February 4, 1982

Dear Constituents:

At the last minute, I had to cancel my trip to Anchorage. I am most sorry to not be with you today. Because of conditions beyond my control, I suddenly find myself chairman of two major standing committees--House Labor & Commerce, and House Health, Education and Social Services. Both committees have many bills to consider in this (hopefully) short session; thus weekends are fully used for research and scheduling.

By way of this letter, I introduce Mr. Jeff Barry, who is my administrative assistant. He has, on short notice, flown up at my expense to represent me. You can be most assured that Mr. Barry will forward your concerns to me, and proper follow-up action will be taken. I look forward to talking with you at our District 8 teleconference on Tuesday, February 10, at 8 PM.

Yours very truly,

Representative Terry Martin

LEGISLATOR WARNS OF POLITICAL HUCKSTERS

State Representative Terry Martin today warned Anchorage residents to be on guard against political contribution solicitors out to make a fast buck off the State of Alaska.

The state contribution rebate program -- recently increased from $50 to $100 per individual -- is a lucrative target for hucksters masquerading as candidates, or for solicitors seeking cash for "worthwhile" political action committees, Martin said.

The state doled out nearly $1 million in cash and tax credits to 22,284 claimants in 1979 and 1980. Although no statistics are available for the current year, the state Department of Revenue expects to pass out $5 million in cash rebates to 50,000 claimants for the 1982 political season.

"Although this sounds like a large figure, it represents something less than a quarter of registered voters in Alaska," Martin said.

Next year will be an especially hot political season, Martin said. In addition to the statewide races of governor, lieutenant governor, and U.S. representative, most state House and Senate seats will be up for election under the new reapportionment plan.

"Not only do we now have the state bark-rolling campaigns, but the entire rebate program lends itself to widespread fraud and abuse," Martin said.

LEGISLATOR WARNS OF POLITICAL HUCKSTERS

State Representative Terry Martin is warning Alaska residents to be on guard against political contribution solicitors out to make a fast buck off the State of Alaska.

The state contribution rebate program -- recently increased from $50 to $100 per individual -- is a lucrative target for hucksters masquerading as candidates, or for solicitors seeking cash for "worthwhile" political action committees, Martin said.

The state doled out nearly $1 million in cash and tax credits to 22,284 claimants in 1979 and 1980. Although no statistics are available for the current year, the state Department of Revenue expects to pass out $5 million in cash rebates to 50,000 claimants for the 1982 political season.

"Although this sounds like a large figure, it represents something less than a quarter of registered voters in Alaska," Martin said.

Next year will be an especially hot political season, Martin said. In addition to the statewide races of governor, lieutenant governor and U.S. representative, most state House and Senate seats will be up for election under the new reapportionment plan.

"Not only do we now have the state bank-rolling campaigns, but the entire rebate program lends itself to widespread fraud and abuse," Martin said.

"For example, some supporters of various candidates and groups are misleading potential contributors into believing they can be refunded for more than $100 in any given calendar year."

Not only can a person receive a refund from the state of up to $100 contributed, he also can receive an additional maximum $25 tax credit from the federal government for the same contribution. In other words, an individual can actually make a $25 profit for a $100 contribution.

However, Martin warned, a contributor can only claim a state refund if the candidate or political action group he is giving to is registered with the Alaska Public Offices Commission (APOC).

Before contributing, Martin said the individual should:

1) Make sure the person you give to has officially filed for elective office, and that the political action committee you want to contribute to is certified by APOC.

2) Be sure the person you give to is a serious candidate. APOC records show that declared candidates have used political contributions for non-campaign related expenses.

3) Don't let anyone deceive you into believing you can be refunded for more than $100 from the state.

4) Never give cash without a receipt if you expect a refund.

5) Be wary of professionals.

6) Don't give if you are opposed to state money being used to finance political campaigns.

Martin, a District 8 Republican, pointed out that Anchorage residents should be alerted to several House and Senate bills to be considered by the Legislature next session that would repeal the refund program.

"There is strong support among members of the majority House Coalition and conservatives in the Senate to repeal this law," he said.

At a time when the public is critical of the high cost of political campaigns, Martin said, the state rebate program only encourages prospective candidates to get into the race early for the sole purpose of "double-dipping" into the state treasury.

Double-dipping is a term used to describe candidates who file before January 1 in order to collect $100 from an individual in each of two calendar years -- 1981 and 1982 -- even though the election may be more than a year away.

"This obviously ups the ante and encourages everyone to file early," Martin said.

Martin said he personally became concerned about double-dipping after several prospective House candidates encouraged him to file early in order to take advantage of the rebate program.

"I feel this is an issue in which all voters should have a say," Martin said. "This is why I feel the question should be placed on the ballot in 1982. Voters should decide whether they want state money used to finance political campaigns."

The Honorable Jay S. Hammond
Governor of Alaska
Pouch A
Juneau, Alaska 99811

Dear Governor Hammond:

During a hearing conducted by the House Health, Education and Social Services Committee on December 9 at the University of Alaska, Anchorage, students aired deep concern about the lack of housing on campus.

The Committee feels that the student housing problem has grown to such magnitude that it should be brought to your attention, as well as the Legislature's.

More than 500 students at the Anchorage campus have signed petitions urgently requesting that student housing in Anchorage be a major priority in the state's fiscal 1983 budget. Copies of the petitions are attached for your review.

Student housing in Anchorage, I believe, would prove to be a good investment for the state.

Not only would it help the over-all housing crunch, which has reached a crisis, but it would assist in keeping students from going Outside for their education.

Not only have local high school students indicated in surveys that a lack of housing is one reason why they attend college Outside, but some 300 students who dropped out of the University in the Fall cited a lack of housing and programs as primary reasons for leaving.

It also is estimated that from $20 million to $28 million in state student loans go with these students when they leave the state. Using a conservative economic multiplying factor of six, which represents the amount of money students would normally spend in the community, this means the Anchorage business community is losing about $150 million in revenue each year.

There are two proposed Committee bills you may be interested in. Both will be introduced early next session.

The first piece of legislation--a special appropriation to the University of Alaska---would help solve the immediate housing shortage at the University. It sets aside $2.2 million for the purchase, renovation and maintenance of the Carriage House.

The second proposal--also a special appropriation to the University--would earmark $15 million for construction of 300 units on the Anchorage campus. However, this bill would be a capital improvement project only, and would not present a constant strain on the university's operating budget.

The University would merely contract for construction. The on-campus units would then be leased, operated and maintained by the private sector, eliminating the need to put more employees on the University payroll. The student dining area also would be leased.

Let me also point out that Anchorage, the state's largest community, currently has absolutely no student housing. Fairbanks not only has student housing, but there is $10 million in the 1983 fiscal budget for additional housing and some $3 million for renovation of existing housing units. President Barton has requested $12 million for housing for the Juneau campus in the 1983 budget. The Board of Regents has approved the request.

Students who attend the Fairbanks campus pay $325 per semester, (four months) while students in Anchorage pay $400 to $450 per month for an apartment off-campus. And because students cannot afford to sign long-term lease agreements, they are easily bumped from these off-campus units.

It also costs a student nearly $6,000 a year to attend the University's Anchorage campus, while at the Fairbanks campus, it costs about $3,600 a year.

Student housing in Anchorage would have additional benefits. It would cut down on automobile traffic in the campus area which also would save on fuel. Reduced rental costs would result in smaller student loans and free up loan money for students who desperately need to borrow.

Again, the Committee feels that student housing at the Anchorage campus is long overdue.

The Committee is not only seeking your support in this matter, but any assistance the state administration can provide would be deeply appreciated.

Sincerely,

Highway hearing scheduled

A community hearing to review proposed highway and road projects in the Mountain View and Russian Jack Springs areas will be held tonight at Clark Junior High School, Room 108. State Rep. Terry Martin, who represents the area, said community councils with an interest in the projects have been invited in an effort to reach a consensus on projects to be considered in the legislative session. Upgrading of Glenn Highway, Bragan Street and Mountain View Drive and the proposed Boniface Interchange will be discussed along with other projects proposed in the Anchorage Metropolitan Area Transportation Study. Representatives of the state Department of Transportation and Public Facilities will be on hand to give a presentation and answer questions. The hearing begins at 7:30 p.m.

Martin plans bill limiting regent terms

Associated Press

TIMES 12/10/81
State Rep. Terry Martin says he will propose during the 1982 legislative session that the terms of members of the University of Alaska Board of Regents be cut from eight years to five years.

The Anchorage Republican also said he might submit legislation requiring that regents be selected on the basis of population, rather than region.

Martin made the comments at a public hearing on the UA budget. Students from the University of Alaska, Anchorage, and Anchorage Community College complained of inadequate facilities and overcrowded classrooms.

Larry Smith, the student body president at UAA, said funds for the 1982 summer session at the Anchorage campus had to be used to meet the demands of enrollment for the 1981 fall semester.

He asked legislators attending the meeting to back a $150,000 supplemental appropriation to meet the shortfall.

Rep. Sally Smith, D-Fairbanks, suggested the request be directed to the Board of Regents.

Martin said, "The students are frustrated and I'm frustrated with the Board of Regents and the administration. We shouldn't cop out. We have every right to tell the Board of Regents they're doing it wrong."

Rebate law pulls candidates out early

by Steve Reinhardt
for The Times

Homer — A unique Alaska election law rather than tough competition or statewide reapportionment appears to be the reason for the sudden abundance of candidates filing for the 1982 elections, according to candidates and a state revenue official.

Gubernatorial candidate Tom Fink put it bluntly when campaigning in Homer last month: It's the money.

If not the major reason for filing early, one of the big ones is the state's campaign contribution rebate program, under which the state will now refund political contributions of up to $100 (last year it was $50). By stretching their campaigns over two calendar years, candidates or political action committees which have registered with the Alaska Public Offices Commission before the end of the year grant their supporters eligibility for two contribution rebates for one election.

And if filing early is a good investment for candidates, it can carry a reasonable return for contributors as well. Besides claiming up to $100 in rebates from the state, a person can claim the maximum $25 credit from the federal government, too.

This opportunity to fill campaign chests has not been lost on candidates or PACs. According to the state Department of Revenue, politicians and PACs are clamoring for rebate forms to send to potential supporters. For example, the Alaska branch of the National Education Association requested 5,000 rebate forms, according to the department's "forms manager," Colleen Brown.

Despite the demands, the department won't issue the rebate forms until the end of the year, she said.

Reapportionment puts almost all 60 seats in the Legislature up for election in 1982. The governorship and the capital move will also be included on next fall's ballot, guaranteeing a high-interest election.

"We're expecting a big year (for rebate claims)," Brown said, predicting nearly $5 million in contributions or some 50,000 claims.

Fink made no bones about it. Running for governor is expensive, he said. It's smart to file early to take maximum advantage of the refund program. Other candidates have been less specific. They need the extra couple of months this year to put their organizations together, they have said, or to overcome voter confusion about reapportionment. Of course, as a recently announced candidate agreed reluctantly, "It would be foolish not to build as large a treasury as possible."

But that's being greedy, said an Anchorage representative who opposes state-financed elections. Republican Terry Martin has circulated a news release accusing candidates, among them his competitor, of taking undue advantage of the refund program, getting into the race early "for the sole purpose of double-dipping into the state treasury."

One of Martin's aides said the representative would not be filing for office until next year.

Revenue department figures show the rebate program is becoming ever more popular. In 1979, Brown said, 6,888 people filed for about $306,000 in rebates. In 1980, 15,457 filed for about $690,000 in rebates. Those years, the maximum refund was $50 and the average rebate was about $45. The department's estimate for the coming year is based on an expected average rebate of $90-95, Brown said.

There is no age limit on the rebates, Brown said. However, applicants must be able to demonstrate that they acted of their own free will. Parents cannot contribute on behalf of their children and secure rebates, for example, unless the child makes a conscious decision to back a candidate or an issue, she said.

The rebates were handled on income tax forms back when there was a state income tax. Since the tax has been repealed there are special forms, said Brown, the forms manager. All who filed for rebates in 1979 and 1980 will get this year's form in the mail. Others will be available at revenue department field offices, legislative information offices, the governor's office and other state offices.

The federal government will grant tax credits up to a maximum of $25 for the same contribution. So Alaskans can invest $100 in the candidate or PAC of their choice and get $125 back, for a 25 percent payoff on a "political investment" of a few months' duration.

MEMORANDUM

December 14, 1981

TO: Billy Barrier, director
Division of Legal Services

FROM: Representative Terry Martin, chairman T.M.
House Labor and Commerce Committee

Subj: Telecommunications

I am requesting that your office draft a House Concurrent Resolution spelling out our policy on statewide telecommunications. The sponsor is the House Labor and Commerce Committee.

Please incorporate the following in the Resolution:

-- Whereas a significant and increasing amount of public funds is being invested in telecommunications systems; and

-- Whereas it should be the role of state government to encourage and not compete with the private sector; and

-- Whereas the private sector which deals in Alaska telecommunications faces a crowding out by government in the wake of increasing state wealth; and

-- Whereas the private sector has been the foundation and vitality of the American Democratic and economic system; and

-- Whereas the Alaska State Legislature lacks a policy regarding the burgeoning telecommunications system;

Be it resolved that the Alaska State Legislature should take the following into account to serve as guidelines when considering telecommunications appropriations:

-- When and where possible, the state Divisions of Telecommunications should procure services from private enterprise or certified and franchised utilities and contract for the construction, management, operation and maintenance of telecommunications systems.

-- When and where possible, the state Divisions of Telecommunications should reduce or eliminate airwave interference of state owned or financed stations with privately owned and operated cable television stations.

-- Artificial regulatory and government barriers for growth and development of new and innovative services by the private sector should be removed.

-- Companies owned and operated by Alaska residents and based in Alaska should be given a competitive edge over Outside interests.

-- Alaska's villages should have the opportunity to own, operate and maintain their own satellite earth stations.

-- In-state programming or Bush programming can be beneficial to sectors of the Alaskan community. However, the Divisions of Telecommunications should not only assure that such programs are cost effective, but production of these programs should be available to the private sector on a contract or bid basis.

-- No commercial advertisements shall be carried in state funded or state subsidized programs or in programs transmitted by state funded or state subsidized satellite channels.

-- The Legislature should encourage commercial radio and television news coverage of the legislative sessions by making equipment, space and satellite time available to the private sector. This would serve as a meaningful and efficient and non-controversial method of communicating legislative affairs to the public.

Billy, the committee would like a draft of the resolution by January 1, so that copies can be available to the various parties interested in this legislation.

Thanks for your help.

"WHO'S KIDDING WHOM?" AWARD GOES TO TANANA

Tanana Valley Community College has been awarded the 1981 "Who's Kidding Whom?" award in education for the most imaginative courses strictly for survival of the institution.

In presenting the award, state Rep. Terry Martin, R-Anchorage, said TVCC barely edged out other community colleges with such creative non-credit course offerings as "Make-up for The Contemporary Woman," "Disco Partner Dancing," "Brandies, Liquors & Cordials," and a "Seminar on Menopause."

"I have presented this award only to demonstrate that post-secondary institutions have gone to extremes to justify their existence," said Martin, a member of the state House Finance Subcommittee on the University of Alaska's budget last session.

Martin this week released a report outlining what he calls the unnecessary competition among the state's community colleges for students and money.

Community colleges, in part, are allocated funds based on how many students they can attract to their respective campuses.

-- More --

"The recent change in laws in 1978 that allows the University to count persons taking non-credit courses offered under its umbrella, only to obtain a higher count of students, has most offensively been misused -- to gain more money to feed a bloated monster that seems to strive to reach all the citizens of Alaska under various disguises," Martin said.

For example, courses in "Fortune Telling" and "Corn Husk Dolls" were offered at Matanuska-Susitna Valley Community College during the 1979-80 school year. At Kodiak Community College, courses were given in "Furniture Arrangement," "Knives & Scissors, How to Sharpen," and "Pinata Workshop." And in Anchorage, "Principles of Occult Theory" and "Wines of The World" were offered.

"And the list goes on and on," Martin said. "The point is that courses offered at community colleges should be for students preparing for a four-year baccalaureate degree or for those preparing for a career requiring certain technical skills."

The Anchorage legislator said it would be more appropriate to offer such entertainment type courses through the community schools system or REA.

"The prestige of the University system of Alaska deteriorates in direct proportion as it becomes more involved with non-essential academic issues and activities," Martin said.

"Common understandings of the terms 'university' and 'community college' are severely strained when one re-evaluates the course offerings . . ."
