ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)

HJR 22 proposes amendments to the Constitution changing the membership of the Legislature from 20 senators to 25 and from 40 representatives to 50. Total membership would change from 60 to 75. It is estimated there would be increased costs by enlarging the size of the membership of the Legislature. These increases would be additional members and legislative staff, additional sgt-at-arms staff, additional support staff, additional office space, increase in travel, additional annual allowances, increase in supplies, telephone equipment and charges, computer and office equipment, etc. Also a one time cost would be incurred to remodel the existing chambers to accommodate the additional members.

Distribution (by preparer): Leg. Fi _____, Impacted Agency(ies).

CONTINUATION OF FISCAL NOTE: HJR 22

PERSONAL SERVICES

It is anticipated the additional members and staff will not occur until FY 96. The FY 96 cost is for six months.

15 additional legislators (75 not 60) - $519,000
30 additional full time legislative staff - $1,699,500

2 additional sgt-at-arms staff for House and Senate - $25,000
2 additional House and Senate support staff - $33,200	2891.7

Personal services costs are estimated using FY 95 personal services costs. Support staff costs are conservative. Not sure what impact additional 15 members will have on the Agency.

TRAVEL

Travel to and from session, session per diem, relocation costs, interim per diem, travel per diem for 15 additional legislators - $405,500.	405.5
--	-------

CONTRACTUAL

Telephones 70 lines @$250/yr - $17,500
Long distance and local charges - $90,000
Annual $6,000 allowance - $90,000
Increased lease space for session and interim - $275,000	472.5

SUPPLIES

Supplies for 79 additional members and staff for session and interim - $25,000	25.0

EQUIPMENT

Equipment for 79 additional members and staff for session interim. This would be a one time cost.

75 Desks or funding for built-ins = $33,000
40 Computers @$1,500 = $60,000
45 File cabinets = $18,000
40 Printers @$1,500 = $60,000
75 Chairs = 15 @ $400; 60 @ $300 = $24,000	195.0

MISCELLANEOUS

A capital appropriation would be requested to remodel the 2nd floor of the Capitol. The Senate and House Chambers would have to be enlarged to accommodate additional members. Offices would need to be moved and additional committee and office space would be required. The Legislative Lounge might also need to be enlarged.

Approximate amount for the 2nd floor renovation is $150,000.	150.0

SPONSOR'S STATEMENT

The primary reason for offering this resolution is to give the voters the option of having smaller legislative districts. This has the effect of bring legislators closer to the people that they represent. While this is less important in the urban areas, it is extremely important in rural areas. In my own case, the house district is several hundred miles long and represents very diverse interests.

One advantage of smaller districts is that campaigning would be easier and less expensive for persons who may otherwise might not be able to finance a campaign. It would also make it possible for more people to participate in the political system as legislators. Another advantage is that residents would be more likely to know their legislators and as a result cast an informed ballot.

This legislation would result in more rural and urban district but would not change the rural and urban proportions of the legislature since that is governed by federal law.

There are two sets of fiscal notes. Those from the Division of Elections, dealing with the cost of reapportionment and issuance of voter registration cards could be significantly reduced if the plan was implemented after the 2000 census as a part of the required redistricting needed to meet federal reapportionment requirements.

While the second set of fiscal note from the Legislative Affairs Agency are substantial, some of the assumptions made would not necessarily have be correct. Committee sizes need not be increased and the increased number of legislators would create a larger pool from which to draw members. Staffing assumptions are based on all new members being members of the majority at current staffing allocations levels. As the legislature looks at ways to reduce the legislative budget, staffing allocations, may out of necessity, be cut in future legislatures. More members to serve in the same number of committee positions could in fact speed up the committee process and allow for shortening the legislative session which in turn would affect the cost that would be incurred.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Representative Richard Foster

FROM: Gordon S. Harrison, Director

RE: Cost and Other Effects of Enlarging the Alaska Legislature
Research Request 93.083

You asked for an assessment of the cost and other effects of increasing the Alaska Senate to 30 members and the Alaska House of Representatives to 60 members (i.e., adding 10 senators and 20 representatives), particularly the effects on representation. You also asked for information about the size of other state legislatures.

This memorandum will provide a brief historical account of the evolution of the size of the Alaska legislature, a comparison with other state legislatures, a discussion of the impact on representation, and an assessment of the cost of the change.

Evolution of the Alaska Legislature to a 60-Member Body

The Alaska territorial legislature was created in 1912. With only 24 members--8 senators and 16 representatives--it must surely have been among the smallest of such legislative bodies in American history. Many in Congress at the time were skeptical that the sparse and transient population of the territory of Alaska justified the expense of an elected legislature, and the diminutive body probably reflected a concern for costs.

In 1942 Congress enlarged the territorial legislature to 40 members: from 8 to 16 senators, and from 16 to 24 representatives. This change (which took effect in 1944) was the result of efforts by Delegate Anthony Dimond, who believed strongly that the territorial senate of 8 was too small to be an effective legislative body. He was particularly incensed that as few as four senators could--and regularly did--thwart the will of the 24-member institution. Delegate Dimond initially campaigned for a unicameral body. When a territorial-wide referendum in 1937 rejected that option, he introduced a bill in Congress to increase both houses to 18 members and to apportion them both on the basis of population.¹ Congress eventually consented to an enlargement of the senate to 16 and the house to 24, with only the house apportioned on the basis of population.

The Alaska Constitutional Convention set the present size of the state legislature at 60 members. The question of the optimum size of the two houses was not debated on the floor of the convention. In general, the delegates wanted to increase representation, particularly of rural areas, over that afforded by a 40-member body, but they were also determined to have a small legislature. The cost of operating the prospective government was never far from the minds of the delegates, and concern for the expense of the legislature doubtless contributed much to the pressure to keep it comparatively small.

Some convention delegates thought a senate of 20 members was too small. Doubts about so small a body have been expressed from time to time since statehood. Although the state senate has more members, it is proportionally the same size as the original territorial senate. One complaint about so few senators is the fact that they have too many committee assignments. In his book Legislative Life, Alan Rosenthal writes: "It is difficult to imagine a body of 40 members (not to mention those with fewer) really maintaining a committee system."

Despite this lingering concern about the size of the senate, only two resolutions have been introduced over the years to enlarge the legislature: HJR 71 in 1978 proposed to increase the senate to 25 members and the house to 51 members, and HJR 48 in 1981 proposed to increase the senate to 30 members and the house to 60. In addition, two resolutions have been introduced to increase by one the membership of both the senate and house, but these measures were concerned with another problem, that of partisan deadlocks of 10-10 and 20-20.

Comparison with Other States

Attached is a table that shows the size of legislative chambers in each of the 50 states. Alaska has the smallest bicameral legislature, although Delaware with 62 members, and Nevada, with 63, are close. The average number of members in the upper houses is about ¹With regard to apportioning both houses on the basis of population, Dimond was ahead of his time. He argued eloquently for the inherent fairness and democratic logic of the idea, but Congress turned a deaf ear. Apportionment of both houses of state legislatures on the basis of population was imposed on the states by a series of U.S. Supreme Court cases in the early 1960s.

38, and the average number of members of the lower houses is about 110. There does not appear to be any correlation between the population of a state and the size of its legislature. New Hampshire is one of the least populated states yet has a lower house of 400; California is one of the most populous states, and it has a legislature of 120. One of the few generalizations that may be possible is that western states tend to have smaller legislatures than the older, New England states.

In all states the senate is smaller than the house. This is a matter of political custom rather than law or logic (Delegate Dimond argued this point, unsuccessfully, in his effort enlarge both chambers of the Alaska territorial legislature to 18 members).

Several states have decreased the size of their legislatures in recent years. However, these reductions have occurred in states with comparatively large legislatures, and the resulting bodies remain substantially larger than Alaska's.

Effects Of Enlargement on Representation

Enlarging Alaska's legislature would result in more legislators from smaller districts. This would have the effect of bringing elected representatives "closer to the people," and it would result in more rural districts as well as urban districts, but it would not alter the current proportion of urban and rural legislators.

Both houses of state legislatures must be, as a matter of federal law, apportioned on the basis of population. There are currently 40 election districts in Alaska. One house member is elected from each. Senate districts are a combination of two election districts; one senator is elected from each. If the number of house members were increased from 40 to 60, there would be 20 additional districts from which a representative would be elected (assuming the continuation of single-member districts). The 60 house members would, in the short run at least, each represent substantially fewer constituents than the 40 members currently represent, and the mega-districts which we now have in Alaska would be reduced in size to some extent. Senators would likewise represent smaller constituencies. While there would be more rural and urban districts, the urban and rural areas of the state would continue to have the same proportion of total members.

There may be several advantages to smaller election districts in Alaska. One is that campaigning for office would be easier and less expensive. Another is that residents would be more likely to know their legislators and be able to cast an informed ballot on election day. Greater familiarity could improve communication with and access to elected representatives. Also, there would be opportunity for more people to participate in the political system as legislators.

Fiscal Impacts

Increasing the membership of the legislature from 60 to 90 would create higher annual operating expenses of about $6 million. It would also involve a substantial one-time capital expense because the existing legislative chambers, committee rooms and office space would have to be expanded to accommodate the new members. While we have estimated the annual recurring cost, we have not attempted to estimate the one-time capital cost.

Annual Recurring Cost

Annual recurring costs would fall into four general categories: compensation, travel, contractual, and staff. We obtained estimates of these items, based on the current average cost per legislator, from the Division of Administrative Services, Legislative Affairs Agency. The total cost would be approximately $6,102,540, as shown below. This estimate assumes that central support staff (employees of Legislative Affairs Agency, for example) would remain unchanged.

Compensation for legislators is currently $33,000 each (including benefits). Thus, 30 additional legislators would increase compensation $990,000 annually.

Travel expense, including moving, session per diem, and long-term per diem, averages approximately $20,933 per legislator. Thus, the new members would increase travel expense by $627,990 per year.

Contractual expense includes a $4,000 allowance per member, plus an additional approximately $7,000 each for phones, supplies, and equipment. Thus, contractual expenses associated with the additional members would be an additional $330,000 per year.

Staff expenses average $21,465 per staff member during session; they average $37,045 per staff during the interim. If we assume that on average each legislator has three session staff and two interim staff, the additional staff expense per legislator is $138,485. Thus, staff expense caused by the expansion would be $4,154,550.

The foregoing incremental costs total $6,102,540.

One-time Capital Costs

We have not attempted to estimate the capital cost required to accommodate the new legislators, but we presume it would be several million dollars. The existing capitol

Representative Foster

January 22, 1993

building would have to be remodeled to make space available to the new members. In all likelihood, the executive branch would vacate the capitol building and it would become a legislative hall. The existing house and senate chambers would have to be enlarged, several of the meeting rooms would have to be expanded, and more office space would have to be found. The reshuffle of office space could push some employees into leased space, which would increase the foregoing estimate of annual recurring costs.

I hope this information is useful. If you have any questions, please contact this agency.

Just a word to let you know we have submitted the attached fiscal note through the normal process. If the effective date could have corresponded with reapportionment in the year 2000 we could have avoided such a high dollar figure.

Your bill is excellent, please give me a call if you would like to discuss this fiscal note.

Dear Representative Porter:

I am writing to you today to speak against House Joint Resolution 27 (HJR 27), relating to a resolution of the Alaska State Legislature requesting the Congress to prepare an amendment to the U. S. Constitution prohibiting desecration of the flag of the United States.

The Alaska Civil Liberties Union (AkCLU), an affiliate of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU), strongly disagrees with any legislation which would limit an individual's right to freedom of expression, and most particularly when it relates to symbolic speech.

The language of HJR 27 repeatedly recognizes that the flag is, indeed, a fine symbol of the many important events and achievements in the history of this country. As a result, some have come to believe that the U. S. flag is somehow more than a mere symbol of our nation; instead, it has become an international symbol for freedom, justice, tolerance, and equality. However, when one considers this fact, one must also remember that one of the most important freedoms that the flag symbolizes for Americans and foreigners alike is our Constitutional (First Amendment) right of free speech.

Surely the freedom that the people of this world's oppressed nations most desire is the freedom to express an opinion or idea without fear of reprisal: to be themselves, wholly. Do we not define the nature of governments first and foremost by the controls which they place on individual liberties, including the freedom of speech?

HJR 27, by attempting to create criminal punishments for desecrating the symbol (our flag) of an idea (freedom), infringes on the very individual liberties our flag represents, while doing great harm to the Constitution itself. The flag is a symbol, a way of communicating an idea to others without the use of words. As such, its destruction is also merely symbolic: a way of communicating feelings and ideas to others.

The First Amendment also guarantees that the sharing of a particular idea, even if that idea may be offensive to a majority of the public, is not to be denied based merely on the content of that idea. Although a proposed amendment banning desecration of the flag might not contain explicit content-based limitations on the symbolic uses of the flag, as U. S. Supreme Court Justice Brennan noted in the majority opinion in U.S. v. Eichman (which upheld the constitutionality of flag desecration), such a Constitutional amendment would suffer from the flaw of suppressing expression "out of concern for its likely communicative impact" (emphasis added).

The thirteen colonial legislatures, when debating whether to accept the Constitution as the basis for this country's governmental structure, refused to ratify it without written guarantee that certain basic rights would not be infringed. These rights were codified and attached to the Constitution as the first ten amendments, also known as the Bill of Rights. There has been no change to these amendments in the past 200 years. An amendment banning flag desecration would restrict one of these freedoms.

Once a justification for making one change has been made and accepted, it would be just that much harder to resist further changes to the Bill of Rights, should they be proposed. Today, we have an amendment prohibiting flag desecration. What would it be tomorrow? An amendment prohibiting a march by Neo-Nazi sympathizers, or laws banning black armbands worn to protest a governmental action? Potentially, the amendments could reach even more outrageous proportions.

Finally, the idea that an amendment should be made to the Constitution to prohibit one particular form of expression, so long as enough people protest that particular form of expression, is outrageous. The First Amendment was enacted to protect political expression offensive to prevailing opinion and sentiment, to protect that speech which may in fact disturb or anger the majority: to protect individuals from the tyranny of the majority.

Any proposed amendment, although it might appear simple, would conceal a variety of complex issues. Would such an amendment supersede the rest of the Constitution? If so, states could seize evidence of flag desecration in violation of the Fourth Amendment and deny due process in criminal trials. Would the proposed Amendment supersede only the First Amendment? If so, a state could prohibit all flag burning but that in protest, for example, of the Vietnam War. Would that be intended? If not, just how much and what part of the First Amendment would be superseded by the proposed Amendment?

The flag symbolizes different things to different people. As Justice Brennan noted in Texas v. Johnson, mistreatment of the flag should not be an exception to the principle of free speech: "We do not consecrate the flag by punishing its desecration, for in doing so we dilute the very freedom that this cherished emblem represents."

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Randall Burns". The signature is written in dark ink and is positioned above the typed name.

Dear Sirs,

I missed any news item that petitions were available to sign against desecration of the American flag.

To me, the flag is not political - it is our Country - it is us.

Hoping this letter can be added - as a help towards law that will prohibit desecration of our American flag.

Thank you,

Margaret T. Hendrickson

Dear Mr. Mahoney

I as an American join with the hundreds of thousands in protest of the deplorable treatment of our Great Flag. A deep hurt exists in the hearts of the American People when they see anyone tread on our National Colors. Please add my name to those who wish to object in writing to the desecration of the AMERICAN FLAG.
