DEC FISCAL NOTE ANALYSES
HB 109 An Act relating to the use of water
page 2 of 11 Comments and Assumptions

At present, the State has not assumed wastewater permitting authorities from the federal Environmental Protection Agency under the federal NPDES permit program. When EPA issues federal permits, DEC reviews them to see whether water quality standards would be met: the so-called "certification" process.

Since HB 109 is incompatible with the federal Clean Water Act*, DEC could not "certify" federal permits, either EPA NPDES permits, Corps of Engineer dredge and fill permits, or Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) licenses.

Alaska Statutes 46.03.110 provide that if DEC can not certify a federal permit, DEC must issue a separate state permit. If HB 109 became law, DEC would need to develop a permitting structure similar to the federal structure.

Because HB 109 diverges from the federal Clean Water Act, DEC could not rely upon information or guidance from EPA for permit issuance. DEC would have to collect facts and evidence for each permit application.

In accordance with AS 46.03.110, DEC procedures require public notice, 30 day comment period, and participation by the Departments of Fish and Game, Natural Resources, Commerce and Economic Development, and Health and Social Services. DEC rules, 18 AAC 15, provide for an optional public hearing.

To calculate the fiscal impact to DEC from HB 109, we started with the costs of assuming the federal NPDES permit program, which would have the same number of permits and roughly the same procedural requirements.

Costs of assuming the NPDES program have been well studied. Attachments are provided to document these costs.

Fifteen percent has been added to these projected costs in this fiscal note to reflect the increased costs to address the additional requirements imposed under HB 109 to assess "immediate downstream uses."

* Problems with compatibility with the Clean Water Act are described in more detail in our Position Paper. Also see EPA's letter dated February 13, 1987 re SB 98, identical language to HB 109, paragraph 2:

"Sections 1(b), 2(c), and 3(b) state 'The commissioner may not require a higher discharge quality for water used than the quality of water received for use.' This provision is incompatible with the federal Clean Water Act."

Assuming the federal program would increase the State's flexibility in regulating discharges to Alaska's waters, to a certain extent. Agency actions would still be subject to federal statutes and regulations. EPA would retain an active oversight role.

At the same time, the State must carefully consider all implications of assuming the program. Both financial support and a commitment to addressing complex technical requirements will be needed. In addition, program assumption imposes some constraints upon the State, specifically:

The State's regulatory flexibility will remain limited. To a large extent, permit terms and conditions will be prescribed by federal regulation. EPA's oversight would extend to reviewing and approving major permits, conducting occasional independent inspections of permitted facilities, and taking independent enforcement actions when determined necessary by EPA.

The state must be prepared to enact new state laws, if needed, and regulations to meet federal program requirements, both for initial assumption and on an ongoing basis as federal requirements change.

EPA will retain the right to withhold federal grant funds from the state for non-compliance with program requirements.

Of course, there will be increased costs to the state to assume and maintain the program as reflected in this increment.

No new sources of federal funds have been identified by EPA as available to defray the costs of NPDES program assumption. While program costs are eligible for federal funding under sections 106 and 205(j) of the Clean Water Act, the state is in receipt of all federal funds available under these sections, and those funds are presently fully obligated for ongoing water pollution control activities.

Costs to assume the NPDES program have been estimated by DEC staff. The cost of each program activity required by federal regulation was estimated from EPA pricing factors, cost information supplied by other states, and staff estimates of required level of effort. Existing resources presently devoted to NPDES functions were deducted from the total costs to yield the incremental costs shown in the cost summary that follows. EPA will review the state's proposed budget for program assumption. Program delegation is contingent upon their finding that the state has budgeted sufficient funds to administer the program.

TITLE OF INCREMENT/DECREMENT: NPDES Program Assumption		AGENCY CONTACT/PHONE NUMBER: Dan Easton 465-2653		CODE	EXPENDITURE BY OBJECT	AGENCY REQ.	COV'S REQ.
DESCRIBE WHY THIS INCREMENT/DECREMENT IS NEEDED AND WHAT IT PURCHASES: This increment provides funding for State assumption of the federal National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) permitting program currently conducted in Alaska by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). The program consists of issuing permits for the discharge of wastewaters to surface waters, monitoring compliance with those permits by performing inspections and reviewing monitoring reports prepared by the permittees, and taking appropriate enforcement measures in instances of noncompliance. Operations regulated under the program include placer mining, seafood processing, oil and gas development and municipal sewage treatment plants that discharge to surface waters. The State has pursued assumption of this program because it would have several benefits. The primary advantages are: Establishing a single agency responsible for issuing wastewater discharge permits in Alaska would reduce the bureaucratic burden on permit applicants. More consistent and predictable enforcement of permit conditions by the state would provide for a more stable regulatory climate for Alaskan industry. Rather than a federal agency based in Seattle, Alaskan industry would be working with an Alaska state agency with more direct knowledge of Alaska's unique circumstances; the state can provide more direct and accessible assistance to the public and industry.				100	Personal Services	886.8

BACKGROUND/LEGISLATIVE INTENT

HB 109 would prohibit the departments of fish and game, environmental conservation, and natural resources from requiring a higher discharge quality for water used than the quality of water received for use. HB 109 would also restrict imposition of wastewater effluent criteria for turbidity which are more restrictive than federal standards. Finally, HB 109 will streamline the water use permitting process by establishing a base, presumptive threshold for small scale water appropriations below which notice and permit notification under AS 46.15 are waived.

ANALYSIS OF BILL/PROGRAM EFFECTS

Section 1(b) implies that ADF&G implements water quality standards, and because department does not, the provision should be deleted.

Attn: Representative Niilo Koponen
Committee Chairman

Re: House Bill No. 109

Dear Representative Koponen:

The Anchorage Waterways Council (AWC) has reviewed HB109 and has concluded that the bill should not be passed or should be substantially revised. Our conclusions are based on the potential for adverse water quality effects, and the subsequent threat to the health and welfare of downstream users, if HB109 is passed as it is now written. Our specific comments are provided below by issue, with reference to relevant section numbers in the bill.

DISCHARGE QUALITY BETTER THAN QUALITY RECEIVED
(Ref: Sections 1, 2, and 3 of HB109)

While the AWC concurs that it should not be the responsibility of the user to clean up waters which do not meet water quality standards due to natural causes or upstream users, we would like to point out potential problems with this issue as it is written:

- 1) The quality of the water received by the user should be measured upstream of all influence by the user and should not in any way have been affected by the user upstream of the point of measurement. This concern relates to the potential for the user to develop areas of the basin that could degrade the water quality upstream of the location of intake by the user.
- 2) All pertinent water quality parameters should be considered in the evaluation. While turbidity may not increase during use, other water quality parameters may do so. These other parameters may include, but are not limited to: inorganic chemical contaminants such as arsenic, iron, lead, mercury, and silver; organic chemical contaminants such as endrin, lindane, and toxaphene; physical contaminants such as temperature, total suspended solids, and total dissolved solids; and total coliform bacteria contaminants. These parameters, and others that may be added to the waters during use, are likely to be a larger health threat than turbidity and should be checked.

REGULATION ON THE USE OF WATER
(Ref: Section 3 of HB109)

Setting water quality regulations on the basis of "immediate downstream use" is not appropriate since water quality constituents can be transported large distances downstream. Following the argument that the user should not be required to clean up the water more than what would be in the stream naturally, downstream users should not be required to clean up water discharged by an upstream user that has greater concentrations of pollutants than what is naturally found in the stream. Water quality regulations need to be based on all of the downstream users that could be affected.

SMALL SCALE USE OF WATER
(Ref: Section 4 of HB109)

The use of small quantities of water without obtaining a permit has two weaknesses:

- 1) Monitoring of the quantity of water used could not be accomplished unless some notification of the intent to withdraw the water is given.
- 2) The lack of a formal application eliminates the ability to identify what other water rights have been granted for that reach of stream.

While the definitions of "significant amount of water" are precise, a quantification of the maximum amount of withdrawal should also be expressed as a percentage of the existing stream flow so that the stream is not dewatered during low flows.

The AWC has lessor concerns regarding the remainder of HB109. We think that this bill should not be passed as it is currently written since it requires substantial revisions to maintain adequate health and welfare protection for downstream users. We would like to review the bill again if you choose to retain and revise it. Please feel free to call either Larry Rundquist (wk: 562-2514 hm: 279-7395) or me (wk: 261-4664 hm: 345-2453) if you have any questions.

Dear Representatives Koponen and Ellis:

Subject: HB 109, an act relating to use of water.

Position: The Department of Natural Resources supports the provisions of the bill that exempts small scale uses of water from permit and notice requirements.

Background: Section 4 combined with Section 7 amends AS 46.15 to allow the use of less than 5,000 gallons of water in a single day or the recurring use of 500 gallons per day from a single source without a permit or certificate to appropriate, except when adverse impacts to existing water rights or the public interest are identified.

Sections 5 and 6 amend AS 46.15.133 to exempt applications to appropriate 1,000 gallons per day or less from the current notice requirements, subject to certain exceptions with respect to the number of users, the request of a municipality, or if the source of water is from a stream designated as anadromous.

Recommendation: The Department of Natural Resources supports the changes described above. CSSB 98 currently would grant the same notice exemption, but sets the level at 5,000 gallons per day and the department supports that degree of change as well. In the experience of the department, the appropriation of such amounts of water has not caused significant problems. There are provisions in the proposed amendments which require public notice if the amount of water available is limited with respect to the number of users, or upon request of municipalities.

SUBJECT: Education Budget

I believe that A.S.D.
 needs public support with respect to Adequate funding.
 The job of education
 our youth is of paramount importance. It is to encourage the Municipality
 to support it's schools
 in a manner similar to other cities I suggest we push the tax cap to the legal limit.

SUBJECT: Education Financing

It is evident that education must assume the right priority on the financial agenda. Education cannot be dismissed from side
 to side or up
 and down. Let us fund education in the proper manner. No more cuts, but increases in
 funding is a MUST.
 Education is of ultimate
 importance today.

SUBJECT: Education Funding

Educating Alaska's children must be the top priority
 of the government. To underfund this area is
 to neglect our most important resource for the future — people. I believe we cannot deny quality
 education at any time
 to any in our
 student population.

SUBJECT: Education Funding

It is time for the people of the state of Alaska to take responsibility for educating our young people. The quality of future Alaskans,
 depends on the quality
 of education these people have received. Cutting teachers'
 salaries to fund education
 "passes the buck". All citizens are responsible for quality education.
