I OPOSE THE SEPERATION OF A.C.C. FROM THE UNIVERSITY OF ALASKA.
 WITH DWINDLING RESOURCES IT WOULD BE FISCALLY IRRESPONSIBLE TO CREATE A SYSTEM MORE COSTLY TO OPERATE. THE UNIVERSITY IS FACING SEVERE BUDGET CUTS

I FEEL IT'S (1) NOT A PRACTICAL USE OF OUR TAX DOLLARS, AND (2) MOSTLY SUPPORTS FEMINIST VIEWPOINTS NOT CONSERVATIVE (LIKE PRO-ABORTION AND PRO-GAY RIGHTS). I DON'T FEEL IT SUPPORTS THE FAMILY. ALSO, WHY IS OUR GOVERNMENT SUPPORTING ONE LOBBIEST? I'M AGAINST THIS...OTHER PROGRAMS DO THIS!

In its first official action taken in 1913, the Alaska Territorial Legislature made history by granting voting rights to Alaska's women citizens. Not until 1920 did the rest of the nation adopt the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution extending this right to the rest of America's women.

In 1956, Alaska led the way again with the adoption of a civil rights clause in our own Constitution. Similar legislation on the national level was not implemented until nearly a decade later.

In 1972, Alaska became one of the first states to ratify the Equal Right Amendment and to incorporate similar language into our own Constitution. Women residing in other states do not have the same legal rights as we do to protect them against gender discrimination in education, employment, housing, health, and in the justice system, as well as rights in the family not to be raped or beaten.

In spite of these great leaps ahead, many Alaska women still do bear the brunt of discrimination in all these areas.

In 1977, the Alaska Legislature ordered a study of The Status of Women in Alaska. The study found discrimination in education including gender bias in curriculum materials, athletics, counseling and vocational training. Students were not being encouraged to be all that they could be, they were being steered into outdated stereotypes which limited both boys and girls. From this research came the 1981 passage of Alaska's "Mini Title IX" which prohibited sexism in both school districts and the university. Unfortunately, six years later, the university has yet to implement even the most basic requirements of the law such as adopting procedures to determine on an annual basis male and female student needs in sports, athletics and recreation. We are all aware that Juneau has an expensive boys basketball team and nothing for women. Fairbanks has cut out of next year's budget the UAF's swim team - one sport (and low cost sport) that included both boys and girls equally and was even a team that placed first in regional competition.

The study found discrimination in employment including sex segregation in occupations, in training programs, inequality in income, and unmet needs of single and employed parents, especially mothers. One recommendation was a state job classification study which has just been done, but still has yet to be implemented. Another recommendation was aiding families through encouraging job-sharing and other efforts aimed at expanding the number and variety of part-time jobs at all levels of government. This, too, is still in its infancy. Women are still grouped in low-paying, sex-segregated jobs and in job-structures that aren't supportive to families.

The Status of Women study found startling and serious discrimination in health and it was this study that brought to our attention that Alaska has the highest rate of violence against women of any other state. Today, Alaska still leads the nation in per capita incidences of rape, of battering, of child assault and sexual abuse.

Inequities were found in the legal system, in treatment of women victims of crime, in treatment of women prisoners, in treatment of divorced women and mothers. Today we know that during the first year after a divorce a man's standard of living goes up considerably, and a woman's standard of living plummets.

The Alaska Women's Commission is the one entity which looks at, keeps on top of the enormous task of attending to the needs of one half of our population. Historic and contemporary discrimination is still all around us and affects women working both in and out of the home. The Commission's job is far from done, in fact is barely begun. As a woman who has chosen to work in the home, to work at raising children, and work as a community volunteer rather than work for pay, I applaud the work of the Commission. It makes strong effort to include women of all races, both urban and rural, of all economic and educational levels, and even includes some who believe that women should be subordinate rather than equal to the other half of the human race. The Commission has been fair and even-handed, yet continues to speak out for the inequities that exist in our state. The Commission has established autonomous local women's commissions at the local level to expand representation and input on issues.

The Alaska Women's Commission is vital to the health of our State. They must continue to be funded to do the enormous work that still lies ahead.

Susan R. Clark, 1109 C Street, Juneau, Alaska 99801 (907) 586-6952

The accomplishments celebrated during Women's History Month in these special "celebration stories" are those of Alaskan women past and present. The profiles are representative of thousands of women whose courage and determination to make a difference inspire us all to strive for excellence. The "celebration stories" are made possible by a grant from the National Bank of Alaska.

IRENE RYAN

Irene Ryan came to Alaska in 1931 because she saw an opportunity to explore a new country rich in minerals. As a geological engineer, she was an early supporter of developing Alaska's oil fields and later as the chairwoman of the Senate Resource Committee, authored many laws under which Alaska's resources are being developed today. Ryan's impressive career was capped in 1965 when she was named Commissioner of Economic Development. It is because of women like Ryan that Alaska has achieved its solid economic foundation.

LEGISLATIVE MILESTONES

---

At the turn of the century women in Alaska, like their sisters all over the country, demanded the same voting rights as men. In 1913 the first territorial legislature granted women the right to vote, making Alaska one of the most progressive areas in the union. Nearly 60 years later, Alaska once again took the lead as one of the first states to adopt its own Equal Rights Amendment.

LIL ANGERMAN

---

Lil Angerman came from a long line of women who had worked hard to get ahead. But by 1941 she had seen enough unfairness in the workplace to know that something had to be done. When local miners organized a union and demanded fair pay, she studied their moves, and in 1943, she organized Fairbanks restaurant workers, doubling the take home pay of most waitresses. As a union leader, and later State Deputy Commissioner of Labor, she spent her life creating better working conditions and take home pay for women.

BLANCHE McSMITH

---

Blanche Preston McSmith set a course for fighting racial and sexual discrimination long before others took up the cause to do so. In 1950, just two years after moving to Alaska, she helped found the first state chapter of the NAACP and served as its first Executive Secretary. Her courage and determination to make people aware of racial and sexual inequalities earned her a seat as the first black woman in the State House of Representatives.

RUSTY DOW

---

Driving a truck for a living made Rusty Dow stronger and gutsier than most men. That's one reason why her hauling business thrived in the Matanuska Valley colony during the 1930s. It also is the reason why the Army employed her during World War II and then recruited her to ferry a special load of equipment between Anchorage and Dawson Creek. When Rusty Dow made that trip in early August 1944 she became the first woman ever to drive the Alaska Highway solo.

NETTIE JONES ELLISON

---

In 1929, Nettie Jones Ellison, a Tsimpshian woman, wanted to transfer her daughter from the Indian to the whites only school. The Ketchikan School Board said "no" on the grounds that there was no room. But two weeks later there was room for a white child. Ellison sued the school board and won. Her fight to end racial discrimination was an important first step toward improving the quality of education for all natives, and in 1979 the Ketchikan School Board passed a resolution posthumously recognizing her courageous stand.

LORENE HARRISON

Lorene Harrison grew up on a farm in Kansas but dreamed of teaching music to school children around the world. In 1928 she accepted an offer to teach in Anchorage and brought with her a variety of special musical talents to a growing pioneer city. During the 1940s and 50s Harrison founded the Anchorage Community Chorus, The Anchorage Concert Association and the music programs of early radio and television. Endowed with a pioneer's spirit, Harrison's legacy of music has enriched the lives of all who live on the last frontier.

LUCY HON CUDDY

---

Lucy Cuddy used to say that if you get involved, you'll never have the chance to be lonely. Cuddy lived that philosophy, and during her lifetime assumed many roles and responsibilities traditionally left to men. Among them, she was the first woman to chair the War Relief Board and the United Fund Campaign. Widowed in 1951, she became the first woman to chair the Board of Directors for what was then the state's largest bank. No other woman before then or since then has held such a powerful position in Alaska's financial community.

WOMEN MOUNTAINEERS

In the early 1900s, mountain climbing was not a sport most women took up. But Dora Keen, a city kid from Pennsylvania, was an unusual woman with an unusual spirit. She moved to Alaska to climb its rugged peaks, and by 1912, wearing wool skirts and climbing boots, she conquered the highest peak in the Wrangell Mountains. In honor of her adventurous spirit and successful explorations, Dora Keen Range in the Chugach Mountains was named for her . . . Alaska's first female mountaineer. Keen's mountaineering spirit was echoed in 1947 by Barbara Washburn, who that year became the first woman to stand on the summit of Mt. McKinley.

DELLA KEATS

As a young woman, Inupiat healer Della Keats began a lifelong career of medical practice. For 50 years, she provided health care for the people of Noatak and Kotzebue. Her care included delivering babies, stitching wounds and conducting arthritic clinics. Later, she provided a bridge between traditional and modern medicine.

SADIE NEAKOK

As a child, Sadie Neakok acquired the traits of compassion and fairness from her Inupiat mother and her father, the first white settler in Barrow. She put those qualities to good use as Alaska's first native woman magistrate. With jurisdiction over one quarter of Alaska, she held court in her kitchen until Barrow found her a courtroom.

MARGARET MURIE

Author and arctic explorer Margaret Murie believes that one of the most precious things in life is an unspoiled wilderness. In 1924 she earned a business degree and became the first woman to graduate from the University of Alaska. But she is perhaps best remembered for her outspoken beliefs in the urgent and continued need for wilderness preservation.

MARIE DRAKE/ELINOR DUSENBURY

Eight stars of gold on a field of blue . . . Those words were written in 1929 by Juneau school teacher Claudia Marie Drake after a design for an official flag had been adopted. But it wasn't until 1955 that another woman, Elinor Dusenbury, set those words to music and gave Alaska its official state anthem.

Alaska's flag to Alaskans dear . . .

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

---

In 1955, when Alaska's constitution was written, six women were among the delegates. Juneau attorney Mildred Hermann; Fairbanks housewife Ada Wien; Anchorage legislator Helen Fischer; Juneau bank clerk Katherine Nordale; Anchorage attorney Dorothy Awes Haaland; and, Juneau housewife Dora Sweeney. Each contributed significantly to Alaska's constitution and statehood.

NELL SCOTT

In the years preceding statehood, territorial legislators were elected at large from each judicial district. Nell Scott, from Seldovia, jumped into the race from the third district along with nine others, determined to break the ice for future women candidates. On September 8, 1936, she became the first woman elected to serve in the Territorial House of Representatives.

SISTERS OF ST. ANN & SISTERS OF PROVIDENCE

It was a blustery night when the Nome City Council petitioned the Sisters of Providence to establish a hospital and school there. The Sisters of St. Ann already had settled in Juneau, setting up a hospital in that gold rush town. But God's work was truly cut out for Sister Mary Conrad and three other Sisters of Providence who arrived in the gold rush camp of Nome in 1902. By summer's end, they had turned a general store into a bustling 20-bed hospital, and were caring for miners and trappers as well as schooling the village children.

LYDIA FOHN-HANSEN

Pioneer homemaker Lydia Fohn-Hansen devoted a lifetime sharing her knowledge of cooking, sewing and canning with women and families around the state. She founded the Home Economics Department at the University of Alaska in Fairbanks, the 4-H Club and the Homemaker's Club, and spent endless hours with the Matanuska Valley Colonists teaching women how to cope with domestic chores in a rustic setting. In 1959, in recognition of her outstanding missionary service, Fohn-Hansen became the first woman ever to receive an honorary Doctorate of Humanities from UAA.

AMANDA MCFARLAND

Presbyterian missionary Amanda McFarland arrived in Wrangell with Dr. Sheldon Jackson on the steamer "California," August 10, 1877, and for the next 20 years she devoted her life to educating and caring for the young Native women in Southeast Alaska. McFarland brought not only the word of God, but also strength and perseverance to the Natives of Wrangell. She built the first school for girls and schooled them in the ways of Christianity until 1896 when Sheldon Jackson sent her to Sitka to establish a home for girls there. Among her students: Tillie Paul and Sarah Dickenson who went on to similar work in Haines and Hoonah.
