laws, and
- right to trial by jury

These rights extend to members and non-members alike.[55]

There is some concern that the Act only provides relief through the right of habeas corpus. This concern focuses around dicta contained in Santa Clara Pueblo v. Martinez.[56] In that case, the Court reviewed a tribal ordinance which conferred benefits upon tribal members based upon a distinction between patrilinial/matrilinial ancestors. In dicta, the Court stated that Congress only provided one clear remedy for plaintiffs under the Act - i.e., habeas corpus. A full reading of Martinez, however, reveals that the holding of the case rests upon a test which balances two current policies of federal Indian law - i.e., self-determination and protection of individual rights. As one commentator remarked, "In litigation under the Indian Civil Rights Act, federal court jurisdiction outside the scope of habeas corpus proceedings has been firmly established.[57]

CONCLUSIONS

It is clearly feasible to include Native village government into the state local government system. This may be done in one of two ways - either through compacts (see Appendix A) or direct incorporation (see Appendix B).

The first draft bill (see Appendix A) would be sufficient to authorize tribal state compacts. In addition to recognition, the bill defines the method whereby the State will engage in relations with the Native villages. The proposal provides that Native villages could participate in state programs to the same extent as second-class cities. It does not delegate to tribes general local government powers but does recognize the existing tribal powers retained by Native governments. The bill will clarify the status of Native village laws before state courts.

The bill also proposes cooperative agreements between the state and the Native governments to carry out state programs. This section anticipates the passage of the Tribal-State Compact Act which would allow federal funding of programs conducted under a State-Tribal agreement, and thus, reduce the burden on the state treasury for those areas affected by these agreements.

Finally, the bill conditions the relationship upon the Native government's compling with anti-discrimination provisions. This, of course, exempts federally funded Indian programs. The bill allows the Governor to enforce compliance through withdrawal of recognition.

The bill does not attempt to expand the jurisdiction of the State or the Native village. Section three (3) allows municipalities and village governments to enter into similar agreements.

The second draft bill (see Appendix B) would also provide for state-tribal compacts. In addition to this recognition, the bill allows direct incorporation of the Native government as a third class city. As a third class city, the government would have the attributes of a municipality and a Native village government. To avoid conflicts with the Williams doctrine, state law which regulates the internal operation of a city government are not made applicable to the third class city.

Other provisions of the bill are comparable to the first draft.

dependent association with the United States. Any Native village ordinance or custom heretofore or hereafter adopted by the duly constituted Native village government, in the exercise of any authority which it may possess shall, if not inconsistent with any applicable law or constitutional provision of the State of Alaska, be given full force and effect within the Alaska State Courts, provided that such Court shall have jurisdiction to hear such cause as a result of the withdrawal of federal jurisdiction pursuant to P.L. 83-280 (67 Stat. 588), as amended by P.L. 85-615 (72 Stat. 545).

Sec. 29.--. 020. ELIGIBILITY FOR STATE PROGRAMS. A Native village government, for a village which is not incorporated under this title, and is not located within an organized borough is,

96TH CONGRESS
2D SESSION

S. 1181

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

JUNE 3, 1980

Referred to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs

AN ACT

To authorize the States and the Indian tribes to enter into mutual agreements and compacts respecting jurisdiction and governmental operations in Indian country.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Tribal-State Compact Act of 1980".

DECLARATION OF POLICY

SEC. 2. The Congress hereby declares that it is the policy of this Nation to continue to preserve and protect the tribes of the American Indian people. The policy of this Nation is premised on the status of tribal governments as a continuing part of the American political fabric. Accordingly, the United States has a responsibility to establish a legal framework which will enable the tribes and the States to achieve maximum harmony and facilitate their cooperative efforts in the orderly administration of their governments. Federal enabling authority for the establishment of viable intergovernmental agreements between the tribes and the States based on mutual consent must be established.

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 3. For purposes of this Act:

(a) "Indian tribe" means any Indian tribe, band, nation, or other organized group or community which is exercising powers of self-government and which is recognized by the Secretary of the Interior as eligible for services provided by the United States to Indians because of their status as Indians.

(b) "State" means any of the States of the United States, including cities, counties, municipalities, or other political subdivisions thereof.

(c) "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Interior unless otherwise designated in this Act.

(d) "Indian country" shall be defined in accordance with the provisions in section 1151 of title 18, United States Code.

TITLE I—AUTHORIZATION OF COMPACTS AND AGREEMENTS

SEC. 101. (a) Notwithstanding the Act of August 15, 1953 (67 Stat. 588), as amended, or any other Act transferring civil or criminal jurisdiction over Indians within Indian country from the United States to the various States, or establishing a procedure for such transfers, and notwithstanding the provisions of any enabling Act for the admission of a State into the Union, the consent of the United States is hereby given the States and the Indian tribes and the same are hereby authorized to enter into compacts and agreements between themselves on matters relating to (1) the enforcement or application of civil, criminal, and regulatory laws of both within their respective jurisdiction, and (2) allocation or determination of governmental responsibility of States and tribes over specified subject matters or specified geographical areas, or both, including agreements or compacts which provide for concurrent jurisdiction between the States and the tribes, and (3) agreements or compacts which provide for transfer of jurisdiction of individual cases from tribal courts to State courts or State courts to tribal courts in accordance with procedures established by the laws of the tribes and States.

(b) Such agreements and compacts shall be subject to revocation by either party upon six months written notice to the other unless a different period of time is agreed upon. No agreement may provide for a period for revocation in excess of five years unless first approved by a majority of the adult enrolled Indians within the affected area voting at a special election as prescribed in section 406 of the Act of April 11, 1968 (82 Stat. 80; 25 U.S.C. 1326), but such approval shall not curtail the right of the parties to revoke the agreement by mutual consent within a shorter period of time.

(c) Agreements or compacts entered into under the provision of this section must be filed with the Secretary within thirty days of consummation. In the event an agreement is not so filed, it shall be subject to immediate revocation by either party. The Secretary shall cause the jurisdictional provisions of any such agreement, compact, or revocation to be published in the Federal Register.

(d) Such agreements, compacts, or revocation thereof shall not affect any action or proceeding which arose prior to the effective date of such an agreement, compact, or revocation, and no such action or proceeding shall abate by reason of such agreement, compact, or revocation unless specifically agreed upon by all parties to any such action or proceedings and by the parties to the agreement or compact.

(e) Nothing in this Act shall be construed to: (1) enlarge or diminish the jurisdiction over civil or criminal matters which may be exercised by either State or tribal governments except as expressly provided in this Act; (2) authorize or empower State or tribal governments, either separately or pursuant to agreement or compact, to expand or diminish the jurisdiction presently exercised by the Governmert of the United States to make criminal, civil, or regulatory laws for or enforce those laws in the Indian country; (3) authorize or empower the government of a State or any of its political subdivisions or the government of an Indian tribe from entering into agreements or exercising jurisdiction except as authorized by their own organizational documents or enabling laws; (4) authorize agreements or compacts which provide for the alienation, financial encumbrance, or taxation of any real or personal property, including water rights, belonging to any Indian or any Indian tribe, band, or community that is held in trust by the United States or is subject to a restriction against alienation imposed by the United States; or (5) to enter into agreements or compacts for the transfer of unlimited, unspecified, or general civil and criminal jurisdiction of an Indian tribe, except as provided under section 406 of the Act of April 11, 1968 (82 Stat. 80; 25 U.S.C. 1326).

(f) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as impairing or restricting the right of the United States, States and Indian tribes to enter into negotiations with each other with respect to settlement of property rights arising from aboriginal ownership, treaties or other Federal laws or judicial decisions.

FUNDING AND IMPLEMENTATION—FEDERAL ASSISTANCE

SEC. 102. (a) In any agreement or compact between an Indian tribe and a State authorized under this Act, the United States, upon agreement of the parties and the Secretary, may provide financial assistance to such party for costs of personnel or administrative expenses in an amount up to 100 per centum of costs actually incurred as a consequence of such agreement or compact, including indirect costs of administration which are clearly attributable to the services performed under the agreement or compact. In determining the amount of Federal assistance, if any, to be provided the Secretary may consider among other things:

(1) Whether or not the party assuming an obligation under the agreement or compact is already obligated or entitled to perform the function which is the subject of the compact.

(2) Whether or not the Federal assistance will cause or enable the contracting party to perform the function at a standard above that which it is already obligated to perform.

(3) The financial capacity of the contracting parties to underwrite the expenses without Federal assistance.

(4) The extent to which the success or failure of the compact may depend upon Federal assistance.

(5) The extent to which the proposed compact or agreement will contribute to fostering of community relations between Indian and non-Indian communities.

(6) The extent to which the proposed compact or agreement will enhance protection of resources of both Indian and non-Indian communities.

(7) The comparative costs if the function which is the subject of the compact or agreement were to be performed by the United States.

(8) The extent to which Federal funding is already supplied through revenue sharing, grants in aid, or other Federal program moneys.

(b) Whenever a party to such agreement or compact seeks financial assistance from the United States, to offset their costs, such party shall prepare a detailed statement of the projected costs; a copy of such statement shall be supplied to the other party; and the original of such statement shall be supplied to the Secretary at the time said agreement or compact is tendered to him for his approval.

(c) In any agreement or compact in which one of the parties qualifies for Federal assistance, the other party shall be supplied with copies of all vouchers for payment at the time they are submitted and shall be fully informed of all payments made by the United States to the recipient party. In the event disputes arise between the parties, either party may request an audit. The books and records of the party receiving Federal assistance which are relevant to the agreement or compact shall be open to inspection by authorized representatives of the United States.

(d) In the funding of governmental operations authorized under this Act, the Secretary may enter into agreements or other cooperative arrangements with any and all other Federal departments, agencies, bureaus, or other executive branches for transfer of funds or contributions of funds appropriated for programs within the category of the functions to be performed by the parties under such agreements or compacts, and such departments, agencies, or bureaus are hereby authorized to use such funds in the implementation of this Act.

(e) All Federal departments, agencies, and other executive branches are authorized to provide technical assistance and material support and assign personnel to aid tribal and State authorities in the implementation of the agreements or compacts they may enter into under the terms of this Act.

(f) The Secretary is hereby authorized to promulgate such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this Act.

(g) There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary during fiscal year 1981 not to exceed $10,000,000 and each subsequent fiscal year in order to carry out the agreements or compacts entered into pursuant to this title. Such funds shall be expended by the Secretary only after determination that there are no funds available from alternative sources as provided in subsection (d) of this section. The Secretary shall provide for such records as may be necessary for the accounting and justification of the funds expended under this authorization.

TITLE II—PLANNING AND MONITORING BOARDS

SEC. 201. (a) The Secretary is hereby authorized and directed to encourage the tribes and the States to establish councils, committees, boards, or task forces comprised of representatives of the States and individual tribes, or on a statewide or regional basis, to discuss and confer upon jurisdictional questions which exist between the parties, and to provide Federal representatives at such conferences.

(b) In furtherance of this objective, the Secretary is authorized and directed to provide adequate representation of tribal members at such conferences, and such further conferences among the tribes as may be necessary for their separate deliberations, and to participate in the payments of expenses in employment of reporters, transcription of statements, and preparation of reports as may be appropriate.

(c) Beginning October 1, 1980, funds appropriated pursuant to the Act of November 21, 1921 (42 Stat. 208), may be utilized for the purposes of this title.

TITLE III—JUDICIAL ENFORCEMENT

SEC. 301. Any party to an agreement or compact entered into in accordance with this Act may bring a civil action to secure equitable relief, including injunctive and declaratory relief, for the enforcement of any such agreement or compact, but no action to recover damages arising out of or in connection with such agreement or compact shall lie except as specifically provided for in such agreement or compact. The United States district courts shall have original jurisdiction of any civil action authorized by this section. States and Indian tribes, by entering into compacts or agreements in accordance with this Act, shall be deemed to have consented to suit with respect to the subject matter of such compacts or agreements unless the agreement or compact specifically states otherwise.

Passed the Senate May 30 (legislative day, January 3), 1980.

Attest: J. S. KIMMITT,

Secretary.

Re: Proposed Community Legal Assistance Grant Application

Senator Arliss Sturgulewski

Juneau, Ak. 99811

November 25, 1980

Dear Senator,

Enclosed please find the City of Saxman's Community Legal Assistance Grant application for your review and comments.

After spending some time with you and Patrick Poland discussing the approach to the regarded application, I believe the best approach is one which utilizes an economic development strategy as the medium for demonstration of Michael Walleri's Tribal-State Relations, A New Paradigm for Local Government in Alaska on the community level.

Some background information which will be helpful to you in seeing the application of this approach is listed below.

Recently, the City of Saxman and the Cape Fox Corporation (CFC) entered into an agreement which demonstrated the determination of the CFC Board of Directors and the City Council to set policy that bound public/private sector involvement into the rehabilitation of the industrial area, specifically the Saxman Village Port & Terminal, within Saxman, which qualified the proposed appropriate and compatible growth by enunciating community participation. This was another leap into actualized acumen which afforded vivid opportunity for continued relations.

The City Council has, additionally, established the thoroughfare for the future development of the facility by revoking the franchise under which the Saxman Village Port & Terminal (SVPT) operation was authorized (Resolution 80-11); resolved that if the SVPT is removed from its current status, it be returned to its original condition when placed into receivership (Resolution 80-13); resolved to protect the only public transportation terminal in S.E. Alaska through a consensus agreement with CFC and the existing receiver (Resolution 80-16) and to authorize the City to grant to CFC a franchise for the management and operation of the facility through the development of a joint-management agreement (Resolution 80-14).

The general election of October 7, 1980 directed the City Council through the vote to implement Resolutions 80-13 and 80-14. The election also produced voter approval to regulate commerce within its jurisdiction and to provide for the establishment of a Saxman Tribal land use program through an inter-cooperative joint-management agreement between the City of Saxman and the Organized Village of Saxman, the Saxman IRA Council.

The City of Saxman and the Organized Village of Saxman have jointly submitted through the Saxman Comprehensive Community Development Plan(s) (SCCDP) preapplication to HUD's CDBG program for $1.5 million over hte next three years utilizing a total leveraging of over $3.5 million, which among other projects would provide rehabilitation funds for the facility and acquisition funds for surrounding properties. A request for determination of eligibility to make application under Hud's Urban Development Action Grant program which would over the ten year period of the SCCDP provide up to $15 million with a HUD mandated 1 to 9 lo 1 to 10 leveraging factor meaning a potential, if invited to apply, of up to $150 million over the next decade into the community, was submitted.

The Central Council of the Tlingit and Haida Indian Tribes of Alaska and the Bureau of Indian Affairs, which recently wrote the City after the submission of the SCCDP, "We were very impressed with the document and plan to fully utilize the valuable information contained within the plan.", have actively supported the planning approach employed by the inter-cooperative efforts of the City, CFC, and the Saxman IRA.

Upon the signing of the consensus agreement (Resolution 80-16), the SCCDP will be submitted to EDA with a preapplication and request for determination of eligibility to make application under EDA's Special Economic Development and Adjustment Assistance to establish a $1 million permanent/revolving loan fund for the organization and development of the Saxman Tribal and Community Development Corporation (SCCDP, Chap. 1.x.10), a community owned and represented enterprise, which will inter-relate with the City, CFC, and the Saxman IRA.

Through the legal research project as proposed in cooperation with LGAD and the Tanana Chiefs Conference, the infrastructure for inter-cooperation and interaction and the assurance and guarantee of autonomous weel-being will be developed and implemented through community participation and representation.

If you have any questions as to this proposal, please feel free to call on me.

Respectfully Submitted,

Michael J. Tavoliero

PROJECT QUESTIONS

What legal problem do you want to solve? (Please be specific.)

The City of Saxman, Alaska, has recently completed its comprehensive community development plan(s) (a ten year plan). There exists a need to develop and establish intercooperative and/or mutual agreements between the City of Saxman and the Saxman I.R.A. Council, a Native government, to promote the equitable, fair and maximum delivery of State/Federal services and programs through economic development strategies in a severely impacted economic area through the optimal and functional utilization of public/private sector involvement and fund leveraging which will not offend either State/Federal constitutional guarantees. (See attached narrative)

What has been done to solve the legal problem? (describe agencies contacted, correspondence written, and amount of money already spent.)

This is the third written request under this program for legal assistance. The original applications dealt with a more general topic area than found within this application. These applications have not received a determination from LGAD due to a question as to whether or not their approval would have been "premature" as to the need as stated. All questions as to a premature need for legal assistance are at this time moot, because the main point, completion of the EDA funded marketing/feasibility study, is no longer at issue.) In the period during the submitted application considerations, the City of Saxman continued to remain in contact with LGAD and reasserted the need for legal assistance. (Please note that outside of the first grant submission, which did in fact receive a determination, but that determination was based upon EDA consultation which was subsequently reversed and never followed up, no determination was made on the next application due to LGAD not receiving a letter of agreement from the City and its counsel stating that the original contract for legal services was still applicable. In light of these inconsistencies, the City requests that if this application is properly submitted, it receive immediate approval and award.) (See attached narrative)

How would the requested Community Legal Assistance Grant solve the legal problem?

By approving and awarding the requested Community Legal Assistance Grant, the City of Saxman will be able to resolve the problems contained within the problem statement and effectively provide a model demonstration for the paradigm as presented by Mr. Michael Walleri. (See attached narrative)

How will the legal problem be solved if you do not receive a Community Legal Assistance Grant?

The legal problem as presented cannot be resolved by the City of Saxman without the approval and award of this legal assistance application. All objectives found within the attached narrative under OBJECTIVES require legal analysis, assistance and representation. The City of Saxman does not have the necessary expertise to undertake this project without legal counsel. The City of Saxman is seeking this legal assistance to compensate for the loss of time by staff in conducting this project as well as providing a model demonstration site for the application of Mr. Walleri's paradigm.

PROBLEM STATEMENT

The effective manager in an intergovernmental context is one who knows the legal competence and institutional capacities of his/her own government and meshes these capacities with those being cooperatively managed and shared from the private, State and Federal side. In situations where competing governmental claims to authority occur, the political and governmental capabilities and related services capabilities of different governmental entities need to be optimally and functionally assured.

In looking at the legal significance attached to enhancing the role of Native/local governments in the delivery of public services and their relationship to private sector involvement, there exists a need to utilize governmental and economic strategies which require an unprecedented level of intergovernmental interaction. the building of Native/local managerial capacity within this environment essentially revolves around acknowledgement and awareness of governmental prerogatives, agendas, and flow of authority between the State government, the local government and the Native government. In other words, the various levels of government having specific responsibilities to discharge relative to their government and constituencies cannot address the mutual problems inherent within the State and Native self-determination approaches without the aggregate (State/Native) community participation. Likewise, the fiscal restraints on Native/local government dictates that managers cannot manage in isolation from either government effectively.

As Michael Walleri has stated within the attached materials as to Alaskan communities being organized as municipalities and Native village governments, "This rich" (and somewhat frustrating) "variety in organization has led to a great deal of confusion regarding the roles of the various governments. Individually, these governments lack the resources to effectively exercise their proscriptive and enforcement powers." As well as their political and economic development.

Mr. Walleri continues, "Generally, the State agencies prefer to operate through municipalities. Federal agencies prefer Native governments. But state operated, federally funded programs may include Native villages, while federal municipal assistance programs include municipalities. The net result is a community's eligibility for a particular project or program depends on its organizational characteristics. Consequently, many communities have created paper local governments to prove eligibility for a given program. This willy-nilly organizational effort has created a multifurcated governmental scheme of overlapping and disjointed jurisdictions."

In the City of Saxman, this multifurcated governmental scheme of overlapping and disjointed jurisdiction is coupled with ineffective management and substantial economic deterioration and distress due to the lack of an efficient level of intergovernmental interaction.

OBJECTIVES

The City of Saxman, Alaska, proposes to contract through a joint contract/agreement the services of Ellis Law Offices, Inc. and Michael Walleri to do a legal research/analysis project which addresses the problems and utilizes Mr. Walleri's Tribal-State Relations, A New Paradigm for Local Government in Alaska, as the second phase of the originally contemplated intergovernmental and interentity legal research project which produced Mr. Walleri's paradigm. The ultimate objective of this second phase project will be to establish intercooperative and/or mutual agreements between the City of Saxman and the Saxman I.R.A. Council, a Native government to promote the equitable and maximum delivery of State/Federal services and programs through economic development strategies in a severely depressed and impacted economic area through the optimal and functional utilization of public/private sector involvement and fund leveraging as a demonstration model.

A. SPECIFIC DEMONSTRATION MODEL SITE

The Saxman Village Port & Terminal (formerly the Ketchikan & Northern Terminal), owned by the City of Saxman, has been in receivership for more than fifteen years. The facility status and future viability is threatened by a history of disencentives, barriers and inactivity fostered by the policy prohibition for rehabilitation and revitalization through local community participation and minority business enterprise development and the exhibition of outside discretion of policy which directly and indirectly excluded local community participation and minority business enterprise from effectively and effeciently organizing the infrastructural management and operation system to address the institutional disencentives, barriers and inactivities, such as a restrictive and inflexible receivership, lack of technical assistance necessary to offset debt obligation through the leasing of properties on which the facility is situated, lack of transportation and marketing consultation, and a consistent and continuous "wait and see" policy adherred to by the Economic Development Administration, as necessary and needed for the rehabilitation and revitalization of the facility.

The Saxman Village Port & Terminal facility was originally funded in 1963, under the Area Redevelopment Administration as a freight terminal. The City of Saxman purchased and constructed the facility through revenue bonds, of which approximately $1 million plus $.3 million in current accrued interest is still owed. Due to financial and management difficulties, the facility was put into receivership by the Federal government, and is now operated by the same receivership. The facility, originally constructed to handle freight, was until recently utilized by Foss Alaska Line (FAL) for containerized barge freight. Realized revenues have been to maintain the facility, albeit in a minimal and to the detriment of future viability; thus, net revenues for debt service were not available.

The primary leasee of the facility, FAL, encountered numerous difficulties in dealing with the receiver. This is from the standpoint of the receiver's inability due to judicial restrictions, a lack of funding and technical assistance, and insufficient and underqualified staff necessary to satisfactorily manage the overall facility management and operation requirements. The lease between the receiver and the lessee, FAL, expired in early 1980. Based on a position by the lessee that without the management and operation requirements to implement improvements and other necessary actions, continued leasing was inappropriate.

The City of Saxman, because of its ownership of the real property on which the facility is situated, determined in 1977 that an analysis of the facility's legal status and its receivership operations should be pursued. Having obtained a grant from the Bureau of Indian Affairs, a study was commissioned entitled "Report on the Status of the Saxman Terminal", which was completed in February, 1978. It was recoomended by the report that the City of Saxman immediately institute a request for a 15 year principle and interest moratorium. This would be conditioned upon a development program designed to eventually create sufficient revenues so that when required improvement construction financing had been amortized, full payment on the revenue bonds could then be accomplished. The report, also recommended, if and when the Federal government is committed to a moratorium program, a marketing study, analyzing the Southeastern Alaska transportation economics, would be necessitated. The study would determine through interviews with present and prospective users, improvement goals and alternative revenue potentials. The City of Saxman's commitment, as to improvements and the receivership terminated in accordance with a court order entered upon a stipulated moratorium or forgiveness agreement as to the original revenue bond obligation.

The marketing study was initiated through a technical assistance grant through EDA in the spring of 1979. After its final draft review, the study recommended two financial alternatives of which one considered the possibility that the Cape Fox Corporation assume the role in the future operations and financing the facility through joint development and joint funding assistance program planning and implementation which will be consistent with the principles, policies, procedures and practices of the Saxman Comprehensive Community Development Plan(s), a direct prod ct of community participation.

Conversely, the study's other financial alternative recommended the liquidation of the facility at its current fair market value, which would preclude its use as a public transportation facility, as well as, minimize public sector control and public long-term benefits that might be derived from the facility. (The original contract is assumed, by this writer, as inherited through the catylist of legistlative recombinant genetics by EDA, to have been predicated on the primary goals of economic mobilization and employment opportunities, which were a consideration of the revenue bond obligation by the City of Saxman. With the failure of the facility in 1965 and the bond debt declared in default, this consideration and goal of the project was rescinded.

The Local Government Assistance Division (LGAD), the Community Legal Assistance Grant Program coordinating agency, having been consultated directly and indirectly by EDA in the previous grant application determination processes, deferred award based on the prematurity of need for legal assistance, when the City of Saxman had inquired, requested or made application up to this point.

Simultaneously, during the City of Saxman's relationship with LGAD as to the above legal assistance project, the City requested LGAD as to the advisable feasibilty of analyzing a Native/local intergovernmental relationship to eliminate governmental and jurisdictional multifurcation and encourage and enhance an aggregated eligibility characteristic strategy for the optimal and functional delivery of programs and services and development of community resources. LGAD informed the City after further investigation into the project's potential that the Tanana Chiefs Conference was also interested in the concept and its village government specialist, Michael Walleri, was submitting a proposal for a legal research project as (Mr. Walleri is a member of the Alaska State Bar) proposed by LGAD and, if appropriate and acceptable, in cooperatiom with the City of Saxman.

The project developed a specialized paradigm, the set of all governmental and jurisdictional forms based on the theme of Tribal-State inter-relationships, a legal and political touchstone conceptualization, which, if utilized, in a specific demonstration site, would yield an effective management capacity and mitigate adverse economic impact through the actualization of an intergovernmental interaction model which would establish aggregated eligibility charac eristics and, if employed, strategically develop community resources through the optimal and functional delivery of State/Federal programs and services. This present application serves as the second phase of the originally contemplated intergovernmental and interentity legal research project, which produced Mr. Walleri's paradigm.

B. IMPLEMENTATION OF THE PARADIGM

1. PROJECT TASK OBJECTIVES

a. Analyze current legal status of inter-public.private entity involvement and interaction (See Saxman Comprehensive Community Development Plan(s); Chaps. 1.x.01 through 1.x.10, 2.x.02 through 2.x.03 and 4.x.03);

I. Outline strategy of implementation of service functions;

II. Assess service capabilities of entities;

g. Develop approach, legal review and intercooperative agreements to maximize implementation based on demonstration model for current utilization and with respect to §7(h) and other applicable sections of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act of 1971 as amended (See Saxman Comprehensive Community Development Plan(s); Chaps. 2.x.02 through 2.x.03 and 4.x.03);

h. Act on the behalf of the community ---- in negotiating with the receiver or other court appointed representatives of the Saxman Village Port & Terminal (See Saxman Comprehensive Community Development Plan(s); Chaps. 1.x.01 through 1.x.10, 2.x.02 through 2.x.03, 4.x.03);

i. Assist the community ---- in negotiating with the Federal government and other agencies with regard to financial obligations and needs of the Saxman Village Port & Terminal (See Saxman Comprehensive Community development Plan(s); Chaps. 1.x.01 through 1.x.10, 2.x.02 through 2.x.03, 4.x.03);

k. Perform all other legal services necessary to achieve the effective and efficient realization and actualization of the ultimate objective (See Saxman Comprehensive Community Development Plan(s); Chaps. 1.x.01 through 1.x.10, 2.x.02 through 2.x.03), 4.x.03(01,03,04,07-15,20,21,23,24,28);

2. PROJECT PREFORMANCE OBJECTIVES

a. Provide intergovernmental stability and interaction within a legal framework (See Saxman Comprehensive Community Development Plan(s); Articles 1.1, 2.2, and 3.2);

b. Provide a realistic demonstration model site applying aggregated eligibility characteristics and economic development strategies through intergovernmental intercoperation and interaction (See Saxman Comprehensive Community Development Plan(s); Articles 1.2,2.2 and 3.2);

c. Develop legal framework which allows optimal and functional stimulation of private investment and participation through consortia approaches of public/private sector involvement and fund leveraging (See Saxman Comprehensive Community Development Plan(s); Articles 1.2,2.2, and 3.2);

d. Promote the development and/or facilitate equal employment opportunities, economic enterprise and small business activity and provide equal service representation through community participation acessibility (See Saxman Comprehensive Community Development Plan(s); Articles 1.2,2.2, and 3.2).

PAST ACTIVITY IN RESOLVING THE PROBLEM

To attempt to fix a dollar value on the amount of money the City of Saxman has spent, not to mention lost in attempting to solve the problem as stated would take a major financial study beginning over fifteen years ago with the Saxman Village Port & Terminal until now. Starting with the City's bond obligation, the lack of technical assistance, and the ubiquitous inconsistencies and impracticalities of an undefined intergovernmental jurisdiction, the study would only offer loss guesstimations.

However, over the past few years, more than $100,000.00 has been spent in attempting to develop this project. Affected entities are the Economic Development Administration, the Bureau of Indian Affairs, the State of Alaska's Department of Community & Regional Affairs' Local Government Assistance Division, the Tanana Chiefs Conference, the City of Saxman, and the Saxman I.R.A. Council.

The City of Saxman has currently reached a consensus agreement with the receiver and the Cape Fox Corporation in returning local control to the community of the Saxman Village Port & Terminal. The City and the Saxman I.R.A. Council have jointly submitted preapplications to HUD under the CDBG and UDAG progams for specific funding for the economic development strategy and revitalization of the Saxman Village Port & Terminal and other interrelated community development projects. These projects are contained within the Saxman Comprehensive Community Development Plan(s).

Legal assitance is required to optimally and functionally assure overall success of the economic and governmental development interactions as proposed.

Mr. Walleri has recently completed the first phase of his legal research project as proposed by LGAD in cooperation with the City of Saxman. The outline of this project will be based on the paradigm as presented by Mr. Walleri and the principles, policies, practices and procedures of the Saxman Comprehensive Community Development Plan(s). While the Tanana Chiefs Conference has expressed an interest in pursuing the second phase of this project, the Tanana Chiefs Conference has agreed that the City of Saxman is the more appropriate site for a demonstration model. For this reason the City of Saxman urges approval of this legal assistance grant application in order to proceed as soon as possible.

Re: SAXMAN VILLAGE PORT & TERMINAL (SVPT)
CONSENSUS AGREEMENT
FINAL DRAFT REPORT

A. PURPOSE AND INTENT

1) THE PURPOSE AND INTENT OF THIS CONSENSUS AGREEMENT is to stimulate private investment and participation through public/private sector financial leveraging strategies in the City of Saxman, Alaska; to encourage revitalization and rehabilitation of the SVPT through involvement of public sector development of management, entrepreneurial and administrative capabilities hand-in-hand with private sector implementation of management approaches, funding sources, financing techniques and government programs to facilitate public/private sector development; increase the role of minority business enterprise (MBE) participation; promote Article III - PURPOSE of the Articles of Incorporation of KAA and TL'ATK Development Corporation; seek appropriate compensation and restitution for the sustained losses of revenues and employment opportunites caused by the lack of use and occupancy compensation attached to the free and unencumbered property upon which the SVTT is situated as a fair and equitable consideration in the future status of the SVPT; and to promote and insure community participation and representation as a necessary element in the future viability of the SVPT.

B. CONSENSUS

1) THE CONSENSUS OF THE UNDERSIGNED PARTIES is based on the background of the SVPT (infra). It is common consensus that the SVPT demonstrates sudden and severe economic dislocation and long term economic deterioration and further demonstrates a deteriorated and reduced economic potential in the City of Saxman, a city of less than 25,000; that the submitted CDBG and UDAG preapplications are consistent with the Saxman Overall Economic Development Plan, as amended, 1980, and the attached Saxman Comprehensive Community Development Plan(s) (SCCDP), also submitted to HUD; that based on the deteriorated and reduced economic state of the SVPT the immediate discontinuance of its rail and barge operations and renovation of its bonded warehouse are required; that potential viability of the SVPT (leading to financial solvency and debt service pending stipulated moratorium or forgiveness agreement) can only be accomplished through joint-funding assistance and development over a long term redevelopment plan, a short term interim management and operation plan, and implementation in a cooperative manner through a marketing and business campaign for long range improvements between public/private sector involvement and participation; that based on the demonstrated commitment of the City of Saxman, it is the primary goal of the Consensus Agreement to terminate (or substitute with an entity, such as, the Cape Fox Corporation) the existing receivership in order to implement the guidelines and development programs and projects of the SCCDP on or before January 1, 1981 and formally requests EDA to allow and support the full and meaningful purpose and intent through community participation of comprehensive community planning and development to transpire, without the self-determined influence and control of the existing receivership, thereby, mitigating community and minority business enterprise (MBE) participation barriers and disencentives.

C. CONCLUSION AND RECOMMENDED POLICY

1) THIS CONSENSUS AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE UNDERSIGNED PARTIES IS PRECATORY IN NATURE AND IS PRESENTED AS A FORMAL NOTICE OF AGREEMENT TO THE ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION; and,

Re: SAXMAN VILLAGE PORT & TERMINAL (SVPT)
CONSENSUS AGREEMENT
BACKGROUND

BACKGROUND

1) The status of the Saxman Village Port & Terminal (SVPT) facility's future viability is threatened by a history of disincentives, barriers, and inactivity fostered by the policy prohibition for rehabilitation and revitalization through local community participation and minority business enterprise development and the exhibition of outside discretion of policy which directly and indirectly excluded local community participation and minority business enterprise from effectively and efficiently organinzing the infrastructural management and operation system to address the institutional disincentives, barriers, and inactivities, such as, a restrictive and inflexible receivership, lack of technical assistance necessary to offset debt obligation through the leasing of those properties upon which the facility is situated, lack of transportation and marketing consultation, and a consistent and continuous "wait and see" policy adherred to by the Economic Development Administration, as necessary for the rehabilitation and revtalization of the facility; and,

2) The SVPT facility was originally funded in 1963, under the Area Redevelopment Administration as a freight terminal. The City of Saxman financed the facility through GOB/revenue bonds, of which approximately $1 million plus another $.3 million in current accrued interest is still owed. Due to financial and management difficulties, the facility was put into receivership by the Federal Government, and is now operated by the same receiver. The facility, originally constructed to handle freight, was intil recently utilized by Foss Alaska Line (FAL) for containerized barge freight. Realized revenues have been to main ain the facility, albeit in a minimal manner and to the detriment of future viability; thus net revenues for debt service were not available; and,

3) The primary lessee of the facility was Foss Alaska Line (FAL). F L encountered numerous difficulties in dealing with the receiver. This is from he standpoint of the receiver's inability due to judicial restrictions, a lack o' funding and technical assistance, and insufficient and underqualified staff nec ssary to satisfactorily manage the overall facility management and operation requi ements. The lease between the receiver and FAL expired in early 1979. based on a position by FAL that without the management and operation requirements t implement improvements and other necessary actions, continued leasing was inappropriate; and,

4) The City of Saxman, because of its ownership of the real property upon which the facility is situated, determined in 1977 that an analysis of the facility's legal status and its receivership operations should be pursued. Having obtained a grant from the Bureau of Indian Affairs, a study was commissioned entitled, "Report on the Status of the Saxman Terminal", which was completed in February, 1978. It was recommended by the report that the City of Saxman immediately institute a request for a 15 year principle and interest moratorium. This would be conditioned upon a development program designed to eventually create sufficient revenues so that when required improvement construction financing had been amortized, full payment of the revenue bonds could then be accomplished. The report, also recommended, if and when the Federal Government is committed to a moratorium program, a marketing study, analyzing the Southeastern Alaska transportation economics, would be necessitated. The study would determine through interviews with present and prospective users, improvement goals and alternative revenue potentials. The City of Saxman's commitment, as to improvements and the receivership terminated in accordance with a court order entered upon a stipulated moratorium or forgiveness agreement as to the original revenue bond obligation; and,

5) The hereinabove mentioned marketing study was initiated through a technical assistance grant through EDA in the spring of 1979. After its final draft review, the study recommended two financial alternatives of which one considered the possibility that the Cape Fox Corporation assume the role in the future operations and financing the facility through joint development and joint funding assistance program planning and implementation which will be consistent with the purposes, principles, policies, procedures and practices of the Saxman Comprehensive Community Development Plan(s) (SCCDP). Conversely, the study's other financial alternative recommended the liquidation of the facility at its current fair market value, which would preclude its use as a public transportation facility, as well as, minimize public sector control and public long term benefits that might be derived from the facility. (The original contract between the Area Redevelopment Administration and the applicant is assumed to have been predicated on the furthering of economic mobilization and employment opportunities, which were a consideration of the revenue bond obligation by the City of Saxman. With the failure of the facility in 1965 and the bond debt declared in default, this consideration and goal of the project was rescinded.); and,

6) As a demonstration of the City's commitment and as an actual program within the Saxman Comprehensive Community Development Plan(s), the City jointly with the Organized Village of Saxman, the Saxman IRA Council, submitted November 4, 1980 to the Department of Housing and Urban Development the SCCDP attached to preapplications under the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG), and a request for Determination of Eligibility to make application under the Urban Development Action Grant (UDAG) programs. This action on the part of both local and Tribal government is consistent with the 1980 Saxman Overall Economic Development Plan, as amended, and NOI submitted August 15, 1980 to State-Federal A-95 Review. Further, the programs and projects within the SCCDP over a ten year timeframe are comprehensive and consistent with the Economic Development Administration's primary goal of stimulating local economics, generating equal employment opportunities, and increasing the role of minority business enterprise participation; and,

7) Based on the eligibility characteristics of the community as presented by the SCCDP and as demonstrated through documentation of EDA and other sources, the community has endured for more than fifteen years sudden (and reverbrative ripple effect during this time till present) and severe economic dislocation and long term economic deterioration resulting from the facility's failure. Of more recent applicability and demonstration of meeting special needs arising from actual and continually threatened unemployment, the departure of the facility's sole tenant, Foss Alaska Line (FAL), in the summer of 1980, adversely impacted the community leaving compounded sudden and severe economic dislocation; and,

CONSENSUS AGREEMENT

BACKGROUND (continued)

8) This consensus agreement between the City, CFC and the receiver has been included within the SCCDP to meet the primary goal of terminating (or substituting) the existing receivership in order to implement a economic development strategy (EDS) through comprehensive planning. In order for this EDS to be successful, the full and meaningful purpose and intent of this action plan (SCCDP) must be allowed and supported without the self-determined influence and control of the existing receivership as predicated by EDA. In other words devoid of community participation and minority business enterprise involvement, the barriers, disencentives and inactivity currently continuing to turn the facility into a complete economic loss will remain alive and well in the community.

SAXMAN COMPREHENSIVE COMMUNITY

DEVELOPMENT PLAN(S)

PROGRAM(S) ABSTRACT

THE CITY OF SAXMAN HAS THE GREATEST UNDEVELOPED POTENTIAL FOR RESIDENTIAL, COMMERCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL GROWTH ON REVILLAGIGEDO ISLAND.

ALTHOUGH THE PRESENT POPULATION IS SLIGHTLY MORE THAN 400 PEOPLE, ITS FUTURE GROWTH CAPACITY IS EASILY CAPABLE OF ACCOMODATING 1500-2000 BY THE YEAR 1990.

THE PURPOSE OF COMMUNITY PLANNING ON THE COMPREHENSIVE LEVEL IS AN ACTION ORIENTED PROCESS UTILIZING THE AGGREGATED ELIGIBILITY CHARACTERISTICS OF THE COMMUNITY IN A JOINTLY-FUNDED ASSISTANCE SIMPLIFICATION APPROACH IN PROGRAMS IN THE SAME FUNCTIONAL CATEGORIES THROUGH COMMUNITY (MONITORING, EVALUATION, REVIEW AND FEEDBACK (MERF)) PARTICIPATION.

The Saxman Comprehensive Community Development Plan(s) (SCCDP) is a ten year action document consisting of four separate, yet tangential (sub)plans. The (sub)plans consist of:

1. The Saxman Village & Native Community Plan;
2. The Saxman Village & Muntcipal Service Plan;
3. The Saxman Community Resources & Services Plan;
4. The Saxman Comprehensive Community Development Plan.

As a jointly funded economic (community) strategy, it is a jointly funded assistance program(s) approach which utilizes upon submission(s) and application(s) 169 Federal & State funding assistance sources assuring the optimal and functional administrative consolidation of closely related programs for 38 projects within the community.

As the aggregated eligibility characteristic utilization strategy of the community, it promotes the community's comprehensive fundability (i.e. the municipal corporation, the IRA Council (Tribal government), and the ANCSA profit corporation) towards the realization of three primary goals, self-government, self-determination, and self-sufficiency, by its submission as the community's master contracting document.

The Saxman Village & Native Community Plan demonstrates the historical, political, economic, social and cultural data & information with optimal assurance of the basic community and tribal rights for limited sovereignty, self-government, self-determination and self-sufficiency and the cooperative efforts of and in coordination with other entities outside the traditional Saxman Native community and village."

The Saxman Village & Municipal Services Structure Plan utilizes 6 infrastructural goals consistent with the statement of community needs which are based on community administrative services; utility and energy services; resource & development services; manpower and training services; education and cultural services; and health and human needs services. This infrastructural approach employs management and policy functions (specially designed) hybrid systems.

The Saxman Community Resources and Service Plan utilizes the broad goals of the Saxman Village & Municipal Services Plan with the aim of achieving an optimal and functional degree of assurance for the maintenance and effective and efficient delivery of services through organized community action.

The Saxman Comprehensive Community Development Plan is the implementation of action and the instrumentation of carrying out the plan(s).

The SCCDP is the City of Saxman's master contracting document once "plugged into" the Federal and State funding and funding assistance program(s) network will act as contract and guideline using all administrative and legislative requirements and procedures to insure the primary purpose of comprehensive community planning.

POLICY IMPLICATIONS OF SELECTED TITLE 29 REVISIONS

A brief summary of various policy issues related to specific suggested changes to Title 29 has been completed at the request of Tam Cook. The purpose of this overview is to supplement work being done by the Title 29 technical group, and does not attempt to address either the legal acceptability or the mechanics of these suggested revisions.

The subjects of this policy overview are:

a. removal of specific limitations on home-rule powers;

b. elimination of the First Class Borough;

c. elimination of differences in scope of powers of different classes of municipalities;

d. specific suggestions on changes to the statutes on planning, platting and zoning; and

e. specific recommendations on changing Title 29 to encourage small, Native communities to participate in municipal government.

Removal of Specific Limitations on Home-Rule Powers.

The removal of limitations on home-rule powers would release a home-rule government from having to follow a specific statutory provision. There are very definite technical and policy implications surrounding this removal of restrictions. In some cases, these limitations provide a statutory basis for relationships between governments, and as such provide a common ground for intergovernmental activity. (If Title 29 is revised to allow all classes of municipalities discretion in the exercise of powers, the review of limitations on home-rule powers should be done with an awareness of a broader need for or applicability of those limitations.)

(1) AS 29.09.140. BOROUGH TRANSITION. This section sets out the method by which service areas and existing governments are to be incorporated into newly incorporated municipalities.

Focusing primarily on the assumption of powers and bonded debt by the new municipality, this section is designed to protect the financial status of the government, by providing both continuity of fiscal responsibility during transition and preventing the existing government from taking on new debts during the transition period. For these reasons, it is probably desirable to continue to have all classes of municipalities bound by these provisions.

(2) AS 29.12.010. CHANGE OF MUNICIPAL NAME. This section sets out the procedure to be followed in changing the name of a municipality. The considerations around a name change are legal and technical; aside from these legal concerns, there are no further policy issues.

(3) AS 29.12.040. ANNEXATION AND EXCLUSION; LOCAL BOUNDARY COMMISSION.

(4) AS 29.12.080-160. MERGER AND CONSOLIDATION.

(5) AS 29.12.420-500. DISSOLUTION. These statutes (Numbers (3), (4), and (5) above) deal with the relationships between municipalities or between a municipality and a surrounding unincorporated area, and with the dissolution of a municipality. These statutes establish a portion of the legal framework governing how municipalities relate to territory outside of their immediate authority. As such, these provisions should remain applicable to all municipalities.

However, wording of one of the provisions within these statues needs to be clarified. AS 29.12.040(b)(3) states that the local boundary commission establish procedures whereby an area may be annexed to a municipality without an election "if all property owners and voters" within the area petition the annexing municipality. This should probably be revised simply to read "all voters", as other annexations are accomplished using voter approval only. This is especially confusing in the case of non-resident property owners, as the desires of absent owners of property and area residents may be quite different.

Finally, there is a question as to why AS 29.19.190-500 UNIFICATION OF LOCAL GOVERNMENTS, is not included as a requirement that home-rule municipalities must follow. These sections establish a procedure by which a borough and cities within that borough may unify. As such, it sets out a system of interaction between different municipal units, and should be applied equally to all municipalities, if it is to be retained. (A second question concerns some of the duplication between AS 29.19.040. MERGER AND CONSOLIDATION, and AS 29.19.190-500. UNIFICATION OF LOCAL GOVERNMENTS. Are both of these necessary or can these provisions be combined into one section?)

(6) AS 29.15.080 CHARTER AMENDMENT. This section requires that a municipality's voters have the right to propose a charter amendment by initiative. It is desirable to retain this option, unless the section on municipal charters is revised to require a broad statement on the inclusion of initiative rights.

(7) AS 29.24.010. CONFLICT OF INTEREST. Requires that a conflict of interest ordinance be adopted or else the conflict of interest provision of this section is automatically applicable. It is not precisely clear what the conflict of interest provision is and how it is enforced.

(8) AS 29.24.020. MEETINGS PUBLIC. This section requires that meetings of all municipal bodies be public. Discussion at the September committee meeting suggested that the definition of "meetings and "public bodies" be clarified; i.e., what constitutes executive session, what about a meeting between a borough mayor and borough attorney, and so on. In general, once these questions are resolved, the provision that meetings are public should be retained for all municipalities.

(9) AS 29.24.060. ASSEMBLY COMPOSITION AND APPORTIONMENT. This section, effective January 1, 1981, revises the system of assembly composition used by some boroughs prior to that date. Therefore, it is necessary to make the new standards for assembly composition and apportionment apply uniformly.

AS 29.24.070-120. ASSEMBLY COMPOSITION AND APPORTIONMENT PROVISIONS. These sections establish the mechanics of assembly apportionment. If a home-rule borough's charter provides for reapportionment and assembly composition, that home-rule borough is not bound by this chapter (as long as the intent in AS 29.24.060 is met.) Perhaps this exclusion could be broadened to other classes of boroughs by stating that these provisions apply unless other provisions, which meet AS 20.24.060, have been adopted by ordinance or charter.

(10) AS 29.24.150. EXPULSION OF BOROUGH ASSEMBLYMEN.

(11) AS 29.24.200. REMOVAL OF BOROUGH MAYOR FROM OFFICE.

(12) AS 29.24.290. EXPULSION OF CITY COUNCILMEN FROM OFFICE.

(14) AS 29.24.035. REMOVAL OF (CITY) MAYOR FROM OFFICE. These sections establish the basis and method by which an assembly or council may of its own volition remove an elected officer from office. The reasons for removal are defined narrowly as a conviction for an offense described in AS 15.56 as a "corrupt practice". Found in the state's election code, "corrupt practices" are defined in relation to willfully subverting the election process through a variety of actions. AS 15.55 (the correct citation, not AS 15.56) also states that the person convicted of such a corrupt practice may also be deprived of office. As this language is permissive, the person may not actually be deprived of office in a court action. Therefore, this provision allows an assembly or council to remove a mayor, assemblyman, or councilman from office upon their conviction of a corrupt practice. Further, this is the only grounds for council or assembly action.

If this section was eliminated, an assembly or council would have no ability to remove an elected official from office. If only the limitation on home-rule powers was eliminated, it might mean that home-rule municipalities could enable their assemblies or councils to remove elected officials for other than election law violations. (Note AS 29.24.710 allows an assembly or council to declare an office "vacant" for certain reasons. This section (710) should be reviewed from a policy viewpoint).

The most advisable policy option might be to simply state, for all classes of municipalities, that conviction of election law violations deprives an individual of elected office. This would seem to be the strongest method of making sure elected officials and those running for office "play by the rules". If this cannot be accomplished, at least the limitation on home rule powers should be retained, but perhaps these sections can be combined into a single section dealing with removal from office by a means other than recall.

(13) AS 29.24.340(a). ELECTION AND TERM OF MAYOR. This paragraph allows home rule cities to prescribe residency requirements for the office of mayor. Other classes of cities are specifically empowered to establish a residency requirement of up to three years. Evidently, home rule cities may exceed this residence requirement.

(There is some question in general on the length of residency requirements - perhaps any limitation over one year is not legally sound.)

This paragraph only limits all classes of cities from establishing any qualifications on holding office other than a residency requirement. As a general guarantee of the rights of an individual to run for office, and a reflection of faith in the electorate's ability to judge those seeking office, this limitation should probably be retained.

(15) AS 29.24.680. PROHIBITIONS RESPECTING APPOINTMENT AND REMOVAL OF PERSONNEL. This section is primarily a non-discrimination clause. As home-rule municipalities may act as they wish unless prohibited by law, the express prohibition against discriminatory action found in AS 29.24.680 may make the limitation on home-rule powers unnecessary, while ensuring home-rule municipalities are prevented from engaging in discriminatory actions.

(16) AS 29.24.700. MUNICIPAL REPORTS. This section lists the reports that all municipalities must file to be eligible for state assistance under AS 29.62 - the revised state shared revenue program. This entire section could probably be accomplished as regulations in the revenue sharing program, rather than establishing a statutory reporting requirement. This is especially true in light of AS 29.33.230, which also requires all municipalities to complete an audit. (See (29) below).

(17) AS 29.27.010(a)(12). MUNICIPAL EXEMPTION ON CONTRACTOR BOND REQUIREMENTS. This subparagraph requires municipalities to exempt by ordinance contractors providing construction or repair of municipal public works projects from performance bonds. This is evidently to prevent such exemptions from bonding to be granted by a manager or department of a municipality. The accountablity of those decisions to the public is probably the principal reason for this limitation. However, this seems to be a minor point, in that the city remains responsible for public works projects and must "make good" on a contractor's non-performance. Thus, a municipality has a financial reason to grant exemptions from bonding only when warranted, whether the exemption is granted by ordinance or by administrative action.

(18) AS 29.27.060. CODIFICATION. This section requires all municipalities to codify ordinances within three years of incorporation and every five years thereafter. As a compulsion on home-rule municipalities to codify their ordinances, this section is probably unnecessary.

(19) AS 29.30.010, 020(6), 030. MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS. The effect of these sections is to prevent a home-rule municipality from altering voter qualifications of AS 29; prevent a home-rule municipality from allowing a person to serve as a borough mayor and assemblyman, or as a city mayor and assemblyman, at the same time; and prevent a home-rule municipality from calling a special election upon less than 20 days notice. (AS 29.30.330 states that an election to fill a vacancy created by recall will be held at least 10 days and not more than 45 days from the recall election. Appears somewhat contradictory)

As far as establishing minimum standards in the conduct of local elections, these restrictions on home-rule automomy appear warranted.

(20) AS 29.30.060(f) APPEALS ON REMOVAL FROM OFFICE. (I think the correct citation is not 29.30.060, but only subsection (f) of that section.) This subsection simply states that there is no appeal to removal from office that is accomplished by an assembly or council pursuant to an elected official's conviction on an election violation. This limitation is probably unnecessary; if a home rule municipality wants to provide for an appeal there is no reason that it should not do so.

(21) AS 29.30.210-330. RECALL. This article describes the procedure to be used in recall of elected officials. The addition of a sentence stating that these provisions must be followed by home-rule municipalities unless another process is adopted by ordinance would seem to satisfy the concern that home-rule municipalities must provide for some recall procedure. They could then be relieved of the burden of following the specific procedures set out in this article.

A secondary concern is whether the procedure in Title 29 establishes the minimum procedure that a home-rule municipality must meet. That is, should a home-rule government be prohibited from requiring more signatures on a recall petition than is found in state law? If the recall procedure set out in AS 29.30.210-330 is a minimum set of standards that a home rule recall ordinance must meet or surpass, it should be stated in the enabling legislation suggested above.

(22) AS 29.33.020. EXTRATERRITORIAL JURISDICTION. This section provides limited powers of extraterritorial jurisdiction. The limitation on home-rule municipalities of acting otherwise than allowed simply clarifies the legislative intent that only these specific extraterritorial powers be implemented. Unless a broader scope of extraterritorial planning and service delivery powers for home-rule municipalities is desired, it is probably best to leave this restriction intact.

(23) AS 29.33.030. EMINENT DOMAIN. This section allows municipalities to exercise the power of eminent domain as provided in AS 9.55.250-460 (Code of Civil Procedure) with the further provision that each exercise of eminent domain powers be approved by the voters. Requiring eminent domain to be exercised in conformance with AS 9.55.250-460 places tight constraints on the eminent domain power. The requirement that each exercise of eminent domain be approved by the voters may be philosophically attractive but with the publication, compensation, public declaration and judicial appeal processes included in AS 9.55.250-460, may be unnecessary as a constraint on the misuses of eminent domain.

This section could be effectively broken into two subsections, the first requiring all municipalities to exercise eminent domain in conformance to AS 9.55.240-460, and the second subsection including further restrictions. Home-rule municipalities would be limited only by the first subsection.

(24) AS 29.33.080. GARBAGE AND SOLID WASTE SERVICES. The limitations operating on home-rule governments are found in subsection (b), which states that a municipality may not prevent a pre-existing, validly certified waste collection or disposal service from operating within the municipality unless the municipality buys out all or a portion of that operation.

Due process requirements, court definition of the "taking" rights, and the restrictions on the exercise of eminent domain would seem to implement some of the concerns behind this limitation. The effect of this limitation is desirable; the technical group should state whether the intent of this limitation would be achieved through other requirements if this limitation was removed.

(25) AS 29.33.090(b). EFFECT OF AREAWIDE EXERCISE OF BOROUGH POWERS. This subsection primarily limits the powers of home-rule cities within boroughs in that home-rule cities are prohibited from exercising a power that is exercised by a surrounding borough on an areawide basis. (Other portions of this subsection enumerate powers that boroughs may provide areawide or non-areawide at their option; this is a permissive section and would probably allow home-rule boroughs the same powers without their specific mention.

This subsection should be split and the provision applicable to home-rule cities within boroughs clarified and stated separately.

(26) AS 29.33.090(c). BOROUGH BUILDING CODE JURISDICTION WITHIN CITIES. This reference is non-existent. Building codes are treated in AS 29.33.090(a)(14); this sentence states that the exercise of building code powers may be adopted according to AS 29.33.090(b). The home-rule limitation should be dropped, and the reference to AS 29.33.090(a)(14) added to those powers specifically listed in subsection (b).

(27) AS 29.33.100-160. UTILITIES. These sections set out the procedures around the creation of municipal utilities, granting of franchises, rights of franchise holders, rights of the public, rate setting and so on. As municipal utilities are not regulated by the Public Utilities System, this section forms the basic statutory framework enabling municipal utilities to be formed.

Unless the technical group thinks that an adequate guarantee of public interests in the creation of utilities and franchises and rate-setting is available outside of these sections, the requirement that home-rule municipalities conform to these provisions is probably useful.

(28) AS 29.33.220. EXPENDITURES OF BOROUGH REVENUE. This section sets basic parameters of municipal expenditures, while allowing home-rule municipalities wide latitude in fiscal priorities. The section states that revenues levied and collected areawide must be used areawide, while revenues collected in areas outside cities can only be expended on functions outside cities. This does not appear to be a necessary constraint on home-rule powers. If the citizens of a community wish to support a particular non-areawide function on an areawide basis, they should be allowed to do so. This section also appears to contradict the ability of a borough to pledge the full faith and credit of a borough's areawide tax base to support capital improvements in a service area or the area outside cities (upon areawide voter approval) as provided in AS 29.51.040.

(29) AS 29.33.230. POST AUDIT. This section requires that all municipalities complete an audit or financial statement annually. This provision should be retained as applicable to both home-rule and general law municipalities, unless the policy group feels municipalites should have the ability to prepare audits on some other basis, such as every two years. In any event, the limitation should be set out in law, as a minimal guarantee of financial accountability to the public.

(30) AS 29.36.010(b). AREAWIDE BOROUGH POWERS. This section prohibits home-rule cities within boroughs from exercising the following mandatory borough powers; education powers; planning, platting and zoning powers; and tax assessment and collection. This is a prohibition on exercise of powers dealing with relations between governmental units which needs to be retained. If more latitude for cities within boroughs is desired, this section should be reworded to allow boroughs to delegate a power by ordinance to a city, such as is found in AS 29.33.090(b).

(31) AS 29.34.050, AS 29.36.230(d). RESPONSIBILITY FOR EDUCATION ON MILITARY RESERVATIONS. (Note: incorrect citation-AS 39.36.320 should read AS 29.36.230(d)]. AS 29.34.040 sets out the relationship between a borough school district and responsibility for on-base education. As this reflects a real constraint on the exercise of local education powers by the federal government, this section is probably unnecessary. That is, a home-rule government might not be able to act otherwise than provided, even if it wished to do so.

As the citation to AS 29.36.230(d) concerns only third class boroughs, it is unnecessary to include as a limitation on home-rule municipalities.

(32) AS 29.36.130(c) ACQUISITION OF ADDITIONAL AREAWIDE POWERS. This subsection describes the procedure for the transfer of a power exercised by a city to a borough upon voter approval of a new borough areawide power. This subsection should probably be divided into two parts, with the first four sentences dealing with an areawide election and election results in one subsection, and the discussion of transfer of powers elevated to become a separate section. The home rule limitation should then be applied only to that section dealing with the orderly transfer of power from one municipality to another.

(33) AS 29.39.020-060. POWERS OF CITIES OUTSIDE BOROUGHS. These sections apply the mandatory borough powers of education; tax collection; and planning, platting and zoning to cities outside of incorporated boroughs. Section .020 extends the power of assessment and tax collection to such cities and section .030 gives cities the authority to establish differential tax zones. These sections are primarily permissive, although section .020 states that tax collection functions must be implemented as provided in AS 29.45. The only apparent reason for identifying this section as a home-rule limitation seems to be that requirement that home-rule cities comply with AS 29.45. The technical group must determine whether this limitation should be stated here, or whether it needs to be stated only in AS 29.45.530.

Sections .040 and .060, however, mandate that home rule cities outside boroughs establish schools and provide planning, platting, and zoning. There is a major policy question over the mandate that home-rule and first-class cities outside boroughs establish school districts. This section was established prior to the creation of REAAs. Now, the incorporation or reclassification of cities to home-rule or first class status would mean the fragmentation of existing districts. (The City of Bethel is a good example-the headquarters of the Lower Kuskokwim School district are located in Bethel. In order for Bethel to take advantage of home-rule or first class city status, Bethel would be required to establish its own school district.)

Section .040 could be made permissive rather than mandatory. This would allow cities to establish their own school districts if, in their own view, such local services were preferrable to existing REAA education services.

If such a change were to be recommended, the applicability of the home-rule limitation would depend upon whether the restriction that education be provided in conformance with AS 29.36.040 relates to borough school districts, the technical group may recommend that the limitation on home-rule cities be retained to make that reference effective.

Section .060 makes the exercise of planning, platting and zoning powers mandatory for home-rule cities outside of boroughs. The policy question here is not one of removing a prohibition on the actions of home-rule cities but whether planning should be mandated for cities outside boroughs. (As in the previous section, the limitation may need to be retained in order to require home-rule cities outside boroughs to conform to AS 29.42.010-245 Planning Powers of Boroughs - by reference.)

(34) AS 29.42.040(d). ZONING OF STATE LAND FOR HOMESITE ENTRY. This section was repealed by Sec. 45, Ch 85, SLA 1979.

(35) AS 29.42.080(b). APPLICABILITY OF LOCAL PLATTING REGULATIONS TO STATE LAND IN A MUNICIPALITY. This subsection limits the power of municipalities to require subdivision improvements on state land disposals. Unless state policy is changed to support compliance with local subdivision improvement requirements in the state's own land disposal program, this limitation on platting powers of home-rule municipalities will have to be retained. (The technical committee might determine that, because of state supremacy considerations, this limitation is unnecessary. Local governments may not have the authority to require the state to build subdivision improvements, even without subsection [b]).

(36) AS 29.45.010-450. BOROUGH AND CITY PROPERTY TAXES. This citation should probably be changed to AS 29.45.010-540 rather than AS 29.45.010-450, as the sections following .450 also deal with the implementation of a property tax. This Article provides the complete framework for the exercise of local property taxing authority, including the rights of the public in relation to their local taxing authority. Unless the policy group decides that home-rule governments should be free to establish their own taxing systems, this limitation should be retained. Even if the limitation on home-rule powers was lifted, those sections of AS 29.45 dealing with taxation of state-owned property and those sections detailing the taxing powers of cities within boroughs might have to be kept in force.

(37) AS 29.45.020. TAXPAYER NOTICE. This limitation is included in the previous citation. However, if the general limitation on the taxing powers of home-rule governments was lifted, this section might have to remain limited. Section .020 requires that municipalities which levy a property tax must provide notice of the effective tax rate, and of the state's contributions to local revenue through a variety of state funding mechanisms, on an annual basis. The intention of this section is to make the state's role in funding local services apparent to the local taxpayer.

As an aside, the Municipal Assistance Fund, administered by the Department of Revenue, should probably be added to the list of state programs reported in the Notice to Taxpayers. In fiscal 1980, this fund distributed over $16 million to communities.

(38) AS 29.45.580(d). INTEREST ON SALES TAX. This citation apparently needs to be changed to AS 29.45.570(d). Apparently, the only provision of the statutes relating to sales tax collection which home-rule boroughs must follow is that interest on delinquent sales tax accounts is levied at at 8% annual rate. Should home rule boroughs be limited to this rate? If not, the limitation should be removed.

In a broader sense, there are some apparent inconsistencies regarding the property and sales taxes, and their application to home-rule governments. There is no stated limitation that home-rule boroughs must follow the sales tax procedures set out in AS 29.45.570-590, except for the subsection 570(d). There is no state restriction on how home-rule cities within boroughs may levy a sales tax, except for an earlier blanket provision that no city may exercise a power exercised by a borough on an areawide basis. How does AS 29.45.610-630, which grants sales tax powers to cities inside boroughs, relate to home-rule cities? Are home-rule cities within boroughs limited to sources taxed by the borough, and in the manner provided by boroughs (AS 29.45.610)? This may be somewhat confusing, in that AS 29.39.020 gives cities outside boroughs the same powers of rate setting, identification of items to be taxed, etc., as are enjoyed by boroughs. Do home-rule cities within boroughs have that same flexibility?

(39) AS 29.48.090. EXEMPTION FROM SPECIAL ASSESSMENT. This section mandates that municipalities exempt the residential property of senior citizens from special assessments, and provides a procedure for municipalities to follow in granting those exemptions. In that if both require local governments to grant exemptions and sets out a procedure to be followed, this limitation is probably required.

(40) AS 29.51.520-530. BONDED DEBT FOR SCHOOL CONSTRUCTION. This citation should read AS 29.51.420-430. Section .420 specifically allows home-rule governments to exceed limitations in their charters on the issuing of bonds, if additional funds are needed for school construction. Section .430 then establishes a mechanism that would guarantee state repayment of the principal and interest of the bonds authorized under the previous section.

This section was written specifically for the City of Petersburg, and was never implemented. The entire section should be deleted, especially now that the state has revised its School Foundation Program to fund 100% of local construction debt service.

(41) AS 29.51.210(b). SECURITY FOR BONDS. This subsection specifically states that general obligation bonds for a revenue-producing utility may be additionally guaranteed by the revenue from that utility. The section goes on to provide that bonds so secured are not subject to debt limitations contained in a home-rule charter. The effect of this "limitation", then, is to give a home-rule municipality powers beyond its charter.

A policy question that might be considered is whether such a provision should be allowed by statute at all. The effect of this section is to allow a home-rule municipality to pledge the general obligation of its tax base, while not having to conform to any limits on bonded debt that may be in its charter. If the revenue-producing service cannot meet the debt service payments, the service costs of that debt fall back on the community's tax base.

The intention of this section may be to "create" a bond that functions like a revenue bond but has general obligation bond guarantees. While this may produce lower interest rates at the bond market than a strict revenue bond could command, the fiscal intention of the local residents may be of more importance in those few instances where this may be implemented.

In any event, the application may be rather limited. Discussion with Pat Poland and Terry Early at the Department of Community and Regional Affairs indicates that very few charters include debt limitation.

(42) AS 29.51.390. BOND ATTORNEYS, BOND AND FINANCIAL CONSULTANTS. This section provides that only the governing body of a municipality can contract for the services of bond attorneys, bond and financial consultants. The policy question involved in deleting this limitation is whether such contracts for financial planning services should only be entered into by the assembly, or whether a manager's office should also have that authority, as may be authorized by charter. If the charter does not require all contracts to be approved by the council or assembly, is there any purpose in singling out these types of services? Public accountability purposes are still served by the fact that capital programs must still be approved by the governing body, and bonds approved by local voters.

(43) AS 29.62. MUNICIPAL TAX RESOURCE EQUALIZATION.

(44) AS 29.62. STATE AID FOR MISCELLANEOUS MUNICIPAL SERVICES.

This article details the state's revised revenue sharing program. The "limitation" inherent in this article concerns eligibility for the revenue sharing programs. As such, there is probably no need for a citation as a limitation on home rule powers. If a community wants to participate in the program, it will conform to the application procedure included in the statutes which established the revenue sharing program. (Much of this article might be accomplished by program regulations rather than statute.)

(45) AS 29.71.010. ADVERSE POSSESSION. This section states that municipalities cannot be divested of real property through adverse possession. While this statute applies to home-rule municipalities, it is probably not necessary to cite this section under the list of limitations on home-rule powers.

(46) AS 29.71.020. TAXATION OF MUNICIPALITIES. Again, this section has no direct "limitation" on home-rule actions. Section .020 provides that the state cannot tax municipalities, unless the intention to tax is clearly stated in the state statute or regulation. There is probably no need to include this citation under the general heading of "limitations" on home-rule powers.

TITLE 29 REVISION COMMISSION
Policy Advisory Group Meeting

Minutes of December 15, 16, & 17, 1980

The fourth meeting of the Policy Advisory Group - Title 29 Revision Commission was held December 15, 16, & 17, 1980 in the Adventure Room of the Captain Cook Hotel, Anchorage, Alaska. The meeting was called to order by Senator Arliss Sturgulewski, Chairman, at 9:00 a.m.

Present as members of the Policy Advisory Group were: Senator Arliss Sturgulewski, Senator-elect Charles Parr, Representative Margaret Branson, Ted Berns, Terry Cook, Marilyn Dimmick, Ronald Larson, Gene Moore, Russell Walker, James Kohler and Jonathan Solomon. Present substituting for Ex-Officio members were Patrick Poland for Palmer McCarter and Marilyn Miller for Ginny Chitwood. The Technical Committee was represented by Ted Berns and Russell Walker as members of both groups. Present from the staff of Legal Services was Tamara Brandt Cook, Legislative Counsel.

Guests and members of the public attending were: Stephanie Scott, Haines Borough; Cris Fowler, AOGA; Robert Walker, Exxon; Carl Mogli, Napakiak; David Dye, Community Planning, Department of Community and Regional Affairs; and Jim Gottstein.

There were no presentations by guests or members of the public.

Chairman Sturgulewski reported on attending the meeting of the Rural Development Council. She says they are concerned with the definitions of "rural" and the relationship of rural communities with Title 29.

The chair requested copies of the Alaska Municipal League Policy Statement issued as a result of its November convention in Fairbanks.

The minutes of the previous meetings were approved as distributed with no corrections or additions.

Under Old Business, Patrick Poland reported that the news release prepared by Legal Services had been distributed and was expected to appear in the December issue of the RuralCAP newsletter. The newsletter distributed by the University of Alaska at Fairbanks was not expected to be published in December but the news release would be included when it was published.

The subcommittee report regarding AS 29.09.180 (Organization Grants) as postponed due to Marilyn Dimmick not being present.

The subcommittee report on AS 29.30.040 (Voter Qualification) was postponed to 17 December.

Ted Berns reported on the Technical Committee's three day meeting saying they had covered a great deal of material in those three days and he hoped that the Policy Group would be able to review all the material produced by that meeting.

Tamara Brandt Cook reported on the format of the presentation of the bill. She said that a draft would be prepared, going first to the revisor of statutes, then to the legal editor and would then be put into final form for presentation to the rules committee for introduction into the legislature.

Turning to the proposed drafting changes submitted by the Technical Committee, it was agreed that the original motion to approve all changes unless otherwise noted would be held in force.

Approved by the Policy Group without changes were: AS 29.24.050, 29.24.125, 29.24.160, 29.24.206, 29.24.210, 29.24.240. Approved with minor wording changes were: AS 29.24.140, 29.24.145, 29.24.150, 29.24.175, 29.24.200, 29.24.250. Sections with substantive changes made by the Policy Group were: AS 29.24.170 and 29.24.205.

The meeting was recessed at 4:30 p.m. until 8:30 a.m. 16 December.

At 8:30 a.m. the meeting was called to order at the Captain Cook Hotel in the Quarterdeck 19 conference room. Policy Advisory Group members attending were: Senator Arliss Sturgulewski, Senator-elect Charles Parr, Representative Margaret Branson, Ted Berns, Terry Cook, Marilyn Dimmick, Ronald Larson, Gene Moore, Russell Walker, and Jonathan Solomon. Representing Ex-Officio members were Patrick Poland for Palmer McCarter and Marilyn Miller for Ginny Chitwood. Guests and members of the public attending were Stephanie Scott, Haines Borough; Robert Walker, Exxon; Cris Fowler, AOGA; David Dye, Community Planning, Department of Community and Regional Affairs, and Carl Hogli, Napakiak.

There were no presentations by guests or members of the public.

The meeting was recessed at 4:30 p.m. due to lack of a quorum.

At 8:30 a.m. 17 December 1980 the Policy Advisory Group meeting was again called to order in the Captain Cook Hotel, Quarterdeck 19 conference room. Members attending were: Senator Arliss Sturgulewski, Representative Margaret Branson, Ted Berns, Terry Cook, Marilyn Dimmick, Ronald Larson, Gene Moore, Russell Walker, and Jonathan Solomon. Representing Ex-Officio members were Patrick Poland for Palmer McCarter and Marilyn Miller for Ginny Chitwood. Sections accepted with wording changes were: AS 29.27.080, 29.36,170, 29.36.270, 29.45.210, 29.51.410. Sections accepted with substantive changes made by the Policy Group were: AS 29.45.030, 29.45.545. Sections not accepted were AS 29.45.030 and 29.48.090. A section sent back to the Technical Committee for new language was 29.45.610. The Policy Group moved to repeal AS 29.45.060.

The chair directed the Technical Committee to review the following: Can a city be inside/a part of a service area? Staff is to review service area language throughout the Title. The Technical Committee is to bring back wording to allow the transition from any class of city to Home Rule.

Stephanie Scott representing the Haines Borough spoke in defense of third class boroughs. The Haines Borough objects to the recommendation that third class boroughs be eliminated. She distributed a letter from the mayor of the Haines Borough asking what the basis for the recommendation was. The Haines borough wants a list of the reasons for the elimination of the third class borough. Marilyn Miller said that the Alaska Municipal League concurred with the elimination of third class boroughs, or at least opposed the formation of any more third class boroughs. The City of Haines also concurs with the elimination of third class boroughs. Ted Berns made a motion that the Policy Group go on the record as concuring with the Alaska Municipal League's position that third class boroughs be eliminated. The motion carried. The chair directed the Technical Committee to draft language which eliminates the formation of third class boroughs but which does not alter the status of the Haines Borough.

The question of Organization Grants is to be held for the next meeting of the Policy Group.

The chair directed the Department of Community and Regional Affairs to look into dissemination of information regarding non-taxable property to state assessors.

Tim Troll says the 14c3 negotiations are affected by the current municipal properties statute and approves of the recommended change.

The dates of the next Policy Advisory Group meeting were set for the 17th and 18th of January, 1981 in Juneau. The Technical Group will have one more meeting as well.

The meeting was adjourned at 4:30 p.m. 17 December 1980.

TITLE 29 REVISION COMMISSION
Policy Advisory Group Meeting

Minutes of November 10 & 11, 1980

The third meeting of the Policy Advisory Group - Title 29 Revision Commission was held November 10 and 11, 1980 in the East Gold Room of the Traveler's Inn, Fairbanks, Alaska. The meeting was called to order by Senator Arliss Sturgulewski, Chairman, at 10:45 a.m.

Present as members of the Policy Advisory Group were: Senator Arliss Sturgulewski, Senator Bob Mulcahy, Senator-elect Charles Parr, Representative Margaret Branson, Ted Berns, Terry Cook, Marilyn Dimmick, Ronald Larson, Gene Moore, Donna Sherby, and Russell Walker. Present as Ex-Offico Members were Palmer McCarter, and Bonnie Hedley from RuralCAP substituting for Phil Smith. The Technical Committee was represented by Ted Berns and Russell Walker as members of both groups, and by Allan Tesche. Present from the staff of Legal Services were Billy G. Berrier, Director and Tamara Brandt Cook, Legislative Counsel.

Guests and members of the public attending were: Stephanie Scott, Haines Borough; Cris Fowler, AOGA; Bob Walker, Exxon; Mike Walleri, Tanana Chiefs; John Arney, Haines Borough; Bob Juettner, City of McGrath; Michael Tavoliero, City of Saxman; Marie Matsuno, Department of Community and Regional Affairs; Ivan Widom, City of Nome; Lisa Buskirk, Tanana Chiefs; John Halliwill, City of Haines; Tommy Nebel, Ketchikan Borough; Kathy Carssow, Ketchikan Borough; Marvin Yoder, Ketchikan Borough; Tom Blanton, Haines Borough; Jerry Clifton, Haines Borough Assembly; Dan Ogt, Kodiak Island Borough; Shirley Collins, Haines; Jack Carpenter, Sitnasuak Native Corporation; Edward A. Stahla, City of Wrangell; Richard Careaga, City of Unalaska; Robert Flint, Wohlforth & Flint; Jack P. Van Leuven, RainierBank.

There were no presentations by guests or members of the public.

Under Old Business, Palmer McCarter reported on ways of getting materials and information to the public. He said the Department of Community and Regional Affairs was planning newsletter inserts and coordinating with the University of Alaska for a special issue of their newsletter to include an insert concerning the revision of Title 29. Chairman Sturgulewski directed Bonnie Hedley to coordinate information activities with Mr. McCarter and Tamara Cook.

Bonnie Hedley gave a report from RuralCAP on special problems of rural communities. She stated that rural communities have little "hook-up" with state agencies and therefore have little access to programs and money. The legislature never meets as the assembly for the Unorganized Borough. It is felt that there are not enough people in small communities to perform all the required municipal functions as well as the functions of existing forms of government, such as IRA councils. RuralCAP recommends the recognition of IRA councils. Chairman Sturgulewski directed staff to prepare a memo on these issues.

Mike Walleri presented a new draft of his report entitled "Tribal-State Relations, A New Paradigm for Local Government in Alaska". The chair directed staff to review it.

Chairman Sturgulewski reported attending a meeting of the AVCP in Bethel, and said they were getting funds to do a regional government study. She also reported on attending the AFN convention in Anchorage. The people she talked to questioned parallel governments and duplication of functions in the communities where there were municipal governments as well as traditional governments.

Ginny Chitwood of the Municipal League was stranded in Juneau due to weather and her report was postponed.

Billy Berrier reported what the Commission had done to date. Ted Berns said the Technical Committee planned to present final recommendations to the Policy Group by the 15th of December, 1980.

The Technical Committee presented their proposed drafts for consideration to the Policy Group. Representative Branson moved that the Policy Group accept all recommended changes except those requiring more discussion. The motion was seconded and carried. The following sections were accepted. (Note: There were wording changes in some in the following) Sec. 29.06.010, Sec. 29.06.050, Sec. 29.12.260, 29.15.020, 29.15.050, 29.15.110, 29.65.050, 29.30.010, 29.30.020, 29.30.030, 29.30.050, 29.30.095, 29.30.110, 29.30.120, 29.30.130, 29.30.140, 29.30.150, 29.30.160, 29.30.170, 29.30.180. Sections 29.09.180 and 29.30.040 were sent to subcommittees for study.

The meeting was recessed until 9:00 a.m. 11 November 1980.

At 9:00 a.m. 11 November 1980 the meeting was again called to order in the East Gold Room of the Traveler's Inn, Fairbanks, Alaska. All members of the Policy Advisory Group were in attendance. Members of the public and guests who attended the day before were present and the following people attended as well: Ginny Chitwood, Ex-Officio Member; Gerald Lee Sharp, Title 29 Technical Committee; Richard Garnett, III, Title 29 Technical Committee, David Dye, Department of Community and Regional Affairs; Leo Rasmussen, City of Nome; L.C. Farnen, City of Homer; Kathy Herold, City of Homer; Carol Maser, Anchorage Assembly; Jenny Files, Fort Yukon; and former Mayor Bill Wood, Fairbanks.

Mayor Wood gave the first presentation. He spoke on the need for municipalities to have developmental authority in order to [illegible] within the cities and boroughs. He submitted a letter from the City of Fairbanks regarding tax incentive programs and referred to Fairbanks ordinance 3906. The Technical Committee was directed to review AS 29.53.025.

John Halliwill, Mayor of Haines spoke in favor of the elimination of Third Class Boroughs.

Bob Juettener, City Manager of McGrath spoke on the problems of communities with small populations supporting the large number of organizations making up municipal government. He recommended an evaluation of second class cities and abolishing those that are not functioning. He suggests that the group providing the best service delivery be chosen as the governing body of a community. He feels the different classifications of cities should be abolished and provisions made for local options concerning the assumption of powers and form of government. He sees a need in the bush for a means of dealing with the executive branch of government, perhaps a regional or sub-regional elected body in the Unorganized Borough.

Ivan Widom, City Manager of Nome said there was a need to regionalize concepts in order to see what is happening in specific areas. He recommends giving communities mechanisms for reaching the state in order to benefit from services offered. Mr. Widom also recommended giving communities the option of choosing their own form of government, such as home rule.

Michael Tavoleiro, City Manager of Saxman spoke next, saying there was no definition of local government, i.e., no expressed definition of eligibility characteristics. He feels that second class cities within an organized borough are disenfranchised from planning powers. He stated also that second class cities should have direct access to federal and state programs instead of being required to go through the borough. Mr. Tavoliero cited the Historical Districts program as an example. He feels that local communities should be allowed more self-sufficiency.

Larry Farnen, City Manager of Homer spoke in reference to 29.48.260. He recommended raising the dollar amount in that section from $25,000 to $250,000. He wants cities to have the authority to lease land to beneficial new industry. In reference to planning and zoning powers, Mr. Farnen recommended the statutory language be changed to allow boroughs to assume planning and zoning powers if the cities are not willing to exercise them.

Dan Ogt, Mayor of the Kodiak Island Borough cited AS 29.30.160 saying there was no provision for special elections, and recommended special elections be mandated in the statutues.

Richard Careaga, Planning Director for the City of Unalaska wants more definition/clarification of mandatory powers and duties.

Lee Rasmussen, Mayor of Nome told staff government feels that it has lost control of its own destiny. Planning is being taken over by REAAs and SRAAs. He said Nome feels threatened by the possible organization of the Unorganized Borough and he asked for more local autonomy.

Returning to Old Business, the Policy Group continued its review of the recommended drafting changes submitted by the Technical Committee. Sec. 29.30.210 was reviewed. James Kohler moved to not accept the drafted change but to retain the current language. Charles Parr amended the motion, and it carried. The chair directed staff to clarify the wording of the current statute and resubmit it at the next meeting of the Policy Group. Secs. 29.30.220, 29.30.225, 20.30.230, 29.30.240, 29.30.250, 29.30.260, 29.30.270,29.30.280, 29.30.290, 29.30.300, 29.30.310, 29.30.320, were accepted with no changes or some wording changes. 29.30.330 was sent back to the Technical Committee for redrafting.

Two subcommittees were formed and are to give reports at the next meeting on AS 29.09.180 Organization Grants (Chair-McCarter) and AS 29.30.040 Voter Qualifications (Chair-Dimmick).

Two sections of Title 29 considered obsolete were discussed. The Policy Group will recommend the repeal of the sections on Involvement of Young People in Local Government and the repeal of the sections on Development Cities.

The dates of the next meeting of the Policy Advisory Group were set for 15, 16, and 17 December, 1980 in Anchorage.

Staff is to review the definition of "petitioner".

The meeting was adjourned at 4:30 p.m.

TITLE 29 REVISION COMMISSION
Policy Advisory Group Meeting

Minutes of September 29 & 30, 1980

The second meeting of the Policy Advisory Group of the Title 29 Revision Commission was held September 29, 1980 in Courtroom K of the Alaska Court System Building, 303 K Street, Anchorage, Alaska. The meeting was called to order by Senator Arliss Sturgulewski, Chairman, at 9:00 a.m.

Present as members of the Policy Group were: Senator Arliss Sturgulewski, Representative Charles H. Parr, Ronald Larson, Russell W. Walker, Marilyn Dimmick, Donna Sherby, Jonathan Solomon, James Kohler, Ted Berns, and Dennis Sheldon representing Terry Cook. Ex-Officio members present were Ginny Chitwood and Phil Smith. Richard Garnett, III was there as a member of the Technical Committee. Ted Berns and Russell Walker are members of both the Policy Group and the Technical Group. Present from the staff of Legal Services were Jack Chenowith and Tamara Cook.

There to make presentations to the Policy Group were C. Demming Cowles, Deputy Commissioner of the Department of Environmental Conservation; David Dye, Planner for the Department of Community and Regional Affairs; Dr. Fred McGinnis, Deputy Commissioner of the Department of Health and Social Services; Stephanie Scott, representing the Haines Borough Assembly; and Mike Walleri representing Tanana Chiefs, Inc.

Guests and members of the public attending were: Stuart Bowdoin, Bristol Bay Borough; Gary Bradford, Bristol Bay Borough, Glen Svendsen, Administrative Assistant, Senate Community and Regional Affairs Committee; Cris Fowler, AOGA Regulatory Reform Committee; Ray Menninger from Haines; Jim Bennett, researcher for AVCP (Calista Corporation); Ellen Greenburg, and Emily Larson.

After the meeting was called to order and guests introduced themselves, Commissioner Cowles began the presentations. He spoke regarding the functions of the Department of Environmental Conservation which could be locally done and raised policy questions about whether state or local government should be in charge of the following functions:

1. Water system and sewage disposal inspections.
2. Subdivision review of on-site sanitation capabilities.
3. Basic sanitation inspections of restaurants, hotels, etc.

4. Clean up of small oil spills.

5. The issuing of oily waste burn permits and surface oiling permits.

6. Litter control.

7. Vehicular emmissions control.

Changes to Title 29 would have to be made to allow for delegation of these powers. Commissioner Cowles suggested that the statutes could make it optional for small communities to assume these powers and provide for state reimbursement, because money for communities to perform these services is a problem.

Stephanie Scott representing the Haines Borough Assembly spoke next. The borough of Haines would like a clarification of the powers of third class boroughs. She reported that the Borough Chairman had the following recommendations to make:

1. Rewrite 29.48.260(e) to relieve procedural requirements under Libby vs. Dillingham.

2. Include inventories as optional exemptions from personal property taxation.

Ms. Scott stated there would be teleconference facilities available in Haines December 1, and there was a great deal of local interest in participating in a teleconference with the Policy Group.

David Dye, Planner III for the Department of Community and Regional Affairs made these recommendations from his division:

1. The law should be amended to allow municipal land exchanges with individuals. Municipal expansion land in some cases is located too far from the community to be used for municipal expansion. The definition of "municipal purpose" should be clarifed.

2. Subsection (c) of 29.48.260 sets out two procedural requirements for land disposal. Mr. Dye reccommends that lottery be added as an equitable way of disposing of land which is not based on wealth.

3. The provision for voter ratification of disposal of land valued at more than $25,000.00 should be changed to reflect current land values. A more realistic figure would be 50,000.00 to 100,000.00 dollars.

4. Subsection (d) of 29.48.260 exempts lands derived from the state from procedural requirements. C&RA suggests that exemption turn on the purpose of disposal, not the source of the land.

5. Under ANCSA, people who have occupied land after December 18, 1971 do not receive title to that land. C&RA would like a preference right for occupiers of land after that date to allow them to purchase land without having to bid.

6. Mr. Dye would like a definition of "official map".

7. The wording of AS 29.23.090 should be changed to substitute "land use regulation" for "zoning".

8. C&RA suggests that rather than a platting waiver provision, the section include a "short plat" provision to allow for additional platting requirements if the land were subsequently re-subdivided.

9. AS 29.33.070(b)(2) allows boroughs to delegate planning and zoning to cities. The Department of Community and Regional Affairs believes in consistent area-wide planning and wants only the delegation of enforcement and administration of planning.

10. The sections regarding Development Cities should be deleted.

Mike Walleri of Tanana Chiefs, Inc. spoke regarding municipal lands disposal and the need for preference to occupiers of land regarding purchasing rights. This should, however, be subject to the municipality's sanction of the use of the land. Mr. Walleri recommends a waiver of the requirements for land payments to the municipality, or that the state assist buyers in paying for the land. Tanana Chiefs would support a lottery system if the preference rights and waiver of payments to municipalities were included. Mr. Walleri spoke in favor of integrating traditional native governments into the municipal system, possibly through recognition by the state of the status of native governments as local state governments.

Dr. Fred McGinnis of the Department of Health and Social services told us that his department recommends the delegation of health powers to municipalities. If municipalities were to take over the providing of services, the DHSS would still receive federal funding, would disburse the funds, would audit programs, supervise, and be responsible to the federal government for the administration of the programs. He emphasized that these powers should be optional rather than mandatory, and that in the absence of local government being able to take over the function of health services, a local contractor could provide them.

After the presentations, the committee considered Old Business. Phil Smith gave a report on the conclusions of the Information Dissemination Committee. Their recommendations are: take advantage of scheduled meetings and conventions being held by interested groups; put inserts in newsletters; buy space in newspapers; and use the teleconference network. Mr. Smith reported that the Alaska Federation of Natives Convention will be making a room available for us at the Sheraton. Chairman Sturgulewski said a member of each group should be available to attend the AFN Convention. She also directed the Department of Community and Regional Affairs to prepare an article on the Title 29 revision project for newsletters.

Ted Berns gave a report from the Technical Committee. He explained the draft index of Title 29, saying the reorganization had been done by subject matter. Mr. Berns told the Policy Group that the Technical Group was now ready to start drafting and the group had broken up into smaller groups to work on specific changes.

Chairman Sturgulewski said the Policy Group would like justification of all drafted changes in the form of memos pointing out the pluses and minuses of each change.

Ted Berns suggested that the Policy Group go through the index section by section and determine policy questions.

The Policy Group reviewed the index until recessing at 4:30.

The meeting was called to order 30 September 1980 at 9:00 a.m. by Chairman Sturgulewski. With the exception of Bob Lohr sitting in for Phil Smith, the same members were present. Guests were: Bob Walker of Exxon; Cris Fowler of the AOGA Regulatory Reform Committee; David Dye from the Department of Community and Regional Affairs; Stephanie Scott, Ray Menninger, and Vivian Menniger from the Haines Borough; Glen Svendsen, Administrative Assistant to the Senate Community and Regional Affairs Committee; and Mike Walleri, Tanana Chiefs, Inc.

The Policy Group continued their review of the Title 29 index and the Technical Group was directed to make recommendations regarding the following:

1. AS 29.13.100. Review and make recommendations as to the limitations of home rule powers.

2. Edit the whole of Title 29 so that definitions are consistent.

3. List those procedures which can be handled by ordinances.

4. Prepare drafts to change prohibitions on powers.

5. Draft changes to the statute regarding initiative and referendum.

6. Draft provisions for emergency situations arising from the lack of a quorum.

7. Redraft statute enabling budget actions to take place other than by ordinance. Enable an individual municipality to set it's own limits.

8. Make recommendations regarding whether first class boroughs should be eliminated and consider the impact of this step.

9. Find out whether second class boroughs would still be able to implement a similar program if the statute about the Involvement of Young People in Local Government were to be deleted.

Chairman Sturgulewski directed that the Local Boundary Commission and Alan Tesche be invited to make a presentation in defense of retaining the statutes regarding Development Cities.

Ron Larson moved the Policy Group retain the 3-year residency requirement for candidates for municipal office. The motion was seconded, Jim Kohler raised a point of order. The motion carried.

Marilyn Dimmick moved that the wording of the grounds for recall be deleted. The motion was seconded. Ron Larson moved to table the motion. Larson's motion failed. Ted Berns moved to postpone the motion until the next meeting. The motion for postponement passed.

Bob Lohr of RuralCAP was directed to come back with specific recommendations for the Technical Group regarding small communities and their problems.

The meeting was adjourned at 4:00 p.m.

Respectfully submitted,

Melissa Aber Fouse

The first order of business was the selection of a chairman for the committee. Nominations were opened and Senator Sturgulewski was nominated by Representative Parr. The nomination was seconded and Senator Sturgulewski was elected Chairman by acclamation.

Mr. Berrier spoke on the role of the Technical Revision Committee and asked for an appointment of a group. A motion to set up a Technical Revision Group was made by Representative Branson. The motion was seconded and carried. The Technical Revision Committee members will be Ted Berns, Richard Garnett, III; John Messenger, Jim Nordale, JoAnne Shanley, Gerald Lee Sharp, Allan Tesche, and Russell Walker.

The Ex Officio members were introduced and there was discussion as to their role. It was agreed that they should sit at the table and take part in the discussion. Palmer McCarter spoke about the role of Community and Regional Affairs. He said that there would be a representative of C&RA at every meeting, either he or Patrick Poland would attend. Mr. McCarter also presented a letter from the Local Boundary commission requesting the statutes regarding Development cities be left in Title 29 but improved. Phil Smith spoke on the concerns of RuralCAP regarding the impact of government on villages and rural areas.

Representative Parr suggested directions for the Policy Committee: 1). greater self determination and latitude for local governments; and 2.) that elected officials should be able to understand Title 29 without the help of attorneys. Senator Sturgulewski agreed that Title 29 needed clarification.

The members present of the Technical Committee met briefly and Ted Berns, as spokesman, gave a report regarding the ideas they discussed. The group recommended that Title 29 be broken down into three sections.

1. The first section to be general provisions applying to all local government.
2. The second section to be delineation of procedures and additional limits on specific forms of government.
3. The third section to be directory provisions to be used unless the local government adopts ordinances of their own.

It was decided that the Technical Committee should attempt to reorganize Title 29 along these lines and present a draft at the next meeting.

Mike Walleri, Village Government Specialist, Tanana Chiefs Conference, Inc., spoke, saying he would like a simplification of government.

A list of items pertaining to Title 29 included in the preliminary draft of the Alaska Municipal League 1981 policy statement was handed out.

Future meeting dates and places were discussed. None were decided upon.

The kinds of things applicable to all municipalities were discussed, such as incorporation, dissolution, boundary changes, classification of government, extraterritorial powers, merger/consoldiation, revenue, taxation, bonding, and intergovernmental relations.

Protection of people in service areas who are not represented by local government, such as persons living outside city limits, was discussed.

The meeting recessed at 4:00 pm.

The meeting was called to order the second day at 9:00 am., Chairman Sturgulewski presiding. In addition to the persons present at the first day's meeting, Chris Johnson of House Research and Nels Franklin from near Dillingham were present, and introduced by Chairman Sturgulewski.

Ted Berns gave a recap of the first days meeting.

Terry Cook was appointed repository of ridiculous laws.

Senator Mulcahy spoke on the problem of getting information, drafts, and policy issues to all municipalities within the time constraints. Phil Smith suggested a teleconference and said that he would be presenting material at the Alaska Federation of Natives Convention (23-25 October 1980, in Anchorage). It was decided that the problem of getting materials and information to the public would be an agenda item at the next meeting. Palmer McCarter, Phil Smith, and Ginny Chitwood of the Alaska Municipal League were appointed to a committee to research this problem and make recommendations.

Melissa Fouse was introduced as the new secretary to the Title 29 Revision Committee.

As part of the reorganization of Title 29, there was discussion as to which statutues belonged in which category.

Representative Parr wants a uniform provision on executive session. There was discussion on executive sessions.

The question of retaining present categories of government was raised and discussed. Ted Berns suggested only two classes of boroughs and home rule, pointing out that there are no first class boroughs.

The question of development cities was raised and discussed. Should we retain, restructure, or eliminate development cities?

There was discussion on the third category. If a municipality choses to follow procedures, should they be required to follow all of them?

Senator Mulcahy's legislation regarding the recognition of village governments was discussed. Copies of HB 192 are to be mailed to committee members.

There was discussion of persons representing committee members being allowed to vote. Mr. Berrier had reservations based on the appointment of the members of the commission according to resolution. It was decided that persons filling in for committee members be allowed to take part in the discussion, but would not be allowed to vote.

The meeting was adjourned at 12:00 pm.

Respectfully submitted,

Melissa Aber Fouse

Dear Mr. Troll:

I have submitted copies of your letter to members of the Title 29 Policy Advisory Group so that they will be aware of your concern over AS 29.48.260. Your other comments which were originally sent to the Department of Community and Regional Affairs have been made available to the Title 29 Policy Advisory Group as well. Please send any additional comments which you have to me and I will see that members of the Policy Group receive copies.

I talked by phone with Mr. James N. Reeves on November 5, 1980. He indicated that he would like to address the Policy Group at the next meeting they hold in Anchorage. I will inform him of the meeting time and place as soon as it is set. Time is made available during meetings of the Policy Group to any person who wishes to address the group, so perhaps you would like to attend a meeting as well. I expect that the Policy Group will decide to meet again early in December and I will inform the group of your desire that the meeting be held in Anchorage.

Dear Ms. Scott:

Thank you for your letter. I have provided copies of the material you sent to all members of the Title 29 Advisory Policy Group.

For your information the Superior Court opinion City of Kodiak v. Kodiak Island Borough was never appealed. Unfortunately, I am not aware of any additional case law construing the statutory provision which limits the authority to form service areas. I will forward any additional information I receive on the subject to you. You have suggested that AS 29.63.090(d) be rewritten to provide more flexibility to municipal governments in creating service areas. Since that section is essentially a restatement of language contained in the state constitution, I doubt that rewritting the statute would accomplish your purpose.

Please send me any other suggestions which you may have regarding proposed changes to the Municipal Code and I will gladly forward them on to the Policy Group. Our next meeting is scheduled to be held in Fairbanks on November 10th and 11th. I hope to see you there.

SUBJECT: Proposed drafting change

TO: Advisory Policy Committee -
Title 29 Revision

FROM: Tamara Brandt Cook
Legislative Counsel

This is a proposed technical revision which makes no substantive legal changes. I have used the chapter and article numbers which these sections are organized under according to the reorganization proposed by the Technical Committee. The section number, AS 29.23.310, is the section in which this material appears in the existing Title 29.

In an effort to make this section clearer to the unsophisticated user, I am proposing a new opening section containing a cross-reference to the appropriate statute dealing with school districts. I have subdivided the existing section 29.23.310 in order to segregate material applicable to specific types of municipalities. I have also somewhat expanded this section to include a reference to the fact that the assembly serves as school board for third class boroughs. I added subsection (c) to provide notice within Title 29 of the existence of a provision outside of the title providing for an alternative to the school board membership requirements set out in Title 29.

In general, I have expanded the section dealing with school boards in order to provide more complete coverage of that topic in one place in the statutes for ease of use.

Title 29 Revision Commission

FROM: Tamara Brandt Cook
Legislative Counsel

This is a proposed technical revision of AS 29.53.020 dealing with exemptions from property taxation but containing no important substantive legal changes. However, I wish to alert you to a change which may have some substantative impact.

AS 29.53.020(e) currently contains the language

> Only one exemption may be granted with respect to the same property and, if two or more persons are eligible for an exemption with respect to the same property, the parties shall between or among themselves which shall receive the benefit of the exemption.

This sentence has been in subsection (e) since 1972, but its meaning is unclear. I checked with Mr. Lee Sharp, Municipal Attorney for Juneau, and Mr. Terry Early, State Assessor regarding the meaning of this provision. Both of them agreed with me that the section is unclear and Mr. Early advised me to check with an assessor to see how it has been applied in the field. I contacted Mr. Bob Howe, Juneau assessor, and he imformed me that the sentence in question has been ignored as a practical matter. I also checked with the Department of Revenue and was informed that they rely upon information supplied by the boroughs in determining the amount of the state rebate, and therefore have not been interpreting this sentence themselves. Consequently, I have deleted this sentence from this draft.

SUBJECT: Proposed drafting changes

TO: Advisory Policy Committee -
Title 29 Revision

FROM: Tamara Brandt Cook
Legislative Counsel

As noted in several of the comments submitted to the Advisory Policy Committee, the status of an ordinance between the time of adoption and the time of veto is unclear in the current statutes. This draft contains several substantive legal changes which would clarify this situation.

1. An ordinance takes effect 30 days after adoption or at a later date specified in the ordinance. Currently the statutes are unclear as to when an ordinance is effective. The 30 day period, could, of course, be shortened or lengthened.

2. Copies of the ordinance are to be made available within five days. Currently, there is no time period designated and the statutes merely indicate that copies of an ordinance are to be made available. The five day period, could, of course, be lengthened or shortened.

3. In order to go along with the first two proposed substantive changes, I have added a requirement that ordinances be vetoed within 30 days. The existing law gives no time frame within which a veto must be exercised.

4. In the case of a veto, the mayor must immediatly submit a statement advising of the veto and giving reasons. Under existing law, the mayor is required advise of a veto during the next regular meeting of the assembly or council. Since an assembly or council may not meet very often on a regular basis, I feel that the assembly or council ought to be informed of a veto so that it can call a special session to attempt to override it.

5. An emergency ordinance is immediately effective after adoption, which appears to be the case under existing law. If vetoed, it ceases to be effective immediately and a veto may not be overriden. Since it takes a larger majority to pass an emergency ordinance than to override a veto, absent this provision, it appears that a veto could always be overriden. The assembly or council would still have the alternative of passing an ordinary ordinance, should an emergency ordinance be vetoed.

6. Copies of emergency ordinances are to be made available within 24 hours after adoption. The current law provides that copies be made available without specifying a time period for compliance.

In addition to the substantive changes mentioned above, this draft constitutes a complete technical revision of the sections. Section numbers match the numbers as they currently exist in Title 29.

Please let me know whether this approach appears satisfactory. I would be glad to make any desired changes to this draft.

Haines Borough Assembly

Haines, Alaska 99827

Dear Assembly Members:

Title 29, which contains the Alaska Statutes on municipal government, specifies that the mayor of a third class borough must be elected at-large for that position. An assemblyman cannot assume the position of mayor since the assemblyman was elected as a voting member of the borough's governing body and the mayor cannot vote. Each assembly member elected to that position has an obligation to vote.

As the mayor of a third class borough cannot vote or exercise the veto power, the assembly need not be concerned about affecting the present borough apportionment by the election of a mayor in addition to the assembly members. There would be no change to the present apportionment.

These comments are offered for your consideration as the Haines Borough prepares for its regular election this fall.

Sincerely,

Palmer McCarter

MEMORANDUM

FROM: FOLTA & ASPER, Borough Attorneys

TO: HAINES BOROUGH ASSEMBLY

RE: Voting By Borough Mayor

DATE: September 18, 1973

A question has come up under the new municipal code regarding the vote of the Borough Mayor in a Third-class Borough. Third-class Borough questions are difficult to resolve because Chapter 41 of Title 29, which refers to them, only briefly indicates what they can and cannot do. For questions not answered in Chapter 41 we assume that provisions governing First and Second class boroughs apply. The fact that Haines is the only Third class Borough in the state means that no guidance can be had on these questions from the experience of other municipalities in Alaska.

At the present time the assembly has chosen a mayor from among its members and the mayor is following section 29.23.160 which says that the mayor shall participate in assembly decisions but may not vote. Since Mr. Olerud, the present mayor, is a representative of the city of Haines he carries a weighted vote which is lost to city voters by his seeming inability to use it. Although to date the Mayors' non-voting has not affected the outcome of borough consideration on any matter, it is quite possible that this could happen in the future.

After reading the statutes it seems apparant that the problem lies in the fact that the mayor is also a member of the assembly. We have concluded, and our conclusion is agreed on by attorneys in the Local Affairs Agency, that the new municipal code requires that there be a borough mayor, even in Third-class Boroughs, but that the mayor be a separately elected official, who is not a member of the assembly (Section 29.23.130). This official would be elected at large in the Borough and would be the chief administrator for the Borough, but would not vote. In a first or second class Borough the Mayor has a veto power to overrule the assembly, but this power is specifically denied the mayor in a third class Borough. (Section 29.41.020) The Assembly would continue in its present form but would choose a presiding officer to manage assembly meetings. (Section 29.23. 060 (b))

Our recommendation at this time is that a Borough Mayor be elected in the Haines Borough whenever possible and in the meantime that Mr. Olerud resume voting with the understanding that his office is really that of Presiding Officer of the Assembly rather than the Borough Mayor as contemplated by the municipal code.

We would point out that the Borough Mayor scheme was primarily written into the municipal code for the use of the larger First and Second class Boroughs and may be too much government for this Third Class Borough, which is operating in good order now without a separately elected mayor. If the Borough must elect a mayor, as the statute seems to require then perhaps this presents a good opportunity to once again consider alternate forms of government for this area. The third class Borough has some very good points but this question and others indicate that it is a sort of Legislative afterthought which will continue to present problems which were never considered by the lawmakers when they enacted the municipal code.

Dear Senator Sturgulewski

I quote Alaska Statute 29.53.025. It reads, in part as follows:
(b) Municipalities may by ordinance
(1) classify boats and vessels for purposes of taxation and may establish the assessed valuation of boats and vessels on the basis of their registered or certified net tonnage; a tax based upon a tonnage valuation shall not exceed $5 a year for a boat or vessel of less than five net tons and shall not exceed $15 a year for a boat or vessel of more than five net tons;

The City of Ketchikan and the Ketchikan Gateway Borough has chosen to listen to the hue and cry from boat owners that if their taxes are increased, they will take their boats and their business elsewhere. I, along with numerous other taxpayers, feel that boats should be taxed on assessed valuation, the same as other real property, including airplanes. It is very unlikely that our local government will change to assessed valuation, as long as they have another option. It is also very unlikely that our local state legislators will ever push to amend the state law to make taxation on assessed valuation mandatory. I therefore appeal to you, whom I understand has given this matter some study, to introduce such legislation.

Very truly yours

RE: Correction to December Title 29 Commission Minutes

Dear Senator Sturgulewski:

On page 3 of the minutes of the December 15, 16 and 17th Title 29 Revision Commission meeting it is stated that the technical committee was directed to bring back wording to allow the transition from any class of city to home rule. I am under the impression that the technical committee was directed to bring back language that would allow the transition from any class of borough or city or unincorporated area to home rule. Discussing the motion to eliminate third class boroughs and to grandfather the Haines Borough, Terry Cook emphasized his desire to see legislation developed which would allow transition from any class of borough or city to home rule. The direction to the technical committee followed this discussion and I do think it included transition of any class of boroughs as well as cities to home rule. Perhaps a double check of the tape would clarify this issue.

Re: Title 29 Revisions

Dear Arliss:

I would like to submit the following comments for your consideration, regarding Title 29 of Alaska Statutes and its revisions.

It appears to me, that we here on the North Slope have our own unique situation, in that we are within a home rule Borough and are a first class City operating within that Borough. The Borough seat is headquartered in our City. The City has minimal powers left and does not have a property tax.

Many times, in attempting to provide new, or upgrade existing services and/or facilities, we have been hindered or stopped by lack of co-operation by the Borough. When we turn to Title 29 and cite the appropriate authorizations to undertake a particular venture we are stopped time and time again by the Borough explanation that Title 29 doesn't relate to them except as noted in Section 29.13.100. To help aleviate this problem, I would like to seem Home Rule Boroughs bound by the Sections in Title 29, unless otherwise so noted in a particular section. Home Rule Boroughs would be allowed to carry on their municipal functions beyond that in Title 29, but they would be bound by all sections of Title 29. This approach is directly opposite than the one currently ruling the conduct of Home Rule Boroughs. Cities would still be limited as to what they could do ---specifically, that which was authorized in Title 29.

In reviewing Title 29, I would like to bring to your attention some of the sections that we have dealt with that have caused us some difficulties or confusion.

Section 29.23.270 Veto (a) The mayor of a first class city may veto any ordinance, resolution, motion, or other action of the council and by veto, strike or reduce items in appropriation ordinances except, in a city outside an organized borough, for schcol budget items. He shall submit to the council at its next regular meeting a written statement advising of his veto and giving his reasons. A veto is overridden by the vote of two-thirds of the authorized membership of the council.

The part about "he shall submit to the council at its next regular meeting a written statement advising of his veto and giving his reasons." leaves it unclear when a veto is made, is it a verbal veto at a meeting where the action takes place or is it the written veto at the next meeting that puts a veto in effect. If so, does the council action stand until the written veto is presented at the next meeting. Again, if that is the case, what happens when the mayor wants to veto an action but the course of action sought by the council will have all ready taken place before the veto can be placed before the council at their next meeting.

29.22.570 Vacancies. An elected municipal office is vacated under the following conditions and upon the declaration of vacancy by the assembly or council. The assembly or council shall declare an elective office vacant when the person elected

(6) misses three consecutive regular meetings unless excused;

I think that some guidelines should be mentioned as to what is excused or unexcused, i.e. failure to notify the city office that they will be unable to attend, off on a campaign tour for another elected office.

Initiatives and referendums: There should be a submittal deadline for invitations and referendums that wish to be considered on an upcoming general election 15 days, 30 days, 45 days, 60 days prior to the eldction. If all the procedures, protests and appeal time lines were allowed for it might look something like this:

Absolute deadline if an initiative or referendum is to be placed on the Ballot (to allow for printing)			15 days
Section 29.28.073	(a)	City Clerk has 10 days to certify petition	10 days
	(b)	Petitioners have 10 days to correct insufficient petition	10 days
	(c)	Clerk has 10 days to certify corrected petition	10 days
Section 29.28.075		Petitions have 7 days to file protest with Council	7 days
		Council to decide appeal at next meeting (14 days for Council 30 days for Assembly; for sake of uniformity use 30 day Assembly timeframe)	30 days
		Total days required for process	82 days

In the current Title 29, the initiative/referendum section doesn't apply to Home Rule Municipalities and the North Slope Borough has no provisions for initiatives or referendums in their Code of Ordinances. The North Slope Borough charter outlines the basic initiative/referendum requirements. However, the charter goes on to say the initiative/referendum procedures must be established by Ordinance, of which there is none.

It would make life much simpler if the requirements, format, and timelines for all petitions were standardized.

Section 29.33.030 Assessment and Collection. Boroughs shall assess and collect property, sales, and use taxes levied within their boundaries, subject to Chapter 53 of this Title. Taxes levied by a city and collected by a borough are returned in full to the levying city.

This Section doesn't apply to Home Rule Boroughs so technically speaking, a Home Rule Borough could tell any of the cities in its jurisdiction that it will no longer collect the cities taxes. In our area this would place an undue and perhaps backbreaking burden on some of our communities.

Section 29.33.110 Board of Adjustment. (a) The assembly is the board of adjustment for areas outside cities. The City Council is the board of adjustment for the area within the City boundaries but may delegate by resolution or ordinance part or all of its functions to the borough, subject to & 70 (b) (1) of this chapter, in addition to making delegations as provided for an assembly under & 245 of this chapter. Meetings of the borough board are held at the call of the presiding officer and of the city board by the Mayor. The presiding officer or Mayor may administer oaths and compel attendance of witnesses. Meetings and hearings of the board shall be open to the public and the board shall keep minutes of its proceedings as a public record.

The rational behind this escapes me, but again it doesn't apply to Home Rule Boroughs. It would be very interesting if our City Council could act as the Board of Adjustment within our City, instead of the Borough Assembly.

Section 29.48.030 Municipal Facilities & Services. (a) A municipality may exercise the powers necessary to provide the following public facilities and services:

We have had several problems with this and Section 29.48.035 Regulatory Powers.

> The question has arisen about whether or not when you transfer a power under 29.48.030 you also transfer any regulatory powers that might be associated with the power transfered, especially if the regulatory power is mentioned in 29.48.035.

Where we have run into our biggest problem is when we transfer a power under 29.48.030, such as police powers, where we transfer a power complete with enforcement ordinances,and the Borough refuses to exercise the enforcement ordinances. Furthermore, the Borough sees no need in enacting ordinances of their own. To us, this seems like we receive a lower level of service than we had before. We have presented this problem to the State and their opinion is that City ordinances transfer with the power until amended, repealed, or a new Borough

Ordinance supercedes the transfered City ordinance. The Borough says they don't quite see it that way. However, they will enforce the City's ordinances, as their priorities allow, and we will have to prosecute in Court. This is the same procedure they use with the State. They will enforce State Statutes and the State is responsible for prosecuting in Court. Since the Borough doesn't have any ordinances to enforce, they don't have to worry about prosecuting costs for the Borough. A cost that is prohibitive to the City. From our standpoint, we would like to see it made manditory, that when a power is transfered, so is the responsibility for accepting and enforcing any associated ordinances until such time as the Borough amends or implements new ordinances.

I'm sure that it would have to be explored in greater detail, but, perhaps a mechanism should be developed through which a City could have a power returned to it by a Borough.

Section 29.48.150 Ordinance Procedure. (a) The following procedure governs the enactment of all ordinances except emergency ordinances. An ordinance may be introduced by a member or committee of the assembly or council or by the municipal executive or chief administrator. An ordinance shall be set for hearing by the affirmative vote of a majority of the votes authorized on the question. A summary of the ordinance and its amendments is published together with a notice of time and place for public hearing. The hearing follows publication by at least five days. Copies of the ordinance must be available to all persons present or the ordinance must be read in full. The assembly or council shall hear all interested persons wishing to be heard. After the hearing, the assembly or council shall consider the ordinance and may adopt it with or without amendment. The assembly or council shall print and make available copies of adopted ordinances.

We would like to see a better definition of published, as called for in this section. Perhaps in rural areas, publishing could be accomplished by posting around town, often times it is unrealistic for a remote rural area to publish a notice in a Fairbanks or Anchorage paper. Especially since the newspaper might not reach the village until after the meeting has been held.

The publishing requirement should remain the same for Boroughs, as their level of sophistication and operations are on a much higher plane.

Section 29.48.260 Municipal Properties. (c) The assembly or council shall by ordinance establish a formal procedure for the sale, lease or disposition of real property or interest in real property. The ordinance shall require (1) an estimated value of the property by a qualified appraiser or the assessor; (2) a notice of sale published in a newspaper of general circulation distributed within the municipality at least 30 days before the date of the sale, lease, or disposition, or posted within that time in at least three public places in the municipality; (3) public auction or opening of sealed bids, if any; and (4) other terms and conditions fixed by the assembly or council. However, no ordinance for the sale, lease, or disposition of real property or interest in real property valued at $25,000. or more is valid unless ratified by a majority of the qualified voters voting at a regular or special election at which the question of the ratification of the ordinance is submitted. Thirty days notice shall be given of the election and during that period the assembly or council shall have published at least once a week in a newspaper of general circulation distributed within the municipality a notice stating the time of the election and the place of voting, describing the property to be sold, leased or disposed of, giving a brief statement of the terms and conditions of the sale and the consideration, if any, and stating the title and date of passage of the ordinance. Notice shall be given by posting a copy of it in at least three public places in the municipality at least 30 days before the election. If no newspaper of general circulation is distributed within the municipality, the ntoice given by posting is sufficient for the purposes of this section.

The rational behind this is somewhat understandable, but the reason for the $25,000. figure is hard to visualize. Again, in our area $25,000. is a lot of money, but at the same time it isn't. If we had to go to a special election every time we wanted to lease some property in excess of $25,000. we would begin to incur additional expenses and waste a lot of time. Especially when you consider we probably wouldn't get a voter turn out of over 150 people.

Section 29.53.360 Deed to Borough or City. (a) Unredeemed properties in the area of the borough outside cities are deeded to the borough by the clerk of the court. Unredeemed properties within a city are deeded to the city subject to the payment by the city of unpaid borough taxes and costs of foreclosure levied against the property before foreclosure. The deeds shall be recorded in the recording district in which the property is located.

We have approached the Borough on this and their response is, that since the City has no property tax, we have no interests in any such property and therefore, this Section doesn't apply to us. Furthermore, the North Slope Borough isn't bound by this section anyway.

Section 29.68.240 Unification of Local Governments. An organized Borough and all cities within the Borough may untie to form a single unit of Home Rule local government by complying with this chapter. This section doesn't apply to Home Rule Boroughs. Therefore, a Home Rule Borough couldn't legally unify with it's cities. Or could it, as there is nothing in Title 29 saying that it can't. However, the cities would have to follow the provisions in 29.68.240. So any provisions a Home Rule Borough would want to incorporate into their unification procedures would have to include the provisions in 29.68.240 so it would be just as easy to make Home Rule Boroughs subject to 29.68.240 and avoid a lot of confusion.

At the AFN Convention I picked up a copy of some of the proposed changes for Title 29. Unfortunately, I have misplaced these and it wouldn't surprise me too much if some of my comments have already been addressed. The revision of Title 29 is long overdue and I appreciate the opportunity to be able to provide some input into the program. If I can be of further service, please don't hesitate to contact my office.

Sincerely yours,

Bryan MacLean

CLASSES AND POWERS OF MUNICIPALITIES

.010 Classes of Municipalities. A municipality shall be a home-rule or general law municipality.

.020 Power of General Law Municipalities (a). Powers of general law of municipalities are 1) regulatory powers enumerated in section ____ or 2) powers to provide services and facilities enumerated in section _____.

(b) General law municipalities may exercise powers assumed upon incorporation or acquired in accordance with section .030.

.030 Procedure for Acquiring Powers. A city within its jurisdiction and a borough on an area-wide or non-areawide basis may acquire additional regulatory powers or powers to provide public facilities or services by ordinance approved by a vote of two-thirds (2/3) of the membership of the assembly or council. A decision to acquire powers under this section is subject to referendum.

.040 Exercise within Cities. Except as provided in section .070, a borough may not exercise within a city in the borough a power which the city is then exercising if the city council by ordinance approved two-thirds vote of its membership states its opposition.

.050 Service Area. A borough may exercise a power to provide services and facilities on a service area basis only upon approval of a majority of those voting on the question in the area affected at a general or special election in accordance with section ____.

.060 Transfer of Powers. By vote of a majority of the membership of the council or by initiative, a city within a borough may transfer to the borough any power exercised by the city.

.070 Mandatory Areawide Borough Powers. Boroughs shall exercise on an area-wide basis the powers of 1) planning and zoning; 2) taxation and 3) education.

.080 Mandatory City Powers. A city in the area outside boroughs shall exercise the powers of 1) planning and zoning; 2) taxation.

.090 Education in City's Outside Borough's. A city in the area outside boroughs may assume the education power upon incorporation, by ordinance approved by two-thirds of the membership of its council, or by initiative.

Policy Recommendations - Title 29 Revision Commission Technical Committee

1. The Technical Committee does not recommend the adoption of the suggestion made by the Alaska Association of Municipal Clerks.

2. The Technical Committee does not recommend the adoption of the suggestion made by Jo Ann Shanley regarding Sec. 29.42.010 which granted planning, platting, and land use regulation powers to a first class or home rule city located more than 25 miles from the boundary of the Borough Seat. It was felt that this was Seward's problem, and would contradict the principle of "comprehensive" borough planning.

3. The technical group recommends the inclusion of harbors and marinas in the statute regarding Extraterritorial Jurisdiction.

4. The technical group does not recommend the inclusion of the proposals presented by Mike Walleri of Tanana Chiefs. The feeling is that the concept of recognition of IRA councils and "Indian Country" is outside the scope of the reorganization of Title 29.

5. The Technical Group is recommending the elimination of Third Class Boroughs with the following options:

a. Eliminate Third Class Boroughs altogether phasing them out over a two-year period.

b. Eliminate Third Class Boroughs giving "grandfather rights" to the Haines Borough.

c. Keep Third Class Boroughs, expanding its powers to general law powers.

TO: TITLE 29 TECHNICAL AND POLICY COMMITTEES

FROM: ALASKA ASSOCIATION OF MUNICIPAL CLERKS

SUBJECT: TITLE 29 REVISIONS

We respectfully submit the following comments:

1) Sec. 29.30.040. We support the drafted changes as recommended by the Technical Committee, dated October 10, 1980, with the following amendment to (b):

> "(b) Voter registration by the municipality may not be required, and a municipality may not alter voter qualification requirements except that a municipality may by ordinance require a person to be a resident of and registered in the precinct, district, or service area in which he votes."
> Explanation: Those voting on the issue are residents of the specific area and thus will have to live with the outcome of the election; requiring registration in the precinct, district or service area will hopefully eliminate some of the problems and the time demanded in trying to prove residency; such a procedure will give the Canvass Board clearer direction.

2) Regarding new AS 29.30.110 and .230, the AAMC feels it is within the scope of responsibilities of the clerks to provide an acceptable petition format; however, we object to being burdened with any of the responsibility of composing any type of initiative, referendum or recall statement. We feel that the newly-proposed sections are unclear in this regard and request that clarification of our position be considered.

3) AAMC strong supports the language as proposed in AS 29.30.050 regarding elections which gives the municipalities the option to provide for runoff elections by ordinance.

ALASKA MUNICIPAL LEAGUE

POLICY STATEMENT

1981

RECEIVED
DEC 05 1980
CAO – OPERATIONS

Adopted at the Business Meeting of the 30th Annual Conference of the
ALASKA MUNICIPAL LEAGUE

Fairbanks, Alaska - November 15, 1980

PART I
TAXATION AND FINANCE

A. Local Tax Relief

1. The League supports state-funded relief for local taxpayers where such relief does not reduce the tax base or the tax-levying authority of the municipality and does not adversely affect the marketability of municipal bonds.

2. In order to provide local tax relief to Alaskans in 1981, the League urges the Governor and the Legislature to pass the necessary funding legislation for municipal assistance, state revenue sharing, and local school funding in sufficient time for municipalities to incorporate the additional revenues in the annual mill levies, but in no case later than May 15, 1981.

B. State Assistance In Financing Local Government

1. State Revenue Sharing. The League supports annual increases in the state shared revenue program. The annual appropriation by the Legislature to the municipal revenue sharing program shall be an annual increase of the 1980 Legislative appropriation based on such criteria as state population, inflation, and cost of local government services and other timely considerations.

2. Road Maintenance. The League continues to support an increase of available state funding for road maintenance to realistically reflect today's cost of road maintenance, with this increase fully funded.

3. Capital Improvement Projects. The League supports a separate revenue sharing program that will assist in the funding of capital improvements projects.

4. Municipal Assistance. The League supports the efforts of the state administration to fully fund the municipal assistance program at not less than 10 percent of the revenue raised by the State Corporate Income Tax.

5. Permanent Endowment for Local Government. The League urges that the state investigate the concept of a permanent endownment for local governments. The income from this endowment would be made available for use by local governments for operating expenses and/or capital programs. The League should provide assistance to the state in its investigation through a state-wide task force. Criteria for developing any permanent endowment and allocation of income approach should include equity, predictability and maximum local control.

6. State-collected Locally Shared Taxes. Municipalities in Alaska presently derive significant revenues from state-collected, locally shared taxes to help meet their basic operating expenses. The League, therefore, opposes reduction of such revenues through elimination of such taxes unless other equal sources of revenue are made available to local governments, or appropriations to compensate for lost revenues are made by the State.

7. Supplemental Appropriation. The League urges the Legislature to fully fund, through supplemental appropriations, 100% of fiscal 1981 state revenue sharing entitlements and the municipal assistance entitlement of at least 10 percent of the revenue generated by the State Corporate Income Tax.

8. Certification of Revenues. The League supports an amendment to the state shared revenue statutes which would 1) permit the Department of Community and Regional Affairs to accept a certification of revenues and expenditures in lieu of the annual financial report in order to make final payment of state revenue sharing entitlements, and 2) allow the Department of Community and Regional Affairs to amend the entitlement in the ensuing year based on the annual report, if applicable.

9. Abandoned Motor Vehicle Fund. The League continues to urge adequate funding of the Abandoned Motor Vehicle Fund with special emphasis paid to the cost incurred in handling abandoned vehicles which have no value.

10. Basic Allocations. The League supports an increase in state revenue sharing basic allocation to $50,000 for each city.

C. Local Taxes

1. The League opposes the imposition of state-mandated exemption of certain classes of property, individuals, organizations or commodities from the application of taxes unless adequate compensation is made by the state to reimburse local government for revenues lost due to these exemptions.

2. The League endorses the position whereby the state would pay to the local governments a payment in lieu of ad valorem taxes for the state-owned property as well as payments for its share of the cost of improvements and services which benefit such property.

3. The League opposes any further effort on the part of the state to levy a property tax which would infringe upon the rights of local governments to levy the same rate of tax as levied on other property within the taxing jurisdiction.

4. The League supports legislation which would provide for the optional exemption of business inventory from property tax.

D. Funding The Study And Formation Of New Municipalities

1. The League requests the enactment of legislation to provide adequate funds to assist in the formation of newly organized municipalities.

2. The League requests the enactment of legislation to provide adequate funds to assist in the study of the feasibility of forming new municipalities.

E. Public Employees Retirement

1. The League urges that in any legislation passed which increases benefits under the Public Employees Retirement System, the increased cost be borne by contributions from the employees. The League urges the Legislature to recognize the effect on participating municipal employers if any amendments are made to PERS.

2. Many locally elected officials are being excluded from participation in the Public Employees Retirement System because they are also active members of the Teachers Retirement System; therefore, the League supports legislation that would eliminate that portion of Alaska Statutes (AS 29.35.680(21)(c)(iv)) that excludes active members of the Teachers Retirement System from being active members of the Public Employees Retirement System and to allow retroactive participation provided that the employee applies for it and makes the full retroactive contribution as he/she would have if he/she had been an active member during the retroactive period.

F. Local Hospital Use

1. The League urges the state and federal agencies reponsible for health care to utilize the local health facilities and to transport patients to regional centers only when the necessary services are not available.

2. The League strongly supports increased state funding of hospital and health facility construction and operating costs but feels that this should be funded outside the state revenue snaring program.

G. Role Of The Permanent Fund

1. The League supports legislation which would favor the investment of a percentage of the permanent fund into the development of energy resources and potable water supplies.

2. The League, which recognizes that the concept of the Permanent Fund is to take revenues from a non-renewable resource and turn these revenues into a renewable resource, urges the Legislature to increase the percentage of income going into the fund to help guarantee the economic stability of the state.

H. Anti-Cyclical Policy

1. The League requests the executive and legislative branches of state government to develop a clear anti-cyclical policy to provide as much as possible for the scheduling of state capital projects projected for municipalities during periods of lower economic activity in the municipality and to direct other state activities with consideration of municipalities whose economies are depressed from normal levels.

I. Loans For Hydroelectric Projects

1. The League supports uninterrupted continuance of loan funds from the state for feasible hydroelectric projects within the state, and further supports long-term, low-interest loans at three percent for these projects with funding appropriated from non-renewable resource revenues such as those presently being generated by oil and gas receipts.

J. Fiscal Notes

1. The League supports enactment of legislation requiring preparation of notes assessing the fiscal impact on local government of any proposed bill or regulation.

K. Cultural, Civic And Convention Centers And Museums

1. While by law the state is able to assist local communities in the construction, maintenance and operation of cultural, civic, convention and community recreation centers, only minimal funding has been available for this purpose. The League, therefore, urges the Legislature to authorize funding under existing law in an amount sufficient to meet the construction requirements in Alaska communities.

PART II
EDUCATION

A. Permanent Endowment For Funding Education

1. The League urges that the state investigate the concept of a permanent endowment for funding public education. The income from this endowment would be made available for use for public education operating expenses and/or capital programs.

B. School Support

1. The Constitution of Alaska is very specific in its requirement that education is the responsibility of the state. Therefore, the League urges the Legislature to fund annually 100% of the costs of Public School Foundation, Special Education, student transportation (including kindergarten, inclement weather and hazardous bus routes) and Community Schools. Appropriations for these programs must reflect annually the increased costs incurred by school districts and full funding should not be used as a catalyst for the state to infringe upon the rights of local people to administer local schools.

2. The League urges the Legislature to support school capital projects at 100% construction level (as defined by the rules and regulations established by the Department of Education) and calls upon the Legislature and the Governor to fund this amount annually. The League also supports legislation under which the state will provide funding for all approved school capital projects to the local district at the time of approval. The League also urges the Legislature to assume the total school capital indebtedness incurred by local school districts.

3. The League recommends that the state legislature fund fully all special programs required by Public Law.

4. The League recommends that the state reduce and simplify the paper work requirement for receiving state and federal funds.

5. The League recommends that the Legislature adopt legislation to endorse and fund education programs in the area of substance abuse and person abuse with staff training, such programs being optional by each school district.

6. The League urges the Legislature to continue the policy establishing the amount of the public school foundation support unit value one year in advance.

7. The League urges the Legislature to provide increased funding for school board and advisory school board orientation, continuing education and awareness.

8. The League recommends that the state Legislature provide funding for bi-lingual and multi-cultural programs.

C. Assembly/Council-School Board Relationships

1. The League supports legislation to clarify assembly/council-school board relationships and opposes legislation which would diminish assembly/council authority in education matters.

D. Public Communications

1. The League encourages state and federal governments to seek immediate and expeditious activation of satellite communication facilities for education in the state.

2. The Second Session of the Ninth State Legislature implemented initial funding for limited televising of legislative sessions. The League now urges full funding of the program to assure that the general public has the greatest access possible, not only to floor sessions, but also to committee hearings and teleconferencing.

3. The League supports legislation that would support and provide funding for communities served by television cable systems that are applying for issuance of FCC construction permits for mini TV translators.

E. Other

1. Serious problems exist between the University of Alaska and the Community College systems, and these problems have a strong negative impact on all classes of students within these institutions. The League urges the Legislature to mandate, if necessary, resolution of differences regarding program articulation, budget and planning, student support service and local program options. The League considers autonomy for the Community College system to be only a last resort if other measures fail.

2. The League urges the Legislature to adequately impower and finance the "Oversight Committee" to annually discharge their duty of budget review and then enforce their recommendations.

PART III
PUBLIC SAFETY

1. The demand for trained competent local police and fire departments is accelerating throughout Alaska. It is urged that the Legislature, at an early date, assure that police, fire and emergency medical personnel training programs throughout the state have adequate facilities and program resources for training of local safety people, and provide financial support to assist the communities who participate.

2. Because the Alaska Police Standards Council has lost all federal support, the League recommends the establishment of state assistance proportional to the cost of ongoing assistance to those members of municipal police agencies attending courses in order to meet the requirements of the Alaska Police Standards Act.

3. Recognizing that corrections is a state function, the League urges the state to fund the construction, if necessary, and the operation of short term detention facilities within local communities.

4. The League supports legislation which would permit municipalities to tax, assess or impose a surcharge on the distribution and/or sales of alcohol within its boundaries.

5. The League urges the state to establish a comprehensive fire education program and a comprehensive statewide arson investigative program, through the state fire marshal's office, that will utilize professionally trained fire educators.

6. The League urges the state to standardize the Alaska Juvenile Justice System so that the people's confidence in the rule of the law will be restored and our traditional form of government will continue to provide security for the law abiding citizen.

7. The League supports the state's efforts to standardize penalties imposed by the Alaska Judicial System so that the people's confidence in the rule of the law will be restored and our traditional form of government will continue to provide security for the law abiding citizen.

8. The League supports legislation which would amend the State Acoholism Act to include public intoxication as an offense so as to provide the Court with alcoholism treatment as an alternative to incarceration in order to provide a measure of control in the initial phase of rehabilitation.

9. The League recognizes that Civil Defense and Emergency Preparedness activities on the state and local level are worthy of support. The League supports full state and federal funding of these activities, particularly in regards to emergency communications, medical and food supplies.

10. The League supports legislation which would provide utilization of the Alaska Judicial Information System to preclude registration of any motor vehicle at the State Division of Motor Vehicles if there are outstanding state or municipal traffic violations against the registering owner.

11. The League recongizes the serious individual and public safety problems that exist in all communities in Alaska as a result of alcohol abuse and domestic violence. It supports the enforcement of AS 09.55.600 through AS 09.55.640 (139 SLA 1980) in all parts of the state as a public safety priority. It further supports financial support for shelters within municipalities to provide for emergency needs of victims. The League further supports the establishment and utilization of mandatory rehabilitation programs for offenders in domestic violence cases as an alternative to incarceration.

12. Recognizing the state-wide and interstate nature of narcotics and dangerous drug traffic, the League recommends full state support of state-wide and metropolitan drug enforcement units.

13. The League supports an expansion of the Village Public Safety Officer Program to include all village communities in Alaska.

14. The League supports the funding of a judicial system that would insure the presence of a judicial officer in each community in the state when the need arises.

15. The League supports full funding for basic fire fighting equipment for small Alaska cities and fire service districts.

PART IV
LAND USE

A. Local Options

1. The League feels strongly that laws pertaining to the powers of local planning and zoning must allow for the greatest flexibility at the local level.

B. Land Selection

1. The League urges 1) immediate conveyance of native and state lands presently identified and jointly agreed upon for selection, and 2) the state move expeditiously to convey lands to municipalities with the least amount of encumbrances and restrictions. 3) The League encourages an increase in the cooperative intergovernmental land use planning process that considers municipal, state and federal lands affected by the land selection process.

2. The League urges the state to discontinue the practice of indiscriminate blanketing of all waterways within municipal selections with reservations for public easements, and encumbering patents with undefined easements and that the value of proposed easements on municipal lands for public use be weighed against both the value of these areas for other types of development that might conflict with access easements and geographic constraints that will render such easements of little public access value.

C. d(2) Lands In Alaska

1. The League supports land use recommendations which follow the multiple use concepts, and would be based on professionally thorough and unbiased analysis of land use potential and compatibility of uses, giving appropriate weight to economic, social and environmental factors.

2. The League urges that potential hydroelectric projects and alternative energy project sites be eliminated from federal d(2) selections by providing headwater rights, sites for dam sites, corridors for water and electric transmission lines, power houses, associated substations and all attendant facilities. The League further supports the preservation of rights-of-way across all land selected and classified for the purpose of providing for future construction of public accesses of various types.

3. The League urges that potential fish hatchery sites be eliminated from federal d(2) selections. The sites would be those identified by the FRED Division of ADF&G and aquaculture organizations, formally organized within the State of Alaska.

D. Historic Sites

1. In order to help municipalites to retain as much as possible of Alaska's colorful and historic past, the League supports establishment of a state matching grant program and funding for acquisition, maintenance and rehabilitation of monuments, historic sites and rights-of-way thereto.

E. Coastal Management

1. The League supports continued and maximum local control in the development, management and implementation of coastal planning and policies.

2. The League supports the concept of "extra-territorial" planning by municipalities in the unorganized borough with statutory provisions to permit the Alaska Coastal Policy Council to adopt said "extra-territorial" planning as part of the Alaska Coastal Management Program until such time as a resource district plan is adopted.

3. It should be required that all state agency comments and recommendations for the purpose of state and federal consistency be made by these agencies prior to local government conceptual approval.

F. Subdivisions

1. Subdivision of land is a major factor in community development creating patterns which have long lasting effects. Although present legislation clearly recognizes the need for regulation of subdivisions, means of enforcement are inadequate. The League supports legislation which would require proof of approval by local authorities prior to the filing of an instrument, including those filed by the state, affecting the boundaries of land and prior to any judicial partition of real property.

2. The League supports legislation which would require access capable of being constructed to local design standards to all state land disposals; and that, except for state subdivisions in remote areas or for dispersed entry, local subdivision improvement requirements be honored by the state either installing such improvements or by acquiescing in the formation of service areas and local improvement districts containing such property and honoring the obligation to pay LID assessments on such property while it is in state ownership.

3. The League supports the concept of an Enterprise Fund as a means for the state to provide required improvements in state land disposals.

4. The League urges that a minimum requirement for state subdivisions conveyed without required local improvements be that the subdivision design incorporate final road and sewage engineering to save state land recipients unnecessary road and sewer construction and maintenance costs due to poor lot and right-of way layout.

G. State Land Disposal

1. The League supports legislation which mandates land use capability and resource inventory findings for each tract of land included in the disposal bank.

2. Recognizing the pressure on both the state and municipal governments to dispose of land, the League supports a cooperative effort by the state and municipalities to dispose of land in a continuous and orderly manner. The League also supports state funding to provide planning grants, funds for necessary access roads, survey costs for land scheduled for disposal, and state, borough and city subdivision roads, sewers and utilities to meet local subdivision improvement ordinances.

3. The League opposes any state mandated program regarding disposal of municipal selected land relative to timing, size or use.

H. Grazing Districts

1. The League supports legislation which delegates to local governments the establishment of controlled grazing districts within organized municipalities.

I. Minerals

1. The League supports legislation that the state provide funds for necessary quantitative definition studies and market analysis of minerals other than oil and gas.

PART V
TRANSPORTATION, DOCKS AND PORTS

A. Surface And Marine Highways

1. With the ongoing development of natural resources in Alaska, the League supports legislation which will expand the Alaska Marine Highway to Western Alaska and improve transportation to tie the Central Alaska ports in with the Aleutian Alaskan ports and further supports the expeditious procurement of an ocean going vessel to accomplish the expansion of the Alaska Marine Highway System.

2. Since Alaska's economy depends heavily upon ocean and inland water shipping, fishing, and other marine travel, the League finds the existing port and harbor grant programs to be inadequately funded and urges expansion of these programs. Major port and harbor facility plans should be prepared and developed consonant with the municipalities' plans.

3. The League supports efforts to provide efficiencies in the operation of the Alaska Marine Highway System providing these efficiencies are based on publicly available economic and technical data. However, the League strongly objects to any reduction in existing marine highway systems absent technical, economic or other criteria; strongly urges community input be required prior to establishing marine highway rates, schedules and operational changes; and requests public input for studies affecting the operation of the Alaska Marine Highway System be solicited on a state-wide basis.

4. With the difficulty in acquiring public rights-of-way throughout the state primarily due to different land classification and ownerships, the League supports the identification of adequate corridors for construction for public access through such lands and early acquisition of adequate rights-of-way.

5. The League supports efforts toward an expanded railroad system to better serve all areas of Alaska and to link the State of Alaska with Canadian rail facilities.

6. Since the Alaska economy depends on the existence of transportation routes, the League supports the continued use and state maintenance of the state highways and trails systems.

7. The League requests that the State of Alaska support mandatory shipping corridors within Alaskan waters whenever local communities request such mandatory shipping corridors.

8. The League requests the state to intervene in the matter of interpretation and enforcement of federal regulations pertaining to the transportation of hazardous cargo on passenger vessels and aircraft in order to reduce the financial hardship imposed upon certain communities.

9. The League supports the expeditious development of a transportation program based on technical data with the maximum public participation possible which identifies the needs and establishes an improvement program for all forms of transportation in Alaska to include commercial and private air, marine and land transportation systems and adequate consideration for emergency airstrips.

10. The League requests that the state join in asking the President of the United States to intervene in the interpretation of the Jones Act by the Customs Service, as it limits the time permitted and number of port calls in Alaska by foreign bottom cruise ships.

11. Port Authorities. Insufficient mechanisms exist under Alaska law to create port authorities, free ports of entry and trade zones. Therefore, the League supports legislation to allow municipalities to create, finance and operate port facilities and ancillary authorities to enhance commerce within the State of Alaska.

12. The League urges the state to make planning funds available to enable municipalities to do the transportation planning within their boundaries that is required of coastal municipalities by the Alaska Coastal Management Program.

13. The League continues to support state consideration of a transportation system comprised of marine and land highway components. This system would embody shorter ferry runs between adjacent communities with extensions to the land highway system and by the utilization of high speed ferries and end-loading vessels with more frequent ferry service with minimal on-board facilities for passengers.

14. The League supports major and minor in-state ferry maintenance.

15. The League requests the Division of Marine Highways improve the ferry reservation system.

16. The League urges the state to make an increased level of road construction funding available to all municipalities subject to state land disposals within their jurisdictions.

B. Air Transportation

1. The League supports an equitable approach to state construction assistance for all airports and supports the concept of continued expansions and upgrading of airports, airport facilities and air navigational aids in Alaska. The League urges the state to provide increased levels of funding to provide for these facilities.

2. The League supports municipal acquisition of federal and state lands to provide for needed expansion of port and airport facilities and operations.

PART VI
MUNICIPAL UTILITIES

A. State Regulation

1. The League supports expeditious funding which would make available to the various municipal utilities and cooperatives in the State of Alaska direct grants and/or low interest loans in order that they may immediately be brought into adequate service for the people and that the Alaska Power Authority be adequately funded to meet the needs of the municipalities for water and power source development and distribution.

2. Despite the demonstrated ability of municipal and cooperative utilities to operate their respective utilities in the best interest of consumer public, efforts are constantly being made to subject these utilities to regulation by the Alaska Public Utilities Commission. Regulation by the APUC is an unnecessary infringement on local government authority as well as that of federally regulated cooperatives. The League opposes any legislation which would continually inflict this undue regulation by the state.

3. The League supports legislation which would make it clear that municipal and cooperative utilities may include construction work in progress in the utilities base rate.

4. The League supports the concept of direct grants and low interest loans from state funds for the construction of conventional and alternative energy sources in funding fossil, hydroelectric, geothermal, wind power and other means in order that rates paid by the Alaska consumer for these necessary services may be set at a reasonable level which is within the ability of the citizen to pay.

5. The League supports legislative action that has been taken to subsidize electric power and explore alternate energy sources for Alaska.

6. The League supports loans for the financing of construction of power projects in amounts approved by law, at an interest rate not to exceed three percent (3%) and a term consistent with the useful life of a project but not to exceed 100 years and with principal and interest payments commencing on the project power-on-line date.

B. Acquisition

1. One of the alleged benefits to accrue from the enactment of the Alaska Public Utility Commission Act was the amicable solution to the service area conflicts between competing utilities. To further this commendable objective, the League supports legislation which would allow municipalities operating utilities to acquire the facilities of a competing utility under specific terms which would fairly compensate the competing utility.

C. Water, Sewer And Solid Waste

1. Amendments were passed by the U.S. Congress to allow exemption to the Clean Water Act with respect to sewage disposal in tide water with sufficient fluctuation. The League opposes any federal regulation for implementing Section 301 (H) of the Clean Water Act which would unduly burden the Alaska communities in receiving these exemptions.

2. The League endorses the concept of the State of Alaska paying up to 75% for sewage, solid waste facilities and water systems constructed by municipalities under the State of Alaska Construction Grant Program.

3. The League endorses an amendment to federal law which would allow the cost of sewage treatment facilities to receive general fund support from the State of Alaska and its municipalities.

4. The League endorses the concept of the State of Alaska paying up to 75% of the costs to increase the capacity of existing sewage, solid waste facilities and water systems of municipalities under the State of Alaska Construction Grant Program.

5. The League endorses legislative funding of $40 million to fund water, sewer and solid waste grants in lieu of federal grant assistance.

D. Fresh Water

1. The League endorses a comprehensive effort by state and federal officials to develop alternative energy sources in Alaska, as well as innovative and appropriate technologies, including cogeneration. Specific emphasis should be placed on the uses of these in the provision of sewage treatment and water supplies and solid waste facilities in the state.

E. Energy Conservation In Municipal Utilities

1. The League recognizes the need for applied research and pilot projects designed to conserve energy in municipal utilities facilities and operation. It supports funding for innovative projects in waste heat utilization, recycling of solid waste, and conversion of waste to energy and other products.

PART VII
MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

A. Majority Elections

1. The League strongly supports legislation which would permit a municipality to opt out of the 40% plurality requirement for election to office, and which would clarify the 40% rule for municipalities that continue to use it.

B. Poll Hours

1. Experience has proven that extension of polling hours has not increased voter turnout and has been costly. The League, therefore, opposes legislation which would extend the hours beyond the present 8:00 am to 8:00 pm.

C. Registration

1. The League opposes legislation which would eliminate or erode the State of Alaska registration system.

D. Administration

1. The League strongly supports legislation which consolidates all functions pertaining to elections, conflict of interest and campaign disclosure into one agency.

E. Disclosure Restrictions

1. The League opposes campaign and financial disclosure restrictions imposed upon local governments. The League urges the Legislature to review the laws making the reporting requirements less onerous than presently in effect. The League specifically supports legislation which would exempt from campaign disclosure and/or financial disclosure for elected or appointed advisory boards as defined in AS 29.63.090.

F. Voter Qualification

1. The League supports legislation that would allow a municipality, by ordinance, to require persons to be state registered voters in, and residents of, the precinct, district or service area in which they seek to vote.

G. Qualifications For Elective Office

1. The League supports legislation that would include provisions in Title 29 for municipalities to set qualification for all elected municipal officials and to delete that section in Title 14 relating to municipal school board member qualifications.

2. The League supports legislation that would amend Title 29 to include reference to the requirements of AS 15.13 and AS 39.50 pertaining to qualifications of candidates.

H. Title 29 Revisions

1. The League supports legislation which would clarify AS 29.28.070(b) to specify that signature requirements for petitions be based upon the last regular municipal election held just preceding the date of first circulation of the petition.

2. The League supports legislation amending AS 29.28.070 to provide that the number of signatures required to initiate a petition for recall be 35% of the number of voters voting in the last regular municipal election regardless of population of the municipality.

3. The League supports revision of the reapportionment provisions of Title 29 for clarification, simplification, flexibility and autonomy at the local level.

4. The League supports legislation which would reduce the abuses of recall and would make recall procedures clearer and fairer to the elected official, including provisions to make the grounds more specific.

PART VIII
LOCAL GOVERNMENT POWERS

A. Local Autonomy

1. Because certain restrictions currently exist in the Alaska Statutes which impede effective independent local government, the League supports legislation which would promote more effective and independent local government in all organized boroughs and cities, and opposes any legislation which restricts local government powers.

2. The League supports the continued exemption of municipal officials and employees from the lobbying reporting requirements under AS 24.25.

3. The League supports legislation at both state and federal levels placing municipalities in an equal posture with state governments with respect to federal anti-trust laws.

4. The League opposes state restrictions on enforcement of municipal ordinances and supports legislation clearly establishing local autonomy in the creation of mandatory sentences and other remedies for violation of local ordinances.

5. The League supports the community council concept and also supports legislation which would require that the local governing body be the management unit for local community councils. The local governing body should be both the requester and receiver of state funds that will be used to fund community councils.

6. The League urges that the state establish the prevailing wage for a community quickly and accurately when requested, taking into account all economic and employment data from that community.

7. The League supports legislation ensuring that local governments are free to adopt, through ordinance or resolution, their own policies and procedures concerning local public records.

B. Public Employee Labor Relations

1. The League strongly opposes any legislation which would force municipalities to be subject to the provisions of the Alaska Public Employees Labor Relations Act. The League opposes just as strongly any legislation efforts to dictate the provisions of local public employees labor relations ordinances. The League supports legislation to allow each municipality at any time to reject or withdraw from the terms of the Alaska Public Employees Relations Act.

2. The League opposes legislation imposing binding arbitration on local governments. Such legislation would hinder local governments' ability to determine their personnel costs and prevent local government from having complete control of determining the local tax rate.

C. Third Class Borough

1. The League supports elimination of language from Alaska Statutes which would allow for the future creation of third class boroughs. Any existing third class borough would be allowed to continue in existence until such time as it reclassifies. The League believes that a third class borough, as currently defined in statute, does not meet standards for a general purpose local government.

D. Local Government Study

1. The League endorses, and strongly supports continued legislative action investigating current and future state/local government relations and finance in Alaska, and the current and future status of local government structures, specifically including the unorganized borough. Maximum involvement of state administrative officials dealing with local governments, local government officials, and residents from large and small cities and boroughs, specifically including the unorganized borough and legislators, is encouraged.

PART IX RESOURCES

A. Non-Renewable

1. The League supports a clear policy requiring the processing of state royalty oil and gas and other natural resources within Alaska.

2. The League encourages the State of Alaska to require the processing, distribution and sale of oil and gas products within the state sufficient to satisfy current state consumption requirements at a cost not to exceed costs of production, distribution and sale plus a reasonable return on investment.

3. In response to the energy shortage and its economic impact on the people of the state, the League urges the federal government, the State of Alaska and League members to design, construct and use their buildings with an emphasis on energy efficiency.

4. In consideration of anticipated shortages of petroleum products for energy production, the League urges the state to pursue the development of Alaska's coal resources.

5. The League supports legislation which establishes a clear mineral policy to encourage resource development, in-state ore concentration and/or reduction, and protection of mineral land from imposed incompatible land uses.

6. The League supports optimum use of gas liquids as feed stocks for in-state petrochemical development, with coal or other energy sources to be used for the processing.

7. The League supports state funding for municipal acquisition of federal, state and private lands to provide for needed expansion of port facilities and operations.

B. Renewable

1. The League requests that the executive and legislative branches of state government establish a policy requiring the development and processing of renewable resources in Alaska, and through appropriate inventory and management practices make all renewable resources available for development and processing on a sustained yield basis.

2. The League requests the executive and legislative branches of our state government to accelerate market studies and market development of Alaska's renewable resources.

3. The League supports legislation for the development of an aggressive bottomfish program including substantially accelerated marketing studies and market development for Alaska bottomfish products.

4. The League requests the Legislature and administration to adopt, by statute and/or regulation, the policy that hydroelectric energy is one of the most advantageous and acceptable methods of generating renewable energy for use by the many citizens of Alaska.

5. The League requests legislation establishing a state energy policy, a statute enacting the policy that addresses both rural and urban situations and provides incentives to the development of alternative energy sources, such as, but not limited to, geothermal, tidal, wind power and solar, specific to community needs, giving preference to renewable energy sources and/or new technologies.

6. The League recognizes fish and wildlife as an important renewable resource which has economic as well as recreational and cultural value, and should be protected and developed.

7. The League supports resource development and funding policies which place the highest priorities on the utilization of resources that provide the greatest benefit to local residents and their communities. Resource development projects receiving state assistance that substantially impact communities should be approved by the municipalities.

C. Human Resources

1. The League supports and encourages, within the confines of the constitution and human resources limitations, any efforts on the part of the Governor and the Legislature to implement an Alaska hire policy.

2. The League encourages the Legislature and Administration to use both human resources and technical resources of the institutions of higher learning within the state whenever possible when not in direct competition with private enterprise.

3. The League supports the development of incentives that would encourage contractors and other employers to train and apprentice local workers and encourage their employment.

PART X
ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

1. The exploration, development and industrial utilization of renewable and non-renewable resources, both inside and outside municipal boundaries, creates a substantial and immediate impact on the need for municipal facilities and services which exceed the financial ability of most municipalities to meet in the short period of time available to have such facilities and services operational. The League urges adoption of legislation which would provide financial assistance to municipalities which are proposed for such impacts.

2. The League supports and urges the Legislature to establish and provide immediate funding of programs that will create, assist or aid both public and private enterprises to plan, finance and develop job related industries, businesses and facilities that are compatible with the desires of local government.

3. The League supports legislation that will aid in the exploration, development, and in-state processing of Alaska's raw materials and vast mineral wealth, and urges the state to provide incentives to those industries engaging in in-state primary and secondary processing of Alaska's resources.

4. The League supports state grants for local economic development programs.

5. The League supports a reduction of state regulation and restrictions against the requirement of redundant information reports for small businesses and local governments.

6. The League supports the continued funding from non-renewable resources for small business loans under the Division of Business Loans of the Department of Commerce and Economic Development. The League also supports the AIDA concept where appropriate, but recognizes as well a need for smaller businesses and projects to obtain funding that includes working capital, that provides for lower interest rates, and that is more flexible in its application process and provisions.

7. The League supports the establishment of agricultural quarantine stations off the coast of Alaska, and off the border of Alaska, to encourage the importation and exportation of agricultural animals and plants.

A RESOLUTION URGING IMPLEMENTATION OF TECHNICAL CHANGES IN TITLE 29 AS IT RELATES TO MAJORITY ELECTIONS AND VOTER QUALIFICATION

WHEREAS the deliberations of the Title 29 Advisory and Technical committees point clearly to the fact that there is no dispute in allowing a municipality optional use of a 40% plurality requirement; and

WHEREAS voters can be disenfranchised during the absentee voter process of run-off elections due to insufficient time to process the written absentee voter application; and

WHEREAS voter qualifications in Title 29 do not secure for the municipalities requirement that a voter be registered in the municipality in which he/she resides and intends to vote thirty days previous to a municipal election; and

WHEREAS the Election Policy Committee and the Alaska Association of Municipal Clerks are on record as supporting immediate changes to Title 29 as the Alaska Municipal League proposes in its 1981 policy statement; and

WHEREAS the voter qualification change and run-off provisions are needed prior to the October 1981 municipal elections; and

WHEREAS the Title 29 revision has been stated as realistically a two year process;

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that the Alaska Municipal League draft and support legislation to immediately implement these changes as described in paragraphs A and F, Part VII Municipal Elections, of the Alaska Municipal League policy statement for 1981.

A RESOLUTION OF THE ALASKA MUNICIPAL LEAGUE URGING THE STATE TO PROVIDE GRANTS, LOW INTEREST LOANS AND RENTAL ASSISTANCE TO ALLEVIATE THE PROBLEMS CAUSED BY THE LACK OF LOW AND MODERATE INCOME HOUSING IN ALASKAN COMMUNITIES

WHEREAS there is an inadequate stock of decent, safe and sanitary housing for low and moderate income families and persons; and

WHEREAS federal programs dealing with the problem are underfunded, inadequate or non-existent; and

WHEREAS decent, safe and sanitary housing is an essential and basic human need and should be a right of every Alaskan; and

WHEREAS conventional interest rates make it impossible to construct housing for low and moderate income persons; and

WHEREAS the State of Alaska has established numerous low-interest loan and other financial assistance programs to assist business enterprises; and

WHEREAS the State of Alaska should be giving priority to programs which meet the basic needs of its citizens;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the Alaska Municipal League that the State of Alaska immediately implement a low and moderate income housing assistance program consisting of, but not limited to:

1. Low interest loans and grants to assist in the construction and conversion of cooperative ownership apartments for low and moderate income persons.

2. Grants and low interest loans, or partial interest payments on conventional loans, for the construction of multifamily housing for low and moderate income persons.

3. Rental payment assistance for low income persons.

4. A program to provide technical, planning, financial and other assistance to stimulate an increase in the stock of low and moderate income housing.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the assistance program should focus on those communities with the most critical need for low and moderate income housing.

ADOPTED at the General Business Meeting of the Alaska Municipal League held on November 15, 1980.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Title 29 Policy Group

FROM: R.E. Henderson, Mayor

RE: Changes to AS. 29.41.020

1. New Section # 29.36.240 Old Section # 29.41.020 Assembly to serve as School Boar.

The Assembly proposes that this section be re-written to read:

(a) The borough assembly is the borough school board for third class boroughs unless an ordinance ratified by the majority of the voters at a general or special election provides for a separately elected assembly and school board.

(b) When the assembly serves as the school board, the borough executive is president of the school board.

(c) The borough executive has all powers of a borough executive except for the veto power.

Two of the changes suggested for this section are of a "house-cleaning" nature and are non-controversial. The Assembly recommends the elimination of the sentence "Where applicable, weighted voting shall apply to board decisions." Neither the assembly or the school board can provide for weighted voting. (See AS. 29.23.021(c) "An Assembly may not provide for weighted voting.")

The second "house cleaning" recommendation modifies the sentence"The borough executive is the presiding officer of the borough assembly and president of the school board." The Assembly finds that this sentence is confusing and misleading. The executive of the third class borough does not differ from the executive of any other class of borough except that the third class borough executive does not have the veto power and if the assembly and the school board are combined, the executive is the president of the school board. Hence, it is only these unique differences that need to be stated. In fact, it is erroneous to state that the borough executive is the presiding officer since AS.29.23.060(b) states that the presiding officer is a member of the assembly and AS. 29.23.160 states that the borough executive cannot vote.

The major change proposed in this section is to provide for a local option in the selection of a combined assembly and school board or a separately elected assembly and school board. The Assembly feels that the inclusion of this option is in keeping with the philosophy of providing the maximum amount of local option without jeopardizing the essential distinctions in the forms of government. Although the major business of the third class borough is the business of the school district, there is still a distinct legislative arm - that of the Assembly. The Assembly has legal responsibilities that tie it into the state system of local government; the Assembly makes laws and the school board makes educational policies. The Assembly feels that there is validility in the observation that people interested in the work of the Assembly may not be interested in the work of the school board and visa versa. The Assembly feels that qualifying the option with the provision that an ordinance establishing separate bodies must be approved by the voters guards against a hasty or unconsidered change. The Assembly does not feel that the inclusion of the local option is a radical departure from the third class borough concept.

RESOLUTION 180

A RESOLUTION OF THE HAINES BOROUGH ASSEMBLY OBJECTING TO THE MUNICIPAL LEAGUE'S STATEMENT THAT A THIRD CLASS BOROUGH DOES NOT MEET THE STANDARDS FOR A GENERAL PURPOSE LOCAL GOVERNMENT

WHEREAS the Haines Borough is a third class borough government legally constituted and incorporated under the laws of the State of Alaska; and

WHEREAS the Alaska Municipal League does not define "the standards for a general purpose local government" which are the standards the League claims the third class borough does not meet; and

WHEREAS the Haines Borough is a member in good standing with the Alaska Municipal League;

BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that the Haines Borough Assembly objects to the inclusion of the following statement in the current Alaska Municipal League Policy Statement:

> The League supports elimination of language from Alaska Statutes which would allow for further creation of third class boroughs. Any existing third class borough would be allowed to continue in existence until such time as it reclassified. The League believes that a third class borough, as currently defined in statute, does not meet standards for a general purpose local government.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the Haines Borough will submit this Resolution No. 180 to the Alaska Municipal League as a challenge to the League to justify its policy statement by providing a definition of the standards for a general purpose government and by showing how the third class borough does not meet those standards; and

BE IT RESOLVED that the Haines Borough will send copies of Resolution No. 180 to members of the Alaska Municipal League and request the membership to reject the policy statement herein cited on the basis of its insupportability.

Ms. Ginny Chitwood, Director

Dear Ms. Chitwood:

Reference the letter of November 25th from the Haines Borough Mayor regarding your Resolution No. 180, which letter is objecting to the elimination of the third class borough from the "standards of a general purpose government".

I agree wholeheartedly with the position of the Haines Borough Mayor and do feel that the Municipal League Policy Statement, that a third class borough does not meet standards for general purpose local government, is completely out of line.

Certainly the Haines Borough, as a third class borough, which is a member in good standing of the Alaska Municipal League and is a borough under the State Statutes for boroughs, is meeting the standards for general purpose local government. I do not understand the Municipal League's reason, or reasons, in asking the legislature to "stop" the creation of third class boroughs. It should be strictly up to the people in the area concerned as to which type of borough meets their needs the best. Obviously, Haines feels that the third class borough is what they need and want. It should not be changed by statute and certainly is not the moral right of the Municipal League to request such a change.

I would join with the Haines Borough in challenging the League to justify its Policy Statement providing a definition of the standards for general purpose government and by showing how the third class borough does not meet these standards and, furthermore, I believe that the Alaska Municipal League should cancel all reference to the deletion of a third class borough from its Policy Statement.

Dear Mayor Henderson:

Thank you for your letter of November 25 and a copy of the Resolution No. 180 adopted November 18 by the Haines Borough Assembly. I appreciate your sharing your feelings with me.

If the Haines Borough Assembly wants to work for a change in the AML Policy Statement, there are several avenues that may prove fruitful.

Between now and the 1981 conference in Anchorage in early November 1981 the AML Legislative Committee will be meeting. At our recent meeting in Fairbanks I appointed Marilyn Dimmick, an Assembly Member from the Kenai Peninsula Borough, as the chiar of that committee. Jon Halliwell of Haines, who has served on that committee in the past, and is now a member of our vital "Legislative Implementation Task Force" can brie. you on the procedures of the Legislative Committee.

Much of the nuts and bolts debate on the policy statement takes place at the Legislative Committee level. There is more time to explore the kind of concerns you raise, to improve definitions and to further define fuzzy areas that need further definition.

If you are not successful at the Legislative Committee level you should come to the next conference prepared to propose the changes you would like to see at the Policy Committee Section Meeting on the section of the policy statement where you have concerns. If the Policy Committee agrees with you, then it will bring your proposed changes to the floor.

If you can not get either the Legislative Committee or Policy Committee to agree, then you can bring the matter to the floor at the annual business meeting yourself.

Good luck with your efforts. If I can help you further please let me know.

Cordially,

December 12, 1980

Senator Arliss Sturgulewski, Chairwoman
Title 29 Policy Advisory Group
Anchorage, Alaska

Dear Senator Arliss Stugulewski and Members of the Title 29 Policy Advisory Group:

At the recent session of the technical sub-committee of the Policy Group, the third class borough, as a form of government, was called into question. It is reported to us that the technical committee unanimously voted to eliminate the third class borough, allowing the existing third class borough 2 years to up-grade. If this recommendation is not successful, we are told that the technical committee will suggest that the third class borough be eliminated, but that Haines be "grandfathered." And finally, if all else fails, there should at least be an addition to the General Powers Section 29.48.010 making it applicable carte blanche to the third class borough, thus enabling the third class borough to come as close as statutorially possible to the ranks of a second class borough.

We agree that clarification needs to be added to 29.48.010 so that there is no mistake that this applies to third class boroughs insofar as the general powers relate to the exercise of the two specified powers of a third class borough. As the borough adopts additional powers on a service area basis, the general powers will apply to the power exercised for the service area.

We also suggest that you clean up 29.41.020 Assembly to Serve as School Board so that it does not contain statements of procedure that are no longer possible because of other changes in law. The provision for weighted voting and the borough executive to be the presiding officer of the borough assembly are outdated statements. In addition we would like you to consider allowing the third class borough the option of a separate assembly and school board. We feel that this is no more or less than a matter of public interest in the two different functions of an assembly and a school board. Some people are interested in educational and school policy but they are not interested in the legislative responsibility of the assembly. It has been expressed to us many times that so and so would run for the school board but doesn't want to bother with the assembly and visa versa. We would like to be able to put the question of two different bodies on the ballot at a future election. A draft of our proposed language for AS. 29.41.020 is appended to these comments.

We do not understand the reasons for the technical committee's recommendation to eliminate the third class borough. We hope to glean the reasons for this recommendation from the 12/15 meeting. We also hope to persuade the Policy Committee to reject the technical committee's recommendation to eliminate the third class form of government.

The 1980-81 Alaska Municipal League policy statement claims that the third class borough does not meet the standards of a general purpose form of government. We have circulated a Resoluiton opposing the League's statement. We believe the statement is unsupportable without some companion piece listing the standards of a general purpose government. At least one other elected official outside our area agrees with us. A copy of our resolution and the responses we have received are available to you.

The third class borough cannot provide, area-wide, community roads, sewer or water systems, animal or fire arm control, police or fire protection; and we cannot plan and zone area-wide. Are these the standards we fail to meet? Is our inability to function in this respect area-wide the reason the third class borough form of government needs to be eliminated? As you know, the third class borough may provide any general law municipal power which a second class borough is authorized to assume, except that it may only do so on a service area basis. And service areas are established by the vote of the residents within them. This arrangement maintains the maximum amount of voter control over the services a government may decide it needs to provide. Do you think there is something wrong with a system that gives so much control to the voters? It is possible for the voters to rejct a service or regulatory function which the elected officials, or residents outside the service area, might think is necessary for the well-being of the area. Are you suggesting that this is a bad idea? It seems that the third class borough system gives the powers to the voters and not to the elected officials.

Now, there are certain facilities, services and regulations which a second class borough can assume without going to the polls. These are a transportation system, a garbage and solid waste system; the licensing, impounding and disposition of animals; water pollution control; air pollution control; and the licensing of day care facilities. And a second class borough may have extraterritorial jurisdiction for certain things and it may create historic districts. Perhaps these are the standards of a general purpose government - these are the things that the third class borough lacks the authority to mandate without going to the polls for the permission of its voters. Can you in fact state that it is preferable for a legislative body to be able to mandate the foregoing list of services and regulations - that the ability to mandate is so much preferable to the requirement that the voters approve the exercise of the powers, that it is necessary to eliminate the one form of government that gives the voters the authority to accept of reject these "essential" services?

We must address the question of the third class borough's lack of authority to plan, except upon the consent of the voters, and then only in service areas. The objections to this arrangement must be that a) planning is too important to allow it to be an optional function; and that b) planning on a service area basis is unworkable. The relative importance of planning is an argument of values. It would be hard to argue that the residents of the Haines Borough or the land they use has suffered due to a lack of local planning authority. Residents of the borough are not dondemning the development that is taking place. It may be that the sparsely populated area of the Haines Borough does not require a self-conscious planning effort. The most densely populated area of the Borough is the 2¼ square miles of the City of Haines - planning takes place in this area. The clusters of people outside the City make obvious service areas. Since planning on a service area basis has never been tried, it is only negative speculation which proclaims it "unworkable."

Looking at the goegraphy and population of the Haines Borough you will note that according to the 1980 preliminary census figures it has a population

1623, with 944 of those people clustered in the 2½ square miles of the City of Haines, a first class city with all the attendant powers. That leaves 679 in the area outside the City. By our own count, approximately 363 of those 679 live in a circle around the perimeter of the City, extending 18 miles west, 2 miles south and 4 miles north. This leaves approximately 316 people for the rest of the Borough. The Haines Borough is approximately 2200 square miles. Most of it is roadless and is either in State or Federal ownership. The circle of people around the City forms the one service area the borough has - a service area for fire protection. A more extensive service area for police, medical and fire protection was voted down because of an inadequate communication system between the location of the service and the areas proposed to be served. Evidently, the formation of substations was viewed to be too expensive by the people. Maybe the people are mistaken; maybe they do need and can use the services proposed, but why is it wrong for them to carve their own destiny? If the population grows, needs may change; and there is the vehicle - i.e. service areas - through which those needs can be satisfied by the existing form of government, in concert with the wishes of the residents. When people begin to feel encroached upon, they will begin to look to the planning power for control. It is there for their use when they choose to use it. Is this so contrary to good government?

You have stated that you would like to re-write the statutes to provide for maximum local option. You may find that the third class borough of government is the form of government that does provide the maximum amount of local option - but it is at the discretion of the voting populace, not of the legislative body. If you do choose to eliminate the third class borough form of government, please be specific with your reasons why so that we may know exactly what the issues are.

Sincerely yours,

R E Henderson

Subject: Recall

Dear Senator Sturgulewski:

At the meeting held by your committee in Fairbanks just before the Alaska Municipal League meeting, a great deal of debate focused on the question of whether the grounds for the recall of a local official should be narrowly or broadly drawn. Mayor Larson requested from me a defense of narrowly drawn grounds and other procedures designed to provide the elected official with some measure of protection. Please consider this letter as that defense.

Many features of our democratic system of government are accepted as basic and necessary to the system. These ascertions are seldom examined critically as it is unpopular and distasteful for any one to seriously undertake criticism of what is popularly perceived to be the underpinnings of our democratic form of government. Recall is one such uncritically examined element of our democratic system of government.

First, we should note that our system of government is not a pure democracy but it is rather a democratic republic. Article IV, Section 4 of the U.S. Constitution guarantees to each state a republican form of government, not a democracy. That Constitution provides for neither an initiative or recall. Throughout the history of the United States, the states themselves have not universally provided for recall.

The upsurge of recall provisions came about during the government reform movement. While recall may be viewed as a procedure which strengthens democratic principles, it clearly accentuates one of the greatest weaknesses of the democratic system - its vulnerability to popular but ill-conceived whims of the public and its manipulation by a minority.

The Greek philosopher who first categorized the various forms which government could take, and who gave democracy its name, rated democracy rather low as a form of government which would best serve the needs of its subjects. Being subject to the whims of a relatively uninformed populace made a democracy ill suited to consistently serve the needs of the public. The Federalist Papers and the U. S. Constitution clearly show that the thoughtful leaders of our country who drafted our Constitution had severe reservations about the democratic form of government and sought to overcome those perceived deficiencies. They provided us with an electoral college which, they hoped, would have the collective wisdom necessary to select a statesman worthy and capable of discharging the duties of President of the United States. They did not provide for his direct election by the populace as would have been the more "democratic" method. They provided us with two houses of Congress, one of which would be based upon population and which might reflect popular sentiment and a second house which would provide equal representation to all the states. This second house, it was hoped, would provide the mechanism for preventing the enactment of popular but ill-conceived measures. A further check upon both of these houses was given to the President who could veto measures he believed were inappropriate. The drafters of our Constitution believed that these and other checks, along with the probability that various interest groups would form different coalitions on different measures, would combine to overcome one of the more serious defects of the democratic form of government. They apparently did not feel that recall was either necessary or desirable. In fact, I suggest that the "open season" type of recall which has been proposed for Title 29 is contrary to the very principles which are reflected in our Constitution and the philosophy of those who drafted it.

Under our republican form of government, an elected official does not serve as a mere extension or agent of those who elected him. The elected official is expected to exercise his informed and considered judgment in providing for the public good. If it were reasonable to believe that the public could become adequately informed on all the public issues which face a legislative body, then it might also be reasonable to assume that the general public could also function in the manner of a town meeting and decide all public issues. Because few of us are able to devote the time necessary to become so informed, we delegate to our elected officials the responsibility to become adequately informed and to make decisions as to the public needs. If the public is dissatisfied with a policy decision made by public officials, the initiative and referendum may be used to correct what are perceived to be errors of decision making. When recall is used in such cases, it is not corrective in nature, it is vindictive and punitive.

As already noted, recall was a concept which became popular during the reform era. It was aimed not at governmental bodies which had made decisions which were unpopular with various segments of populace but was aimed at corrupt individuals. The public good demands that persons be removed from office who are corrupt or dishonest in office, who fail to perform prescribed duties of the office or who are physically unable to perform the duties of the office. If there is no administrative or judicial procedure for removing such persons from office, it would be appropriate to provide a method for the electorate to effect such a removal. However, any such system should be strictly limited to removals for corruption, dishonesty affecting the public good, and inability or refusal to perform the duties of the office. It would be an abuse of the recall mechanism to permit recall of an elected official merely because the official had participated in making a decision which was unpopular with a large segment of the public. Any controversial matter is likely to be unpopular with a large segment of the public and public officials should not have the threat of recall hanging over their heads whenever their honestly held convictions compel them to vote in a certain manner. Unfortunately, a review of recall efforts will reveal that most, if not all recall efforts, are actually based upon an action taken by the entire body and have little or nothing to do with any of the legitimate grounds for recall. To make matters worse, the proponents of the recall often resort to slander or grossly exaggerated accusations in their recall petition.

It cannot be denied that there is currently a movement in the direction of single issue politics. When there are groups about which openly flaunt their "hit list," it behooves us to examine the elements of our political system in light of this new phenomenon. A recall provision which requires merely that someone be dissatisfied with an elected official's performance amounts to a declaration of open season on all elected officials. If the recall mechanism can be called into play for essentially no reason at all, the quality of persons who will run for public office will suffer as will the basic decision making process itself. At the municipal level, once a recall petition has been placed in circulation, and even more so after it has been filed, the proponents of the recall often become very forceful and vocal in airing their belief that the governing body should cease making important decisions until after the recall matter has been settled. As local elected officials are not insensitive to public demands, such demands do have an impact on the elected body. Unnecessary delay in decision making coupled with an overemphasis on the recall petitioners' position on matters before the body may combine to produce results which are not in the best interest of the public. The tension and turmoil which a recall petition creates within the elected body and the community is an undesirable but, nevertheless unavoidable, effect of a recall attempt. Therefore, every effort should be made to minimize the unnecessary exposure of a municipality to these effects. The "open season" type of recall will serve to maximize the number of occasions upon which the local government will experience these effects. These negative effects can be minimized without destroying the right of recall if the grounds for recall are narrowly drawn to limit them to matters such as corruption in office and inability or refusal to perform the functions of the office. Not only does this narrow the grounds to those which are truely relavent to the purpose of recall but it also would reduce the ease with which a recall effort could be mounted against several members of a governing body based upon the way the body had voted.

Not only must the grounds be drawn narrowly to insure that the recall mechanism is not abused but the recall system should clearly provide for judicial review of the grounds stated. Failure to provide a clear right of judicial review renders the requirement for clear and narrow grounds a nullity.
