5 A BILL

6 For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to the admissibility of hearsay
7 evidence of certain statements by children before 8 grand juries and amending Rule 6(r), Alaska Rules of 9 Criminal Procedure."

10 BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

11 * Section 1. AS 12.40 is amended by adding a new section to read:

12 Sec. 12.40.110. HEARSAY EVIDENCE IN PROSECUTIONS FOR SEXUAL 13 OFFENSES. (a) In a prosecution for an offense under AS 11.41.410 -
14 11.41.440 or 11.41.455, hearsay evidence of a statement, not otherwise 15 admissible, made by a child under the age of 10 who is the victim of 16 the offense describing the conduct establishing the offense may be 17 admitted into evidence before the grand jury if

18 (1) the circumstances of the statement indicate its relia-19 bility;

20 (2) additional evidence is introduced to corroborate the 21 statement; and

22 (3) the child testifies at the grand jury proceeding or the 23 child will be available to testify at trial.

24 (b) In this section "statement" means an oral or written asser-25 tion or nonverbal conduct if the nonverbal conduct is intended as an 26 assertion.

27 * Sec. 2. AS 12.40.110, added by sec. 1 of this Act, has the effect of 28 amending Rule 6(r), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, by changing the 29 circumstances under which hearsay evidence may be introduced in grand jury

1 proceedings for certain sexual offenses.

NARRATIVE

CSHB 67 (HESS)

According to information provided verbally by the Department of Law, the department projects 250 child sexual assault cases during FY 85 (up from 120 in FY 83). The department also estimates that 80 - 90% of these cases would involve the testimony of a minor, and would require the hearing contemplated in paragraph (d). It is further estimated by the department that the majority of these hearings will require one-half day of court time.

Based on these estimates, 225 half-day hearings would require 112 days of judicial time. The department indicates that approximately two-thirds of these cases are heard in Anchorage. Thus, judicial resources would be needed to cover 78 days of judicial time in Anchorage, and 34 days elsewhere in the state.

These hearings would require an additional superior court judge to sit in Anchorage and to cover other court locations. The cost of this position and related court staff are detailed on the previous page, along with the cost of travel to court locations outside of Anchorage.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

POSITION PAPER

CS HB67 (HESS)

"An Act relating to admissibility of hearsay evidence of certain statements by children before grand juries; and amending Rule 6(r), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure."

The Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault supports the allowance of hearsay evidence in grand jury proceedings for child sexual assault cases. Many victims of child sexual assault are too young to withstand the rigors of the proceedings or to be effective witnesses. Yet their disclosure of sexual assault to police officers and other individuals in less threatening circumstances should be available for consideration. Children often block out their very negative experiences and cannot remember specifics of the experience, particularly under pressure. These children deserve the protection of the criminal justice system as much as older, more articulate individuals.

The U.S. Attorney General's Task Force on Family Violence, which heard testimony in six U.S. cities, reviewed state statutes and researched issues, has recommended that hearsay evidence be allowed in preliminary hearings so the child is not required to testify repeatedly. To quote the Task Force Report:

"To enable children to more easily and effectively relate the abuse they have suffered, prosecutors should adopt special procedures for child abuse and molestation cases.

At the preliminary hearing the court considers only whether the evidence is sufficient to go forward with prosecution. The prosecutor should not require the child to testify in person. Consistent with state procedures, a videotaped statement, testimony by the child to a law enforcement investigator, or other such presentations should be adequate. If the state rules of procedure do not provide for such presentation, the prosecuting offices should work with concerned citizen groups and lawmakers to modify the rules of procedure to make such a presentation possible."

Two bills (CSSB 3 and CSHB 67), which allow the admittance of hearsay evidence in grand juries, are moving this session. The Council does not have the legal expertise to determine the most effective bill. However, the Council is strongly committed to the passage of a bill that provides for the admittance of hearsay evidence in grand jury proceedings in cases of child sexual assault to protect the child.

SECTIONAL ANALYSIS - DRAFT CS FOR HB 67 - AN ACT RELATING TO THE ADMISSION OF HEARSAY EVIDENCE BEFORE GRAND JURIES BY WITNESSES UNDER THE AGE OF 12; AND AMENDING RULE 6(r), ALASKA RULES OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

NOTE: This bill applies only to grand juries and is not related solely to sexual offenses (as the original bill provided), and the age was changed from 10 to 12.

SECTION 1 Provides that hearsay evidence of any child under the age of 12 would be admissible before the grand jury, as long as the circumstances indicate its reliability and the child testifies at the hearing or the testimony is corroborated if the child is unavailable.

Subsection 2 (B) was amended to provide that the grand jury would be informed of the reasons for the child's unavailability.

The factors determining "unavailable" in (b) 2 were amended in the following manner:

Declaration of incompetency by the judge was removed and substituted with (C) "likely to suffer substantial psychological, emotional or physical harm if required to testify" from the original HB 88.

The language in Subsection (b) (2) (B) was altered to match existing language in Rule 15 (e) (4).

Subsection (c) on page 2 was retained from the original HB 67.

Subsection (d) on page 2 was added by the subcommittee to provide that a closed hearing would be held in superior court to determine the admissibility of hearsay evidence.

SECTION 2 Amends Rule 6(r), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure.

POSITION PAPER

HOUSE BILL 67

For an Act entitled "An act relating to hearsay evidence in prosecution for certain sexual offenses; and amending Rules 803 and 804, Alaska Rules of Evidence, and Rule 6(r), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure."

This bill would allow admission at grand jury proceedings and at trial of hearsay statements of children under 10 years of age relating to sexual offenses. The bill would provide a means for admitting evidence from children at grand jury and trial proceedings while protecting those children from additional emotional trauma. The bill would also increase the likelihood of successful prosecution of sexual offenses committed against children.

The department is extremely pleased that the Legislature has addressed the problem and offered a solution to reduce child sexual abuse in Alaska. The department supports admitting certain hearsay evidence by children at grand jury proceedings but not at trial. The admittance at trial of child's hearsay statement may raise a major constitutional question. A person's constitutional right to confront a witness would have to be weighed against the state's interest to protect a child. Presently this issue is on appeal in Washington.

Furthermore, the department supports the language in the Governor's Child Protection packet, House Bill 88, section 5, new section 12.40.055(a) which allows hearsay from children up to age 16. Hearsay will often be a statement the child has made to a trusted friend, teacher or to the non-offending parent regarding being a victim of sexual abuse. However, an older child will often recant. Older children recognize the consequences and conflicts of testifying against an offender especially if a parent is the offender. The older child is more accessible to the pressure of the non-offending parent's desire to have the child recant. House Bill 88 would allow the hearsay statement to be used to refresh the victim's memory. It would also allow the prosecutor the opportunity to present to the grand jury for their consideration, the sexual abuse statements made by the victim to another party.

A hearsay exception allows the hearsay statements to be used to strengthen the child's grand jury testimony or to counter accusations that the child fabricated a sexual abuse story. A child up to the age of 16 should be allowed the same safeguards.

POSITION PAPER/Department of Health & Social Services

Position Paper
House Bill 67

House Bill 88 includes incest and indecent exposure as situations where the hearsay exception would apply. The department supports that position.

Finally, the department would like House Bill 67 new section 57.40.110(a) up to (1), be written exactly as House Bill 88. The language in the latter would be easier to understand by the public.

POSITION PAPER

HB 565

"An Act relating to hearsay evidence in prosecutions for sexual abuse of a minor and amending Rules 803 and 804, Alaska Rules of Evidence."

The Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault supports the admission of hearsay evidence in child sexual assault trials. Many victims of child sexual assault are too young to withstand the rigors of a trial or to be effective witnesses. Yet their disclosure of sexual assault to police officers and other professionals in less threatening circumstances should be available to juries for consideration.

Children often block out their very negative experiences and cannot remember specifics of the experience, particularly under the pressures of a trial. These children deserve the protection of the criminal justice system as much as older, more articulate individuals.

Although the admittance of hearsay evidence is not traditional in court, there are many exceptions to the rule. This circumstance, child sexual assault, warrants another exception.

ALASKA NETWORK ON DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AND SEXUAL ASSAULT

110 SEWARD #13 JUNEAU ALASKA 99801

(907)535-3550

POSITION PAPER

HB 565: An Act relating to hearsay evidence in prosecutions for sexual abuse of a minor; and amending Rules 803 and 804, Alaska Rules of Evidence

The Alaska Network on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault, a non-profit corporation representing 20 programs statewide that provide services to victims of domestic violence and sexual assault, supports HB565, which would facilitate the prosecution of cases of child sexual assault.

As you may be aware, the Network several years ago supported legislation that permitted the videotaping of testimony of young victims (aged 16 and under) of sexual assault in order to spare them the added trauma of testifying in open court. Since its passage, that legislation has worked successfully in cases of sexual assault involving children ages 5 and over, but has had little impact on the successful prosecution of sexual assault involving very young children.

Because there has been a dramatic increase in the number of cases of child sexual assault reported to the Division of Family and Youth Services, there is a real need to address the issue of prosecution of these crimes.

A very young victim of sexual assault will often tell the non-offending parent or day care worker about the assault, but they most often will not repeatedly relate the details of the incident. Consequently, it is the parent or day care worker who reports the crime to the Division of Family and Youth Services, a sexual assault program, or a law enforcement agency.

However, because prosecutors generally do not feel that a very young child is a reliable witness and because there is rarely a witness to the crime, the testimony of the adult person to whom the child disclosed the incident is the most reliable testimony available. Since that testimony is considered hearsay evidence and is not admissible in court, these cases are not being prosecuted but are, in fact, being dropped.

Washington State has enacted legislation similar to the bill that has been introduced. It is the Network's position that an exception to the hearsay rule is more than justified in order to facilitate prosecution of these cases.

In order to protect child victims from further harm, the Network urges your support for and passage of this bill.

LEGISLATIVE AFFAIRS AGENCY

MEMORANDUM

December 5, 1984

SUBJECT: Hearsay evidence in sexual abuse prosecutions
(Work Order No. 14-0131)

TO: Representative Randy Phillips

FROM: Michael F. Ford M.F.
Legislative Counsel

As you know, last year the legislature considered a similar bill to the one you have requested, concerning prosecution of sexual abuse crimes and the use of hearsay evidence. At that time, the possibility that the constitution would prohibit use of such evidence was raised. This memo addresses section two of this bill, relating to introduction of hearsay evidence at trial. The first section of the bill deals only with grand jury proceedings, and does not raise a constitutional question.

This bill is based on Washington Criminal Code sec. 9A.44.120. I have been informed by the Department of Law that the Washington statute has been challenged a number of times and upheld in the trial courts, but it has yet to be ruled on by the state's highest court. Therefore the Washington law is of little help in determining the validity of this bill.

In prosecutions for sexual abuse of a minor in any degree, this bill allows the prosecutor to introduce at trial, "hearsay evidence of a statement made by a child under the age of 10 describing an act of sexual contact with the child" if certain criteria are met (AS 12.45.049). Before the hearsay evidence may be introduced, the court must determine that the circumstances of the child's statement indicate its reliability, and the child must either testify at the proceeding, or be unavailable as a witness. If the evidence is admitted on the basis that the child is unavailable, there must be some further evidence introduced to corroborate the child's statement.

Existing Rules of Evidence provide that hearsay is inadmissible, but provide for certain exceptions (Rules of Evidence 803 and 804). The apparent purpose of the bill is to make it easier to prosecute sexual abuse cases by allowing in evidence that the jury would otherwise not be permitted to consider. For example, under present law, if a child tells a teacher that the child's parent is sexually abusing the child, but the child refuses or is emotionally unable to repeat the story at the parent's sexual abuse trial, the teacher would not be permitted to repeat the child's story at the trial because it would be hearsay and does not fall under one of the existing exceptions. The bill would allow the teacher to testify if (1) the court determines that the child's statement appears reliable, and (2) the child either testifies (on some other matter) or is unavailable and there is some further evidence that the child's statement is true.

The sixth amendment to the United States Constitution and Article I, sec. 11 of the Alaska Constitution both provide that a defendant in a criminal trial may not be denied the right "to be confronted with the witnesses against him." This bill is in potential conflict with this constitutional right because it permits the statements of a child to be used against a criminal defendant without giving the defendant the opportunity to cross-examine the child.

The Alaska Supreme Court has summarized the right to confrontation as follows:

This right of confrontation protects two vital interests of the defendant. First, it guarantees him the opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses against him so as to test their sincerity, memory, ability to perceive and relate, and the factual basis of their statements. Second, it enables the defendant to demonstrate to the jury the witness' demeanor when confronted by the defendant so that the inherent veracity of the witness is displayed in the crucible of the courtroom. (Footnotes omitted).

Lemon v. State, 514 P.2d 1151, 1153 (Alaska 1973). The Court in Lemon analyzed the United States Supreme Court decisions on the right to confrontation as it relates to the introduction of hearsay evidence and concluded that

Representative Randy Phillips

...while the demeanor interest of the right of confrontation is not a crucial element, the right to effective cross-examination is essential unless the testimony falls within certain established exceptions to the hearsay rule. (Footnote omitted).

Lemon, supra, at 1154. The Court ruled that Lemon had been denied the right of confrontation because of the admission of a hearsay statement against him that did not fall within the established exceptions to the hearsay rule.

This bill does contain certain protections for the defendant, but these may not be enough to survive a constitutional challenge. Since the bill permits the prosecution to use hearsay evidence that does not fall within one of the established exceptions to the hearsay rule against the defendant, the Lemon case seems to prohibit it. Even if the criteria for the admission of the hearsay evidence contained in the bill are met, a court could still find that the defendant has been denied the right to confrontation. Although the question is an open one, there is a strong possibility that the bill could be found unconstitutional if challenged.

If you have further questions, please contact me.

Sec. 12.45.047. Videotaping of testimony by young victims of sexual offenses. (a) Upon application by the prosecuting attorney and notice to the defendant, the court shall permit the state to videotape the testimony of a child who is the alleged victim of a violation of AS 11.41.410 — 11.41.455 and who is 16 years of age or younger at the time the court issues the order permitting the videotaping.

(b) The trial judge shall preside at the videotaping proceeding and shall rule on all questions as if at trial. The defendant shall be afforded all rights applicable to defendants during trial, including the right to an attorney and the right to confront and cross-examine the witness. The trial judge shall determine those persons other than the prosecuting attorney, the defendant, and the defendant's attorney who may attend the videotaping proceeding.

(c) Videotaped evidence taken in accordance with this section is admissible in evidence in the criminal trial of a defendant charged with a violation of AS 11.41.410 — 11.41.455. (§ 2 ch 67 SLA 1982)

Editor's notes. — For provisions setting forth the policy of the state, the purposes of the enacting legislation, and legislative findings, see § 1, ch. 67, SLA 1982 in the 1982 Temporary and Special Acts and Resolves.

Section 3, ch. 67, SLA 1982, provides:

Sec. 12.45.048. Exclusion of public from trial during testimony by young victim of sexual offense. (a) After notice to the defendant, the state may apply to the court for an order excluding the public from the courtroom during the testimony of a child who is the alleged victim of a violation of AS 11.41.410 — 11.41.455. The order shall be granted if the court finds that the child is 16 years of age or younger at the time of the trial.

(b) If the public is excluded from the trial under (a) of this section, the testimony given during the time the public is excluded shall be available to the public upon request within a reasonable time sufficient to allow preparation of a tape recording or transcript of the testimony.

(c) In this section "public" means all persons except

- (1) the judge presiding over the trial;
- (2) the members of the jury;
- (3) the defendant and the attorney and an investigator for the defendant;
- (4) the prosecuting attorney and an investigating officer for the state;
- (5) the parents or legal guardians of the child;

(6) a guardian ad litem;
 (7) in the discretion of the court, any person who has developed a significant relationship with the child and who has provided substantial support for the child;
 (8) court personnel.
 (§ 2 ch 67 SLA 1982)

Editor's notes. — For provisions setting forth the policy of the state, the purposes of the enacting legislation, and legislative findings, see § 1, ch. 67, SLA 1982 in the 1982 Temporary and Special Acts and Resolves.

Sec. 12.45.060. Discovery of evidence.

Based on Jencks Act, 18 U.S.C. § 350j, et seq. was modeled after the federal rule, 18 U.S.C. § 350j, et seq. faced with questions regarding the interpretation of the statute, the court turned to federal case law. Putnam v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2251 (File No. 3475), 629 P.2d 35 (1980).

Criminal R. 16 and 17. — Criminal Rule 16 and 17 are inconsistent. — Criminal Rule 16 governs discovery while Criminal Rule 17 governs discovery during the trial. The same evidence may be discoverable under both the rule and are not so overlapping as to be inconsistent. Putnam v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2251 (File No. 3475), 629 P.2d 35 (1980).

Duty of state to preserve evidence. — The duty of preservation to preserve any evidence that is discoverable by the defendant is not discharged by the state's attaching once any amount of evidence is gathered and taken possession in question. Putnam v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2251 (File No. 3475), 629 P.2d 35 (1980).

When sanctions are appropriate. — In cases where the defendant has been found to have been unable to obtain the state's good faith failure to produce evidence, sanctions are appropriate. Where the defendant has suffered prejudice, sanctions are generally warranted. Putnam v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2251 (File No. 3475), 629 P.2d 35 (1980).

Dear Lucy,

Enclosed is a copy of the Health, Education, and Social Services Committee Substitute for HB 565, relating to hearsay evidence in prosecutions for certain sexual offenses. The bill has not yet passed out of the HESS Committee, however it is scheduled for hearing again on Friday, March 30, and we are hoping to see it moved to Judiciary at that time.

Per our conversation of March 1, I believe that your testimony to the Judiciary Committee would be most beneficial. I am certain that questions pertaining to the constitutionality of this legislation will be brought forth at that time, and your comments regarding the Washington State hearsay law could probably shed some light on that subject. A copy of HB 565 has also been sent to Mary Kay Barbieri at UPS Law School, and we would hope to be able to hook you both up by telephone to offer testimony if the Judiciary chairman chooses to hear this bill. I will let you know if a hearing is scheduled.

I would be very appreciative if you could review our proposed legislation and offer comments, if any, on how the bill could be modified or improved. Please feel free to call collect (907-465-4894) if you wish to discuss your opinion, or need further information.

Sincerely,

SEXUAL ABUSE OF MINORS HAS RECENTLY COME TO THE FOREFRONT IN ALASKA. THERE IS AN INCREASED AWARENESS ON THE PART OF CHILDREN, PARENTS, FRIENDS, AND PROFESSIONALS THAT SEXUAL ABUSE IS WRONG AND CHILDREN SHOULD TELL SOMEONE. HOWEVER, TOO MANY CASES ARE STILL GOING UNREPORTED BECAUSE MANY CHILDREN DO NOT UNDERSTAND THEY CAN TALK ABOUT IT AND RECEIVE HELP. MANY ADULTS MINIMIZE THE PROBLEM AND WANT TO DENY IT IS HAPPENING. NATIONAL STATISTICS INDICATE THAT ONE OUT OF EVERY FOUR GIRLS AND ONE OUT OF EVERY EIGHT BOYS WILL BE SEXUALLY ABUSED BEFORE THEIR EIGHTEENTH BIRTHDAY.

STATS

ACCORDING TO POLICE STATISTICS, FROM 1980 TO 1982, REPORTED SEXUAL ASSAULTS AGAINST MINORS INCREASED BY 106 PERCENT STATEWIDE; FROM 142 INCIDENTS IN 1980, TO 201 INCIDENTS IN 1981, TO 293 IN 1982. PRELIMINARY FIGURES FOR 1983 INDICATE THAT REPORTED SEXUAL ASSAULTS ARE CONTINUING TO INCREASE; IN THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF 1983, THE STATE TROOPERS HAD ALREADY RECEIVED 71 PERCENT AS MANY REPORTS OF SEXUAL ASSAULTS AGAINST MINORS AS THEY HAD RECEIVED IN ALL OF THE PREVIOUS YEAR. IT SHOULD BE NOTED THAT THESE STATISTICS EXCLUDE SEXUAL ASSAULTS REPORTED TO THE ANCHORAGE POLICE DEPARTMENT.

REPORTS

~~The Records~~

THE DIVISION OF FAMILY AND YOUTH SERVICES' RECORDS SHOW A TWO TO THREE-FOLD INCREASE IN CASES IN WHICH THE PRIMARY PROBLEM OF THEIR CLIENTS IS COMPLAINED OR SUSPECTED TO BE SEXUAL ABUSE OF A MINOR. ACTIVE CASES INVOLVING SUSPECTED SEXUAL ASSAULT INCREASED FROM 142 IN 1980 TO 529 IN 1983!

PROSECUTION THE RECORD FOR PROSECUTION OF THIS CRIME IS NO MORE ENCOURAGING. ACCORDING TO THE CHIEF PROSECUTOR'S OFFICE IN THE DEPARTMENT OF LAW, CRIMINAL JUSTICE DIVISION, OF THE 252 CASES SCREENED IN 1983, THE CHIEF PROSECUTOR DECLINED TO PURSUE 85 CASES BECAUSE HE FELT THE STATE'S EVIDENCE WAS INSUFFICIENT. IN ADDITION TO THE CASES THAT THE STATE DECLINES TO PROSECUTE, SOME CASES MAY BE DISMISSED AFTER THEY ARE FILED WITH THE COURTS. IN 1983, 190 CASES INVOLVING SEXUAL ASSAULT OF A MINOR WERE DISPOSED OF IN ALASKA COURTS. OF THESE 190, 117 DEFENDANTS PLEADED GUILTY AND ANOTHER 27 DEFENDANTS WERE CONVICTED IN COURT OR JURY TRIALS.

THERE ARE SEVERAL DIFFERENT POSITIONS FROM WHICH TO ATTACK THE PROBLEM OF SEXUAL ABUSE OF MINORS. FIRST, WE MUST FOCUS ATTENTION ON PREVENTION AND EDUCATION WITH THE GENERAL POPULACE. SECOND, ~~ADEQUATE~~ TREATMENT PROGRAMS MUST BE AVAILABLE FOR VICTIMS, FOR NON-OFFENDING FAMILY MEMBERS, AND FOR PERPETRATORS. FINALLY, CHANGES MUST BE MADE WITHIN THE CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM TO FACILITATE THE PROSECUTION AND PUNISHMENT FOR THIS CRIME.

HB 565 IS INTENDED TO PROVIDE THIS VERY FACILITATION BY ALLOWING HEARSAY EVIDENCE IN PROSECUTIONS FOR SEXUAL ABUSE OF A MINOR. ALTHOUGH WE RECOGNIZE THAT IT WILL NOT BE A PANACEA FOR THIS OVERWHELMING PROBLEM, IT WILL, IN SOME CASES, PROVIDE THE NEEDED RELIABLE ~~CORROBORATION~~ TO BRING PERPETRATORS TO JUSTICE.

I. Program Description

The Seattle/King County community has a comprehensive response to child sexual abuse which provides coordinated, specialized handling of all aspects of the problem. Specialized individuals or units exist within all the legally mandated agencies including law enforcement, Child Protective Services, prosecuting attorney and Probation and Parole. The core system members of the network are the Sex Crime Units of the King County Department of Public Safety and Seattle Police Department, the Sexual Abuse Unit of Seattle Child Protective Services, and the Sexual Assault Unit of the King County Prosecutor's Office. The Sexual Assault Center and Rape Relief offer specialized victim services including medical care, counseling and advocacy. Private mental health professionals or agencies provide specialized evaluation and outpatient treatment services to both adult and juvenile sexual offenders. An inpatient treatment facility exists within the State Department of Corrections to which an offender can be sentenced. A loose-knit network of community mental health professionals provides other sexual abuse treatment services including individual and family treatment, groups and specialized play and art therapy for abused children.

The Sexual Assault Center is located at Harborview Medical Center, a former county hospital administered as a University of Washington teaching hospital. From the inception of the program in 1973, there was a steady increase in child victims which led to the LEAA funded grant, "The Sexually Abused Child as a Victim/Witness" awarded in 1977. The premise of the project was that the criminal justice system should accommodate the special needs of child victims of sexual abuse, which would increase successful prosecution and minimize additional trauma to the child. This approach required the cooperation of all parties to reduce the negative aspects of system intervention and therefore enhance victim cooperation and successful outcome. The grant provided a structured opportunity to set about creating a specialized network response which addressed both the clinical and legal aspects of child sexual abuse.

Sexual Assault Center and various system components supported concerned colleagues within each system in establishing specialized units. Regular meetings among network members provided a forum for identifying areas of concern which could be addressed to result in the best possible response for victims, offenders and the community.

Specialists offer training and consultation to each other, to related community agencies and to the community at large. The approach is presented as a team approach which includes education to prevent possible abuse and to insure supportive and appropriate response to the child victim at disclosure. Information is shared about the legal requirements for reporting and available community resources.

The network developed from shared beliefs among individuals working within the systems who learned, through experience, that the special nature of child sexual abuse demanded a coordinated approach. Genuinely respectful, friendly personal relationships exist between members of the different systems. The evolution of the specialized units has been more or less difficult to accomplish. In some cases, a number of unrelated factors converged to allow a change in approach, such as the transfer or promotion of certain personnel, or a political election. Because it is so obviously beneficial there has been little argument with the idea, and the greater resistance has been to changing process and procedure. There is a high level of community awareness, pride and support for the services of the network.

II. Philosophical Assumptions

The underlying assumption of the Seattle/King County network is that a sexual offense against a child is both a crime and causes and is caused by psychosocial or behavioral disorder. It is believed that any sexual contact between an adult or a significantly older person and a child, or where sex is forced, is wrong. Children are naturally dependent and never in an equal position in a relationship with an adult, and cannot give informed consent. The adult or older person is always considered morally and legally responsible. However, some of these individuals who commit sexual offenses appear to be a treatable group who can be made safe to be at large in the community. The goal is that further children not be victimized and it is both the most effective and the humane solution to insure that treatment be made available to those who can benefit. This does not mean that punishment is not also an acceptable consequence for breaking the law. Punishment and treatment are the dual responses to those who have a behavioral disorder which appears as criminal conduct. Since children are the victims of the behavior disorder all efforts of the response must be directed at achieving safety and support for the victim. The intervention process should not exacerbate the trauma and can be a therapeutic experience. When the offender is cooperative, admits to having a problem and agrees to court recommended and supervised treatment with a qualified specialist, there's a good possibility of remaining in the community on probation status. Some offenders fail in community treatment or are too out of control but can be treated in an inpatient setting. For those who continue to deny the offense or who are determined to be not amenable to treatment, prison is the only available alternative.

III. Legal Authority

The program operates under the RCW Criminal Code of the State of Washington and the Administrative Code regulating matters of custody and relating to the Child Abuse Reporting Act. These are two different legal systems. The criminal statutes include Rape, 1st, 2nd and 3rd degree, Statutory Rape, 1st, 2nd and 3rd degree, Indecent Liberties, and Incest, all felonies, and Communicating with a Minor for Immoral Purposes, a Gross Misdemeanor. A conviction for Rape in the 1st degree, or Statutory Rape in the 1st degree requires a mandatory commitment to the State Department of Corrections, either to prison or to the inpatient sex offender treatment program at Western State Hospital.

The Department of Social and Health Services, the state social service agency, has legally mandated authority to investigate reported child abuse which includes sexual abuse by a caretaker, or where the caretaker neglects to take appropriate action and fails to protect the child. The Child Protective Service performs the investigation and must report substantiated cases to the Central Registry. A caseworker can file a Dependency Petition in the Juvenile Court to secure temporary custody of the child and authorize state intervention in the family. Child Protective Services has the responsibility for out of home placement. The state Attorney General's Office represents the state in dependency matters. There is also a Family Court with jurisdiction

Child Protective Services has the responsibility for out of home placement. The state Attorney General's Office represents the state in dependency matters. There is also a Family Court with jurisdiction over custody arrangements or modifications.

There are procedures and protocols developed both within and among the various network components. The Sexual Assault Center maintains a protocol for medical intervention in the Emergency Room, and there is a joint agreement on collection and transfer of evidence with law enforcement agencies. There is a protocol for Child Protective Service and Sexual Assault Center case cooperation, and there is a protocol and referral form between Child Protective Services and law enforcement. The Prosecuting Attorney's Office has standards for filing cases and case management procedures in the Special Assault Unit which handles all cases of child sexual abuse. These agreements have all been developed by the members of the different agencies. What originally began as informal agreements have gradually been transformed into policy between agencies. There are also certain identified individuals, usually line supervisor level personnel, who are identified with the formal network and become the liaison for their systems. There are two regular meetings, one a systems meeting, conducted at the Prosecuting Attorney's Office, the second a case management meeting, conducted at the Child Protective Services.

IV. Staffing

Each program element is staffed and funded separately. The LEAA Victim/Witness grant at the Sexual Assault Center and the Treatment/Training Institute from the National Center for Child Abuse and Neglect have included contracts for time or personnel with the criminal justice system or with Child Protective Services. Sexual Assault Center operates under the University of Washington State Personnel System. Child Protective Services is part of the Department of Social and Health Services Personnel System, law enforcement hiring and promotion is through the local department, while the Prosecuting Attorney is authorized through county funding. Each agency operates under personnel guidelines for that particular system. The offender specialists are generally private practitioners operating on a fee for service basis. The Sexual Assault Center is staffed by a team of social workers and physicians. The Child Protective Services offices have either a specialized unit handling sex abuse cases, or individuals who have a specialized case load. They are usually Master's level social workers. The major police departments have sex crime units with specially trained detectives assigned. The smaller departments have certain detectives who have experience in child sexual abuse cases and do the follow-up investigation. The Prosecuting Attorney's Office has a Special Assault Unit which handles all sexual assault and child abuse cases from the filing to disposition. Prosecuting Attorneys may rotate into this unit.

V. Funding Sources

The Sexual Assault Center is supported by a combination of city of Seattle monies, federal grants and matching support from the University of Washington and the hospital. The Center currently has a regional Treatment/Training Institute from the National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect and is finishing up a National Rape Center research grant. In 1980, the Center had a one year county-funded project to establish a network of victim groups located in Youth Service Bureaus around the county, trained and supervised by Sexual Assault Center personnel. In addition, the Sexual Assault Center occasionally receives donations from the community, or from convicted offenders, and will have to begin a partial fee for service system soon. Offenders are generally expected to pay the cost of treatment which can be reimbursed by third party payers. The inpatient treatment is a part of the state social service system and is subsidized by the state.

The increased rate of reporting and higher case loads at both the Child Protective Service and in the criminal justice system, has led to some increased assignment of personnel, but state hiring freezes and the general economic situation inhibits further expansion of personnel.

VI. Eligibility Requirement

Any situation of sexual assault is eligible for services by some or all components of the community network. All cases where the offender is a caretaker or where the child is not safe at home must be reported to Child Protective Service and investigated. Whenever a crime has been committed, where the victim is willing or able to participate in the criminal justice system, the legal requirements for competency are met and it is within the statute of limitations, involvement in the criminal justice system is encouraged. Any victim of sexual assault can receive services at the Sexual Assault Center regardless of participation in the criminal justice system. Offender specialists evaluate referred offenders and will only accept into treatment those who can be safely treated in the community. The recommendation of the specialist carries a significant weight in dispositional hearings or at sentencing. The network is concerned with insuring that the offender receives the proper treatment in a supervised setting and that the victim receives appropriate treatment with knowledgeable professionals.

VII. Program Components and Procedures

A. Not all incest cases have protective service or criminal justice involvement. If the parents are currently divorced or divorce following disclosure, or if the abuse happened a long time ago, or in another jurisdiction, the Child Protective Service may not become involved or may be involved only briefly because no further contact occurs between the offender and the victim. Child Protective Service involvement is primarily with families who do not believe or support the child and the environment is unsafe, or in cases where reunification is planned following treatment and supervision must be maintained until that time. In the cases where the offender is residing with the victim, separation following disclosure is expected in almost all cases. The offender is encouraged or pressured to leave so the children can remain with the family. If the family does not believe or support the child or where the child wishes to leave, out of home placement is arranged. The Department of Social and Health Services maintains a specialized group foster home for sexually abused children. The Child Protective Service is required to report all criminal cases to law enforcement although this alone does not constitute an official report. A protective service worker may make an informal agreement with the family regarding separation, treatment plan for the victim, offender and family, and agreement to abide by certain conditions, such as no contact, or the worker may file a Petition in court for temporary custody and court imposed conditions. The family can agree to the Petition or may have a Fact Finding hearing which determines Dependency and if granted, the court establishes the conditions. It must be reviewed every six months.

Not all victims are able or willing to participate in criminal prosecution. No one is forced to in order to receive services. For those who do report there are special procedures for the handling of cases involving child victims. In general, the case is initially referred by Childrens Protective Services, the Sexual Assault Center, or other community agencies directly to the detective units. The detective then arranges a joint interview with the Prosecuting Attorney on the Special Assault Unit which is conducted with a support person present. The interview may occur in a special interviewing room for children with a one-way mirror in the Prosecuting Attorney's Office. Following the interview, additional information or evidence is collected by the detective, the suspect is interviewed, and when the case is ready, the Prosecutor makes a decision about whether to file charges and what charges to file. In borderline cases consultation with the Sexual Assault Center worker, Child Protective Service worker or the law enforcement personnel may happen. Once charges are filed, the defendant is arraigned and usually released in the community on bail or personal recognizance with the condition of no contact with the victim. There are negotiations between the Defense Attorney and the Prosecutor regarding plea possibilities. There are established filing standards and disposition recommendations within the Prosecutor's Office relating to type of offense and previous record. In most cases the offender pleads guilty and only about a quarter of cases go to trial. In general if the offender is willing to plead guilty and is determined to be amenable to treatment by a qualified specialist the Prosecutor will support the recommendation in addition to a recommendation for jail time on work release if eligible. At the sentencing there are usually recommendations in front of the judge from the Defense Attorney, from the Prosecuting Attorney, a Pre-sentence Probation report, and input from those working with the victim, the family or from treatment agencies. The judge makes the final decision and there are forty Superior Court judges in King County. The various components of the network do not always agree about the best disposition and each may make an individual recommendation.

B. Defense Counsel

All charged persons have legal counsel or have a lawyer appointed. All constitutional rights are recognized, although there is pressure from most systems to arrive at a plea rather than have the child testify. The child has many advocates in the process who try to limit defense contact with victims or attempts to harass, intimidate, confuse or manipulate victims. The Defense Counsel has the legal right to interview a victim prior to the trial, but it usually takes place in the presence of the Prosecuting Attorney. State law gives victims the legal right to have an advocate present during any part of the process.

C. Conditions of Sentence

Offenders either plead guilty or are convicted by jury or judge and then sentenced by Superior Court judges. He or she makes a final decision based on the various recommendations, as well as personal views on the proper legal response to the problem of child sexual abuse. Where there is little disagreement between the Prosecutor and Defense Attorney, which is frequently the case, the judge usually supports the recommendation. In some cases there are strong differences and the judge makes the final determination. Most cases are resolved by plea and of those that go to trial, about half result in convictions. In intra-family sexual abuse cases a small percent are sent to prison, another group go to the inpatient treatment program and the majority remain in the community on probation with deferred sentences for first offenders or suspended sentences and certain conditions on the probation status. The conditions often will include such things as a requirement to remain in treatment with an authorized specialist, some time in jail, generally on work release, payment of court costs, limitation on contact with the victim or other minor children, no use of alcohol, participation in other community treatment programs and sometimes payment for the cost of treatment for the victim.

D. Length of Time in Program

The length of the sentence is determined by statutory maximum and minimums, prosecutorial standards, and particular characteristics of the case. Treatment is usually ordered until termination is agreed upon by the therapist, or with the permission of the probation officer. Outpatient treatment generally takes one to two years and inpatient treatment at the state facility has a minimum of two years on inpatient status and about three to five years total including outpatient follow-up. Changes in contact orders, treatment requirements or the return of the offender into the family is usually jointly determined by the victim specialist, the offender specialist and the Probation Officer.

VIII. A. Treatment Services

1. Initial Crisis Services

Sexual Assault Center provides twenty four hour, seven day a week medical and psychosocial intervention at Harborview Medical Center. Assessment, individual and family therapy and advocacy is available. Social workers may refer to Child Protective Service, criminal justice system or other community agencies for concrete services such as public assistance, emergency shelter or ongoing treatment. The Sexual Assault Center social worker offers to provide case management during the initial crisis establishing the structure and making a treatment plan.

2. Ongoing

The Sexual Assault Center offers some individual and family services on an ongoing basis. There are groups for teenage victims, for mothers of victims and for adult women victimized as children.

There is a network of groups to which a child may be referred on a geographic basis as part of the treatment package. There are several groups for mothers located around the county. In addition in community agencies and among private practitioners there are individuals who have identified themselves as having special training and an interest in working with some aspect of the problem of child sexual abuse. Some therapists provide play and art therapy for abused children. Others do family counseling once the sexual offense problem has been addressed. It is not uncommon for a family to have contact with a number of different agencies providing different services for different members of the family.

3. Offender Treatment

A number of agencies and individual practitioners provide specialized evaluation and treatment services. Most have a behavioral cognitive orientation to treatment. Individual and/or group are offered, depending on the particular agency. Community treatment generally addresses both the physiological aspect of decreasing deviant arousal and increasing normal arousal patterns and dealing with the behavior and attitude changes which are required to admit guilt and act in a responsible way with children and other people. After the sexual offending problem has been addressed marital therapy or family therapy may be conducted by the offender specialist and/or in conjunction with the Sexual Assault Center.

4.

Treatment Services continue to be offered by all treatment resources as long as it is indicated by the nature of the problem. In many cases there may be a delayed reaction and child victims often return for service years following disclosure.

B. Duration of Treatment

Offenders are in treatment about one to two years on the average in the community. Children and other non-offending family members can be in treatment any length of time although it is generally somewhat less time than is required for offenders. Attendance in group often occurs for a longer period than individual treatment. The victim groups and women's groups are open-ended and receive new members on an on-going basis.

C. Additional Treatment Issues

Failure to abide by conditions results in notification of the supervising agency, Probation and Parole or Juvenile Court, can result in revocation and commitment to the State Department of Corrections. All offenders sign the release of information to allow flow of information between Child Protective Services, the victim treatment agency and the offender therapist.

D. Termination

The offender therapist determines when the offender is ready to terminate treatment. Criteria are defined by the therapist. Supervision continues until the offender completes his sentence although the treatment may end prior to the end of the probationary period. An offender may progress to an unsupervised status on probation after completing treatment. In general if the individual intends to return to the family supervision continues until and during the re-entry period.

IX. Consequences of Violation

If an offender fails to cooperate with treatment, or makes no progress, the treatment agency may recommend revocation to the Probation Department. A reoffense constitutes an automatic revocation hearing where a judge makes a determination on the disposition based on reports from treatment personnel. Revocation depends generally on the degree of cooperation of the offender and the seriousness of any infraction.

X. Statistics

Since there is no single program in the community each agency maintains separate statistics. In 1981 the the Sexual Assault Center served 1,838 patients of which 1,031 were children sixteen and under. Of the adult patients approximately 28% were women who had been abused as children. Of the children served, 52% were incest victims. Of these incest situations, 85% were girls and 15% were boys; 72% of the family offenders were parents or parental figures (41% of all offenders against children). Those incest offenders who were not parents were usually an older brother, an uncle or a grandparent. In more than one-half of all child cases, the children were victims of multiple incidents of sexual abuse. 85% were assaulted by known offenders. About 80% were girls and 20% were boys. All but 19% of the cases were reported to either law enforcement, Children's Protective Services or some combination, although all cases did not occur in the King County jurisdiction.

Child Protective Services receives approximately 400 complaints of child abuse a month and about 20% are for child sexual abuse. Law enforcement does not compile crime statistics by relationship to offender or by age of victim, so there are no specific numbers available. There are 26 separate jurisdictions in King County although the primary jurisdictions are the Sheriff's office and the city police department. The Prosecuting Attorney filed charges in 215 cases involving child victims in 1980 and 120 were intrafamily cases. Of incest cases, 73% pled guilty, and of those that went to trial about 60% were convicted. Of convicted offenders the disposition was: 10% ordered to prison, 10% to Western State Hospital and the remaining 74% were in the community on supervised probation.

The numbers of cases handled by all systems increases continually. It is estimated that reports will by up 40% at the Sexual Assault Center.

In 1980 the Prosecuting Attorney increased prosecution of child cases by 200%.

There is no existing system for reliably determining recidivism which is generally defined as a reoffense or rearrest within two years. Community therapists estimate an 80 to 90% control rate for specialized behavioral treatment. Western State Hospital inpatient treatment program has a recidivism rate of approximately 20% for participants who successfully complete the program. Since true recidivism can only be determined reliably by victim reports there is no accurate way to know the rate of recidivism.

PROSECUTION OF THE OFFENDER IN CASES OF CHILD SEXUAL ASSAULT AGAINST CHILDREN

Introduction

As the rate of reporting of sex crimes has increased, so has discussions about the prosecution of the offender. Both within and without the criminal justice system there is a division about whether or not prosecution of the offender is necessarily a desirable avenue to pursue. Some proponents of prosecution maintain that it is the only way to insure that the offender will not commit additional sex offenses. Opponents often argue that criminal prosecution and its inherently punitive response not only to sex offenders but also to the victims can only have adverse effects which may far exceed the effects of the original crime.

These arguments become especially vehement when the offender is charged with a sex crime against a child victim. In addition, cases involving a child victim of sexual assault are unpopular with criminal justice system personnel. This unpopularity seems to be based on a number of factors, including the commonly held assumption that young children make poor witnesses; that the cases are often difficult to build; and the child and his/her family are emotional and difficult to deal. The prosecution of cases involving child victims of sexual assault appear to involve a series of contradictory assumptions about the nature and benefits of criminal prosecution and the problems of child victims and their families. Disagreements are encouraged by a lack of information about prosecution of these cases and in some circumstances a lack of alternatives to current criminal justice procedures.

The report which follows will describe a set of procedures instituted in a county prosecuting attorney's office for the handling of cases involving a child victim of sexual assault. It will also present data regarding the prosecution of cases from a one year period.

These procedures were developed and data was collected as part of an LEAA contract with the Sexual Assault Center at Harborview Medical Center, Seattle, Washington. This contract entitled "The Sexually Abused Child as a Victim/Witness" has the objective of cooperating with criminal justice system personnel in developing new procedures for accommodating the child victim/witness.

The Sexual Assault Center

The Sexual Assault Center offers a range of services to child victims of sexual assault and their families. These services include: emergency medical care, examinations and treatments, crisis counseling, advocacy with the criminal justice system and social agencies, and on-going counseling to resolve emotional reactions of the child and non-offending parent to the assault.

As part of the LEAA contract, social work staff of the Sexual Assault Center have participated in formal training sessions with criminal justice system personnel and attend a weekly meeting with police, prosecuting attorney, and child protective service representatives to develop new procedures for handling child sex assault cases. Training has included the following topics: medical/legal evidence, interviewing techniques with young children, the nature of psychological reactions in children and their families, and the psychology of the offender.

In addition to these formal interactions between social work staff and criminal justice personnel, there are a series of cooperative exchanges around specific cases involving child victims. Social workers are familiar with the requirements and nature of reporting and prosecution of sexual assault cases and are able to assist the child victim and her/his family in making an informed decision about whether or not to proceed with prosecution.<sup>1</sup> As a basic philosophy the Sexual Assault Center is supportive of prosecution believing that it is a fundamental element in insuring the protection of the child and that the offender may be more likely to accept responsibility for his act and receive services to help him avoid further acts.

Criminal justice system personnel frequently refer victims and their families to the Sexual Assault Center for medical examinations and/or supportive counseling or advocacy services to assist them with their emotional reactions to the assault, its aftermath, and to maintain their cooperation with the prosecution process.

New Procedures for Accommodating Child Victims

Children face and present special problems in criminal proceedings. Many are so young that they do not completely understand the nature of the process in which they are a central figure. Statistics for 583 children seen at the Sexual Assault Center during the period from October 1977 to June 1979 indicate that 18.1% are six years of age or younger. A full 40.0% are below the age of ten. Young children do not possess the cognitive or language skills to be able to fix incidents in chronological time nor to recount different incidents in detail distinguishing between each in terms of specific events and actions. They also lack the skills to express feelings in words. In cases in which the offender is a family member (47%) or non-related but known to the child (42%), the child is likely to have ambivalent feelings about the offender and may be concerned about the effects of the child's involvement with the criminal justice system on the offender.

Accommodations within criminal justice procedures are necessary to lessen the trauma experienced by the child as a result of the sexual abuse and their involvement with the criminal justice process. Accommodations resulting from interactions between criminal justice system personnel and Sexual Assault Center social workers are summarized below:

Interviewing Techniques - Criminal justice system personnel, both police and prosecuting attorneys are not trained to be effective interviewers of small children. Formal training was instituted to assist personnel in becoming more effective interviewers of children. This training included material on cognitive abilities of children (e.g., memory and recall skills), emotional and behavioral reactions to sexual assault, interviewing skills (e.g., developing a relationship, using child-appropriate language, probing for weakness in a child's story without frightening the child) and assessing the credibility and competency of the child as a witness.<sup>2</sup>

Victim Interview - In order to decrease the number of times the child has to recount the details of the sexual assault, the option of a joint detective prosecuting attorney interview was instituted. During this interview the detective, prosecuting attorney, and the social worker (when necessary for the support of the child) are present with the child. Although three adults are present, usually only one actually conducts the interview and another may take notes. In difficult cases (e.g., when the child was developmentally disabled or especially frightened) the social worker might conduct the interview.

Several prosecuting attorneys report that they believe this system is most effective when they have the general facts of the case prior to the interview.

Child Interview Room - At the prosecuting attorney's office, a child interview room was established. This room was designed to make children feel more at ease during the actual interview. It was equipped with a box of toys, a rug, and child-size furniture. This environment tended to make the interview less formal and less frightening for the child.

Several of the adults reported that the room initially made them uncomfortable. However, most reported that the room also appeared to help the child tell her/his story.

Pre-assignment of Child Cases - Child cases involving a sexual assault are pre-assigned to one prosecuting attorney who handles the case through both the pre-trial and trial process. This decreased the number of adults to whom the child and her/his family must relate and identified one person for the family to call with questions. Prosecuting attorneys report they especially like this procedural innovation. They report that it served to increase their personal knowledge of the case and their commitment to seeing it successfully through the entire prosecution process.

Prosecution of the Adult Offender

As part of the project, data was collected from the county prosecuting attorneys files on cases involving sexual assault against a child.<sup>3</sup> Of the eighty-four cases for which data is available, in 35.7% (30) the offender is a family member, 56.0% (47) a non-related adult who is known to the child, and only 8.3% (7) a stranger. The age of the child victims varies with about 6% between one and five years of age, 45% between six and twelve, and 26% between thirteen and sixteen years (23% data missing).

Data on charges brought against the offender reflect a pattern of multiple charges against a single offender. A total of 127 charges were filed against the eighty-four defendants. Almost 68% (57) were charged with indecent liberties (non-penetration sexual assault), 54.7% (46) with various degrees of statutory rape (lack of consent assumed due to age of child, no force may be present), 10.7% (9) incest, 1.2% (1) with misdemeanor sexual contact with a minor, and 16.7% (14) with other charges (e.g. rape, assault, theft).

After being charged, offenders are released on personal recognizance in 59.5% of the cases, with bail of less than $5,000 in 14.3%, bail between $5-10,000 in 9.5% and bail over $10,000 in 16.7% of the cases.

Although data is not available for this sample of offenders, in the majority of cases involving sex offenses against children, the offender is not actually jailed during the justice process. Frequently the offender is called by telephone by the originating police jurisdiction and requested to come in for formal booking.

Data suggest that the majority of offenders will plead to the original charge when that charge does not carry a mandatory prison sentence. For example, as can be seen in Table 1, 45.6% (26) offenders charged with incident liberties (fondling) which does not require a mandatory prison sentence, plead to the original charge. In contrast, only 21.1% (4) of the nineteen offenders charged with statutory rape first-degree which carries a five year minimum mandatory prison sentence plead to the original charge.

Insert Table 1 about here

In a similar vein, only 22.2% (2) of nine offenders charged with incest, which carries high social stigma, plea to that original charge.

Data for the eighty-four offenders indicate that the ultimate case disposition is a guilty plea in 73.8% (62), a conviction in 14.3% (12) and an acquittal in 8.3% (7) of the cases. Only one case was dismissed and this followed a trial resulting in a hung jury. These data are particularly important for those who are concerned with the effects of prosecution on the child because they indicate that in the majority of cases (73.8%) the child never appears in court.

Insert Table 2 about here

In terms of sentencing, the data indicate a pattern of multiple sentencing. Only 12.2% (9) of the offenders actually go to prison and 13.5% (10) are committed to the Sexual Psychopath Program at Washington State's Mental Hospital. This means that 75% of the offenders remain in the community.

Of the total number of offenders receiving a sentence, 51.4% (38) received counseling as a condition of probation, 20.3% (15) were required to make restitution, 47.3% (35) received some jail time or work release, and 74.3% (55) other conditions of release (usually court costs). This pattern of sentencing can be found in Table 3.

Insert Table 3 about here

The entire criminal justice process involved in prosecuting these cases range from less than two months to six months in length. As can be seen in Table 4, the time lapse between filing data of charges and disposition (plea or conviction) varies with 48.6% taking less than two months. Washington State law requires a trial date within 60 days if offender is incarcerated and 90 days otherwise. Only 9.6% (8) of the cases involve periods longer than four months. After disposition, sentencing normally takes six to eight weeks.

Conclusions

The descriptive data presented in the previous pages of this report provide preliminary evidence concerning prosecution of offenders in cases of child sexual assault.<sup>4</sup> Clearly, the data reflects prosecution of this sample of offenders in one geographical area during a one year period. Nevertheless, the evidence suggests that the prosecution of offenders need not necessarily be a punitive experience for the offender or the child.

*Once charges are filed by the prosecutor's office, an overwhelming majority of the cases result in successful prosecution. In the majority of cases, prosecution takes place over a period of less than four months.

*Offenders appear likely to plea to charges which do not require mandatory prison terms and which do not carry high social stigma.

*The consequence of successful prosecution, in the majority of cases, is that the offender receives counseling within his own community.

*For the child, in the majority of cases, she/he will not have to appear in court.

*Once charges are filed, most cases proceed to disposition with the continued cooperation of the child victim and her/his family.

Notes

1. Brochures developed for victims' families which describe what they can expect from involvement with the criminal justice system are available from the Sexual Assault Center, Harborview Medical Center, 325 9th Ave, Seattle, Washington, 98104.
2. Guidelines for interviewing young child victims which have been developed for criminal justice system personnel are available from the Sexual Assault Center.
3. Cases involving sexual assault against a child were identified by case number from the computerized filing system at the county prosecuting attorney's office. A total of 96 cases for 1978 were identified. A research assistant using the case number then hand pulled the case folder and read the record in search of information about the offender's relationship to victim, the length of time the process took, charges filed, release conditions and disposition. A total of 84 (87.5%) were satisfactorily located and data recorded.
4. A follow-up study is currently in process which will determine the consequences of involvement with the criminal justice system from the perceptions of the victims' non-offending parents.

The New Sexual Abuse Hearsay Exception

SB 4461 was signed by Governor Spellman on April 1, 1982 and will become law on June 10, 1982. It is to be cited as Ch. 129, Laws of 1982.

The new law does the following:

Section 1 amends the Limitations of Actions statute, RCW 9A.04.080, by extending from three to five years the statute of limitations for Statutory Rape in the First Degree, Statutory Rape in the Second Degree, and Indecent Liberties (victim under 14 years of age).

This applies to offenses not barred as of June 10, 1982, but cannot operate to revive offenses already barred by the passage of years, since that would be an ex post facto application of the law. Thus a crime committed on or before June 10, 1979 is forever barred, but a crime committed after June 10, 1979 will have a five-year life of its own.

Section 2 adds to RCW 9A.44 a new section allowing a court to admit into evidence hearsay statements made by a sexual assault victim when under 10 years of age relating to the crime under certain circumstances. It does not supplant existing hearsay exceptions ("not otherwise admissible by statute or court rule"). The court must find:

- (i) That the "time, content, and circumstances of the statement provide sufficient indicia of reliability", and

(ii) The child either:

(a) testifies in court; or

(b) is unavailable as a witness, and there is "corroborative evidence of the act."

The defendant must be advised of the State's attempt to use such hearsay statements "sufficiently in advance of the proceedings to provide the adverse party with a fair opportunity to prepare to meet the statement." See F.R. Evid. 803(24).

Some questions raised by the new law are:

1. Is it an unconstitutional usurpation of the Supreme Court's power to control evidentiary rules?

The legislature has always had the power to promulgate rules of evidence (Ch. 10.58 RCW). The Supreme Court assumed similar power through its rulemaking authority and has superseded some statutory evidence rules (e.g. ER 609 on impeachment under RCW 10.52.030). See State v. Murray, 86 Wn.2d 165, 170 (1975). When the new Rules of Evidence were adopted, the legislature still retained its authority to affect the hearsay rule. As ER 802 says:

Hearsay is not admissible except as provided by these rules, by other court rules, or by statute.

(emphasis added.)

2. It is an unconstitutional evidence rule because it violates a defendant's state and federal constitutional rights to confront witnesses against him.

The U.S. Constitution (Sixth Amendment) and Washington State Constitution (Art. 1, §22) both provide the right of the accused to confront witnesses against him in a criminal trial. Where the child testifies, allowing hearsay in evidence would not affect this right since the defendant could cross-examine the victim on these hearsay statements. However, where the victim does not testify, confrontation clause problems will arise as the defendant cannot cross-examine the declarant.

Two Div. II opinions written by Judge Reed address this issue. State v. Parris, 30 Wn. App. 268 (1981), and State v. Valladares, 31 Wn. App. 63 (1982). Both conclude that the U.S. Supreme Court case of Ohio v. Roberts, 448 U.S. 56, 65 L. Ed. 2d 597, 100 S. Ct. 2531 (1980) is controlling.

Roberts adopted a 2-pronged test for analyzing hearsay statements with respect to the Sixth Amendment: (1) the declarant must usually be unavailable; and (2) the statements must bear an adequate indicia of reliability; i.e. they must fall within a firmly rooted hearsay exception or there must be a particularized showing of trustworthiness.

31 Wn. App. at 71-72.

SB 4461 will pass this test since it requires (1) unavailability and (2) both corroborative evidence and a particularized showing of reliability. Also see State v. Carter, 23 Wn. App. 297 (1979); State v. Boast, 87 Wn.2d 447 (1976); and State v. Smith, 85 Wn.2d 840 (1975).

3. When does the rule become effective?

Does the rule apply to trials after June 10 or crimes committed after June 10? The very clear answer is the former, for trials after June 10. Two Snohomish County cases arising in trials held after an amendment to the marital privilege rule in RCW 5.60.060(1) are directly on point. In State v. Clevenger, 69 Wn.2d 136, 417 P.2d 994 (1966) and State v. Pope, 73 Wn.2d 919, 442 P.2d 994 (1968), when the crimes (child murder and sexual abuse by Dad) occurred, the marital privilege law would have barred the wife from testifying against her husband. The trials occurred after the amendment in 1965 added the clause saying the privilege would not apply "to a criminal action for a crime committed by the husband against a child of the wife." The court said it was not an ex post facto application of the law to allow the wife's testimony. The rule is set forth in Clevenger, supra at 141 and Pope at 924.

The argument of appellant is completely answered by the language of the court in Hopt v. Utah, 110 U.S. 574, 28 L. Ed. 2d 262, 4 Sup. Ct. 202 [as follows]. . . .

The crime for which the present defendant was indicted, the punishment prescribed therefor, and the quantity or the degree of proof necessary to establish his guilty, all remained unaffected by the subsequent statute. Any statutory alteration of the legal rules of evidence which would authorize conviction upon less proof, in amount or degree, than was required when the offence was committed, might, in respect to that offence, be obnoxious to the constitutional inhibition upon ex post facto laws. But alternations which do not increase the punishment, nor change the ingredients of guilty, but - leaving untouched the nature of the crime and the amount of degree of proof essential to conviction - only remove existing classes of persons as witnesses, relate to modes of procedure only, in which no one can be said to have a vested right, and which the State, upon grounds of public policy, may regulate at pleasure. Such regulations of the mode in which the facts constituting guilty may be placed before the jury, can be made applicable to prosecutions or trials thereafter had, without reference to the date of the commission of the offence charge.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON SB 4461

Prepared by Robert S. Lasnik, King County Prosecuting Attorney's office

1. Q. What is hearsay?

A. Hearsay is a statement made outside the trial offered at the trial to prove the truth to the statement.
e.g. Smith hears a crash and as he turns to look at the accident, he hears a bystander scream, "Oh, my God, the red car ran that light!" At the trial on the issue of liability Smith testifies as to what the bystander shouted. This is hearsay.

2. Q. Is all hearsay inadmissible?

A. No. Evidence Rule (ER) 803 contains 23 exceptions to the Hearsay Rule ranging from "dying declarations" to "excited utterances" and ER 804 has four more exceptions.

3. Q. Why are some hearsay statements admissible in evidence?

A. As the common law developed, certain hearsay statements began to be allowed because they were inherently reliable. For instance, the hearsay statement above would be admitted as an "excited utterance", because it was a statement relating to a startling event made while under the stress of excitement caused by the event. The combination of the startling event and the lack of time to reflect and fabricate, leads to reliability. Some are admissible because of reliability and necessity, e.g. dying declarations.

4. Q. Who may alter the evidence rules as to hearsay exceptions?

A. The Supreme Court, by its rulemaking authority, and the Legislature both have this power. See ER 802.

5. Q. What is the Confrontation Clause?

A. The Sixth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution provides, among other protections for the accused in a criminal case, that he "shall enjoy the right.... to be confronted with the witnesses against him." This is the Confrontation Clause.

6. Q. If the Confrontation Clause means what it says, how could hearsay ever be admissible?

A. It couldn't be. But, like many Constitutional provisions, it does not have a literal definition. The United States Supreme Court, and the Washington State Courts, both recognize that hearsay may be admitted under certain circumstances, regardless of whether that speaker is called as a witness. If the person does testify, of course he may then be questioned about these out-of-court hearsay statements. If he does not testify, before the hearsay may be admitted, the judge must find that the statement has sufficient indicia of reliability, and that the witness is unavailable. See Ohio v. Roberts, 448 U.S. 56 (1980) and State v. Parris, 30 Wn. App. 268, 275 (1981).

7. Q. What does "unavailable" mean?
- A. ER 804(a)(1) defines "unavailability" and includes situations where a witness is ruled incompetent to testify due to illness, infirmity or age.
8. Q. What does SB 4461 do?
- A. It would allow a judge to admit into evidence at any trial, hearsay statements made by a child under the age of 10, relating to sexual contact performed on him or her by another, under certain circumstances. First the judge must find that the time, content and circumstances of the statement show it is a reliable, trustworthy statement.
1. When the child testifies and is cross-examined, others may also testify as to what the child told them about the sexual assault.
  2. When the child is unavailable as a witness, due to incompetency, infirmity or death, such statements may also be testified to by others. However, in addition to a specific finding that the necessary indicators of reliability are present, the judge must also find additional corroboration that the act occurred.
9. Q. Has any other state adopted such an evidence law?
- A. No. Washington would be the first.
10. Q. Is there a requirement that all states share the same laws for criminal procedure?
- A. No. In Washington, the accused has some rights not guaranteed in other states and the prosecution has some powers denied prosecutors in other states. Chief Justice Burger in California v. Green, 339 U.S. at 171, emphasized the "importance in allowing the states to experiment and innovate, especially in the area of criminal justice. If the new standards and procedures are tried in one state, their success or failure will be a guide to others and to Congress."

WHAT DOES THE STRIKING AMENDMENT DO?

1. Limits use to criminal proceedings.
2. Limits use to hearsay statements not already covered by other evidence laws or rules (e.g. excited utterances, etc.).
3. Presents court with a form of a "totality of the circumstances" test on reliability for ALL statements covered by this section.
4. Requires either:
  - (i) that the child testifies, or
  - (ii) the child is unavailable as a witness and there is corroborative evidence of the act.
5. Requires notice to the defense of intention to offer such a statement in advance to allow time to prepare to meet it.
6. Adds a severability clause.

Incest as included within charge of rape. 76 ALR2d 484.

Sec. 11.41.410. Sexual assault in the first degree. (a) A person commits the crime of sexual assault in the first degree if,

(1) being any age, the defendant engages in sexual penetration with another person without consent of that person;

(2) being any age, the defendant attempts to engage in sexual penetration with another person without consent of that person and causes serious physical injury to that person;

(3) [Repealed, § 10 ch 78 SLA 1983.]

(4) [Repealed, § 10 ch 78 SLA 1983.]

(b) Sexual assault in the first degree is an unclassified felony and is punishable as provided in AS 12.55. (§ 3 ch 166 SLA 1978; am § 8 ch 102 SLA 1980; am § 6 ch 143 SLA 1982; am § 10 ch 78 SLA 1983)

Cross references. — For evidence of past sexual conduct in trials of sexual assault in any degree or attempt to commit sexual assault in any degree, see AS 12.45.045.

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment inserted "or aids, induces, causes or encourages a person under 13 years of age to engage in sexual penetration with another person" near the end of paragraph (3) in subsection (a). The 1982 amendment substituted "an unclassified felony and is punishable as provided in AS 12.55" for "a class A felony" at the end of subsection (b).

The 1983 amendment repealed paragraphs (3) and (4) of subsection (a).

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

History of first-degree sexual assault statute. — See Reynolds v. State, Ct. App.

Op. No. 262 (File No. 6890), 664 P.2d 621 (1983).

Constitutionality. — In order to prove a violation of AS 11.41.410(a)(1), the state must prove that the defendant knowingly engaged in sexual intercourse and recklessly disregarded his victim's lack of consent. Construed in this way, the statute does not punish harmless conduct and is neither vague nor overbroad. Reynolds v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 262 (File No. 6890), 664 P.2d 621 (1983).

Construing the Revised Code and the concurrent amendments governing sentences together indicates that the legislature has not irrationally failed to distinguish between degrees of culpability; and the penalty provisions of the sexual offenses provisions of the Revised Code did not subject defendant to cruel and unusual punishment or deny him substantive due process or the equal protection of the laws. Reynolds v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 262 (File No. 6890), 664 P.2d 621 (1983).

Categories constitute same offense.

— All of the categories contained within the definition of sexual assault in the first degree under subsection (a)(1) through (a)(4) of this section, constitute the same offense for legal purposes. Juneby v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 72 (File No. 5606), 641 P.2d 823 (1982), modified on other grounds and aff'd on rehearing, Ct. App. Op. No. 259 (File No. 5606), 665 P.2d 30 (1983).

And none is more serious than others. — Nothing contained in the statutory language of this section or the legislative history of the provision suggests that the type of conduct listed in any one of subsection (a)'s four paragraphs was meant to be inherently more serious than any of the others. To the contrary, the grouping of these four separate sets of conduct together under the same criminal heading, with identical classifications as class A felonies, is a forceful indication of the legislature's conclusion that all four paragraphs were meant to be viewed as involving equally serious conduct. Juneby v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 72 (File No. 5606), 641 P.2d 823 (1982), modified on other grounds and aff'd on rehearing, Ct. App. Op. No. 259 (File No. 5606), 665 P.2d 30 (1983).

Subsection (a)(1) is akin to the common law definition of rape. Juneby v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 72 (File No. 5606), 641 P.2d 823 (1982), modified on other grounds and aff'd on rehearing, Ct. App. Op. No. 259 (File No. 5606), 665 P.2d 30 (1983).

Mental state required under (a)(1). — Lack of consent is a "surrounding circumstance" which requires a complementary mental state as well as conduct to constitute a crime. Reynolds v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 262 (File No. 6890), 664 P.2d 621 (1983).

No specific mental state is mentioned in subsection (a)(1) of this section governing the surrounding circumstance of "consent"; therefore, the state must prove that the defendant acted "recklessly" regarding his putative victim's lack of consent. Reynolds v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 262 (File No. 6890), 664 P.2d 621 (1983).

Attempted sexual assault in the first degree and sexual assault in the second degree are closely related, since sexual penetration involves sexual contact and both offenses proceed on a theory of coerced assent. Nicholson v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 193 (File No. 6192), 656 P.2d 1209 (1982).

Constitutionality of conviction for similar offense. — Where defendant was charged with attempted sexual assault in the first degree, he was thereby assumed to have notice that he might be convicted of second-degree sexual assault because of the similarities in the elements of the two offenses, and his conviction for the latter offense did not violate due process. Nicholson v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 193 (File No. 6192), 656 P.2d 1209 (1982).

Sufficient evidence of attempted assault. — A jury could reasonably infer that defendant's entering of victim's bed naked and uninvited and fondling her breasts were "substantial steps" toward the commission of sexual assault in the first degree so as to provide sufficient evidence of attempted assault. Nicholson v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 193 (File No. 6192), 656 P.2d 1209 (1982).

Instructions. — The trial court did not commit plain error in failing to specifically instruct the jury that defendant had to recklessly disregard a substantial risk that the victim did not consent to intercourse before he could be convicted of first-degree sexual assault. Reynolds v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 262 (File No. 6890), 664 P.2d 621 (1983).

Instructions on lesser included offenses. — In a prosecution of first-degree sexual assault, where the undisputed evidence including defendant's testimony establish sexual penetration, there was no duty to instruct on attempted sexual penetration or forcible sexual contact.

Hartley v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 153 (File No. 5737), 653 P.2d 1052 (1982).

The 10-year presumptive term for first-degree sexual assault under the provisions of AS 12.55.125(c) was meant by the legislature to be appropriate in the majority of cases, which are those cases involving conduct that is characteristic of the offense of rape and that fall into the middle-ground between the most serious and least serious extremes for the offense, and it must be recognized that this presumptive term takes into account the high potential for the use of violence and the likelihood of some physical injury in the first-degree sexual assaults falling within the definition of subsection (a)(1) of this section. Juneby v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 72 (File No. 5606), 641 P.2d 823 (1982), modified on other grounds and aff'd on rehearing, Ct. App. Op. No. 259 (File No. 5606), 665 P.2d 30 (1983).

Sentence upheld. — See Reynolds v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 262 (File No. 6890), 364 P.2d 621 (1983).

Where record supported finding that defendant was the leader of a group of three or more persons who participated in offense of sexual assault in the first degree, such evidence, combined with consideration of prior, similar actions and of defendant's apparent lack of remorse, warranted imposition of eight-year sentence. Willard v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 240 (File No. 6285), 562 P.2d 971 (1983).

Sentence of 10 years imprisonment, with eight suspended, was not excessive for conviction of attempted sexual assault in first degree. Van Hatten v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 269 (File No. 5877), P.2d (1983).

Sentence for attempted sexual assault and burglary held excessive. — See Hansen v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 218 (File No. 6965), 657 P.2d 362 (1983).

Applied in Nukapigak v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 90 (File No. 5820), 645 P.2d 215 (1982); Seymore v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 196 (File No. 6995), 655 P.2d 786 (1982); Howzrd v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 260 (File Nos. 6027, 6123), 664 P.2d 603 (1983).

II. FORMER LAW.

A. Generally.

Editor's notes. — The cases cited in the note below were decided under former AS 11.15.120 and 11.15.130.

Forcible rape ranks among the most serious crimes. Newsom v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1136 (File No. 2189), 533 P.2d 904 (1975); State v. Lancaster, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1247 (File No. 2571), 530 P.2d 1257 (1976); State v. Wassilie, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1630 (File No. 3691), 578 P.2d 971 (1978); Ahvik v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2123 (File No. 4556), 513 P.2d 1252 (1980).

The reason such a crime as forcible rape is most serious is because it amounts to a desecration of the victim's person which is a vital part of her sanctity and dignity as a human being. Gordon v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 831 (File No. 1535), 501 P.2d 772 (1972); Torres v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1031 (File No. 1951), 521 P.2d 386 (1974); Ames v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1137 (File No. 2145), 533 P.2d 246, modified on rehearing on other grounds, 537 P.2d 1116 (1975); Newsom v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1136 (File No. 2189), 533 P.2d 904 (1975); State v. Lancaster, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1247 (File No. 2571), 530 P.2d 1257 (1976); Bordewick v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1500 (File No. 3341), 569 P.2d 184 (1977); State v. Wassilie, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1630 (File No. 3691), 578 P.2d 971 (1978).

Definition of rape under former law. — Sekinoff v. United States, 283 F.38 (9th Cir. 1922).

Criminal intent was required for conviction of statutory rape. — See State v. Guest, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1709 (File No. 3533), 533 P.2d 836 (1978).

Although former AS 11.15.120 was silent as to any requirement of intent, the requirement of criminal intent was inferred. State v. Guest, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1709 (File No. 3533), 533 P.2d 836 (1978).

Rape is a general intent crime, and all that is required for a conviction is proof of the voluntary commission of the prohibited act. Walker v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2570 (File No. 4921), 652 P.2d 88 (1982).

 Op. No. 1709, File No.

Lesser included offense. — The Alaska statutes do not proscribe fornication, and therefore, it could not be considered an offense of a lesser degree to statutory rape. State v. Guest, Sup. Ct. Op.
 No. 1709 (File No. 3533), 583 P.2d 836
 (1978); Tookak v. State, Ct. App. Op. No.
 109 (File No. 4656), 648 P.2d 1018 (1982).

The offense of assault with intent to commit rape is a lesser included offense to rape. Tuckfield v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No.
 2266 (File No. 4659), 621 P.2d 1350 (1981).

Attempt. — Every element of an attempt is comprised in an assault with intent to commit the offense of rape.
 Sekinoff v. United States, 283 F. 38 (9th Cir. 1922).

Separate crimes. — Rape, assault with a dangerous weapon, and kidnapping were separate crimes with separate elements.
 Lacy v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2039 (File
 No. 3741), 608 P.2d 19 (1980).

Separate sentences were called for where defendant's conduct in kidnapping and raping his victim and assaulting her with a deadly weapon constituted the commission of three distinct offenses, each of which violated a different societal interest.
 State v. Occhipinti, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1405
 (File No. 3084), 562 P.2d 348 (1977).

B. Age of Consent.

Female under age of consent is in law incapable of consent. — The crime of rape is committed upon a female under the age of consent with or without her consent since she is in law incapable of consent. Torres v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No.
 1031 (File No. 1951), 521 P.2d 386 (1974).

Thus, it is not necessary to establish her consent as an essential element of the crime. Torres v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No.
 1031 (File No. 1951), 521 P.2d 386 (1974).

Indictment need not allege consent of female under age of consent. — An indictment for rape of a girl under the age of consent is not insufficient because it fails to allege that the act was done with her consent. Callahan v. United States, 240 F. 683 (9th Cir. 1917); Rose v. United States, 240 F. 685 (9th Cir. 1917).

Defense of reasonable mistake of age. — A charge of statutory rape was defensible where an honest and reasonable mistake of fact as to the victim's age was shown. State v. Guest, Sup. Ct. Op. No.
 1709 (File No. 3533), 583 P.2d 836 (1978).

The charge of statutory rape was legally unsupported unless a defense of reasonable mistake of age was allowed. To refuse such a defense would have been to impose criminal liability without any criminal mental element. State v. Guest, Sup. Ct.

 Op. No. 1709 (File No. 3533), 583 P.2d 836
 (1978).

While, where an offender was aware he was committing an act of fornication, a mistake of fact did not serve as a complidefense, it should have served to reduce the offense to that which the offender would have been guilty of had he not been mistaken. State v. Guest, Sup. Ct. Op. No.
 1709 (File No. 3533), 583 P.2d 836 (1978).

Under former AS 11.15.120, if an accused had a reasonable belief that the person with whom he had sexual intercourse was 16 years of age or older, he could not have been convicted of statutory rape. If, however, he did not have a reasonable belief that the victim was 18 years of age or older, he could still have been criminally liable for contribution to the delinquency of a minor. State v. Guest, Sup. Ct.
 Op. No. 1709 (File No. 3533), 583 P.2d 836
 (1978).

For approved instruction on consent of female under age of consent, see Rose
 v. United States, 240 F. 585 (9th Cir.
 1917).

C. Procedure.

Indictment charging attempted rape and citing only the rape statute held sufficient. — See State v. Thomas, Sup.
 Ct. Op. No. 1077 (File No. 2234), 525 P.2d 1092 (1974).

Charging defendant with the crime of murder committed "in the attempt to perpetrate a rape" fails to allege the separate crime of rape with sufficient clarity to support a conviction. Alto v.
 State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1443 (File No.
 2339), 565 P.2d 492 (1977).

Severance of counts involving various victims. — Where defendant was prosecuted on multiple counts of unlawful entry with intent to rape, rape, assault, and burglary, involving various victims,
 the trial court did not err in denying severance of the counts since evidence regarding the attack on each of the alleged victims would have been admissible in the trial of each of the other charges if the charges had been separately tried. Nix v.
 State, Ct. App. Op. No. 157 (File No. 5841),
 653 P.2d 1093 (1982).

Character evidence. — See Freeman
 v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 703 (File No.
 1046), 486 P.2d 967 (1971).

Questioning victim's credibility. — While a defendant could properly seek to question the victim's credibility, the established rule is that this may not be done by extrinsic evidence on a collateral matter. Moss v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2239 (File No. 4369), 620 P.2d 674 (1980).

Corroboration of prosecutrix's testimony. — No corroboration of the prosecutrix's testimony is necessary in statutory rape cases. Burke v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2194 (File No. 3969), 624 P.2d 1240 (1980).

Evidence of prior history of sexual activity with victim. — Whether evidence in a statutory rape prosecution of prior history of sexual activity with the prosecutrix is justified as background or the ongoing nature of the relationship is probative, the nexus of these reasons justifies an exception to the general rule against admissibility of prior bad acts. Burke v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2194 (File No. 3969), 624 P.2d 1240 (1980).

Evidence of prior misconduct. — See Freeman v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 703 (File No. 1046), 486 P.2d 967 (1971).

Evidence of prior sexual offenses. — See Freeman v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 703 (File No. 1046), 486 P.2d 967 (1971).

Determining age from appearances. — See Toores v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1031 (File No. 1951), 521 P.2d 386 (1974).

Admission of defendant's driver's license into evidence to establish his age was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. Torres v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1031 (File No. 1951), 521 P.2d 386 (1974).

Psychiatric testimony. — See Freeman v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 703 (File No. 1046), 486 P.2d 967 (1971).

Psychiatric evidence showing that an individual accused of sexually deviant misconduct is not a sexual psychopath should properly be regarded to be character evidence. Freeman v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 703 (File No. 1046), 486 P.2d 967 (1971).

Hearsay testimony. — It was not error to admit hearsay testimony concerning complaints made by a rape victim to her mother and a school counselor. Greenway v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2206 (File No. 4754), 626 P.2d 1060 (1980).

Failure at preliminary hearing to state all the facts attending a claimed rape in response to an instruction to proceed and tell what happened is not a ground of impeachment. Tanksley v. United States, 10 Alaska 443, 145 F.2d 58 (9th Cir. 1944).

Error to admit recording of sodium pentothal interview. — In a prosecution for statutory rape and sodomy, it was error to admit the recording of a sodium-pentothal interview, even as a prior consistent statement for the limited purpose of rehabilitating an impeached witness. Lindsey v. United States, 16 Alaska 263, 237 F.2d 993 (9th Cir. 1956).

Or to exclude public from trial. — The trial court erred in assuming the power of excluding the public from a trial on the charge of rape of an adult woman. Tanksley v. United States, 10 Alaska 443, 145 F.2d 58 (9th Cir. 1944).

It would be denying the defendant his presumption of innocence and a predecision by the court of his guilt to hold that a married woman must be relieved of the embarrassment of a public trial because she is called upon to testify to the story of the defendant's crime and her shame. Tanksley v. United States, 10 Alaska 443, 145 F.2d 58 (9th Cir. 1944).

Verdict supported by evidence. — Testimony of complaining witness of her conduct before and after the alleged rape, corroborated and contradicted, and her sole evidence of the rape itself, supports the verdict on the inference that the defendant's defense was untrue, and that she was the unfortunate victim of a brutal outrage. Tanksley v. United States, 10 Alaska 443, 145 F.2d 58 (9th Cir. 1944).

Instructions. — The use of the following instruction in a statutory rape case is prohibited: "A charge such as that made against the defendant in this case is one which is easily made and, once made, difficult to defend against, even if the person accused is innocent. Therefore, the law requires that you examine the testimony of the female person named in the indictment with caution." Burke v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2194 (File No. 3969), 624 P.2d 1240 (1980).

Since specific intent is not an element of the offense of rape, giving an instruction that the law assumes that every person intends the natural consequences of his voluntary acts was not error. Walker v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2570 (File No. 4921), 652 P.2d 881 (1982).

Instruction sufficiently covering question of impeachment. — See Tanksley v. United States, 10 Alaska 443, 145 F.2d 58 (9th Cir. 1944).

For approved instruction on consent of female under age of consent, see Rose v. United States, 240 F. 685 (9th Cir. 1917).

Sentencing. — The recommended five year maximum, except for cases involving particularly serious offenses, dangerous offenders and professional criminals, of Donlun v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 1092 (File No. 2188), 527 P.2d 472 (1974), was not applicable to person under 18 or older, made 11.15.130(a); b; Edenshaw v. State (File No. 5239).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

For cases construing former crime of rape, see notes to AS 11.41.410.

Attempted sexual assault in the first degree and sexual assault in the second degree are closely related, since sexual penetration involves sexual contact and both offenses proceed on a theory of coerced assent. Nicholson v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 193 (File No. 6192), 656 P.2d 1209 (1982).

Constitutionality of conviction where original charge was under AS 11.41.410. — Where defendant was charged with attempted sexual assault in the first degree, he was thereby assumed to have notice that he might be convicted of second-degree sexual assault because of the similarities in the elements of the two offenses, and his conviction for the latter offense did not violate due process. Nicholson v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 193 (File No. 6192), 656 P.2d 1209 (1982).

Evidence. — Where victim woke up in the early morning hours to find defendant in her bed and fondling her breast, and where she testified that she was temporarily in shock and afraid he would hurt her, a jury could find that victim's momentary acquiescence in defendant's fondling her breast constituted second-degree sexual assault. Nicholson v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 193 (File No. 6192), 656 P.2d 1209 (1982).

Instructions. — The trial judge did not err in refusing to instruct on the lesser included offense of attempted sexual contact in the second degree. Johnson v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 267 (File No. 6662), 665 P.2d 566 (1983).

Sentence upheld. — Sentence of eight years with three years suspended for sexual assault in the second degree was not clearly mistaken. Howard v. State, Ct. App. Op. No. 260 (File Nos. 6027, 6123), 664 P.2d 603 (1983).

Sec. 11.41.434. Sexual abuse of a minor in the first degree. (a) An offender commits the crime of sexual abuse of a minor in the first degree if

(1) being 16 years of age or older, the offender engages in sexual penetration with a person who is under 13 years of age or aids, induces, causes, or encourages a person who is under 13 years of age to engage in sexual penetration with another person; or

(2) being 18 years of age or older, the offender engages in sexual penetration with a person who is under 18 years of age and who

(A) is entrusted to the offender's care by authority of law; or

(B) is the offender's son or daughter, including an illegitimate or adopted child, or a stepchild.

(b) Sexual abuse of a minor in the first degree is an unclassified felony and is punishable as provided in AS 12.55. (§ 2 ch 78 SLA 1983)

State's authority to control sexual conduct of children. — Although juveniles may have certain rights to sexual privacy, the state may nevertheless exercise control over the sexual conduct of children beyond the scope of its authority to control adults. Anderson v. State, Sup. Ct.
Op. No. 1407 (File No. 2641), 562 P.2d 351
(1977).

Where juveniles have certain rights to privacy and to express their own autonomy, the state's interest in the well-being of its children may justify legislation that could not properly be applied to adults. Anderson v. State, Sup. Ct. Op.
No. 1407 (File No. 2641), 562 P.2d 351
(1977).

Consent is not at issue. — The state may forbid an adult to have fellatio with a child under the statutorily prescribed age regardless of whether the child consents to the act. Anderson v. State, Sup. Ct. Op. No.
1407 (File No. 2641), 562 P.2d 351 (1977).

Mitigating Factors. — In prosecution for first-degree sexual assault, defendant's familiarity with his victim (his 12-year old daughter) was not a mitigating factor.
Hodges v. State, Ct. App. No. 233 (File No.
7330), 660 P.2d 1203 (1983).

Sentence for assault upheld. — In prosecution of defendant with no prior criminal record on two counts of first-degree sexual assault of his 12-year old daughter, sentence of two consecutive eight-year terms with five years suspended was not excessive. Hodges v. State,
Ct. App. Op. No. 233 (File No. 7330), 660
P.2d 1203 (1983).

In light of the substantial duration of defendant's sexual abuse of his stepdaughter (three years), his failure to learn from the earlier discovery of his prior offenses, his disregard of a court order that he avoid contact with the victim, and his total failure to take any meaningful step toward rehabilitation, 10-year sentence with four years suspended was not excessive for conviction of first-degree sexual assault. Langton v. State, Ct. App. Op. No.

Harold F. GREENWAY, Appellant,

v.

STATE of Alaska, Appellee.

No. 4754.

Supreme Court of Alaska.

Nov. 7, 1970.

Defendant was convicted in the Superior Court, Fourth Judicial District, Warren W. Taylor, J., of rape, and he appealed. The Supreme Court held that testimony of rape victim's mother and her school counselor concerning victim's complaint of rape was admissible.

Affirmed.

Matthews, J., filed concurring opinion in which Rabinowitz, C. J., concurred.

1. Rape  $\Rightarrow$  48(1)

Testimony of rape victim's mother and her school counselor concerning victim's complaint of rape was admissible under special hearsay exception concerning complaints of victims in sex crimes.

2. Rape  $\Rightarrow$  48(2)

Testimony from either victim or witnesses pertaining to details of victim's complaint is generally not admissible in criminal prosecution.

Dick L. Madson, Cowper & Madson, Fairbanks, for appellant.

Natalie K. Finn, Asst. Dist. Atty., Harry L. Davis, Dist. Atty., Fairbanks, Avrum M. Gross, Atty. Gen., Juneau, for appellee.

1. There is conflicting testimony as to whether or not the victim actually told her mother of the rape. The victim testified that she told her mother of the rape about three days after the incident but the mother interpreted this conversation differently and denied that she knew of the rape until after the victim told her school counselor in September. A social worker also testified that she and the mother had discussed the victim's rape and that the mother had indicated that her daughter had told her of the rape shortly after the incident. The mother admitted to having several conversations with the

PER CURIAM.

Harold Greenway was convicted of raping his thirteen year old stepdaughter. The rape occurred in July, 1970, on the banks of the Yukon River, near Greenway's summer fish camp. According to the victim, Greenway threatened to kill her if she told anyone about the rape and, as a result, she told no one other than her mother<sup>1</sup> until September, when she reported the rape to her school counselor. At trial the State, over Greenway's objections, presented testimony by the victim's mother and her school counselor concerning her complaints of rape. Greenway now contends that the trial court's failure to exclude this testimony as inadmissible hearsay constituted reversible error.<sup>2</sup>

The State contends that the statements in question were admissible under the special hearsay exception concerning complaints of the victim in sex crimes. We find this argument persuasive.

[1, 2] We recognized this exception in Torres v. State, 519 P.2d 788, 793 n.9 (Alaska 1974):

[A]s Wharton points out, statements concerning the crime of rape or sexual assault, shortly after the commission of the act are admissible as a recognized exception to the hearsay rule:

In a prosecution for a sex crime, such as rape or assault with intent to rape, it social worker but again denied admitted knowledge of the rape prior to her daughter's report to the school counselor.

2. Appellant also claims as error the admission of the testimony of the victim that she had told her mother, best friend, social service worker and her school counselor about the rape. However, no objection was made to this testimony and, in fact, the appellant agreed that it should be admissible. Therefore, this claim of error was waived.

Such evidence tends obviously to indicate the truth of the charge and is corroborative thereof; conversely, evidence of the failure to make a prompt complaint casts doubt upon the truth of the claim that a crime had been committed.

2 F. Wharton, Criminal Evidence § 313, at 113-114 (13th ed. Charles E. Torcia 1972) (footnote omitted).

See also 4 J. Wigmore, Evidence §§ 1134-36 (Chadbourn rev. ed. 1972) (discussing at length the justifications behind the exception). It is true that, other than the disputed complaint made to her mother approximately three days after the incident, the victim here did not complain of the rape until September, over a month after its commission. However, her delay is both explained and excused by Greenway's threats against her and her young age. See, e.g., Hunt v. State, 213 So.2d 664 (Ala.App.), cert. denied, 213 So.2d 666 (Ala. 1968) (delay of nine months does not bar admission of testimony, in light of, inter alia, defendant's threats to kill victim); State v. Twyford, 85 S.D. 522, 186 N.W.2d 545 (1971) (delay of over two months not reason to exclude testimony, since victim was only twelve years old).<sup>2</sup> We therefore

3. We realize that the list of hearsay exceptions found in our present Rule 803, Alaska R. Evid., does not include this exception. This omission, however, was more in the nature of an oversight on our part, and not a repudiation of Torres; we shall refer the question of whether the rules should be amended to include the exceptions noted in Torres to our standing committee on the Evidence Rules. In any event, Evidence Rule 803 was not in effect at the time of Greenway's trial, and so does not govern this appeal.

4. We find no merit to appellant's argument that the victim's testimony went beyond the "fact of the complaint" limitation which is part of the special hearsay exception concerning complaints of the victim in sex crimes. Appellant argues that it was error to allow the victim to testify that she had mentioned the location of the event and, impliedly, the perpetrator, to third persons. Testimony from either the victim or witnesses pertaining to "details" of the victim's complaint is generally not admissible.

conclude that the trial judge did not err in admitting the testimony of the rape victim's mother and her school counselor concerning her complaint of rape.<sup>4</sup>

The conviction is AFFIRMED.

MATTHEWS, J., with whom RABINOWITZ, C. J., joins, concurs.

MATTHEWS, Justice, joined by RABINOWITZ, Chief Justice, concurring.

I agree with the Per Curiam opinion. Moreover, I believe that the questioned evidence was properly admitted under the recent fabrication exception<sup>1</sup> to the common law rule prohibiting the admission of prior consistent statements, for the following reasons.

Defense counsel in this case elicited testimony that the victim was generally unhappy living with her mother and stepfather before the rape, and that thereafter, in early September, her mother and stepfather were in a violent fight involving a gun during which the victim and her younger sister were forced to flee to a neighbor's house and the police were called. It was just a few days after this incident that the victim complained of the rape to her school counselor, which resulted in her being taken from the home of her mother and stepfather. Thus, while there was a general mo-

See generally 4 J. Wigmore, Evidence § 1138, at 308 (Chadbourn rev. ed. 1972). However, in her testimony the victim did not, in fact, state anything about the rape or the name of the perpetrator in her complaints to third persons. The victim's testimony was only to the effect that she had told third persons of the rape. She gave no details pertaining to her complaints and nothing else in the record indicates that either the victim or the witnesses gave such testimony.

1. This exception has been codified in the Alaska Rules of Evidence as Rule 801(d)(1)(b). It provides:

A statement is not hearsay if

(1) The declarant testifies at the trial or hearing and the statement is . . .

(B) consistent with his testimony and is offered to rebut an express or implied charge against him of recent fabrication or improper influence or motive . . .

Where there are several events which supply a motive to fabricate, evidence of a statement consistent with the declarant's testimony which was made before the latest event, but after the others, may be admitted:

Otherwise, it would never be proper to rehabilitate a witness by proof of prior consistent statements in cases where numerous impeaching circumstances were shown to exist at the time of the trial but where there may be found a theoretical possibility that the witness might have been motivated by one of them at the time of making the prior consistent statement. . . . The principle involved is that where the circumstances are such as to leave it reasonably possible for the jury to say that the prior consistent statements did in fact antedate the motive disclosed on the cross-examination, the court should not exclude them.

Applying this rule to this case, the victim's complaint to her mother was admissible under the recent fabrication exception.

STATE of Alaska, Appellee.

No. 4506.

Supreme Court of Alaska.

Nov. 7, 1980.

Defendant was convicted, on guilty plea, before the Superior Court, Third Judicial District, Anchorage, Victor D. Carlson, J., of five counts of sale of cocaine and was sentenced to five concurrent five-year terms, and he appealed. The Supreme Court, Matthews, J., held that: (1) even if trial court had erred when, in determining sentence, it considered a previously dismissed indictment for possession of narcotics and an alleged uncharged cocaine sale for purpose of testing credibility of defendant's story that he had simply acted as middleman and "good Samaritan" in supplying narcotics, the error would have been harmless, and (2) trial judge was shown to have considered the possibility of defendant British citizen's deportation when sentence was determined, and judge's failure to articulate the role which such factor played in his decision was not error.

Affirmed.

Rabinowitz, C. J., concurred in part and dissented in part and filed opinion.

1. Criminal Law ⇐ 1177

In proceeding in which defendant pled guilty to five counts of sale of cocaine, even if trial court had erred when, in determining sentence, it considered a previously dismissed indictment for possession of narcotics and an alleged uncharged cocaine sale for purpose of testing credibility of defendant's story that he had simply acted as a middleman and "good Samaritan" in supplying narcotics, the error would have been harmless, in view of the substantial, uncontradicted evidence suggesting that defendant was a "professional" cocaine dealer. Walter John Dale, pleading guilty, to five counts of sale of cocaine, a violation of AS 17.10.010, was sentenced to five concurrent five-year terms. He now appeals.

Dale's conviction was based on a simultaneous sale of cocaine to defendant, Larry Wayne, an undercover police officer, on May 9, 1978; a sale to defendant, Larry Wayne, on May 11; and a sale to defendant, Larry Wayne, for $2,400, to Adams, which took place at the same time and place, which the sale was an after-hours gambling run by Dale. ### Rule 803. Hearsay Exceptions — Availability of Declarant Immaterial.

The exceptions are phrased in terms of nonapplication of the hearsay rule, rather than in positive terms of admissibility, in order to repel any implication that other possible grounds for exclusion are eliminated from consideration.

The present rule proceeds upon the theory that under appropriate circumstances a hearsay statement may possess circumstantial guarantees of trustworthiness sufficient to justify non-production of the declarant in person at the trial even though he may be available. The theory finds vast support in the many exceptions to the hearsay rule developed by the common law in which unavailability of the declarant is not a relevant factor. The present rule is a synthesis of them, with revision where modern developments and conditions are believed to make that course appropriate.

In a hearsay situation, the declarant is, of course, a witness, and neither this rule nor Rule 804 dispenses with the requirement of firsthand knowledge. It may appear from his statement or be inferable from circumstances. See Rule 602.

(1) and (2) Present Sense Impression—Excited Utterance. In considerable measure these two examples overlap, though based on somewhat different theories. The most significant practical difference will lie in the time lapse allowable between event and statement.

The underlying theory of Subdivision (1) is that substantial contemporaneity of event and statement negate the likelihood of deliberate or conscious misrepresentation. Moreover, if the witness is the declarant, he may be examined on the statement. If the witness is not the declarant, he may be examined as to the circumstances as an aid in evaluating the statement. Morgan, Basic Problems of Evidence 340-41 (1962).

The theory of Subdivision (2) is simply that circumstances may produce a condition of excitement which temporarily stills the capacity of reflection and produces utterances free of conscious fabrication. 6 Wigmore § 1747, at 135. Spontaneity is the key factor in each instance, though arrived at by somewhat different routes. Both are needed in order to avoid needless niggling.

While the theory of Subdivision (2) has been criticized on the ground that excitement impairs accuracy of observation as well as eliminating conscious fabrication, Hutchins and Slesinger, Some Observations on the Law of Evidence: Spontaneous Exclamations, 28 Colum. L. Rev. 432 (1928), it finds support in cases without number. See cases in 6 Wigmore § 1750; Annot. 53 A.L.R.2d 1245 (statements as to cause of or responsibility for motor vehicle accident); Annot., 4 A.L.R.3d 149 (accusatory statements by homicide victims). It is well grounded in Alaska case law. See Torres v. State, 519 P.2d 788, 792-93 (Alaska 1974); Watson v. State, 387 P.2d 289 (Alaska 1963). Since unexciting events are less likely to evoke comment, decisions involving Subdivision (1) are far less numerous. Illustrative are Tampa Elec. Co. v. Getrost, 10 So.2d 83 (Fla. 1942); Houston Oxygen Co. v. Davis, S.W.2d 474 (Tex. 1942); and cases cited in McCormick (2d ed.) § 278, at 709-11. See also Beech Aircraft Corp. v. Harvey, 558 P.2d 879, 884 (Alaska 1976).

With respect to the time element, Subdivision (1) recognizes that in many, if not most, instances precise contemporaneity is not possible, and hence a slight lapse is allowable. Under Subdivision (2) the standard of measurement is the duration of the state of excitement. "How long can excitement prevail? Obviously there are no pat answers and the character of the transaction or event will largely determine the significance of the time factor." Slough, Spontaneous Statements and State of Mind, 46 Iowa L. Rev. 224, 243 (1961); McCormick (2d ed.) § 297, at 706-07.

Participation by the declarant is not required: a non-participant may be moved to describe what he perceives, and one may be startled by an event in which he is not an actor. Slough, supra; McCormick, supra; 6 Wigmore § 1755; Annot., 78 A.L.R.2d 300.

Whether proof of the startling event may be made by the statement itself is largely an academic question, since in most cases there is present at least circumstantial evidence that something of a startling nature must have occurred. Nevertheless, on occasion the only evidence may be the content of the statement itself, and rulings that it may be sufficient are described as "increasing," Slough, supra at 246, and as the "prevailing practice," McCormick (2d ed.) § 299, at 705. Moreover, under Rule 104(a) the judge is not limited by the hearsay rule in passing upon preliminary questions of fact.

Proof of declarant's perception by his statement presents similar considerations when declarant is identified. People v. Poland, 174 N.E.2d 804 (Ill. 1961). However, when declarant is an unidentified bystander, the cases indicate hesitancy in upholding the statement alone as sufficient, Garrett v. Howden, 387 P.2d 874 (N.M. 1963); Beck v. Dye, 92 P.2d 1113 (Wash. 1939), a result which would under appropriate circumstances be consistent with the rule.

Permissible subject matter of the statement is limited under Subdivision (1) to description or explanation of the event or condition, the assumption being that spontaneity, in the absence of a startling event, may extend no farther. In Subdivision (2), however, the statement need only "relate" to the startling event or condition, thus affording a broader scope of subject matter coverage. 6 Wigmore §§ 1750, 1754. See Quick, Hearsay, Excitement, Necessity and the Uniform Rules: A Reappraisal of Rule 63(4), 5 Wayne L. Rev. 204, 206-09 (1960).

Similar provisions are found in Uniform Rule 63(4) (a) and (b); California Evidence Code § 1240 (as to Subdivision (2) only); Kansas Code of Civil Procedure § 60-460(d) (1) and (2); New Jersey Evidence Rule 63(4).

(3) Then Existing Mental, Emotional, or Physical Condition. Subdivision (3) is essentially a specialized application of Subdivision (1), presented separately to enhance its usefulness and accessibility.

The exclusion of "statements of memory or belief to prove that fact remembered or believed" is necessary to avoid the virtual destruction of the hearsay rule which would otherwise result from allowing state of mind, provable by a hearsay statement, to serve as the basis for an inference of the happening of the event which produced the state of mind. Shepard v. United States, 290 U.S. 96, 78 L.Ed. 196 (1933);

Maguire, The Hillmon Case: Thirty-three Years After, 38 Harv. L. Rev. 709, 719-731 (1925); Hinton, States of Mind and the Hearsay Rule, 1 U. Chi. L. Rev. 394, 421-423 (1934). The rule of Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Hillmon, 145 U.S. 285, 36 L.Ed. 706 (1892), allowing evidence of intention as tending to prove the doing of the act intended, is of course, left undisturbed as applied to a declarant.

The carving out, from the exclusion mentioned in the preceding paragraph, of declarations relating to the execution, revocation, indentification, or terms of a declarant's will represents an ad hoc judgment which finds ample reinforcement in the decisions, resting on practical grounds of necessity and expediency rather than logic. A similar recognition of the need for and practical value of this kind of evidence is found in California Evidence Code § 1260.

The addition of the words "offered to prove his present condition or future action" limits the exception to avoid results like People v. Alcalde, 148 P.2d 627 (Cal. 1944). For the statements of one person as to his mental or emotional condition to be used against another, Subdivision (23) must be satisfied. This modifies the Hillmon rule.

(4) Statements for Purposes of Medical Diagnosis or Treatment. Even those few jurisdictions which have shied away from generally admitting statements of present condition have allowed them if made to a physician for purposes of diagnosis and treatment in view of the patient's strong motivation to be truthful. The same guarantee of trustworthiness extends to statements of past conditions and medical history, made for purposes of diagnosis or treatment. It also extends to statements as to causation, reasonably pertinent to the same purposes, in accord with the current trend, Shell Oil Co. v. Industrial Commission, 119 N.E.2d 224 (Ill. 1954); New Jersey Evidence Rule 63(12)(c). Statements as to fault would not ordinarily qualify under this latter language. Thus, a patient's statement that he was struck by an automobile would qualify but not his statement that the car was driven through a red light. Under the exception the statement need not have been made to a physician. Statements to hospital attendants, ambu-
