ESTABLISHMENT OF THE CO-OP

In Chignik, as in many other Alaska salmon fisheries, there are more limited entry permits and boats than are needed to catch the fish. When prices and catch values were high permit holders had little interest in reducing the number of boats. But as sockeye prices and fishing profits declined during the 1990s, many Chignik permit holders argued they should pool their fishing effort to cut costs.

Not all Chignik permit holders wanted a co-op. Because some permit holders regularly catch more fish than others (the 13 highest-earning Chignik permit holders have typically caught three times as much fish per boat as the 40 lowest-earning permit holders), it was difficult to come up with a way of sharing costs and profits that would satisfy everyone. And some permit holders simply preferred to keep fishing the way they had been.

To make a co-op possible, supporters asked the Alaska Board of Fisheries to give separate allocations—to be fished at different times—to those permit holders who wished to form a co-op and to those who wished to fish independently. In January 2002 the board adopted regulations providing for a co-op to receive 0.9% of the total salmon harvest for each permit holder who joined.

The new Chignik regulations represent two significant innovations in Alaska salmon management, both of which have been intensely debated by Chignik permit holders and others in the industry. One innovation is having separate allocations and fishing times for different groups of permit holders who choose to fish in different ways—which has led to debate over whether the allocation between the groups is appropriate and fair.

2) The other innovation is fishing cooperatively: reducing costs by fishing fewer boats—which has led to debate over how to share costs and profits among those co-op members who fish and those who don't. A fundamental issue is whether it is appropriate for individuals who don't fish—but who have invested in permits and are foregoing their right to fish those permits—to share in the benefits of Alaska salmon fisheries.

ISER'S SURVEY

To learn more about how permit holders felt about the changes in the Chignik salmon fishery, ISER surveyed Chignik permit holders in late 2002. The high response rate—89 of the 100 permit holders answered our survey questions—gives us confidence that the survey results reflect the views of Chignik permit holders in general. In the figures showing survey results, the percentages are of those who answered the question; some respondents didn't answer some questions. A copy of the full report, including permit holders' detailed comments about the co-op, are on ISER's Understanding Alaska project Web site at www.alaskanconomy.uaa.alaska.edu.

VIEW OF MANAGEMENT CHANGES

Co-op members and independent fishermen had almost directly opposite views of the management changes that made the co-op possible, as Figure 4 shows.

- Almost all the co-op members—95 percent of those who fished and 86 percent of those who didn't—felt very or somewhat positive about the management changes.
- About 83 percent of independent fishermen felt very or somewhat negative about the management changes.
- Only about 5 percent of the co-op members who fished, 14 percent of co-op members who didn't fish, and 17 percent of independents had mixed feelings.

Figure 3. How Do You Feel About The Management Changes in 2002?

Figure 4. Was The Co-op Managed Well?
(Only Co-op Members)

Figure 5. Were the Boats That Fished For The Co-op Paid Fairly?
(Only Co-op Members)

QUALITY OF CO-OP MANAGEMENT

As Figure 4 shows, most of the co-op members thought the co-op was managed well in its first year. About 76 percent of the co-op members who fished and 85 percent of the members who didn't fish thought the co-op was managed well.

PAYMENT FOR FISHING

An issue for co-op members was the size of the additional payment for those who fished. As Figure 5 shows, permit holders who fished for the co-op were far more likely to say they weren't paid fairly. Several who wrote comments on the survey said that the payment wasn't enough to cover their crew costs or wear and tear on their boats.

ENJOYMENT OF FISHING

Most commercial fishermen say they think of fishing not just as a way to earn a dollar but also as a way of life they enjoy. So we asked Chignik permit holders—both the co-op members and the independents—how the establishment of the cooperative had affected their enjoyment of fishing (Figure 6).

• Half the co-op members who did fish said they enjoyed the more relaxed, less competitive atmosphere with fewer boats in the water. But nearly one quarter said they didn't enjoy it as much, and another one quarter weren't sure.

- Over 60 percent of the co-op members who didn't fish said they missed it. Still, almost 30 percent said they didn't.
- Among independent permit holders, 55 percent said the cooperative had reduced their enjoyment of fishing. But most of the rest said they still enjoyed fishing just as much.

OTHER EFFECTS OF THE CO-OP

Co-op members who fished:

- 100 percent thought the quality of the fish was better because of how the co-op fished.
- 95 percent thought the co-op did a good job marketing the fish.

Co-op members who didn't fish:

- 82 percent said that they would have fished if there hadn't been a co-op.
- 67 percent said that not fishing allowed them to earn money from other work.
- 89 percent thought the co-op did a good job marketing the fish.
- 33 percent said they would have hired Chignik-area residents as crew if there hadn't been a co-op.

Independent permit holders:

- 80 percent said they caught less fish this year than they would have caught if there had not been a co-op.

• 50 percent thought they had more trouble finding and keeping crew than if there had not been a co-op.

• 32 percent reported missing one or more days of fishing due to breakdowns. (With fewer fishing days, missing a day of fishing mattered more than in earlier years.)

Many permit holders also wrote detailed comments explaining their answers and describing effects of the co-op that they liked or did not like.

SUMMARY

The majority of Chignik permit holders—most of those who joined the co-op—clearly thought it was a success in its first year. They thought they were better off financially because of the co-op. They thought the co-op was managed well, improved fish quality, and did a good job marketing the fish. But a significant minority of Chignik permit holders—including almost all of those who did not join the co-op—had negative feelings about the co-op, and felt they were worse off financially because of the co-op.

The co-op affected not just the permit holders whom we surveyed but everyone involved in the Chignik fishery. The Alaska Department of Fish and Game faced the new task of allocating fish to separate co-op and independent fleets, but could work with the co-op to control daily salmon catches more precisely. Some Chignik salmon processors and tender operators were not able to do business with the co-op (which controlled more than two-thirds of the harvest) and felt very negatively affected.

How relevant is the Chignik co-op to other Alaska salmon fisheries? Organizing a co-op was probably easier in Chignik than it would be in most other areas. All Chignik sockeye salmon return to a single river, making it easier for a smaller fleet to catch the fish, and to allocate fish among different groups. Chignik also has a relatively small number of permit holders, many of whom know each other well. (As shown in Figure 7, more than two-thirds of both co-op members and independent fishermen said they were current or former year-round residents of the Chignik area.)

The experience of the first year of the Chignik co-op suggests that it is possible to restructure Alaska salmon fisheries in ways that reduce costs, improve quality, and make most permit holders better off financially. But restructuring is likely to be difficult and controversial. Change will not come easily.

OTHER "UNDERSTANDING ALASKA" SALMON STUDIES

As world markets change and Alaska's population grows, Alaskans face new challenges in managing our natural resources and balancing between different economic opportunities and the needs and goals of different user groups. We face similar issues and opportunities in managing our salmon resources as we do for many other Alaska resources. To understand these better, ISER is planning several other studies of Alaska salmon management as part of our "Understanding Alaska" project.

One study will review options for restructuring Alaska's commercial salmon fisheries—not only co-ops but other potential approaches for increasing the economic benefits to Alaskans from our commercial salmon fisheries.

Another study will examine the allocation of Alaska's salmon resources between commercial, sport and subsistence users—including biological, economic, social, political, and legal considerations—and potential new approaches for thinking about allocation and balancing between different resource uses.

For more information about these and other studies visit ISER's Understanding Alaska project Web site—www.alaskanecology.uua.alaska.edu.

Judge finds Chignik salmon co-op legal

Tuesday, October 1, 2002

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANCHORAGE - A Juneau judge on Monday ruled in favor of the Alaska Board of Fisheries in a lawsuit challenging the legality of a commercial salmon fishery cooperative at Chignik.

Dissident independent fishermen who sued earlier this year, claiming the fish board overstepped its authority, may appeal.

Salmon fishermen formed the cooperative over the summer to save expenses and share profits by designating some members to fish in waters off the Alaska Peninsula on behalf of the entire group.

"We're thrilled," said Jamie Ross, a fishermen and co-op organizer. "We're not just happy for us. We're happy for all of Alaska."

The Chignik co-op was viewed by many people in Alaska's beleaguered commercial salmon industry as an important experiment to cut costs and help Alaska's wild salmon compete on price and quality against fierce competition from foreign salmon farms. Observers said such co-ops might be tried in other troubled Alaska salmon fisheries.

Normally, Alaska's salmon fishermen race one another for fish. In Chignik, however, 77 of about 100 Chignik seiners parked most of their boats, catching the fish with a much smaller fleet.

They shared expenses and every co-op member received at least $20,000, regardless of whether they caught any fish.

Two fishermen who elected not to join the co-op, Dean Anderson and Michael Grunert, sued the board, saying the plan unfairly allocated most of the fish to the co-op. They questioned whether the allocation violated the "common use" and "equal treatment" clauses of the state constitution's natural resources article.

Superior Court Judge Patricia Collins ruled the co-op does not violate the constitution and that each Chignik fishermen has the same chance to either join the co-op or remain independent. She also ruled the board had the authority to pass the co-op regulation in January.

"That's exciting, good news," said Board of Fisheries member John White of Bethel. If the judge had ruled against the board, it would have "stifled our room to move" to help the commercial salmon industry, he said.

"I'm excited that hopefully some innovative thinking to move us as a salmon industry out of this morass is going to find a little clear sailing," he said.

Heather McCarty, who represents the independent fishermen, said she was "really disappointed and surprised" by the ruling. She said no decision on an appeal had been made.

2006 National Veterans Wheelchair Games

This resolution urges the United States Department of Veterans Affairs and the Paralyzed Veterans of America to hold the 2006 National Veterans Wheelchair Games in Anchorage. Hosting the games in Anchorage would show Alaska's support and respect for our nation's veterans and its accessibility to people of all physical capabilities.

Alaska is proud of its veterans and those from other states. The National Veterans Wheelchair Games is an excellent way for paralyzed veterans to showcase their amazing accomplishments and to inspire all those with whom they come in contact both disabled and not.

The National Veterans Wheelchair Games are the largest annual wheelchair sporting event in the world and will bring an estimated 1,300 to 1,500 visitors to Alaska. With food, hotels and related tourism activities, these participants and their families and supporters will not only inspire Alaskans, but they will also add millions of dollars to the Alaskan economy.

National Veterans Wheelchair Games

"I can't even walk any more. Can I still compete in track?" "Do you really think a quadriplegic can play rugby?" "You mean to say I've got to tackle stairs in the wheelchair slalom event?" Welcome to the National Veterans Wheelchair Games, where all answers are a resounding "Yes!"

Started in 1981, these Games promote rehabilitation and wellness through rigorous sports competition. Now the largest annual wheelchair sports event in the U.S., it gives newly disabled veterans a chance to gain and enhance sports skills while introducing them to experienced wheelchair athletes. Veterans compete according to their ability in such sports as basketball, softball, track and field, rugby, slalom, and many others.

The spirit at these Games inspires every veteran to achieve his or her personal best. The event is co-sponsored by the Department of Veterans Affairs and the Paralyzed Veterans of America.

"Last year was my first Games and it was fantastic! It gave me confidence, and was the most rewarding and challenging event for the disabled that I'd ever seen. It's broadened my abilities...and the confidence I'd lost has started to come back."

Evo Marini, 55
Air Force combat veteran of Vietnam,
Missouri City, Texas

"This is a great event to help people get back into participating in life. Sports helped me adjust and accept my disability. Some doors have closed, but many more have opened, including the opportunity to represent the United States in three international Paralympic Games."

Laura Schwanger, 41
Army veteran, Williamstown, N.J.

Resolution in Support of 2006 National
Veterans Wheelchair Game Held in Alaska

April 13, 2003

I have been involved in the wheelchair games since 1999. I represented Alaska in San Juan, Puerto Rico. Since then I have participated in the wheelchair games in San Antonio, Texas and New York City. At each event, I have been asked, "when are we coming to Alaska?" We have the opportunity to host the National Veterans Wheelchair Games in July of 2006.

These games are the largest wheelchair competition in the world. Approximately 1300 to 1400 individuals will be involved. As well as the athletes, coaches, referees, and support staff, many family members accompany the competitors. The games not only let the athletes visit different cities nationwide, the residents of the cities can see what can be done by individuals in wheelchairs and how the disabled adapt to their changing environment. It also gives everyone a chance to see the latest in technology and products available to everybody.

I am sure that Alaska will be a great host and the wheelchair games will be a huge success.

This resolution is important as it shows the Veterans Administration in Alaska that we have the support of all Alaskans.

Yours sincerely,

George Pikus

NATIONAL VETERANS WHEELCHAIR GAMES JULY 2006

Representatives from the VA and Paralyzed Veterans of America (PVA) have completed an initial site inspection in Anchorage last Fall, September 2002. They toured the local facilities and met with the hoteliers, Egan Convention Center, Sullivan Arena, Anchorage School District and Airport Representatives, along with the Department of Veterans Affairs Alaska Healthcare System and Regional Office to discuss the feasibility of Anchorage hosting these Games. Their findings were that Anchorage does have the facilities to host these Games. They are going to do a final site inspection this summer, July 2003, following the Wheelchair Games in Long Beach, California.

Dates-

Currently looking at July 2-7, 2006.

Hotels-

"Hotel Facilities to include at least 600 rooms that can reasonably be made accessible for wheelchairs. Accessibility refers to entrance into the hotel, number of elevators, door widths, size of lobby/registration area and width of hallways. In addition, 250 rooms are needed for sponsors, officials, and VIP's."

The hotels in Anchorage have tentatively committed 900 rooms. This includes the five largest downtown properties and does not include the many other hotels in and around the downtown Anchorage area.

Transportation-

Currently working with the Anchorage School District and First Student.

Dear Mr. Brown:

It is my pleasure to fully support the Alaska VA Healthcare System and Regional Office (AVASRRO) as the host site for the 2006 National Veterans Wheelchair Games.

We look forward to working with your office and the Paralyzed Veterans of America in making 2006 the best in the history of the games.

The AVASRRO appreciates this opportunity and hopes you will select our facility and region for the 2006 National Veterans Wheelchair Games. Please find enclosed our bid package for this event.

Sincerely,

Dear Ms. Dodds,

On behalf of the Municipality of Anchorage, I am pleased to support the Anchorage Convention & Visitors Bureau's bid to host the National Veterans Wheelchair Games in July 2006.

From numerous experiences, be assured that the community is very capable of hosting such an event, and doing so in a way that makes it a most memorable for participants and visitors.

We understand the commitment required to host a major event such as this. Capable organizers and countless volunteers have proven time and again that they are up to the challenge, and hopefully we will get the chance to do so again.

Good luck with your bid to host a successful National Veterans Wheelchair Games in Anchorage.

Sincerely,

George Wuerch

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

I have been asked to write a letter of support for the Anchorage Convention & Visitors Bureau to host the National Veterans Wheelchair Games to be held in July 2006. The idea of the games coming to Anchorage is very exciting, and I certainly support the Convention & Visitors Bureau in their endeavor to bid for this event.

When individuals from the Veterans Administration (VA) and the Paralyzed Veterans of America (PVA) were in Anchorage to do a site inspection to see if Anchorage had the facilities to host this event, they were able to meet with District representatives to discuss transportation, facilities, and rentals issues. Steve Kalmes, Director of ASD Transportation, and Sharon Schoonmaker, Rentals Manager, were very supportive and agreed to further discussions once Anchorage is awarded the bid.

Anchorage recently hosted the 2001 Winter Special Olympic World Games, which many of our students participated in and supported. It was a great benefit to them and we see this event as another inspirational and educational opportunity for our 50,000 students.

I encourage you to consider Anchorage as the site of the National Veterans Wheelchair Games in July 2006.

Sincerely,

Carol Comeau

ANCHORAGE
 Convention &
 Visitors Bureau

Dear Mr. Brown:

The Anchorage Convention & Visitors Bureau is extending a warm invitation to you and the participants of the National Veterans Wheelchair Games to come to Anchorage in July of 2006.

We are excited about the possibility of hosting your distinguished group. Anchorage is a fabulous destination that offers not only first-class accommodations and meeting facilities, but also excellent airline service from the "Lower 48."

The possibilities to experience, in conjunction with a conference, some of Alaska's famous attractions and activities are endless: glaciers, mountains, wildlife, Native art, day cruises, fishing and flightseeing options are waiting for you.

When the participants of the National Veterans Wheelchair Games come to Anchorage, they will experience the warm hospitality that Alaskans offer their visitors. For many delegates, attending a meeting in our city is an once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to visit America's Last Frontier, a dream for many in the nation!

I offer you the full assistance of the ACVB and its staff to making your convention a most memorable and successful event.

We look forward to greeting you in Anchorage for one of your most enjoyable conferences!

Sincerely,

Bruce Bustamante

Dear Tom:

I am most delighted to hear of your positive interest in Anchorage as a site for the 2006 National Wheelchair Games. It was a pleasure to have met you when you were up last. Being the Chief Operating Officer of the Special Olympics World Winter Games, (held in Anchorage in March of 2001), talking with you brought back many exciting and fond memories. The thought of Anchorage being given another opportunity to host a world-class sporting event, such as this, is unbelievable.

As you might remember from our conversation, the World Games hosted over 6000 people from nearly 80 nations. Typical to Alaskan's frontier spirit, we had over 6000 volunteers with 2000 on the waiting list. Those 2000 excess volunteers initiated a new "Spectator Team" program that I could easily see taking off at the National Wheelchair Games. Adopting a country or team approach became the task for these spectator teams leaving everyone involved with "home town" cheering squads. You would not believe the roar of the crowds as you entered each of the sporting venues around the city.

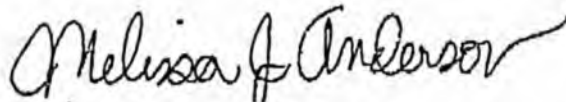

As one person, so profoundly wrote after the Games, "Take time to contact a friend or colleague who might have been in Anchorage during the Games. You will hear about the 'sense of place' projected by this city and felt by participants. You will hear about the winter beauty of the surrounding mountains and sea. You will hear descriptions of Alaska and Alaskans which convey 21st Century diversity with 19th Century friendliness, openness, and happiness - and about a city which is large enough to throw a world class party, yet small enough to still get excited about having out of town guests."

Anchorage's huge success with the World Games should make it clear of our cities capacity and readiness to host another world-class event - the National Wheelchair Games.

Sign me up! Sign up nearly 6000 other volunteers. There is no doubt that you will be warmed by the Alaskan Spirit and amazed by the time and energy Alaskan's will give the National Wheelchair Games.

Please feel free to contact me should you have any questions regarding the World Games and any of the programs that were initiated (such as the Spectator Teams or the Educational programs) because of the Games. I could talk about them for hours.

Sincerely,

Dear Ms. Dodds,

Sullivan Arena and Ben Boeke Ice Arena are excited about the possibility for Anchorage to host the National Veterans Wheelchair Games in July 2006!

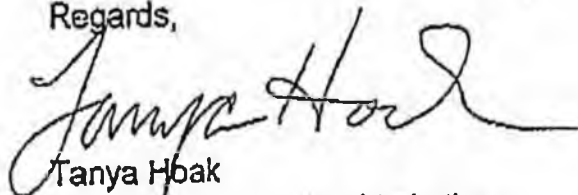

As official venues of the Opening and Closing Ceremonies of the 2001 Special Olympic World Winter Games, Sullivan Arena and Ben Boeke Ice Arena have proven to be ideal facilities for events of substantial size and importance.

SMG of Alaska, Inc. Sullivan Arena, and Ben Boeke Ice Arena embrace this opportunity, and welcomes the Wheelchair Games to our great city.

Please let me know if we can assist you with your bidding process.

Thank you.

Dear Mr. Brown:

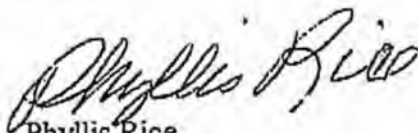

Thank you for your interest in the Egan Center! We are pleased to be considered as the location for the 2006 National Wheelchair Games tentatively scheduled for July 2-7, 2005. Alternate date of July 9-15, 2006.

The William A. Egan Civic and Convention Center is very versatile in configuration and our staff takes the extra effort to ensure your event is a success. Our facility is fully A.D.A. compliant; with power assist doors to lobby and elevator access to all floors. Our Executive Chef Richard Hubbard is one of only six Certified Executive Chefs in Alaska. In all departments our friendly, professional staff strive to surpass the expectations of our guests.

We are centrally located near all the major downtown hotels, shopping and restaurants. There are three parking garages combined with on street parking providing 3000 spaces within a three-block radius and parking can be arranged for your attendees. The cost to your participants is $2.50 for all day parking when arranged in advance. Our meeting rooms are spacious making your attendees very comfortable and we have a large pre-function space available for your use for exhibits, coat check or registration.

If I can be of any assistance or if you have any questions please call, my direct line is 907-263-2848 and my email address is phyllis@egancenter.com. Our website is www.egancenter.com.
