Proposing postage stamps honoring wild Alaska salmon and centuries of continued use of wild Alaska salmon for subsistence, sport, and commercial fish harvesters.

This resolution proposes postage stamps which features Alaska salmon. Through this legislation, the State of Alaska requests the United States postmaster to issue a series of five stamps, each depicting one of Alaska's salmon species.

This postage stamp series will focus national attention on Alaska's thriving and healthy salmon fishery. This region boasts a long tradition of subsistence, commercial, and sport use of the salmon. The salmon fishery is a key element in the state's economy and a large draw to the sport fish and tourism industries.

Passage of this resolution will demonstrate the State of Alaska's support for this postage stamp series.

The more awareness of wild Alaska salmon we create, the easier it is to educate those outside Alaska about one of Alaska's most important, growing and economically-viable resources. At a time when too many Americans believe wild salmon are endangered, and erroneously believe that Atlantic salmon are a wild and natural consumer product, a postage stamp depicting Alaska's salmon species will help capture the interest of Americans, and others. It makes it easier to educate them about a resource that contributes hundred of millions of dollars each year to Alaska and Alaskans.
