Alaska Judicial Council 1999 Felony Report

As you heard, the Alaska Judicial Council's 2007 analysis of recidivism in the felony therapeutic courts found that therapeutic court graduates were rearrested and re-convicted far less frequently than comparison offenders.

Reduced recidivism can mean dramatic cost savings for Alaska's criminal justice system.

- The average active sentence for felony DWI offenders is 13.7 months.<sup>1</sup>
- The legislature has authorized new prison construction at a capital cost of up to $135,000 per bed in the Railbelt and up to $155,000 in Bethel.<sup>2</sup>

Fewer repeat felony offenders can slow the growth of prison operating costs and lessen the growing demand for new prison beds.

EVIDENCE-BASED PUBLIC POLICY OPTIONS TO REDUCE FUTURE PRISON CONSTRUCTION, CRIMINAL JUSTICE COSTS, AND CRIME RATES‡

Current long-term forecasts indicate that Washington will need two new prisons by 2020 and possibly another prison by 2030. Since a typical new prison costs about $250 million to build and $45 million a year to operate, the Washington State Legislature expressed an interest in identifying alternative "evidence-based" options that can: (a) reduce the future need for prison beds, (b) save money for state and local taxpayers, and (c) contribute to lower crime rates.

The 2005 Legislature directed the Washington State Institute for Public Policy (Institute) to report, by October 2006, whether evidence-based and cost-beneficial policy options exist.

If economically sound options are available, then the Legislature directed the Institute to project the total impact of alternative implementation scenarios.<sup>1</sup>

This report describes our results to date. We begin by providing background information on historic and projected incarceration rates in Washington, as well as a history of crime rates and fiscal costs of the criminal justice system. We then describe the process we use to determine if evidence-based and economically sound options exist, and we present our findings. We examine adult corrections, juvenile corrections, and prevention programs. This is followed by our projections of the impact of alternative implementation scenarios. We conclude by discussing some implications of the findings and next steps. For technical readers, appendices begin on page 19 and describe our research methods and results in greater detail.

Summary

Under current long-term forecasts, Washington State faces the need to construct several new prisons in the next two decades. Since new prisons are costly, the 2005 Washington Legislature directed the Washington State Institute for Public Policy to project whether there are "evidence-based" options that can:

- ✓ reduce the future need for prison beds,
- ✓ save money for state and local taxpayers,
- ✓ contribute to lower crime rates.

We conducted a systematic review of all research evidence we could locate to identify what works, if anything, to reduce crime. We found and analyzed 571 rigorous comparison-group evaluations of adult corrections, juvenile corrections, and prevention programs, most of which were conducted in the United States. We then estimated the benefits and costs of many of these evidence-based options. Finally, we projected the degree to which alternative "portfolios" of these programs could affect future prison construction needs, criminal justice costs, and crime rates in Washington.

We find that some evidence-based programs can reduce crime, but others cannot. Per dollar of spending, several of the successful programs produce favorable returns on investment. Public policies incorporating these options can yield positive outcomes for Washington.

We project the long-run effects of three example portfolios of evidence-based options: a "current level" option as well as "moderate" and "aggressive" implementation portfolios.

We find that if Washington successfully implements a moderate-to-aggressive portfolio of evidence-based options, a significant level of future prison construction can be avoided, taxpayers can save about two billion dollars, and crime rates can be reduced.

Review of Current Literature

No other justice intervention brings to bear such an intensive response with such dramatic results—results that have been well documented through the rigors of scientific analysis. From the earliest evaluations, researchers have determined that drug courts provide “closer, more comprehensive supervision and much more frequent drug testing and monitoring during the program than other forms of community supervision. More importantly, drug use and criminal behavior are substantially reduced while offenders are participating in drug court” (Belenko, 1998; 2001). “To put it bluntly, we know that drug courts outperform virtually all other strategies that have been attempted for drug-involved offenders” (Marlowe, DeMatteo, & Festinger, 2003).

In February of 2005, the U.S. Government Accountability Office (GAO) published an extensive review of drug court research, which concluded that most adult drug court programs evidenced:

- ❖ Lower re-arrest and conviction rates for drug court participants than comparison group members.
- ❖ Fewer recidivism events for drug court participants than comparison group members.
- ❖ Recidivism reductions for participants who had committed various categories of offenses.
- ❖ Recidivism reductions that were maintained for substantial intervals of time after the participants had completed the drug court program.
- ❖ Positive cost/benefits for the drug court participants.

Drug Courts Reduce Recidivism

A 2000 Vera Institute of Justice report concluded that “the body of literature on recidivism is now strong enough to conclude that completing a drug court program reduces the likelihood of future arrest” (Fluellen & Trone, 2000).

Researchers in a 2003 National Institute of Justice (NIJ) study randomly selected 2020 drug court graduates from a national sample of 17,000 to measure recidivism. The study showed that within one year of program graduation, only 16.4 percent had been rearrested and charged with a felony offense (Roman, Townsend, & Bhati, 2003).

Defining Drug Courts: The Ten Key Components

From "Painting the Current Picture: A National Report Card on Drug Courts and Other Problem Solving Court Programs in the United States" 2005

1. Drug courts integrate alcohol and other drug treatment services with justice system case processing.
2. Using a non-adversarial approach, prosecution and defense counsel promote public safety while protecting participants' due rights.
3. Eligible participants are identified early and promptly placed in the drug court program.
4. Drug courts provide access to a continuum of alcohol, drug, and other related treatment and rehabilitation services.
5. Abstinence is monitored by frequent alcohol and other drug testing.
6. A coordinated strategy governs drug court responses to participants' compliance.
7. Ongoing judicial interaction with each drug court participant is essential.
8. Monitoring and evaluation measure the achievement of program goals and gauge effectiveness.
9. Continuing interdisciplinary education promotes effective drug court planning, implementation, and operations.
10. Forging partnerships among drug courts, public agencies, and community-based organizations generates local support and enhances drug court program effectiveness.

7 (2) the person has

8 (A) not been previously convicted and the limited license is not

2 aircraft, or watercraft under a limited license issued under this section.

3 * Sec. 3. AS 28.35 is amended by adding a new section to article 2 to read:

4 Sec. 28.35.028. Court-ordered treatment for persons charged with a
5 violation of AS 28.35.030 or 28.35.032. (a) Notwithstanding another provision of 6 law, with the consent of the state and the defendant, the court may elect to proceed in a
7 criminal case under AS 28.35.030 or 28.35.032, including the case of a defendant
8 charged with violating the terms of probation, under the procedure provided in this 9 section and order the defendant to complete a court-ordered treatment program. The 10 state may not consent to a referral under this subsection unless the state has consulted 11 with the victim and explained the process and consequences of the referral to the 12 victim. A court may not elect to proceed under this section if the defendant has 13 previously participated in a court-ordered treatment program under this section two or 14 more times.

15 (b) Once the court elects to proceed under this section, the defendant shall 16 enter a no contest or guilty plea to the offense or shall admit to a probation violation,
17 as appropriate. The state and the defendant may enter into a plea agreement to 18 determine the offense or offenses to which the defendant is required to plead. If the 19 court accepts the agreement, the court shall enforce the terms of the agreement. The 20 court shall enter a judgment of conviction for the offense or offenses for which the 21 defendant has pleaded or an order finding that the defendant has violated probation, as 22 appropriate. A judgment of conviction or an order finding a probation violation must 23 set a schedule for payment of restitution owed by the defendant. In a judgment of 24 conviction and on probation conditions that the court considers appropriate, the court
25 may withhold pronouncement of a period of imprisonment or a fine to provide an 26 incentive for the defendant to complete recommended treatment successfully.
27 Imprisonment or a fine imposed by a court shall comply with AS 12.55 or any 28 mandatory minimum or other sentencing provision applicable to the offense.
29 However, notwithstanding Rule 35, Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, and any 30 other provision of law, the court, at any time after the period when a reduction of 31 sentence is normally available, may consider and reduce the defendant's sentence

1 based on the defendant's compliance with the treatment plan; when reducing a
2 sentence, the court (1) may not reduce the sentence below the mandatory minimum
3 sentence for the offense unless the court finds that the defendant has successfully
4 complied with and completed the treatment plan and that the treatment plan
5 approximated the severity of the minimum period of imprisonment, and (2) may
6 consider the defendant's compliance with the treatment plan as a mitigating factor
7 allowing a reduction of a sentence under AS 12.55.155(a). A court entering an order
8 finding the defendant has violated probation may withhold pronouncement of 9 disposition to provide an incentive for the defendant to complete the recommended
10 treatment successfully.

11 (c) If the defendant does not successfully complete the treatment plan imposed
12 by the court under this section, the defendant's no contest or guilty plea or admission
13 to a probation violation to the court shall stand, and the sentence previously imposed
14 shall be executed or, if sentence has not yet been imposed, sentence shall be imposed
15 by the court.

16 (d) Notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, the judge, the 17 state, the defendant, and the agencies involved in the defendant's treatment plan are 18 entitled to information and reports bearing on the defendant's assessment, treatment,
19 and progress. The victim is entitled to periodic reports on the defendant's progress and 20 participation.

21 (e) In addition to other conditions authorized under AS 12.30 or AS 12.55, a
22 court may impose the following conditions of bail or probation:

23 (1) require the defendant to submit to electronic monitoring;

24 (2) require the defendant to submit to house arrest.

25 (f) A court shall refer a defendant who is ordered to participate in a treatment
26 program under this section to an alcohol safety action program developed and 27 implemented or designated under AS 47.37.040(21) for screening, referral, and 28 monitoring.

29 (g) In addition to other conditions authorized under AS 12.30, a court may 30 require the defendant to take a drug or combination of drugs intended to prevent 31 substance abuse.

Therapeutic courts can halt cycle

By JUDGE JAMES N. WANAMAKER
and JANET McCABE

What if there was a new governmental program that saved $10 for every dollar spent, reduced death and destruction on our highways, helped prevent fetal alcohol syndrome in newborn babies and healed broken families? Well, the therapeutic courts (also called Wellness Courts or DUI Courts) currently operating in Anchorage and Bethel are doing just that, and more.

In the traditional system of punitive justice, a person convicted of driving under the influence (DUI) is simply sent to jail for a mandatory term. This gives the public a brief period of protection from the defendant's criminal behavior. However, all such offenders are eventually released. For the addict, being in jail only intensifies the craving for alcohol or drugs. Without treatment — the norm in our current corrections system — the new parolee plunges back into alcoholism, re-offends and is returned to jail. Historically, 75 percent of Alaska's DUI felons re-offend after a term in jail. This costly cycle has been referred to as the "prison recycling system."

Therapeutic courts intercede to halt this downward cycle by getting the alcohol out of the alcoholic. State Sen. Fred Dyson has described this as "doing the smart thing, not just the tough thing."

In actuality, the therapeutic courts are both smart and tough. To use the Anchorage Wellness Court as an example, the offender who "opts-in" commits to a life-changing 18-month program that requires sobriety, addiction treatment, group meetings and employment. For she is held accountable by repeated appearances before the judge and strict monitoring for alcohol or drug use. Success is applauded. Failure to comply is immediately sanctioned.

Participants in a therapeutic court often start with a certain amount of cynicism and doubt. Most have been through a number of treatments for their addiction. About midway, they show real change. They have started to taste the rewards of normal, healthy life. Their children now want to be with them. Employers appreciate their reliability and stability.

Freedom from addiction becomes its own reward. As one person said recently in court, "When I started the program, I thought, at least I'll be sober for 18 months. But now I'm part of the community. I'm out here walking with you. I have a job. I'm responsible; I got a raise at work. My family loves me. It's phenomenal."

The success of the Anchorage Wellness Court has been well documented. Seventy-five percent of the graduates do not re-offend. District attorneys should do the "smart thing, not just the tough thing" by increasing the numbers of alcoholic offenders brought into the existing therapeutic courts built on the Wellness Court model, including the Anchorage and Bethel Felony DUI Courts and the Anchorage Wellness Court for state misdemeanants.

Money is available. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has committed $885,000 in grant funding in 2005 and will probably provide a similar amount in 2006. The Alaska Court System is doing its part to support therapeutic courts. It has hired and trained people to serve as administrators and project managers, and many judges have received specialized training in therapeutic justice. The Alaska

Legislature has been extremely supportive.

However, the Legislature has noted the need for increased dedication by the administration. During the last session, the Legislature passed a resolution urging the Department of Law, the Public Defender Agency and the Department of Corrections to increase their participation in the team effort that makes therapeutic courts possible.

The leadership of the Department of Law has expressed support, and Attorney General Gregg Renkes has graciously agreed to speak at a therapeutic justice seminar in Anchorage on Monday. To convert this top-down support into action in court, his district attorneys need to bring more cases into the existing therapeutic courts in Anchorage and Bethel. The district attorneys should also become actively involved in creating new therapeutic courts in other cities.

You be the judge.....

Imagine the following scenario: Seven prior misdemeanor convictions – three petty thefts, two drunk driving, a disorderly conduct, and an assault. A brief stint in a treatment program for alcoholism. And the defendant is before the court again for a felony Driving Under the Influence. A judge reviewing this defendant's record sees that the defendant must spend at least the mandatory minimum of 120 days incarcerated while waiting for trial, plus many days of jail time in recent years. Other times, the defendant was referred for treatment but didn't go. What else is left? More jail. It didn't work before to protect the public, except for the brief time that the defendant was incarcerated. More treatment? That didn't seem to work either. Only half of defendants ordered to treatment make their first appointment.

In response to those questions asked by hundreds of judges about thousands of defendants, judges throughout the country began developing new approaches to chronic offenders whose criminal activity appeared to be primarily fueled by alcohol and drug abuse. The new drug courts, drunk driving courts and others have been grouped under the general heading of "therapeutic courts".

COMPARISON OF JUSTICE THEORIES

	Retributive Justice	Therapeutic Justice	Restorative Justice	Community Justice
Definition of Crime	Crime is a breach of a rule created by the sovereign. Crime should be addressed by professionals who are not connected to the victim or the offender.	Crime is a manifestation of illness of offender's body or character. Crime should be addressed through treatment by professionals.	Crime is a disruption of community harmony and relationships. Crime should be addressed in the community by the community, the victim and the offender.	Crime is committed by people who are not invested in the community and is caused by complex social problems. Crime should be addressed in the community by a partnership between the community and criminal justice agencies.
Primary Focus	Focus on defendant.	Focus on defendant's rehabilitation, including teaching accountability.	Equal focus on offender, community and victim.	Focus on enhancing and sustaining community life as a way of preventing crime and exerting social control.
Sentencing Goals	Vindicate social values, deter defendant and others, isolate defendant from community, rehabilitate defendant if possible. Primary beneficiary is government, second is society and third, the victim.	To correct/heal the offender, who receives most services and benefits. Society is secondary; victim benefits to the extent that offender is rehabilitated.	Repair the harm, heal victim and community, restore offender to healthy relationship with community through offender accountability, encourage community to take responsibility for responding to crime.	Similar to goals of restorative justice; however, community justice also attempts to address some of the social problems underlying crime, and to involve local residents in planning and decisionmaking.
Use of Incarceration	A primary form of sanction	May be used as a sanction and to protect community (comparable to quarantine)	May be necessary to protect community; restorative justice principles should be applied within institutions	May be necessary to protect community
Measures of Success	Fairness of process; equality and proportionality of sanctions ( i.e. , sanctions are related to seriousness of crime and similarly situated offenders receive uniform sanctions).	Regained health of offender; offender demonstrates accountability in work, family, community; low recidivism.	Emotional and financial restitution for victim, restoration of community harmony, return of offender to valued role in community, low recidivism.	Citizens are directly involved in setting crime-response priorities, all citizens are strongly invested in the community, and crime rates decrease.
Examples	Current criminal justice system, most youth courts	Wellness court, drug court, mental health court, some tribal courts, some youth courts	Victim-offender mediation, circle sentencing, family group conferencing, reparative probation, citizen boards, some tribal courts	Community policing and prosecution, Navajo Peacemaker courts, community courts, some tribal courts

Case Study - Noble

Suspect ID

Undercover Identity

- ◆ Angelgirl12yo

Post Arrest Interview

What other options did you have to get rid of her besides selling her to the bikers?

Dropping her off on the side of the road. That's...
What else?

I...take her in the mountains and leave her. I...the only really options that I...even knew about.

Where did you talk about taking her in the mountains and leaving her at? You did specify.

I don't think so. I don't know.

What do you think would have happened to her if you took her to the mountains and left her?

She'd probably be eaten by a bear or a lion or she wouldn't survive.

Sentence

- ◆ NOBLE pled guilty to soliciting the manufacture of child pornography
- ◆ On April 14, 2004 NOBLE was sentenced by U.S. District Judge Brimmer to one hundred eighty months (180) months incarceration, five (5) years supervised release, $100 victim assessment fee and $1000 fine

- ◆ The girl thought she was in love with Noble
- ◆ She later disappeared
